Directory—Rex v. Staffordshire, 10 L. J. M. C. 166; Rex v. Norwich, 1 B. & Ad. 310; 20 E. C. L. 393; Rex v. Denbighshire, 4 East 142; Rex v. Leicester, 7 B. & C. 6; 14 E. C. L. 1; Charter v. Greame, 13 Q. B. 216; 66 E. C. L. 216; Rex v. Rochester, 7 E. & B. 910; 90 E. C. L. 909; Hunt v. Hibbs, 5 H. & N. 123; Morgan v. Parry, 17 C. B. 334; 84 E. C. L. 334; Brumfitt v. Bremner, 9 C. B. N. S. 1; 99 E. C. L. 1; Wells v. Stanforth, 16 Q. B. Div. 244; Ackers v. Howard, 16 Q. B. Div. 739; Rex v. Ingall, L. R., 2 Q. B. Div. 199; Bosanquet v. Woodford, 5 Q. B. 310; Steward v. Dunn, 12 M. & W. 655; Caldow v. Pixell, 2 C. P. Div. 562; Yale v. Rex, Bro. P. C. 27; Rex v. Birmingham, 8 B. & C. 29; 15 E. C. L. 151; Reg. v. Fordham, 11 A. & E. 73; 39 E. C. L. 29; Thompson v. Harvey, 4 H. & N. 254; Wolton v. Gavin, 16 Q. B. 48; 71 E. C. L. 48; In re Shuttleworth, 9 Q. B. 651; 58 E. C. L. 651; Rex v. Patteson, 4 B. & Ad. 9; 24 E. C. L. 1; Doe v. Evans, 1 Cr. & M. 450; 3 Tyr. 339; Nowell v. Mayor, etc., of Worcester, 9 Exch. 450; Cole v. Green, 6 M. & G. 872; 46 E. C. L. 870; Ex parte Valpy, L. R., 7 Ch. 289; Wright v. Horton, 12 App. Cas. 371; Thames Haven Dock, etc., Co. v. Rose, 4 M. & G. 552; 43 E. C. L. 287; Southampton Dock Co. v. Richards, 1 M. & G. 448; 39 E. C. L. 521; London, etc., R. Co. v. Freeman, 2 M. & G. 606; 40 E. C. L. 535; Allen v. C. Assur. Co., 9 C. B. 574; 67 E. C. L. 574; Aggs v. Nicholson, 1 H. & N. 165.

Mandatory.—Peacock v. Reg., 4 C. B. N. S. 264; 93 E. C. L. 262; Woodhouse v. Woods, 29 L. J. M. C. 149; Morgan v. Edwards, 29 L. J. M. C. 108; Pennell v. Uxbridge, 31 L. J. M. C. 92; South Staffordshire Waterworks Co. v. Stone, 19 Q. B. Div. 168; Lockhart v. Mayor, etc., of St. Albans, 21 Q. B. Div. 188; Stone v. Dean, E. B. & E. 504; 96 E. C. L. 502; Barker v. Palmer, 51 L. J. Q. B. 110; Howard v. Bodington, L. R., 2 P. D. 503; Williams v. Swansea Canal, etc., Co., L. R., 3 Exch. 158; Bowman v. Blyth, 7 E. & B. 26; 90 E. C. L. 26; Rex v. Loxdale, 1 Burr. 445; Wanklyn v. Woollett, 4 C. B. 86; 56 E. C. L. 86; McKeown v.

will be found a collection of cases in which the words "may"¹ and "must"² have been construed.

13. Evasions.—To carry out effectually the purpose of a statute it must be so construed as to defeat all attempts to do or avoid in an indirect or circuitous manner that which it has prohibited or enjoined; courts must labor to suppress all subtle inventions and circumlocution by which the object and purpose of the law will be defeated.³

It is, however, essential not to confound what is actually or virtually prohibited or enjoined by the language, with what is really beyond the contemplation, though it be within the policy, Bradford, 7 Ir. Jur. N. S. 169; Henry v. Armitage, 52 L. J. Q. B. 165; Liverpool Borough Bank v. Turner, 29 L. J. Ch. 872; Frend v. Dennett, 4 C. B. N. S. 576; 93 E. C. L. 575; Young v. Leamington, L. R., 8 App. Cas. 517; Hunt v. Wimbledon Local Board, L. R., 4 C. P. Div. 48; Mellis v. Shirley, 16 Q. B. Div. 446; In re Gifford, 20 Q. B. Div. 368; Crump v. Adney, 1 Cr. & M. 355; 3 Tyr. 270; Cope v. Thames Haven Dock, etc., Co., 3 Exch. 841; Diggle v. London, etc., R. Co., 5 Exch. 442; Finlay v. Bristol R. Co., 7 Exch. 409; Schofield v. Hincks, 37 W. R. 157; Cooke v. New River Co., 38 Ch. Div. 56.

Shall and May; Shall and May be Lawful; It Shall be Lawful. etc.—Such expressions as these are generally mandatory and imperative. Doe v. Smith, 1 B. & B. 97; 5 E. C. L. 45; Steward v. Greaves, 10 M. & W. 711; In re London, etc., Banking Corp., 2 De G. & J. 484; Hill v. London, etc., Assur. Co., 1 H. & N. 398; St. Nicholas v. Sketchley, 8 Q. B. 394; 55 E. C. L. 394. And see also the list of cases under the title, MAY, vol. 14, p. 985.

"The words 'shall and lawfully may' are, in their ordinary import, obligatory, and ought, according to established rules, to have that construction, unless it would lead to some absurd or inconvenient consequence, or be at variance with the intent of the legislature, to be collected from other parts of the act." Chapman v. Milvain, 5 Exch. 61.

But in Malcom v. Rogers, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 193, where a statute provided that upon the death of a person leaving several heirs, "all such heirs shall or may recover in one writ or action, as heirs of the deceased person," it was held that the words "shall or may" left it "discretionary with the heirs to bring joint or several actions."

So in Ex parte Whittington, 34 Ark.

394, it was held that, where a statute provided that under certain conditions "it shall be lawful" for the county court to grant liquor licenses, it was discretionary with the court to grant or refuse such licenses. And again, though it is provided by an English statute that for the offense of allowing an unauthorized person to act in his name, a solicitor "shall and may be struck off the roll and forever afterwards disabled from practicing," yet the infliction of so heavy a penalty is not imperative, and a lesser punishment may be imposed. In re Grayton, 4 T. R. 479; In re Lamb, 23 Q. B. Div. 477; In re Sykes, London Times, 19 Feb., 1890.

"The meaning to be attributed to the phrase 'it shall be lawful' in a statute, must depend on the subject-matter in every instance . . . Prima facie those words import a discretion, and they must be construed as discretionary, unless there be anything in the subject-matter to which they are applied, or in any other part of the statute, to show that they are meant to be imperative." Reg. v. Bishop of Oxford, 4 Q. B. Div. 257.

1. MAY, vol. 14, p. 979.

2. MUST, vol. 16, p. 1.

3. Branches Principia 71; Magdalen College Case, 11 Rep. 70b; Moore v. Hussey, Hob. 75; 3 Rep. 7; Warner v. Armstrong, 3 M. & K. 45; Doe v. Carter, 8 T. R. 300; Collins v. Blantern, 2 Wils. 349; Com. v. Harris, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 373; Big Black Creek Imp. Co. v. Com., 94 Pa. St. 450; Douglass v. Com., 2 Rawle (Pa.) 262; Cooley v. Barcroft, 43 N. J. L. 363; Woodruff v. State, 3 Ark. 285.

Lord Coke states the rule, "Quando aliquid prohibetur fieri ex directo, prohibetur et per obliquum." Co. Litt. 223b.

An act forbade preferences in assignments for creditors. Lowrie, C. J., in reference to this act in Fallon's Ap- of the act, for it is only to the former case that the principle under consideration applies, and not to cases where, however manifest the object of the act may be, the language is not co-extensive with it.¹

XI. REPEAL—1. General Rules.—It is presumed to be the legislative intent that a statute once enacted is enacted for all time, in the absence of an expression of a contrary intent.² Its operation peal, 42 Pa. St. 255, said: "Of course, the courts cannot allow the law to be evaded by any sham departure from the general form of such assignments, and when the transaction is substantially an assignment for the benefit of creditors, the substance rather than the form must be regarded." See also Johnson's Appeal, 103 Pa. St. 377.

It has been held that selling tickets at a picnic for which beer is furnished on presentation was a mere attempt to evade the law, and a person doing so could be convicted of selling liquor without a license. Com. v. Heffner, 8 Leg. Gaz. (Pa.) 166.

What is in substance usury will be so treated, and evasions of these laws by mere sham and artifice will not be suffered. Lord Coke said: "To them that lend money my caveat is that neither directly nor indirectly by art or cunning invention they take above six in the hundred; for them that seek by slight to creep out of these statutes will deceive themselves and repent in the end." See Martin v. Nashville Bldg. Assoc., 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 418; Flover v. Edwards, Cowp. 114. In Mills v. Salisbury Bldg., etc., Assoc., 75 N. Car. 292, Read, J., said: "Calling the borrower a 'partner,' or substituting 'redeeming' for 'lending,' 'premium' for 'bonus,' for an amount they profess to have advanced and yet withhold; or 'dues' for interest, or any like subterfuge, will not avail. We look at the substance." See USURY.

If a contract be a wager in substance, no matter how the end is brought about, it will be void, though the object be ever so cunningly concealed in the form given the transaction, under the statutes prohibiting wager contracts. Tate v. Wellings, 3 T. R. 531; Boldero v. Jackson, 11 East 612; White v. Wright, 3 B. & C. 273; 10 E. C. L. 75. Such as a written promise to pay a sum of money on the happening of the contingency which is the subject of a wager. Nudd v. Burnett, 14 Ind. 25; Guyman v. Burlingame, 36 Ill. 201.

1. Etherington v. Wilson, 1 Ch. Div.

161; Pender v. Lushington, 6 Ch. Div. 70; Cross v. Watts, 32 L. J. M. C. 73; Brigden v. Heighes, 1 Q. B. Div. 330; Neilson v. Lagow, 12 How. (U. S.) 98; Johnson's Appeal, 103 Pa. St. 377.

A hiring, for a few days less than a year, though avowedly for the purpose of preventing the servant from acquiring a settlement, was held not to be an evasion of the act which gave a settlement on a year's service. R. v. Little Coggleshall, 6 M. & S. 264; Rex v. Mursley, 1 T. R. 694.

So an act which made it penal to personate "any person entitled to vote" would not be violated by personating a dead voter. Whitely v. Chappel, L. R., 4 Q. B. 147.

In Blakey's Appeal, 7 Pa. St. 449, it was held that judgments confessed to secure creditors are not such preferences as were forbidden by the act prohibiting assignments giving preferences to certain creditors, although an assignment for creditors was intended and shortly afterwards executed.

2. Potter's Dwarris 153; U. S. v. Gear, 3 How. (U. S.) 120.

A temporary statute continues in force until the time limited on its face expires. Brown v. Barry, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 365; and an offense against it cannot be punished after the expiration of the act, unless particular provision is made by law for that purpose. The Irresistible, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 551.

A proceeding in court which is imperfect when the temporary act under which it was begun expires must remain imperfect. Stoever v. Immell, 1 Watts (Pa.) 258; Com. v. Beatty, 1 Watts (Pa.) 382; but penalties fixed by a later statute upon offenses enumerated in a temporary one may be enforced, although the temporary statute has expired. Ex parte Higginbotham, 9 Dowl. Pr. Cas. 200.

If the temporary act is before its expiration made perpetual, it is considered to have been perpetual from the beginning. Rex v. Swiney, 1 A. & N. 139; Dingley v. Moore, Cro. Eliz. 750; Rex v. Morgan, Str. 1066.

may be suspended however for a specified period ;¹ or by a subsequent statute² or by an amendment³ it may be repealed altogether, either expressly or by implication.⁴ The question whether a statute has been repealed is not a legislative question, but a

1. Edmonson v. Ferguson, 11 Mo. 344; Lindsey v. Burbridge, 11 Mo. 545. In these cases it was held that an act suspending statutes and processes against volunteers who, during the war, were absent from the state, until their regiments returned, was constitutional.

An act may be suspended by implication, but such a construction will not be given unless there is a clear and strong inconsistency between the acts. Egypt Street, 2 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 455.

The suspension of an act for a limited time is not a repeal of it. A repealing act and an act suspending it passed at the same session, when construed together, amount only to a provision that the repeal of the act shall take place at a future day. Brown v. Barry, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 365.

Where an act has been suspended, it cannot be enforced during the period of suspension for penalties incurred prior to the suspension. State v. Bank of South Carolina, 12 Rich. (S. Car.) 609.

Where a previous act forbade the general assembly to "repeal, alter, or modify" it, an act suspending operation of the statute was held not an infringement of the inhibition. Oliver v. Perry, Phill. (N. Car.) 581.

The provision that the repeal of the repealing act shall not revive the original act unless it be passed at the same session, does not apply to the repeal of a statute which simply suspends the exercise of a right belonging to the state. Cassell v. Lexington, etc., Road Co., 10 Ky. L. Rep. 486.

The re-enactment at the same session of certain sections of one act is not under the circumstances a repeal by implication, nor does a provision in the second act, suspending the operation of similar sections in that act, suspend the operation of those in the first act. Powers v. Shepard, 48 N. Y. 540.

2. A statute cannot be modified nor superseded by one of earlier date. Thomas v. Collins, 58 Mich. 64; Smith v. McDermott, 93 Cal. 421.

3. Breitung v. Lindaner, 37 Mich. 217; Longlois v. Longlois, 48 Ind. 60; State v. Miller, 58 Ind. 399; Pana v. Bowler, 107 U. S. 529; Lucas County

v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 67 Iowa 541. See infra, this title, Implied Repeal.

4. Musgrove v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 50 Miss. 677; State v. Judge, 14 La. Ann. 491; State v. Hoeflinger, 31 Wis. 257; People v. Livingston, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 530. See Harrington v. Rochester, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 547.

The legislature has plenary power to enact laws or repeal them, unless prohibited by the constitution. A power to repeal a law is as complete and full as the power to enact it. Musgrove v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 50 Miss. 677.

Neither mode of repeal is effective until the repealing act takes effect. Spalding v. Alford, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 33.

It is within the power of the legislature to repeal a definite portion of a section or article in an act without the re-enactment of the section or article, omitting the part repealed. Chambers v. State, 25 Tex. 307.

Power to revoke or annul a statute or ordinance is equivalent to power to repeal it. Shepherd v. Wheeling, 30 W. Va. 479.

One legislature cannot bind a future legislature to a particular mode of repeal. Kellogg v. Oshkosh, 14 Wis. 623. Nor can an act be made irrepealable. Thomas v. Daniel, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 359; unless it assumes the form and substance of a contract. Bloomer v. Stolley, 5 McLean (U. S.) 158; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U. S. 814; Hamrick v. Rouse, 17 Ga. 56; Shaw v. Macon, 21 Ga. 280; State v. Pilsbury, 31 La. Ann. 1; State v. Craig, 23 Ind. 185; Wall v. State, 23 Ind. 150; Armstrong v. Dearborn County, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 208; Musgrove v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 50 Miss. 677; Thomas v. Daniel, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 354; Oleson v. Green Bay, etc., R. Co., 36 Wis. 383; Kellogg v. Oshkosh, 14 Wis. 623; Atty. Gen'l v. Brown, 1 Wis. 513; Brightman v. Kirner, 22 Wis. 54.

Where a law permitted towns and municipalities to issue bonds by virtue of its provisions, and provided that they should not thereafter issue bonds "by virtue of the authority of any other law of this state," it was held that these words were inapplicable to future enactments. Oleson v. Green Bay, etc., R. Co., 36 Wis. 383.

judicial one.¹ It seems that long disuse may in effect operate as a repeal,² but strong evidence as to the disuse is required.³

Under the rule of the English Parliament a statute was not repealed at the same session at which it was passed, in the absence of a clause reserving the power of repeal;⁴ but even at common law repeals by implication were apparently not within this rule,⁵ and, in the absence of constitutional provision,

1. U. S. v. Clafin, 97 U. S. 546; Shephard v. Wheeling, 30 W. Va. 479.

Therefore a recital in a statute, that a former statute was repealed or superseded by subsequent acts, is not conclusive as to such repeal or superse-dure. U. S. v. Clafin, 97 U. S. 546.

2. Hill v. Smith, 1 Morr. (Iowa) 70; Wright v. Crane, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 452; Porter's Appeals, 30 Pa. St. 499; O'Hanlon v. Myers, 10 Rich. (S. Car.) 128; Watson v. Blaylock, 2 Mills (S. Car.) 351; Canady v. George, 6 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 103; Reg. v. Bewdley, 1 P. Wms. 223; Money v. Leech, 3 Burr. 1755. See Laigh v. Kent, 3 T. R. 364; James v. Com., 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 220. Contra Snowden v. Snowden, 1 Bland (Md.) 552; Homer v. Com., 106 Pa. St. 221; 51 Am. Rep. 521; Kitchen v. Smith, 101 Pa. St. 457; not noticing other cases in Pennsylvania. There can be no repeal by non-user unless accompanied by the enactment of irreconcilable statutes. Pearson v. International Distillery, 72 Iowa 348. And see Tise v. Shaw, 68 Md. 1; The India, Br. & L. 221.

"It is contrary to the spirit of our institutions to revive without notice a penal statute grown obsolete by long disuse, especially when the general current of legislation shows the constitution to have been regarded by the legislature as no longer in force. Custom can repeal a statute." Hill v. Smith, 1 Morr. (Iowa) 79.

"The notion that statutes are not repealable by non-user is founded on two cases of not very high authority (Respublica v. Philadelphia County, and Glancey v. Jones), reported in 4 Yeates (Pa.) 181, 215, both of which depend upon an obiter dictum in White v. Boot, 2 T. R. 279, a case that was overruled in Leigh v. Kent, 3 T. R. 364. A proposition no better supported cannot prevail against the clear reasoning of Chief Justice Tilghman in the case (Wright v. Crane) already cited in 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 452." Woodward, J., in Porter's Appeals, 30 Pa. St. 498.

A law may become obsolete where the object to which it was intended to apply, or the question on which it was enacted no longer exists. Com. v. Hoover, 1 Bro. (Pa.) 28.

Non-usage of a statute will, in any event, help the implication of its repeal by a later inconsistent statute. Rex v. Dodd, 9 East 516.

3. Wright v. Crane, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 452; Porter's Appeals, 30 Pa. St. 499; Com. v. Hoover, 1 Bro. (Pa.) 28.

"It must be a very strong case to justify the court in deciding that an act standing on a statute book unrepealed is obsolete and invalid." Tilghman, C. J., in Wright v. Crane, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 452.

4. Cooley Const. Lim. (6th ed.) 183, citing 1 Darris on Stat., p. 269; Sedgwick, Stat. & Const. Law 122. The rule is stated in 8 Bacon, Abr. 225. See Cain v. State, 20 Tex. 355.

As to which of two statutes passed on the same day is the final expression of the legislative will, see supra, this title, In Respect to Time of Taking Effect.

5. Spencer v. State, 5 Ind. 41; Ham v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 314; Atty. Gen'l v. Brown, 1 Wis. 513; People v. Lytle, 1 Idaho 143; In re Oregon Bulletin, etc., Co., 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 614; Mobile, etc., Co. v. State, 29 Ala. 573; Strauss v. Heiss, 48 Md. 292; Watson v. Kent, 78 Ala. 602; Rex v. Middlesex, 2 B. & Ad. 818; 22 E. C. L. 190. In which case it was said that the date of the royal assent being now by statute required to be indorsed on an act passed by Parliament, thus fixing the time of its taking effect, the latter of two repugnant acts passed at the same session of Parliament repeals the former. Johnson v. Byrd, Hempst. (U. S.) 434.

Where there was an irreconcilable conflict between a general revision of laws and a later particular law passed at the same session, the latter law was held to impliedly repeal the former as far as their provisions conflicted. State the rule seems never to have been applicable in the states of the Union.¹

Where one statute purports to repeal another specified statute, by an express clause to that effect, the repealing clause, it seems, may be valid and effective, although every other clause of the statute is unconstitutional.² But where there is, by a general clause, a repeal of all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the statute, and it is apparent that the repealing statute is to be substituted for the one repealed, the unconstitutional character of the repealing statute will also render void the repealing clause.³ A prior statute will not be impliedly repealed by inconsistency with a subsequent unconstitutional one.⁴

2. Express.—In order to repeal expressly a specified statute or part of a statute, the reference to it must be certain.⁵ In some

v. Heidorn, 74 Mo. 412; Smith v. McDermott, 93 Cal. 421; Cerf v. Reichert, 73 Cal. 360.

So an act repugnant to a previous one passed on the same day will repeal the previous act. Strauss v. Heiss, 48 Md. 292; Mead v. Bagnall, 15 Wis. 56; Metropolitan Board of Health v. Schmades, 3 Daly (N. Y.) 282.

1. See Bourguignon Bldg. Assoc. v. Com., 98 Pa. St. 54; Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. State, 29 Ala. 582; Peyton v. Moseley, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 80; Atty. Gen'l v. Brown, 1 Wis. 513.

"It would certainly be a novel, if not a very dangerous, doctrine to hold that whenever the legislature had enacted a law on a common subject, they thereupon ceased to possess any legislative control over that subject during the same session." Atty. Gen'l v. Brown, 1 Wis. 513.

So a bill in its progress through the legislative channels may be expressly repealed by a subsequent act; for the power to repeal a law involves the power to abrogate a bill in its progress before it becomes a law. Southwark Bank v. Com., 26 Pa. St. 446.

2. Ely v. Thompson, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 70; Meshmier v. State, 11 Ind. 482. See State v. Hallock, 14 Nev. 202; 33 Am. Rep. 559. Compare In re Rafferty, 1 Wash. 382.

Where, however, it is not clear that the legislature intended to repeal the prior law, without regard to new provisions to be substituted for it, a repealing clause in an unconstitutional statute will be ineffective. State v. Blend, 121 Ind. 514.

3. People v. Tiphaine, 3 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 241.

The repeal of all laws inconsistent with the statute does not affect such laws as are inconsistent only with such parts of the repealing statute as are unconstitutional and void. Devoy v. New York, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 264; Harbeck v. New York, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 366; Sullivan v. Adams, 3 Gray (Mass.) 476; Tims v. State, 26 Ala. 165; Childs v. Shower, 18 Iowa 261; State v. Burton, 11 Wis. 51; Shepardson v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 6 Wis. 605; State v. Burton, 11 Wis. 50; In re Petty, 22 Kan. 489; People v. Fleming, 7 Colo. 230. But see Harvey v. Virginia, 20 Fed. Rep. 411.

Where an amendatory law was passed which repealed all acts or parts of acts inconsistent therewith, and the amendatory part of the act failed for uncertainty, it was held that the repealing clause did not repeal the provisions of the original act sought to be amended, on the ground that they could not, as claimed, be inconsistent with the amendatory sections which were a nullity. Campau v. Detroit, 14 Mich. 285.

4. Ex parte Davis, 21 Fed. Rep. 396; Stephens v. Ballou, 27 Kan. 594; Miller v. Edwards, 8 Colo. 528; Raleigh v. Peace, 110 N. Car. 32; State v. Burton, 11 Wis. 50; Dewy v. New York, 36 N. Y. 449.

5. Chegaray v. Jenkins, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 409; Madison, etc., Plankroad Co. v. Reynolds, 3 Wis. 287.

It is customary to insert the title of the repealed act in the repealing statute; and a repeal is not to be inferred from a general and uncertain allusion to it in a repealing act. Chegaray v. Jenkins, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 409.

Where the title was set out, a mistake in the reference to the year or chapter, not preventing identification states, where a repeal by mere reference to the title of the act to be repealed is unconstitutional, the act, or part of the act to be repealed, must be set out or described in the repealing act.¹ In other states, the latter rule is inapplicable,² and an identification in the repealing act of the law intended to be repealed is sufficient.³

Where an act is passed covering the whole of a particular subject or field of legislation, it is customary to insert a general clause repealing "all acts or parts of acts inconsistent therewith."⁴ Such of the act to be repealed, was disregarded. Blake v. Brackett, 47 Me. 28; In re Boothroyd, 15 M. & W. 1.

The title of a bill has been held to be no part of the bill itself, and not, of itself, to effect the repeal of an existing law. Brooks v. Hydorn, 76 Mich. 280. See also Atty. Gen'l v. Rice, 64 Mich. 385; Larrison v. Peoria, etc., R. Co., 77 Ill. 17.

1. See various state constitutions. See Morrell v. Fickle, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 79.

A repealing act which in its title declares that it is an act to repeal a certain act, describing it, giving the full title of the statute repealed in its body and repealing the same, is not in violation of the constitution requiring that the repealed act be described. Adam v. Wright, 84 Ga. 720.

2. In several states the clause in the constitution does not mention repeals at all, and is held inapplicable to them, whether they are express or implied. Van Riper v. Parsons, 40 N. J. L. 126; Wallace v. Bradshaw, 54 N. J. L. 175; Bird v. Wasco County, 3 Oregon 282; Shields v. Bennett, 8 W. Va. 87; Falconer v. Robinson, 46 Ala. 340; Greely v. Jacksonville, 17 Fla. 174; Commercial Bank v. Markham, 3 La. Ann. 698. In other states, though all laws "amended, revived, or repealed" are in terms included in the constitutional provision, repeals by implication are in application excluded. State v. Miller, 100 Mo. 439; State v. Macklin (Mo. 1890), 13 S. W. Rep. 680; Home Ins. Co. v. Taxing Dist., 4 Lea (Tenn.) 644; State v. Gaines, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 353; Maney v. State, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 218; Knoxville v. Lewis, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 181; Ballentine v. Pulaski, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 638; Poe v. State, 85 Tenn. 495; Geisen v. Heiderich, 104 Ill. 537; Branham v. Lange, 16 Ind. 497; Anderson v. Com., 18 Gratt. (Va.) 295; Scales v. State, 47 Ark. 476; 58 Am. Dec. 768; Stephens v. Ballou, 27 Kan. 601. See also State v. Elko County (Nev. 1890), 23 Pac.

Rep. 935. See also supra, this title, Amendment—Form.

The clause in the Maryland constitution, though extended to repealing acts, is held not to effect a general repeal of all laws inconsistent with the purposes of the legislature as expressed in the new statute. Davis v. State, 7 Md. 151; 61 Am. Dec. 331.

The Tennessee constitutional provision that "all acts which repeal, revive, or amend former laws shall recite, in their caption or otherwise, the title or substance of the law repealed, revived, or amended," is held inapplicable to repeals by implication. Home Ins. Co. v. Taxing Dist., 4 Lea (Tenn.) 644; Ballentine v. Pulaski, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 633.

Acts Embracing More Than One Subject Expressed in Title.—The constitutional provision that no act shall embrace more than one subject is inapplicable to repeals by implication. Geisen v. Heiderich, 104 Ill. 537; Spencer v. State, 5 Ind. 51. See Strauss v. Heiss, 48 Md. 292. Where, however, the title of an act did not indicate its subject-matter on the point in which it was claimed to be inconsistent with a prior act, it was held, therefore, not to repeal the former act, though the fact of repugnancy was conceded. Miller v. Edwards, 8 Colo. 528.

3. Leard v. Leard, 30 Ind. 171.

So a reference to "provisions to article 411" of the Penal Code by obvious mistake instead of to "proviso to" said article, will not prevent the repeal of the proposed proviso. Chambers v. State, 25 Tex. 307.

Where the reference to the published law was a mistaken one, the court looked at the original bill on file to determine what section was actually repealed. State v. Clare, 5 Iowa 509.

4. As the rules of construction and effect to be given to inconsistent provisions are the same, whether the question of repeal arises under such a

a clause is effective in repealing inconsistent enactments.¹ Only those acts on the same subject or parts of such acts clearly inconsistent and irreconcilable with the provisions of the repealing act are rendered invalid, and only to the extent of the conflicting provisions.²

general clause or by implication alone, see infra, this title, Implied Repeal, where they are treated.

Repeal of Acts Within Purview.—The purview of an act means the enacting part of a statute, in contradistinction to the enabling part. Payne v. Conner, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 180.

If an act legislates upon the same subjects as a former, and repeals all other laws within its purview, the former act is repealed, even though it is not inconsistent with the later one. Ogden v. Witherspoon, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 227. But provisions of the former law as to cases not provided for by the repealing statute are not repealed. Payne v. Conner, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 180; Patterson v. Caldwell, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 489; Grigsby v. Barr, 14 Bush (Ky.) 330; Com. v. Watts, 84 Ky. 537.

1. Prince George's County v. Laurel, 21 Md. 464; Newbold v. Pennock (Pa. 1893), 26 Atl. Rep. 606; People v. Durick, 20 Cal. 94; Tierney v. Dodge, 9 Minn. 166; State v. Kelly, 34 N. J. L. 75; Rex v. Northteach, 5 B. & Ad. 978; 27 E. C. L. 250. See U. S. v. Bedgood, 49 Fed. Rep. 54.

A general repealing clause repeals every act identical with those expressly repealed thereby. State v. Barrow, 30 La. Ann. 657; New York v. Broadway, etc., R. Co., 12 Hun (N. Y.) 571.

Where the last section of a statute declares all acts and parts of acts relating to the subject-matter thereof repealed "from and after the time" when such statute shall take effect, this will not be construed a repeal of such statute itself, but to mean all other acts. State v. Stinson, 17 Me. 154.

A law amending the charter of a town permitting it to levy taxes on "trades, businesses, bar-rooms, etc.," and repealing all acts inconsistent therewith, does not repeal a general act prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors within two miles of the county courthouse; part of the last-named territory being within the town jurisdiction; the ground of the decision being that a repeal clause amending a city charter does not repeal public laws, but refers only to all laws and clauses conferring power, authority, and privileges upon or denying the same to the town. State v. Witter, 107 N. Car. 792.

An act which repeals by direct reference nearly all the laws on the subject, and then adds a general clause, "together with all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith," and which embraces the entire subject-matter of a certain prior act not referred to directly, making changes on the point in question, and adding other provisions, operates a repeal of such prior act. U. S. v. Cheeseman, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 424.

2. Elrod v. Gilliland, 27 Ga. 467; People v. Durick, 20 Cal. 94; Hickory Tree Road, 43 Pa. St. 139. See Payne v. Conner, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 180.

A repeal of all acts inconsistent with the repealing statute, does not affect a statute not especially mentioned, and which relates to the same subject-matter which is not inconsistent with the repealing act. People v. Durick, 20 Cal. 94. Nor are provisions of a former act on the same subject, not inconsistent with the later one, repealed. Lewis v. Stout, 22 Wis. 234; Simmons v. Bradley, 27 Wis. 689. See State v. Campbell, 44 Wis. 529.

Where a statute provided for the punishment of larceny of all sums over fifty dollars by an imprisonment of five years, and a second statute was passed punishing larcenies of sums over two thousand dollars by imprisonment for twenty years, it was held that only so much of the first statute as provided for the punishment of larcenies over two thousand dollars was repealed by the passage of the second statute, as the latter only purported to repeal acts inconsistent therewith. State v. Grady, 34 Conn. 118.

So an act providing that any person under sentence may be committed at the discretion of the court to the house of correction in any county of the commonwealth, and repealing all inconsistent statutes, does not repeal a prior statute requiring the imprisonment to be in the county where the offense was committed. Carter v. Burt, 12 Allen (Mass.) 424.

A clause in a statute purporting to repeal other statutes is subject to the same rules of interpretation as other enactments, and the intent, if fairly expressed, must prevail over a mere literal interpretation clearly at variance with such intent.¹

3. Implied—a. BY REPUGNANT ACT—(1) In General.—If two statutes on the same subject are mutually repugnant and irreconcilable, the later act without any repealing clause operates, in the absence of expressed intent to the contrary,² as a repeal of the earlier.³ But even in such case, the old law is repealed by implication only

An act was passed which granted a right to establish a ferry within certain limits, provided the right should not extend beyond the land of the grantee. A later amendatory act in two sections was passed, which in the first section said nothing of confining the franchise to the grantee's own land, and in the second section repealed all acts inconsistent with the first section. It was held that the first act was thereby repealed. McRoberts v. Washburne, 10 Minn. 23.

The general repealing clause of the act of 1855, relative to crimes and offenses, does not repeal the former statutes denouncing crimes and offenses upon which the act is silent. State v. Fuller, 14 La. Ann. 678.

An act providing that upon conviction in certain cases where the offender shall give statute proof that he has not previously been convicted of a similar offense, the court may in its discretion inflict only a fine or a punishment by imprisonment, and repealing all inconsistent statutes, does not repeal an act which fixes the minimum penalty at both fine and imprisonment. Dolan v. Thomas, 12 Allen (Mass.) 421.

1. Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 331. If the repeal of a statute is by express and positive terms, and there is no legitimate evidence, in or out of the act, of an intent to qualify and restrict the operation, the only question is as to the effect of the repeal. Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 331.

On the question whether a repeal of a prior statute, absolute in terms, can be limited in its operation and effect for any reason, the rule seems to be that while the language of the repealing clause must be accepted as the expression of the will of the legislature, and effect given to it according to its terms, unless it appears, although the language of the repeal was general and unqualified, that it was intended to be used in a qualified or limited sense, whenever that intent is discovered, effect must be given to it as in the interpretation of other acts. Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 331; Rex v. Rogers, 10 East 573; Warren v. Windle, 3 East 205.

2. People v. Kelly, 7 Robt. (N. Y.) 592; expressly affirmed on this point, though overruled on another, in People v. Goodwin, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 562.

Where a later act expressly provides that it is to be construed as having been passed prior to a specified earlier act, the earlier act is not repealed by implication, but the latter must yield in case an inconsistency exists. People v. Jaehne, 103 N. Y. 182; People v. Moran, 123 N. Y. 262; 20 Am. St. Rep. 732.

3. Alabama.—Kinney v. Mallory, 3 Ala. 626; George v. Skeates, 19 Ala. 738; Parker v. Hubbard, 64 Ala. 203; Iverson v. State, 52 Ala. 170; Smith v. Speed, 50 Ala. 276; Barker v. Bell, 46 Ala. 216; Watson v. Kent, 78 Ala. 602; Riggs v. Brewer, 64 Ala. 282.

Arizona.—History Co. v. Dougherty (Arizona, 1892), 29 Pac. Rep. 649.

Arkansas.—Ex parte Osborn, 24 Ark. 479; State v. Watts, 23 Ark. 304; Coats v. Hill, 41 Ark. 149.

California.—People v. Grippen, 20 Cal. 677; Ex parte Smith, 40 Cal. 419; People v. Burt, 43 Cal. 560; Pierpont v. Crouch, 10 Cal. 315; In re Yick Wo, 68 Cal. 304; 58 Am. Rep. 12; People v. Sargent, 44 Cal. 430; In re Wixom, 35 Cal. 320; Pennie v. Reis, 80 Cal. 266; Christy v. Sacramento County, 39 Cal. 1; People v. San Francisco, etc., R. Co., 28 Cal. 254.

Colorado.—Branagan v. Dulaney, 8 Colo. 408; Hirschburg v. People, 6 Colo. 145.

Connecticut.—Parrott v. Stevens, 37 Conn. 93.

Georgia.—Harrison v. Walker, 1 Ga. 32; Elrod v. Gilliland, 27 Ga. 467.

It is doubted whether under the clause of the new constitution of Georgia providing that, "no law or section of the code shall be amended by mere reference to its title or to the number of the section of the code, but that the amendment or repealing act shall distinctly describe the law to be amended or repealed, as well as the alteration to be made," there can be such a thing as a repeal or alteration of a law by implication. Central R. Co. v. Hamilton, 71 Ga. 465. But see Lehman v. McBride, 15 Ohio St. 573, on same questions.

District of Columbia.—Eckloff v. Dist. of Columbia, 4 Mackey (D.C.) 572.

Florida.—Greely v. Jacksonville, 17 Fla. 174; State v. Palmes, 23 Fla. 620.

Idaho.—People v. Lytle, 1 Idaho 143.

Illinois.—Sullivan v. People, 15 Ill. 233; West Chicago Park Com'rs v. Brenock, 18 Ill. App. 559; Moore v. Moss, 14 Ill. 106; Korah v. Ottawa, 32 Ill. 121; 83 Am. Dec. 255; People v. Brayton, 94 Ill. 342; Devine v. Cook County, 84 Ill. 590; Card v. McCaleb, 69 Ill. 314; Farwell v. Benevolent Assoc., 4 Ill. App. 36; Fowler v. Pirkins, 77 Ill. 271; Kepley v. People, 123 Ill. 367.

Indiana.—Ham v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 314; McQuilkin v. Doe, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 581; State v. Miskimmons, 2 Ind. 440; State v. Youmans, 5 Ind. 280; Peru, etc., R. Co. v. Bradshaw, 6 Ind. 146; Vermillion County v. Potts, 10 Ind. 286; Dowdell v. State, 58 Ind. 333; Swinney v. Ft. Wayne, etc., R. Co., 59 Ind. 205; Wall v. State, 23 Ind. 150; State v. Craig, 23 Ind. 185; Hamlyn v. Nesbit, 37 Ind. 284; State v. Wells, 112 Ind. 237; State v. Cooper (Ind. 1887), 13 N. E. Rep. 861. There is nothing in the Indiana constitution of 1857 which prohibits the repeal of statutes by implication. Spencer v. State, 5 Ind. 41; Branham v. Lange, 16 Ind. 497.

Iowa.—Casey v. Harned, 5 Iowa 1; State v. Smith, 7 Iowa 244; Edgar v. Greer, 8 Iowa 394; 74 Am. Dec. 316; Straight v. Crawford, 73 Iowa 676; Central Iowa R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 67 Iowa 199.

Kentucky.—Adams v. Ashby, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 96; Nazareth Literary, etc., Inst. v. Com., 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 214; Maddox v. Graham, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 56; Ely v. Thompson, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 70.

Louisiana.—Gayle v. Williams, 7 La. 162; Saul v. His Creditors, 5 Martin N. S. (La.) 569; 16 Am. Dec. 212; Peet v. Nalle, 30 La. Ann. 949.

Maine.—Starbird v. Brown, 84 Me. 238; Collins v. Chase, 71 Me. 434.

Maryland.—Cumberland v. Ma- gruder, 34 Md. 381; Willing v. Bozman, 52 Md. 44; State v. Yewell, 63 Md. 120; Appeal Tax Ct. v. Western Md. R. Co., 50 Md. 275; Dugan v. Gittings, 3 Gill (Md.) 138; 43 Am. Dec. 306.

Massachusetts.—Pease v. Whitney, 5 Mass. 380; New London, etc., R. Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 102 Mass. 386; Com. v. Kimball, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 376; Britton v. Com., 1 Cush. (Mass.) 302.

Michigan.—Atty. Gen'l v. Amos, 60 Mich. 372; Chapoton v. Detroit, 38 Mich. 636; Connors v. Carp River Iron Co., 54 Mich. 168; Brown v. McCormick, 28 Mich. 220.

Minnesota.—Tierney v. Dodge, 9 Minn. 166; Morrison v. Rice, 35 Minn. 436; Gates v. Shugrue, 35 Minn. 391.

Mississippi.—Miller v. State, 33 Miss. 361; 49 Am. Dec. 351; Swann v. Buck, 40 Miss. 268; Hearn v. Brogan, 64 Miss. 334; House v. State, 41 Miss. 737; Commercial Bank v. Chambers, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 1; Planters' Bank v. State, 6 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 628; McAfee v. Southern R. Co., 36 Miss. 669.

Missouri.—State v. Dolan, 93 Mo. 467; State v. Macon County Ct., 41 Mo. 453; Young v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 33 Mo. App. 509.

Nebraska.—State v. Howe, 26 Neb. 618; State v. Maccuaig, 8 Neb. 215; State v. Wish, 15 Neb. 448.

Nevada.—Thorpe v. Schooling, 7 Nev. 15.

New Hampshire.—Leighton v. Walker, 9 N. H. 59; State v. Wilson, 43 N. H. 415; 82 Am. Dec. 163.

New Jersey.—Jersey City v. Jersey City, etc., R. Co., 20 N. J. Eq. 360; State v. Blake, 35 N. J. L. 208; Mesereau v. Mesereau County (N. J. 1893), 26 Atl. Rep. 682; State v. Cavanagh, 46 N. J. L. 45; Buckallew v. Ackerman, 8 N. J. L. 48; Poulson v. Union Nat. Bank, 40 N. J. L. 563; State v. Chambersburg, 37 N. J. L. 258; Public School Trustees v. Trenton, 30 N. J. Eq. 667.

New York.—Bowen v. Lease, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 221; Rochester v. Barnes, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 657; People v. New York, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 102; Excelsior Petroleum Co. v. Embury, 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 261; Kingsland v. Palmer, 52 N. Y. 83; Lyddy v. Long Island City, 104 N. Y. 218; Dexter, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Allen, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 18; People v. Van Nort, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 205; Victory Webb Printing Co. v. Beecher, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 51; Church v. Rhodes, 6 How Pr. (N. Y.) 281; People v. Palmer, 52 N. Y. 83; Pierce

v. Delamater, 1 N. Y. 17; Farley v. DeWaters, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 192; Mon-geon v. People, 55 N. Y. 613.

North Carolina.—Ogden v. Wither-spoon, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 227; State v. Custer, 65 N. Car. 339; State v. Mas-ser, 103 N. Car. 356; State v. Monger, 111 N. Car. 675.

Ohio.—Moore v. Vance, 1 Ohio 10; Ruffner v. Hamilton County, 1 Dis-ney (Ohio) 39; Lehman v. McBride, 15 Ohio St. 573.

Oregon.—Grant County v. Sels, 5 Oregon 243; Hurst v. Hawn, 5 Ore-gon 275; Fleischner v. Chadwick, 5 Oregon 152; Stingle v. Nevel, 9 Ore-gon 63; Bird v. Wasco County, 3 Ore-gon 284.

Pennsylvania.—Southwark Bank v. Com., 26 Pa. St. 446; Johnston's Estate, 33 Pa. St. 511; Com. v. Cross Cut R. Co., 53 Pa. St. 62; Hendrix's Account, 146 Pa. St. 289; Sifred v. Com., 104 Pa. St. 179; Homer v. Com., 106 Pa. St. 221; 51 Am. Rep. 521; Com. v. Cromley, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 179; Egypt Street, 2 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 455.

Rhode Island.—State v. Wilbor, 1 R. I. 199; 36 Am. Dec. 245.

South Carolina.—Byrne v. Stewart, 3 Desaus. (S. Car.) 135; Morrison v. Barksdale, Harp. (S. Car.) 101; State v. Stoll, 2 S. Car. 538.

Tennessee.—Home Ins. Co. v. Tax-ing Dist., 4 Lea (Tenn.) 644; Wells v. State, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 70; Wilcox v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 110; Furman v. Nichol, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 432; Smith v. Hickman, Cooke (Tenn.) 330; Hocka-day v. Wilson, 1 Head (Tenn.) 113; Browning v. Jones, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 69; White v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 518; Poe v. State, 85 Tenn. 495.

Texas.—Davis v. State, 2 Tex. App. 425; Rogers v. Watrous, 8 Tex. 62; 58 Am. Dec. 100; Cain v. State, 20 Tex. 355; Fayette County v. Faires, 44 Tex. 514; Brown v. Chancellor, 61 Tex. 437.

United States.—Dist. of Columbia v. Hutton, 143 U. S. 18; U. S. v. One Hundred Barrels of Spirits, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 305; McCool v. Smith, 1 Black (U. S.) 459; U. S. v. Walker, 22 How. (U. S.) 299; U. S. v. Sixty-seven Pack-ages, 17 How. (U. S.) 85; Beals v. Hale, 4 How. (U. S.) 37; Johnson v. Byrd, Hempst. (U. S.) 434; Galena v. Amy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 705; Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 44; Distilled Spirits, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 356; Wood County v. Lackawanna Iron, etc., R. Co., 93 U. S. 619; Movins v. Arthur, 95 U. S. 144;

Arthur v. Homer, 96 U. S. 137; Clay County v. Society for Sav., 104 U. S. 579; Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S. 596; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556; Woods v. Jackson Iron Mfg. Co., 1 Holmes (U. S.) 379; Wood v. U. S., 16 Pet. (U. S.) 342; Morlot v. Law-rence, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 608; Powers v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 202; Un-ion Iron Co. v. Pierce, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 327; U. S. v. Irwin, 5 McLean (U. S.) 178; U. S. v. Barr, 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 254; U. S. v. Tynen, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 92; Henderson's Tobacco, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 657; Den v. Pine, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 691; Daviess v. Fairbairn, 3 How. (U. S.) 636; Milne v. Huber, 3 McLean (U. S.) 212.

West Virginia.—Shields v. Bennett, 7 W. Va. 88; State v. Cain, 8 W. Va. 730; Forqueran v. Donnally, 7 W. Va. 114; Fox v. Com., 16 Gratt. (Va.) 10; Hogan v. Guigon, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 705.

Washington.—Kings County v. Da-vies (Wash. 1890), 24 Pac. Rep. 540.

English.—Rex v. Middlesex, 1 Dow. P. C. 117; Dobbs v. Grand Junction Water Works Co., 9 Q. B. Div. 158; Hayden v. Carroll, 3 Ridgw. P. C. 545; Harris v. Robinson, 2 C. B. 908; 52 E. C. L. 907; Reg. v. St. Edmunds, 2 Q. B. 84; 42 E. C. L. 583; O'Flaherty v. McDowell, 6 H. L. Cas. 142; Sharp v. Warren, 6 Price 131.

Repeals by necessary implication take place whenever, by subsequent legislation, it becomes apparent that the legislature did not intend the former act to remain in force. Pennie v. Reis, 80 Cal. 266.

When a state changes its constitu-tion, all laws not inconsistent there-with continue in force; those repug-nant to it are repealed by implication. Cass v. Dillon, 2 Ohio St. 607.

Where a statute is passed to take ef-fect from its passage, and on the next day another statute upon the same subject is passed to take effect at a fu-ture day, the later one operates as a re-peal of the former. Weatherford v. Weatherford, 8 Port. (Ala.) 171.

If an amendment to a law changes it in its substantial provisions, it must by necessary implication repeal the old laws as far as they are in conflict. Longlois v. Longlois, 48 Ind. 60.

United States Rev. Sts. must be re-garded as passed on December 1st, 1877, and all other acts of the same session of Congress passed subsequent to that date are to be treated as subse-quent acts repealing the revised stat-pro tanto to the extent of the repugnancy;¹ and generally speaking, such parts of the prior act as may be incorporated into the subsequent statute consistently therewith, must be considered in force.²

In the absence of any repealing clause, it is, however, necessary to the implication of a repeal that the object of the statutes as well as the subject be the same; if they are not, both statutes will stand though they refer to the same subject.³

utes as far as they are inconsistent therewith. In re Oregon Bulletin, etc., Co., 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 614. See In re Oregon Bulletin, etc., Co., 13 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 200.

The passage of an act by Congress within its constitutional power, inconsistent with a state law, may abrogate the state law. Henderson v. Spofford, 59 N. Y. 131; Sturgis v. Spofford, 45 N. Y. 452; The South Carolina, 27 Fed. Rep. 526; Cooley v. Board of Wardens, 12 How. (U. S.) 299; Ex parte McNeil, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 236; People v. Brooks, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 469; Smith v. Turner, 7 How. (U. S.) 395.

Of two inconsistent statutes re-enacted in a subsequent act, the one originally passed at the later date will prevail and operate as a repeal of the other, since even though the re-enactment purports to repeal all prior acts, such original statutes will be treated not as new enactments, but as a continuation. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Ellison, 3 Wash. 226.

In Louisiana, it is prescribed by the Code of Practice that whenever its provisions conflict with those of the civil code the latter shall be considered repealed. Beck v. Brady, 7 La. Ann. 124.

1. Turner v. State, 40 Ala. 21; Watson v. Kent, 78 Ala. 602; Coats v. Hill, 41 Ark. 149; Elrod v. Gilliland, 27 Ga. 467; Hunt v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 121 Ill. 638; Butz v. Kerr, 123 Ill. 659; Manker v. Faulhaber, 94 Mo. 430; Sullivan v. People, 15 Ill. 233; Pennsylvania Co. v. McCarty, 112 Ind. 322; Pennsylvania Co. v. Dunlap (Ind. 1887), 13 N. E. Rep. 403; State v. Cooper, 114 Ind. 12; Jeffersonville, etc., R. Co. v. Dunlap, 112 Ind. 93; Connors v. Carp River Iron Co., 54 Mich. 168; Brown v. McCormick, 28 Mich. 220; Breitung v. Lindauer, 37 Mich. 233; Hearn v. Brogan, 64 Miss. 334; Public School Trustee v. Trenton, 30 N. J. Eq. 667; State v. Camden, 50 N.

J. L. 87; Plum v. Lugar, 49 N. J. L. 557; Mongeon v. People, 55 N. Y. 613; State v. Custer, 65 N. Car. 339; In re Contested Election, 86 Pa. St. 392; State v. Massey, 103 N. Car. 356; Byrne v. Stewart, 3 Desaus. (S. Car.) 135; Justice v. Com., 81 Va. 209; St. Johnsbury v. Thompson, 59 Vt. 300; 59 Am. Rep. 731; Weil v. Polack, 30 Fed. Rep. 813; Wood v. U. S., 16 Pet. (U. S.) 363; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., 127 U. S. 406; Dist of Columbia v. Hutton, 143 U. S. 18; McCool v. Smith, 1 Black (U. S.) 459. And see cases in preceding note.

If one act imposes a toll payable to turnpike trustees for passing along the road, and another transfers the duty of repairing the road to another body, prohibiting also the trustee from repairing it, the provision imposing the toll is not impliedly repealed. Phipson v. Harvett, 1 C. M. & R. 473. See Brown v. Great Western R. Co., 51 L. J. Q. B. 529.

2. Daviess v. Fawbain, 3 How. (U. S.) 636; Potter's Dwarris, p. 219; McCartee v. Orphan Asylum Soc., 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 437; 18 Am. Dec. 516; Bruce v. Schuyler, 9 Ill. 221; 46 Am. Dec. 447; Ottawa v. La Salle, 12 Ill. 339; Fowler v. Pirkins, 77 Ill. 271; East St. Louis v. Maxwell, 99 Ill. 439; Dunaway v. Goodall, 3 Ill. App. 201; Holton v. Daly, 106 Ill. 131; Warder v. Arell, 2 Wash. (Va.) 296; 1 Am. Dec. 488. See infra, this title, By Act Covering Same Subject.

3. U. S. v. Claflin, 97 U. S. 546; People v. Platt, 67 Cal. 22; Rosborough v. Boardman, 67 Cal. 116; Rawson v. Rawson, 52 Ill. 62; U. S. v. Gear, 3 How. (U. S.) 120; Miller v. Edwards, 8 Colo. 528; Bowen v. Lease, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 225.

A statute which made a willful omission by an insolvent debtor of part of his assets in a sworn inventory, a misdemeanor, has not the same object as an earlier law making the false verification of such an inventory, perjury,

Whether or not an implied repeal takes place in any case, the later act stands unaffected.¹

(2) Negative and Affirmative Terms—(a) In General.—If a subsequent statute which is contrary to an earlier one has negative words, it repeals the former.² Two such statutes expressed in negative terms may however be affirmative inter se and not contradictory, though negative as regards a third at which they are avowedly aimed, and so may be made to stand side by side.³ Even where the later statute is expressed in the affirmative, it is often found to involve that negative which makes it fatal to the earlier enactment.⁴ But when the later enactment is worded in affirmative terms only, without any negative, expressed or implied, it does not repeal the earlier law.⁵

(b) Prescribing Different Powers, Privileges, or Duties.—A subsequent statute conferring in affirmative words larger or more restricted powers,⁶ granting wider or less extensive privileges,⁷ imposing a and does not therefore repeal it. People v. Platt, 67 Cal. 22.

1. State v. Blake, 35 N. J. L. 208; Kingsland v. Palmer, 52 N. Y. 83.

2. Ballston Spa Bank v. Marine Bank, 16 Wis. 120; Read v. Story, 30 L. J. M. C. 110.

3. Canastota, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Parkill, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 601; Clark v. Sainsbury, 11 C. B. 695; 73 E. C. L. 695; Nixon v. Phillips, 7 Exch. 188; Ex parte Warrington, 3 De G. M. & G. 159.

4. New London, etc., R. Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 102 Mass. 386; Com. v. McCandless (Pa. 1888), 12 Atl. Rep. 440; Goddard v. Boston, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 410; Whitney v. Blanchard, 2 Gray (Mass.) 208; Sullivan v. People, 15 Ill. 233; Com. v. Erie R. Co., 98 Pa. St. 127; Foster's Case, 5 Rep. 59; Garnett v. Bradley, 3 App. Cas. 966; O'Flaherty v. McDowell, 6 H. L. Cas. 142; Ex parte Warrington, 3 De G. M. & G. 159.

In New London, etc., R. Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 102 Mass. 386, Gray, J., said: "But a later statute containing provisions, though merely affirmative in form, plainly repugnant to those in a former statute, repeals it as absolutely as by a negative clause."

5. Com. v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 81 Va. 355; State v. Buckner, 42 La. Ann. 74; Atty. Gen'l v. Brown, 1 Wis. 513; Atty. Gen'l v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 35 Wis. 435. See supra, this title, Statutes in Pari Materia.

6. Reg. v. Harden, 2 El. & Bl. 188; 75 E. C. L. 187; R. v. Llangian, 4 B. & S. 249; 116 E. C. L. 247; Schneider v.

Staples, 66 Wis. 167; Vermillion County v. Potts, 10 Ind. 286; Jersey City v. Jersey City, etc., R. Co., 20 N. J. Eq. 360; Knox County v. McComb, 19 Ohio St. 320; McRoberts v. Washburne, 10 Minn. 23; Com. v. Allegheny County, 40 Pa. St. 348.

A statute granting general jurisdiction to a court was held to repeal one granting limited jurisdiction. Farley v. De Waters, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 192.

An act providing that costs in the high courts should be in the discretion of the court, was held to repeal a prior law depriving a successful plaintiff of costs in an action of slander when he did not recover as much as forty shillings' damages. Garnett v. Bradley, 3 App. Cas. 944; Mersey Docks v. Lucas, 51 L. J. Q. B. 116; Gardner v. Whitford, 4 C. B. N. S. 665; 93 E. C. L. 664.

The provision of the statute which gave an appeal without any limit as to time against overseers' accounts, was impliedly repealed by a subsequent act which gave power to appeal to the next quarter sessions. Rex v. Worcestershire, 5 M. & S. 457.

7. Hogane v. Hogane (Ark. 1893), 22 S. W. Rep. 167.

A statute granting to a public officer a salary different from that given him by an act under which he was serving, repealed the previous statute in that particular. Pierpont v. Crouch, 10 Cal. 315.

Where a statute permitted an appeal from a judgment of a justice of the peace, and an act was passed allowing an appeal whenever the judgment exceeded five dollars, it was held that heavier¹ or less grievous burden,² or imposing different duties than were imposed in the same particular by a previous act, the old or new provisions being conflicting in their nature, operates to repeal the corresponding provisions of the earlier act.³

(c) Prescribing Exclusive Rule—Conflicting Rights.—A later statute, the evident intent of which is to furnish the exclusive rule governing a certain case, repeals by implication an earlier law on the same the former act was repealed by implication. Curtis v. Gill, 34 Conn. 49.

Where an act exempted from impressment all seamen employed in the Greenland fisheries, and a later one exempted seamen who had embarked for those fisheries, whose names were registered and who gave security, it was held that the earlier was repealed pro tanto by the latter act. Ex parte Carruthers, 9 East 44.

A law which directed that turnpike trustees should keep books of account, and that "all persons" should have access to such entries, was held to be impliedly repealed by a subsequent act which provided that the said books should be open to inspection of the "trustees" or of "any creditor on the tolls." Rex v. North Leach, 5 B. & Ad. 978; 27 E. C. L. 250.

An ancient franchise to hold a market was held to be impliedly repealed by a statute giving power to hold markets on such days as were thought fit at any appropriate places and to charge specific tolls and to make certain charges for weighing which could not have been made under the old franchise; the ground of the decision being that changes were made in time and place and new charges and extension of powers given. Manchester v. Lyons, 22 Ch. Div. 287.

1. State v. Whitworth, 8 Port. (Ala.) 434; Smith v. State, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 506; Carter v. Hawley, Wright (Ohio) 74; Leighton v. Walker, 9 N. H. 59.

The penalty for failing to return a marriage certificate was, under the old law, five dollars for each month of default. By a later law, the penalty was fixed at from five to one hundred dollars for such failure, and was held to impliedly repeal the earlier law. State v. Horsey, 14 Ind. 185; State v. Pierce, 14 Ind. 302.

Where an act made it actionable to sell a pirated copy of a work with knowledge that it was pirated, and the subsequent act contained a similar provision, but without any mention of guilty knowledge, it was held that the earlier act was so far abrogated that an action was maintainable for a sale made in ignorance of the piracy. Reg. v. Harden, 2 El. & Bl. 188; 75 E. C. L. 187.

Where a statute imposing a penalty is amended by increasing the penalty and the second act contains a proviso that it shall not apply to prosecutions under the first except to enlarge the penalty, the later act repeals the former. Wilson v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 64 Ill. 542; 16 Am. Rep. 565.

2. State v. Cain, 8 W. Va. 735; Nichols v. Squire, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 168; Com. v. Kimball, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 373; Gormond v. Hammond, 28 Ga. 85; Ely v. Thompson, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 70; State v. Smith, 44 Tex. 443; Watson v. Kent, 78 Ala. 602; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Kay (Tex. 1893), 22 S.W. Rep. 665.

So where a statute provided that every dog must be licensed, and prescribed a penalty on the owner for its violation, the statute was followed by one containing similar provisions, but omitted the penalty, the first statute was held to be repealed by the second. Com. v. Kelliber, 12 Allen (Mass.) 480.

A statute punishing a described act as a felony, is repealed by implication by a subsequent statute making the same act a misdemeanor. Hayes v. State, 55 Ind. 99. See People v. Tisdale, 57 Cal. 104. See infra, this title, Penal Laws.

Where an act required that a cognizance should be given in writing attested by two witnesses, and a subsequent act made the cognizance valid if in writing but made no mention of witnesses, this silence was held to repeal by implication the provision which required them. Cumberland v. Copeland, 1 H. & C. 194; Jeffreys v. Boosey, 4 H. L. 943; Kyle v. Jeffreys, 3 Macq. 611.

3. In Com. v. Godshaw, 13 Ky. L. Rep. 572, an act requiring that what remained of the jury fund after the trustee had paid the jurors, should be paid into the state treasury, was held to repeal a prior act requiring the trustee to pay the balance to the auditor.

subject.¹ And if the co-existence of two sets of affirmative provisions would be destructive of the object for which the later set was passed, or if the same right would be made dependent on conflicting conditions,² the earlier set would be impliedly repealed by the later.³

b. BY ACT COVERING SAME SUBJECT—(1) In General.—Where two acts are not in express terms repugnant, but the later act covers the whole subject-matter of the earlier, not purporting to amend it, and plainly shows that it was intended as a substitute for the earlier, it will operate as a repeal thereof,⁴ though all the

1. People v. Lytle, 1 Idaho 143; Druggist Cases, 85 Tenn. 449.

If a subsequent statute requires the same, and more than a former statute prescribed, this is a repeal of the former, so far as the subsequent statute renders more necessary than the first prescribed. Gorham v. Lockett, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 154.

Where an act confers no new and conflicting right or duty, but merely prescribes limitations and qualifications on those already existing, it does not repeal the acts conferring the previous rights and duties. Staats v. Hudson River R. Co., 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 287; Corwin v. New York, etc., R. Co., 13 N. Y. 42; Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 43 N. Y. 424.

2. Gwinner v. Lehigh, etc., R. Co., 55 Pa. St. 126.

3. Herron v. Carson, 26 W. Va. 62; Van Steen v. Beatrice (Neb. 1893), 54 N. W. Rep. 677; Commercial Bank v. Chambers, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 1; Korah v. Ottawa, 32 Ill. 121; 83 Am. Dec. 255; Gibbons v. Brittenum, 56 Miss. 232; Green v. Rex, 1 App. (H. L.) 513; Roles v. Rosewell, 5 T. R. 538; Lord Cowley v. Byas, 5 Ch. Div. 944; People v. Van Nort, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 205.

Although repeal by implication is not favored, and is not allowable save where the inconsistency is plain and unavoidable, yet a subsequent statute making a different provision on the same subject is not to be construed as an explanatory act, but an implied repeal of the former so far as the provisions are incompatible with each other. People v. Van Nort, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 205, citing Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 477; 5 Am. Dec. 291; People v. Deming, 13 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 441.

Where one act of the legislature directed the appointment of trustees to sue for and collect the debts, and sell the property of charter-forfeited banks, and a subsequent act directed a sale of the same debts and property in a prescribed mode, it was held that there was a direct repugnance between the two acts; the first created a trustee, the latter a limited agency; the first allowed a discretion, the latter was peremptory; the two laws being thus inconsistent, the latter was held to prevail. Commercial Bank v. Chambers, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 1.

So a law providing that certain officials should fix the price of all county advertising, is repealed by one providing that the county advertising must be contracted for with the lowest bidder. Journal Pub. Co. v. Whitney (Cal. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 237.

Where a statute provided that suits against banking companies might be instituted against the public officer, it was held to take away by implication the common-law right of suing the individual members. Steward v. Greaves, 10 M. & W. 711; Chapman v. Milvain, 5 Exch. 61; Davison v. Farmer, 6 Exch. 252; O'Flaherty v. McDowell, 6 H. L. Cas. 142.

The monopoly conferred upon the city of New Orleans of keeping powder magazines in the state, was repealed to the extent that like privileges were conferred upon other corporations by subsequent enactments. New Orleans v. Hoyle, 23 La. Ann. 740.

4. Hogane v. Hogane (Ark. 1893), 22 S. W. Rep. 167; State v. Conkling, 19 Cal. 501; Sacramento v. Bird, 15 Cal. 294; Pierpont v. Crouch, 10 Cal. 316; Campbell v. Case, 1 Dakota Ter. 17; State v. Palmes, 23 Fla. 620; Andrews v. People, 75 Ill. 605; Hunt v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 20 Ill. App. 282 (rev'd on another point in 121 Ill. 638); Eaton v. Graham, 11 Ill. 622; Devine v. Cook County, 84 Ill. 590; Crowell v. Jaqua, 114 Ind. 246; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Brown (Ind.), 5 provisions of the two may not be repugnant.¹ But there must be an unmistakable intent manifested on the part of the legislature to make the new act a substitute for the old and to contain all the law on the subject;² for mere similarity in the provisions of the two statutes is not enough to effect a repeal,³ even

West. Rep. 661; State v. Mason, 108 Ind. 538; Dowdell v. State, 58 Ind. 333; State v. Studt, 31 Kan. 245; Gorham v. Lockett, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 146; State v. King, 12 La. Ann. 593; Bartlet v. King, 12 Mass. 536; 7 Am. Dec. 99; Weeks v. Walcott, 15 Gray (Mass.) 54; Com. v. Cooley, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 39; Ellis v. Paige, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 45; Nichols v. Squire, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 168; Shannon v. People, 5 Mich. 88; Breitung v. Lindauer, 37 Mich. 217; Ex parte McDaniel (Miss. 1891), 8 So. Rep. 645; Clay County v. Chickasaw County, 64 Miss. 534; Swann v. Buck, 40 Miss. 268; State v. Rogers, 10 Nev. 319; 21 Am. Rep. 738; Young v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 33 Mo. App. 519; Berkshire v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 28 Mo. App. 225; Thorpe v. Schooling, 7 Nev. 15; Wakefield v. Phelps, 37 N. H. 295; Brome v. Cuming County, 31 Neb. 362; State v. Benton, 33 Neb. 834; State v. Jersey City, 40 N. J. L. 257; Bracken v. Smith, 39 N. J. Eq. 169; McCartin v. Traphagen, 43 N. J. Eq. 323; Industrial School Dist. v. Whitehead, 13 N. J. Eq. 290; Reinhardt v. Fritzsche, 69 Hun (N. Y.) 565; People v. Jaehne, 103 N. Y. 182; People v. Carr, 36 Hun (N. Y.) 488; Dexter, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Allen, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 15; Excelsior Petroleum Co. v. Embury, 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 261; Cromwell v. MacLean, 123 N. Y. 485; Heckman v. Pinkney, 81 N. Y. 215; Horton v. Cantwell, 108 N. Y. 255; Anderson v. Anderson, 112 N. Y. 104; In re New York Institution, etc., 121 N. Y. 234; People v. Gold, etc., Tel. Co., 98 N. Y. 78; Little v. Cogswell, 20 Oregon 345; Philadelphia v. Congers (Pa. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 675; Com. v. Cromley, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 179; Johnston's Estate, 33 Pa. St. 515; Philadelphia v. Kates, 150 Pa. St. 30; Harold v. State, 16 Tex. App. 157; Stebbins v. State, 22 Tex. App. 32; Rogers v. Watrous, 8 Tex. 62; State v. Horan, 11 Tex. 144; Stirman v. State, 21 Tex. 734; Bartch v. Meloy (Utah 1890), 32 Pac. Rep. 694; Farr v. Brackett, 30 Vt. 344; Lewis v. Stout, 22 Wis. 234; Burlander v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 26 Wis. 76; Simmons v. Bradley, 27 Wis. 689; Moore v. Superior, etc., R. Co., 34 Wis. 173; Oleson v. Green Bay, etc., R. Co., 36 Wis. 383; State v. Campbell, 44 Wis. 538; Smith v. Eau Claire, 78 Wis. 457; State v. Carbon Hill Coal Co., 4 Wash. 422; Mansfield v. First Nat. Bank (Wash. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 789; King v. Cornell, 106 U. S. 395; Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S. 596; Fisk v. Henarie, 142 U. S. 459; Dist. of Columbia v. Hutton, 143 U. S. 27; Tracy v. Tuffly, 134 U. S. 207; U. S. v. Tynen, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 88; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 590; U. S. v. Barr, 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 254; Norris v. Crocker, 13 How. (U. S.) 429; Daviess v. Fairbairn, 3 How. (U. S.) 636; Rex v. Cator, 4 Burr. 2026; Rex v. Davis, 1 Leach C. C. 306.

Provisions of the former law not contained in the latter, will be presumed to have been intentionally omitted. In re Wheelock (Supreme Ct.), 3 N. Y. Supp. 890; In re Alexander (Supreme Ct.), 3 N. Y. Supp. 892.

1. Excelsior Petroleum Co. v. Embury, 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 261; Dexter, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Allen, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 15; State v. Studt, 31 Kan. 245; Dist. of Columbia v. Hutton, 143 U. S. 18; Bartch v. Meloy (Utah, 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 694; Rogers v. Watrous, 8 Tex. 62; 58 Am. Dec. 100; Sullivan v. People, 15 Ill. 233; Leighton v. Walker, 9 N. H. 59; Com. v. Kimball, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 376; Harrison v. Walker, 1 Ga. 32. See cases in preceding note.

2. State v. Kirk, 53 Ark. 337. Where, for the purpose of preventing frauds against the revenue laws, the powers given custom officers are embodied in complicated and numerous provisions, a later law giving new powers and providing for new modes of procedure is not presumed to repeal the earlier ones, but "the most natural if not necessary implication in all such cases is that the legislature intended the new laws to be auxiliary to and in aid of the purposes of the old laws, even when some of the cases provided for may equally be within the reach of each." Story, J., in Wood v. U. S., 16 Pet. (U. S.) 363.

3. Robinson v. Rippey, 111 Ind. 112. See Powers v. Shepard, 48 N. Y. 540.

though the similarity may be such as to cause confusion or inconvenience.¹

Even where the later statute covers the whole ground of the earlier, if there is an expressed declaration of intention against a repeal by implication, the courts will let both acts stand and construe them as instituting two separate systems of accomplishing the same object,² unless such a construction is impossible.³ And where the revisory statute declares what effect it is intended to have upon the former, only such effect can be given to it.⁴

(2) Revisions.—The general rule that where a statute, not merely cumulative of the common law or of previous statutes, and not made to cure the deficiencies thereof, is designed to create a new and independent system, and to dispose of the whole subject of legislation, it is the only law upon that subject and without an express repealing clause displaces the old rules and statutes,⁵ has been almost universally applied to codes and revisions.⁶ In some instances however their repealing effect has been lim-

1. Robinson v. Rippey, 111 Ind. 112; Waldo v. Bell, 13 La. Ann. 329; Mitchell v. Duncan, 7 Fla. 13; Raudebaugh v. Shelley, 6 Ohio St. 307; State v. Berry, 12 Iowa 58; Wilson v. Shorick, 21 Iowa 332.

So in the case of remedial laws where a new remedy or mode of proceeding is authorized without an express repeal of a former one relating to the same matter, it is to be regarded as merely cumulative, creating a concurrent remedy and not as abrogating the former mode of procedure. Raudebaugh v. Shelley, 6 Ohio St. 306. See infra, this title, Remedies.

2. Robinson v. Rippey, 111 Ind. 116; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 105; Hurst v. Samuels, 29 S. Car. 476.

3. Deisner v. Simpson, 72 Ind. 435.

4. Patterson v. Tatum, 3 Sawy. (U. S.) 164. In this case, the act itself provided that such provisions of the earlier act as were inconsistent with it were to be repealed, and it was held that only the inconsistent provisions were repealed.

5. Barker v. Bell, 46 Ala. 221.

6. Barker v. Bell, 46 Ala. 221; Pulaski County v. Downer, 10 Ark. 588; Sacramento v. Bird, 15 Cal. 294; Pierpont v. Crouch, 10 Cal. 316; State v. Conkling, 19 Cal. 501; Campbell v. Case, 1 Dakota Ter. 17; State v. Palmes, 23 Fla. 620; Andrews v. People, 75 Ill. 605; Eaton v. Graham, 11 Ill. 622; Illinois, etc., Canal v. Chicago, 14 Ill. 334; Hunt v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 20 Ill. App. 282; reversed on another point in 121 Ill. 638; Bartlet v. King, 12 Mass. 536; 7 Am. Dec. 99; Goode-nov v. Buttrick, 7 Mass. 140; Ashley, Appellant, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 23; Com. v. Cooley, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 39; Ellis v. Paige, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 45; Nichols v. Squire, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 168; Berkshire v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 28 Mo. App. 225; Young v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 33 Mo. App. 509; Clay County v. Chickasaw County, 64 Miss. 534; Ex parte McDaniel (Miss. 1891), 8 So. Rep. 645; Brome v. Cuming County, 31 Neb. 362; Wakefield v. Phelps, 37 N. H. 295; Dexter, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Allen, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 15; State v. Rogers, 10 Nev. 319; 21 Am. Rep. 738; Little v. Cogswell, 20 Oregon, 345; Giddings v. Cox, 31 Vt. 607; Farr v. Brackett, 30 Vt. 344; State v. Carbon Hill Coal Co., 4 Wash. 422; Lewis v. Stout, 22 Wis. 234; Burlander v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 26 Wis. 76; Simmons v. Bradley, 27 Wis. 689; Moore v. Superior, etc., R. Co., 34 Wis. 173; Oleson v. Green Bay, etc., R. Co., 36 Wis. 383; State v. Campbell, 44 Wis. 538; Smith v. Eau Claire, 78 Wis. 457; Rex v. Cator, 4 Burr. 2026; Rex v. Davis, 1 Leach C. C. 306.

Wherever the legislature of Maine appear to have revised the subject-matter of any statutes of Massachusetts and enacted such provisions as they deemed suitable to the wants of the people of this state, the former statutes are to be considered as no longer in force, though not expressly repealed. Towle v. Marrett, 3 Me. 22; 14 Am. Dec. 206.

The implication of repeal is equally ited to those matters embraced in the old law which are omitted in the new,¹ or to cases where there is a manifest repugnancy between the old and new laws.²

(3) By Amendments "So as to Read."—A statute re-enacting a former statute and providing that certain sections thereof shall be amended "so as to read as follows," repeals all contained in the sections of the original act not re-enacted.³ The same rule has as strong in the case of the revision of the common law by statute. Com. v. Dennis, 105 Mass. 162, citing Com. v. Cooley, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 37; Com. v. Marshall, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 350; Lakin v. Lakin, 2 Allen (Mass.) 45.

But a mere change of phraseology in the revision of statutes will not impliedly repeal the old law, unless it appears that such was the intention of the legislature. In re Brown, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 316; Theriat v. Hart, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 380.

This general rule of construction will not govern in a case where the statute that revises the old law clearly indicates that the parts of the former act which are not inconsistent with it, are not to be repealed. Lewis v. Stout, 22 Wis. 236.

It was not intended by the legislature of Kentucky that the acts adopting the civil and criminal codes should repeal the general statutes or any part thereof, except where, as expressly provided for in the repealing sections of both, the general statutes come within the purview of those acts. Com. v. Watts, 84 Ky. 544.

The act adopting the Alabama Code of 1886, expressly provided that "no act passed at the present session, 1886, 1887, of the general assembly, shall be repealed or affected in any manner by the adoption of this code." And though the commissioners were required to incorporate all the acts of that session "amending sections of the code of 1876," it was held that a failure on their part to so incorporate a part of the jury law of 1887 would not have the effect of repealing that act, as the requirement was merely directory. South v. State, 86 Ala. 617.

1. Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Kirkpatrick, 35 Ga. 144; State v. Judge, 37 La. Ann. 581; Bracken v. Smith, 39 N. J. Eq. 172; Combined Saw, etc., Co. v. Flourney (Va. 1892), 14 S. E. Rep. 976; citing Ellis v. Paige, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 45; Buck v. Spofford, 31 Me. 36; Bedell v. Janney, 9 Ill. 207. See also Rutland v. Mendon, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 154;

Blackburn v. Walpole, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 97; Stafford v. Creditors, 11 La. Ann. 470; Pingree v. Snell, 42 Me. 53. And the rule is the same though the omission is caused by accident; it belongs to the legislature to supply it. Combined Saw, etc., Co. v. Flourney (Va. 1892), 14 S. E. Rep. 976; Buck v. Spofford, 31 Me. 36.

2. Lyon v. Fisk, 1 La. Ann. 456.

3. People v. McNulty, 93 Cal. 427; State v. Ingersoll, 17 Wis. 634; Goodno v. Oshkosh, 31 Wis. 127; Chapin v. Crusen, 31 Wis. 209; State v. Andrews, 20 Tex. 230; Barton v. Moscow School Dist. (Idaho 1892), 29 Pac. Rep. 43; Denver, etc., R. Co., v. Crawford, 11 Colo. 598; State v. Duval County, 23 Fla. 483; Druggist Cases, 85 Tenn. 449; Blakemore v. Dolan, 50 Ind. 194; Longlois v. Longlois, 48 Ind. 60; Moore v. Mausert, 49 N. Y. 332; People v. Montgomery County, 67 N. Y. 109; Mosby v. St. Louis, etc., Ins. Co., 31 Gratt. (Va.) 629; McRoberts v. Washburne, 10 Minn. 23; Gossler v. Goodrich, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 71; Breitung v. Lindauer, 37 Mich. 217; State v. Wish, 15 Neb. 448.

A statute enacted "in lieu" of another has a similar effect. Steamboat Co. v. Collector, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 478; Gossler v. Goodrich, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 71; Griggs v. Guinn, 29 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 144; In re Prime's Estate, 136 N. Y. 347; Mortimer v. Chambers, 63 Hun (N. Y.) 335.

See infra, this title, Repeal and Re-enactment, for the effect on portions of the prior statute which are re-enacted without change in the later one.

Where, in an amendatory act, the amendments to be made were mere substitutions of words which were specified and stated to be inserted "so as to make the section read as follows," and in the recital of the sections as amended a clerical error was made, the error was disregarded and held not to operate as a repeal of the original statute. State v. Stillman, 81 Wis. 128.

When an amendment does not change the original law, but simply adds some-been applied to revisions of previous laws, but this has been touched upon in a previous section of this article.¹

c. BY REMOVING REASON OF LAW.—Where the object and reason for which a statute was passed is removed by a later enactment, there is an implied repeal of the former statute.² But the mere removal of some of the evils provided against in the original statute, does not operate to repeal it.³

d. IMPLIED REPEALS NOT FAVORED—RECONCILIATION.—Repeals by implication are not favored⁴ and will not be decreed, thing to it, the amendatory law will not operate as a repeal of the former one. Alexander v. State, 9 Ind. 337; State v. Miller, 58 Ind. 399.

1. See supra, this title, Revisions.

2. Hayward v. Gunn, 82 Ill. 385; Castner v. Walrod, 83 Ill. 171; affirming Emerson v. Clayton, 32 Ill. 493; and overruling Morrison v. Norman, 47 Ill. 477; and Noble v. McFarland, 51 Ill. 226; Enos v. Buckley, 94 Ill. 458; Geisen v. Heiderich, 104 Ill. 537; Kibbe v. Ditto, 93 U. S. 674; Cameron v. Smith, 50 Cal. 303; Ong v. Summer, 1 Cin. Super. Ct (Ohio) 424; Brown v. Cousens, 51 Me. 302; Thicknesse, H. & W. 219; Weldon v. Neil, 51 L. T. N. S. 289; Lowe v. Fox, 15 Q. B. Div. 667. In these cases, it was held that exemptions granted to married women on account of their coverture were impliedly repealed and removed by the married women's acts enabling women to sue and be sued, and hold property as men. But this effect has been denied in other jurisdictions. McLaughlin v. Spengler, 57 Miss. 818; State v. Smith, 83 N. Car. 306; State v. Troutman, 72 N. Car. 551; Hershy v. Latham, 42 Ark. 305.

In New York the provision that coverture is an exemption has been specifically repealed. Acker v. Acker, 81 N. Y. 143. See Clarke v. Gibbons, 83 N. Y. 107. But prior thereto it had been held that the exemption was impliedly repealed. Ball v. Bullard, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 141, though the doctrine was questioned. Clark v. McCann, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 13; Dunham v. Sage, 52 N. Y. 229.

A statute which prohibited bottomry loans by Englishmen to foreigners on foreign ships engaged in the Indian trade, was held to have been silently repealed by the subsequent enactments which put an end to the monopoly of the East Indian Company and threw its trade open to foreign as well as to British ships. The India, Br. & L. 221.

3. Alexandria v. Dearmon, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 104.

4. Wyman v. Campbell, 6 Port. (Ala.) 219; 31 Am. Dec. 677; Horton v. Mobile School Com'rs, 43 Ala. 598; Riggs v. Brewer, 64 Ala. 282; Parker v. Hubbard, 64 Ala. 203; Kinney v. Mallory, 3 Ala. 626; Abernathy v. State, 78 Ala. 411; Herr v. Seymour, 76 Ala. 270; Cook v. Meyer, 73 Ala. 580; Jackson v. State, 76 Ala. 26; U. S. v. Crawford, 47 Fed. Rep. 561; State v. Watts, 23 Ark. 304; People v. San Francisco, etc., R. Co., 28 Cal. 258; Merrill v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 41; In re Yick Wo, 68 Cal. 294; 58 Am. Rep. 12; Scofield v. White, 7 Cal. 400; Crosby v. Patch, 18 Cal. 439; Home for Inebriates v. Reis, 95 Cal. 142; Saguache County v. Decker, 10 Colo. 149; Schwenke v. Union Depot, etc., R. Co., 7 Colo. 512; Erwin v. Moore, 15 Ga. 361; Conner v. Southern Express Co., 37 Ga. 397; Central R. Co. v. Hamilton, 71 Ga. 461; Montgomery v. Board of Education, 74 Ga. 41; Harding v. Rockford, etc., R. Co., 65 Ill. 98; East St. Louis v. Maxwell, 99 Ill. 443; Hunt v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 121 Ill. 644; Barr v. People, 103 Ill. 112; Chicago v. Quimby, 38 Ill. 278; Card v. McCaleb, 69 Ill. 317; Holton v. Daly, 106 Ill. 139; McDonough County v. Campbell, 42 Ill. 490; Hyde Park v. Oakwoods Cem. Assoc., 119 Ill. 141; Hume v. Gossett, 43 Ill. 297; People v. Barr, 44 Ill. 198; Tyson v. Postlethwaite, 13 Ill. 728; Bruce v. Schuyler, 9 Ill. 221; 46 Am. Dec. 447; Covington v. East St. Louis, 78 Ill. 548; Fowler v. Pirkins, 77 Ill. 271; Butz v. Kerr, 123 Ill. 659; Lichtenstein v. State, 5 Ind. 162; Blain v. Bailey, 25 Ind. 165; Coghill v. State, 37 Ind. 111; Pennsylvania Co. v. Dunlap (Ind. 1887), 13 N. E. Rep. 403; Indianapolis Water Works v. Burkhart, 41 Ind. 364; Carver v. Smith, 90 Ind. 222; 46 Am. Rep. 210; Hamlyn v. Nesbit, 37 Ind. 284; State v. Cooper, 114 Ind. 12; Robinson v.

Riphey, 111 Ind. 112; Evansville v. Summers, 108 Ind. 189; Casey v. Har-
ned, 5 Iowa 1; State v. Berry, 12 Iowa
58; Burke v. Jeffries, 20 Iowa 145;
Cole v. Jackson County, 11 Iowa 552;
Baker v. Steamboat Milwaukee, 14
Iowa 214; Snell v. Dubuque, etc., R.
Co., 78 Iowa 588; Central Iowa R.
Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 67 Iowa
199; Ament v. Humphrey, 3 Greene
(Iowa) 255; Stephens v. Ballou, 27
Kan. 594; In re Hall, 38 Kan. 670;
Com. v. Mason, 82 Ky. 256; Elizabethtown, etc., R. Co. v. Elizabethtown, 12
Bush (Ky.) 233; Brown v. Miller, 4 J. J.
Marsh. (Ky.) 474; Peyton v. Moseley,
3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 77; Hebert's Succession, 5 La. Ann. 121; Nixon v. Piffet,
16 La. Ann. 379; Desban v. Pickett, 16
La. Ann. 350; Saul v. His Creditors, 5
Martin N. S. (La.) 569; 16 Am. Dec.
212; Gee v. Thompson, 11 La. Ann. 657;
Collins v. Chase, 71 Me. 434; People v.
Grand Rapids, etc., Road Co., 64 Mich.
618; People v. Gustin, 57 Mich. 407;
Breitung v. Lindauer, 37 Mich. 217;
Brown v. McCormick, 28 Mich. 215;
Ryan's Case, 45 Mich. 173; State v.
Archibald, 43 Minn. 328; Kerlinger v.
Barnes, 14 Minn. 526; McAfee v. Southern R. Co., 36 Miss. 669; Planters' Bank
v. State, 6 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 628; White v. Johnson, 23 Miss. 68; Commercial Bank v. Chambers, 8 Smed. &
M. (Miss.) 9; Swann v. Buck, 40 Miss.
268; State v. Morrow, 26 Mo. 131; State
v. Bishop, 41 Mo. 16; State v. Draper,
47 Mo. 29; St. Louis v. Independent
Ins. Co., 47 Mo. 146; State v. Jaeger, 63
Mo. 403; Pacific R. Co. v. Cass County,
53 Mo. 17; State v. Bishop, 41 Mo. 16;
State v. Macon County Ct., 41 Mo. 453;
State v. Severance, 55 Mo. 378; Higgins
v. State, 64 Md. 419; Dugan v. Gittings,
3 Gill (Md.) 138; 43 Am. Dec. 306; Naylor v. Field, 29 N. J. L. 287; Plum v.
Lugar, 49 N. J. L. 557; State v. Chambersburg, 37 N. J. L. 258; In re Evergreens, 47 N. Y. 216; People v. St. Lawrence County, 103 N. Y. 541; New York v. Walker, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.)
258; Wallace v. Bassett, 41 Barb. (N.
Y.) 92; Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 330;
Heckmann v. Pinkney, 6 Abb. N. Cas.
(N. Y.) 371; Powers v. Shepard, 48 N.
Y. 540; McCartee v. Orphan Asylum
Soc., 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 437; 18 Am. Dec.
516; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Delaware County, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 5; Catta-raugus County v. Willey, 2 Lans. (N.
Y.) 427; Bowen v. Lease, 5 Hill (N. Y.)
221; Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 43
N. Y. 424; People v. St. Lawrence

County, 103 N. Y. 541; Harrington v.
Rochester, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 550; People v. Van Nort, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 205;
People v. Deming, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 271;
Williams v. Potter, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 316;
Van Rensselaer v. Snyder, 9 Barb. (N.
Y.) 302; State v. Woodside, 9 Ired. (N.
Car.) 496; State v. Sutton, 100 N. Car.
474; Robbins v. State, 8 Ohio St. 131;
Buckingham v. Steubenville, etc., R.
Co., 10 Ohio St. 25; Ludlow v. Johnston, 3 Ohio 553; Cass v. Dillon, 2
Ohio St. 607; Ex parte Van Hagan, 25
Ohio St. 426; Gillette v. Sharp, 7 Nev.
245; Street v. Com., 6 W. & S. (Pa.)
209; Morris v. Delaware, etc., Canal, 4
W. & S. (Pa.) 461; Walter's Appeal, 70
Pa. St. 392; Erie v. Bootz, 72 Pa. St.
196; Rhein Bldg. Assoc. v. Lea, 100 Pa.
St. 214; Osborne v. Everitt, 103 Pa. St.
421; Harrisburg v. Sheck, 104 Pa. St.
53; Brown v. Philadelphia County, 21
Pa. St. 43; State v. Alexander, 14 Rich.
(S. Car.) 247; Greely v. Jacksonville, 17
Fla. 174; Stingle v. Nevel, 9 Oregon 62;
Hockaday v. Wilson, 1 Head (Tenn.)
113; Furman v. Nichol, 3 Coldw.
(Tenn.) 432; Smith v. Hickman, Cooke
(Tenn.) 330; Cate v. State, 3 Sneed
(Tenn.) 120; Buchanan v. Robinson, 3
Baxt. (Tenn.) 147; Walker v. State, 7
Tex. App. 245; 32 Am. Rep. 595;
Thouvenin v. Rodrigues, 24 Tex. 468;
Napier v. Hodges, 31 Tex. 287; Cain
v. State, 20 Tex. 370; Selman v. Wolfe, 27 Tex. 72; Neil v. Keese, 5 Tex. 33;
51 Am. Dec. 746; Rogers v. Watrous, 8 Tex. 62; 58 Am. Dec. 100; Stirman
v. State, 21 Tex. 734; Gill v. State, 30
Tex. 514; Davies v. Creighton, 33
Gratt. (Va.) 606; Justice v. Com., 81
Va. 209; Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v.
Hoard, 16 W. Va. 270; Conley v. Calhoun County, 2 W. Va. 416; State v.
Cain, 8 W. Va. 732; Forqueran v. Don-ally, 7 W. Va. 114; Atty. Gen'l v.
Brown, 1 Wis. 513; Goodrich v. Milwaukee, 24 Wis. 422; U. S. v. Twenty-five Cases of Cloths, Crabbe (U. S.)
356; Aspden's Estate, 2 Wall. Jr. (U. S.)
368; Arthur v. Homer, 96 U. S. 137;
Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S. 596;
Wood v. U. S., 16 Pet. (U. S.) 342;
Harford v. U. S., 8 Cranch (U. S.) 109;
Beals v. Hale, 4 How. (U. S.) 37; Mc-
Cool v. Smith, 1 Black (U. S.) 459; U.
S. v. 67 Packages, 17 How. (U. S.) 85;
U. S. v. Walker, 22 How. (U. S.) 299; U.
S. v. 100 Barrels of Spirits, 2 Abb. (U.
S.) 305; Furman v. Nichol, 8 Wall. (U.
S.) 44; Ex parte Yerger, 8 Wall. (U. S.)
85; Henderson's Tobacco, 11 Wall. (U.
S.) 652; Clay County v. Society for Sav-unless it is manifest that the legislature so intended.¹ As laws are presumed to be passed with deliberation and with full knowledge of all existing ones on the subject, it is but reasonable to conclude that in passing a statute it was not intended to interfere with or abrogate any former law relating to the same matter, unings, 104 U. S. 579; Louisiana v. Taylor, 105 U. S. 454; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556; Chew Heong v. U. S., 112 U. S. 536; Distilled Spirits, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 365; King v. Cornell, 106 U. S. 395; Tracy v. Tuffly, 134 U. S. 207; Dist. of Columbia v. Hutton, 143 U. S. 18; U. S. v. 10,000 Cigars, 1 Woolw. (U. S.) 123; Loker v. Brookline, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 343; Goddard v. Boston, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 407; Snell v. Bridgewater, etc., Mfg. Co., 24 Pick. (Mass.) 296; Haynes v. Jenks, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 172; New London, etc., R. Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 102 Mass. 389; Reg. v. St. Edmunds, 2 Q. B. 84; 42 E. C. L. 583; Foster's Case, 11 Rep. 63a; Dobbs v. Grand Junction Water Works Co., 9 Q. B. Div. 158.

1. McGruder v. State, 40 Ala. 347; Tyson v. Postlethwaite, 13 Ill. 727; Blain v. Bailey, 25 Ind. 165; Indianapolis Water Works Co. v. Burkhart, 41 Ind. 364; Robinson v. Rippey, 111 Ind. 112; Lane v. Missoula County, 6 Mont. 473; Thorpe v. Schooling, 7 Nev. 15. See Pacific R. Co. v. Cass County, 53 Mo. 17; State v. Severance, 55 Mo. 378.

There is a strong presumption, where express words of repeal are absent, that the legislature had no intent to give a later act a repealing effect. Plum v. Lugar, 49 N. J. L. 557.

A repeal will not be implied if an unconstitutional result would be produced thereby. Reid v. Smoulter, 128 Pa. St. 374. No repeal of existing laws in reference to the suppression and sale of intoxicating liquors was intended by the adoption of the fifth amendment to the Maine constitution prohibiting the manufacture, sale, etc., of liquors. State v. Dorr, 82 Me. 212.

It will not be presumed that the legislature intended an unjust result of the repeal of a law, but if the language be clear, it must govern, whatever the result, and pending interests be defeated. Calkins v. State, 14 Ohio St. 232.

Where an act repeals expressly a particular portion or section of another act, this shows the intention of the legislature to allow the remaining parts of the act to stand unaffected. Pursell v. New York, etc., Ins. Co., 42 N. Y. Super. Ct.

383; Scales v. States, 47 Ark. 476; 58 Am. Dec. 768; State v. Morrow, 26 Mo. 131; Evernham v. Hulit, 45 N. J. L. 53; The Louis Olsen, 52 Fed. Rep. 652; provided there is no necessary repugnance between such remaining sections and the subsequent statute. Crosby v. Patch, 18 Cal. 439. A mere enumeration in a statute of certain previous provisions, which are not to be affected by it, does not warrant the inference that all existing provisions on similar subjects not so enumerated are repealed. Burnham v. Onderdonk, 41 N. Y. 425.

So where all the laws of a specified class, except one, were specifically repealed, and it was evident from the course of the legislature that it intended to repeal all such laws, but had overlooked the omitted one, it was held that this law was also repealed by implication. New York v. Broadway, etc., R. Co., 12 Hun (N. Y.) 571.

Acts Passed at the Same Session.—The question of implied repeal is one of intention, and where two acts are passed at the same session of the legislature on the same subject it shows an intent that one is not repealed by the other but that they are to be construed together. Curtwright v. Crow, 44 Mo. App. 563; State v. Clark, 54 Mo. 216; Barton v. Moscow School Dist. (Idaho 1892), 29 Pac. Rep. 43; Com. v. Huntley (Mass. 1892), 30 N. E. Rep. 1127.

Where several sections of a statute were repeated in a later one passed at the same session of the legislature, it was held that the sections repeated were not repealed, but both sets stood, and a suspension of the later did not suspend the earlier, the court saying: "It is hardly to be presumed that the legislature would repeal an act passed but fourteen days before, and if they had intended to do so they would probably have said so in some appropriate language and would not have left it to mere inference." Powers v. Shepard, 48 N. Y. 540. See Cheezem v. State, 2 Ind. 149; Martindale v. Martindale, 10 Ind. 566; Alexander v. State, 9 Ind. 337; Cordell v. State, 22 Ind. 1; Gorley v. Sewell, 77 Ind. 319; La Grange County v. Cutler, 6 Ind. 354.

less the repugnancy between the two is not only irreconcilable,¹ but also clear and convincing,² and following necessarily from the language used,³ unless the later act fully embraces the subject-matter of the earlier,⁴ or unless the reason for the earlier act is beyond peradventure removed.⁵ Hence, every effort must be used to make all acts stand, and if, by any reasonable construction, they can be reconciled, the later act will not operate as a repeal of the earlier.⁶

It is frequently found that the conflict between two statutes is apparent only, as their objects are different, and when the lan-

1. Bowen v. Lease, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 225; Adams Express Co v. Lexington, 83 Ky. 657; Com. v. Boone County Ct., 82 Ky. 632; State v. Babcock, 21 Neb. 599; State v. Bishop, 41 Mo. 16; State v. Macon County Ct., 41 Mo. 453; Ludlow v. Johnston, 3 Ohio 553; Dodge v. Gridley, 10 Ohio St. 178; Cass v. Dillon, 2 Ohio St. 607; Coghill v. State, 37 Ind. 111; Hamlyn v. Nesbit, 37 Ind. 284; Carver v. Smith, 90 Ind. 222; 46 Am. Rep. 210; Gurney v. St. Paul, 36 Minn. 163; Forqueran v. Donnally, 7 W. Va. 114; Covington v. East St. Louis, 78 Ill. 548.

2. Lee v. Forman, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 114; House v. State, 41 Miss. 737; Iverson v. State, 52 Ala. 170; State v. Blend, 121 Ind. 514; Com. v. Rumford Chemical Works, 16 Gray (Mass.) 231; Orton v. Noonan, 29 Wis. 541.

3. Pratt v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 42 Me. 579; Richards v. Patterson, 30 Miss. 583; Lucas County v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 67 Iowa 541.

That two acts are repugnant in principle merely, forms no reason why both acts may not stand. Ex parte Smith, 40 Cal. 419.

One statute is never repealed by the spirit of another. Cass v. Dillon, 2 Ohio St. 612. See State v. Cincinnati, 19 Ohio 197.

4. Dugan v. Gittings, 3 Gill (Md.) 138; 43 Am. Dec. 306. See supra, this title, Removing Reason of Law.

In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., 127 U. S. 406, Field, J., said: "The second act will not operate as a repeal merely because it may repeal some of the provisions of the first and omit others or add new provisions. In such cases, the later act will operate as a repeal only when it plainly appears that it was intended as a substitute for the first act. . . . It may be merely affirmative or cumulative, or auxiliary." See State v. Donnelly, 20 Neb. 214.

5. See supra, this title, Removing Reason of Law.

6. Lybbe v. Hart, 29 Ch. Div. 15; Parker v. Hubbard, 64 Ala. 203; Iverson v. State, 52 Ala. 170; Riggs v. Brewer, 64 Ala. 282; Merrill v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 41; Hollenberger v. People, 9 Colo. 233; Conner v. Southern Express Co., 37 Ga. 397; Barr v. People, 103 Ill. 110; Wragg v. Penn Tp., 94 Ill. 11; 34 Am. Rep. 199; Fowler v. Pirkins, 77 Ill. 271; Perteet v. People, 65 Ill. 230; Bruce v. Schuyler, 9 Ill. 221; 46 Am. Dec. 447; Mullen v. People, 31 Ill. 444; Cook County v. Gilbert (Ill. 1893), 33 N. E. Rep. 761; Roberts v. Fahs, 36 Ill. 268; People v. Barr, 44 Ill. 198; Harbin v. State (Ind. 1893), 33 N. E. Rep. 635; Ledgerwood v. State (Ind. 1893), 33 N. E. Rep. 631; Carver v. Smith, 90 Ind. 222; 46 Am. Rep. 210; Indianapolis Water Works Co. v. Burkhardt, 41 Ind. 364; Blain v. Bailey, 25 Ind. 165; De Pauw v. New Albany, 22 Ind. 204; Ament v. Humphrey, 3 Greene (Iowa) 255; Cedar Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Elseffer (Iowa 1892), 51 N. W. Rep. 27; Elliott v. Lechname, 1 Kan. 126; Brown v. Miller, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 474; Graves v. Graves, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 31; Nixon v. Piffet, 16 La. Ann. 379; New Orleans v. Mechanics', etc., Bank, 15 La. Ann. 107; State v. Callac (45 La. Ann.), 12 So. Rep. 119; Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 6; State v. Mister, 5 Md. 11; Billingslea v. Baldwin, 23 Md. 85; Com. v. Herrick, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 465; Pratt v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 42 Me. 579; People v. Gustin, 57 Mich. 407; State v. Archibald, 43 Minn. 328; Richards v. Patterson, 30 Miss. 583; Commercial Bank v. Chambers, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 9; White v. Johnson, 23 Miss. 68; Planters' Bank v. State, 6 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 628; Shelton v. Baldwin, 26 Miss. 443; State v.

guage of each is restricted to its own object they run in parallel lines without meeting; ¹ or the later act can be construed as a Macon County Ct., 41 Mo. 453; State v. Bishop, 41 Mo. 16; Jackson v. Washington County, 34 Neb. 680; Lawson v. Gibson, 18 Neb. 137; State v. Babcock, 21 Neb. 599; State v. Blake, 35 N. J. L. 208; Reinhardt v. Fritzsche, 69 Hun (N. Y.) 565; Williams v. Potter, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 316; Kilbourne v. Sullivan County, 62 Hun (N. Y.) 210; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Delaware County, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 5; People v. St. Lawrence County, 103 N. Y. 541; Kingsland v. Palmer, 52 N. Y. 83; In re Evergreens, 47 N. Y. 216; Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 43 N. Y. 424; State v. Massey, 103 N. Car. 356; State v. Custer, 65 N. Car. 339; Ludlow v. Johnston, 3 Ohio 553; Winter v. Norton, 1 Oregon 42; McLaughlin v. Hoover, 1 Oregon 31; Street v. Com., 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 209; Morris v. Delaware, etc., Canal, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 461; Shinn v. Com., 3 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 205; Wayne County's Appeal, 4 W. N. C. (Pa.) 411; Com. v. Erie R. Co., 98 Pa. St. 127; In re Contested Election, 86 Pa. St. 392; Williamsport v. Brown, 84 Pa. St. 438; Erie v. Bootz, 72 Pa. St. 196; Dickinson v. Dickinson, 61 Pa. St. 401; Fisher v. Baldridge (Tenn. 1892), 19 S. W. Rep. 227; Walker v. State, 7 Tex. App. 245; 32 Am. Rep. 595; Forqueran v. Donnally, 7 W. Va. 114; Atty. Gen'l v. Brown, 1 Wis. 513; U. S. v. Tynen, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 88; Dist. of Columbia v. Hut-ton, 143 U. S. 18.

1. Street v. Com., 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 209; McFate's Appeal, 105 Pa. St. 323; Harnden v. Gould, 126 Mass. 411; Gilson v. Emery, 11 Gray (Mass.) 430; McQuade v. O'Neil, 15 Gray (Mass.) 52; 77 Am. Dec. 350; Ely v. Cash, 15 M. & W. 617; Dean of Ely v. Bliss, 2 De G. M. & G. 459; Reg. v. Everett, 1 El. & Bl. 273; 72 E. C. L. 273; Adey v. Trinity House, 22 L. J. Q. B. 3; Grant v. Ellis, 9 M. & W. 113; Manning v. Phelps, 10 Exch. 59; Wright v. Lee (S. Dak. 1893), 55 N. W. Rep. 931.

A new law simply giving application and direction to the prior general law does not repeal it. State v. County Ct., 53 Mo. 128; and a statute which does not take away any right or impose any substantially new duty, but regulates, with additional requirements, a duty imposed by a previous act, is not to be deemed inconsistent with the previous act. Staats v. Hudson River R. Co., 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 287.

Where the legislature passed two acts at the same session, the first relating to the subject-matter of a former statute, and the second expressly repealing all of the former statute, except one section, the first of these two acts should not be regarded as a repeal by implication of the whole of the former statute inclusive of the section excepted in the second act. Curtwright v. Crow, 44 Mo. App. 566.

Where the original act fixed a tax upon the privilege of standing jacks, and also a penalty for the exercise thereof without a license, and a later statute changed the tax and provided a remedy for its collection, but was silent as to the penalty, it was held that the two acts were not inconsistent. Cate v. State, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 120.

A statute concerning "idle and disorderly persons" is not repealed by one having similar but inconsistent provisions concerning "vagrants." Com. v. Norton, 13 Allen (Mass.) 550.

An act prohibiting any public officer from appropriating funds collected in one year to demands which arose in a previous year, is not an implied repeal of a previous act directing that proceeds of a certain tax shall be applied to pay past-due claims. The two are not inconsistent. The later act only denies to the executive officers power to employ, in their own discretion, all public funds to pay past due claims. State v. Smith, 8 S. Car. 127.

Where certain counties were given the right to issue bonds to aid in the construction of any railroad running through them, upon a vote of a majority of the legal voters, and by a subsequent act certain other counties, including one of the former, were given a similar authority upon a vote by the majority of the legal voters, "and a majority of the supervisors," it was held that it being the manifest intention of the legislature to provide for two different roads, the latter statute did not repeal the former. Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S. 596.

A statute giving the right of action for compensatory damages to the surviving husband, wife, child or parent, or any person whose life is lost by negligence or carelessness of the proprietors, etc., of any railroad, steamboat, etc., is not necessarily abrogated by a subsequent constitutional provision making every person, corporation, etc., that may commit a homicide through willful act or omission, responsible in exemplary damages to the surviving husband, widow, or heirs of the deceased. There is no positive repugnancy between the enactments. Gohen v. Texas Pac. R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S.) 346.

Where a statute prescribed for the doing of a particular act, a penalty to be recovered in a civil action by the person injured thereby, and a subsequent statute made the performance of the same act a criminal offense, it was held that the two statutes were not repugnant, and that the first was not repealed by the later one. Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Steiner, 61 Ala. 559.

The right which a non-resident plaintiff had by one act to bring suit by a "long" summons without first giving security for costs, is not taken away by a subsequent act permitting him to bring suit by a "short" summons on giving security for costs. Osborne v. Everitt, 103 Pa. St. 421.

An act which declares that the expense of publication of the notice of tax sale shall not "exceed" the sum of $2 for "each newspaper" so publishing, is not inconsistent with and does not repeal the provision of a prior act prescribing the total amount of expense for that purpose. Crouch v. Hayes, 98 N. Y. 183.

An act which provides one course of proceeding for the habitual neglect to send a child to school, does not conflict with another which provides a different mode of proceeding for a neglect which was not habitual but occasional only, and both therefore can stand. In re Murphy, 2 Q. B. Div. 397; Ex parte Attwater, 5 Ch. Div. 27.

The following cases will serve as examples in which it has been held that there is not such inconsistency or repugnancy as to repeal the earlier statute by implication: Turner v. State, 40 Ala. 21; Campbell v. State, 46 Ala. 116; Lillensteine v. State, 46 Ala. 498; Iverson v. State, 52 Ala. 170; Roberts v. Pippen, 75 Ala. 103; Fulghum v. Roberts, 75 Ala. 341; Coats v. Hill, 41 Ark. 149; State v. Kirk, 53 Ark. 337; Shear v. Columbia County, 14 Fla. 146; Hall v. San Francisco, 20 Cal. 591; Taylor v. Palmer, 31 Cal. 240; Central Bank v. Kendrick, Dudley (Ga.)

66; Jackson v. State, 12 Ga. 1; Shaw v. Macon, 21 Ga. 280; Wooley v. Watkins (Idaho, 1889), 22 Pac. Rep. 102; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. East St. Louis (Ill. 1890), 25 N. E. Rep. 962; Tyson v. Postlethwaite, 13 Ill. 727. In this case a later law was passed in ignorance of an earlier, the former conferring a less benefit. State v. Barbee, 3 Ind. 258; Cordell v. State, 22 Ind. 1; Blain v. Bailey, 25 Ind. 165; State v. Donehy, 8 Iowa 396; Baker v. Steamboat Milwaukee, 14 Iowa 214; Com. v. Duff, 87 Ky. 586; Moore v. Miller, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 356; Graves v. Graves, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 31; Christian County Ct. v. Smith (Ky. 1890), 13 S. W. Rep. 276; Commercial Bank v. Markham, 3 La. Ann. 698; State v. Judge, 5 La. Ann. 518; Albert v. Brewer, 9 La. Ann. 64; New Orleans v. Mechanics, etc., Bank, 15 La. Ann. 107; St. Martin v. New Orleans, 14 La. Ann. 113; State v. Le Bourgeois (La. 1893), 12 So. Rep. 360; Dolan v. Thomas, 12 Allen (Mass.) 421; Com. v. Worcester, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 462; Com. v. Norton, 13 Allen (Mass.) 550; Shear v. Columbia, 14 Fla. 146; People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481; Green v. Com., 12 Allen (Mass.) 155; State v. Bishop, 41 Mo. 16; State v. Vernon County Ct., 53 Mo. 128; Gaston v. Merriam, 33 Minn. 271; Maple Lake v. Wright, County, 12 Minn. 403; Shelton v. Baldwin, 26 Miss. 439; House v. State, 41 Miss. 737; Crouch v. Hayes, 98 N. Y. 183; People v. Harris (Supreme Ct.), 7 N. Y. Supp. 773; Powers v. Shepard, 48 N. Y. 540; Harlem Bridge, etc., R. Co. v. Southern Boulevard R. Co., 41 Hun (N. Y.) 553; Kilbourne v. Sullivan County (Supreme Ct.), 16 N. Y. Supp. 507; State v. Storey County, 17 Nev. 96; State v. Cunningham, 72 N. Car. 469; Hodge v. Hodge, 72 N. Car. 616; Cramer v. Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 257; Jones v. St. Onge, 67 Wis. 520; Raudebaugh v. Shelley, 6 Ohio St. 307; State v. Board of Public Works, 36 Ohio St. 409; Cass v. Dillon, 2 Ohio St. 607; Winter v. Norton, 1 Oregon 42; Moyer v. Gross, 2 Pa. St. 171; Com. v. Collis, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 430; Dick's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 589; Drew v. Com., 1 Whart. (Pa.) 279; Malloy v. Com., 115 Pa. St. 25; State v. Young, 30 S. Car. 399; State v. Smith, 8 S. Car. 127; State v. Durant, Harp. (S. Car.) 319; State v. Beaufort (S. Car. 1893), 17 S. E. Rep. 355; Green v. State, 28 Tex. App. 493; Cain v. State, 20 Tex. 355. In this case subsequent modification of or exception to the earlier one,¹ thus avoiding all conflict between the two.

c. PENAL ACTS—(1) In General.—The general rules relating to implied repeals are applicable to penal statutes; so where two such statutes are repugnant in any of their provisions, the later will be held to repeal the earlier to the extent of the repugnancy;² and where a new statute covers the whole subject-matter of an earlier one, and adds offenses and prescribes penalties different from those enumerated in the old law, so as to indicate an intention to substitute the new law for the old, it is by necessary implication a repeal of the former statute, even though all its provisions be not repugnant.³

recognition was held to rebut intention to repeal. Gohen v. Texas Pac. R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S.) 346; Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S. 596.

1. State v. Bishop, 41 Mo. 16; Riggs v. Pfister, 21 Ala. 469.

Where an act fixed the yearly salary of a public official at one sum, and a later general appropriation act appropriated to satisfy it for a specified year a less sum, on an appeal from an order refusing a mandamus to compel the payment of the larger sum the order was affirmed, two judges sitting; the reason of one judge being that the acts were inconsistent, that of the other, that while not inconsistent the later act modified the earlier for the year in question, but that the excess over the appropriation was due awaiting a later appropriation. State v. Brewer, 64 Ala. 287.

2. Com. v. Gardner, 11 Gray (Mass.) 438; Com. v. Wyman, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 237; Mongeon v. People, 55 N. Y. 613; State v. Miller, 58 Ind. 399; State v. Hamblin, 4 S. Car. 1; State v. Grady, 34 Conn. 118; Fraser v. Alexander, 75 Cal. 147.

In Gormond v. Hammond, 28 Ga. 85, it was said: "It is a rule, that where there are two statutes imposing a penalty for the same offense, and the penalty imposed by the one is not the same as that imposed by the other, the later statute repeals the earlier, the intention to inflict two punishments for the same offense being a thing not to be imputed to the legislature."

In Rex v. Cator, 4 Burr. 2026, it was held that a former statute inflicting a penalty of one hundred pounds and threemonths' imprisonment on persons enticing away artificers, was repealed by a subsequent statute inflicting a penalty of five hundred pounds and twelve months' imprisonment for the same offense.

Where an act which was an offense at common law is declared to be an offense by statute, and a punishment is provided for it, the common law is repealed by implication. State v. Boogher, 71 Mo. 631; State v. Duncan, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 79.

Same Object as Well as Subject.—To effect the repeal of an earlier act the subject thereof must be treated and both statutes enacted to accomplish the same object. U. S. v. Clafin, 97 U. S. 546; Stockwell v. U. S., 13 Wall. (U. S.) 531; Coghill v. State, 37 Ind. 111; Com. v. Gardner, 11 Gray (Mass.) 447; State v. Grady, 34 Conn. 118; Cate v. State, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 120. See also Shoemaker v. State, 20 N. J. L. 163; Walker v. State, 7 Tex. App. 257; 32 Am. Rep. 595.

In Gray v. Cookson, 16 East 13, an act which empowered justices to commit for a month an apprentice guilty of any misconduct in his service, was held not to be repealed by a later one, which empowered them to compel an apprentice, who absented himself, to make compensation for his absence, and committed him, in default, for three months. The object of the first act was to punish the apprentice, while that of the later was to compensate the master.

3. Rex v. Cator, 4 Burr. 2026; Rex v. Davis, 1 Leach's C. C. 306; Michell v. Brown, 1 E. & E. 267; 102 E. C. L. 267; In re Baker, 2 H. & N. 219; Robinson v. Emerson, 4 H. & C. 355; Henderson v. Sherborne, 2 M. & W. 236; Parry v. Croyden Commercial Gas, etc., Co., 15 C. B. N. S. 568; 109 E. C. L. 566; Nichols v. Squire, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 168; Com. v. Kimball, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 373; State v. Whitworth, 8 Port. (Ala.)

But, as in the case of statutes generally, repeals by implication are not favored, and if the statutes can stand together consistently, there is no repeal.¹ As there is no repugnancy in several 434; State v. Grady, 34 Conn. 118; Mitchell v. Duncan, 7 Fla. 13; Gormond v. Hammond, 28 Ga. 85; Adams v. Ashby, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 96; State v. Horsey, 14 Ind. 185; State v. Pierce, 14 Ind. 302; Johns v. State, 78 Ind. 332; 41 Am. Rep. 577; Dowdell v. State, 58 Ind. 333; Peru, etc., R. Co. v. Bradshaw, 6 Ind. 146; Wagoner v. State, 90 Ind. 504; State v. Pike County, 104 Ind. 123; Phillips v. Lewis, 109 Ind. 62; State v. Wells, 112 Ind. 245; Engle v. State, 97 Ind. 122; Sullivan v. People, 15 Ill. 233; Com. v. Jones, 10 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 611; 1 Pa. Dist. Rep. 29; Heckman v. Pinkney, 81 N. Y. 215; Hartung v. People, 22 N. Y. 95; U. S. v. Tynen, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 88; U. S. v. Irwin, 5 McLean (U. S.) 178; Norris v. Crocker, 13 How. (U. S.) 429.

In Norris v. Crocker, 13 How. (U. S.) 429, the court said: "As a general rule, it is not open to controversy that where a new statute covers the whole subject-matter of an old one, adds offenses and prescribes different penalties from those enumerated in the old law, the former is repealed by implication, as the provisions of both cannot stand together."

In Com. v. Kelliher, 12 Allen (Mass.) 480, it was held that a statute which required every owner or keeper of a dog to cause it to be annually registered, numbered, described and licensed, in the office of the clerk of the city or town wherein he resided, and imposed a penalty for keeping a dog contrary to its provisions, was repealed by a subsequent statute which required such owner or keeper to have the dog annually registered in the office of the clerk of the city or town where the dog was kept, but imposed no penalty for keeping a dog contrary to its provisions.

In Com. v. Cooley, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 37, it was held that where a statute has revised the whole subject, made that a qualified offense which was one absolutely before, and limited the time for prosecution and degree of punishment, and where the same purpose is to be accomplished, that of restraining the offense by punishment, the statute must be deemed a constructive repeal of the common law, because such must be presumed to have been the intent of the legislature. See also State v. Norton, 23 N. J. L. 41; Jennings v. Com., 17 Pick. (Mass.) 82.

1. This question, like others in construction, must be governed by the intention of the legislature; and when it is evident that no repeal was intended, no such effect will be given to the statute. U. S. v. Case of Hair Pencils, 1 Paine (U. S.) 400; Ex parte Osborn, 24 Ark. 479; Sifried v. Com., 104 Pa. St. 179; State v. Miller, 58 Ind. 399; Walker v. State, 7 Tex. App. 246; 32 Am. Rep. 595.

Repeal by implication of penal statutes is no more favored than of other statutes. People v. Gustin, 57 Mich. 107; State v. Alexander, 14 Rich. (S. Car.) 247.

In Dolan v. Thomas, 12 Allen (Mass.) 421, it was held that a statute imposing a penalty of a certain fine and minimum term of imprisonment for a first offense, was not repealed by a subsequent statute providing that on conviction of such an offense, the court might, in its discretion, impose the penalty either of a fine or imprisonment, where the offender proved, to the satisfaction of the court, that he had not before been convicted of a similar offense. The statutes were not inconsistent. The court, speaking of the later statute, said: "It is obvious that this provision is applicable only to a certain class of cases."

In People v. Gustin, 57 Mich. 407, it was held that a statute which punished the keeping of houses of ill fame by a fine of three hundred dollars or a year's imprisonment, was not repealed by an act which classed that offense as disorderly conduct and punished it by a fine of fifty dollars or three months' imprisonment; and it was said that such a result was not within the legislative intention. Cooley, C. J., said: "A change in a statute specially aimed at disorderly persons, as such, affords no ground for an interference of anything to change the statute for the punishment of keepers of houses of ill fame, as such."

In State v. Alexander, 14 Rich. (S. Car.) 247, it was held that an act making it an indictable offense, "willfully, unlawfully and maliciously, to cut, shoot," etc., any horse, was not repealed by a law declaring every "willful tresremedies of a different nature, with different penalties, they may coexist.¹

(2) By Change in Nature of Offense.—Where a statute alters the quality and incidents of an offense, as by making that which was a felony merely a misdemeanor, or vice versa, it will be construed as repealing, by implication, the old law.²

(3) By Change in Degree of Punishment.—Where the punishment is altered in degree but not in kind, the later statute repeals by implication the earlier one, so far as they are inconsistent; as where milder punishment is provided by the later statute;³ so pass" to be a misdemeanor. It was said that an offense both willful and malicious contains an ingredient which is not to be found in one which is willful merely.

1. Rex v. Jackson, Cowp. 297; Henderson v. Sherborne, 2 M. & W. 236; Stephens v. Watson, 1 Salk. 45; Jennings v. Com., 17 Pick. (Mass.) 80; Hastings v. Aiken, 1 Gray (Mass.) 163; Crittenden v. Wilson, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 165; 15 Am. Dec. 463; State v. Shaw, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 32.

So a statute which provides a penalty for a nuisance does not take away the common-law method of abating the nuisance; as in State v. Moffett, 1 Greene (Iowa) 247, a statute making it a penal offense to injure a mill-dam was held not to take away the right to abate it as a nuisance. In this case, Kinney, J., said: "Nothing is better settled, as a general rule, than that the addition of a penalty by a statute or a common-law offense is merely cumulative, and that without negative words such statutes detract nothing from remedies formerly allowed by law;" citing Renwick v. Morris, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 621; Wetmore v. Tracy, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 250; 28 Am. Dec. 525; Salem T., etc., Co. v. Hayes, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 458; Com. v. Ruggles, 10 Mass. 391; Jennings v. Com., 17 Pick. (Mass.) 80. See also Coates v. New York, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 585; Mills v. Hall, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 315; 24 Am. Dec. 160; State v. Wilson, 43 N. H. 475; 82 Am. Dec. 163; State v. Wilkinson, 2 Vt. 480; 21 Am. Dec. 560.

In Cate v. State, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 120, it was held that an act which affixed a privilege tax and prescribed certain measures for its collection, did not repeal an act which imposed a penalty for the exercise of said privilege or license, but was merely cumulative.

2. Michell v. Brown, 1 El. & El. 267; 102 E. C. L. 267; Robinson v. Emer- son, 4 H. & C. 355; Rex v. Davis, 1 Leach C. C. 271; Reg. v. Button, 12 Jur. 1017; Rex v. Robinson, 2 East P. C. 1110; People v. Tisdale, 57 Cal. 104; Sherman v. State, 17 Fla. 888; Hayes v. State, 55 Ind. 99; State v. Hope, 15 Ind. 474; State v. Upchurch, 9 Ired. (N. Car.) 454; Mongeon v. People, 55 N. Y. 613; U. S. v. Tynen, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 88.

In State v. Upchurch, 9 Ired. (N. Car.) 454, Ruffin, C. J. said: "It is perfectly well settled as a rule of construction that if, by the common or statute law, an offense for example be a felony, and a subsequent statute, by an enactment merely affirmative, lessens its grade or mitigates the punishment, the latter is to that extent an implied repeal of the former."

3. Potter's Dwarries 673; Atty. Gen'l v. Lockwood, 9 M. & W. 391; Rex v. Cator, 4 Burr. 2026; Rex v. McKenzie, R. & R., C. C. 429; Henderson v. Sherborne, 2 M. & W. 236; Rex v. Heath, 2 East P. C. 609; Michell v. Brown, 1 El. & El. 267; 102 E. C. L. 267; Robinson v. Emerson, 4 H. & C. 353; Smith v. State, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 506; State v. Whitworth, 8 Port. (Ala.) 434; Gormond v. Hammond, 28 Ga. 87; State v. Daley, 29 Conn. 272; Com. v. Wyman, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 237; Nichols v. Squire, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 168; Com. v. Kimball, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 376; Flaherty v. Thomas, 12 Allen (Mass.) 428; People v. Bussell, 59 Mich. 104; State v. Upchurch, 9 Ired. (N. Car.) 454.

In Nichols v. Squire, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 168, it was held that a statute which imposed a penalty for unlawfully selling lottery tickets, different from that imposed by a former statute, repealed that statute. And the court said, that where the legislature imposes a second penalty for an offense, whether smaller or larger than the former one, the former is repealed.

In State v. Whitworth, 8 Port. (Ala.)

also where the punishment is increased.¹ But where the new statute merely provides a new kind of punishment or a change in procedure, without a change in the degree of punishment, no such effect will be allowed.²

f. GENERAL AND SPECIAL LAWS.—See supra, this title, Private and Special.

434. the court said: "The act inhibiting gaming, covers the whole ground of the previous statute, so far as the keeping, exhibiting, carrying on, or being in any manner interested in, any gaming table, or bank whatever, is concerned, and includes every offense connected with the subject-matter; and, as it provides a different, and in some respects a milder, punishment for these offenses than the previous statutes, it repeals them so far as the same offenses are provided to be punished by it."

So in Com. v. Davis, 11 Gray (Mass.) 48, a statute declaring houses of ill fame to be common nuisances, to be regarded and treated as such, and that any person convicted of keeping any such nuisance shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or a fine of not more than $1,000, was held to repeal a former statute providing that the same offense should be punished by imprisonment not more than two years or by fine not exceeding $300.

In Rex v. Cator, 4 Burr. 2026, a statute imposing a fine of one hundred pounds and three months' imprisonment for enticing artificers abroad, was held to be repealed by a subsequent statute imposing a fine of five hundred pounds and twelve months' imprisonment for the same offense.

A mere change in the degree of punishment does not necessarily have the effect of repealing the whole law, but only affects the provisions with which it is inconsistent. As in Com. v. Wyman, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 237, it was held that a statute substituting for the penalty of death imprisonment in the state prison for life in three cases—treason, rape, and arson—did not repeal the statute concerning arson, but merely the repugnant provisions providing the death penalty for the offense. In this case, the later statute dealt only with the punishment of the offense, not with the offense itself, and to that extent only could the earlier statute be repealed.

In Turner v. State, 40 Ala. 46, it was held that a statute which provided a mitigated alternative punishment for an offense, provided for by a former statute, was merely a change in the punishment, and did not effect a repeal of the earlier law.

Where a statute merely provides punishment for a common-law offense, the common-law is not abrogated, but the offense is still a common-law offense, the punishment only is changed. State v. Daley, 29 Conn. 276; Rex v. Bridges, 8 East 53; Williams v. Reg., 7 Q. B. 250; 53 E. C. L. 250.

1. Carter v. Hawley, Wright (Ohio) 74; Nichols v. Squire, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 168; Flaherty v. Thomas, 12 Allen (Mass.) 428; Buckallew v. Ackerman, 8 N. J. L. 48; Leighton v. Walker, 9 N. H. 59; People v. Bussell, 59 Mich. 104.

In Buckallew v. Ackerman, 8 N. J. L. 48, a statute which prohibited an act and imposed a penalty of ten dollars, was held to be repealed by a subsequent statute which made the same offense indictable and the offender liable to a fine of twenty dollars.

In Flaherty v. Thomas, 12 Allen (Mass.) 428, a statute imposing upon an offense the penalty of a fine, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, was held to be repealed by a subsequent statute containing no saving clause as to offenses already committed, which imposed for the like offense the penalty of a fine and imprisonment for not less than three, nor more than twelve months, unless the offender shall prove, to the satisfaction of the court, that he has not before been convicted of a similar offense; in which case he may, in the discretion of the court, be sentenced to be punished by imprisonment without fine or by fine without imprisonment.

2. Rex v. Carlile, 3 B. & A. 161; 53 E. C. L. 249; Rex v. Wigg, 2 Salk. 460; Stephens v. Watson, 1 Salk. 45; Rex v. Robinson, 2 Burr. 800; Com. v. McKenney, 14 Gray (Mass.) 1; Mitchell v. Duncan, 7 Fla. 13; Sifried v. Com., 104 Pa. St. 179; Ex parte Osborn, 24 Ark. 479; U. S. v. Case of Hair Pencils, 1 Paine (U. S.) 400. See Druc v. Com., 1 Whart. (Pa.) 279.

When a statute prohibits an act, under a penalty to be enforced by an indictment, and a subsequent statute gives a qui tam action for such penalty, the latter is merely cumulative of, and does not repeal the remedy given by the former statute. Bush v. Texas, 1 Tex. 455.

4. Effect—a. GENERAL RULES.—The effect of a repeal is the same whether it is accomplished by express terms or results from necessary implication.¹ The time from which a repeal takes effect is determined by the general rules governing the time of the taking effect of statutes generally,² unless the terms of the repealing act or the surrounding circumstances show the intent of the legislature to be otherwise.³

In Carter v. Burt, 12 Allen (Mass.) 424, it was held that a mere change in the locality of a punishment by a subsequent statute did not repeal the former statute. Bigelow, C. J., said: "In legal contemplation, a commitment to a house of correction in one locality for a specific term cannot be regarded as a higher or lesser punishment than a commitment to a house of correction in another county for the same period of time."

In State v. Wilbor, 1 R. I. 200; 36 Am. Dec. 245, it was held that a change in the distribution of a penalty did not work a repeal.

In Shoemaker v. State, 20 N. J. L. 159. Hornblower, C. J., said: "That the legislature should add to a penalty the forfeiture of certain property, and even superadd to that, fine and imprisonment, for an offense, is not contrary or repugnant. It may be unwise legislation, but it certainly is not unlawful legislation. It may be indiscreet in a legislature to invest so much power in a court in regard to the extent of punishment; but we cannot, on that account, adjudge that prior enactments and penalties must be considered as repealed, simply because the legislature has subjected the offender to an additional punishment."

In People v. Stevens, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 341, Sullivan, J., said: "It is undoubtedly competent for the legislature to subject any particular offense both to a penalty and a criminal prosecution; it is not punishing the same offense twice. They are but parts of one punishment; they both constitute the punishment which the law inflicts upon the offense. That they are enforced in different modes of proceeding, and at different times, does not affect the principle."

1. Angel v. Hume, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 379; People v. Davis, 61 Barb. (N. Y.) 456; Townsend Savings Bank v. Epping, 3 Woods (U. S.) 391.

Whether a specified act has been repealed by a subsequent one is a judicial question to be determined by the courts, and is not for the legislative branch of the government to determine. Dist. of Columbia v. Hutton, 143 U. S. 27; Postmaster Gen'l v. Early, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 136; South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 270; U. S. v. Claflin, 97 U. S. 548.

2. See supra, this title, Time of Taking Effect.

3. When an act repeals another in whole or in part, and substitutes some provision or provisions in lieu of those repealed, the latter remain in force until the substituted provision or provisions come into operation. Leyner v. State, 8 Ind. 490; Rogers v. Vass, 6 Iowa 405; Spaulding v. Alford, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 33; McArthur v. Franklin, 16 Ohio St. 193; Moore v. Houston, 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 185; Butcher v. Henderson, L. R., 3 Q. B. 338.

Words in the present tense in the repealing statute refer to the time of taking effect, not to the time of passage. Leyner v. State, 8 Ind. 490.

A saving clause in the repealing act takes effect at the time the repeal takes effect, and not sooner. Rogers v. Vass, 6 Iowa 405. See In re Ankrim, 3 McLean (U. S.) 285; In re Richardson, 2 Story (U. S.) 571.

A repealing act repealed before it was to take effect by its own terms has no effect on the original act, which continues in force. Adam v. Wright, 84 Ga. 720.

Where two inconsistent statutes expressly repealed an earlier statute, and one of them was to take effect June 1st, and the other July 1st, the former was held to continue in force one month and then to be repealed by the other. Malick v. McDermot, 25 Neb. 267.

Where a general repealing statute was passed, and on the next day a supplementary act was passed excepting

The repeal of a statute, as a rule, repeals everything contained in it; ¹ and an amendment, in such terms as to stand in the stead of an original section of an act, is repealed with the repeal of the act in which it stands.² But where the provisions of a statute are incorporated or adopted by reference in another, and the earlier statute so adopted is afterwards repealed, the adopted provisions continue in force, so far as they form part of the second enactment; ³ nor does the subsequent repeal of the adopting statute affect the repeal of the statute from which the provisions were adopted.⁴

b. ON INTERESTS UNDER REPEALED STATUTE—(1) In General.—A statute repealed by a later act of the same legislature is, in the absence of provisions to the contrary, considered, as to its operative effect, as if it had never existed, except as to matters and transactions past and closed.⁵

certain counties from the operation of the repeal to a certain extent, and there was no doubt as to the intention of the legislature, the supplementary act was regarded as part of the repealing act, and given the same effect as if passed on the same day. Manlove v. White, 8 Cal. 376.

A statute passed to take effect immediately is not immediately repealed by another statute on the same subject passed to take effect from a future day. Weatherford v. Weatherford, 8 Port. (Ala.) 171.

1. Church v. Stadler, 16 Ind. 463. In this case, a proviso in a repealed statute was held to be repealed also, and not to continue as an independent enactment.

The express repeal of an exception to a statute extends by so much the operation of the statute. Goodno v. Oshkosh, 31 Wis. 127; Smith v. Hoyt, 14 Wis. 252; Bank for Savings v. Field, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 495; Brodhead v. Milwaukee, 19 Wis. 660; 88 Am. Dec. 711; State v. Hoeflinger, 31 Wis. 262.

2. Greer v. State, 22 Tex. 588; Kamerick v. Castleman, 21 Mo. App. 587; McKibben v. Lester, 9 Ohio St. 627; Holbrook v. Nichol, 36 Ill. 162; State v. Ranson, 73 Mo. 88; Griggs v. Guinn, 29 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 144. See State v. Elko County (Nev. 1890), 23 Pac. Rep. 935.

3. Turney v. Wilton, 36 Ill. 385; Munes v. Wellisch, 12 Bush (Ky.) 363; Sika v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 21 Wis. 370; Spring Valley Water Works v. San Francisco, 22 Cal. 434; Schwenke v. Union Depot, etc., Co., 7 Colo. 512; Kugler's Appeal, 55 Pa. St. 123; People

v. Whipple, 47 Cal. 592; Phoenix Iron Co. v. The Hopatcong, 62 Hun (N. Y.) 263; Com. v. Kendall, 144 Mass. 357; Reg. v. Merionethshire, 6 Q. B. 343; 51 E. C. L. 342; Reg. v. Stock, 8 Ad. & El. 405; 35 E. C. L. 414; Reg. v. Smith, L. R., 8 Q. B. 146; Reg. v. Stepney Union, L. R., 9 Q. B. 383.

Where a statute giving a lien provides for its enforcement in the same manner as another lien is enforced, the repeal of the remedy in the latter case will not affect the remedy applicable to the former. Collins v. Blake, 79 Me. 218.

4. Sika v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 21 Wis. 371; Phoenix Iron Co. v. The Hopatcong, 62 Hun (N. Y.) 263; Ex parte Rossmore, 8 Ir. R. Eq. 366; Clarke v. Bradlaugh, 8 Q. B. Div. 69.

Procedure of an earlier act, adopted by reference in a later one, will remain after the repeal of the earlier act. Reg. v. Stock, 3 N. & P. 420.

5. Medical College v. Muldoon, 46 Ala. 603; Hirschburg v. People, 6 Colo. 145; Thorne v. Hays, 4 Cal. 165; Hartung v. People, 22 N. Y. 95; Butler v. Palmer, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 324; Yeaton v. U. S., 5 Cranch (U. S.) 281; Ex parte McCardle, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 514; Bank of Hamilton v. Dudley, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 492; Covington, etc., R. Co. v. Kenton County Ct., 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 144; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507; 71 Am. Dec. 359; Thompson v. Sayre, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 175; Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 338; Belvidere v. Warren, etc. R. Co., 34 N. J. L. 193; Den v. Dubois, 16 N. J. L. 285; Van Inwagen v. Chicago, 61 Ill. 31; Rood v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 43 Wis. 146; Dillon v. Linder, 36 Wis.

(2) On Interests Past and Closed—(a) In General.—The repeal of a statute has no effect on those rights and interests which have accrued under it, and which are past and closed.¹

(b) Transactions Invalid Under Repealed Statute.—If a statute making certain contracts illegal is afterwards repealed, the repeal will not give validity to such a contract, unless it appears that the repealing act was intended to have a retrospective operation.² Other

344; Curran v. Owens, 15 W. Va. 208; Musgrove v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 50 Miss. 677; McQuilkin v. Doe, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 581; Kay v. Goodwin, 4 M. & P. 341, 351; Rex v. McKenzie, R. & R. C. C. 429; Reg. v. Mawgan, 8 Ad. & El. 496; 35 E. C. L. 447; Surtees v. Ellison, 9 B. & C. 720; 17 E. C. L. 491; Ex parte Grisewood, 4 De G. & J. 544; Reg. v. Denton, 16 Q. B. 832.

In Kay v. Goodwin, 4 M. & P. 341, it was said: "The effect of a repealing statute I take to be to obliterate the statute to be repealed as completely from the records of Parliament as if it had never been passed; and that it must be considered as a law that had never existed, except for the purposes of those actions or suits which were commenced, prosecuted, and concluded while it was an existing law."

But an act of Congress, while it may supersede an act of the state legislature on the same subject, does not have the effect to obliterate the act, so as to extinguish pending rights, remedies, or suits. Sturgis v. Spofford, 45 N. Y. 452, where Church, C. J., in delivering the opinion of the court said: "I do not think the act of Congress had the same effect as a repeal of the statute by the state itself. It indicates an intention from that time to assume the exercise of the power conferred by the constitution, and the state law became from that time inoperative; but it is not repealed nor can it be presumed that any rights or interest secured or obligations incurred under it were intended to be interfered with." See also Henderson v. Spofford, 59 N. Y. 131.

1. Butler v. Palmer, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 355; Capital State Bank v. Lewis, 64 Miss. 727; Den v. Du Bois, 16 N. J. L. 285; Den v. Robinson, 5 N. J. L. 706; Baygents v. Beard, 41 Miss. 531; Tucker v. Stokes, 3 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 124; Couch v. Jeffries, 4 Burr. 2462.

Puffendorf says: "Suppose it were a law that, as a man disposes of his possessions by will, so the right to them should stand. It would be very fair in the sovereign to retrench this liberty of testaments and to order that, for the future, all these inheritances shall pass to the heirs at law; yet it would be unreasonable to take away from persons what fell to them by will, while the former law was in use and vigor."

If the legislature ex mero motu by a statute gives to an individual property belonging to the state, and he accepts it, a repeal of the statute would not deprive him of his property. Den v. Du Bois, 16 N. J. L. 285.

The repeal of a law authorizing a conveyance of real estate directly from a husband to a wife does not invalidate a conveyance executed before the repeal. Baygents v. Beard, 41 Miss. 531. Acts done under a contract made legal by statute and accomplished during its existence, are not invalidated by its subsequent repeal. Bennett v. Woolfolk, 15 Ga. 213.

2. Conley v. Palmer, 2 N. Y. 182; Bailey v. Mogg, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 60; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 87; Roby v. West, 4 N. H. 285; 17 Am. Dec. 423; Woods v. Armstrong, 54 Ala. 150; Anding v. Levy, 57 Miss. 58; Mays v. Williams, 27 Ala. 267; Milne v. Huber, 3 McLean (U. S.) 212; Mitchell v. Doggett, 1 Fla. 400; Gilliland v. Phillips, 1 S. Car. 152; Bancher v. Mansel, 47 Me. 58; People v. Brooks, 16 Cal. 11; Hathaway v. Moran, 44 Me. 67; Decell v. Lewenthal, 57 Miss. 331; 34 Am. Rep. 449; Petrel Guano Co. v. Jarnette, 25 Fed. Rep. 675; Hitchcock v. Way, 6 Ad. & El. 943; 33 E. C. L. 249; Jaques v. Withy, 1 H. Bl. 65.

So contracts, void under the usury laws and laws prohibiting a party from recovering for liquor bills, are not validated by the subsequent repeal of the act making them invalid. Gorsuth v. Butterfield, 2 Wis. 237; Root v. Pinney, 11 Wis. 84; Wood v. Lake, 13 Wis. 84; Lee v. Peckham, 17 Wis. 383; Morton v. Rutherford, 18 Wis. 298; Meiswinkel v. Jung, 30 Wis. 361; 11 Am. Rep. 572; Hughes v. Boone, 102 N. Car. 137.

The repeal of a statute declaring acts void when performed under the same circumstances are governed by the same rule.¹

(3) On Interests Pending—(a) Dependent on Repealed Statute—(1) IN GENERAL.—The effect of the repeal of a statute on interests dependent upon it, is not uniform, but varies according to the nature and object of the statute and the circumstances of the case.² The general rule, however, may be stated to be that the repeal of a statute, in the absence of a saving clause, necessarily divests and destroys all inchoate interests which have arisen under it,³ while void all contracts for unlicensed peddlers, does not validate contracts made before its repeal. Anding v. Levy, 57 Miss. 51; Decell v. Lewenthal, 57 Miss. 331; 34 Am. Rep. 449.

The repeal of a statute prohibiting unlicensed physicians from recovering compensation for their services, does not permit a recovery for services rendered before the repeal. Bailey v. Mogg, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 60; Puckett v. Alexander, 102 N. Car. 95.

But it has been held in New York, that the repeal of an act which makes a contract illegal on the grounds of public policy, repeals also the consequences of the act even as to contracts entered into while it was in force. Central Bank v. Empire Stone Dressing Co., 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 23. Said to have been reversed in 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 571, note; followed in Washburn v. Franklin, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 599, which latter reversed same case 11 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 93.

Causes of action barred by limitations are not revived by a repeal of the statute. Right v. Martin, 11 Ind. 124; Cassity v. Storms, 1 Bush (Ky.) 452.

1. In Boorman v. Juneau County, 76 Wis. 550, it was held that the repeal of a statutory bar or condition precedent to an action did not restore an action which had been lost by failure to observe the statutory requisite.

2. See Den. v. DuBois, 16 N. J. L. 300.

3. Lamb v. Schottler, 54 Cal. 319; Welch v. Wadsworth, 30 Conn. 149; 79 Am. Dec. 239; Gregory v. German Bank, 3 Colo. 332; 25 Am. Rep. 760; Eaton v. Graham, 11 Ill. 619; Van Inwagen v. Chicago, 61 Ill. 31; Wilson v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 64 Ill. 542; 19 Am. Rep. 565; Menard County v. Kincaid, 71 Ill. 590; Hunt v. Jennings, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 195; 33 Am. Dec. 465; Moor v. Seaton, 31 Ind. 11; Covington, etc., R. Co. v. Kenton County Ct., 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 144; Oriental Bank v.

Freese, 18 Me. 109; 36 Am. Dec. 701; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507; 71 Am. Dec. 559; Gaul v. Brown, 53 Me. 496; Williams v. Middlesex County, 4 Met. (Mass.) 76; Foster v. Essex Bank, 16 Mass. 245; 8 Am. Dec. 135; Tivey v. People, 8 Mich. 128; Bay City, etc., R. Co. v. Austin, 21 Mich. 390; Bailey v. Mason, 4 Minn. 546; Musgrove v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 50 Miss. 677; Bennet v. Hargus, 1 Neb. 419; Lewis v. Foster, 1 N. H. 61; Belvidere v. Warren R. Co., 34 N. J. L. 193; Butler v. Palmer, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 334; People v. Livingston, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 526; Knox v. Baldwin, 80 N. Y. 610; Washburn v. Franklin, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 599; Richardson v. Pulver, 63 Barb. (N. Y.) 67; Burch v. Newbury, 4 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 145; Church v. Rhodes, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 284; Hampton v. Com., 19 Pa. St. 329; Grim v. Weissenberg School Dist., 57 Pa. St. 432; Pratt v. Brown, 3 Wis. 603; French v. Owen, 5 Wis. 112; State v. Ingersoll, 17 Wis. 631; Kertschacke v. Ludwig, 28 Wis. 430; Goodno v. Oshkosh, 31 Wis. 137; Chapin v. Crusen, 31 Wis. 209; State v. Hoeflinger, 31 Wis. 263; Dillon v. Linder, 36 Wis. 344; Rood v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 43 Wis. 146; State v. Stone, 43 Wis. 481; Smith v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 43 Wis. 688; Streeter v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 44 Wis. 383; State v. Campbell, 44 Wis. 529; State v. Van Stralen, 45 Wis. 437; Smith v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 49 Wis. 443; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Nesbit, 10 How. (U. S.) 395; Aspinwall v. Daviess County, 22 How. (U. S.) 364; Ex parte McCardle, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 506; Hollingsworth v. Virginia, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 378; Watson v. Mercer, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 110; National Exch. Bank v. Peters, 144 U. S. 570; Schooner Rachel v. U. S., 6 Cranch (U. S.) 329; Miller's Case, 3 Wils. 420.

"The repeal of a statute is held to have the effect of expunging it from the statute book as completely as if it had never existed, except as to rights which have vested under it. All actions pending at the time of the repeal, and all proceedings then uncompleted which have for their foundation a repealed statute, fall with it; only such as are fully completed or ripened into judgment are not affected by the repeal. It is said as to pending actions that they must fall with the repeal, because when the court comes to pronounce judgment it finds itself without a law authorizing a judgment to be rendered." George, C. J., in Anding v. Levy, 57 Miss. 58. See Allen v. Farrow, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 584.

it leaves unimpaired those which either have become vested,¹ or, though connected with it, have an independent existence.² A

1. Den v. DuBois, 16 N. J. L. 285; Den v. Robinson, 5 N. J. L. 689; Aspinwall v. Daviess County, 22 How. (U. S.) 364; Rice v. Minnesota, etc., R. Co., 1 Black (U. S.) 358; Naught v. O'Neal, 1 Ill. 29; Taylor v. Rushing, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 160; Davis v. Minor, 1 How. (Miss.) 183; 28 Am. Dec. 325; M'Mechen v. Baltimore, 2 Har. & J. (Md.) 41; Wildermore v. Baltimore, 8 Md. 551; State v. Warren, 28 Md. 338; Ex parte Graham, 13 Rich. (S. Car.) 277; Mitchell v. Doggett, 1 Fla. 400; Butler v. Palmer, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 333; Church v. Rhodes, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 284; Worthen v. Ratcliffe, 42 Ark. 330; Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 503; 5 Am. Dec. 291; Van Rensselaer v. Secor, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 469; Merrill v. Sherburne, 1 N. H. 213; Bennet v. Hargus, 1 Neb. 419.

"A statute ought never to be construed so as to defeat a suit or conveyance upon a right already vested. . . . if it be susceptible of any other construction." Dash v. Van Kleeck, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 503; 5 Am. Dec. 291.

In Belvidere v. Warren R. Co., 34 N. J. L. 196, Beasley, C. J., said: "It is to be remembered that the retroactive effect which is to be given to statutes is largely a question of intention, and that although in criminal or penal matters it may be unobjectionable to require express words in the repeal act to preserve punishments and penalties, yet, nevertheless, when rights are given either to an individual or the public, it is obvious that a somewhat less arbitrary and inflexible test should be resorted to."

Where a statute authorizing the laying of a tax was repealed after assessment but before collection, it was held that the repeal did not prevent the collection, that being regulated by the general tax law, which remained unrepealed; Belvidere v. Warren R. Co., 34 N. J. L. 196; Pacific, etc., Tel. Co. v. Com., 66 Pa. St. 70; but that a penalty of 12 per cent. on failure to pay the tax could not be collected after the repeal of the statute—the rule being that the assessment of the tax was a thing past and completed, and could not be affected by the repeal; contra, with respect to the penal percentage. Belvidere v. Warren R. Co., 34 N. J. L. 196. See also Com. v. Standard Oil Co., 101 Pa. St. 119.

It was held in Gilmore v. Shouter, 2 Lev. 227, temp. Charles II (§ 2 Mod. 310), that where one had a right of action it could not be taken away by the retroactive effect of the Statute of Frauds prohibiting such actions except upon a written agreement. The Statute of Frauds was in effect a repeal of so much of the former law as allowed such actions on parol agreements.

The repeal of the statute securing to the purchaser at a void tax sale a lien on the land for the amount paid by him, does not affect liens existing complete and vested before the repeal. Capital State Bank v. Lewis, 64 Miss. 727.

Where a statute authorizing tax assessors on the failure of tax-payers to furnish a list of their taxable property as required by law, to make out such a list and add a certain percentage of the total value of the articles therein to the assessment for the service, was repealed, it was held that the taxes so assessed before the repeal were not affected; but the percentage added being in the nature of a penalty was lost by the repeal of the act. Hartford v. Champion, 58 Conn. 268.

Final judgments are unaffected by the repeal of the statute on which they depended. Osborn v. Sutton, 108 Ind. 443. See infra, this title, Judgments—Appeals.

The court may make an order regarding costs in a proceeding brought under a repeal statute to enforce a right vested before the repeal. Restall v. London, etc., R. Co., 3 L. R. Ex. 141.

2. See infra, this title, Connected with but Independent of Repealed Statute.

saving clause in the repealing statute, or in a general statute, preserves pending interests.¹

(2) REMEDIES.—The general rule is that there is no vested right in a particular remedy, unless the remedy is part of the right itself.² Aside from this exception, the legislature has complete control over the remedy and mode of procedure.³ If a repealing statute merely modifies a remedy, or takes away one remedy, leaving another, interests under the statute are not affected,⁴ though in the latter case pending suits will be determined.⁵ The interests,

1. New Orleans v. Graihle, 9 La. Ann. 562; New Orleans v. St. Romes, 9 La. Ann. 574; Backes v. Dart, 55 Ind. 181; Brotherton v. Brotherton, 41 Iowa 112; Com. v. Desmond, 123 Mass. 407; Chittenden v. Judson, 57 Conn. 333; In re House Bill, 12 Colo. 337; Com. v. Duff, 87 Ky. 586; Waddell v. Com., 84 Ky. 276; Com. v. Sullivan, 150 Mass. 315; U. S. v. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co., 45 Fed. Rep. 178; Lincoln County v. Oneida County, 80 Wis. 267; National Bank v. Lemke (N. Dak. 1893), 54 N. W. Rep. 919; McCann v. Mortgage Bank, etc., Co. (N. Dak. 1893), 54 N. W. Rep. 1026; Daggy v. Ball (Ind. 1893), 34 N. E. Rep. 246; Hall v. Hall, 64 N. H. 295; Kemmish v. Ball, 30 Fed. Rep. 759; State v. Proctor, 90 Mo. 334. See also supra, this title, Provisos, Exceptions, and Saving Clauses.

Pending an action under the provision of the act concerning the transportation of slaves, the act was repealed, but the action was held to be unaffected under a general statutory saving clause. Rogers v. Pacific R. Co., 35 Mo. 153.

2. Musgrove v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 50 Miss. 681; Bennet v. Hargus, 1 Neb. 419; Gilleland v. Schuyler, 9 Kan. 569; McMinn v. Bliss, 31 Cal. 122.

There can be no vested right in a rule of evidence or a presumption of law. Stephenson v. Osborne, 41 Miss. 119; 90 Am. Dec. 358; Fogg v. Holcomb, 64 Iowa 621; Journeay v. Gibson, 56 Pa. St. 57; Herbert v. Easton, 43 Ala. 547. The repeal of a statute authorizing a presumption of regularity of a sale of real estate, compelled grantees under a deed from the comptroller to make proof of every fact necessary to give the comptroller jurisdiction to make the sale in which the deed was given. Hickox v. Tallman, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 608. So rights to continuances and times to plead are not "rights accrued" within the meaning of the Iowa code, by which it is provided that such rights cannot be affected by the repeal of the statute on which they depend. Brotherton v. Brotherton, 41 Iowa 112.

A rule as to competency of witnesses is not a vested right. Laughlin v. Com., 13 Bush (Ky.) 261.

3. Mechanics', etc., Bank, 31 Conn. 63; Farmer v. People, 77 Ill. 322; Templeton v. Horne, 82 Ill. 491; Musgrove v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 50 Miss. 677; Dismukes v. Stokes, 41 Miss. 431; Mastronada v. State, 60 Miss. 86; Colby v. Dennis, 36 Me. 13; Onondaga v. Briggs, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 173; Stocking v. Hunt, 3 Den. (N. Y.) 274; In re Palmer, 40 N. Y. 561; Newsom v. Greenwood, 4 Oregon 119; Knoup v. Piqua Branch Bank, 1 Ohio St. 603; Hickory Tree Road, 43 Pa. St. 139; Treasurer v. Wygall, 46 Tex. 447; Danforth v. Smith, 23 Vt. 247; Harris v. Townsend, 56 Vt. 716; Dean v. Melard, 15 C. B. N. S. 19; 109 E. C. L. 19; Linton v. Blakeney, etc., Soc., 3 H. & C. 853.

4. Newsom v. Greenwood, 4 Oregon 120; Musgrove v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 50 Miss. 684; Danforth v. Smith, 23 Vt. 247; Whitehead v. Wells, 29 Ark. 99. See also supra, this title, In Derogation of Common Law.

The repeal of a statute prescribing a particular mode of trial in a civil case, will not operate to annul proceedings had under the statute in cases pending at the time of the repeal. Danforth v. Smith, 23 Vt. 247.

Where a statute permitting the transfer of trials at law, when an equitable issue was developed, to the equity side of the court, was repealed, a pending suit so transferred was held to be unaffected by the repeal. Newsom v. Greenwood, 4 Oregon 120.

5. Jones v. Com., 86 Va. 661; citing Bank of Hamilton v. Dudley, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 492; Musgrove v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 50 Miss. 677.

The repeal of an act allowing the

however, may be enforced under the modified procedure or the remaining remedy.¹

(3) CONTRACTS.—The repeal of a statute which has entered into and become part of a contract will not deprive the parties of their rights under the contract, for such a repeal is as much a violation of the constitution as the passage of a new and different statute.² But if a contract is against sound morals, natural justice, and auditor of a state to assess a tax under certain circumstances to pay a subscription, put an end to proceeding against the auditor to compel the levy of a tax, but did not destroy the right to enforce the tax by another remedy provided by law. Musgrove v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 50 Miss. 677.

1. Mayne v. Huntington County, 123 Ind. 132; Kille v. Reading Iron Co., 134 Pa. St. 225; Bate v. Sheets, 64 Ind. 209; Moss v. State, 101 Ind. 321; Knoup v. Piqua Branch Bank, 1 Ohio St. 603; Hickory Tree Road, 43 Pa. St. 139; Uwchlan Tp. Road, 30 Pa. St. 156; Gorley v. Sewell, 77 Ind. 316; Mulcahey v. Givens, 115 Ind. 286; In re New York Express Co., 23 Hun (N. Y.) 615; Farmer v. People, 77 Ill. 322; State v. Blend, 121 Ind. 514.

Where a statutory remedy for a right created by that statute is repealed, but the repealing statute provides a substantially similar remedy, the right may be prosecuted under the repealing statute. Knoup v. Piqua Branch Bank, 1 Ohio St. 603; Mitchell v. Eyster, 7 Ohio 257; Debolt v. Ohio L. Ins., etc., Co., 1 Ohio St. 563; McMullen v. Guest, 6 Tex. 275. This has been similarly held in criminal actions as to mere changes in procedure. Jones v. Com., 86 Va. 661.

That part of an act relative to statutes which provides that when the courts of practice or procedure for the enforcement of a right vested or approved under a statute subsequently repealed shall be changed, actions then pending or thereafter commenced for the enforcement of such right shall be conducted as nearly as may be in accordance with such altered practice or procedure, applies only to cases where the legislature has substituted a new course of practice or procedure for the enforcement of such antecedent liability. Where no new remedy has been substituted for the enforcement of a right accrued under a statute afterwards repealed, the old remedy remains, notwithstanding the repeal of the statute by force of constitutional provision. Wilson v. Herbert, 41 N. J. L. 454; 36 Am. Rep. 243. See also Harris v. Townsend, 56 Vt. 716.

2. Hawthorne v. Calef, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 10; Van Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 535; State v. Madison, 15 Wis. 30; Smith v. Appleton, 19 Wis. 468; Bryson v. McCreary, 102 Ind. 1; Conant v. Van Schaick, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 87; Flewellen v. Proetzel, 80 Tex. 191; Lathrop v. Brown, 1 Woods (U. S.) 474. See also Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. (U. S.) 190; Louisiana State Lottery Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 3 Woods (U. S.) 222.

The repeal of a law authorizing a municipality to issue bonds "exempt from taxation," does not affect bonds issued before the repeal, for that would change the obligation of the contract between the municipality and the bondholders. But as the authority did not create a contract between the state and the municipality, the authority could be withdrawn, and bonds issued after the repeal were subject to taxation. Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Newark (N. J. 1892), 23 Atl. Rep. 305.

The repeal of a statute making stockholders of a railroad liable for all debts incurred by the corporation, does not affect their liability to creditors whose debts against the corporations were incurred prior to the repeal. Conant v. Van Schaick, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 87. This case went upon the theory, that "the right is not created or given by statute, but is a common-law right; and the liability of the stockholders is a part of the contract."

The same point was similarly decided in Hawthorne v. Calef, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 10; Provident Sav. Inst. v. Jackson Place Skating, etc., Rink, 52 Mo. 552; the ground of the decision being that were the rule different, the obligation of contracts would be impaired, because, first, the creditors contracted with the corporation on the faith of the individual responsibility of the stockholders; and, second, the remedy would be so right, it falls with the repeal.¹ But where the effect of a statute is to declare that certain future voluntary acts of parties shall be a contract by which they shall be bound, the repeal of the statute after such acts have been performed does not affect the rights of the parties so contracting.²

(4) JURISDICTION — POWERS AND PRIVILEGES.—If a law conferring jurisdiction is repealed, expressly or by implication,³ without any reservation or saving clause, the right to exercise the jurisdiction seriously affected that the obligation would be impaired.

A law repealing a statute under which action has been had, giving a prior lien for a valuable consideration to the city of Louisville on certain property, does not interfere with the lien for such portion of the consideration as had been already advanced. Sinking Fund Com'rs v. Northern Bank, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 174.

Where, under a statute, a contractor for the grading of streets was authorized to sue delinquent abutters for unpaid assessments, it was held that this right became a part of the contract and was not taken away by a repeal of the statute creating it. Creighton v. Pragg, 21 Cal. 115.

Where a bank was incorporated and in its charter it was provided that the bills and notes of the institution should be received in all payments of debts due to the state, this was held to be a contract, and all bills and notes of the bank in circulation at the time of the repeal were receivable thereafter for the payment of debts due to the state. Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. (U. S.) 190. See Curran v. State, 15 How. (U. S.) 304.

Where a law providing for a proceeding for the condemnation and sale of lands on which taxes were overdue, and giving costs to the attorney who prosecuted the same, was repealed, it was held that the repeal did not affect the right of attorneys to recover costs in actions pending under the act at the time of its repeal; the right to costs being in the nature of a contract. Files v. Fuller, 44 Ark. 273.

The repeal of a license law does not affect a right to recover for a breach of a bond given under the law. Coggeshall v. Groves, 16 R. I. 18.

Where a state has authorized a municipal corporation to contract and to exercise the power of local taxation to the extent necessary to meet its engagements, the power itself given cannot be withdrawn by the repeal of the act until the contracts entered into are actually satisfied. Van Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 535; People v. Woods, 7 Cal. 579; People v. Bond, 10 Cal. 563. See also TAXATION.

1. Osborn v. Nicholson, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 219, and cases cited; Norris v. Crocker, 13 How. (U. S.) 429; Kimbrow v. Colgate, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 229.

So a slave contract based on a statute permitting it, could not be enforced after the repeal of the statute. Osborn v. Nicholson, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 219.

2. Streubel v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 12 Wis. 85.

In Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 450, it was decided that the repeal of an act declaring that when a vessel is spoken by a pilot and his services are declined, he shall be entitled to one-half pilotage fees, does not affect claims for fees accrued before its repeal. The court said: "Where a right has arisen upon a transaction in the nature of a contract authorized by statute, and it has been so far perfected that nothing remains to be done by the party asserting it, the repeal of the statute does not affect it or an action for its enforcement."

On the same principle a right of action for cutting timber on mineral lands given by a regulation of the secretary of the treasury under an act of Congress, is not affected by the repeal of the regulation. U. S. v. Williams, 8 Mont. 85.

The repeal of an act which made a railroad liable for the wages of all men employed in the construction of its line on the giving of a prescribed notice, did not divest the right of an employé of a sub-contractor who had fulfilled the conditions and given the notice. Streubel v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 12 Wis. 74.

3. New London, etc., R. Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 102 Mass. 386; Crisp v. Bunbury, 8 Bing. 394; 21 E. C. L. 333; Cates v. Knight, 3 T. R. 442.

is lost,¹ and proceedings pending under it fall with the law.² So the naked repeal of a statute conferring a power or privilege destroys the right to exercise it, and abates suits pending to enforce it.³

(5) PENALTIES AND FORFEITURES.—The repeal of a statute pre-

1. Lamb v. Schottler, 54 Cal. 319; Smith v. Arapahoe Dist. Ct., 4 Colo. 235; Hunt v. Jennings, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 196; 33 Am. Dec. 465; Stephenson v. Doe, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 508; 46 Am. Dec. 489; Roush v. Morrison, 47 Ind. 414; State v. Passaic, 36 N. J. L. 382; Belvidere v. Warren R. Co., 34 N. J. L. 195; State v. Jersey City, 38 N. J. L. 85; Butler v. Palmer, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 324; Angel v. Hume, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 377; Saco v. Gurney, 34 Me. 14; Macnawhoc Plantation v. Thompson, 36 Me. 365; Thayer v. Seavey, 11 Me. 284; Cummings v. Chandler, 26 Me. 453; Hampton v. Com., 19 Pa. St. 329; Stoever v. Immell, 1 Watts (Pa.) 258; North Canal Street Road, 10 Watts (Pa.) 351; 36 Am. Dec. 185; Hatfield Tp. Road, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 392; Uwchlan Tp. Road, 30 Pa. St. 156; Hampton v. Com., 19 Pa. St. 329; Fenelon's Petition, 7 Pa. St. 173; Rice v. Wright, 46 Miss. 679; Musgrove v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 50 Miss. 677; State v. Brookover, 22 W. Va. 214; U. S. v. Boisdore, 8 How. (U. S.) 121; McNulty v. Batty, 10 How. (U. S.) 79; Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Ritchie, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 541; Ex parte McCardle, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 506; Gates v. Osborne, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 569; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Grant, 98 U. S. 398; Sherman v. Grinnell, 123 U. S. 679; Gurnee v. Patrick County, 137 U. S. 141; Morey v. Lockhart, 123 U. S. 56; Wilkinson v. Nebraska, 123 U. S. 286; U. S. v. Tynen, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 88; Hollingsworth v. Virginia, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 378; Yeaton v. U. S., 5 Cranch (U. S.) 281; South Carolina v. Gaillard, 101 U. S. 433; Maggs v. Hunt, 12 J. B. Moore 357; 4 Bing. 212; 13 E. C. L. 404; Miller's Case, 1 W. Bl. 451; Grant v. Grant, 12 S. Car. 29; 32 Am. Rep. 506; Todd v. Landry, 5 Martin (La.) 459; 12 Am. Dec. 479; Wade v. St. Mary's Industrial School, 43 Md. 178; Com. v. Kimball, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 373; Com. v. Hampden County, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 501.

The rule is the same where the statute expires by limitation. Stoever v. Immell, 1 Watts (Pa.) 258; Com. v. Beatty, 1 Watts (Pa.) 382; Gates v. Osborne, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 567; Illinois, etc., Canal v. Chicago, 14 Ill. 334.

All proceedings after the repeal are void. Bank of Hamilton v. Dudley, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 492; Church v. Rhodes, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 281; Fenelon's Petition, 7 Pa. St. 173; North Canal Street Road, 10 Watts (Pa.) 351; 36 Am. Dec. 185.

2. U. S. v. Boisdore, 8 How. (U. S.) 121; McNulty v. Batty, 10 How. (U. S.) 79; Gates v. Osborne, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 567; U. S. v. 6 Fermenting Tubs, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 269; Stephenson v. Doe, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 508; 46 Am. Dec. 489; Hunt v. Jennings, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 195; 33 Am. Dec. 465.

A statute repealing all divorce laws of a state ousts the court of jurisdiction in pending divorce cases. Grant v. Grant, 12 S. Car. 29; 32 Am. Rep. 506.

The repeal of an act authorizing the governor to appoint special revenue agents, empowered to bring suits in the name of the state against defaulters, takes away the jurisdiction of the court in a suit pending under the act, so that no judgment can be rendered. French v. State, 53 Miss. 651.

Where a statute authorizing a writ of foreign attachment was repealed during the pendency of a suit begun under it, the suit was abated. Stephenson v. Doe, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 508; 46 Am. Dec. 489.

So where a court was given jurisdiction to determine whether a road should be laid out, and in the midst of the proceedings the act granting the jurisdiction was repealed, the power of the court to proceed was taken away. North Canal Street Road, 10 Watts (Pa.) 351; 36 Am. Dec. 185; In re North Street, 1 Pears. (Pa.) 199.

3. Veats v. Danbury, 37 Conn. 412; Downs v. Huntington, 35 Conn. 588; Smith v. Arapahoe Dist. Ct., 4 Colo. 235; Illinois, etc., Canal v. Chicago, 14 Ill. 334; Hunt v. Jennings, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 195; 33 Am. Dec. 465; Stephenson v. Doe, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 508; 46 Am. Dec. 489; Gilleland v. Schuyler, 9 Kan. 569; Todd v. Landry, 5 Martin (La.) 459; 12 Am. Dec. 479; Macnawhoc Plantation v. Thompson, 36 Me. 365; Holmes v. French, 68 Me. 525; New London, etc., R. Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 102 Mass. 389; Com. v. Hampden County, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 501;

Williams v. Middlesex County, 4 Met. (Mass.) 76; Den v. DuBois, 16 N. J. L. 285; Church v. Rhodes, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 281; South Carolina v. Gailard, 101 U. S. 433; Hatfield Tp. Road, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 392; Stoever v. Immell, 1 Watts (Pa.) 258; Com. v. Beaty, 1 Watts (Pa.) 382; Fenelon's Petition, 7 Pa. St. 173; Hampton v. Com., 19 Pa. St. 329; Uwchlan Tp. Road, 30 Pa. St. 156; Com. v. Standard Oil Co., 101 Pa. St. 119; McRee v. McLenore, 8 Heisk. (Tenn.) 440; State v. Brookover, 22 W. Va. 214; Warne v. Beresford, 2 M. & W. 848; Butcher v. Henderson, L. R., 3 Q. B. 335.

The repeal of an act which authorized a course of proceedings by a public officer, invalidates the proceedings, if unfinished, at whatever state they have arrived. Williams v. Lincoln County, 35 Me. 345; Tivey v. People, 8 Mich. 128; Lamb v. Schottler, 54 Cal. 319; Hampton v. Com., 19 Pa. St. 329.

A power to dispose of public lands given by Congress to a territory is a mere trust in its nature, and unless executed is destroyed by a repeal of the law granting it. Rice v. Minnesota, etc., R. Co., 1 Black (U. S.) 358.

The right to recover, as well as the obligation to pay assessments, is extinguished by the repeal of the statute authorizing the assessments. Hampton v. Com., 19 Pa. St. 329.

A gratuitous pension granted by a statute is not a vested right in the recipient and is destroyed by the repeal of the granting statute. Dale v. Governor, 3 Stew. (Ala.) 387.

The repeal of a statute under which taxes are levied, puts an end to the right to collect them, unless the repealing statute contains a provision preserving the taxes and the right to collect. Gorley v. Sewell, 77 Ind. 316; McQuilkin v. Doe, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 581; Mount v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 25; Bleidorn v. Abel, 6 Iowa 5; Bryan v. Harvey, 11 Tex. 311.

But where the re-enactment of the tax sections constitutes the repeal by implication, the re-enactment itself furnishes the inference that the legislature intended to preserve the right to collect the taxes. Gorley v. Sewell, 77 Ind. 319.

Should Congress by a resolution appoint the head of a department to settle or adjust any claims against the government, and should the head of such department in making such adjustment exceed his powers, Congress may repeal such resolution and revoke the authority conferred upon him. De Groot v. U. S., 5 Wall. (U. S.) 419.

A statute locating the seat of justice in any county is subject to repeal like any other statute. Monet v. Jones, 10 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 237.

Where the legislature authorizes a private individual or a corporation to raise a sum of money by lottery to effect an object of public concern, as a railroad, a bridge, or a canal, the statute by which the authority is created may be at any time repealed without violating any constitutional provision. Freleigh v. State, 8 Mo. 606.

So the assembly has power to repeal an act directing the payment of a judgment out of the public funds, and the claim is thereby indefinitely suspended. Young v. Territory, 1 Oregon 212.

The defense of usury cannot be set up or relied on after the repeal of the statute permitting it, even in suits pending at the time of the repeal. Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 152; Ewell v. Daggs, 108 U. S. 143.

By the repeal of the statute authorizing the making of assessments for the building of a plank road and the collection thereof, not only the remedy for the collection of the assessments, but also the lien or right itself is taken away. Warren Tp. Gravel Road Co. v. Sleeth, 53 Ind. 35; Bradley v. Brandywine, etc., Turnpike Co., 53 Ind. 70.

A sale by an administrator under an order of court is void where the law empowering the court to make such order is repealed after the making of the order but before the sale. Campau v. Chene, 1 Mich. 411; Bank of Hamilton v. Dudley, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 523; Davis v. Livingston, 6 Ohio 225; Paine v. Skinner, 8 Ohio 162; Perry v. Clarkson, 16 Ohio 573; Ludlow v. Wade, 5 Ohio 503. The ground of these decisions was that the order was not a judgment settling the rights of the parties, and constituted nothing more than record evidence of the existence of the necessary facts to justify the proceeding, and the assent on the part of the court that the administrator should exercise the power previously vested in him.

Where the plaintiff got a verdict for one shilling and the judge did not grant a certificate to deprive him of costs until the time of its repeal, it was held that the power of certifying could not be exercised in such a case after the scribing a penalty or forfeiture recoverable in a civil action, takes away the right of recovery,¹ whether an action has been repeal, and that the certificate was void. Morgan v. Thorne, 7 M. & W. 400.

Where an action is brought and judgment recovered in a case where title was in question and the plaintiff would have had his costs, either by the presiding judge's certificate under one statute, or by a judge's order to which he would have been entitled ex debito justitiæ under another statute, but he obtained neither until after both of those acts stood repealed, it was held that the powers under them had ceased to exist and could not be exercised in the plaintiff's favor. Butcher v. Henderson, L. R., 3 Q. B. 335. Contra Restall v. London, etc., R. Co., L. R., 3 Exch. 141. See Doe v. Holt, 21 L. J. Ex. 335; Wood v. Riley, L. R., 3 C. P. 26; Hobson v. Neale, 22 L. J. Ex. 25; Doe v. Roe, 22 L. J. Ex. 17.

1. Pope v. Lewis, 4 Ala. 487; Carlisle v. State, 42 Ala. 523; State v. Tombeckbee Bank, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 347; Tombeckbee Bank v. State, 1 Minor (Ala.) 425; Crawford v. State, 1 Minor (Ala.) 143; Judson v. State, 1 Minor (Ala.) 150; Butler v. Palmer, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 324; Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 229; Van Dyck v. McQuade, 86 N. Y. 38; Hartung v. People, 22 N. Y. 95; Knox v. Baldwin, 80 N. Y. 610; Smith v. Banker, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 142; Victory Webb Printing Co. v. Beecher, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 48; Fischer v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 46 N. Y. 656; State v. Youmans, 5 Ind. 281; Wood v. Kennedy, 19 Ind. 68; Hunt v. Jennings, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 195; 33 Am. Dec. 465; Stephenson v. Doe, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 508; 46 Am. Dec. 489; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Scircle, 103 Ind. 227; Welch v. Wadsworth, 30 Conn. 149; 79 Am. Dec. 239; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Crawford, 11 Colo. 598; Gregory v. German Bank, 3 Colo. 332; 25 Am. Rep. 760; Oriental Bank v. Freese, 18 Me. 109; 36 Am. Dec. 701; Gaul v. Brown, 53 Me. 496; Heald v. State, 36 Me. 62; Yeaton v. U. S., 5 Cranch (U. S.) 281; Schooner Rachel v. U. S., 6 Cranch (U. S.) 329; U. S. v. Passmore, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 372; Union Iron Co. v. Pierce, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 327; Norris v. Crocker, 13 How. (U. S.) 429; Seymour v. McCormick, 16 How. (U. S.) 480; Belvidere v. Warren R. Co., 34 N. J. L. 193; Menard County v. Kincaid, 71 Ill. 587; Parmelee v. Lawrence, 44

Ill. 415; Mix v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 116 Ill. 502; Nichols v. Squire, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 168; Bay City, etc., R. Co. v. Austin, 21 Mich. 391; Musgrove v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 50 Miss. 677; Anding v. Levy, 57 Miss. 57; Chalker v. Ives, 55 Pa. St. 81; Com. v. Duane, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 601; 2 Am. Dec. 497; Abbott v. Com., 8 Watts (Pa.) 517; 34 Am. Dec. 492; Com. v. Shopp, 2 Woodw. (Pa.) 123; Governor v. Howard, 1 Murph. (N. Car.) 465; Rood v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 43 Wis. 146; Com. v. Welch, 2 Dana (Ky.) 330; Rex v. McKenzie, R. & R. C. C. 429.

In Eastman v. Clackamas County, 32 Fed. Rep. 24, Deady, J., observed: "In the case of what are called penal statutes, there has been a more marked disposition on the part of the courts to hold that a repeal thereof destroys or takes away all existing rights of action thereunder without any express declaration to that effect."

The foundation of the principle is that after the repeal of the statute, no law exists which provides for the penalty or authorizes its enforcement. Anding v. Levy, 57 Miss. 56.

The repeal of an act imposing a penalty is itself a remission. Maryland v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 3 How. (U. S.) 534; Norris v. Crocker, 13 How. (U. S.) 429.

A party has no vested right in the penalties inflicted by the revenue laws for the omission of another to place the proper revenue stamp upon an instrument, which cannot be taken away by an amendment of the act imposing the penalties. Hoppock v. Stone, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 527.

A highly penal statute which made the officers of a corporation, in case they neglected to make certain reports, individually liable for all corporate debts contracted while they were such officers, whether the creditor was thereby injured or not, took away all existing rights of action thereunder, including one on which an action was brought before the passage of the repealing act. Union Iron Co. v. Pierce, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 327.

Where a statute imposing a penalty upon any corporation therein named that neglected or refused to make the report for the purposes of taxation required by it, was repealed, it was held begun¹ or not;² for there is no vested right in the penalty until its actual recovery by final judgment.³

In some cases, however, where the right to recover a penalty is destroyed by the repeal of the statute giving it, there may be still a recovery for the violation of the statute on common-law grounds. Thus, where a statute prohibits an act, and a violation of its provisions is such an act of negligence as, on common-law principles, subjects the offender to a civil action for damages on account of the loss or injury thereby caused, the repeal of the statute, while it destroys the right to recover the penalty, does not take away or impair a right of action which has already accrued by reason of such negligence.⁴

In cases where by statute it is made unlawful to demand and receive compensation, as interest, freights, duties, etc., in excess that the right to collect such penalties was destroyed, although the repealing act saves the right to collect any tax accrued or accruing under the repealed act prior to its repeal. Com. v. Standard Oil Co., 101 Pa. St. 119. See also Belvidere v. Warren R. Co., 34 N. J. L. 196.

The repeal of an act of the assembly giving a forfeiture for an offense is a repeal of all forfeitures incurred under the act repealed, unless there be a special exception to the contrary. Governor v. Howard, 1 Murph. (N. Car.) 465.

In the case of a penalty imposed on a delinquent tax payer, taken away by repeal, he need not, when he offers to redeem, tender the amount nor interest thereon. Snell v. Campbell, 24 Fed. Rep. 880.

1. Bay City, etc., R. Co. v. Austin, 21 Mich. 390; People v. Westchester County, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 64; Van Dyck v. McQuade, 86 N. Y. 38; Smith v. Banker, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 141; Fire Department v. Ogden, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 21; Rood v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 43 Wis. 147; Dillon v. Linder, 36 Wis. 344.

So, where the act giving a penalty was repealed after the verdict but before final judgment, the right of recovery was lost. Bay City, etc., R. Co. v. Austin, 21 Mich. 390.

No judgment can be rendered in any suit for a penalty after the repeal of the act by which it was imposed. The repeal of a statute puts an end to all suits founded upon it, even though commenced before the date of the repeal. Schooner Rachel v. U. S., 6 Cranch (U. S.) 329; The Irresistible, 7 Wheat.

(U. S.) 551; U. S. v. Preston, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 57; Pope v. Lewis, 4 Ala. 489; Lewis v. Foster, 1 N. H. 61; Rex v. London, 3 Burr. 1456.

2. Com. v. Standard Oil Co., 101 Pa. St. 119; Smith v. Banker, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 141; Fire Department v. Ogden, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 21.

3. Com. v. Welch, 2 Dana (Ky.) 330; Yeaton v. U. S., 5 Cranch (U. S.) 281; Tombeckbee Bank v. State, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 347.

"There is no such thing as a vested interest in an unenforced penalty." Gregory v. German Bank, 3 Colo. 332; 25 Am. Rep. 760; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Crawford, 11 Colo. 600. But see Taylor v. Rushing, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 161, in which a penalty accruing to an individual under a statute was held to be a vested right, and the repeal of the statute pending a writ of error was held not to divest the right; distinguishing Yeaton v. U. S., 5 Cranch (U. S.) 281, and Tombeckbee Bank v. State, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 347, which held that the penalty must have been actually recovered to be vested, on the ground that in those cases the penalty was due to the state and not to an individual. See also Eastman v. Clackamas County, 32 Fed. Rep. 21.

4. Grey v. Mobile Trade Co., 55 Ala. 387; 28 Am. Rep. 729; Gorman v. McArdle, 67 Hun (N. Y.) 484; Vanderkar v. Rensselaer, etc., R. Co., 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 393.

The repeal of the statute requiring fire escapes, does not destroy a right of action for an injury caused by a prior accident due to the failure to provide fire escapes. Gorman v. McArdle, 67 Hun (N. Y.) 484.

of that named in the statute, from one who protests against it, and a penalty for a violation is given to the one wronged, the repeal of the statute, while it prevents the recovery of the penalty, does not affect the common-law right to recover the excess wrongfully received and detained.¹

1. Graham v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 53 Wis. 486; Smith v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 49 Wis. 443; Noyes v. State, 46 Wis. 250; 32 Am. Rep. 710; Whitaker v. Pope, 2 Woods (U. S.) 463. See Rood v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 43 Wis. 146; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 450; Harris v. Townsend, 56 Vt. 716.

In Graham v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 53 Wis. 487, it was held that the act of a railroad company demanding and receiving for services any sum in excess of the rates fixed by law, was an unlawful act; the money was therefore unlawfully received, and, upon the principles of common law, the right of action immediately accrued to recover the same back, which was not affected by the repeal of the statute making the act unlawful. In delivering the opinion of the court, Taylor, J., said: "This right of action to recover the excess paid above the legal rate of interest prescribed by the statute is not given by the statute, but is a result of the statute, and depends upon the principles of the common law for its maintenance. The statute makes it unlawful to take more than a fixed rate. All sums taken in excess of such fixed rate are unlawfully taken, and upon the principles of the common law a right immediately accrues to the person paying the unlawful excess to recover the same back. So the act of a railroad company demanding and receiving for services any sum in excess of the rates fixed by law is an unlawful act; the money is therefore unlawfully received, and, upon the principles of the common law, a right of action immediately accrues to the person who pays such unlawful charges to recover the same back again. The lawfulness of an act depends upon the state of the law at the time it is done, and, if it was unlawful then, we have seen, by the decisions of this court above cited, that no repeal of the law which rendered such act unlawful can make it lawful or valid. The plaintiffs' action to recover for the unlawful act does not depend upon the statute, except so far as the statute gives character to the act at the time it was done. The only necessity of referring to the statute at all, for the purposes of sustaining the action, is to determine whether, upon the principles of the common law, a right of action exists in favor of the plaintiffs."

In New York, before distress for rent was abolished by statute, a penalty was imposed for the benefit of the landlord on one who assisted a tenant in removing goods from the leased premises in order to avoid the payment of rent. It was held that the right of the landlord to recover the penalty was not affected by the subsequent abolishment of the right of distress for rent. Palmer v. Conly, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 374; aff'd 2 N. Y. 182. Though this decision proceeded on the theory that the latter act did not operate retroactively on the prior statute, still the court stated that when a penalty is given to an individual as a satisfaction for injury done him in violating a statute, as well as punishment to the offender, the right to the penalty is vested in the injured person whether suit is begun or not, and is not affected by the subsequent repeal of the statute. Citing Company of Cutlers v. Ruslin, Skin. 363; College of Physicians v. Harrison, 9 B. & C. 524; 17 E. C. L. 433. In later cases, however, in the same state, it is decided that had the later statute actually repealed the first, the right to the penalty would have been destroyed. Fisher v. New York, etc., R. Co., 46 N. Y. 656. See Sturgis v. Spofford, 45 N. Y. 446.

So where a usury law expressly provided that a person paying usurious interest might sue for and recover three times the excess of the money paid over and above the lawful interest, it was held that the borrower might waive his right under the statute and sue for and recover simply the excess over and above the legal rates fixed by the statute. Lee v. Peckham, 17 Wis. 383; Wood v. Lake, 13 Wis. 84. See Gill v. Rice, 13 Wis. 549; Fay v. Lovejoy, 20 Wis. 407; Dole v. Northrop, 19 Wis. 249.

Payment Under Protest.—Whether an

(6) CRIMINAL OFFENSES.—When a statute creating a criminal offense is expressly repealed, or any portion of it that is essential to sustain an indictment drawn under its provisions is stricken out by a law subsequently enacted, the former, unless a contrary intent on the part of the law-makers appears from an express saving clause, or by necessary implication from the language in the repealing statute,¹ will be held inoperative, even as to offenses committed before the passage of the later act;² and every step excess voluntarily paid can be recovered back is doubtful, for the payment being voluntary the plaintiff can not complain of any force or wrong done by the defendant, but must rest his recovery entirely upon the unlawfulness of the act of the defendant in receiving the same in violation of the statute. Graham v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 53 Wis. 486. See Noyes v. State, 44 Wis. 254; 32 Am. Rep. 710, where it was held that to recover back license fees paid under an invalid statute, the payment must have been made under protest, citing Van Buren v. Downing, 41 Wis. 122. Compare Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Steiner, 61 Ala. 594, and cases cited, where it was said that the payment of excess of freight is from its nature involuntary and may be recovered though not paid under protest.

1. Where there is a sufficient saving clause in the repealing act, offenses committed before the repeal of a statute may be punished. Com. v. Edwards, 4 Gray (Mass.) 1; People v. Gill, 7 Cal. 357. See supra, this title, Provisos, Exceptions, and Saving Clauses.

2. Freeman v. State, 6 Port. (Ala.) 372; State v. Allaire, 14 Ala. 435; Griffin v. State, 39 Ala. 541; Aaron v. State, 40 Ala. 307; Carlisle v. State, 42 Ala. 523; Hirschburg v. People, 6 Colo. 145; People v. Tisdale, 57 Cal. 104; Donaldson v. State, 9 Fla. 402; Higinbotham v. State, 19 Fla. 557; Bank of St. Mary's v. State, 12 Ga. 475; Taylor v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 93; State v. Lloyd, 2 Ind. 659; Howard v. State, 5 Ind. 183; Jones v. State, 1 Iowa 395; Com. v. Cain, 14 Bush (Ky.) 525; Speckert v. Louisville, 78 Ky. 287; Com. v. Welch, 2 Dana (Ky.) 330; State v. O'Connor, 13 La. Ann. 486; Heald v. State, 36 Me. 62; Com. v. McDonough, 13 Allen (Mass.) 581; Com. v. Pattee, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 501; Com. v. Marshall, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 350; Com. v. Kimball, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 373; Peo- ple v. Hobson, 48 Mich. 27; Bay City, etc., R. Co. v. Austin, 21 Mich. 390; Wheeler v. State, 64 Miss. 462; Teague v. State, 39 Miss. 516; Mastronada v. State, 60 Miss. 86; Lindsey v. State, 65 Miss. 542; Lewis v. Foster, 1 N. H. 61; Den v. DuBois, 16 N. J. L. 285; State v. Massey, 103 N. Car. 356; State v. Cress, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 421; State v. Nutt, Phill. (N. Car.) 20; Governor v. Howard, 1 Murph. (N. Car.) 465; State v. Wise, 66 N. Car. 120; State v. Long, 78 N. Car. 571; State v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 12 Gill & J. (Md.) 399; 38 Am. Dec. 319; Keller v. State, 12 Md. 322; 71 Am. Dec. 596; Annapolis v. State, 30 Md. 112; Palmer v. Conly, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 377; Butler v. Palmer, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 329; Hartung v. People, 22 N. Y. 95; People v. Police Board, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 473; Smith v. Banker, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 142; People v. Van Pelt, 4 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 36; Calkins v. State, 14 Ohio St. 222; Com. v. Duane, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 601; 2 Am. Dec. 497; Abbott v. Com., 8 Watts (Pa.) 517; 34 Am. Dec. 492; Genkinger v. Com., 32 Pa. St. 99; Stoever v. Immell, 1 Watts (Pa.) 258; State v. Fletcher, 1 R. I. 193; State v. Cole, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 1; State v. Addington, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 516; 23 Am. Dec. 150; Roberts v. State, 2 Overt. (Tenn.) 423; Bennett v. State, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 472; Brothers v. State, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 201; Montgomery v. State, 2 Tex. App. 618; Tuton v. State, 4 Tex. App. 472; Pinckard v. State, 13 Tex. App. 373; Mulkey v. State, 16 Tex. App. 53; Wall v. State, 18 Tex. 682; 70 Am. Dec. 302; Greer v. State, 22 Tex. 588; State v. Meader, 62 Vt. 458; Leftwiche's Case, 5 Rand. (Va.) 657; Harrison v. Allen, Wythe (Va.) 291; Scott v. Com., 2 Va. Cas. 54; State v. Ingersoll, 17 Wis. 631; Rood v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 43 Wis. 146; Anonymous, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 84; U. S. v. Finlay, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 364; U. S. v. Passmore, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 372; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall (U. S.) 450; U. S. v. Tynen, 11 Wall thereafter taken in a criminal proceeding will be utterly void.¹ The repeal of the law after the conviction of the offender, but before sentence, has the same effect, for the act punished must be criminal when judgment is demanded, and authority to render it must still reside in the court.²

(7) JUDGMENTS—APPEALS. —A final determination by judgment or sentence is vested and, therefore is unaffected by the subsequent repeal of the statute on which it depended.³ Where the judg-

(U. S.) 88; Norris v. Crocker, 13 How. (U. S.) 429; The Irresistible, 7 Wheat. (U. S.) 551; U. S. v. 6 Fermenting Tubs, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 268; Schooner Rachel v. U. S., 6 Cranch (U. S.) 329; Yeaton v. U. S., 5 Cranch (U. S.) 281; U. S. v. The Helen, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 203; R. v. Swann, 4 Cox 108; Rex v. London, 3 Burr. 1456; Miller's Case, 1 W. Bl. 451; Rex v. McKenzie, R. & R. C. C. 429; Reg. v. Denton, 16 Q. B. 832; 18 Q. B. 761; 83 E. C. L. 761; Charrington v. Meatheringham, 2 M. & W. 228; Reg. v. Mawgan, 8 Ad. & El. 496; 35 E. C. L. 447.

Where an act amendatory of a previously existing criminal statute differs materially from the latter, an indictment drawn under the prior statute cannot be proceeded on after the passage of the amendatory act, even though it is provided by statute "that when a part of a statute is amended, it is not to be considered as having been repealed and re-enacted in the amended form, but the portions which are not altered are considered as having been the law since their enactment, and the new provisions as having been enacted at the time of the amendment." State v. Massey, 103 N. Car. 356.

The rule that the repeal of a criminal statute discharges all prisoners held under it, resting on the presumption of legislative pardon, does not exist where there is no room for such presumption; and, therefore, where a statute repealed is immediately re-enacted and is held to have continued from the beginning, criminal prosecutions under it are not abated. State v. Brewer, 22 La. Ann. 273.

1. Hirschburg v. People, 6 Colo. 145. In this case habeas corpus proceedings were held to lie to release the prisoner. A motion to quash the bill or indictment is the common proceeding in cases where the statute has been repealed pending the prosecution. U. S. v. Finlay, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 364.

2. State v. Williams, 97 N. Car. 455;

State v. Long, 78 N. Car. 571; State v. Nutt, Phill. (N. Car.) 20; State v. Wise, 66 N. Car. 120; Butler v. Palmer, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 324; Hartung v. People, 22 N. Y. 96; Calkins v. State, 14 Ohio St. 231; Com. v. Duane, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 601; 2 Am. Dec. 497; Schooner Rachel v. U. S., 6 Cranch (U. S.) 329; Yeaton v. U. S., 5 Cranch (U. S.) 281; Norris v. Crocker, 13 How. (U. S.) 429; Com. v. Kimball, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 373; Wheeler v. State, 64 Miss. 462; Mulkey v. State, 16 Tex. App. 53; Key v. Goodwin, 4 M. & P. 341.

3. Broughton v. Branch Bank, 17 Ala. 828; Aaron v. State, 40 Ala. 307; Welch v. Wadsworth, 30 Conn. 149; 79 Am. Dec. 239; Taylor v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 93; State v. Loyd, 2 Ind. 659; Thompson v. Bassett, 5 Ind. 535; Wood v. Kennedy, 19 Ind. 68; State v. O'Conner, 13 La. Ann. 486; State v. Brewer, 22 La. Ann. 273; Saco v. Gurney, 34 Me. 14; Heald v. State, 36 Me. 62; Gaul v. Brown, 53 Me. 496; Foster v. Medfield, 3 Met. (Mass.) 1; Belvidere v. Warren R. Co., 34 N. J. L. 193; same case in error, 35 N. J. L. 584; Fisher v. New York, etc., R. Co., 46 N. Y. 644; State v. Cress, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 421; State v. Long, 78 N. Car. 576; Calkins v. State, 14 Ohio St. 222; State v. Fletcher, 1 R. I. 193; Greer v. State, 22 Tex. 588; Hubbard v. State, 2 Tex. App. 506; Mulkey v. State, 16 Tex. App. 53; Montgomery v. State, 2 Tex. App. 618; State v. Addington, 2 Bailey (S. Car.) 516; 23 Am. Dec. 150; State v. Ingersoll, 17 Wis. 631; State v. Gumber, 37 Wis. 298; Rood v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 43 Wis. 146; State v. Campebl, 44 Wis. 529; State v. Van Stralen, 45 Wis. 437; Leschi v. Territory, 1 Wash. Ter. 13; Snell v. Campbell, 24 Fed. Rep. 880; Union Iron Co. v. Pierce, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 327; Yeaton v. U. S., 5 Cranch (U. S.) 281; Rex v. McKenzie, R. & R. C. C. 429; Rex v. Heath, 2 East P. C. 609; Rex v. Davis, 1 Leach C. C. 271.

In State v. Addington, 2 Bailey (S.

ment of an inferior court is res adjudicata, the repeal of the statute pending the appeal from the judgment does not prevent the enforcement thereof after the decision of the reviewing court;¹ but if final judgment cannot be given until the appeal is decided, an intermediate repeal of the statute will abate the proceedings.²

(b) Connected with, but Independent of, Repealed Statute.—While rights of action which are expressly given by statute and do not exist out-

Car.) 519; 23 Am. Dec. 150, Johnson, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "After final judgment, there is no means by which the court can regain possession of the cause; an execution follows as a necessary consequence. If, for instance, the repealing law had intervened between the judgment or sentence and the execution, there is no process by which the court could reverse or modify the judgment."

In capital cases in states where the fixing of the date of execution is an essential part of the sentence (Russell v. State, 33 Ala. 372), if the execution does not take place on the day first settled, a repeal of the statute on which the conviction depends, before resentence, discharges the prisoner. Aaron v. State, 40 Ala. 307.

1. People v. Hobson, 48 Mich. 27. In this case, in which judgment under the old law was removed by certiorari to a higher court and there affirmed after the repeal of the statute, it was held not to be rendered void by the repeal, on the ground that no new judgment was given in the higher court.

2. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Crawford, 11 Colo. 598; Gregory v. German Bank, 3 Colo. 332; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Proctor, 12 Colo. 194; Mulkey v. State, 16 Tex. App. 53; Pinckard v. State, 13 Tex. App. 373; Sheppard v. State, 1 Tex. App. 522; 28 Am. Rep. 422; Montgomery v. State, 2 Tex. App. 618; Freese v. State, 14 Tex. App. 31; Prather v. State, 14 Tex. App. 453; Tuton v. State, 4 Tex. App. 472; Hubbard v. State, 2 Tex. App. 506; Fitze v. State, 13 Tex. App. 372; Lewis v. Foster, 1 N. H. 61; Speckert v. Louisville, 78 Ky. 287; Com. v. Sherman, 85 Ky. 686; U. S. v. Peggy, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 103; Musgrove v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 50 Miss. 677; State v. Daley, 29 Conn. 272; Atwell v. Grant, 11 Md. 104; Keller v. State, 12 Md. 325; 71 Am. Dec. 596; State v. Norwood, 12 Md. 195; Price v. Nesbitt, 29 Md. 263; Wade v. St. Mary's Industrial School, 43 Md. 178; Annapolis v. State, 30 Md. 112; Gilleland v. Schuyler, 9 Kan. 569; Hartung v. People, 22 N. Y. 95; Mouras v. Schooner A. C. Brewer, 17 La. Ann. 82; State v. King, 12 La. Ann. 593.

Even after the judgment of affirmance on appeal, when the repeal took place prior thereto but was not brought to the notice of the court before its decision, a motion to strike out the affirmance and enter a judgment of reversal made at the same term of the court was granted. Keller v. State, 12 Md. 322; 71 Am. Dec. 596.

In admiralty cases, an appeal suspends a sentence altogether; and it is not res adjudicata until final sentence of the appellate court be pronounced. Hence, the repeal of a statute after an appeal has been taken and before final judgment in such a case prevents the recovery of a penalty based on the statute. Yeaton v. U. S., 5 Cranch (U. S.) 281.

A final determination in an inferior court of admiralty where a right of appeal exists and has been claimed, is not a definitive condemnation within the meaning of the article of the convention of September 30, 1800, with France, and the court will, under a treaty made since the original, reverse the decree, although it was correct when made, and decree restoration of the property condemned. U. S. v. Peggy, 1 Cranch (U. S.) 103.

An act repealing the stamp laws removes all objection to a bond for want of a stamp, and authorizes the appellate court to reverse the decision of an inferior court refusing to admit the bond in evidence because it was not stamped, although the repealing act was not passed until after such decision. State v. Norwood, 12 Md. 195.

If laws which give the court jurisdiction in certain cases expire, the jurisdiction ceases, although an appeal is actually pending at the time of the expiration. U. S. v. Boisdore, 8 How. (U. S.) 121; McNulty v. Batty, 10 How. (U. S.) 79.

side thereof, are necessarily destroyed by a repeal, rights or causes of action which accrue to a party and indirectly depend upon the statute, but which can be enforced independently thereof, are not necessarily destroyed by its repeal. Under such circumstances the right to recover is based on the common law, not on the statute.¹

c. OF REPEAL AND RE-ENACTMENT.—The re-enactment of a previous statute, or a provision of it, is construed not to be an implied repeal of the enactment, but a continuation thereof, so that all interests under the original statute remain unimpaired.² An express repeal and re-enactment of the same act has a similar ef-

1. Graham v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 53 Wis. 486; Grey v. Mobile Trade Co., 55 Ala. 387; 28 Am. Rep. 729; Coggeshall v. Groves, 10 R. I. 18. See Palmer v. Conly, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 378; affirmed 2 N. Y. 182.

2. Hancock v. Perry Dist. Tp., 78 Iowa 556; Junction City v. Webb, 44 Kan. 71; Gorley v. Sewell, 77 Ind. 319; Kesler v. Smith, 66 N. Car. 154; State v. Sutton, 100 N. Car. 474; Forbes v. Board of Health, 27 Fla. 189; Callahan v. Jennings, 16 Colo. 471; Burwell v. Tullis, 12 Minn. 572; Barton v. Moscow School Dist. (Idaho 1892), 29 Pac. Rep. 43; State v. Wish, 15 Neb. 448; Wright v. Oakley, 5 Met. (Mass.) 400; Randolph v. Larned, 27 N. J. Eq. 557; Capron v. Strout, 11 Nev. 304; In re Prime's Estate, 1 36 N. Y. 347; Calhoun v. Delhi, etc., R. Co., 28 Hun (N. Y.) 379; Mortimer v. Chambers, 63 Hun (N. Y.) 335; Fisher v. New York, etc., R. Co., 46 N. Y. 656; Syracuse Sav. Bank v. Seneca Falls, 86 N. Y. 317; Goillotel v. New York, 87 N. Y. 441; People v. Montgomery County, 67 N. Y. 109; Moore v. Mansert, 49 N. Y. 332; Ely v. Holton, 15 N. Y. 595; Barclay v. Leas, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 314; State v. Kibling, 63 Vt. 636; Cox v. North Wisconsin Lumber Co., 82 Wis. 141; Fullerton v. Spring, 3 Wis. 667; Laude v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 33 Wis. 640; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 450; Central Pac. R. Co. v. Shackelford, 63 Cal. 261, following the rule of the Political Code, § 325, and apparently overruling, though not mentioning, Billings v. Harvey, 6 Cal. 381; Billings v. Hall, 7 Cal. 3; Morton v. Folger, 15 Cal. 284; Clarke v. Huber, 25 Cal. 594; Bensley v. Ellis, 39 Cal. 313; People v. Tisdale, 57 Cal. 104, which cases held that "the re-enactment creates anew the rule of action; and even if there was not the slightest difference in the phraseology of the two, the latter alone can be referred to as the law, and the former stands to all intents as if absolutely and expressly repealed." See dissenting opinion in People v. McNulty, 93 Cal. 427; Wilkinson v. Ketler, 59 Ala. 306.

Where an act of the legislature is repealed and is re-enacted at the same time with some changes, the act repealed has no force whatever only so far as it is continued in force by saving clauses and exceptions. Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507; 71 Am. Dec. 559.

The repeal and simultaneous re-enactment of the same law is a mere affirmation of the first law, and all prosecutions and rights based on the first law, and prosecutions for offenses against provisions contained in it, which were committed before the repeal, are unaffected. Lisbon v. Clark, 18 N. H. 234; Laude v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 33 Wis. 640; Fullerton v. Spring, 3 Wis. 667; Hurley v. Texas, 20 Wis. 634; State v. Gumber, 37 Wis. 302; Middleton v. New Jersey, etc., R. Co., 26 N. J. Eq. 269; Randolph v. Larned, 27 N. J. Eq. 562; Dashiell v. Baltimore, 45 Md. 615; Ballin v. Ferst, 55 Ga. 546; Wright v. Oakley, 5 Met. (Mass.) 400; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 450; Anding v. Levy, 57 Miss. 59.

A city does not by releasing its charter under a prior legislative act and accepting one under a later act, release its right to priority of lien for taxes, although the later act specifies priority "from and after the passage of this act," where the two acts are identical; the later being a re-enactment and continuation of the earlier. Barclay v. Leas, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 314.

A simultaneous repeal and re-enactment of a general corporation law does not terminate the existence of corporations formed under the first act. United fect,¹ except where an interval of time comes between the two legislative operations.² In the latter case, it seems that the repeal follows the general rule and destroys all inchoate dependent interests.³

Hebrew, etc., Assoc. v. Benshimol, 130 Mass. 325.

The validity of the by-laws or ordinances of a town or city is not affected by the repeal and re-enactment of the law giving them power and authority to make them. Chamberlain v. Evansville, 77 Ind. 542; Lisbon v. Clark, 18 N. H. 234.

The rule in the text has been applied to general revisions of existing laws which are substantially re-enacted. Scheftels v. Tabert, 46 Wis. 439; Middleton v. New Jersey, etc., R. Co., 26 N. J. Eq. 269; Ballin v. Ferst, 55 Ga. 546; State v. Brewer, 22 La. Ann. 273, citing Holmes v. Wiltz, 11 La. Ann. 439; Stafford v. Creditors, 11 La. Ann. 470; State v. Clay, 12 La. Ann. 431; Levois v. Gerke, 12 La. Ann. 828, distinguishing State v. King, 12 La. Ann. 593; State v. Morgan, 12 La. Ann. 712; State v. O'Conner, 13 La. Ann. 480. And to the repeal and re-enactment of criminal laws permitting punishment under the re-enactment of offenses committed under the old law. State v. Wish, 15 Neb. 448; State v. Gumber, 37 Wis. 298.

A re-enactment by an amendatory statute does not prevent a prosecution for a felony previously committed, where the two acts interfuse and blend so fully and completely that between them there is no period of intervening time in which the act was not an offense. Sage v. State, 127 Ind. 15.

It has been held where the repealing law had by its own operation accomplished its purpose, its re-enactment did not continue it. Emporia v. Norton, 16 Kan. 236.

The simple re-enactment of the law does not necessarily repeal it, for the general intent of the legislature must be followed. Cordell v. State, 22 Ind. 1; Kesler v. Smith, 66 N. Car. 156; Cramer v. Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 257; Martindale v. Martindale, 10 Ind. 566; Alexander v. State, 9 Ind. 337.

Of two inconsistent statutes re-enacted in a subsequent act, the one originally passed at the later date will prevail and operate as a repeal of the other; since even though the re-enactment purports to repeal all prior acts, such original statute will be treated, not as new enactments but as continuations. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Ellison, 3 Wash. 226.

Re-enactment.—A statute declaring that a repealed statute "is hereby re-enacted and declared to be in full force." is a valid enactment. In re Barry, 12 R. I. 51.

1. Scheftels v. Tabert, 46 Wis. 439; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Ellison, 3 Wash. 225; Fullerton v. Spring, 3 Wis. 667; Hurley v. Texas, 20 Wis. 634; Laude v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 33 Wis. 640; Glentz v. State, 38 Wis. 549. Contra, Hirschburg v. People, 6 Colo. 145. In this case the court said: "The fact that the legislature substituted for the repealed section substantially a similar provision, can make no difference. If the repeal of a statute is effected by express and positive words, the only question is the effect of the repeal."

The substantial re-enactment by the second section of a statute, of the same act that was repealed by the first section, rendered the repeal inoperative and left the former law in force, and commissioners appointed under the old law and whose terms had not expired remained in office. State v. Baldwin, 45 Conn. 134.

When the legislature amended a certain section of the law, and then by a later section in the amendatory law directed that the original section be stricken out and made to read as follows, inserting the original section as it stood before amendment, it was held to be a mere re-enactment thereof unamended and not a repeal and re-enactment. Cramer v. Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 257.

2. Kane v. New York, etc., R. Co., 49 Conn. 139. See Sage v. State, 127 Ind. 15.

3. Kane v. New York, etc., R. Co., 49 Conn. 139. In this case, the facts were that an act imposing a duty on the railroad company whenever ordered by certain specified commissioners, was repealed, and then, a year later, re-enacted, and it was held that the obligation to perform the duty under an order of the commissioners, made while the repealed statute was in force, was discharged by the repeal and not revived by the re-enactment.

d. OF REPEAL OF REPEALING ACT—REVIVOR.—Where an act or a rule of the common law¹ is repealed, and the repealing enactment is afterwards expressly or impliedly² repealed by another, which manifests no intention that the first shall continue repealed, the rule at common law was that the repeal of the second act revived the first, and, moreover, revived it ab initio, and not merely from the time of the passage of the revived act.³ This is still the rule where unchanged by statute.⁴ The time the intermediate repealing statute is in force is regarded as a suspension only of the

1. Mathewson v. Phoenix Iron Foundry, 20 Fed. Rep. 281; State v. Rollins, 8 N. H. 550; Gray v. Obear, 54 Ga. 231. Contra, State v. Slaughter, 70 Mo. 484. See Boismare v. His Creditors, 8 La. 315.

A man's natural rights taken away by statute are revived by the repeal of the statute. Den v. DuBois, 16 N. J. L. 285.

2. People v. Davis, 61 Barb. (N. Y.) 456.

3. Case of Bishops, 12 Rep. 7; Phillips v. Hopwood, 10 B. & C. 39; 21 E. C. L. 25; Tattle v. Grimwood, 3 Bing. 496; 13 E. C. L. 62; Fuller v. Redman, 26 Beav. 600.

Revivor.—The legislature may revive an act either expressly or conditionally, and make the revival dependent upon a future event; and when an act of Congress is revived, it is revived precisely in that form and with that effect which it had at the moment when it expired. The Aurora, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 382.

If a tax and the penalties which have accrued by reason of its non-payment have been swept away before their collection by the repeal of the law which authorized their assessment and collection, the tax itself may be reimposed by subsequent legislation, but the penalties for the past omission cannot be revived. State v. Jersey City, 37 N. J. L. 39.

Where a repealing law was declared unconstitutional, its subsequent repeal by the legislature was held not a revivor of the original act, where that would import to the legislature a different intent from that expressly declared in the latest repealing act. Patapsco Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 52 Fed. Rep. 690.

4. Com. v. Getchell, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 452; Hastings v. Aiken, 1 Gray (Mass.) 163; Com. v. Churchill, 2 Met. (Mass.) 118; Com. v. Mott, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 492; Den v. DuBois, 16 N. J. L. 285; Poor Directors v. R. Co., 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 236; Ex parte Doran, 2 Pars. Eq. Cas. (Pa.) 467; Zimmerman v. Perkiomen, etc., Turnpike Co., 81 Pa. St. 96; Durr v. Com. (Pa.), 11 Cent. Rep. 181; Doe v. Naylor, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 32; Teter v. Clayton, 71 Ind. 237; Harrison v. Walker, 1 Ga. 32; People v. Wintermute, 1 Dakota Ter. 63; Brown v. Barry, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 365; Janes v. Buzzard, Hempst. (U. S.) 259; U. S. v. Philbrick, 120 U. S. 52; Ely v. Holton, 15 N. Y. 595; People v. Davis, 61 Barb. (N. Y.) 456; Wheeler v. Roberts, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 536; Gale v. Mead, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 109; Van Denburgh v. Greenbush, 66 N. Y. 1; Brinkley v. Swicgood, 65 N. Car. 626; State v. Kent, 65 N. Car. 311; State v. Rogers, 94 N. Car. 862; State v. Sutton, 100 N. Car. 474; State v. Massey, 103 N. Car. 356; Laude v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 33 Wis. 640; Fullerton v. Spring, 3 Wis. 667; Hurley v. Texas, 20 Wis. 634; Gilkey v. Cook, 60 Wis. 133; Alexander v. Big Rapids, 70 Mich. 224; Emigh v. State Ins. Co., 3 Wash. 122.

Special proceedings, out of the course of the common law, which depended for their validity on the original act, and were abated by its repeal, are not revived with it by the repeal of the repealing act. Com. v. Leech, 24 Pa. St. 55. See Van Valkenburgh v. Torrey, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 252.

When an act of Congress which has suspended a state law is revived the state law comes into force again. Henderson v. Spofford, 59 N. Y. 131; Sturgis v. Spofford, 45 N. Y. 446; Board of Com'rs v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., 52 N. Y. 609.

There is nothing in the state constitution of New Jersey that prevents the operation of the common-law doctrine that when a repealer is repealed, the original act is thereby revived. Wallace v. Bradshaw, 54 N. J. L. 175, reversing same case, 53 N. J. L. 315.

Where an act was amended and ceroriginal law,¹ and offenses committed before the suspension may be punished after the revival of the original act.² But where the intent not to revive the original act is apparent, as from the fact that the act repealed was a re-enactment,³ or a revision of the original act,⁴ or from the fact that the repealing act was abrogated for the purpose of substituting new provisions in its place,⁵ the rule of revivor does not apply.⁶

In many jurisdictions, moreover, it has been found expedient to provide that, in the absence of an express declaration to the contrary, the repeal, whether express or implied,⁷ of a repealing tain of its clauses retained in the amending law, and afterwards this law was repealed, the original law was revived. In re Livingston St., 82 N. Y. 621.

1. Winter v. Dickerson, 42 Ala. 92; Johnson v. Meeker, 1 Wis. 436; Shipman v. Henbest, 4 T. R. 109; Rex v. Phipoe, 2 East P. C. 599; Rex v. Morgan, 2 East P. C. 601. See also cases in next note.

Where the statutes of a state adopted after a certain date, were suspended during the prevalence of martial law administered by a provisional governor, the subsequent removal of the martial law and their ratification by the legislature of the state statutes revive them. Winter v. Dickerson, 42 Ala. 92.

When the remedy upon a contract has been suspended by a statute, the repeal of the statute restores the remedy, except where rights have become vested by virtue of the statute repealed. Johnson v. Meeker, 1 Wis. 436.

Where there were two repealing acts, the repeal of one of them does not revive the original act. Wheeler v. Roberts, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 536.

2. Com. v. Getchell, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 452; Com. v. Mott, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 492.

Where an offense was committed under the original law which imposed additional punishment on the offender for the particular offense, the offender was held liable to the additional punishment on a conviction had after the repeal of a repealing statute. Com. v. Mott, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 492; Com. v. Getchell, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 452. But on such a conviction for an offense committed under the intermediate repealing act, the offender is not liable to the additional punishment. Com. v. Getchell, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 452.

3. People v. Montgomery County, 67 N. Y. 109; Harris v. Niagara County, 33 Hun (N. Y.) 279; Moody v. Sea- man, 46 Mich. 74; Goodno v. Oshkosh, 31 Wis. 127. See People v. Assessors of Brooklyn, 8 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 150.

But where by other provisions of the latest repealing act it is evident that it was the intention of the legislature that the original statute should be revived, then such an effect will follow as an exception to the exception in the text. People v. Wilmerding, 62 Hun (N. Y.) 391.

4. Butler v. Russel, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 251.

5. Com. v. Churchill, 2 Met. (Mass.) 123.

6. Milligan v. Cromwell, 3 N. Mex. 327; Seewald v. Raynolds, 3 N. Mex. 344; People v. Montgomery County, 67 N. Y. 109; Harris v. Niagara County, 33 Hun (N. Y.) 279; Moody v. Seaman, 46 Mich. 74; Goodno v. Oshkosh, 31 Wis. 127; Butler v. Russel, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 251; Com. v. Churchill, 2 Met. (Mass.) 123; U. S. v. 25 Cases of Cloths, Crabbe (U. S.) 356; Warren v. Windle, 3 East 205.

Where a statute repeals or supercedes certain sections of the previous statute, a mere declaration in a still later act that the repealing statute "shall not repeal" the specified section, is not a law reviving or re-enacting it. There can be no law without a legislative intent that it become a law; and such intent be manifested declaring the legislative will. State v. Conkling, 19 Cal. 501.

Where an act absolutely repealed a prior one and substituted other provisions which were to endure for only a limited time, the expiration of the time limited does not, in the absence of an express intention, revive the repealed act. U. S. v. 25 Cases of Cloths, Crabbe (U. S.) 356; Warren v. Windle, 3 East 205.

7. Milne v. Huber, 3 McLean (U. S.) 212; Stirman v. State, 21 Tex. 734.

law shall not revive the original act.¹ This rule is not applicable to cases where the first act was modified only and not repealed by the second, for by the repeal of the second, the original, so far as modified, is revived.²

STAY LAW—See also STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.—See note 3.

1. See statutes in various states and in England. And see generally State v. Slaughter, 70 Mo. 484; Sullivan v. People, 15 Ill. 233; Smith v. Hoyt, 14 Wis. 252; Tallamon v. Cardenas, 14 La. Ann. 514; Witkouski v. Witkouski, 16 La. Ann. 232; Goodno v. Oshkosh, 31 Wis. 127; Heinssen v. State, 14 Colo. 228; Teter v. Clayton, 71 Ind. 237; Cassell v. Lexington, etc., R. Co. (Ky. 1888), 9 S. W. Rep. 502.

The same rule applies to amendments of laws which constitute repeals. Tallamon v. Cardenas, 14 La. Ann. 514; Goodno v. Oshkosh, 31 Wis. 132.

An act suspending a repealing act is not within the statutory inhibition. Brown v. Barry, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 365.

A constitutional provision that no law shall be revived unless set out in the reviving act, prevents a revivor by mere repeal of the repealing statute. Renter v. Bauer, 3 Kan. 505; Trosper v. Horr, 4 Kan. 59.

2. Bank for Savings v. Field, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 495; Smith v. Hoyt, 14 Wis. 252; Mount v. Taylor, L. R., 3 C. P. 645. See Mirfin v. Atwood, L. R., 4 Q. B. 340; Glaholm v. Barker, L. R., 1 Ch. 229.

So where a statute merely excepts a particular class of cases from the provisions of a previously existing general law which continues to be in force, the repeal of the excepting statute operates to bring such cases under the general law. Smith v. Hoyt, 14 Wis. 252. See Goodno v. Oshkosh, 31 Wis. 132; State v. Hoefflinger, 31 Wis. 262; Bank for Savings v. Field, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 495.

3. In times of extended and severe financial trouble the legislatures of some of the states have endeavored to give debtors some protection against the oppressive enforcement of laws for the collection of debts by the enactment of laws suspending certain judicial remedies, as by providing that foreclosure suits shall not be commenced for a certain period of time, or that execution shall not issue in certain cases. Laws of this nature are popularly called stay laws. Abbott's L. Dict. In the early days after the Revolution and in the southern states in the years immediately succeeding the Civil war such laws were not uncommon (but they were very generally held to be unconstitutional). See the article STAY OF PROCEEDINGS in this volume, where the question is exhaustively treated. A good example of such laws is found in the Wisconsin statute of 1862, exempting from civil process all persons who had or might volunteer or enroll themselves as members of any military company mustered into the service of the United States or of the state, during their service. The act was held to be unconstitutional. The court, by Cole, J., said: "We have quite recently had occasion to inquire into the extent of the power of the state legislature to change, modify, or alter the laws governing proceedings in courts of justice, both in respect to past and future contracts. The rule extracted from the cases was, that this power was unrestricted so long as a substantial remedy was afforded according to the course of justice as it existed at the time the contract was made. But the legislature must give some remedy, and not destroy the legal force and obligation of a contract, taking away all existing remedies. This would seem to be quite a plain proposition. The objection to the law in question is, that it takes away all existing remedies for enforcing the obligation of contracts, while the debtor is in the military service of the United States or of this state. So long as this military service continues, the creditor is without redress. Should the debtor continue in the service, three, five, ten, or twenty years, he is, under the law, exempted from all civil process. It is very evident that this is a suspension for an indefinite period of all remedies whatever. And such being the character of the law, we cannot see upon what ground its validity can be sustained. It is claimed that the act is amply justified by the perils which threaten our national existence, and the imperious necessity which exists for obtaining a military force adequate to the defense of the country. Giving to these political considerations all the weight which has been claimed for them, they surely do not show that the exemption should be for an indefinite period."

STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.—For stay of proceedings pending appeal, see SUPERSEDEAS.

- I. Definition, 520.
- II. Stay of Intermediate Proceedings, 520.
 1. Absolute Stay, 520.
 - a. Upon Payment of Debt and Costs, 520.
 - b. For Breach of Faith, 521.
 - c. In Second Action for Same Cause, 522.
 - d. For Vexatious Process, 522.
 - e. Pending Other Actions for Same Cause, 523.
 - f. Upon Discharge in Bankruptcy, 526.
 - g. For Irregularity, 526.
 2. Conditional Stay, 527.
 - a. For Non-Payment of Costs, 527.
 - b. Where Material Evidence Withheld, 528.
 - c. For Discovery and Commissions to Take Testimony, 529.
 - d. Until Hearing of Motion, 529.
 3. Application for Stay—In What Court Made, 529.
 4. Remedy for Abuse of Discretion, 529.
- III. Stay of Execution (See EXECUTIONS, vol. 7, p. 117. For Stay of Execution Pending Appeal, see SUPERSEDEAS), 530.
 1. Definition and Kinds, 530.
 2. Stay by Order of Court, 530.
 - a. Power of Court to Grant Stay, 530.
 - b. Perpetual Stay, 532.
 - c. Temporary Stay, 536.
 3. Stay by Agreement of the Parties, 539.
 4. Statutory Stays, 540.
 - a. Construction of Statutes, 540.
 - b. Right of Appeal after Taking Stay, 543.
 - c. Waiver of Right to Stay by Contract, 544.
 - d. Stay Laws—Constitutionality of, 545.
 5. Effect of Stay, 548.
 - a. Suspensive Effect upon Judgment, 548.
 - b. Execution Pending Stay, 548.
 - c. Effect upon Judgment Lien on Real Estate, 549.
 - d. Effect upon Execution on Personal Property, 550.
 - e. Effect upon Execution Partly Performed, 552.
 - f. Effect upon Execution Fully Performed, 554.

I. DEFINITION.—Stay of proceedings usually imports an order of court made in the cause and as a part of its course suspending further action in it ; and is generally conditional or temporary, as, until some other order of court has been complied with, until a party shall give required security, or the like. It is distinguishable from injunction to restrain proceedings at law, which is in the nature of an equitable decree in another court, that the party stayed shall proceed no farther, because his action is deemed contrary to equity ; and from prohibition, which is a mandate of a superior court to an inferior one, commanding it to refrain from proceedings because they have been in excess of its jurisdiction.¹

II. STAY OF INTERMEDIATE PROCEEDINGS—1. Absolute Stay—a. UPON PAYMENT OF DEBT AND COSTS.—In many cases where the

1. Abbott's L. Dict.

The act of stopping or arresting a judicial proceeding by order of the court or judge. Burr. L. Dict.

But the stay may be by consent of the parties. Stet processus is an entry on the roll in the nature of a judgment, of a direction that all further proceedings shall be stayed (that is, that the process may stand), and it is one of the ways by which a suit may be put an end to by an act of the party, as distinguished from the termination of it by judgment, which is amount of the debt is certain, or capable of being rendered certain, and the defendant does not dispute the cause of action or the amount of the debt, proceedings will be stayed upon defendant's motion and upon his paying the amount of the debt and costs.¹ And in some cases, courts have granted absolute stays upon payment of the debt without costs; as where an action was brought without a previous demand, or for the purpose of making costs, without giving the defendant an opportunity to pay.² Even in actions for unliquidated damages, proceedings may be stayed where the defendant pays all that the plaintiff could recover under any aspect of the case, with all costs; or after verdict, pays the amount of the verdict with costs. But there is some conflict of authority on this point.³ Such a rule or order is not a matter of right, but is within the discretion of the court,⁴ and when defendant seeks this relief he must make prompt application for it and render prompt compliance with the conditions imposed.⁵

b. FOR BREACH OF FAITH.—If the parties make a definite agreement to settle and one of them seeks to proceed, notwithstanding such agreement, the court may stay all further proceedings upon compliance with the terms of the agreement by the other the act of the court. Brown's L. Dict.

1. Where the writ is indorsed for a larger sum than is due, by which the defendant is misled and prevented from settling the claim, the court may stay the proceedings on payment of the real debt with the costs of the writ only. Elliston v. Robinson, 2 D. P. C. 241; 2 C. & M. 343.

The staying proceedings in an action on a bond for the performance of covenants, and the like, on payment of the penalty and costs, is a very usual exercise of power. Oshiel v. De Graw, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 63, citing 1 Dunlap's Pr. 338.

2. If the defendant, after verdict, tender the amount recovered, with all the costs up to the time, the court will order further proceedings to be stayed. Hatfield v. Baldwin, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 506.

In an action brought against a sheriff for money levied under a feri facias without any previous demand, the court will stay the proceeding on payment of the sum levied, without costs. Jefferies v. Sheppard, 3 B. & Ald. 696; 5 E. C. L. 426.

3. Hatfield v. Baldwin, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 506; Oshiel v. De Graw, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 63.

Contra.—An order cannot be made for staying proceedings on payment of debt and costs for unliquidated damages. Fisher v. Pyne, 1 M. & G. 265; 39 E. C. L. 437; nor in such case after verdict, on payment of amount of verdict and costs. Peat v. Mangnall, 2 B. C. Rep. 325; 6 D. & L. 261.

4. A defendant who moves to stay proceedings on payment of debt and costs, is not entitled to a rule for that purpose as a matter of right, but must submit to such reasonable terms as the court in its discretion may think proper. Jones v. Shepherd, 3 D. P. C. 421.

5. Application to stay proceedings on payment of debt must be made within four days after service of process. Bowdridge v. Slaney, 2 Scott 197; 2 Bing. N. Cas. 142; 29 E. C. L. 285; Hayter v. Moat, 5 D. P. C. 329.

The judge has no power before declaration to order that proceedings be stayed on payment of debt and costs within a certain time, otherwise judgment for plaintiff. Reynolds v. Sherwood, 8 D. P. C. 183.

A judge has no authority without the consent of the plaintiff to make an order to stay proceedings in an action upon payment of the debt and costs on a subsequent date. Morton v. Fraser, 2 M. & G. 916; 40 E. C. L. 691; Kirby v. Ellison, 2 D. P. C. 219. But the debtor party;¹ but the agreement to settle must be unconditional.² So, the court may punish the offending party by staying proceedings brought against good faith, though the agreement, in fraud of which the action was brought, was made while the parties were not under the authority of the court;³ and an agreement between the parties to stay further proceedings may be enforced on summary application.⁴

c. IN SECOND ACTION FOR SAME CAUSE.—In rare cases, the courts have sometimes stayed proceedings in a second action after a recovery for the same cause in a former action; and this has been done although the plaintiff in the former action recovered only nominal damages;⁵ and where relief was claimed that had already been claimed in another action, proceedings were stayed except as to relief not claimed in the former action.⁶ Usually, however, the courts refuse to interfere and compel the defendant to plead the former adjudication if he seeks to take advantage of it as a defense.⁷

d. FOR VEXATIOUS PROCESS.—The court will stay proceedings in an action where the manifest purpose of the plaintiff is to annoy and vex the defendant and not to enforce a just demand;⁸ as where one brings simultaneous actions for the same cause, even though one of the actions be in a foreign jurisdiction,⁹ or where plaintiff repeatedly sues in the same jurisdiction on the same cause of action.¹⁰ is not obliged to pay instantly; he is entitled to a reasonable time to get the money. Perkins v. National Ins., etc., Assoc., 26 L. J. Exch. 182.

1. Ponting v. Watson, 1 Jur. N. S. 1139.

2. Webster v. Acton, 11 W. R. 114.

3. Cocker v. Tempest, 7 M. & W. 502; 9 D. P. C. 306.

Where the defendant had received a letter not to pay except on written order of plaintiff, the proceedings were stayed on payment of the money into court. Newton v. Matthews, 4 D. P. C. 237.

4. Eden v. Naish, 7 Ch. Div. 781; 47 L. J. Ch. 325.

5. Wait's Pr., vol. 2, p. 619, citing Longridge v. Brewer, 1 Bing. 307; 8 E. C. L. 521.

6. Morton v. Quick, In re Aird, 26 R. W. 441. See also Haigh v. Paris, 16 M. & W. 144; 4 B. & L. 325; 16 L. J. Ex. 37.

7. 2 Wait's Pr., p. 619, citing Harrington v. Johnson, 2 Cowp. 744; Pechell v. Layton, 2 T. R. 512. See RES JUDICATA, vol. 21, p. 127.

8. Jacobs v. Raven, 30 L. T. 366; Edmunds v. Attorney Gen'l, 47 L. J. Ch. 345; 38 L. T., N. S. 213.

9. Cox v. Mitchell, 7 C. B., N. S. 55; 29 L. J. C. P. 33; 97 E. C. L. 55.

10. As equity would decree an injunction after three trials in ejectment, so will the courts in Pennsylvania stay further proceedings by their summary powers for the ends of justice. Cherry v. Robinson, 1 Yeates (Pa.) 521, citing 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 222; 1 Wms. 672; 2 Bro. Parl. Cas. 217; 1 Stra. 404; Bunb. 115.

Although a party has a right, as a general rule, to bring suit upon a prior judgment, still the supreme court has such control over its own process that it ought not to permit it to be perverted or used for an improper purpose. Where a person who has recovered a judgment, brings successive suits thereon, in different courts, without issuing execution, and he admits that such suits were brought for the purpose of coercing payment of his debt by accumulating costs, the court in which the last suit is brought will grant a perpetual stay of proceedings in all the suits in that court except the first. The plaintiff will not be allowed to make use of the costs of the suit by way of penalty, in order to compel a defendant to pay his debt. Keeler v. King, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 390.

c. PENDING OTHER ACTIONS FOR SAME CAUSE.—Where several actions are brought on the same cause of action, the court may stay proceedings on all but one;¹ or will stay proceedings on all until the plaintiff elects to discontinue in all but one.² And this will be done where the plaintiff of record is not the same person in all the actions, if it appears that the actions are all under the control of one person and for his benefit.³ If the plaintiff is the defendant in another suit where the same questions are involved, he can not be compelled to elect between the two actions.⁴ But the court may stay proceedings in one of two cross-actions and order the counterclaim to be delivered by the party who has not the burden of proof on the issues, if the points at issue are the same in the two actions.⁵

The mere fact that there is another action involving the same issues pending between the same parties in a foreign country, is not sufficient ground for staying proceedings, unless it appears that one of the parties is seeking to prevent the course of justice.⁶ But it seems to be within the sound discretion of the court to stay proceedings when there is another action between the same parties and involving the same issues pending in a court of a sister state or in a court of the United States.⁷ In order to authorize any court to stay proceedings on account of a suit pending in another court, the two proceedings must be practically identical.⁸

1. Jones v. Pritchard, 6 D. & L. 529; 18 L. J. Q. B. 104; Sowter v. Dunston, 1 M. & R. 508; 17 E. C. L. 26; Carne v. Legh, 6 B. & C. 124; 9 D. & R. 126; 13 E. C. L. 118; Burlington v. Parce, 12 Hun (N. Y.) 149; Flanagan v. Flanagan, 13 N. Y. St. Rep. 432; Cushman v. Leland, 93 N. Y. 632; Brown v. May, 17 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 205; Oroville, etc., R. Co. v. Supervisors of Plumas Co., 37 Cal. 354.

The court may order suspension of action against a garnishee until attachment proceedings are disposed of. McFadden v. O'Donnell, 18 Cal. 160; Pierson v. McCahill, 21 Cal. 123; McKeon v. McDermott, 22 Cal. 667; 83 Am. Dec. 86.

In a suit on the assignment of a promissory note, the declaration averred that the plaintiff had sued the maker, that the latter had obtained judgment on account of a want of consideration for the note, and that notice of the suit against the maker had been given to the indorser, etc. A motion was made by the now defendant in the circuit court to stay proceedings until a writ of error, which had been taken to said judgment and which was shown by affidavit to be pending in the supreme court, should be determined. Held, that the motion should be granted. Scott v. Herald, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 129.

The court will not stay proceedings until another action between the parties brought upon the act against usury shall be determined. Shoemaker v. Shirtliffe, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 127.

2. Hammond v. Baker, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 704; Liftchild v. Smith, 7 Robt. (N. Y.) 306.

3. Soule v. Corning, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 412; Mariposa Co. v. Garrison, 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 448.

4. Botts v. Cozine, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 583; Mariposa Co. v. Garrison, 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 448.

5. Thomson v. South Eastern R. Co., 9 Q. B. Div. 320; 51 L. J. Q. B. 322; Adamson v. Tuff, 44 L. T. 420.

6. Republic of Mexico v. De Arangoiz, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 634; Cox v. Mitchell, 7 C. B. N. S. 55; 29 L. J. C. P. 33; 97 E. C. L. 55; McHenry v. Lewis, 22 Ch. Div. 397; 52 L. J. Ch. 325.

7. Bell v. Donohue, 47 N. Y. Super. Ct. 458; Parmalee v. Wheeler, 32 Wis. 429.

8. Campbell, J., in People v. Judges,

27 Mich. 406; 15 Am. Rep. 195, makes the following critical review of the authorities on this point: "No case has been cited, and we have not been able to find any, wherein it has been held that a common law court has any right to prevent a person from enforcing a common law remedy on account of the pending of any but common law proceedings. It being his absolute right to sue at common law if he chooses, the common law will protect him in it. And inasmuch as proceedings to enforce a security are in their nature collateral to proceedings to establish a personal liability, there is always a possibility at least that whether the personal claim will be made out or not, the remedy against the security may not be established, or if established may not be adequate. And while a double satisfaction can never be obtained in any court, concurrent and cumulative remedies are by no means unknown and are not universally forbidden. Questions have frequently arisen on this subject and the decisions do not sustain the right of courts to interfere with the lawful action of parties suing. Admiralty and common law remedies have not been regarded as so far alike in their rules and effect as to stand on the same footing. In the case of The Kalorama, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 204, it was held, the pending of proceedings in personam should not suspend proceedings in rem in admiralty. And in Harmer v. Bell (The Bold Buccleugh), 22 Eng. L. & Eq. 62, the same doctrine was held by the privy council, who said that proceedings in rem and in personam were essentially different and one should not suspend the other.

"Neither, until satisfied, will even a judgment in rem or in personam prevent further proceedings on the same claim. Toby v. Brown, 6 Eng. 308; The Bengal, Swabey 469; The John & Mary, Swabey 471; Nelson v. Couch, 15 C. B., N. S. 99; 109 E. C. E. 99.

"The latter case contains a very full discussion of the subject and shows the necessity of the rule. And if this be true, it must necessarily follow that justice will rather be subserved than defeated by permitting the ascertainment of both classes of liabilities without needless delays. Upon this proposition, also, the cases are harmonious and courts have constantly refused to stay any action at common law, on any claim that in courts not proceeding according to the common law, or even in other common law actions involving a part but not all of the same issues, the main questions were to be decided.

"In Sowter v. Dunston, 1 M. & R. 508; 17 E. C. L. 269, the court refused to stay a suit against one defendant while another suit for the same cause of action against him and another jointly was pending.

"In Wise v. Prowse, 9 Price 393, an action against a defendant sued jointly with others as drawers was held no ground for staying an action against him as acceptor.

"Henry v. Nash, 1 Exch. 826; Giles v. Tooth, 3 C. B. 665; 54 E. C. L. 665; Newton v. Belcher, 9 Q. B. 612; 58 E. C. L. 611, were cases where numerous individual suits were brought against directors and others, who were jointly liable on the same single cause of action; and stays were refused which were applied for to abide the trial of one of the causes which was at issue on the facts. In the first, there were pleas in abatement overruled before the motion. In the second, there was no plea of non-joinder but the merits were shown to be the same in all the suits except as to the individual liability for membership, which had to be made out as to each. In the third case, a stay of proceedings which had been granted was set aside as beyond the authority of the court. In the latter cause of Newton v. Belcher, a judgment was obtained for £877 beyond a sum of £1,000 paid into court. Pending a motion for a new trial, a motion for a stay of proceedings was made in still another case of Newton v. Liddiard, 9 Q. B. 616, note a; 58 E. C. L. 614, which was refused for the same reason given in Newton v. Belcher, 9 Q. B. 612; 58 E. C. L. 611. Coleridge, J., gave a further reason, also before referred to, that there was no certainty that the plaintiff would be able to collect his debt without suing all. This is the same reason underlying the shipping cases before cited.

"And on this same ground, it was held in Great Northern R. Co. v. Kennedy, 4 Exch. 417, and in Inglis v. Great Northern R. Co., 16 Eng. L. & Eq. 55, that the forfeiture of shares was no suspension of action for calls, although when the company should realize, the defendant would be entitled to an accounting for the proceeds. The court liken the forfeiture to a mortgage claim.

"In Covington v. Hogarth, 7 M. & G. 1013; 49 E. C. L. 1011, it was held that proceedings should not be stayed at common law by reason of the same plaintiffs having proceeded in bankruptcy for the same debt, and although before the time to plead expired, the defendant had paid the debt, it was held there could be no stay unless he paid the costs also.

"In Wade v. Simeon, 1 C. B. 610; 50 E. C. L. 610, a suit had been brought in the exchequer on two checks, and a stipulation was made for payment or judgment at a given time, and a judge's order was made in pursuance of the agreement to that effect. This order being afterwards set aside and the defendant allowed to defend, the plaintiff sued on this agreement in the common bench, and that court held it had no right to stay the action. The language used in this case is to the same effect as that found in many of the others; viz., that the courts cannot interfere with the right of the party to have a common law trial in the ordinary course. Tindal, C. J., says: 'It appears to me that the plaintiff has a prima facie cause of action on an agreement which he sets out in his declaration, and that he has a right by the law of the land to insist upon having the judgment of the court thereon, either upon a demurrer or by the verdict of a jury, or the judgment of a court of error upon a bill of exceptions, or otherwise, according to the ordinary course of practice.' And it was intimated by the chief justice and other members of the court that nothing but bad faith in breaking an agreement, or in some other similar way, would justify interference.

"This same principle has been applied in equity. In Ostell v. Le Page, 21 Eng. L. & Eq. 640, a stay of proceedings granted by a vice-chancellor on account of proceedings which had passed to a decree in India, was set aside as granted without right because it did not appear clearly that the Indian proceedings covered the whole ground that might have been covered by the English chancery cause. Lord Cranworth said: 'But when the court interferes upon motion to stop the plaintiff from proceeding, it is taking upon itself a very delicate jurisdiction, and one in which it ought to see that by no possibility can it be doing injustice. Looking at this decree, and at the present bill, I think that the decree could not be pleaded so as to bar the plaintiff from all the relief which she is seeking by the present suit.'

"In Miles v. Bristol, 3 B. & Ad. 945; 23 E. C. L. 227, where, after suit was brought to the queen's bench, another precisely similar was brought and pending in the exchequer, and a motion was made in the queen's bench to stay proceedings and order a discontinuance, Lord Tenterden, said: 'This court cannot interfere absolutely to prevent the plaintiff's proceeding in an action which was properly brought here, nor have we any control over the action in the exchequer. But we have authority to say in the action pending in our own court, that he shall not proceed further in that, unless he abandon the one in the exchequer. He must, therefore, make his election.'

"In Dicas v. Jay, 6 Bing. 519; 19 E. C. L. 155, it appears that in a previous action a reference was had by rule of court which forbade bringing a new action, and an award was made in favor of plaintiff, which he deemed too small; whereupon he brought a new action and a motion was made in the new cause for a stay of proceedings; but the court held it had no power to grant the stay if the party insisted on proceeding, although an opinion was intimated that the award would turn out to be a bar. Tindal, C. J., said: 'We have no right to prevent him from proceeding if he chooses to do so, and, therefore, this rule must be discharged without costs.'

"It has also been held expressly that a court of common law will not stay proceedings because of the pendency of proceedings in other than common-law courts. Thus, in Foreman v. Jeyes, 5 B. & Ad. 835, where a verdict having been entered on an award, the plaintiff had been enjoined from proceeding to judgment, the queen's bench held they had no authority to prevent him from proceeding to judgment and could not discharge the defendant who was afterward relieved in the court of chancery from his arrest on the execution.

"So in Davis v. Salter, 2 C. & M. 466, where executors were enjoined from proceeding to dispose of assets, it was held a common-law court could not stay proceedings against them at law before judgment. In Murphy v. Ca-

f. UPON DISCHARGE IN BANKRUPTCY.—If a defendant is declared a bankrupt, proceedings should be stayed in an action then pending against him, if a motion for that purpose be seasonably made.¹ While the mere pendency of proceedings in bankruptcy is not sufficient ground for a stay,² yet after an adjudication, the State court should stay proceedings to await the determination of the bankrupt's discharge, unless he makes unreasonable delay in applying for a discharge, or the court allows the proceedings to go on for the single purpose of ascertaining the amount due.³ If the defendant has the opportunity he must plead his discharge as a defense, but if he fails to do so, a judgment obtained against him will not be disturbed.⁴ But it has been held that a plea in bar that defendant had been adjudged a bankrupt and that plaintiff had proved his debt in bankruptcy, was insufficient, because the debt still existed, and that the proper relief was a stay of proceedings against defendant to wait his discharge.⁵ If neither the bankrupt nor his assignee in bankruptcy applies for a stay of proceedings, the court may proceed to judgment.⁶ And if there is unreasonable delay in making the motion for a stay, the relief may be denied.⁷

g. FOR IRREGULARITY.—In some cases proceedings may be stayed on account of some irregularity brought to the notice of the court. An application for a stay on this ground must be made within a reasonable time after the irregularity occurred;⁸ and the rule applies as well to prisoners as to others;⁹ and what is a reasonable time is entirely within the discretion of the court.¹⁰ But a party may usually apply for relief at any time before the party guilty of the irregularity has taken a further step, if the del, 2 B. & P. 137, it was also held that proceedings at law could not be stayed on account of the pendency of a suit in equity.

"In Smidt v. Ogle, 6 Taunt. 74, the court refused to stay an action pending proceedings in the mayor's court of London. Heath, J., said: 'It is a common law right of the plaintiff to sue here, and we shall not restrain it.' The same rule was followed in Laughton v. Taylor, 6 M. & W. 695.

"And in those cases where the rules differ at common law and in admiralty, it has been held that even a verdict or judgment in the one court has no force in the other.

"As in collision cases, the rule at common law allows no recovery in favor of a party at all in fault, while admiralty divides the loss if both are faulty, and therefore a decision in either court concludes nothing in the other if the doctrine is correctly stated in The Ann and Mary, 2 W. Rob. 189; General Steam Nav. Co. v. Tonkin, 4

Moore 321, in both of which it was so held."

1. Lenihan v. Hamann, 55 N. Y. 653; Clifton v. Foster, 103 Mass. 233; 4 Am. Rep. 539; Imlay v. Carpentier, 14 Cal. 173; Ray v. Wight, 119 Mass. 426; 20 Am. Rep. 333.

2. Maxwell v. Faxon, 4 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 210.

3. Hill v. Harding, 107 U. S. 631.

4. Revere Copper Co. v. Dimock, 90 N. Y. 33; Dimock v. Revere Copper Co., 117 U. S. 559.

5. Brandon Mfg. Co. v. Frazer, 47 Vt. 88; 19 Am. Rep. 118.

6. Hill v. Harding, 107 U. S. 631, citing Doe v. Childress, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 642; Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521; Norton v. Switzer, 93 U. S. 355.

7. Monroe v. Upton, 50 N. Y. 593.

8. Claridge v. McKenzie, 2 D. N. S. 898; 6 Scott N. R. 171.

9. Primrose v. Baddelly, 2 D. P. C. 350; 2 C. & M. 468.

10. Lane v. Newman, 1 B. C. Rep. 93; 10 Jur. 925.

latter is not prejudiced by the delay.¹ Also where the action is so brought as to be a fraud on the court, proceedings may be stayed on the defendant's motion; as where an attorney has brought an action without the knowledge or consent of the plaintiff,² or where an action for one kind of relief is authorized and the attorney brought an action for relief entirely different.³

2. Conditional Stay—a. FOR NON-PAYMENT OF COSTS.—When the plaintiff has failed in one action and brings another action against the same party for the same, or what is substantially the same, cause of action, the court will stay proceedings in the second action until the costs in the first are paid.⁴ The rule is not confined to cases where the second action is brought in the same court in which the first one was brought, but extends to all courts

1. Dand v. Barnes, 6 Taunt. 5; 1 Marsh. 403.

2. Delhi v. Graham, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 407.

3. Lyons v. Cole, 3 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 431.

4. Weston v. Withers, 2 T. R. 511; Corbett v. Warner, 2 L. R. Q. B. 108; 36 L. J. Q. B. 86; 16 L. T. 150; Hoare v. Dickson, 6 D. & L. 577; 7 C. B. 164; 18 L. J. C. P. 158; 62 E. C. L. 163; Prowse v. Loxdale, 3 B. & S. 896; 32 L. J. Q. B. 227; 113 E. C. L. 896; Clark v. Dixon, 4 Jur. N. S. 715; Canot v. Morgan, 1 Ch. Div. 1; 45 L. J. Ch. 50; Edwards v. Ninth Ave. R. Co., 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 444; Richardson v. White, 27 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 155; Kentish v. Tathan, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 372; Dresser v. Brooks, 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 76; Ripley v. Benedict, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 19; Ex parte Stone, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 381; Cuyler v. Vanderwerk, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 247; Taylor v. Vandervoort, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 449; Kerr v. Davis, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 53; Lawrence v. Dickinson, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 580; Jackson v. Edwards, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 138; Perkins v. Hinman, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 237; Fleming v. Pennsylvania Ins. Co., 4 Pa. St. 475; Altman v. Altman, 12 Pa. St. 246; Henderson v. Griffin, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 151; Gerrish v. Pratt, 6 Minn. 53; McIntosh v. Hoben, 11 Wis. 400 (Vilas & Bry. 418); State v. Howe, 64 Ind. 18; Cooper v. Sheppard, 9 N. J. L. 96; Swing v. Alloway's Creek, 10 N. J. L. 58; Robinson v. Merchants, etc., Transp. Co., 16 R. I. 217.

In Sooy v. McKean, 9 N. J. L. 88. Ewing, C. J., said: "The stay of proceedings in a second action until the costs of a former are paid, is founded on sound and just principles. The practice first fully obtained in the action of ejectment. In the case of Roberts v. Cook, 4 Mod. 379, which was in ejectment, the court said: 'If the verdict had been against the party bringing the second action, or he had been nonsuited, he should not have brought another action before the costs of the first had been paid, because it was a vexation to bring a new action.' In Keene v. Angel, 6 D. & E. 740, Lord Kenyon said: 'The only question in these cases is whether the second ejectment is in substance brought to try the same title; if so, the rule is of course to stay the proceedings until the costs of the former ejectment have been paid.' For a time the extension of the practice to other actions was questioned. The policy and propriety of it, however, did not long remain a doubt. In Weston v. Withers, 2 D. & E. 511, the plaintiff having been nonsuited in an action of trespass for taking goods, brought a second action for the same cause and sued in forma pauperis. On a rule to show cause why the second action should not be stayed, it was objected that it could only be done in ejectment. But the court made the rule absolute, and Justice Buller read two cases where the like rule had been made in other actions than ejectment. In the case of Grovesnor v. Cape, cited in 2 Bel. Rep. 741, and in 3 Wils. 150, trover was brought to try a question in bankruptcy. The merits were fully gone into, the opinion of the court was with the defendant, and judgment had. A new action was brought, in case, for money had and received, and not in trover, lest the former judgment should be pleaded in bar, but professedly to try the same question of bankruptcy over again. The court refused to permit the second within the jurisdiction,¹ and to courts of the United States held in and for the State;² but it does not extend to courts of another State or a foreign country.³

In order to justify such stay, the causes of action in the two cases must be the same⁴ and the parties must be the same, or at least there must be a privity to the parties to the former action.⁵ Where one action is legal and the other equitable, the rule will not be applied.⁶ The rule applies notwithstanding new parties defendant have been entered in the second action,⁷ or a new cause of action has been added.⁸ But where the party seeking the stay has assigned his interest in the costs, the relief will not be granted.⁹

The foregoing rules apply also where the plaintiff has been nonsuited.¹⁰

b. WHERE MATERIAL EVIDENCE WITHHELD.—Where the plaintiff fraudulently withholds material evidence, or destroys documents containing evidence material to the defendant's case, action to proceed until the costs of the former should be paid. For a time it was questioned whether the proceedings could be stayed, unless in the first action the merits had been examined and decided, either by nonsuit or verdict. But sound reason prevailed over this difficulty. It could not fail to be seen that if the first action was ended by the neglect of the plaintiff to pursue it with regularity and diligence, his neglect should afford him no title to escape the payment of costs. In the case of Baldwyn v. Richards, 2 D. & E. 511, n., a second action was stayed after judgment as in case of nonsuit, for not going to trial in the first, which was for malicious prosecution. The same rule is pursued in the supreme court of New York. Cuyler v. Vanderwerk, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 247; Perkins v. Hinman, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 237."

1. Swing v. Alloways Creek, 10 N. J. L. 58; Taylor v. Vandervoort, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 449; Perkins v. Hinman, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 237.

2. Jackson v. Carpenter, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 22.

3. "The enforcement of that rule has been confined to courts within the state and not always applied even here where the different courts proceeded by different modes of practice or were governed by different principles in their decisions. With much more force it may be said that it should not be applied to cases where the courts were in different states, and, perhaps, governed by entirely different modes of proceeding. The rule has never been extended to costs in actions pending in other states or countries, and there are good reasons why it should not be." Julio v. Ingalls, 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 429.

4. Vetterlein v. Barnes, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 437; Arnold v. Clark, 6 Daly (N. Y.) 259.

5. Vetterlein v. Barnes, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 437; Richardson v. White, 27 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 155; Taylor v. Vandervoort, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 449; Zimmerman v. Kebler, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 128.

6. Rankin v. Thompson, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 201; Davis v. Duffie, 3 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 363; 5 Duer (N. Y.) 688; Kerr v. Davis, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 53; Demarest v. Wynkoop, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 461; Wild v. Hobson, 2 Ves. & B. 112.

7. Kentish v. Tatham, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 372.

8. Ripley v. Benedict, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 19.

9. Simpson v. Brewster, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 245.

10. Robinson v. Merchants', etc., Transp. Co. (R. I.), 14 Atl. Rep. 860; Jackson v. Edwards, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 138; Jackson v. Carpenter, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 22; Perkins v. Hinman, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 237; Gummer v. Omro Trustees, 50 Wis. 247; Smith v. Allen, 79 Me. 536; Morse v. Mayberry, 48 Me. 161. See also Janeway v. Skerritt, 30 N. J. L. 97; Stirk v. Central R. & Banking Co., 79 Ga. 495. See also COSTS, vol. 4 p. 313; NONSUIT, vol. 16, p. 720.

the court may stay proceedings until such documents, or true copies of them are produced.¹

c. FOR DISCOVERY AND COMMISSIONS TO TAKE TESTIMONY.—Proceedings in a suit by a foreign government may be stayed until the means of discovery are secured in a cross suit.² But a stay of proceedings in the original suit will not be granted where an officer of such government is made a defendant in a cross suit for the sole purpose of discovery.³ So upon the issuance of a commission to take testimony, a stay of proceedings may be granted;⁴ but the party applying for it must show clearly the necessity for the delay and the materiality of the evidence sought.⁵ The order for a commission to take testimony is not per se a stay of proceedings.⁶

d. UNTIL HEARING OF MOTION.—A stay of proceedings may be granted to await the hearing of a motion in the progress of a cause. In such case, the stay is merely a means to the end sought to be accomplished by the motion, and the application for it should be founded on a case showing at least a prima facie right to some relief, which can only be effectually obtained by staying the proceedings of the opposite party until the application for such relief can be properly made.⁷

3. Application for Stay—In What Court Made.—An application to stay proceedings must be made in the court in which the action is pending. No other judge or court has jurisdiction to stay proceedings.⁸

4. Remedy for Abuse of Discretion.—An order of the trial court

1. Edgington v. Nixon, 2 Scott 507; 2 Bing. N. Cas. 316; 29 E. C. L. 348; 2 Wait's Pr., p. 622, citing Premo v. Smith, 10 Abb. N. S. (N. Y.) 90; 40 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 480.

2. Republic of Peru v. Weguelin, Weguelin v. Republic of Peru, L. R., 20 Eq. 140; 44 L. J. Ch. 583; 32 L. T. 426.

3. Republic of Costa Rica v. Erlanger, 1 Ch. Div. 171; 45 L. J. Ch. 145; 34 W. R. 151; reversing 33 L. T. 632.

4. Starbuck v. Hall, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 58; Pomeroy v. Lowndsbury, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 30; Rathbun v. Ingersol, 34 N. Y. Super. Ct. 211.

5. Forrest v. Forrest, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 666.

6. Maynard v. Chapin, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 520; Jackson v. Woodworth, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 136.

7. Kirby v. Cogswell, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 505; Schenck v. McKie, 4 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 246; Chubbuck v. Morrison, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 367; Sales v. Woodin, 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 349; Ackroyd v. Ackroyd, 3 Daly (N. Y.) 38.

8. Garbutt v. Fawcus, 1 Ch. Div. 155; 45 L. J. Ch. 133; In re Morrison Patent Fuel Co., W. N. 1877, 20; In re South of France Pottery Works Syndicate, 37 L. T., N. S. 260; In re People's Garden Co., 1 Ch. Div. 44; 45 L. J. Ch. 129; Walker v. Banagher Distillery Co., 1 Q. B. Div. 129; 45 L. J. Q. B. 134; Rose v. Garden Lodge Coal, etc., Co., 3 Q. B. Div. 235; 47 L. J. Q. B. 338.

Contra.—Kingchurch v. People's Garden Co., 1 C. P. Div. 45; 45 L. J. C. P. 131; Needham v. River Protection, etc., Co., 1 Ch. Div. 253; 45 L. J. Ch. 132. The Judicature Act provides that all actions must be stayed by the court in which the action is pending. Nevertheless, it is held in the two cases last above cited, that where proceedings are instituted in the chancery division for the winding up of the company, and pending such proceedings a creditor brings an action at law against the company, the chancery division may stay proceedings in the action at law until the winding up proceedings are determined.

staying proceedings in a cause is a discretionary order, and, as such, is not appealable. But where there has been an abuse of discretion and such order has been made without sufficient cause, the appellate court will award a mandamus in the nature of a procedendo to compel the trial court to proceed with the cause.¹ It has been held, however, that an order staying proceedings permanently in an action, being a final determination of the action, affects a substantial right and is appealable.²

III. STAY OF EXECUTION.—See EXECUTIONS, vol. 7, p. 117. For stay of execution pending appeal, see SUPERSEDEAS.

1. Definition and Kinds.—Stay of execution may be defined to be a suspension of the legal process prescribed by law for carrying a judgment into effect.³ The word stay is often used by itself to mean the period of time during which no execution can issue on a judgment.⁴ In criminal cases, stay of execution means much the same as reprieve or respite.⁵ What are commonly called stay laws are acts of the legislative powers of states, prescribing a stay of judicial proceedings in certain cases, being designed for the protection and relief of debtors in times of financial trouble.⁶

In civil cases there are several classes of stays, resulting from an order of court or agreement of the parties, or compliance with statutory provisions. These will be treated in their order.⁷

2. Stay by Order of Court—a. POWER OF COURT TO GRANT STAY.—All courts of general jurisdiction have inherent power to stay execution of their own judgments. This power is derived from the court's entire control over its own process and is necessary in order to prevent oppression and abuse. For this purpose it should be exercised liberally but cautiously, and only when it seems in the sound discretion of the court necessary to promote

1. Imlay v. Carpentier, 14 Cal. 173; Rhodes v. Craig, 21 Cal. 419; Avery v. Contra Costa Co. Ct., 57 Cal. 247; Dunphy v. Belden, 57 Cal. 427; Rose v. Nevada Co. Ct., 65 Cal. 570; People v. Judges, 27 Mich. 406; 15 Am. Rep. 195; Culver v. Judge, 57 Mich. 25; Budd v. New Jersey R., etc., Co., 14 N. J. L. 467.

A writ of error does not lie to an order of the court below to stay the proceedings finally. But the court will award a mandamus nisi in the nature of a procedendo. Livingston v. Dorgenois, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 577.

But mandamus will not lie to compel allowance of a stay of proceedings. State v. Judge, 22 La. Ann. 116; People v. Judge, 24 Mich. 408.

2. "It is urged that this order is not appealable. I think it is. It is an absolute unconditional stay, without limit, and necessarily prevents the entry of a judgment. This order in effect determines the action and prevents a judgment from which an appeal might be taken. Such plainly is the purpose of the injunction from the district court and this order is made in compliance with that direction. It is said that this order may be modified or reversed upon some application of the plaintiff's for a rehearing or otherwise. The same may be said with the same force of almost any other appealable order. That does not prevent an appeal. It is then very clearly appealable." Peckham J., in Knowlton v. Providence, etc., S. S. Co., 53 N. Y. 76.

3. Abb. L. Dict.

4. Bouv. L. Dict.

5. Abb. L. Dict.

6. Black L. Dict.

7. Stay of execution by injunction is not included in this article. See INJUNCTIONS, vol. 10, p. 884 et seq.

the ends of justice.¹ A trial court may not stay execution of the judgment of an appellate court after a mandate or remittitur, or

1. Sawin v. Mount Vernon Bank, 2 R. I. 382; Com. v. Magee, 8 Pa. St. 240; 44 Am. Dec. 509; Eaton v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 421; Davis v. Tiffany, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 642; Welch v. Tittsworth, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 474; Knox v. Hexter, 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 496; Kramer v. Holster, 55 Miss. 243.

A lower court has no power to grant a supersedeas to a judgment or decree of the higher court, any more than a justice of the peace can supersede a judgment of the circuit court. Dibrell v. Eastland, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 507; Mayor, etc., of Marysville v. Buchanan, 3 Cal. 212.

The refusal of a court to grant a stay of execution when the motion is addressed to its judicial discretion is not appealable. A motion to temporarily stay an execution was made by a judgment debtor on the ground that attachments had been laid in his hands as garnishee of the judgment creditor, and that the execution should therefore be stayed until the rights of the parties were settled in the court issuing the attachment. The motion was refused. This refusal was not the subject of appeal. The motion was addressed to the legal discretion of the court below, which will take care that no injustice is done. Early v. Rogers, 16 How. (U. S.) 599.

The refusal of the court below to stay proceedings, the motion being addressed to the judicial discretion of the court cannot be assigned as error. As well might the refusal of a judge to allow an injunction or grant a writ of habeas corpus be assigned as error. Branigan v. Rose, 8 Ill. 123; Granger v. Craig, 85 N. Y. 619.

In Freeman on Executions, § 32, it is said: "Each court has such general control of its process as enables it to act for the prevention of all abuse thereof. The power of courts to temporarily stay the issuing of executions is exercised in an almost infinite variety of circumstances in order that the ends of justice may be accomplished. In many cases this power operates almost as a substitute for proceedings in equity, and enables the defendant to prevent any inequitable use of the judgment or writ."

In Eaton v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 421, the court, by Thayer J., said: "In these cases motions for a temporary stay of execution on the judgments have been filed. When the motions were argued, counsel strenuously contended that the court had no power to grant a temporary stay of execution, and that it would be a clear violation of the rights of the judgment creditors to withhold execution, even for a short period. A cursory examination of that question satisfies me, however, that all courts of common law have power to temporarily stay executions on judgments by them rendered, whenever it is necessary to accomplish the ends of justice. In Sawin v. Mount Vernon Bank, 2 R. I. 383, the court said: 'We are satisfied that the court has entire control over its own process, and that it is in the discretion of the court to grant a stay of the execution in each case according to the circumstances. But this discretion must be judicially exercised,' etc. . . . In Robinson v. Yon, 8 Fla. 355, the court said: 'Courts of law have full power to revoke, correct, restrain or quash their process in the course of their own ordinary jurisdiction.' While the power to temporarily stay executions on its judgments resides in every court, it must be conceded that it is a power that ought to be cautiously exercised, and only in those cases where it seems necessary to promote the ends of justice. In other words, it ought not to be arbitrarily used, nor should an execution be withheld merely because it is inconvenient for a judgment debtor to pay his debts. The question to be determined, therefore, is whether the circumstances justify the court in withholding execution for a short period."

In New York it is held that the code does not abridge the power that the supreme court has always had over its own judgments; it may in its discretion stay proceedings pending an appeal without the prescribed security; and the exercise of this discretion, unless capricious or the discretion be abused, is not reviewable in the court of appeals. Granger v. Craig, 85 N. Y. 619. Justices of the peace nowhere have discretionary powers to stay execution.

It was held in Hudson v. Smith, 9 Wis. 122, that the power of the appellate court to stay proceedings in any matter appealed to it does not otherwise interfere with it except to make the orders necessary to carry it into execution.¹ But it has been held that a nisi prius court may stay execution on its own judgment after it has been affirmed by the appellate court.²

b. PERPETUAL STAY.—A perpetual stay of execution is granted in many cases where an execution ought not to be enforced under altogether depend upon statutory enactment, but is inherent in the court. The circuit court having refused defendant a stay of proceedings, this court grants him that relief on condition that he file a proper undertaking within a certain period. It is the general policy of the law to allow a defendant to stay proceedings under a decision of an inferior tribunal against him, from which he has appealed, on his giving proper security. Levy v. Goldberg, 40 Wis. 308.

A judge at chambers cannot set aside and perpetually stay an execution. Bond v. Pacheco, 30 Cal. 530; but may suspend it until motion to quash can be heard. Sanchez v. Carriaga, 31 Cal. 170.

A judge may not make an ex parte order recalling or staying execution. Livermore v. Hodgkins, 54 Cal. 637.

A chancellor has no jurisdiction to stay proceedings under an execution issued upon a delivery bond taken under an execution indorsed "no security to be taken." A court of law can render full redress by a writ of error coram vobis or motion to quash. Poston v. Southern, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 289.

1. "Whatever was before the court and is disposed of is considered as finally settled. The inferior court is bound by the decree as the law of the case and must carry it into execution according to the mandate. They cannot vary it or examine it for any other purpose than execution, or give any other or further relief, or review it upon any matter decided on appeal for error apparent, or intermeddle with it further than to settle so much as has been remanded. (1 S. C. 194, 197; 1 H. & N. 557; 3 Menif. 228.)" Justice Baldwin, in Sibbald v. U. S., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 488.

"There has been some discussion at the bar as to the principles by which a circuit court of the United States is to be governed when executing a mandate from the supreme court. Undoubtedly the mandate must be its guide. It is the judgment of this court transmitted to the circuit court. And when the direction contained in the mandate is precise and unambiguous, it is the duty of the circuit court to carry it into execution and not to look elsewhere for authority to change its meaning." Taney, C. J., in West v. Brashear, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 51.

In Dibrell v. Eastland, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 507, it was held that a judge of a state circuit court was without authority to grant an order for a superseas to the judgments or decrees of the supreme court.

In Marysville v. Buchanan, 3 Cal. 214, the court, by Wells, J., said: "The present appeal is from an order of the district court, refusing to set aside an order of the judge at chambers, staying proceedings upon an execution for costs, issued by the clerk of the district court, upon a remittitur from this court filed with him, and from an order of the district court quashing said execution. . . . Neither the district court nor the district judge have any authority to prevent the immediate execution of the judgment of this court. So far as the appeal is concerned and the costs consequent thereon, the judgment of this court is final. . . . The order of the district court must be reversed, and the order of the district judge, staying proceedings, set aside, and the plaintiffs can have their execution for the costs of this appeal."

2. In Blackburn v. Reilly, 48 N. J. L. 84, the court, by Van Syckle, J., said: "The mandate of the court of errors is substantially the same in form as that of the Supreme Court of the United States. The plaintiff relies upon West v. Brashear, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 52, and Sibbald v. U. S., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 488, to support his position. The doctrine of these cases, that whatever was before the superior court, and there disposed of, must be regarded as finally settled, and that the inferior court cannot review or interfere with any matter decided on the appeal, or give other or further relief in that respect, must be conceded to be a correct exposition of the law.

any circumstances; as where there has been an abuse of process in obtaining the judgment,¹ or the judgment is void,² or where

It must also be admitted that the circuit court has no power to reverse or annul its own final judgment for errors of law or fact, after the term in which it has been rendered, unless for clerical mistakes in the entry. But the plaintiff must establish the more advanced position that after remittitur the circuit court is constrained to issue execution, and cannot control the judgment, as in other cases, for the equitable purpose of setting it off against a judgment at that time held by the defendant against the plaintiff. If this cannot be successfully maintained the argument is without force. . . . The practice, I think, is also well settled, that the circuit court can control its own judgment and stay execution, to enable a defendant to recover his counter-claim, and set it off, that full justice may be done. Are these rights lost to the defendant through deprivation of the power of the circuit court consequent upon the affirmance of its judgment by the court of last resort? The judgment of the court of errors was simply a judgment of affirmance. No execution can issue out of the court of errors. The record is remitted, and the judgment stands henceforth as an unappealable judgment of the circuit court. How can affirmance deprive the inferior court of any power which, by established practice, it exercises over its final judgments, and which does not impeach their finality? How does it impair the general power of the court below? How can the fact that the circuit court was right in its judgment serve to degrade its authority in this case. The judgment after affirmance has all the attributes of a final judgment, nothing more. It has no higher qualities than a final judgment unappealed from, except that its validity cannot be questioned or reviewed. The only question adjudged in the appellate court was that in the record and proceedings below no error appeared. . . . The circuit court being the proper forum in which the defendant must apply for relief, there is nothing in the remittitur which can operate to extinguish this control with which the law invests the circuit court over final judgments. This in no wise impeaches the judgment; it is recognized as final and conclusive and the court deals with it as such. There is no higher right to execution because the judgment has been affirmed."

1. The plaintiff got judgment against the defendant and then sued on that judgment, and then brought suit on the second judgment, and so on until there were eight judgments, and the costs were largely increased. On motion, the court ordered a perpetual stay of proceedings on all judgments except the first, and said: "The court has such a control over its own process that it ought not to allow it to be perverted or used for any improper purpose." Keeler v. King, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 390:

Execution was issued against a certain farm which had been sold by the defendant to a party who held the property under the court's decision, free from any lien of the judgment. This being clear, the court granted a perpetual stay of execution, on the ground that an attempt to draw the purchaser's title into question in that manner was an abuse of its process. Davis v. Tiffany, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 642.

2. Logan v. Hillegass, 16 Cal. 201; Ketchum v. Crippen, 37 Cal. 223; Murdock v. De Vries, 37 Cal. 527.

A suit was brought to restrain a sale under execution issued upon a judgment on the ground that the execution is void upon its face, and that the judgment upon which it was issued was void. The court said: "We think the complaint presents no case for an injunction. If the judgment upon which the execution is based and the execution itself are void upon their face, the county court has ample power to afford speedy and adequate relief. If the judgment is void, the court has entire control over its process and can arrest it. The county judge also has authority to order a suspension of the execution of the writ until a motion before the court to recall or quash it can be heard." Sanchez v. Carriaga, 31 Cal. 170.

An appeal from a judgment of a justice of the peace was taken after the time allowed by law and the circuit court acquired no jurisdiction in the case. Judgment was nevertheless entered in the circuit court and execution was issued. Upon motion, a the plaintiff after decree is found to have no title,¹ or where the assignor of a debt has reduced it to judgment,² or where the judgment was obtained in violation of a stipulation.³ Where the judgment has been satisfied in fact but not of record, the court may stay execution thereon.⁴ And, generally, where it is clear that it would be unjust to enforce a judgment, the court will perpetually stay execution thereon.⁵ But the court will not inter-stay of execution was granted. The court said: "It was proper for the circuit judge to order the execution described in the petition to be stayed. Every court possesses the inherent power to prevent an abuse of its process. A motion to quash the execution was unnecessary. Quashing an execution is no bar to a subsequent execution. The better course for the defendant is to procure an order vacating the void judgment so as to save himself from further executions upon it; but if he sees proper to take the risk of this and to apply for an order to stay the execution as often as one may be issued, no law denies to him the right to pursue this course." Kramer v. Holster, 55 Miss. 243.

1. In Houseman v. Houseman, 1 Ch. Div. 535; 34 L. T. 33, James, L. J., said: "It seems to me that the plaintiff was well warranted in taking out letters of administration, believing himself to be the next of kin. But before the bill was filed, he had ascertained that there was a person claiming to be the intestate's widow. If he then took proceedings, they were suo periculo; and he did take proceedings knowing that his right might at any moment be determined. His right as plaintiff was displaced by the court of probate. The administratrix then said that she wanted the suit stayed and without loss of time took out a summons accordingly. The plaintiff ought to have submitted to have such an order made in chambers. The order made must be varied and must be that proceedings are to be stayed and the applicant is to have her costs of staying the proceedings and of the appeal."

2. A assigned to B, by way of security for a loan of ten thousand pounds, two sums of five thousand pounds each, due from C to A under two several indentures, and afterwards brought debt against C upon those indentures. The court refused to stay the proceedings in the action at the instance of B and C and suggested that the proper course was to apply after judgment to stay execution. Maule, J., said: "I incline to think that the defendant can have no relief even in equity until judgment has been obtained and execution is about to issue." Tindal, C. J., said: "I think my brother Maule has suggested the right course. The application must be after judgment to restrain the plaintiff from suing out execution." Seppings v. Nokes, 2 C. B. 292; 52 E. C. L. 291.

3. A plaintiff who obtains judgment in violation of his written stipulation on file dismissing the action, may be restrained by the court in which judgment was obtained from enforcing it. McLeran v. McNamara, 55 Cal. 508.

4. Where judgment is attempted to be enforced by execution which has been satisfied or released, the execution may be suspended by supersedeas, and, on motion, satisfaction may be entered in the courts from which the execution emanated. Marsh v. Haywood, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 210.

5. Rutland v. Pippen, 7 Ala. 469; Smith v. Page, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 395; Lansing v. Orcott, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 4; Welch v. Tittsworth, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 475; Baker v. Taylor, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 165; Harrison v. Soles, 6 Pa. St. 393.

In Rutland v. Pippen, 7 Ala. 469, the court said: "In Lockhart v. McElroy, 4 Ala. 572, it was held that an execution may be superseded for an unjust or improper use attempted to be made of it, although it be authorized by the judgment; and the objection may be shown by extrinsic proof, even if it be mere oral testimony. This is an authority conclusive to show that the objection to the evidence by which the satisfaction of the judgment was shown is clearly untenable."

The court will order a perpetual stay of the ca. sa. where the defendant is discharged under the Act (sess. 42, ch. 101), intermediate the verdict and judgment. But if the discharge is objected to by the plaintiff, they will open the cause so as to give him a chance to try fare unless the defendant's right to a stay is very clearly shown.¹

Frequent instances of such perpetual stays arise where executions are issued on judgments after a discharge of the defendant in bankruptcy or insolvency, when such discharge comes too late to be set up as a defense to the action.²

the question, the judgment standing as security. Baker v. Taylor, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 165.

The court, to prevent fraud or great injustice, will order a perpetual stay of an execution provided the facts are made clearly to appear to the court so that complete justice can be done to all the parties concerned. Otherwise, the execution may be stayed for a definite time so as to give the party an opportunity to apply to the court of chancery for relief. Lansing v. Orcott, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 4.

Where an execution has irregularly issued, the proper course is to apply to the judge of the court from which it issued to stay proceedings, and not by injunction. Greenup v. Brown, 1 Ill. 252.

An execution improvidently issued will be stayed on motion at law, and chancery will not interfere unless it be until the motion can be made. Lasselle v. Moore, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 226.

1. The court will not interpose summarily to stay an execution, unless the defendant's case is made out entirely to their satisfaction. If it is doubtful, he must resort to his action. Pearce v. Affleck, 4 Binn. (Pa.) 344.

A stay of proceedings after entry of judgment will not be granted because defendant is applying in another court for a discharge from his debts under the "Two-third Act." Eastman v. Starr, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 465.

A sheriff sold a house and lot belonging to defendant under a judgment and execution against him, and executed a deed to the purchaser. He afterwards seized the same lot on another execution issued on a prior judgment against the defendant and advertised the same for sale. The court refused on motion of the first purchaser to stay proceedings, but left him to his remedy by action. Myers v. Kelsey, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 197.

The indulgence of a creditor to one of two defendants in a judgment, if such defendants are not principal and surety, as to each other, does not entitle the other defendant to a stay of proceedings on the execution against him, although he has paid a moiety of the debt and but for the indulgence of the plaintiff the other moiety would have been collected of the other defendant. Bank of Lansingburgh v. Russell, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 128.

A motion to restrain the sheriff from selling property upon execution, upon the ground that execution on the same judgment had already been issued in another county, denied, where it appeared doubtful whether the execution in such other county produced any satisfaction. Mills v. Thursby, No. 4, 11 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 119.

When a non-resident is permitted, after judgment, to come in and defend, that fact does not of itself open the judgment or stay proceedings upon the execution. Carswell v. Neville, 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 445.

As a general rule, execution will not be stayed for matters not apparent on the proceedings without an affidavit and bond to indemnify the party issuing it. Piernas v. Milliet, 10 La. Ann. 286.

A party to stay a writ of possession issued from the district on a judgment from the supreme court, must show affirmatively that it issued in contravention of the latter's decree. Crane v. Allen, 11 La. Ann. 496.

The alleged indebtedness of the plaintiff in an execution to the defendant, together with the plaintiff's insolvency, is no ground for an indefinite stay of execution, if security to the amount of the execution is offered by the plaintiff. Patterson v. Patterson, 27 Pa. St. 40.

2. A discharge in bankruptcy must be pleaded as a defense to an action, or it will be treated as waived. But if the defendant has no opportunity of pleading his discharge, as if it came too late, the practice is to permit the defendant to avail himself of it by a motion for a perpetual stay of execution. Cornell v. Dakin, 38 N. Y. 253; Monroe v. Upton, 50 N. Y. 593; Imlay v. Carpentier, 14 Cal. 177; Graham v. Pierson, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 247.

D. recovered a judgment against B., who appealed the case; soon after-

c. TEMPORARY STAY.—The power of the court to grant a temporary stay of execution is discretionary and is exercised in a great variety of circumstances in order to promote the ends of justice and prevent the inequitable use of the writ.¹ In many cases, this relief may be made to operate almost as a substitute for equitable proceedings; as where the plaintiff is insolvent and wards B. obtained his discharge under the bankrupt law, without notifying his attorney in the appealed case, supposing that by these proceedings the judgment debt had been discharged. The judgment was affirmed by the appellate court, and D. issued an execution thereon. B. then moved that the execution be perpetually stayed. The appellate court, holding B.'s neglect to avail himself of the discharge before the judgment of affirmance to be satisfactorily explained, granted the motion, upon the terms of B.'s paying the costs of all the proceedings in that court. Bostwick v. Dodge, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 331.

G. obtained judgment against P. who appealed, but the judgment was affirmed. Between the argument of the case and the decision of the court affirming the judgment, P. was discharged in bankruptcy. Upon his motion for a perpetual stay of execution the court said that the motion should be granted in the exercise of an equitable power over its judgment. Parks v. Goodwin, 1 Mich. 35; Bangs v. Strong, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 619.

A delivery made on an execution against a bankrupt, which issued previous to his obtaining his discharge, but after the filing of his petition, will be quashed by the court out of which it issued, on motion. McDougald v. Reid, 5 Ala. 810. See also Ewing v. Peck, 17 Ala. 339; Roden v. Jacob, 17 Ala. 344; Brown v. Branch Bank, 20 Ala. 420; Curtis v. Slosson, 6 Pa. St. 265; Alcott v. Avery, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 347.

Where, after a verdict in assumpsit, a defendant petitioned for a discharge in bankruptcy, and while his petition was pending and before he was declared a bankrupt judgment was entered in the suit and he was subsequently discharged, the court on motion refused to order the judgment to be cancelled, but directed a perpetual stay of execution as to all property acquired by defendant after decree in bankruptcy. Mechanics Banking Assoc. v. Lawrence, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.)

659. See also Palmer v. Hutchins, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 42; Baker v. Taylor, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 165; Baker v. Judges, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 191; Dresser v. Brooks, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 429; Francis v. Ogden, 22 N. J. L. 210.

1. The owner of a judgment which was a lien upon several parcels of land, one of which had been conveyed to a bona fide purchaser, levied upon and sold the latter property, knowing that the judgment could be collected out of the other unincumbered land of the defendant. The court set the sale aside, and ordered a stay as to the land in question, until the creditor had exhausted his remedy against the other land. This was done in furtherance of justice, and in the exercise of the court's equitable powers over its own process. Welch v. Tittsworth, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 474. And see also Smith v. Page, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 395.

A, who was insolvent, recovered judgment against B, who had a suit pending against A. A stay of execution was granted on A's judgment against B, until the decision of B's suit against A. Steere v. Stafford, 12 R. I. 131.

H. obtained a judgment against K., and K. then obtained a judgment against H. The latter judgment was reversed on appeal to an intermediate court, and K. then appealed to the highest court. Pending the determination of this appeal a stay was granted to prevent the collection of the judgment of H. against K. Knox v. Hexter, 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 496.

The owner of a judgment against two partners, applied for an execution, by collusion with one of them, upon the property of the other partner, contrary to the equities between the partners. The execution was stayed until a bill of equity could be filed to determine the rights of the parties. Sawin v. Mount Vernon Bank, 2 R. I. 382.

Where judgments had been obtained by two persons against a railroad company, and twenty or more suits against the same property were pending, but judgments had not been reached, but would be reached in a few days, the court temporarily stayed the executions on the first two judgments until the other claims were reduced to judgment, in order to prevent a sacrifice of the railroad company's interests, and to avoid numerous sales under different executions, and to be clear of complications of titles that would result from a sale. Eaton v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 421.

It is the equitable control which courts are authorized to exercise over the parties and proceedings in causes before such courts and to promote equity and to prevent injustice, which allows the granting of stays. It is difficult to perceive why a stay of execution on a judgment should not be granted for a brief period until judgment has been obtained by the defendant in a cross-action, so as to enable him to make an offset. Knox v. Hexter, 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 496.

Upon a motion for a stay the court held that as there were so many parties interested, and as the facts were so complex that justice could not be done to all concerned, there should be a stay for three months in order that all parties might apply to a court of chancery for relief. Lansing v. Orcott, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 4.

Upon proof that a sale is about to be made, under an execution, in an irregular manner, contrary to the statutory provisions, the court will order a stay. Robinson v. Yon, 8 Fla. 350; Robinson v. Chesseldine, 5 Ill. 332.

An agreement was made between a plaintiff and the judgment debtor, by which the latter gave additional security, and in consideration thereof was to be allowed further time in which to make payment. The plaintiff violated this agreement by issuing an execution before the time had expired. The court stayed the execution until the plaintiff did justice by carrying out his agreement. Harrison v. Soles, 6 Pa. St. 397.

The defendants were the owners of a piece of ground 25 feet front by 100 feet deep, which was entirely covered by a brick building. The execution and levy did not embrace the whole house, but omitted almost four feet in width the entire length of the house. The court said that a ruinous sacrifice would attend a sale made in this manner, and would not allow its process to be abused in that way, and therefore ordered a correction to be made so as to embrace the entire lot. Phillips v. Evans, 64 Mo. 24.

If the plaintiffs include in the bill of costs items to which they are not entitled, the remedy of the defendants is to move to retax the costs and to strike out the objectionable items, and the court under its general power over its own process and writs could order a stay of execution until such motion could be heard and determined. Meeker v. Harris, 23 Cal. 285.

The court in an equitable action on adjudging that the plaintiff is the owner of a fund in dispute, may stay the execution of the judgment for a specified period to afford the defendant an opportunity of establishing by legal proceedings a claim of the defendant against the plaintiff for money alleged to have been received from him. Markey v. Markey, 13 N. Y. Supp. 925.

When a judgment is rendered on a lost instrument, it is the duty of the court in Tennessee to stay execution on the judgment until the plaintiff files a bond of indemnity for the benefit of the defendant. Lowry v. Medlin, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 450.

The plaintiff in an action against the defendant obtained a judgment, which on appeal by the defendant was affirmed. Before the appeal was heard the defendant preferred an indictment against two of the plaintiff's witnesses for perjury in the trial of the case, and moved for a stay of execution until the trial of the indictment. The motion was denied, and Lord Ellenborough said that it would be highly dangerous to grant it; "for," said he, "this would be a receipt to every person after verdict and judgment against him how to delay the fruit of such judgment by indicting some of the plaintiff's witnesses for perjury." Warwick v. Bruce, 4 M. & S. 140.

In Chitty's General Practice, vol. 1, p. 667, it is said: "The court will sometimes even stay execution in an action till judgment had been obtained by the defendant therein, i. e. a cross-action, so as to enable the latter to obtain a set-off." Referring to this, it is said in Knox v. Hexter, 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 505, that if no possible injury results to the parties by a stay of proceedings, it seems difficult to perceive why a stay of execution on a judgment for a brief period should not be granted, until a judgment has the defendant has an action pending against him ;¹ but the stay will not be granted where the second action is in tort.² Orders granting temporary stays of execution, being discretionary, are not ordinarily appealable, but if they are unreasonably and been obtained by the defendant in a cross-action to enable him to make an offset.

Stay of Execution. STAY OF PROCEEDINGS. Stay by Order of Court.

If an execution has issued irregularly and informally, the most speedy and easiest mode to obtain relief is to apply to a judge to stop all proceedings on it until an application can be made to the circuit court to arrest or vacate the proceedings of the sheriff. Greenup v. Brown, 1 Ill. 252.

Although the affidavit of the defendant in execution alone may be sufficient ground for an order in vacation for a stay of execution, yet when the motion to quash comes up for final hearing, such affidavit is not, if unsupported, sufficient to warrant the court in calling back its process. Keefer v. Mason, 36 Ill. 406.

Upon an application to a judge in vacation to obtain a stay of execution, the proper mode of proceeding is by summons in the nature of a rule nisi fixing a day for hearing, which should be served on the opposite party, and without this be shown, the judge ought not to interpose his power unless the order applied for is a matter of course. Com. v. Magee, 8 Pa. St. 240; 44 Am. Dec. 509.

Execution may issue before the termination of a conditional stay where there is breach of the condition. Holmes v. Delabourdine, 1 Browne (Pa.) 130; Kaylor v. Holloway, 5 Phila. (Pa.) 530.

The execution of an order remanding a cause for further proceedings upon the reversal of a judgment of an inferior court, may be stayed by the court in which the petition in error is filed to reverse the judgment of reversal, or by a judge thereof, as provided by § 22, ch. 1, art. 4 of the act of May 14, 1878.

An order staying the execution of a judgment on final order, as provided for in said section, will only be granted on good cause shown, and the mere pendency of a petition in error to reverse the judgment of reversal is not a sufficient ground for an order granting such stay. Texas B'ld'g Assoc. No. 2 v. Aurora F. & M. Ins. Co., 34 Ohio St. 291.

Obtaining an order permitting the filing of a complaint nunc pro tunc is a violation of a stay of proceedings granted upon an order to show cause why judgment should not be vacated because entered without a complaint. Wards v. Sands, 10 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 60.

A stay of proceedings upon judgment of foreclosure pending appeal to the general term, is discretionary and plaintiff is not entitled as a matter of right to a deficiency undertaking. Where the foreclosure is upon leasehold premises and there is a receivership for application of the rents, the discretion granting a stay was fairly exercised. Wilson v. Grant, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 350.

Notice that a motion will be made to set aside an execution is not a stay of proceedings, but an order to that effect must be obtained to prevent the sale. Bryan v. Berry, 8 Cal. 130.

The execution of a judgment cannot be suspended on a rule to show cause. A suspensive appeal will not lie from a judgment dismissing such a rule. Wiley v. Woodman, 19 La. Ann. 210.

A prior general attachment may be a just reason for suspension of a levy on land under an execution against one of the defendants in attachment. Wadsworth v. Williams, 97 Mass. 339.

1. "It appears that the defendant in this suit has a suit pending against the plaintiff, and the motion is for a stay of execution in this case until the other can be decided. In the circumstances it being represented that the plaintiff is insolvent, we think the motion should be granted." Potter, J., in Steere v. Stafford, 12 R. I. 131; Knox v. Hexter, 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 496.

But the alleged indebtedness of the plaintiff in an execution to the defendant, together with the plaintiff's insolvency, is no ground for an indefinite stay of execution, if security to the amount of the execution is offered by the plaintiff. Patterson v. Patterson, 27 Pa. St. 40.

2. A judgment against A was assigned to B to secure money lent to A, and which A covenanted by articles of capriciously made, the appellate court will sometimes review them.¹

3. Stay by Agreement of the Parties.—A stay of execution upon a judgment is frequently agreed upon between the parties to an action, the stay to be effective for a certain period. Such an agreement may be incorporated into the judgment, or may be a matter of record upon the court docket, or may be made privately between the parties. In either case the court will prevent any use of its process intended to violate the stay.²

agreement to repay on a certain day. The court refused to stay execution upon this judgment to give A time to obtain a verdict against B for damages in consequence of tortious acts by him in breach of his covenants in the same articles, though it seems they would if A's claim was for money paid, or any other accounts susceptible of liquidation. Dunlop v. Speer, 3 Binn. (Pa.) 168.

1. Livermore v. Hodgkins, 54 Cal. 637; Granger v. Craig, 85 N. Y. 619.

2. The safest practice is to have the provision for a stay incorporated into the judgment, as in this way no controversy can arise as to the validity of an agreement to stay, which requires all the elements of a valid contract. In a case in which the plaintiff agreed to a stay of execution for six months, there being no consideration therefor, the agreement was invalid and the court held that the judgment was operative during the time in which it was agreed that it should be stayed. Leverich v. Bates, 6 Ala. 480, as stated in Sanford v. Ogden, 34 Ala. 118.

An undertaking for a stay, executed after the time allowed by law, in pursuance of an agreement of the parties, is valid as a common law contract, if supported by a sufficient consideration, although not effective as a statutory undertaking. Boling v. Young, 38 Ohio St. 135.

A statement in a judgment as follows: "The attorney of the plaintiff in this suit declares he has been instructed not to seize or sell the said property before the end of the year," was held in Louisiana to operate as a stay of execution, as it formed part of the judgment and was as authoritative as any other recital in it. Townsend v. Fontenot, 42 La. Ann. 890.

An agreement was made by which the defendant in the judgment was to give additional security and was to be allowed further time for settlement.

The plaintiff violated this by issuing an execution which the court stayed until the plaintiff did justice by performing his agreement. Harrison v. Soles, 6 Pa. St. 397.

An execution issued in violation of an agreement that it should not be issued except upon a certain contingency which had not occurred, will be set aside. Feagley v. Norbeck, 127 Pa. St. 238.

If at the time a judgment is obtained the parties agree that an execution shall not issue for a certain time, which is duly entered of record, the time within which a plaintiff can take out his execution is extended twelve months and a day from the termination of the specified time, and no execution can regularly issue in the meantime except by order of the court. When a judgment is confessed upon terms which are duly entered, it is in effect a conditional judgment and the court will take notice of the terms and enforce them. Wood v. Bagley, 12 Ired. (N. Car.) 83.

Where a judgment is entered against a defendant to be released on his performance of a certain act, and he neglects to perform that act within a reasonable time, the plaintiff may take out execution without applying to the court, but the court will interfere in a summary way should it be necessary to prevent injustice and enforce the terms on which the judgment was entered. Under such circumstances the defendant cannot object that a year and a day have elapsed since the entry of judgment and that no scire facias has been issued. Miller v. Milford, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 35.

If execution is stayed by the agreement of the parties, the year and a day runs only from the time when such stay expires, and this whether there is an entry of cesset on the record or it is a matter of private agreement out of court. The court will

4. Statutory Stays—a. CONSTRUCTION OF STATUTES.—A stay of execution is a privilege in derogation of the common law rights of the plaintiff, and the party claiming the privilege must bring himself strictly within the statute granting it.¹ An undertake notice of such an agreement though not on record. Dunlop v. Speer, 3 Binn. (Pa.) 169.

Under the Maryland act of 1778, ch. 21, no agreement for the stay of execution on a judgment which is not entered on the docket at the time the judgment is rendered, can make it unnecessary to issue a scire facias to revive the judgment when a year and a day has passed from the time such judgment was rendered. Salmon v. Yates, 1 Har. & J. (Md.) 488.

Where an execution, upon a release of errors, was agreed to be stayed until a subsequent time unless the defendant consented for its issue sooner, and it was issued without any regard to the agreement and property sold, on motion for an appropriation of the money to the satisfaction of a junior judgment, it was held that the presumption must be that the execution issued with the consent of the defendants. Jones v. Bailey, 5 How. (Miss.) 564.

Attorney's Authority.—An attorney at law has no right without special authority to that effect to destroy his client's lien by stay of execution. Where an attorney at law has stayed his client's execution and the marshal has so returned it, it will not be presumed that the attorney had special power to stay it. He who so maintains, must show it by other proof. Doe v. Ingersoll, 11 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 249; 49 Am. Dec. 57.

1. Erie City Bank v. Compton, 27 Pa. St. 195; The Roanoke, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 390; Pratt v. Western Stage Co., 26 Iowa 241. An undertaking for a stay before a justice of the peace, executed after the time allowed by law, by agreement between the parties is valid as a common-law contract if supported by a sufficient consideration, although not effective as a statutory undertaking to stay execution. Boling v. Young, 38 Ohio St. 135; Duckwall v. Rogers, 15 Ohio St. 544.

See State v. Finn, 19 Mo. App. 557; Gawtry v. Adams, 10 Mo. App. 30; Vincennes Nat. Bank v. Cockrum, 80 Ind. 355; Robinson v. Narber, 65 Pa. St. 85.

A judgment entered for $145 but stayed for $80 does not bind the stayor. To become stayor is to confess judgment. The judgment confessed by the stayor cannot be for a less amount than the judgment against the original defendant. Smith v. Martin, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 272. See also Skinner v. Jayne, 24 Miss. 567. The judgment cannot be stayed by halves. Vincennes Nat. Bank v. Cockrum, 80 Ind. 361; Sterne v. McKinney, 79 Ind. 578.

In Wilson v. Davis, 1 Mich. 156, security was given in the nature of a supersedeas to stay an execution upon a confessed judgment. The judgment not being upon a written confession was void, and the court held that no action could be maintained upon the undertaking to stay it, as there was no consideration for the undertaking to stay execution upon a void judgment.

In Shadbolt v. Bronson, 1 Mich. 85, a judgment was stayed for six months, instead of three months, as the statute required. This could not operate as a stay of the execution, and being insufficient for that purpose must be held to be entirely inoperative and void. It cannot be said to be good for the purpose of rendering the person who executed it liable to an execution if the judgment was not paid, and yet ineffectual to stay the issuing of such execution.

An appeal bond on which no recovery can be had by the obligee cannot operate to stay execution; hence where an appeal bond was conditioned to prosecute an appeal to the "county court for Anne Arundel county," there being at the time the bond was executed no such court in existence, the bond was void and an execution might issue. Tucker v. State, 11 Md. 331.

Under the Indiana statutes a defendant may have a stay of execution by entering a replevin bail on the docket of the justice of the peace issuing the execution. It is only by this provision of the statute that a judgment can be replevied, and the mode prescribed by the statute must be strictly followed. Hence, as the statute says, "entering the bail on the docket," this requirement is not satisfied by writing taking to stay execution on one half of a judgment is invalid.¹ The time within which the stay may be taken is a vital provision of the statute and courts have no equitable power to change it.² The time during which the stay may continue is computed from the rendition of the judgment;³ but the stay bond binds the property of the surety only from the date of its execution.⁴ A an undertaking on a separate piece of paper or attaching it to the docket by pinning it to it. Lockwood v. Dills, 74 Ind. 56, citing McCormick v. Cassell, 16 Ind. 408.

The Nebraska code gives the right to the debtor to stay execution by adopting the proceedings mentioned in the code, but if these fail in any respect to conform to the code, the court may permit an amendment. A bond was signed by one surety instead of two, as required by the code; the plaintiff demanded execution on the judgment on account of this defect, but the court refused to grant it because the defendant moved to amend the bond by adding an additional surety, which the court allowed. State v. Russell, 17 Neb. 201.

A bond intended to be a supersedeas bond, and regarded as such by all parties, did not contain a certain condition required by the statute in such cases. The court held that the bond did not lawfully operate to supersede the judgment. Gill v. Sullivan, 62 Iowa 529.

1. A written undertaking entered upon the back of an execution to pay one half of a judgment upon which the execution issued, is invalid as a recognition of replevin bail and does not authorize an execution to issue upon such undertaking. Vincennes Nat. Bank v. Cockrum, 80 Ind. 355; Vincennes Nat. Bank v. Hargrove, 80 Ind. 364.

2. In Sage v. Central R. Co., 83 U. S. 412, the court, by Waite, C. J., said: "A supersedeas is a statutory remedy. It is only obtained by a strict compliance with all the required conditions, none of which can be dispensed with. Hogan v. Ross, 11 How. (U. S.) 297; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Harris, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 575. Time is an essential element in the proceeding, and one which neither the court nor the judges can disregard. If a delay beyond the limited time occurs, the right to the remedy is gone, and the successful party holds his judgment or decree freed and discharged from this means of staying proceedings for its collection or enforcement. This is a right which he has acquired and of which he cannot be deprived without due process of law. While the court may enter an order in a cause nunc pro tunc, where the action asked for has been delayed by or for the convenience of the court, it is never done where the parties themselves have been at fault or where it will work injustice. To make an order nunc pro tunc effectual for purposes of a supersedeas it must appear that the delay was the act of the court, and not of the parties, and that injustice will not be done."

Where an appeal was taken in a common-law case instead of a writ of error, and after the lapse of ten days the plaintiff issued an execution upon his judgment, and the defendant then sued out a writ of error to bring the case up to the supreme court, it was error in the court below to quash the execution and supersede the judgment. The appeal did not remove the case, and the writ of error was sued out too late to stay the execution. It is immaterial whether it was a mistake of the party or the court. There is no equitable power in the court to stay execution on the ground that a mistake as to the time or manner of removing the case was committed. The tribunals of the United States are not authorized to dispense with the express provisions of the act of Congress regulating appeals upon any equitable ground. Saltmarsh v. Tuthill, 12 How. (U. S.) 387.

The Pennsylvania statute required as a condition that bail should be entered within thirty days from the rendition of the judgment. A judgment was entered on February 23, 1856, and the bail was not entered until March 26, 1856. It was held that this was too late, and that the court below was in error in setting aside the execution. Erie City Bank v. Compton, 27 Pa. St. 195.

3. Okey v. Sigler, 82 Iowa 94.

4. Hayden v. Anderson, 57 Ga. 378.

valid undertaking to stay execution is in effect a confession of a new judgment by the surety, and, as a rule, final process may issue thereon at the expiration of the stay.¹ And where the undertaking is insufficient, for want of strict compliance with the statutory provisions, yet the surety may be bound by it as a common law bond if a stay is actually had, or there is other consideration to support the bond.² Where a stayor is obliged to pay the amount of the judgment in order to prevent the seiz-

1. The effect of a recognizance of replevin bail for the stay of execution upon a judgment, is that of a judgment confessed by the recognizor for the amount of the judgment with interest thereon and costs accrued and to accrue. Such a recognizance is of statutory origin, being unknown at common law. Vincennes Nat. Bank v. Cockrum, 64 Ind. 229.

The stay of execution is in effect a confession of judgment, and the stayor is liable under the law applicable to such judgment and not otherwise. It cannot be for a part of the debt only, or for a greater or less term than that limited by law, or otherwise varied from the general rule. A conventional stay of execution which varies from the general law is a mere contract, and not the final or conclusive judgment which the law contemplates. So, where a stayor consented to stay the whole debt for a shorter period than the eight months allowed by law, he incurred the obligation of stayor, but no execution can be issued against him until the full period of eight months has elapsed. Roberts v. Cross, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 233.

It seems clear from the authorities that it is within the power of the legislature to provide that the execution of a bond to stay a judgment shall be taken as the confession of a new judgment upon which final process may issue at the end of the stay without further inquiry. McGlothlin v. Madden, 16 Kan. 466; Lusk v. Ramsey, 3 Munf. (Va.) 417; Bank of U. S. v. Patton, 5 How. (Miss.) 200; 35 Am. Dec. 428; Brown v. Clarke, 4 How. (U. S.) 4; Cavender v. Smith, 5 Iowa 157; Rickman v. Williams, 10 Ired. (N. Car.) 126; Murray v. Edmonston, 6 Jones (N. Car.) 515; Williams v. Hall, 2 Dana (Ky.) 97; Roberts v. Cross, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 235; Hennegar v. Mee, 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 33; Morgan v. Coleman, 3 Head (Tenn.) 352; Robinson v. Yon, 8 Fla. 350.

2. An undertaking for stay of execution of a judgment on the docket of a justice of the peace, executed after the time allowed by law in pursuance of an agreement of the parties, is valid as a common law contract if supported by a sufficient consideration, though it may not be effective as a statutory undertaking. Boling v. Young, 38 Ohio St. 135.

The release of a levy and further delay of execution on the judgment for the period fixed by the statute, is a sufficient consideration for such undertaking. Duckwall v. Rogers, 15 Ohio St. 544.

To operate as a strictly statutory stay of execution; the undertaking must be given within the time limited by law. But a stay may be effected afterwards by agreement of the parties upon a sufficient consideration. If by agreement the undertaking is given afterwards and the stay is thereby obtained, the defendant having received the benefits of the contract will not be permitted to repudiate the obligation thereby assumed. Cameron v. Sandwich Mfg. Co., 6 Neb. 444.

Security entered for a stay of execution under the Pennsylvania act of June 16, 1836, must in all cases be approved of by the court in which the judgment was obtained or by a judge thereof. And unless it so appear upon the record, execution may issue. Eichman v. Belvidere Bank, 3 Whart. (Pa.) 67.

In Stroop v. Gross, 1 W. & S. (Pa.) 139, the court said: "But the approbation of the court being designed for the advantage of the creditor, he may waive, either expressly or impliedly, by an acquiescence in the claim of the debtor to it, the benefit of the cesset. But this privilege is not extended to the debtor, for it would be against common justice that he should take advantage of the defect which has arisen upon his own default after he has, by the forbearance

ure and sale of his own property, he may be subrogated to the rights of the plaintiff and have execution against the property of the defendant.¹ A stayor may be discharged by the bad faith of the judgment creditor,² but not, it seems, by his failure to take out execution in time to seize the property of the judgment debtor.³

It has been held that no stay of execution can be claimed upon a judgment in an action of debt on a judgment of another state.⁴ But upon a judgment on a recognizance to obtain a stay of execution, a defendant is entitled to a stay of execution.⁵

b. RIGHT OF APPEAL AFTER TAKING STAY.—It seems that a defendant may avail himself of his right to a statutory stay of or with the assent of the creditor, derived every benefit which would have resulted from a recognizance executed and approved with all the formalities required by the act. Nor can we perceive that the bail, who has identified himself with his principal, is in any better situation than the principal himself whose duty it was to perfect the recognizance."

1. A stayor compelled to pay an execution on a judgment for the amount of a note secured by an express lien on land, is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the vendor in the enforcement of the lien. And if the proceeds of the sale are not sufficient to satisfy all the notes given for the land, he may receive a share pro rata. Ellis v. Roscoe, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 418.

Where, upon a judgment against several, all of whom appear as principals, a party becomes replevin bail at the request of some of the judgment defendants, without notice that one not making the request is, in fact, surety for the others, he may, if compelled to pay the judgment, have execution against all the judgment defendants, under Indiana Rev. Stat., 1881, § 1214, and the one who is in fact surety is equally liable thereto with the others. Reissner v. Dessar, 80 Ind. 307.

2. A stayor will be discharged if prior execution was levied on property of the principal sufficient to pay the debt and abandoned without his consent. Holt v. Manier, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 488; so he will be released when, by the active interference of the creditor, the burden of the debt has been shifted from the property of the principal, after a specific lien has been fixed thereon, so as to throw it onto the surety. Watson v. Reed, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 49.

3. The stayor who fails to pay the debt and take judgment over against his principal, is not discharged from liability by the plaintiff's failure to issue execution against the principal in time, although the stayor pointed out property for that purpose. Anderson v. Lithgo, 5 Baxt. (Tenn.) 603.

4. Sloat v. Prentice (Pa.), 2 Am. L. Reg. 446.

5. The Pennsylvania court said: "The argument that the creditor might be indefinitely delayed by consecutive stays of execution is entitled to but one answer: the contingency is scarcely within the range of possibility, nor, in point of reason, does the bail stand in the place of a defendant who has already had his indulgence. He engages that another with whom he has had no connection in the course of the action, and with whom he has no personal connection but what results from relation of principal and bail, shall do one of two specific acts, and his engagement has all the freshness of an original one; why, therefore, should it not have its incidents? He expressly waives none of them, and there is no reason to suppose he does so implicitly. It is not his act, but the act of the law, that is to delay the creditor, for the law which sanctions it as the defendant's privilege, makes the act its own, and as he deprives the plaintiff of no legal advantage he is not supposed to relinquish any. He stands in the peculiar attitude of a surety against whom there is to be no equitable interpretation, because, having contracted gratuitously, he is supposed to have contracted only on the conditions expressly stated; and here there was no condition that he should execution without forfeiting his right to have the case reviewed on appeal or writ of error,¹ unless the exercise of both these rights in one cause is expressly² or impliedly³ prohibited by statute.

c. WAIVER OF RIGHT TO STAY BY CONTRACT.—It has been waive any incidental advantage. I take it, therefore, that the defendant was entitled to a stay of execution by the spirit as well as the letter of the act." Wolfe v. Nesbit, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 312, overruling Gorgas v. Zeop, 2 Miles (Pa.) 101.

1. In Gardipie v. Lessard, 9 Wis. 200, it is said: "It will be seen that the only question raised is whether the defendant by procuring execution to be stayed in the justice's court thereby waived or was estopped from exercising his right of appeal. The right of appeal is conferred by the statute, and if exercised within the time and in the manner prescribed is absolute. It is a right which is favored by the courts, and we are of opinion that the staying of execution should not be regarded as a waiver of it. The act of staying execution by no means implies that the party does not intend to appeal. . . . In New York it has been held that the paying or settling of a judgment before a justice of the peace would not prevent the bringing of a certiorari to reverse it. Clark v. Ostrander, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 437. If payment of the judgment would not preclude a party from proceeding to reverse it, it would seem that the staying of execution ought not to do so."

In Nealy v. Sexton, Wright (Ohio) 314, it was held that taking a stay of execution under the statute did not affect the right to appeal, and that a party against whom there is a judgment may stay execution and appeal also.

In Russell v. Giles, 31 Ohio St. 293, it was held, following Nealy v. Sexton, supra, that the act of entering bail for a stay of execution was not a satisfaction or affirmance of the judgment, or a release of errors. Welch, C. J., said: "If the defendant during the ten days allowed for appeal may stay execution without waiving his right of appeal, it would seem to follow that he may during the three years allowed for proceedings in error stay execution without waiving his right to such proceedings in error." To the same effect is White v. Blum, 4 Neb. 555.

2. In Miller v. Hyers, 2 Brown (Neb.) 474; Sullivan Sav. Inst. v. Clark, 12 Neb. 578; Banks v. Hitchcock, 20 Neb. 315, it was held, construing § 5 of an act approved Feb. 3, 1875, p. 50, Laws of '75, that no appeal could be taken after taking stay of execution.

In Seacrest v. Newman, 19 Iowa 323, it was said that the right of appeal after taking the benefit of the stay law was cut off by § 3294 of the Revision of the Laws of Iowa.

3. In People v. Judges, 1 Mich. 134, it was held that a defendant who had taken a statutory stay of execution might not afterwards appeal. Wing, J., said: "The relator by entering stay of execution in effect admitted that the judgment was right and the debt honestly due to the respondent. He has entered into a formal written engagement, together with his surety, that the debt shall be paid within a specified time. By this act a new party is added to the judgment, and by it, and as a compensation to the respondent for the indulgence granted the relator, additional security is acquired for the payment of the debt. The respondent had no power to control the choice of the relator, but when once a choice is made and security is given, it becomes like a recognizance, a solemn undertaking, a statutory judgment acknowledged to the respondent who is a party to it, and without whose consent it cannot be annulled." The court distinguished between the case at bar and the case of Nealy v. Sexton, Wright (Ohio) 314, saying: "By the laws of Ohio the judgment creditor might issue execution the moment judgment was rendered. By the 77th section of our act this is prohibited, except in one case, until the expiration of five days; so that there is not the same necessity for giving stay to get time for reflection with us as in Ohio. Again, in Ohio the surety for a stay of execution enters into a recognizance, and if the debt is not paid by the time specified in the recognizance, execution does not issue against the principal and surety as with us, but decided that a waiver of stay laws or appraisement and exemption laws gives the plaintiff no right to have such contractual provision incorporated into a judgment.¹ But a law giving a stay of execution, notwithstanding a waiver of the same by express contract, is unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contracts.²

d. STAY LAWS—CONSTITUTIONALITY OF.—At several periods of financial distress, the legislatures of many of the states have passed laws providing for stay of execution and foreclosure proceedings for a time, in order to prevent hardship and save debtors from financial ruin. During the war of 1812 between Great Britain and the United States such statutes made their appearance in this country,³ and during the late civil war many of the Southern and some of the Northern States enacted similar statutes to encourage volunteers to enlist in their respective armies.

Strong as may be the arguments in favor of such laws on the grounds of humanity and public policy, most of them have fallen under the inhibition in the Federal Constitution against laws which violate the obligation of contracts. It is true that such laws appear to affect a remedy rather than a right, and that the courts have made a distinction in that regard, holding that where a substantial remedy remains or is provided, a law which changes suit must be brought on the recognition, as in other cases." The logic of this case is criticized by the reporter in a note.

1. Develin v. Wood, 2 Ind. 102; McLane v. Elmer, 4 Ind. 239. The court said, that "courts of law, as a general rule, do not enforce the specific performance of agreements, unless specially authorized to do so by statute, but award damages for the breach of agreements." In these cases, which were actions on promissory notes, the defendants had expressly waived in the notes all benefit of stay of execution or appraisement or valuation laws.

Parties regulate their own conduct by their stipulations, but they cannot prescribe rules of proceeding for public officers nor demand that the courts of justice shall depart from the usual modes of enforcing their decrees. If before judgment the creditor may stipulate the manner in which the same shall be executed, the principle will sanction an endless variety of modes of execution of judgment; and, indeed, the parties may waive all formalities and all delays and may even consent that some other person than the sheriff shall sell the property of the debtor and execute the decree of the court. And if a decree giving effect to such a contract be legal, then also the sale under it will be legal, and other creditors may find themselves deprived of their common pledge without notice. Levicks v. Walker, 15 La. Ann. 245; 77 Am. Dec. 187.

2. Where a judgment note contained a waiver of stay of execution, and when due an attachment in execution was issued thereon, it was held error to stay the writ on the ground that the defendant was at the time a soldier and in military service. Thompson, J., said: "Treating this attachment execution for the present as an execution within the meaning of the Pennsylvania act of May 21, 1861, this case is directly ruled by Billmeyer v. Evans, 40 Pa. St. 324. In the case in hand, as in that, a stay of execution was expressly waived. Without the waiver, the parties signing the note would have been entitled to a stay on the judgment entered on the note of six months. We held in the case cited that the proviso to the first section of the act allowing the stay in favor of a soldier, notwithstanding a waiver, was unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of the contract. The case is directly in point and rules this one. The stay ordered was wrong and the order must be reversed." Lewis v. Lewis, 47 Pa. St. 127.

3. Jones v. Crittenden, 1 Car. L.

or modifies a remedy existing at the time of the making of the contract is not on that account obnoxious to the constitution. The question presented in these cases has, therefore, been, whether or not a substantial remedy was left to the creditor for the collection of the debt due him. The general rule is that where a statute authorizes a stay of execution for an indefinite or unreasonable time on judgments rendered on contracts made before its passage, it is unconstitutional and void as taking away all remedy during the stay.¹ But where the statute is designed to stay execution of such judgments only as are rendered on contracts made after the passage of the act, it may be upheld on the

Rep. (N. Car.) 385; 6 Am. Dec. 531; Johnson v. Duncan, 3 Martin (La.) 530; 6 Am. Dec. 675.

1. Hudspeth v. Davis, 41 Ala. 389; Ex parte Pollard, 40 Ala. 77; Johnson v. Duncan, 3 Martin (La.) 530; 6 Am. Dec. 675; Barnes v. Barnes, 8 Jones (N. Car.) 366; Jacobs v. Smallwood, 63 N. Car. 112; Miller v. Gibson, 63 N. Car. 635; Dormire v. Cogly, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 177; Strong v. Daniel, 5 Ind. 348; Gentry v. Baily, 1 Mo. 164; 13 Am. Dec. 484; Brown v. Ward, 1 Mo. 209; Bumgardner v. Circuit Court, 4 Mo. 50; Stevens v. Andrews, 31 Mo. 205; Bunn v. Gorgas, 41 Pa. St. 441; Lapsley v. Brashears, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 47; Pool v. Young, 7 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 588; Grayson v. Lilly, 7 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 10; Stephenson v. Barnett, 7 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 50; Hasbrouck v. Shipman, 16 Wis. 296; State v. Carew, 13 Rich. (S. Car.) 506; Garlington v. Priest, 13 Fla. 559; Webster v. Rose, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 93; 18 Am. Rep. 583; Townsend v. Townsend, Peck (Tenn.) 1; Taylor v. Stearns, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 244; Coffman v. Bank of Kentucky, 40 Miss. 30; 90 Am. Dec. 311; Sequestration Cases, 30 Tex. 688; Jones v. McMahan, 30 Tex. 720; Aycock v. Martin, 37 Ga. 124; Cutts v. Hardee, 38 Ga. 350; People v. Hays, 4 Cal. 127; Banks v. Quackenbush, 1 N. Y. 129; Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. (U. S.) 317; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595.

In Johnson v. Duncan, 3 Martin (La.) 530; 6 Am. Dec. 675, the court said: "The obligation of contracts consists in the necessity under which a man finds himself to do, or to refrain from doing, something. This obligation exists generally both in foro legis and in foro conscientiae; though it does at times exist in one of these only. It is certainly of the first, that in foro legis, which the framers of the constitution spoke when they prohibited the passage of any law impairing the obligation of contracts. Now a law absolutely recalling the power which the creditor enjoys of compelling his debtor in foro legis to perform the obligation of the contract would be a law destroying the obligation of the contract in foro legis, since a right without legal remedy ceases to be a legal right. It would impair the obligation of the contract by destroying its legal obligation; in other words, by reducing an obligation both in foro legis and in foro conscientiae to an obligation in foro conscientiae only; a legal and moral right to a moral right only. The remedy in foro legis constituting the legal right of the creditor constitutes also its correlative, the legal duty or obligation of the debtor; and a law which reduces a legal to a moral obligation is one which in foro legis destroys the obligation. It appears, therefore, to me incorrect to say that the legislature may effectually do as to the remedy or effect of the obligation that which it cannot do as to the right; and I conclude that a law destroying or impairing the remedy is as unconstitutional as one affecting the right in the same manner, for in foro legis the effects of both laws must be the same. Likewise, procrastinating the remedy, generally speaking, destroys part of the right. He pays less who pays later. Minus solvit qui serius solvit. Neither is the procrastination properly compensated by the allowance of interest in the meanwhile. To many men in many circumstances there is a wide difference between $100 payable to-day and $106 payable in a twelve-month, whatever may be the certainty that no disappointment will occur; and in many cases the delay is likely to be ground that the law in force at the time of making the contract is supposed to be in the contemplation of the parties, and is a part of the considerations and conditions upon which the con-productive of considerable danger to the solvability of the debtor. I, therefore, find no difficulty in concluding that an act of the state legislature, the obvious object of which is to relieve debtors by postponing their recovery, and consequently, the payment of debts impairs the obligation of contracts, and as such is unconstitutional."

In Webster v. Rose, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 93, overruling Farnsworth v. Vance, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 108, and approving Townsend v. Townsend, Peck (Tenn.) 1, the court, after referring to the statement in Farnsworth v. Vance, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 108, that the legislature may in their discretion vary the extent and nature of the remedy so that always some substantive remedy in fact be left, said: "We think, perhaps, the true principle is more properly stated thus: that the legislature have complete control over the form of the remedy, the mode of proceeding by which the legal obligation is enforced, and in all that pertains to this may alter, change, or modify its laws as discretion may dictate. If the legislature can enlarge the time one day in which the party is to perform what the legal obligation of his contract requires at the time it is entered into, it may do it for a hundred days, and if for this period, it may equally well do it for a hundred years. There can be no difference in principle in the one case from that of the other, and thus the legal obligation is not only impaired, but practically destroyed. Can this tremendous power be fairly held to lurk within the principle of legislative power over the remedy for enforcement of a contract? We think not."

The above cases seem to indicate that no statute will be valid which grants a stay of execution on a judgment recovered on a contract made prior to the passage of the act. Many courts have modified the rule by sustaining statutes which provide for a stay for a reasonable time. See Chadwick v. Moore, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 50.

The courts have sustained if possible such statutes passed in time of war, where they did not provide for an indefinite stay of execution. Breitenbach v. Bush, 44 Pa. St. 313; 84 Am.

Dec. 442; Coxe v. Martin, 44 Pa. St. 322.

In Bunn v. Gorgas, 41 Pa. St. 441, an act of the Pennsylvania legislature of May 21, 1861, which directed the courts to grant a stay of execution against a defendant on proof of an agreement in writing to that effect by a majority of his creditors, whose demands exceeded two-thirds of defendant's indebtedness, was held in violation of that portion of the state and national constitutions which protects the inviolability of contracts. The court said: "Though addressed to the remedy, it touches the contract in a most vital point and impairs its obligation as directly as if it annihilated it. It was this circumstance, the unlimited duration of the possible stay, that led to the condemnation of the Illinois statute in McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. (U. S.) 608, and it was the absence of this feature from our Stay Law of 1842 that rescued it in Chadwick v. Moore, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 50. Gibson, C. J., put his opinion in that case on this very distinction. He speaks of the act of 1842 as prohibiting for a time sheriffs' sales of property for less than two-thirds of the appraised value, and says, very pointedly, if the prohibition of execution were perpetual he would not hesitate to pronounce the act unconstitutional." See also McCormick v. Rusch, 15 Iowa 127; 83 Am. Dec. 401; Johnson v. Duncan, 3 Martin (La.) 530; 6 Am. Dec. 675; Hasbrouck v. Shipman, 16 Wis. 296; Clark v. Martin, 49 Pa. St. 299.

In Breitenbach v. Bush, 44 Pa. St. 313 and Coxe v. Martin, 44 Pa. St. 222, it was held that an act staying all civil process against volunteers who had enlisted in the national service for three years or during the war was valid; during the war being construed to mean unless the war should sooner terminate. But a general law that all suits pending should be continued until peace between the Confederate States and the United States was held void. Burt v. Williams, 24 Ark. 94. See also Taylor v. Stearns, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 244; Hudspeth v. Davis, 41 Ala. 389; Aycock v. Martin, 37 Ga. 124; Coffman v. Bank of Kentucky, 40 Miss.

tract is made. In such case the statute violates no obligation of the contract.¹ It has been held that a statute authorizing a stay of execution of judgments obtained on contracts in which the debtor had waived the right to a stay was unconstitutional.²

5. Effect of Stay—a. SUSPENSIVE EFFECT UPON JUDGMENT.—A stay of execution does not vacate the judgment upon which the execution issued,³ nor discharge the debt,⁴ but merely suspends the execution. It does not, like a reversal, annul the judgment, but only suspends its efficacy. Its object and effect are to stay further proceedings and not to undo what has already been done. It has no retroactive operation, so as to deprive the judgment of its force and authority from the beginning, but only suspends them while it is itself effectual.⁵

b*. EXECUTION PENDING STAY.—An execution issued during the period of a stay is wholly irregular and will be set aside upon motion. Whatever is done under a judgment pending a stay, should be set aside.⁶ But a sale made under an execution pend-

29; Jacobs v. Smallwood, 63 N. Car. 112; Cutts v. Hardee, 38 Ga. 350; Sequestration Cases, 30 Tex. 688.

A law suspending the jurisdiction of the courts from May 24, '61, to January 1, '62, was held valid in Johnson v. Higgins, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 566, on the ground that the law related not to the remedy for enforcing the contract, but to the courts which administered the remedy.

1. Barry v. Iseman, 14 Rich. (S. Car.) 129; 91 Am. Dec. 262; Wardlaw v. Buzzard, 15 Rich. (S. Car.) 158; 94 Am. Dec. 148; Burns v. Crawford, 34 Mo. 330; Donnell v. Stephens, 35 Mo. 441.

2. Billmeyer v. Evans, 40 Pa. St. 324; Lewis v. Lewis, 47 Pa. St. 127; White v. Crawford, 84 Pa. St. 433. But Judge Cooley remarks in his Constitutional Limitations (6th ed.), p. 355, "It seems to us that an agreement to waive a legal privilege which the law gives as a matter of state policy cannot be binding upon a party, unless the law itself provides for the waiver." Citing Conkey v. Hart, 14 N. Y. 22; Handy v. Chatfield, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 35.

3. Curtis v. Root, 28 Ill. 377.

4. M'Ginnis v. Lillard, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 490.

Stay for three months after levy made does not release the judgment nor prevent the plaintiff from issuing a fi. fa. after the expiration of the time. Burks v. Bass, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 338.

5. Runyon v. Bennett, 4 Dana (Ky.) 598; 29 Am. Dec. 431.

An appeal from a judgment of the circuit court and a supersedeas thereon will not have the effect to extend the judgment lien beyond the time prescribed by statute; the judgment lien operates just as though no supersedeas had been given. Christy v. Flanagan, 87 Mo. 670.

In Barroilhet v. Hathaway, 31 Cal. 395; 89 Am. Dec. 193, it was held that the filing of a stay bond on appeal suspends the running of the time during which the judgment remains a lien until the filing of the remittitur from the appellate court, and the time during which proceedings are stayed by order of the court or by a stay bond on appeal must be excluded from the computation of the time during which the judgment remains a lien.

The effect of a supersedeas is to prevent further proceedings in the lower court; it does not operate to nullify or reverse an injunction. Slaughter House Cases, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 273; Whitney v. Mowery, 3 Fisher Cas. N. S. 157.

An original judgment is not merged or destroyed by a judgment of supersedeas; the plaintiff may pursue his remedy either in the original or supersedeas judgment, the only restraint being that he shall have but one satisfaction for the same debt. Smith v. Anderson, 18 Md. 520.

6. Runyon v. Bennett, 4 Dana (Ky.) 598; 29 Am. Dec. 431; Millikin v. Brown, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 188; Stockton v. Bishop, 2 How. (U. S.) 74. In the latter case it is said that an execution

ing the stay is not void; it is merely voidable, and then only when impeached by the defendant in the same proceeding in which the judgment was rendered.¹

c. EFFECT UPON JUDGMENT LIEN ON REAL ESTATE.—When a judgment is a lien upon real estate the granting of a stay does issued in a lower court after a writ of error and bond had been filed may be quashed either in the supreme court or in the court below.

1. In Oakes v. Williams, 107 Ill. 154, followed in Shirk v. Metropolis, etc., Gravel Road Co., 110 Ill. 661, an execution was issued on a stayed judgment and a sale was made of the defendant's land. In an ejectment suit brought by a subsequent purchaser of the land from the defendant, against the purchaser at the execution sale, the court held that while the proceedings were irregular and might have been quashed on motion by the defendant in the court which rendered the judgment, yet that the sale was valid if not attacked in that way and could not be questioned by any one else in a collateral proceeding. See also Manton v. Hoyt, 43 Md. 254.

In Swiggart v. Harber, 5 Ill. 364; 39 Am. Dec. 418, it was held that a sale under execution, after a judge's order staying further proceedings, is not a nullity, but is only voidable, and cannot be set aside in a collateral proceeding. Where a defendant in a fiery facias has submitted to such irregularities, a stranger to the record cannot avail himself of them; although a judgment may be erroneous and an execution thereon so irregular as to require it to be quashed on motion by the defendant, yet neither can be inquired into and declared invalid at the suit of a stranger.

In O'Donnell v. Mullin, 27 Pa. St. 199; 67 Am. Dec. 458, the court held that if a justice of the peace issues execution on a judgment within the time allowed for an appeal, and the appeal is taken afterwards, it is the duty of the justice to revoke the execution. "The appeal strikes the execution dead, and everything done afterwards in the way of levy or sale is void. A purchaser thereof at the constable's sale takes no title." But in Wilkinson's Appeal, 65 Pa. St. 189, the court, by Thompson, C. J., said: "Since the decision of Stewart v. Stocker, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 199; 15 Am. Dec. 589, the question in this case has not been regarded as an open one. It is therefore settled, if anything can be, that an erroneous judgment or an irregular execution, not void, can be set aside only by direct and appropriate action by parties having an interest in the same and not by a collateral attack. As to an irregular execution, nobody but the defendant can object to it or take advantage of the irregularity. If he does not object, to all the world he stands as consenting, and as to him the maxim consensus tollit errorem controls." In Stewart v. Stocker, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 199; 15 Am. Dec. 589, the execution was issued before the stay had expired; the court held this to be irregular, but not void, and its validity cannot be called in question by another creditor who sues the sheriff for the proceeds.

In Bowman v. Tallman, 28 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 482, the appellate court orally announced its decision in a case, affirming the judgment appealed from, to stay the execution on which bond had been given. Thereupon, and before the final entry of affirmance was made, an execution was issued, and the defendant moved to quash the same. The court held that when the execution was issued the stay upon the judgment was not removed, and, in effect, said: "An execution could not regularly issue until after the decision of affirmance. The mere oral announcement of a decision by the judges and the mere entry of such decision in the minutes of the clerk is not such a judgment of the appellate court as will authorize action under it. A formal judgment which embraces the decision must be entered, and such judgment only removes the stay of proceedings. There was, however, a valid judgment to support the execution. Its operation and effect and the rights of the plaintiff to enforce it were merely suspended pending the appeal and it was an irregularity to enforce it. But it was an irregularity merely. The practice of the court has required that motions to vacate process irregularly issued in a cause shall be made at the first opportunity after the irregularity has been discovered, otherwise the ir-not affect that lien either as to its priority or binding force.¹ Any extension of time or stay of execution to a time short of the statutory period of limitation may be made without prejudice to the creditor.² Hence the granting of a stay will not enable subsequent judgment creditors to obtain a priority, even though executions on the subsequent judgments are issued against the property before one is issued on the stayed judgment.³

d. EFFECT UPON EXECUTION ON PERSONAL PROPERTY.—A lien upon personal property is acquired by the execution, and not merely, as in the case of real estate, by the judgment. If an execution is returnable upon a certain day, and before that day the writ is stayed, and the return day passes without a levy having been made, the execution is dead, and the lien is lost,⁴ and a subsequent judgment creditor who seizes the same property pending the stay is entitled to the goods or proceeds of sale.

regularity will be deemed to be waived. Here the execution was issued May 30, 1864, and was the same day levied; but the defendant took no steps to have the execution set aside until October 5, following. He was thus too late, and should be deemed to have waived the irregularity."

Where executions were issued on the same day the judgments were rendered by a justice of the peace upon an insufficient affidavit, and were therefore premature under the Tennessee statutes, and were levied upon land, and the same was sold by order of the county court, it was held that as to third parties the sale was good. Stanley v. Nelson, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 484. The objection that the execution was prematurely issued cannot be made by a garnishee. Cowan v. Lowry, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 620; Carpenter v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 203; Miller v. O'Bannon, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 398. See also Dixon v. Watkins, 9 Ark. 139; Girard v. Hirsch, 6 La. Ann. 651; Gardiner Mfg. Co. v. Heald, 5 Me. 381; 17 Am. Dec. 248; Green v. Cutright, Wright (Ohio) 738.

1. Low v. Adams, 6 Cal. 277; Brewster v. Clamfit, 33 Ark. 72. So declared by the statutes of several states. In Curtis v. Root, 28 Ill. 377, it was held that an appeal and bond, operating as a stay, did not destroy the lien of the judgment. It merely suspended its execution. It was in full force all the time as a vital judgment of the court, not only capable of holding all liens to which it attached at the time of its rendition, but it was capable of attaching to other property of which the judgment debtor might become the owner in the meantime, and thus subject such newly acquired property to its influence. This decision was approved in Oaks v. Williams, 107 Ill. 154.

2. Marshall v. Moore, 36 Ill. 321.

3. Love v. Harper, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 113, in which the plaintiff agreed to grant a stay of execution for four months, and the execution was returned "stayed by order of plaintiff." It was held that the lien of the judgment upon the real estate was not lost or suspended by such stay of execution so as to give other judgments recovered at the same term a priority. Nor does mere delay in issuing execution after the expiration of the stay discharge the lien of the judgment. Parish v. Elwell, 46 Iowa 162.

4. In Sturges' Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 413, an execution was issued May 12, returnable on June 5; by an order of court the execution was stayed without actual levy being made. By this course the execution, being returned stayed, expired on the return day. Execution was issued on another judgment on May 31, returnable after June 5, and this latter was allowed to obtain all the property. The court said: "The plaintiff had a right to have execution of his judgment. He issued execution and for apparent cause shown to the court, rule was granted and execution on the writ stayed. The writ was returned unexecuted. Afterwards the plaintiff's goods were sold on another execution. Such consequences should induce judges to observe the oft-repeated admonition on staying executions, to direct levy to be

But if a levy be actually made the lien is preserved ; it is therefore the duty of the court to direct a levy to be made in such cases so as to preserve the lien during the pendency of the stay.¹

But a stay of execution by order of court before a levy is made, does not of itself destroy the lien of the execution where the writ is not returned by the officer without making a levy.² And it has been held that a stay of execution by order of court suspends the running of the time within which the writ must be made, when not done, and preserve liens."

And in Ross v. Weber, 26 Ill. 221, personal property was under execution and in the hands of the sheriff, and whilst it was so in his hands the creditor agreed to stay the execution for six months, without a sale. Afterwards and during the stay the sheriff received another execution, which continued in his hands after the prior execution had expired. It was held that by the stay of the former execution it became dormant and lost its priority of lien and the property became liable to sale for the satisfaction of the junior execution.

If a stay of the sale of personal property under an execution could be made by the creditor beyond the lifetime of the execution, it might be used as the most effectual means of hindering and delaying creditors in the collection of their debts. Marshall v. Moore, 36 Ill. 321.

1. In Steere v. Stafford, 12 R. I. 131, the court, by Potter, J., said: "The plaintiff objects that having made an attachment on his original writ he may lose his attachment by the stay under the Rhode Island statute, which provides that whenever final judgment is rendered for the plaintiff in any suit in which the writ was served by attachment, the execution shall be levied on the property so attached; but if the same shall not be so levied before the return day thereof, the property attached shall be discharged of such attachment. If the court stays execution under its general power, the party should not lose his levy by the act of the court. If after the execution issued and before levy an order was made for staying the proceedings, and such stay should be continued beyond the return day of the execution, it might be questionable whether the attachment would not be discharged. It has been so decided in Pennsylvania. But even in that case the levy might be preserved by staying proceedings after the levy instead of before."

In Batdorf v. Focht, 44 Pa. St. 195, it is said that a fiery facias which is a lien on defendants' goods does not lose its priority over subsequent executions by reason of a judicial order staying it, until a rule taken on part of the defendants should be disposed of, although there was no stipulation in the order staying the execution that the lien should remain. It is usual to accompany such orders with a stipulation that the lien of the writ shall remain until the motion has been disposed of; and this is a prudent and proper practice. But where it is omitted the lien must nevertheless be regarded as preserved, for it is one of the vested legal rights of the plaintiff and can no more be sacrificed by an edict of the court without a hearing than any of his other civil rights whether of liberty or property. The above was affirmed in Bain v. Lyle, 68 Pa. St. 66.

See also Sedgwick's Appeal, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 260; Pott's Appeal, 20 Pa. St. 253.

2. After a judgment by default had been entered, an execution was issued and placed in the hands of the sheriff; before a levy was made, the defendants were permitted to come in and plead, and proceedings on the execution were stayed by order of the court, but the judgment and execution were ordered to stand as security for the amount, if any, that might be found due to the plaintiffs on the trial of the cause. Another execution against the defendants afterwards came to the hands of the sheriff, under which he levied upon and sold the real and personal property of the defendants. It was held that the proceeds of the sale must first be applied in satisfaction of the amount which had been found due by the jury upon the trial of the issue joined in this cause and for which the execution in favor of the plaintiffs had been ordered to stand as security.

returned.¹ A stay by agreement of the parties before levy, if made in good faith, will not destroy the lien of the execution;² but an indefinite stay, or one tainted with fraud, will postpone the plaintiff's right to the rights of subsequent execution creditors of the defendant.³

e. EFFECT UPON EXECUTION PARTLY PERFORMED.—At common law a supersedeas should be obtained before levy if it were desired to stay the execution; if a levy were made, and then the supersedeas were granted, the execution would not be stayed thereby. By the levy the debtor was deprived of his property, and an execution being entire in its nature could not be superseded after it once began, but must go on to completion.⁴

This common-law rule has been generally abrogated by statute or change of practice. The usual rule now is that whenever a Richards v. Morris Canal, etc., Co., 20 N. J. L. 136.

1. A sheriff to whom an execution has been delivered for collection, is entitled to sixty days within which to perform the duties enjoined upon him, and any stay which restrains him from enforcing the execution suspends, while it lasts, the running of the time in which he is required to return the writ. Ansonia Brass, etc., Co. v. Conner, 103 N. Y. 502.

2. The goods of a defendant in execution are bound from the time of the delivery of the writ to the sheriff, even against subsequent bona fide purchasers, unless sold under circumstances equivalent to a sale in market overt. An agreement made in good faith by a plaintiff in execution before levy, to stay proceedings upon terms, does not discharge or suspend the lien. James v. Burnet, 20 N. J. L. 635.

The plaintiff, when he delivers his execution to the sheriff or afterwards, may direct the sheriff not to proceed to a sale without further orders from him, or unless urged on by younger executions without thereby losing his priority, if done in good faith. Cumberland Bank v. Hann, 19 N. J. L. 166.

An assignee for the benefit of creditors cannot hold property as a purchaser who, without notice of an execution, purchases the property in good faith and pays for the same before an actual levy is made. The rights of the execution creditor are not affected in such case if the levy has been delayed by a temporary agreement between him and a defendant. Van Waggoner v. Moses, 26 N. J. L. 570.

3. An indefinite stay of an execution by plaintiff's orders, although there be a levy under it, if the property levied on remain with the plaintiff's consent in defendant's possession and under his control, is such a suspension of the plaintiff's lien that a subsequent execution shall have the preference if proceeded upon before the sheriff is ordered to 'execute the first writ. Cook v. Wood, 16 N. J. L. 254.

Where the circumstances show that an execution was fraudulently kept on foot to hinder subsequent creditors, it is void as to them. Fischel v. Keer, 45 N. J. L. 507.

4. Nothing is better settled at common law than that a supersedeas in order to stay proceedings on an execution must come before there is a levy made under the execution; for if it comes afterwards the sheriff is at liberty to proceed upon a writ of venditioni exponas to sell the goods. The cases are admirably summed up in Meriton v. Stevens, Willes 271. Here a levy on a fieri facias was made a week before the injunction to stay execution was granted, so that according to the course of the common law it ought not to operate as a supersedeas to the venditioni exponas. Boyle v. Zacharie, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 659.

The levy of an execution is not defeated by a subsequent writ of supersedeas. Freeman v. Dawson, 110 U. S. 264.

If an execution be begun before a writ of error or supersedeas be delivered, the sheriff ought to proceed to complete the execution so far as he has gone, but not to proceed any further, hence he must proceed to sell the goods already levied upon and return the money into court. Meriton v. Stevens, Willes 282. To the same supersedeas is granted, as, for example, on appeal, an uncompleted execution is wholly stayed.¹

When a stay is obtained by a statutory supersedeas it is held that property previously seized by the sheriff under the execution is discharged from the lien of the execution, and that the bond is substituted in lieu of the property, which the defendant may therefore dispose of as he sees fit. There are in many states statutory provisions to this effect.²

effect, see Kinnie v. Whitford, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 34; Delafield v. Sandford, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 473; Beatty v. Chapline, 2 Har. & J. (Md.) 7 (since overruled by statute); Eakle v. Smith, 24 Md. 339.

1. Statutory Provisions. — See the statutory provisions of the various states. In Kentucky it was held, without the aid of a statute, that when a sheriff collected money from a defendant upon an execution which was afterwards superseded, it was his duty to return it to the defendant. Trueman v. Berry, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 536. In Virginia, the code (§ 3595) provides that when money is received by a sheriff under an execution and not paid over to the plaintiff and the defendant obtains the supersedeas, the money shall be repaid to the defendant.

In Minnesota, a stay does not annul what has been done under a writ of execution previously levied. It simply checks the sheriff from further proceedings, the sheriff retaining the property until the further order of the court. Hence where an execution was levied upon personal property, and then an appeal was taken and bond given, a motion by the defendant to show cause why the property should not be released from levy was denied. Northwestern Express Co. v. Landes, 6 Minn. 564.

In People v. Judges, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 81, a judgment was obtained and an execution was issued. The defendants then sued out a writ of error and perfected their bail and applied for a supersedeas. The court, by Sutherland, J., said: "The relators had four days after the perfecting of the judgment to sue out their writ of error and put in and perfect bail; and, having complied with the rule, they are entitled to be protected from the enforcement of the judgment against them until the determination of the suit in error. A party may sue out execution in four days, but it is at the peril of a supersedeas of execution and restitution of property if error is brought and bail perfected within that time. There may have been some doubt heretofore as to the practice in a case like this growing out of the notion which has long prevailed in England, that an execution, being an entire thing, cannot be divided; and that when a levy is made under a fiery facias, the sheriff shall not be stayed, but shall proceed and sell the goods. But since the decision of this court in Jackson v. Schaubert, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 417, it was supposed that the practice of this court would be considered settled. The motion for a supersedeas is granted." In the last mentioned case it was explicitly determined that an execution will be set aside, although issued and a levy made under it previous to the suing out or filing of the writ of error, if the latter be sued out and bail perfected within the time allowed by law. See the reporter's note to People v. Judges, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 81, for a review of the cases upon the subject.

Where an appeal is taken after execution has issued on the judgment appealed from, proceedings under such execution may be stayed, but the execution should not be set aside absolutely. Livingston v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 191.

2. Biscoe v. Sandefur, 14 Ark. 588; Hamilton v. Henry, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 218; 43 Am. Dec. 476; Walker v. McDowell, 4 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 118; 43 Am. Dec. 476.

In Parker v. Dean, 45 Miss. 408, the bill stated that on the same day that the levy under the execution was made the debtor executed a supersedeas bond and sued out a writ of error. The effect of that was to stay absolutely the sheriff from further proceeding under the execution, as has been the practice in this state; the execution of such a bond is on a mo-

But a different rule applies to forthcoming bonds provided for by the statutes of various states. Under these bonds, the property remains in the possession of the defendant, but subject to the lien of the execution and in the custody of the law.¹

f. EFFECT UPON EXECUTION FULLY PERFORMED.—A stay prevents further proceedings under an execution, but does not interfere with what has already been done. Whatever is done according to the terms of the execution and before the stay takes effect is upheld by the authority of the judgment and is not overruled by the stay. The stay does not undo the performance of a judgment that has already been performed.²

tion of a levy upon personal property, the bond being considered security for the debt and ample indemnity to the creditor for arresting the action of the sheriff under the writ. Similarly when a stay of execution is obtained by an injunction, the property levied upon is released and the lien is lost. Eldridge v. Chambers, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 411. And this is the case whether the injunction be obtained at the suit of the defendant in the execution or by a third person. Telford v. Cox, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 298.

1. In Hagan v. Lucas, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 400, execution was issued against certain property which was claimed by a third party, who gave bond for the forthcoming of the property if it should be found subject to the execution. The property was then delivered to the claimant, but was afterwards seized under another execution. It was insisted that the bond was substituted for the property, and that the property was released from the levy, and thus could be subjected to another execution. But the court held that the law provided that the property should be delivered into the possession of the claimant on his giving bond and security that he would return it to the sheriff if it should be found subject to the execution. The bond cannot be taken as a substitute for the property, as the condition requires its return to the sheriff. On the giving of the bond the property is placed in the possession of the claimant. His custody is substituted for the custody of the sheriff. The property is not withdrawn from the custody of the law. In the hands of the claimant, under the bond for its delivery to the sheriff, the property is as free from the reach of other process of execution as it would have been in the hands of the sheriff.

If a fiery facias be issued and levied upon personal property and the defendant gives a forthcoming bond to entitle him to a stay of execution, and the same is so returned by the sheriff and within a year an execution issues at the suit of another plaintiff and the same property is levied on and sold, the first execution will be entitled to the proceeds of sale. Sedgwick's Appeal, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 260. Hence the taking of the forthcoming bond is not a dissolution of the levy; and a postponement of the execution sale of the property to a time before the return day, being but an adjournment, will not avoid the right of the execution creditor, for the benefit of a subsequent execution creditor, it being consistent with an intention to levy the debt under the writ. An indefinite postponement of a sale is inconsistent with the legitimate end of an execution which is to have the money at the return of the writ, or for good reasons stated in the writ, to hold the property for another writ. Lantz v. Worthington, 4 Pa. St. 153; 14 Am. Dec. 682.

Other cases to the effect that the taking of a forthcoming bond to stay execution does not release the property from the lien of the execution are Brush v. Seguin, 24 Ill. 254; Lusk v. Ramsay, 3 Munf. (Va.) 417; Bain v. Lyle, 68 Pa. St. 66. See also generally, FORTHCOMING BOND, vol. 8, p. 565.

2. Boisé Co. v. Gorman, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 661. In this case an officer was ousted from his office on February 3, by virtue of a writ on a judgment rendered on the previous January 20. Subsequent to the ousting under the writ, and on the same day, a superseas bond was filed by the officer. Upon the principle that a stay under a superseas does not interfere with what has already been done, the petition of the ousted officer for relief was denied.

STEAL—(See also LARCENY, vol. 12, pp. 760, 815; LIBEL AND SLANDER, vol. 13, p. 345; RECEIVING STOLEN PROPERTY, vol. 20, p. 440; REWARDS, vol. 21, p. 389).—The word "steal" has a uniform signification, and in common as well as legal parlance means the felonious taking and carrying away of the personal goods of another.¹

STEAMSHIP—(See also NAVIGATION, vol. 16, pp. 271, 298).—A steamship is a vessel whose principal motive power is steam, and not sails.²

STEER—(See also CATTLE, vol. 3, p. 43).—A steer is "a castrated taurine male from two to four years old."³

In Kreglo v. Fulk, 3 W. Va. 74, a judgment in ejectment was rendered in favor of the plaintiffs. The execution of the judgment was suspended for a certain time, after which execution was issued and the possession of the property was delivered to the plaintiffs. Defendants then appealed and superseded the judgment, and moved for a writ of restitution of the property. The court denied the motion, holding that the supersedeas only stayed the proceedings in the state they were when it was allowed; but if the judgment in favor of the plaintiffs were reversed on appeal it would then be proper to award a writ of restitution to the defendants.

In apparent conflict with the above it was held that when a sheriff collected money from a defendant upon an execution which was afterwards superseded, it was his duty to return it to defendant. Trueman v. Berry, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 536; and this is made the duty of the sheriff by statute in Virginia. Virginia Code, § 3595. And where the term of office of the clerk and master of a chancery court had not expired when his successor was appointed, and the latter procured a warrant directing the seizure of the official books and papers, on application for a writ of error from the judgment, on which the warrant issued, a supersedeas will issue, though the warrant has been fully executed, with a direction to restore the books and papers; that being the only method of preserving the rights of the parties as they were before the making of the order. Stafford v. Williams (Tenn. 1889), 13 S. W. Rep. 793; Runyon v. Bennett, 4 Dana (Ky.) 598; 29 Am. Dec. 431;

Polk Co. v. Johnson, 21 Fla. 577; Archer v. Hart, 5 Fla. 254.

1. State v. Chambers, 2 Greene (Iowa) 311.

"The natural and most obvious import of the word 'steal' is that of the felonious taking of property, or larceny. But it may be qualified by the context." In that case, an action for slander, it was held that where defendant charged that plaintiff "stole my patents to get up his castings by," it was for the jury and not for the court to decide whether he intended to charge the crime of larceny. Dunnell v. Fiske, 11 Met. (Mass.) 551. See also Alexander v. State, 12 Tex. 540; LARCENY, vol. 12, p. 761.

2. Fraser v. Telegraph Construction Co., L. R., 7 Q. B. 566; 3 Moak's Rep. 203. In that case goods were shipped by plaintiffs on board of defendants' vessel under a bill of lading stating that the said vessel was a "steamship." It was held, in accordance with the definition given above, that a ship depending chiefly upon its sails, though using an auxiliary screw, did not answer the description of the vessel in the bill of lading.

Steam Dredge.—See MARITIME LIENS, vol. 14, p. 411.

3. Webster Dict. quoted in Milligan v. Jefferson Co., 2 Mont. 546, in which case it was held that "steer" did not include "calf," within a statute requiring a taxpayer to give a list of his "steers," "heifers," etc.

Steers and "Working Cattle" are Synonymous.—"In common parlance, and in every day conversation, steers and working cattle are applied and used to designate one and the same thing, to wit, cattle that have worked." Wesels v. Territory, 1 Kan. 525.

STENOGRAPHERS.

- I. Definition, 556.
- II. Appointment; Duties; Removal, 556.
- III. Compensation, 557.

- IV. When Fees Taxable as Costs or Disbursements, 560.
- V. Stenographer's Notes as Evidence, 563.

I. DEFINITION.—A stenographer is one who writes in shorthand by using abbreviations and characters for whole words. As an officer of the court, a stenographer is a shorthand writer who officially takes down testimony, and the rulings and charges in a case on trial.¹

II. APPOINTMENT; DUTIES; REMOVAL.—Statutes have been passed in many of the states providing for the appointment and regulating the duties of court stenographers, with a general view to securing more rapid and unabating progress in the trial of causes, and superseding the necessity, otherwise placed upon court and counsel, of taking notes of the proceedings.² These statutes generally confer the power of appointment upon the court; as to minor regulations, reference must be had to the statutes themselves.³

1. 2 Bouv. L. Dict. 665; Cummings v. Armstrong, 34 W. Va. 1; And. L. Dict. 973.

A stenographer is one skilled in the art of writing shorthand by using abbreviations and characters for whole words, and the term does not come within the common-law definition of the word "clerk." In re Appropriations, 25 Neb. 662.

2. Chase v. Vandergrift, 88 Pa. St. 217; Cummins v. Armstrong, 34 W. Va. 1.

3. For an example of these statutes, see New York Code Civ. Proc., §§ 251-262; Pennsylvania Pub. Laws (1874), p. 182.

The common council of Newark may authorize a committee, appointed by itself to take testimony in contested elections of members, to employ a stenographer to assist it in that matter; and if the committee employs the stenographer before the resolution conferring the authority becomes effective, the council may subsequently ratify the action. State v. Haynes, 50 N. J. L. 97.

In Georgia, it seems that in some circuits the reporter, or stenographer, of the court, is allowed, in order to aid the solicitor-general, to propound questions to jurors on their voire dire, the accepting or rejecting being done by the solicitor-general. Where a stenographer inadvertently put the juror upon the defendant after questioning him, and the defendant immediately accepted him, without waiting for the solicitor-general to accept or reject, the court held that the reporter had no authority to accept, and the mere inadvertence on his part did not deprive the solicitor-general of his right to challenge. West v. State, 79 Ga. 773.

In State v. Ford, 41 Mo. App. 122, the following points were decided: The office of stenographer is legislative, not constitutional, and may be modified, controlled, or abolished by the power that created it. The duties are to be entered upon under oath and may not be performed by an unsworn deputy. Such deputy, under the terms of the act relating to stenographers, was not intended to take charge of the business in another court or division, but only as assistant in the court or division for which his principal is appointed. The act authorizing the appointment of such official stenographers for circuit courts in counties of not less than 45,000, nor more than 100,000 inhabitants, designed to have as many such officers as there were, or should be, circuit courts or divisions thereof; and the act is a general law, which applies to those counties which shall thereafter have the required population as well as to those which then had it. It was also obviously intended

In the absence of a statute making it the duty of the court to appoint a stenographer, there is no error in a refusal to appoint, though there may be one present, and the accused offers to pay his fees.¹ It has been held that where the trial judge, in certifying a bill of exceptions, recognizes the stenographer who takes the evidence as the official reporter of the court, the stenographer is de facto reporter, and the fact that he is not regularly appointed by the judge will not avail as an objection to the bill of exceptions.²

III. COMPENSATION.—The rate of compensation to be allowed official stenographers in legal proceedings is either governed directly by statute, or fixed by the court under authority conferred by statute;³ the statutes also provide the mode of pay-that where the court of one of these counties should be divided, each division should have a stenographer appointed by the judge. See Missouri Acts, April 2, 1883.

1. Schoenfeldt v. State, 30 Tex. App. 695.

2. Etter v. O'Neil, 83 Iowa 655.

Removal.—Rev. Sts. of Missouri of 1880, ch. 153, art. 2, providing for the appointment of official stenographers, contains a provision also "That the judge shall at any time have power to remove such stenographer upon proper charges entered of record for incompetency or any misconduct in office, specifying such misconduct and giving such stenographer an opportunity of being heard." Also that "It shall be the duty of such stenographer to attend the sessions of the court" and that he "may appoint one or more deputies to assist him in the discharge of his duties, and shall not be allowed any additional compensation on account of such deputies." Const. of 1875, art. 2, § 18, provides that no person elected or appointed to any office or employment of trust or profit under the law of the state shall hold such office without personally devoting his time to the performance of the duties to the same belonging. It was held that where an official stenographer did not devote his personal attention to the duties of his office but left them to be performed by his deputy, this was cause for his removal from office by the judge who appointed him. State v. Slover (Mo. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 788. Where a stenographer is thus removed he is not entitled to compensation for the time between the preferring of charges against him and the time when the entry of the order for removal is made. State v. Slover (Mo. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 790.

3. Michigan Comp. Laws, p. 1528; Pennsylvania Act, 1876, § 3; New York Code Civ. Proc., §§ 254, 258; California Code Civ. Proc., § 274.

Under the New York Code Civ. Proc., §§ 86, 289, court stenographers are only entitled to charge counsel for furnishing an official copy of the stenographic minutes of a trial, ten cents per folio of one hundred words by actual count, and, on application of the attorney he will be ordered to write out his minutes and make out his bill at such rate. Wright v. Nosstrand, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 184; Guth v. Dalton, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 289.

By the proper construction of New Jersey Acts of 1871 and 1874, relating to stenographic reporters, the circuit judge in his discretion may fix the compensation of such officer for attendance and transcript of proceedings furnished by the order of the court. Knight v. Ocean County, 49 N. J. L. 485.

In California, prior to 1885, it was held that neither section 869 of the Penal Code, nor any provision of law, fixed the fees of stenographers generally; and that a magistrate had no power to fix them according to the standard fixed for official reporters. Fox v. Lindley, 57 Cal. 650. But since that time, by an amendment passed in 1885, a magistrate is allowed to fix such fees, not to exceed those allowed reporters in the superior courts of the state, as provided for in the California Code of Civil Procedure, § 274, which declares that the official reporter shall receive as compensation a sum to be fixed by the court not exceeding $10.00 per day. McAllister v. Hamlin, 83.

ment.¹ Where the rate of compensation at which an official stenographer is bound to furnish, with reasonable diligence, copies of his stenographic notes of testimony or other proceedings, is fixed by statute, an agreement to pay a greater rate for furnishing copies more expeditiously than would otherwise be done, cannot be enforced.² But it seems that when the statute prescribing his duties does not contemplate that he shall devote his entire time to the public service, he may recover for work done under special contract not falling within his official duties.³

Cal. 361. This case overrules Smith v. Strother, 68 Cal. 194, in which it was said that this mode of fixing the stenographer's salary was in conflict with the constitution of the state, as it lays legislative functions upon the judiciary.

A county board has no discretion as to the amount due the official stenographer of the state's circuit court of New Jersey for services rendered, but must pay what the certificate of the judge of such court calls for. Knight v. Ocean County, 48 N. J. L. 70. See McAllister v. Hamlin, 83 Cal. 361.

Translation of Stenographer's Notes.—Under Iowa Code, § 3777, the stenographer is not bound to furnish a translation of his notes, unless provision is made by the party desiring it for payment of same. Godfrey v. McKean, 54 Iowa 127.

1. A Michigan act relating to stenographers provides that the appointment may be made for an entire circuit, but that the stenographer cannot receive from the entire circuit more than the statutory salary of $2,000; this should be apportioned by the judge amongst the several counties composing the circuit, and he cannot require each individual county to pay him specific sums by way of compensation unless the respective proportions of such counties towards the salaries shall amount to these sums. Goodale v. Marquette County, 45 Mich. 47.

The supreme court of Indiana has no authority to order a stenographer's notes to be copied and paid for out of the state or county treasury. Merrick v. State, 63 Ind. 327.

A stenographer in the surrogate's court of New York, appointed under New York Act of 1865, is not limited in the collection of his salary to the fees which have been paid by that court into the county treasury; if these fees are inadequate, the excess becomes a county charge. Munson v. New York, 57 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 497.

A county is not liable to an official stenographer, appointed by virtue of the provisions of the Pennsylvania Act of May 8, 1876 (P. L. 140), for transcripts of his notes furnished by him, unless said transcripts are made by order of court or to be filed in performance of the stenographer's general duty. A county is not liable to such stenographer for a transcript furnished by him at the request of counsel, although the same be filed in the cause and constitute part of the record thereof. Briggs v. Erie County, 98 Pa. St. 570; Lehigh County v. Meyer, 102 Pa. St. 479.

The proviso of the third section of the Pennsylvania Act of May 8, 1876 (P. L. 140), that in counties having less than two hundred thousand inhabitants the compensation of the official court stenographer, payable by said county, shall not exceed $1,200 per annum, applies only to his compensation for the services referred to in the enacting clause of said third section; viz., the per diem compensation for the taking of notes in court. It does not apply to the additional duties imposed by the fourth section of said act, to-wit, the writing out of notes in longhand when ordered by the court. Where, therefore, the per diem compensation of the stenographer for taking notes in court amounts to less than $1,200 for any year, but compensation for writing out notes in longhand when ordered by the court increases his total compensation for the year to a sum in excess of $1,200, he is entitled to recover his total compensation from the county. Lehigh County v. Meyer, 102 Pa. St. 479.

2. McCarthy v. Bonynge, 12 Daly (N. Y.) 356.

3. Langley v. Hill, 63 Mich. 271.

A client is alone responsible for the fees of a stenographer employed by the client's attorney to render services necessary to the proper and convenient conduct of the case,¹ and the rule is not altered by the fact that the attorney simply requested the performance of the services for his client.²

In the absence of a special agreement all the parties to an action are jointly liable to an unofficial stenographer employed to take the official report of the proceedings before a referee and furnish the parties with copies of the testimony.³

By statute in several states a stenographer is entitled to demand payment of his fees, or satisfactory security therefor, in advance.⁴ If an attorney wrongfully refuses to pay the legal

1. Who Liable.—Harry v. Hilton, 11 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 448; 64 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 199. See generally ATTORNEY AND CLIENT, vol. 1, p. 942.

2. Bonyng v. Field, 44 N. Y. Super. Ct. 581; 81 N. Y. 459; Bonyng v. Waterbury, 12 Hun (N. Y.) 534; Sheridan v. Genet, 12 Hun (N. Y.) 660. These cases hold that in order to impose liability on the attorney, there must be a special agreement on his part to be responsible.

3. Adams v. New York, etc., R. Co., 20 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 180. In this case it was further held that under an agreement by the parties to a trial before a referee that the "successful party" shall pay the fees of the stenographer, the party who prevails before the referee and takes up his report and enters judgment thereon with costs, including the stenographer's bill as an item therein, is the "successful party," and alone liable, notwithstanding the judgment be modified on appeal so that no costs can be taxed by either party.

At a hearing before a referee the parties failed to agree on a stenographer, and the referee offered to take down the testimony in longhand. The defendant's counsel objecting to this, the referee requested a stenographer who was present to take testimony, and the defendant's counsel said: "Go ahead, I am satisfied." The defendant's counsel took the report and afterwards wrote to the referee to send the bill of the stenographer, which had been lost, to him. It was held that this evidence justified a finding that the stenographer was employed by defendant and entitled to payment by him. Macvey v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 19 N. Y. Supp. 133.

4. Payment in Advance.—Merrick v. State, 63 Ind. 327. But in this case it was also adjudged that the court might, in its discretion, admit the defendant to defend as a poor person and direct that a copy of the reporter's notes of the evidence be furnished him to enable him to prepare a bill of exceptions.

But this may not be demanded by the defendant as a matter of right. Ex parte Morgan, 122 Ind. 428. New York Court of Common Pleas has held that under § 86, Code of Civ. Proc. of that state, the stenographer may require payment of his fees in advance. Guth v. Dalton, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 289. But in Wright v. Nostrand, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 184, the supreme court held that the stenographer could not require payment in advance upon speculation or conjecture as to what his bill might ultimately be.

One Convicted of Felony not Entitled to Copy of Testimony at Public Expense—Nebraska.—State v. Moore, 8 Neb. 22, was an application for mandamus brought by the relators to compel the defendant, the official stenographer, to furnish from his shorthand report a copy of the testimony taken on trial, in which the relators were convicted of murder in the second degree and sentenced to the state penitentiary for a term of years, to the end that they might be enabled to prepare a bill of exceptions and prosecute proceedings in the supreme court. A statute of the state (Nebraska act of Feb. 19, 1877) made it the duty of the reporter to furnish, on application of any party to a suit in which a stenographic record of the proceedings had been made, a copy of the same for which he was entitled to receive a specified compensation. The relators sought to avoid the force of this last clause charges of a court stenographer, it has been held that the court would protect the latter by a summary order against the attorney.¹

It has been held that the custom among stenographers of estimating the number of folios to the page of copy furnished, will not prevail as against an actual count reducing the number charged for.²

IV. WHEN FEES TAXABLE AS COSTS OR DISBURSEMENTS.—A direction made in open court that the testimony given in court be taken down by a stenographer is sufficient to entitle the stenographer's charges to be taxed by the prevailing party.³

It has been held that where a stenographer is employed by the parties to an accounting before a master in chancery, by his procurement, he has no authority to make the fees of the stenographer taxable costs, but the court will leave them to be borne by the parties according to their contract.⁴

on the ground that being without the means of making payment they were practically deprived of the benefit to be secured to them by § 23, art. 1, of the state constitution, which declares that "the writ of error shall be a writ of right in all cases of felony." Wherefore, it was contended that a transcript of the testimony should be furnished them at the public expense. But the court held that there was no conflict between the statute and the constitution in this particular, for, while, by the latter, one convicted of felony was entitled to a writ of error as a matter of right, there was nothing in that instrument by which the duty of aiding him, either with money or counsel, in making an application for it, was imposed upon the public; and that such a party could obtain the transcript from the reporter only at his own expense; and that the reporter could require payment in advance.

Refusal to Pay Stenographer's Fees—Excluding Defense.—After the commencement of a trial, it is illegal to exclude the defense on account of the refusal of the defendant to pay his proportion of the stenographer's fees. Wheaton v. Atlantic Giant Powder Co., 41 Mich. 718.

Delivering Notes to Referee—Effect of—Duty of Referee.—In Pope v. Perault, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 468, it was held, that although a stenographer is not obliged to part with his notes until his bill has been paid, yet if he delivers them to the referee to be examined by him and used as the basis of his report, he may not limit the effect of such delivery; and it is the duty of the referee to file them with his report, even though the fees of the stenographer remain unpaid.

1. Wright v. Nostrand, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 184.

2. Maltby v. Plummer, 73 Mich. 539. See also Wright v. Nostrand, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 184.

3. The E. Luckenback, 19 Fed. Rep. 847. In this case the judge's notes of the trial of the cause contained the memorandum, "Stenographer takes notes." This memorandum indicated a direction given at the time that the testimony given in court be taken down by a stenographer. It was held that such a direction was sufficient and the entry of a formal order was unnecessary.

In Kansas, it is provided by statute that a stenographer's fees shall be taxed in each case in the district court in any county in which a stenographer may be appointed. Under this statute such fee must be taxed as costs in every case, although the stenographer is not called upon to render any services in that particular case. But when the fee is taxed as a part of the costs, in an action in which no services are rendered, such an item is not a tax within the meaning of § 1, art. 11 of the constitution of the state. It is a fee to the public imposed for the purpose of adjusting, on an equitable basis, the expense of the administration of justice as between the suitor and the public. Beebe v. Wells, 37 Kan. 472.

4. Bridges v. Sheldon, 7 Fed. Rep. 42.

Where the parties for their convenience agree upon the employment of a stenographer to take down testi-

Where, upon the commencement of a trial before a referee, the parties stipulate for the employment of a stenographer whose fees are to be paid by them in equal proportion, the expense of an extra copy of the minutes ordered by the referee for his own use is included in the agreement, and consequently not taxable against the unsuccessful party.¹

A stipulation by the parties to the suit that the compensation of a stenographer employed in taking testimony may be taxed as costs has the effect of submitting to the court the question as to the amount to be allowed, and waives the right to have the question determined by a jury, and the finding of a referee to whom the question has been referred is merely advisory, and the court may disregard it and enter its order upon the evidence returned by the referee.²

Where a stenographer's notes, used by the defendant in preparing a bill of exceptions, had been obtained and paid for on a previous trial, the plaintiff should not be taxed with such expense as costs in the suit.³

mony before a referee, and that each shall pay one-half the expense of his services in taking notes of the evidence, the expense, or any part thereof, cannot be taxed as a disbursement on the successful party within the meaning of the law regulating the adjustment of costs. Colton v. Simmons, 14 Hun (N. Y.) 75; Nugent v. Keenan, 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 530.

Where upon a stipulation that each party has paid a specified sum as stenographer's fees in proceedings before a referee, an order is entered by consent appointing a new referee and providing that "the amount heretofore paid by the respective parties for . . . stenographer's fees shall be taxed by the successful party as disbursements in the case," the finally defeated party may not question the amount named, but the successful party is entitled to tax it in his bill of costs. When such stipulation also provides that each party shall pay one-half of the fees of a stenographer to be employed on the new reference, and that the successful party may tax the amount so paid as a disbursement, and the plaintiff fails to recover against one of the defendants, though successful as to the others, the successful defendant is entitled to tax the amount paid by him in his bill of costs. Clegg v. Aikens, 17 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 89.

1. Mark v. Buffalo, 87 N. Y. 184.

2. In re Barnes (Mo. App. 1886), 4 West. Rep. 302. And it was further held, that under such circumstances, the appellate court may set aside the finding of the trial court, and remand the cause to that tribunal with direction to enter an order in accordance with the finding of the referee.

3. George W. Roby Lumber Co. v. Gray (Mich. 1889), 42 N. W. Rep. 839.

In New York, where it is necessary for a party to provide himself with a copy of the stenographer's minutes of the evidence and proceedings upon a trial to enable him to make a case or bill of exceptions, the legal expense incurred in procuring the same properly forms an item in the bill of costs, and is taxable as a necessary disbursement incurred in the prosecution or defense of the action as the case may be. Varnum v. Wheeler, 9 N. Y. Civ. Pro. Rep. 421.

And the fees of a stenographer for a copy of his minutes are a taxable item of disbursement when procured for the purpose of enabling a party to propose amendments to a case on appeal. Sebley v. Nichols, 32 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 182; Stevens v. New York El. R. Co., 58 N. Y. Super. Ct. 569. Compare Pfandler & Co. v. Sargeant, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 154.

In Cutter v. Morris, 7 N. Y. St. Rep. 426, the item objected to in a bill of costs was described as the "stenographer's minutes used in preparing amendments to case." The disbursement was sworn to as being necessary and actually incurred in the action by

Under a statute providing that the court may direct the employment of a stenographer, if thought necessary, and may order the expense occasioned thereby to be paid by the parties, the stenographer's fees, or the part thereof paid by the successful party as directed by the court, cannot be taxed by him as a necessary disbursement.¹

the attorney. It was held that without any evidence being stated tending to disprove the affidavit of disbursement contained in the bill of costs, the item could not be stricken out.

Howell's Michigan Statutes, § 6590, provides that, "It shall be the duty of the stenographer, appointed by the order of the court, to write in legible English a full copy of the notes taken by him on the trial of any cause without fee or charge, and to file the same with the clerk of the court, for the use of the court and parties to the cause." Where the defendant, in the making and settlement of a bill of exceptions, was not obliged to procure a copy, but obtained it upon his own motion, without any effort to take advantage of this statute, his payment of the copy must be considered as voluntary, and cannot be taxed as cost; only the copy furnished for the printer could be so taxed. Thurstin v. Luce, 61 Mich. 486; Detroit, etc., R. Co. v. Hayt, 55 Mich. 347; Bell v. Pate, 48 Mich. 640; Hayes v. Livingston, 35 Mich. 371. But where the judge refuses to make the order necessary to obtain the copy, and yet refuses to settle the bill of exceptions without such copy, then the party appealing, who is obliged to obtain and pay for it, if he prevails in the higher court, may have the amount so paid taxed as costs. Bradford v. Vinton (Mich. 1886), 27 N. W. Rep. 2.

Notes on Former Trial.—The cost of copies of the stenographer's notes of the first trial for the use of a party on a second trial is not taxable as a disbursement under New York Code Civ. Proc., § 311. Hamilton v. Butler, 19 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 446; Spring v. Day, 44 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 390. The contrary was held by the New York supreme court at special term in Flood v. Moore, 2 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 91.

1. Gieman v. Oliver, 14 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 174; Arnoux v. Phelan, 21 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 88. But see Reynolds v. New York, 14 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 176, note.

Where the plaintiff procured from the stenographic reporter a copy of the evidence, and the fees of the reporter were allowed as an item of disbursement in the bill of costs as taxed, and an affidavit as to the disbursement, which was made by the plaintiff's attorney, stated that the items of disbursement set forth in the bill were "actually made and incurred," the trial judge made his certificate that on the trial he directed the stenographer's minutes to be furnished the court and that his fees be taxed as a disbursement; it was held, that as it did not appear that the court used the copy procured by the plaintiff, or that it was obtained by him for that purpose, the item should have been disallowed under New York Code Civ. Proc., § 84. Pfandler Barin Extracting, etc., Co. v. Pfandler, 3 How. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 253.

The New York Code Civ. Proc., § 289, which provides that if a "judge requires a copy of any proceedings written out at length from the stenographer's notes, he may make an order directing one-half of the stenographer's fees therefor to be paid by each of the parties to the action or special proceeding," etc., does not limit the time for making the order. Accordingly, where the stenographer's minutes were required for a proper decision of the case, it was held that the order could be made after the costs had been taxed and the taxation would be reopened and the costs sent back to be retaxed after the order was made. Abendroth v. Manhattan R. Co., 9 N. Y. Civ. Pro. Rep. 406.

Additional Allowances—Disbursements and Not Costs.—In ascertaining whether the additional allowances granted by the surrogate of New York exceed the limit of $2,000, fixed by New York Code, § 309, an amount awarded to the stenographer of the court is not to be considered—that amount is a disbursement in the case, and not in the nature of costs. Down v. McGourkey, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 444.

Stenographer's Fees—Repayment of.—There is no provision of law in New York authorizing the repayment or return to one paying them, of the

V. STENOGRAPHER'S NOTES AS EVIDENCE.—The decisions involving the admissibility and value of stenographer's reports as evidence have arisen under varying local statutes, and no general principles can be gathered from them. The instances where such reports as evidence are brought into question, are confined principally to those cases where reports are taken upon preliminary examinations and sought to be introduced in evidence on the trial;¹ cases where a new trial has been granted and stenographic reports of evidence given on a former trial are offered as evidence on the new trial;² and cases of appeal stenographer's fees paid in the first judicial department upon the filing of a note of issue, and as the clerk of the court is required to pay them to the comptroller of the city of New York, and they are in the constructive possession of the latter official so soon as they reach the hands of the clerk, their repayment cannot be required. Kerwin v. Valentine, 13 N. Y. Civ. Pro. Rep. 334.

1. On Preliminary Examinations.—Under California Pen. Code, § 869, a reporter's transcribed notes, taken by him at an examination of a prosecuting witness before the committing magistrate, must be certified to be a correct statement of the testimony and proceedings, and not merely that it is a full, true, and correct transcription of the shorthand notes. The certificate must be correctly written, and its absence cannot be supplied by parol evidence so as to make the transcription admissible, although it would be a proper course to have the reporter refresh his memory and testify orally at the examination. People v. Carty, 77 Cal. 213.

A transcript of the shorthand reporter's notes taken on preliminary examination in a criminal case certified as provided by § 369, Penal Code of California, is placed upon the same footing as a deposition, and is admissible in like cases. People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 301; People v. Qurise, 59 Cal. 343; People v. Cunningham, 66 Cal. 668.

The requirement of California Penal Code, § 869, that a stenographer's transcript of testimony taken at a preliminary examination, shall be filed within ten days, is merely directory, and a filing within a reasonable time is sufficient. People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 301.

By statute in California, in case of a preliminary examination of a person charged with a felony, the stenographer employed to take testimony need not be sworn. People v. Riley, 75 Cal. 98.

2. On Former Trial.—The reporter's transcript of the testimony of a witness taken on a former trial between the same parties, relating to the same matter, may be given in evidence when such witness is dead, out of the state, or unable to testify; this is so even when the testimony is not signed by the witness. Hicks v. Lovell, 64 Cal. 14; 49 Am. Rep. 679; Stewart v. First Nat. Bank, 43 Mich. 257; Rex v. Wylde, 6 C. & P. 380; 25 E. C. L. 447.

Under subd. 8, § 1870, California Code of Civ. Proc., which provides that evidence may be given upon a trial, of the testimony of a witness in a former action between the same parties, when the witness is "out of the jurisdiction," the reporter's notes of evidence given at a former trial should not be admitted when the witness is resident in the state, though in an adjoining county. Meyer v. Roth, 51 Cal. 582.

The notes of a stenographer containing the testimony of a party in a civil case cannot, unless by consent, be introduced to contradict him on a subsequent trial of the same case, particularly if they are not authenticated. Edwards v. Heuer, 46 Mich. 95. In this case, the court said: "The legislature in providing for the assistance of shorthand writers did not intend that their notes should have more force than the judge's minutes, and no one has ever supposed that the latter possessed the inherent character of written evidence." See also Misner v. Darling, 44 Mich. 438.

When a stenographer takes down in writing what a witness has said on a former trial, it is not the best evidence in such a sense as to exclude the testimony of an intelligent bystander, who has heard and paid particular attention to the testimony of the witness.

Brice v. Miller (S. Car. 1892), 15 S. E. Rep. 272.

When it is sought to impeach the testimony of a witness by showing that he has testified differently on a former trial, the stenographer who took the notes of the testimony is not the only competent witness. State v. McDonald, 65 Me. 466.

A transcript report of a stenographer containing the evidence given on a former trial cannot be used to contradict the witness on a subsequent trial, the legislature not having declared such reports evidence for any purpose. Phares v. Barber, 61 Ill. 272.

Where one party offers parts of the evidence of a witness given on a former trial in order to contradict such a witness, the other party may put in so much as is relevant, and may cause the stenographer to read his original minutes. Noyes v. Gilman, 78 Me. 394.

The stenographer's transcript of evidence given by a deceased witness at a former trial of the same case has been held admissible, although the witness being dumb gave his testimony by signs which the stenographer in his notes described and translated. Quinn v. Halbert, 57 Vt. 178.

In Brown v. Luehrs, 79 Ill. 575, it was held that the transcript of evidence taken on a trial of a suit at law is properly admitted in evidence on the hearing of a bill in equity for a new trial, when the stenographer who took the evidence testified that he wrote up the same; that the transcript is correct, and that the witnesses had sworn and testified as therein stated.

In California, a stenographer's notes of testimony given on a former trial, are not admissible in evidence if he has not testified to their accuracy, or if they are not in some way authenticated, or if the examination of the witness was incomplete. Misner v. Darling, 44 Mich. 438.

Where depositions of a witness before a register in bankruptcy have been taken by a stenographer and afterwards reduced to longhand, such depositions will be suppressed if not read to, and signed by the witness, although his subsequent attendance for that purpose could not be procured. In re Cary, 9 Fed. Rep. 754.

A witness examined at a former trial having declared his intention of being absent on the occasion of the second, plaintiff entered a notice three or four days before such trial that the transcript of the stenographer's notes would be offered as evidence. Section 3777, Iowa Civ. Code, provides, that such notes, or any transcript thereof duly certified by the reporter of the court, shall be admissible, in any case in which the same are material to the issue therein, with the same force and effect of depositions, and subject to the same objections so far as applicable. Under these circumstances an objection to the admission of evidence, on the ground that there was no sufficient showing that the plaintiff could not have secured the attendance of the witness, and that the notice was insufficient, could not be sustained. Fleming v. Shenandoah Tp., 71 Iowa 456.

The testimony of a stenographer in regard to evidence introduced upon a former trial is competent if based upon his recollection of the evidence itself and not of his notes. Moore v. Moore, 39 Iowa 461.

Stenographer's notes are not depositions and detached portions are not to be used to impeach a witness on a subsequent trial without first interrogating him as to them. Seligman v. Ten Eyck, 53 Mich. 285.

California Code Civ. Proc., § 273, provides as follows: "The report of an official reporter of any court, duly appointed and sworn, when written out in longhand and certified as being a correct transcript of the testimony, and of the proceedings in the case, shall be prima facie a correct statement of such testimony and proceedings." Under this section the plaintiff was allowed to introduce the stenographer's transcript of evidence given in another suit, but the supreme court held that this section did not make the transcript itself admissible in evidence. An unfiled transcript is not a public record, but must be put upon the footing of a private memorandum, and having been written up at an uncertain time, is not admissible as part of the res gestæ. Reid v. Reid, 73 Cal. 206.

The notes of the shorthand reporter of a district court of Nebraska, of the testimony of a witness examined in that court, is not admissible in a future action between the same parties as documentary or independent evidence. Lipscomb v. Lyon, 19 Neb. 511.

A certified copy of a stenographer's report of proceedings is admissible whenever the original would be. Spielman v. Flynn, 19 Neb. 342.

where the stenographer's reports are sought to be made a part of the record.¹

1. In Cases of Appeal.—In Pennsylvania and West Virginia, the acts relating to a stenographer declare that their "notes shall be deemed and held official, and the best authority in any matter of dispute." Such notes must be made up under the eye and direction and with the approval of the court, and subject to its direction. These notes of testimony, including exceptions to the rulings of the court during the examination, become part of the cause and need not be embodied in any other bill of exceptions, nor require other verification than identification by the clerk of the court and by the reporter himself. Taylor v. Preston, 79 Pa. St. 436; Chase v. Vandergrift, 88 Pa. St. 217; Cummings v. Armstrong, 34 W. Va. 1.

In Louisiana, under Act No. 94, 1876, p. 150, it was held, in Nichols v. Harrison, 32 La. Ann. 646, that the notes of a stenographer, although illegible or unintelligible to any one else, constitute a "taking in writing under the eye and within the hearing of the court by a sworn officer, and although they had never been transcribed or translated, owing to some accident, the insufficiency of the record under such circumstances was no ground for dismissing the bill."

Iowa.—Evidence taken by a stenographer does not become a part of the record, until the shorthand notes, together with a translation thereof, are deposited in the clerk's office and duly certified by the judge. And this must be done within the time prescribed by law else it constitutes no part of the record and will be stricken from it. Chicago Lumber Co. v. Davis, 82 Iowa 731; Kavalier v. Machula, 77 Iowa 121; Thomas v. McDonald, 77 Iowa 126; Lowe v. Lowe, 40 Iowa 220; Harris v. Snair, 76 Iowa 558; McCarthy v. Watrous, 69 Iowa 260; Gibbs v. Buckingham, 48 Iowa 96; Lynch v. Kennedy, 42 Iowa 220; Wise v. Usry, 72 Iowa 74; Arts v. Culbertson, 73 Iowa 13; Wadsworth v. First Nat. Bank, 73 Iowa 425; Merrill v. Bowe, 69 Iowa 653; Hammond v. Wolf, 78 Iowa 227. The certificate of the judge indorsed upon the transcript, that it is all the evidence given in the trial, is sufficient to make it a bill of exceptions. McCarthy v. Watrous, 69 Iowa 260; Gibbs v. Buckingham, 48 Iowa 96;

McFarland v. Folsom, 61 Iowa 117; Hahn v. Miller, 60 Iowa 96.

In Richards v. Lounesbury, 65 Iowa 587, the court, citing Ross v. Loomis, 64 Iowa 432, held that evidence taken in shorthand can only become written evidence when translated and certified by the reporter, and that the certificate of the judge alone, who cannot read such notes, is not sufficient.

Although the original shorthand notes of the testimony were certified by the judge and the stenographer who took them, the transcript does not become a part of the record, if the typewritten copy used by the judge, and the longhand copy made by the attorney for the appellants were not so certified. Citizens' Sav. Bank v. Stewart, 82 Iowa 719.

Where a translation of the report of testimony taken on a trial, certified by the stenographer and inserted in the bill of exceptions in a blank left for that purpose, was not designated as the testimony in any cause, although on the outside of the document the title of the case was indorsed, such evidence was not sufficiently identified to be considered on appeal. Joy v. Bitzer, 77 Iowa 73.

The transcript of reporter's notes showed that the documents offered were identified by exhibit marks, and that two depositions were read in evidence; to this transcript two documents were attached bearing exhibit marks identical with those called for in the transcript, and two depositions indorsed as in this case; the transcript also contained a copy of the judge's certificate to the original report in shorthand, certifying that the same, together with the documentary evidence therein referred to, contained all the evidence given on the trial. This was held by the court to be sufficient identification of the transcript on appeal. Johnston v. McPherran, 81 Iowa 230; Way v. Counsel, 76 Iowa 741.

Although evidence is not preserved by bill of exceptions it may be preserved by the stenographer's report, and upon being duly certified, may become a part of the record on appeal. DeLong v. Lee, 73 Iowa 53.

It was stated in a bill of exceptions that the "evidence was taken down by the official stenographer in the form of depositions, and the notes were filed in the clerk's office and made a part of the record therein, and a true transcript of said notes and evidence made and exhibited by the report is as follows: (here the court will insert a true and complete transcript of all evidence offered and introduced in the trial);" such statement in the bill did not identify the evidence by any unmistakable reference thereto as required by the Code of Iowa, § 2834. Nelson v. Peterson, 82 Iowa 739.

Indiana.—In order to constitute the longhand manuscript of evidence taken by a stenographer a part of the record on appeal, it must be incorporated into the bill of exceptions. Marshall v. State, 107 Ind. 173; Weir Plow Co. v. Walmsley, 110 Ind. 242; Shirk v. Coyle, 2 Ind. App. 354.

A paper in the record purporting to be the stenographer's report of evidence, not signed or attested by the judge, is entirely without force. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Kane, 120 Ind. 140; Lyon v. Davis, 111 Ind. 384.

But it has been held in McCormick, etc., Mach. Co. v. Gray, 114 Ind. 340, that where the original longhand manuscript of the evidence was followed by the certificate of the official reporter to the effect that it contained all the evidence given in the cause, the trial judge, when he signed a statement to the effect that the plaintiff tenders the document as his bill of exceptions, and prays that the same may be signed and made a part of the record, sufficiently certified that all the evidence given in the cause was contained in such manuscript.

If there be an omission in the record on appeal to note the appointment and swearing of the stenographer, such defect may be cured by the stenographer certifying that he was the duly appointed reporter, together with the certificate of the clerk, that the report is the original longhand manuscript of the evidence, and was made a part of the bill of exceptions. Tobin v. Young (Ind. 1888), 17 N. E. Rep. 625.

A bill of exceptions which ended with a statement to the effect that it contained all the evidence given in the cause, and duly signed by the presiding judge, will not be disregarded because the reporter was not sworn. Williams v. Pendleton, etc., Turnpike Co., 76 Ind. 87.

A stenographer's report of oral testimony is not a "written instrument."

within the meaning of Indiana Rev. Stat., § 626, which allows written instruments to be brought into a bill of exceptions. by the words, "here insert, etc." Wagoner v. Wilson, 108 Ind. 210; Fahlor v. State, 108 Ind. 387; Lowery v. Carver, 104 Ind. 447; but the report in order to be brought into a record must be set out in the bill before the latter has been signed by the judge; merely attaching it to the bill after it has been signed will not effect this. Patterson v. Churchman, 122 Ind. 379; Dick v. Mullins, 128 Ind. 365.

Under Indiana Rev. Stat., § 1410, the longhand manuscript of a report of evidence taken by a stenographer, appearing in a bill of exceptions, is an original document incorporated therein; the original papers attached to and properly identified in such longhand report are considered a part thereof, and are properly in the record, notwithstanding the general rule, that original papers read in evidence must be copied in the bill of exceptions at the proper place and cannot be transmitted to the court with the record. Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Quick, 109 Ind. 295; Tobin v. Young (Ind. 1888), 17 N. E. Rep. 625.

In Indiana, it is held that a bill of exceptions may not contain any matter in the characters used by shorthand writers, upon the principle that all pleadings must be in the English language. Merrick v. State, 63 Ind. 327.

Michigan.—By Michigan Act, 1879, § 8, the minutes of the official stenographer are authorized to be used in settling a bill of exceptions, but it does not give them the character of depositions, or record evidence generally. Edwards v. Heuer, 46 Mich. 95.

The entire evidence as taken by the stenographer was sent up as a bill of exceptions, but there was no index to the record or to the parts thereof to which the assignments of error applied. In such case the court will not examine the record critically for error. Pease v. Munro, 83 Mich. 475.

In case of an appeal in a divorce suit, the settlement of facts, preparatory to taking the appeal, may properly be made on the stenographer's notes, where the judge goes out of office before the time for such settlement expires. Johnson v. Johnson, 49 Mich. 639.

The preparation of a bill of exceptions by merely taking a heading

STEP-CHILDREN.—See CHILD, vol. 3, p. 232; GRANDCHILD, vol. 8, p. 1412; ISSUE, vol. 11, p. 870.

STIPULATED DAMAGES.—See LIQUIDATED DAMAGES, vol. 13, p. 847.

STIPULATION (IN ADMIRALTY).—As to stipulations relating to the preparation for or conduct of a trial, see TRIAL.

- | | |
|---|---|
| I. In General, 567. | IV. To Appear and Abide or Pay Decree, 573. |
| II. Stipulations for Costs, 571. | V. To Abide or Pay Decree, 574. |
| III. Stipulations for Costs and Damages, 573. | VI. For Value, 574. |
| | VII. On Appeal, 581. |

I. IN GENERAL.—The term “stipulation” in admiralty practice is the analogue of “bond” or “undertaking” in the practice of and conclusion to the usually voluminous notes of a stenographer, is oppressive in its expense to the parties, and imposes unnecessary labor on the court. Therefore, the plaintiff was allowed only one-third of the expense in taxing the costs. Rice v. Rice, 50 Mich. 448.

North Carolina.—In case of appeal, the bill of exceptions should not contain the entire amount of evidence embraced in the stenographer's report, but only so much of such evidence, and other matters occurring on the trial, as may be necessary to present and illustrate the matters excepted to. Durham Tp. v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 108 N. Car. 399.

Montana.—The evidence contained in the record on appeal was a mere transcript of the shorthand reporter's notes, by question and answer, and no reason was given why it should be in that condition. Such record could not be considered, and therefore the findings were presumed to be sustained by the evidence. Barger v. Halford, 10 Mont. 57, citing Newell v. Myendorff, 9 Mont. 254.

Oregon.—The Oregon statute authorizing the appointment, etc., of official stenographers, provides in § 5, that the notes of such stenographer when transcribed and certified as correct and filed with the clerk, as provided, may thereafter be read in evidence under the same circumstances as depositions, but nothing in the act gives such notes the effect, or makes them perform the office, of a bill of exceptions. McQuade v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 19 Oregon 535.

Wyoming.—The Act of December, 1877, provides that the transcription of a stenographer's notes into longhand, shall be deemed to be a correct statement of the testimony given on a trial, but such transcription cannot take the place of a bill of exceptions, for the Wyoming Civil Code, § 303, requires a certified and absolutely true statement of the evidence to be taken up in all proceedings in error. Johns v. Adams, 2 Wyoming 194.

Massachusetts.—The purpose of the Massachusetts statute of 1870, ch. 312, providing for the appointment by the superior court of the county of Suffolk of stenographers, is to afford assistance to the court and the counsel in conducting the trial and in drawing up reports and bills of exceptions, not that a complete report of all that took place in the court below whether material or immaterial to the questions of law reserved should be transmitted to the supreme judicial court.

Where a report from the superior court stated none of the rulings upon the admission and rejection of the evidence, and upon the question reserved, whether there was any evidence to be submitted to the jury, referred to the stenographer's report annexed; and this report, as printed, covered about two hundred pages and consisted in large part of irrelevant and unimportant details of testimony, long cross-examinations, affecting only the bias and credibility of witnesses, and interlocutory discussions between the judge and counsel, through which the rulings of the judge and the portions of the evidence bearing upon the questions of law to be determined were scattered, it was held that the report was so irregular that it must be dismissed. Churchill v. Palmer, 115 Mass. 310.

the common law courts. The subject is therefore considered here in its restricted technical sense, and not in its more enlarged significance as a synonym of the terms "contract" or "agreement," of which there is nothing peculiar to be observed in admiralty.

Stipulations are required in the civil law practice for a variety of purposes, all of which have been reduced in the American admiralty practice to five, namely: for costs; for costs and damages; for value; to appear and abide and pay the decree of the court; and lastly to abide and pay the decree.¹

They follow the civil law in respect to formalities of execution, and consequently need not be under seal.² But if executed under seal,³ or if insufficiently executed as specialties, they are none the less valid as admiralty stipulations.⁴ In the construction of a stipulation, in case of ambiguity as to its meaning, the intention of the court under the order of which it was taken, rather than the intention of the parties, is to be considered.⁵

Stipulations should be acknowledged before the court or a commissioner.⁶ Personal sureties are required to swear that their estate is worth twice the amount of the obligation assumed, after

1. Adm. Rules, Sup. Ct. (U. S.), 3, 4, 10, 11, 25, 35; 1 Ben. Adm., § 493.

2. The Alligator, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 145; The Wanata, 95 U. S. 600; Lane v. Townsend, Ware (U. S.) 292; The Sydney, 47 Fed. Rep. 260; Nelson v. U. S., Pet. (C. C.) 235; Dunlap Prac. 164. The security may be by bond, recognizance, or stipulation. The Octavia, 1 Mason (U. S.) 150; 2 Conkl. Adm. (2d ed.) 105; Holmes v. Dodge, Abb. Adm. 60; Gaines v. Travis, Abb. Adm. 422.

3. Lane v. Townsend, Ware (U. S.) 292.

4. The Alligator, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 145.

5. Lane v. Townsend, Ware (U. S.) 292; Cure v. Bullus, 7 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 345. In the first case, Ware, J., said on the question of the construction of a stipulation in admiralty: "In contracts, it is the intention of the party which governs, in giving a construction to the terms of the agreement, and when that intention is ascertained, if it is not in collision with any rule of law, the court is bound to carry it into effect. But the security, which is taken in the progress of a suit in court, for the purpose of sustaining and enforcing its jurisdiction and authority, is taken under the order of the court or of the law. Its terms are dictated by the law or the court, and as the will of the party is not consulted as to the tenor of the obligation, so his will or intention is not regarded in its interpretation.

Such is the language of the civil law, which it is well known has had great influence over the jurisprudence, and more especially the practice of the admiralty. . . . If, therefore, there is an ambiguity in the terms of the stipulation, or the construction of them is doubtful, it is not the intention of the party, for which we are to inquire, for the will of the party had nothing to do in determining its conditions; the doubt must be removed by consulting the intention of the court, or the law which required the stipulation and dictated its terms."

6. Adm. Rules 5, 35. Neither of these rules provides for the execution of a stipulation before a clerk in vacation. In The Jeanie Landles, 17 Fed. Rep. 91, it was held that the clerk could not take a stipulation for the discharge of a vessel, there being in that case no method of giving formal notice of the fact to the marshal, and advising him that the process for the arrest of the vessel had been superseded. A doubt to the same effect is expressed in Conkling's Treatise (2d ed.) 366. Mr. Benedict adopts the contrary view, relying upon the principle that the court of admiralty is always open, and that proceedings in a cause therein, in vacation, are entered as having taken place in open court, and upon U. S. Act, April 5, 1832, providing that such proceedings may take place as well in vacation as in term, and that bail may be taken by the payment of all debts.¹ Any person dissatisfied with the sureties offered may, on exception and notice, have their solvency determined by the court or a commissioner.² Further security may be compelled in case of the subsequent insolvency, insufficiency, death,³ or removal of the surety beyond the jurisdiction of the court.⁴ As a general rule, money may be deposited with the clerk or brought into court as a substitute for a stipulation.⁵

A stipulator in admiralty is regarded as a surety for the claimant, and his liability is strictly measured by the terms of the stipulation.⁶ He will be released by the substitution of a new party as sole libellant,⁷ but not by an amendment of the pleadings, which neither increases nor diminishes his liability,⁸ nor by a reinstatement of a libel in rem which had been dismissed and the stipulation cancelled, if such reinstatement merely revives his liability, and does not otherwise affect him injuriously.⁹ The stipulation clerk on production of a certificate of the collector of the sufficiency of the sureties. Ben. Adm. (2d. ed.), § 446.

The commissioner appointed by the circuit court of a circuit other than that in which a libel is pending, cannot authenticate a stipulation in that proceeding by his mere certificate that the proposed stipulators appeared before him and acknowledged themselves bound, etc. Sawyer v. Oakman, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 65.

1. Ben. Adm. (2d ed.), § 489.

2. Bett's Prac. 41; Ben. Adm., § 491.

3. The City of Hartford, 11 Fed. Rep. 89.

4. Adm. Rule 6.

5. Adm. Rule 11; Ben. Adm. (2d ed.), § 491.

Other matters of minor importance touching the practice in respect to stipulations will be found in the admiralty rules of the supreme court, and in those of the various district courts. Those of the supreme court may be found in Ben. Adm. (2d ed.), p. 367, and Henry's Adm. Jur. & Prac., p. 419.

6. The Ann Caroline, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 538; The Wanata, 95 U. S. 600; Brown v. Burrows, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 341; Adm. Rule 11. In the case first cited, the libellant sought to recover from the stipulators the full value of the vessel, which exceeded the amount of the stipulation, and the claim was denied upon the ground stated in the text. In Brown v. Burrows, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 341, the stipulation was in the sum of $900, and was conditioned to pay such sum as should be awarded to the libellant by final decree. It was held that the surety's liability was limited to $900, though the decree was for a greater sum. In The Wanata, 95 U. S. 600, it was said that seasonable payment of the sum expressed in the instrument was all that was to be required at the hands of the stipulators, but that if they neglected to fulfill the terms of the instrument, and the suffering party was driven by their neglect to resort to legal measures to recover the amount to satisfy his loss, they were then, like the delinquent shipowner, liable for costs and interest occasioned by their neglect and contumacy.

7. The Detroit, 1 Brown Adm. 141. But in this case it was held that the illegality of such action will be waived by proceeding in the trial without objection.

8. Newell v. Norton, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 257. In this case the amendment of the libel consisted of a dismissal thereof as to a pilot and retaining it as against the vessel and the master or owner. The court, by Grier, J., said: "It has been objected here that the allowance of the amendment was injurious to the surety in the bond given for the property, but this objection was without foundation as their liability was neither increased nor diminished. Every person bailing such property is considered as holding it subject to all legal dispositions of the court. The Harmony, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 123, citing King v. Holland, 4 T. R. 459."

9. The Brig Antelope, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 343. In this case the libel was dismissed by default, and the claimant, without notice to the libellant, entered.

cannot be increased in the appellate court.¹ In the absence of evidence to the contrary, it will be presumed that the sureties in a stipulation are solvent and sufficient.² In a libel in personam a decree against the debtor will be a lien upon his real estate, in all cases where the judgment of a state court would be given that effect. In this respect decrees in admiralty for the payment of money stand upon the same footing as decrees in equity.³ Notwithstanding the death of the claimant, a decree may be entered against a surviving stipulator,⁴ without calling in the peran order cancelling the stipulation for costs and the bond given on the discharge of the vessel, but thereafter agreed to open the default. The cause was subsequently noticed for hearing by both parties, but when it was called for hearing the claimant's proctor stated that it had been dismissed, on which the libellant's proctor moved to set aside the decree and the order of cancellation. On the hearing of this motion, Blatchford, J., said that the claimant by his conduct, followed by his noticing the cause for trial, waived the decree dismissing the libel and the order of cancellation, and continued: "The only question as to which I have had any hesitation has been, whether the claimant could thus practically assent to a reinstatement of the cause, so as to affect the sureties in the stipulation, and hold them to their liability after the dismissal of the libel, and whether the court could now vacate the decree and the order so as to hold the sureties still liable on their stipulation." The question was resolved by the judge in the affirmative, upon the ground that to all intents and purposes the property affected by the stipulation was still in court, and that the stipulation was to be deemed a mere substitute for the thing itself, and the stipulators liable to the exercise of all those authorities on the part of the court which it could properly exercise if the thing itself were still in its custody; and that it was not shown that the sureties would be affected any more injuriously than sureties in any case who were compelled to pay the debt of the principal.

An amendment of a libel by adding a co-libellant will not discharge a surety from a stipulation. The Maggie Jones, 1 Flip. (U. S.) 635.

1. Houseman v. The North Carolina, 15 Pet. (U. S.) 40.

2. The Snap, 24 Fed. Rep. 510.

3. Ward v. Chamberlain, 2 Black (U. S.) 430. In this case the question whether a decree in personam in admiralty was a lien on the real estate of the debtor, was examined at considerable length by Mr. Justice Clifford, who arrived at the conclusion that the lien of judgments in the courts of the United States, in general, did not result from any direct general legislation of Congress on the subject, and that under the Judiciary Act of 1789, ordaining that the laws of the several states shall be rules of decision at common law in the courts of the United States, such courts had uniformly adopted the principles of state policy and jurisprudence on the subject of the lien of judgments so far as the same were applicable, treating them as rules affecting real property and its transmission, whether by descent or purchase; and that a decree in admiralty in personam for the payment of money stood upon the same footing as a summary decree in a federal court of equity, and consequently became a lien on the debtor's real estate. Grier and Catron, JJ., dissented from this opinion, holding that "the lien of judgments was a rule of property which it was beyond the power of the court to establish." In Cropsey v. Crandall, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 41, the existence of the lien was recognized. See also The Belgenland, 108 U. S. 153.

Execution on a stipulation may issue as well against the land of the stipulator as against his personal effects. Rules Supreme Court of the United States, 1862; Cropsey v. Crandall, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 341; The Kentucky, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 450. See also Ward v. Chamberlain, 2 Black (U. S.) 430.

4. The James A. Wright, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 160. In this case the claimant, who was also a party to the stipulation, died before final decree in the cause. The court, by Woodruff, J., said: "The point first to be considered now on this appeal, urged as ground for reversing the decree of the district court, is sonal representatives of the decedent. No appeal lies from any proceedings upon the stipulation after final decree in the cause.¹ Married women² and partners³ have been rejected as sureties in a stipulation.

II. STIPULATIONS FOR COSTS.—A stipulation for costs may be required of the defendant in libels in personam at the discretion of the court in cases where no bail has been taken and no attachment of property sued out.⁴

The libelant, in personam or in rem, may be required to enter into a stipulation to pay all costs and expenses which may be awarded against him by final decree of the court, or on appeal.⁵

that by the death of the claimant the suit abated, and that it was error to proceed therein to a final decree, without calling in the representatives of the deceased. On that subject, I must follow the declaration of the supreme court in Penhallow v. Doane, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 53, that, in proceedings in rem, in admiralty, the death of a claimant does not abate the suit, nor render a subsequent decree therein erroneous. I deem it unnecessary, after that declaration, to discuss the question at length, but numerous cases relating to the nature of such proceedings and their conclusiveness as to all persons who do not intervene for the protection of their interest in the rem proceeded against, and relating to the substituted security which, when a discharge of the attached vessel is obtained, stands in court in lieu thereof tend to the same conclusion. The vessel is the defendant. All the world must take notice, at their peril, that condemnation is sought. All having an interest may intervene, and if, by death, or otherwise, an interest is transmitted or devolved upon persons not previously entitled to intervene, it is for them to protect their own interest, by applying to the court for that purpose. The libelant should not be affected by their neglect. There is no more reason why he should take notice of a change of interest than that he should originally have made the owner of the vessel a party to the suit."

The death of a co-stipulator will not defeat the libelant's right to summary judgment against the survivor, though the libelant has not exhausted his remedy against the claimant. The C. F. Ackerman, 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 360.

1. The Hollen, 1 Mason (U. S.) 431. In this case the res had been seized for an alleged violation of the revenue laws, and a final decree was rendered directing the appraised value of the vessel to be paid into court. No appeal was taken from this decision. Afterwards the parties to the stipulation given for the appraised value filed a petition in the cause, praying that execution on the stipulation be superseded, in order to allow them an opportunity to comply with the terms of an alleged remission of the forfeiture by the secretary of the treasury. Defensive allegations were filed by revenue officers, and the petition was dismissed. In dismissing an appeal from this decision, Story, J., said: "The final decree of condemnation, in this case, was rendered at the May term of the district court of 1817, and for want of a claim, and no appeal was made, or indeed could under such circumstances be made to the next circuit court. That decree, then, is not subject to our revision. The subsequent proceedings upon the bond for the appraised value, and the issuing of the execution, were but incidents of the original cause to enforce the decree of condemnation. And it has been long since settled that this court has no jurisdiction over the proceedings on the bond, which is but an admiralty stipulation, unless it has possession of the cause to which it belongs."

2. In the case of The Antelope, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 521, the libelants objected to a married woman as a surety in a stipulation, and the court ordered another surety to be furnished.

3. In England partners will not be received as sureties in a stipulation. The Corner, B. & L. Adm. 161.

4. Adm. Rule 25.

5. This statement is made on the authority of Benedict's Adm. Prac., § 494. The author cites "Adm. Rules 3, 4, 10, 11, 25, 35," as his authority,

This is the equivalent of the plaintiff's "security for costs," in the common law practice.

Seamen and poor suitors are exempt from this requirement, the latter being permitted to give a "juratory caution,"¹ or personal undertaking for the costs.

A stipulation to pay all costs and expenses may also be required of the claimant in a proceeding in rem.²

but investigation shows that neither in these, nor in the remainder of the admiralty rules, is any provision made for a stipulation for costs on the part of a libellant in personam. The authority to require such a stipulation may perhaps be derived from Rule 46, which declares that in cases not provided for by the rules, the courts may regulate the practice "in such manner as they shall deem most expedient for the due administration of justice." The admiralty rules of the district court for the southern district of New York provide that the libellant shall give security for costs. Ben. Adm., § 413.

According to the ancient practice of the admiralty the plaintiff was required to find surety or fide jussores for the prosecution of the suit or payment of defendant's costs. Clerke's Praxis, tit. 14; but this is not now required except in a case of non-residents, and not then if the defendant has arrested sufficient property of the plaintiff in another suit. The Sophie, 1 W. Rob. 326; The Volant, 1 W. Rob. 383; The Franzet Elize, Lush. Adm. 377; The Wild Ranger, Lush. Adm. 553.

A foreign plaintiff suing in rem will not be required to give security for damages in case of the wrongful arrest of the vessel. The D. H. Peri, Lush. Adm. 543; The Mary, L. R., 1 Adm. 335.

1. The Phoenix, 36 Fed. Rep. 272; Bradford v. Bradford, 2 Flip. (U. S.) 281; Polydore v. Prince, Ware (U. S.) 402; Thomas v. Thorwegan, 27 Fed. Rep. 400. The same privilege is sometimes extended to the defendant when he is unable to give bail. Ben. Adm. (2d ed.), § 502. The "juratory caution" or security by oath, appears to be the equivalent of "personal recognizance" in other jurisdictions.

As a general rule seamen will not be required to give security for costs as libellants. 2 Parsons Adm. 417. Otherwise, if it appear that they are able to give security. Wheatley v. Hotchkiss, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 225.

A seaman will not be entitled to his exemption from the rule requiring security for costs from the libellant, where his agreement with the master for wages was made outside of the shipping articles. The Great Britain, Olc. Adm. 1.

A poor libellant will not be required to give the juratory caution, unless demanded by the defendant. Polydore v. Prince, Ware (U. S.) 402.

2. Adm. Rule 26. The term "claimant" as used in an admiralty proceeding in rem, designates the person asserting title to the subject of the suit, and is analogous to "intervenor" and "interpleading party" in other systems of procedure.

If the stipulation for costs given by a claimant be worthless, the obligors in release bonds taken by the marshal may be made liable for costs, if the decree against the claimant does not exceed the penalty of the release bond. The Madgie, 31 Fed. Rep. 926.

Where the owners of a vessel appear and contest a suit in rem Mr. Parsons considers that they are personally liable for the costs, when the damages and costs are greater than the stipulation, on the ground that by appearing they submit to the jurisdiction of the court. 2 Parsons Adm. 413. Compare The Temiscouata, 2 Spinks 208; The Nostra Signora del Carmine, 1 Spinks 303; The Mellona, 6 Notes of Cas. 62.

A claimant is liable for costs as magister litis, whether he execute a stipulation or not. In re Stover, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 201.

If a delay of an action is caused or procured by the libellant, an increased stipulation for costs should not be required from the claimant. The Laurens, Abb. Adm. 302.

A representative of the owner, by taking part in the suit as an intervenor, makes himself liable for the payment of costs though he is not a party to the stipulation. In re Stover, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 201.

The rule requiring a party to give security for costs may be waived by the other party at pleasure.¹

III. STIPULATIONS FOR COSTS AND DAMAGES.—The only instance in which a stipulation to pay damages, in addition to costs and expenses, is required, is that of an intervenor. He must file a stipulation "to pay all such costs and expenses and damages as shall be awarded by the court" on final decree or on appeal.²

IV. TO APPEAR AND ABIDE OR PAY DECREE.—This is a stipulation required in the first instance of the defendant in a suit in personam in which a simple warrant of arrest issues.³ It is the equivalent of bail taken in a suit at common law begun by the writ of capias ad respondendum. Summary process of execution may be issued on this stipulation to enforce the final decree of the court, or the decree on appeal.⁴

1. Polydore v. Prince, Ware (U. S.) 402.

2. Adm. Rule 34.

3. Adm. Rule 3.

Occasions for applying this provision are limited by Adm. Rule 48, which provides that bail shall be required of the defendants only in cases where it might be required by the laws of the state where the arrest is made, upon similar or analogous process, and abolishes imprisonment for debt in all cases where, by the laws of the state in which the court is held, imprisonment for debt has been abolished.

A court of admiralty will be governed by equitable considerations in holding a respondent to bail; so held in a case where the respondent was arrested in a foreign suit for a small amount already in litigation in the state where they dwelt; and the respondent was accordingly discharged. Martin v. Walker, Abb. Adm. 579.

By process of imprisonment, the defendant cannot be compelled to enter stipulations in a suit wherein he is not liable to rearrest. Louisiana Ins. Co. v. Nickerson, 2 Low. (U. S.) 310.

In suits commenced by warrant of arrest, the stipulators cannot, like ordinary bail, surrender their principal; they are liable to any sum which may be awarded against them by final decree. Holmes v. Dodge, Abb. Adm. 60; Gaines v. Travis, Abb. Adm. 422; In re Snow, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 485.

While a court of admiralty cannot take a recognizance, it may take a stipulation in the nature of a recognizance, conditioned to appear, or to perform a decree. Respublica v. Lacaze, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 118.

4. Adm. Rule 3. It is not understood by this, that a stipulation is the equivalent of a confession of judgment, or a "judgment note" upon which execution may issue against the obligor without a preliminary proceeding of some kind affording him an opportunity of defense. It appears from the case of The Baltic, B. & H. Adm. 149, that in the case of a stipulation for costs (and, presumably, in the case of other stipulations) payment may be enforced by motion in open court, after demand, without further notice; or upon petition filed and notice served upon the stipulator, with this qualification that in the proceeding by motion without notice a conditional decree only can be rendered against the stipulator.

A court of admiralty has jurisdiction over the sureties in a stipulation, they being quasi parties to the proceeding in which it is given, and may enforce the same by monition, attachment, or execution. The Alligator, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 145; The Hollen, 1 Mason (U. S.) 431; The Flora, 1 Hag. Adm. 298. Ex parte Warden, 13 W. N. C. (Pa.) 195.

It is not the practice in admiralty to obtain a monition, that is, bring an action against the principal in a stipulation, but to issue execution at once against him and his sureties. Gardner v. Isaacson, Abb. Adm. 141; In re Snow, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 485; Gaines v. Travis, Abb. Adm. 422; Holmes v. Dodge, Abb. Adm. 60.

Bail, or stipulators, in admiralty are treated as principals, and it is not necessary to proceed against them by suit independent of that in which the stipulation is given. The Alligator, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 145; Betts v. Hancock, 1 Salk. 33.

The fact that a party takes out a

V. TO ABIDE OR PAY DECREE.—This stipulation is required in all suits in personam where the personal effects of the defendant have been attached, and the defendant moves for a dissolution of the attachment.¹ Summary process of execution may be issued upon this stipulation, also to enforce the decree of the court.²

VI. FOR VALUE.—This is a stipulation entered into by the claimant of the ship or goods which have been taken into custody pending a proceeding in rem, in order to regain possession of them before the suit is determined.³ An appraisement of the fi. fa. on a stipulation in the first instance without success, will not affect his right to resort to a ca. sa. or to an attachment. The Delaware, Olc. Adm. 240.

1. Adm. Rule 4.

Payment of a decree by stipulators cannot be enforced by process of imprisonment in a state where imprisonment for debt has been abolished; nor by sequestration of property, nor by process of contempt. The Blanche Page, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 1; The Kentucky, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 448; 5 U. S. Stat. at Large 321.

2. Adm. Rule 4.

3. Adm. Rules 10, 11; The G. G. King, 16 Fed. Rep. 921. One of the distinctive features of admiralty procedure is that by which the vessel, or res in respect of which a liability is asserted, is subjected to the demands of the libellant, without process of any kind against the owners. The J. W. French, 13 Fed. Rep. 916. These, or their representatives (In re Stover, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 201), may, if they choose, make themselves parties to the proceeding by petition, being then designated as "claimants," or persons asserting title to the vessel in custody, and upon executing a stipulation for her appraised value are allowed to enter again into possession. Maritime law gives a lien on the vessel for all claims against her growing out of contracts or torts, whence arises the proceeding in rem, which is the appropriate mode of enforcing a lien, or jus in re. Henry Adm. Prac., § 41 et seq.

In a proceeding in rem, a personal judgment or execution against the property of claimants who defended, but were not parties to the stipulation, cannot be had; the only remedy against them is by a separate suit in personam. The Zodiac, 5 Fed. Rep. 220; Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co. v. Alexandre, 16 Fed. Rep. 279; U. S. v. Ames, 99 U. S. 35; The Gran Para, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 497.

In Stratton v. Jarvis, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 4, it was held that if there be several owners of the subject of the libel, e. g., a cargo of merchandise consigned to different persons, there must be separate claims and answers, and from this an author deduces the rule that in such case there must be separate stipulations. Parsons Shipping and Adm., p. 407.

A stipulation taken in pursuance of the U. S. Rev. Stat., § 941, providing that in a case of libel in rem the marshal may discharge the property on receiving from the claimant a stipulation in double the amount claimed by libellant, is the equivalent of a stipulation executed by the claimant under Admiralty Rule 34. The Oregon, 45 Fed. Rep. 62.

The owner or claimant need give security to pay only what the libellant may recover, leaving other persons to assert their demands by a new proceeding in rem, after the discharge. The owner retakes her liable to all the liens attaching on her. The Langdon Cheves, 2 Mason (U. S.) 59.

In a libel in rem for damages resulting from a collision, if the losses exceed the value of the vessel and freight, the claimants (owners) will be permitted to file a stipulation in the appraised value of the vessel and freight, for the benefit of all persons entitled to liens upon her for losses resulting from the collision; and on the filing of such stipulation the owners will be discharged from all liability arising out of the collision. The City of Norwich, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 89.

Where the owner contests the liability of the ship for losses, his stipulation for costs must include the fees of the clerk, marshal, proctors, and others, but not the clerk's commission, which is payable whether he contests or not. The Vernon, 36 Fed. Rep. 113.

If claimants incur an unnecessary expense in finding stipulators for property is provided for, and the stipulation is usually conditioned to pay such appraised value,—whence its technical name “for value;” but it must be in such sum as the court shall direct.¹ This procedure is closely analogous to that by which, in other jurisdictions, the defendant regains possession of his property in replevin or detinue. Such a stipulation is deemed a substitute for the thing itself.²

the full amount of an exorbitant demand contained in the libel, without an effort to obtain a discharge of the vessel on a proper stipulation, they will not be entitled to set off the compensation paid the stipulators against the libelant’s damages. The Stelvio, 30 Fed. Rep. 509; The Indiana, 22 Fed. Rep. 925.

The respondent in a cross-libel in rem may be required to give security, though the vessel has not been bonded in the original libel, but is still in custody, and though the original libelant has not given security in his action. The Empresa Maritima a Vapor v. North, etc., Steam Nav. Co., 16 Fed. Rep. 502.

The United States government cannot have the res discharged from arrest by giving a stipulation for value in a proceeding in a district court in admiralty to enforce a lien on a vessel given by a state law; such a case is not within Rev. St. U. S., § 3753, which provides for replevying government property taken “in a judicial proceeding under the laws of any state.” The Revenue Cutter, 4 Sawy. (U. S.) 136.

Where several libels are filed against a vessel to recover amounts exceeding her value, the amount of the freight cannot be included in the stipulation for value required of the owners. The Vivid, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 397.

The court may permit a stipulation to be given to satisfy a decree, reserving at the same time for the stipulator the right to deny the legality of the marshal’s custody and to ask for relief from the stipulation. The Roslyn, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 119.

A stipulation given upon simple notice of the filing of a libel is valid, though the vessel sought to be proceeded against is not and never was in custody. The Roslyn, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 119.

Owners who are too poor to give a stipulation, who make affidavit of that fact, and that they have a good defense, will be excused from the requirement of this rule. Adm. 34. U. S. v. The Lion, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 399.

1. Adm. Rules 10, 11; The Cargo ex Venus, L. R., 1 Adm. 50, an English case, in which the court held that an appraisement of the property was conclusive, and that the owner could not be discharged by payment of what he realized from the sale of the property. See also The Wanata, 105 U. S. 600; The Hope, 1 W. Rob. 155.

The stipulation is to be considered a security not for the amount of the claim of the libelant, but simply for the value of the property arrested, to the extent of the claim and costs of suit, if any, beyond the preliminary stipulation. Clifford, J., in U. S. v. Ames, 99 U. S. 35, citing Williams & Bruce Prac. 270. In a recent work this case is cited as authority for the proposition that a stipulation given to discharge a vessel from arrest must be in an amount sufficient to secure the claim for which the vessel was arrested. Henry’s Adm. Jur. & Proc., § 124.

2. The Palmyra, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 1. Here it was objected that the court could not reinstate an appeal in a libel suit in which the res had been delivered to the claimant on stipulation in the court below, without prejudicing the rights of the sureties in the stipulation. Story, J., after observing that the court could not concur in the objection, continued: “Whenever a stipulation is taken in an admiralty suit, for the property subjected to legal process and condemnation, the stipulation is deemed a mere substitute for the thing itself, and the stipulators liable to the exercise of all those authorities on the part of the court which it could properly exercise if the thing itself were still in its custody. This is the known course of the admiralty. It is quite a different question, whether the court will, in particular cases, exercise its authority, where sureties on the stipulation may be affected injuriously. That is a subject addressed to its sound discretion. In the present case, there was no ground for surprise or injury to the stipulators, or, indeed, to any party in interest. If there had been no final award of damages, the cause would not have been properly before this court, and the appeal itself, being a nullity, would have left the cause still in the circuit court. But as such an award was made, the appeal was rightfully made; and the dismissal, being solely for a defect of jurisdiction apparent on the record, and founded on a mistake, constituted no bar to a new appeal, even if a general dismissal might."

A vessel will not be released on stipulation by the claimant, when the object of the libel is to determine the right of possession to the vessel;¹ nor where such discharge would defeat the very object of the suit; for example, to enforce a seizure under the neutrality laws;² nor, in a salvage proceeding in rem, will ship or cargo be delivered on stipulation to the claimants, where it is apparent that a proportion, not a specific or gross sum, should be allowed as salvage; nor, as matter of right, is the cargo deliverable in case of its liability to deteriorate or perish, or the ship, if liable to be injured by delay incident to the suit, the proper course in such case being to apply to the court for a sale.³

In U. S. v. Ames, 99 U. S. 35, it was held that where property is seized in admiralty, as forfeited, and a bond is given by its claimant for its return to him, such bond becomes the substitute for the property; and in case the property is condemned, the remedy is transferred from the property to the bond. The question, whether a case is made for the recall of property released under bond in such a case, must be determined by the courts empowered to hear and determine the matter in controversy in the pending suit.

1. Henry's Adm. Proc., § 124, citing Muir v. The Brisk, 4 Ben. (U. S.) 252; The John, 2 Hag. Adm. 305.

2. The Mary N. Hogan, 17 Fed. Rep. 813. The following extract from the opinion of Brown, J., in this case, is pertinent and instructive: "The appointment of appraisers and the bonding of the vessel are claimed under Rule 11 of the Supreme Court Rules in Admiralty, which provides that 'where any ship shall be arrested, the same may, upon the application of the claimant, be delivered to him upon due appraisal to be had under the direction of the court, upon the claimant's depositing in court so much money as the court shall order, or upon his giving stipulation with sureties,' etc. In the great majority of cases suits are brought, and the arrest of the vessel is made, for the purpose only of securing payment of some pecuniary demand. In such cases the object of the suit will be fully secured by permitting a good bond, with sureties, to be substituted as security in place of the vessel during the pendency of the litigation; and thereby not only is the great expense of keeping the vessel in custody for a considerable period avoided, but the vessel is also allowed in the meantime to be engaged in the pursuit of commerce. Rule 11 is clearly designed for this purpose. It is not in form imperative in all cases of the arrest of vessels, but provides only that the vessel 'may' be delivered, etc., thus leaving to the court a discretion which may be rightly exercised under peculiar circumstances; and, as it seems to me, the rule clearly should not be applied in those cases where the object of the suit is not the enforcement of any money demand, nor to secure any payment of damages, but to take possession of and forfeit the vessel herself, in order to prevent her departure upon an unlawful expedition, in violation of the neutrality laws of the United States. Such, by the statements of the libel, appears to be the sole object of this suit; and to permit the vessel, as soon as arrested, to be bonded by the very persons alleged to be engaged in this unlawful expedition, and bonded presumably for the purpose of immediately prosecuting it, would be to facilitate in the most direct manner the unlawful expedition, and would practically defeat the whole object of the suit, and render the government powerless by legal proceedings to prevent the violation of its international obligations."

3. The Nathaniel Hooper, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 542.

As a general rule a vessel which has been discharged on stipulation for value, cannot be rearrested for the same cause of action.¹

Stipulators are liable for interest upon the stipulated sum, only in case of default in complying with the terms of the stipulation.² The amount of the stipulation being fixed, the surety cannot be

1. If a vessel has once been discharged on stipulation, and the libel discontinued and costs paid, it cannot be rearrested for the same cause of action. The Wm. Murtagh, 17 Fed. Rep. 259; The Nahor, 9 Fed. Rep. 213; The Union, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 90; The White Squall, 4 Blatch. (U. S.) 103; The Thales, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 327; Home Ins. Co. v. The Keokuk, Chic. Leg. N. 249. See also The Kalamazoo, 9 Eng. L. & Eq. 557; The Hope, 1 W. Rob. 154; The Volant, 1 W. Rob. 383; 15 Law Reporter 563.

No right of subrogation exists on behalf of a stipulator when he discharges a decree against the claimant; he cannot rearrest a vessel as security for the liability of the claimant to him as surety. The Robertson, 8 Biss. (U. S.) 180; Roberts v. The Huntsville, 3 Wood (U. S.) 386.

If a vessel has been discharged by mistake, or through fraud or improvidence, the court may, on application, within a reasonable time, order a rearrest. The Union, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 90; The Virgo, 13 Blatchf. (U. S.) 255; The Hero, B. & L. Adm. 447; The Duchess de Brabant, Swabey Adm. 264; The Flora, L. R., 1 Adm. 45.

If the rights of third parties have intervened, the rearrest will not be ordered. Henry's Adm. Jur. & Proc. 349, citing The Virgo, 13 Blatchf. (U. S.) 255; The White Squall, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 103; The Thales, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 204; The City of Hartford, 11 Fed. Rep. 89.

In England, it has been held that if a vessel be arrested and delivered up on bail, and judgment be given in a greater sum than the bail, the court will not direct a rearrest of the vessel. The Kalamazoo, 9 Eng. L. & Eq. 557; The Wild Ranger, 1 B. & L. Adm. 84. Compare La Tourette v. Burton, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 43. But the court may at any time before judgment allow an amendment of the libel, and rearrest of the vessel. The Hero, B. & L. Adm. 447.

In Ben. Adm., p. 265, § 407, it is said: "That a vessel which has been delivered to the claimant on stipulation, may be rearrested to answer other claims if necessary for the purposes of justice." Citing The Gran Para, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 497. The proposition of the text is doubtless true, but the case cited supports the text only by way of remote inference. A quantity of bullion had been taken into custody on a libel and afterwards released to a claimant on a stipulation executed for his benefit, to which he was not a party. A decree of restitution was passed by the supreme court on appeal from the court below, and it was held that it being necessary to retake the property into the custody of the court, the proper process against the claimant was a monition and not an execution on the stipulation; he not being a party to the stipulation. No question appears to have been made as to the right to retake the property.

Upon the death or insolvency of the sureties in the stipulation for value, the court may order a new stipulation to be executed. The Virgo, 13 Blatchf. (U. S.) 255; The City of Hartford, 11 Fed. Rep. 89.

2. The Sidney, 47 Fed. Rep. 260; citing Brown v. Burrows, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 340; The Ann Caroline, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 538; The Webb, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 406. Contra, The Belle, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 57. In the Wanata, 95 U. S. 600, Clifford, J., said: "Stipulators, like sureties, where the stipulation is for a definite sum, are bound to make good the liability or default of the principal to the amount of the stipulation, but they cannot be held to any greater sum unless they themselves have been guilty of default, in which case they may be held liable for costs and interest, by the way of damages, to the extent that the same have arisen from the breach of their duty to comply with the terms of their stipulation. Where the stipulation or bond is given for the value of the ship, the obligation of the stipulator is that he pay into court the sum ascertained as the value. Benedict Adm. (2d ed.) 294; Dunlap Adm. 174; Lane v. Townsend, 1 Ware. (U. S.) 289."

An agent who executes a stipulation compelled to pay more than that amount, though the stipulation be conditioned to pay such sum as shall be awarded by the final decree.¹ Nor can the stipulation be reduced in amount if it was for value, and who appears and defends a suit, is liable for interest on the stipulation from the time it was filed. Brown, J., in The Maggie M., 33 Fed. Rep. 591; citing The Stover, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 201; The Wanata, 95 U. S. 612; The Maggie J. Smith, 123 U. S. 356.

Where a stipulation for value recites that it was "entered into pursuant to the rules and practices of the court," the rules of the court will be held a part of the stipulation so that a libellant, being entitled to interest under the rules of the court, may be allowed interest on the value recovered from the date of the stipulation. The Belle, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 57, distinguishing The Ann Caroline, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 538. See The Sydney, 47 Fed. Rep. 262, where the court adverts to this case in language from which disapproval may be inferred.

1. Brown v. Burrows, 2 Blatchf. (U.S.) 340; The William H. Webb, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 406.

The following observations by Clifford, J., in the Ann Caroline, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 538, elucidating this point, are also valuable as a resume of the procedure on the part of the claimant desiring to obtain possession of the ship: "Libellant insists that he is entitled to recover the value of his vessel, together with the interest on that amount from the time of the collision to the date of the decree. On the other side, the claimants insist that the stipulation for value under the general rules of the admiralty, stands in the place of the vessel, and that the decree as against the stipulators cannot exceed the amount of the stipulation. Separate stipulations are usually filed for costs, and the same rule, it is admitted, applies to such a stipulation as to the one given for the value of the vessel. Stipulation for costs in the sum of $250 was regularly filed by the claimants in this case at the time they entered their appearance. Such a stipulation is properly required as a condition of the right to appear, unless the claimant, under the Act of the 3d of March, 1847, had given the bond to the marshal therein mentioned for the discharge of the property arrested at the time of the service of the monition. Ch. 55; 9

Stat. at L. 181; 2 Conk. Adm. 94, 97; Adm. Rules 26, 34. Suit in this case was in rem, and consequently the vessel, when arrested, was in contemplation of law in the possession of the court. But the practice is, where the claimant desires to gain the possession, to allow the value of the same to be ascertained; and when that is done according to law, the claimant may file a stipulation for that amount in the place of the vessel. When the claimant desires to secure the possession of the vessel, he may apply to the court for an appraisement, or if the parties agree upon a sum as the value, the court may adopt that sum, and accept a stipulation for that amount. Parties in this case agreed that the value of the vessel was $5,000, and thereupon the court accepted a stipulation for that amount, and the vessel was delivered to the claimants. Adm. Rule 11; 2 Conk. Adm. 96; Lane v. Townsend, 1 Ware (U. S.) 300. Obligation of a stipulator is the same as that of a surety, and consequently his liability is limited by the terms of his contract. Whenever the obligation of the stipulator is for a definite sum named in the stipulation, the surety stipulating to pay that sum cannot be compelled to pay more than that amount. Brown v. Burrows, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 341; Adm. Rule 11. Same rule prevails whether the instrument is in form a bond or stipulation. Where a claimant in a suit in rem made application for a delivery of the property, and obtained it by an order of the court, upon giving a bond to suspend the appraised value, Judge Story held that the bond was good as a stipulation, and having affirmed the decree condemning the vessel, ordered that judgment should be entered against the signers of the bond as stipulators for the appraised value of the vessel with costs. The Alligator, 1 Gall. (C. C.) 149. Mr. Benedict says, that where a party is entitled to have the property delivered on bail, he is bound to stipulate with sureties to pay the full value of the property. Such value, says the same author, may usually be fixed by consent and agreement of the parties, but if not, then it is ascertained by an appraisement; and on final decree the stipulators are bound to pay into court executed out of court between the parties; otherwise, if it was taken in pursuance of an order of court.¹

A stipulation given by the claimant revests title to the vessel in him, discharged of the libellant's demands.² The court has no authority over a vessel after it has once been discharged on stipulation, and cannot order its restoration to a person from whom the sum ascertained as the value. Ben. Adm. § 498, p. 272; Dunl. Pr. 181; The Octavia, 1 Mason (C. C.) 150. Bail is taken, says Mr. Dunlap, for the value of the ship upon the delivery of the property, and it will not be reduced upon the ground that the property brought less upon a sale than the appraised value. Dunl. Pr. 174; The Peggy, 4 C. Rob. 304. Settled rule is, that where the value of the vessel condemned in a cause of damage is insufficient to pay the loss, it is not competent for the court to award damages against the owner beyond the value or proceeds of the ship. The Hope, 1 W. Rob. 155. But it has been held that costs might be awarded against the owner where there was an appearance and hearing, although no stipulation to that effect had been given. The John Dunn, 1 W. Rob. 160. Rule in admiralty, however, is the same as at law, that sureties are only bound to the extent of the obligation expressed in their bond, but not beyond its plain and obvious meaning. The Harriet, 1 W. Rob. 192. The true measure of damages in this case was the loss which the libellant sustained by the sinking of his vessel, which, as the commissioner reported, was $5,000. He lost that amount, and there is no proof in the case that he lost anything more, for which any claim is made in the libel. Stipulation for value filed by the claimants was for that sum and, consequently, the libellant is entitled to a decree against the stipulators for that sum, as the value of the vessel, and no more, because they never agreed to be bound for any greater sum. Argument of the libellant is, that he is entitled to interest on that sum as against the stipulators for value; but it is a sufficient answer to the proposition to say that this court has expressly decided otherwise, and we adhere to that decision. Hemmenway v. Fisher, 20 How. (U. S.) 258. Separate stipulation was filed for costs, and, of course, the libellant is entitled to full costs in the district and circuit courts, unless the amount exceeds the sum specified in the stipulation."

In England it has been held that if the owners of a vessel are liable only for the value of the ship and freight, the stipulator will be liable only to the same extent, though the action may have been entered and stipulation given in a larger sum. The Duchess de Brabant, Swabey Adm. 264. Mr. Parsons assumes that the same rule exists in the American Admiralty, 2 Parsons Adm. 411; the stipulation being regarded as a mere substitute for the thing itself, and the stipulator liable for no more and no less than the thing itself if it had remained in the custody of the court. The Ann Caroline, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 538; The Palmyra, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 1.

1. The Monarch, 30 Fed. Rep. 263. In this case, Simonton, J., said: "The motion is now made to reduce the amount of this bond. Had the stipulation been executed under an order emanating from this court, binding on the parties, libellant and respondent, or under the section of the Revised Statutes (941), I would feel no hesitation in looking into the amount demanded, and in reducing it if the facts justified me in so doing. The City of Hartford, 11 Fed. Rep. 89. But in the present case the bond is the result of the act of the parties, and was insisted upon by the libellant as the sole condition of the immediate release of the steamship and of her cargo. Without such consent she could not have left the port. Reluctantly and under protest the claimant finally yielded and gave the bond. This was done to gain a present advantage,—the speedy departure of the vessel, and time and money saved. Upon this, and this alone, the libellant released his lien on the cargo and the ship. He accepted this bond in lieu of both. This being the act of the parties, accompanied by the release of present advantage on the one part, and the gain of present advantage on the other, I cannot interfere with it."

2. The Thales, 3 Ben. (U. S.) 327; 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 103; The White Squall, 4 Blatchf. (U. S.) 203.

it has been forcibly taken.¹ If a vessel in the hands of stipulators be arrested on other suits brought against her, the stipulators may, on petition, be released from their stipulation, in which case the marshal will hold the vessel on the former, as well as the latter warrant of arrest.²

No personal judgment can be rendered against claimants in a proceeding in rem who have not signed a stipulation for a release of the vessel. The only remedy of the libelant against them is by a proceeding in personam.³ A personal representative or agent of the owner will be permitted to intervene on stipulation.⁴

The claimant will not be entitled to a deduction from the stipulation on account of liens lessening the value of the ship in his hands.⁵ The original liability of a vessel is not waived by a stipulation filed for her release.⁶

1. U. S. v. Towns, 7 Ben. (U. S.) 444.

2. The Jewess, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 21, note. But such petition will not be entertained until the process in the second case be returned to court. The Empire, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 19.

3. The Steamship Zodiac, 5 Fed. Rep. 220. Admiralty Rule 21 of the supreme court provides that in all cases of a final decision for the payment of money the libelant shall have the right of execution against the property "of the defendants or stipulators." In the construction of this rule in the case of Atlantic, etc., Ins. Co. v. Alexandre, 16 Fed. Rep. 279, the court, by Brown, J., said: "I am satisfied that it was not the intention of this rule in collision cases to afford a personal judgment against the claimants who have not executed the stipulation, and that the phrase 'defendants or stipulators,' in rule 21, refers to a judgment against one or the other according to the nature of the action, and not to a judgment against both conjointly. Betts Adm. 99."

4. In re Stover, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 201; The Adeline, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 244; The Sally, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 401; The Lively, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 315.

Personal representatives of deceased claimants in a proceeding in rem will be admitted as parties to the cause. The James A. Wright, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 160; Penhallow v. Deane, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 54.

Foreign administrators may intervene without taking out letters of administration in the state in which the court of admiralty sits. The Boston B. & H. Adm. 309.

If it appears that the claimant has no title to the property seized, the court will retain the res for delivery to the true owner upon appearance and claim made by him. U. S. v. Four Hundred and Twenty-two Casks of Wine, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 547.

If charterers in possession fail to appear and defend a libel in rem, in which the owners are not personally liable, the latter will be permitted to intervene, on stipulation, as claimants. The Prometheus, 1 Low. (U. S.) 491.

The fact that stipulators to whom a vessel has been delivered, fail to file a formal claim, or name the owners in the stipulation, will not affect their liability. Todd v. The Bark Tulchen, 2 Fed. Rep. 600.

5. The Virgin, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 538, Story, J., saying: "One of the owners has had the ship delivered up to him upon an appraisement. . . . and he has given a stipulation according to the course of admiralty proceedings to refund that value, together with damages, interest, and costs, to the court. He is not at liberty now to insist that the ship is of less than that value in his hands; or that he has discharged other liens diminishing the value for which the owners were personally liable in solido, in the first instance."

The owners of a vessel and the stipulators are not estopped by the appraisement and stipulation in a sum certain, from showing that her surrender value, for which the owners would be accountable under the statutes in limitation of liability, is less than the amount of their stipulation given in the cause. The Doris Eckhoff, 30 Fed. Rep. 140.

6. The Fidelity, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 569, per Waite, Ch. J., who stated the reason of this rule to be that "the

VII. ON APPEAL.—The court below, upon entering a decree in accordance with the mandate of the appellate court, may give summary judgment against the stipulators on appeal;¹ so also where the appeal has been dismissed.² But the stipulators are not in default until the adjudication of the appellate court vacating the appeal becomes, by the mandate of that court, the decree of the court below.³

A decree cannot be entered on a stipulation within the time within which an appeal operating as a supersedeas may be taken; if no appeal lies, the decree may be entered at once.⁴

A stipulation, in case of an appeal from the district court to the circuit court, where a stipulation for value has been given, need be in an amount sufficient to cover damages for delay and costs and interest only, and it is not necessary that it should be conditioned to pay the whole amount of the decree and costs.⁵

STIRPES.—See PER, vol. 18, p. 297; SUCCESSION; TITLE.

stipulation takes the place of the vessel, and for all the purposes of the trial, the case goes on as if the vessel were itself in court”

1. The Sidney, 47 Fed. Rep. 260; Sawyer v. Oakman, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 65; The Blanche Page, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 1; 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 221; The New Orleans, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 216; Ex parte Sawyer, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 235; The Belgenland, 108 U. S. 153. Obligors in an appeal bond in admiralty—sureties as well as principals—are deemed to be stipulators who have consented to submit to summary judgment on their obligations. The Sidney, 47 Fed. Rep. 260. In that case, the court, by Wallace, J., said: “The power of the court to award summary judgment against the obligors in an appeal-bond, given upon an appeal in an admiralty cause from the district court to the circuit court, was treated as unquestionable by the supreme court in the case of The Wanata, 95 U. S. 600; and it has long been the practice in this court, upon entering a decree in an admiralty cause which has been taken by appeal to the supreme court, when the mandate has been received from that court, to give summary judgment against the obligors in the supersedeas bond. Sawyer v. Oakman, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 65; The Belgenland, 108 U. S. 152; 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 864. The practice has been so uniform, and has become so well established that it is too late for this court to question its propriety. The obligors in such bonds, sureties as well as the principal, are deemed to be stipulators who have consented to submit to summary judgment requiring them to make good their engagements. Under the stipulation for costs and the bond for additional costs, the stipulators are liable for the sum of $550, that being the aggregate amount which they have undertaken to pay by the terms of the two instruments. Under the stipulation for the value of the Worden, which is a substitute for the vessel itself, they are liable for the sum of $1,000 and no more. Stipulators are liable for interest upon the stipulated sum only in case of default in complying with the terms of the stipulation. Brown v. Burrows, 2 Blatchf. (U. S.) 240; The Ann Caroline, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 538; The Webb, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 406; The Wanata, 95 U. S. 600. The contrary was decided in the case of The Belle, 5 Ben. (U. S.) 57, in view of the special recital in the stipulation, and the rule of court, which in effect required stipulators to pay interest. But the recital and rule of court in the cases of The Ann Caroline, The Steamer Webb, and The Wanata were the same, as appears from an examination of the records, as in the case of The Belle.”

2. The Sidney, 47 Fed. Rep. 260.

3. The Sidney, 47 Fed. Rep. 260; Ex parte Sawyer, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 235.

4. The New Orleans, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 216; The Blanche Page, 17 Blatchf. (U. S.) 221.

5. The Brantford City, 32 Fed. Rep. 324.

STOCK.—(See also ASSOCIATION, vol. 1, p. 881; BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATIONS, vol. 2, p. 171; BUILDING ASSOCIATIONS, vol. 2, p. 604; COMPANY, vol. 3, p. 366; CORPORATION, vol. 4, p. 184; COUPONS, vol. 4, p. 430; DIVIDEND, vol. 5, p. 725; FOREIGN CORPORATIONS, vol. 8, p. 329; JOINT STOCK COMPANIES, vol. 11, p. 1036; MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS, vol. 14, p. 269; MINING COMPANIES, vol. 15, p. 614; MUNICIPAL SECURITIES, vol. 15, p. 1204; NATIONAL BANKS, vol. 16, p. 143; OFFICERS (PRIVATE CORPORATIONS), vol. 17, p. 39; PARTNERSHIP, vol. 17, p. 824; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 775; RAILROAD SECURITIES, vol. 19, p. 694; RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES, vol. 20, p. 773; SOCIETIES AND CLUBS, vol. 22, p. 803; STOCK EXCHANGE, vol. 23, p. 748; STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23, p. 776; ULTRA VIRES; WATERED STOCK.)

I. Definition and Nature, 584.

1. In General, 584.
2. Capital Stock, 585.
3. Shares of Stock, 588.
 - a. General Nature, 588.
 - b. Shares Personal Property, 590.
 - c. Statute of Frauds as Pertaining to Shares, 593.
 - (1) Seventeenth Section, 593.
 - (a) American Doctrine, 593.
 - (b) English Doctrine, 595.
 - (2) Fourth Section, 595.
 - d. Identification, 596.
4. Certificates of Stock, 597.
 - a. General Nature, 597.
 - b. Negotiability, 598.
 - (1) Certificates Not Negotiable, 598.
 - (2) Quasi-Negotiability, 600.
 - c. Issue, 601.

II. Particular Kinds, 602.

1. Preferred or Guaranteed (See also DIVIDENDS, vol. 5, p. 743), 602.
 - a. Definition, 602.
 - b. Power to Issue, 603.
 - c. Status and Rights of Preferred Shareholders, 607.
 - (1) In General, 607.
 - (2) Preferred Shareholders Not Creditors, 607.
 - (3) Remedial Rights, 609.
 - d. Exchange of Common For Preferred Stock, 611.
 - e. Preferred Dividends, 611.
 - (1) General Nature, 611.
 - (2) From What Funds Payable, 611.

(a) Earnings and Profits, 611.

(b) Capital, 613.

(3) Payment of Arrears, 614.

2. Interest Bearing Stock, 615.

3. Special Stock, 617.

4. Other Kinds, 617.

III. Issue, 618.

1. General Considerations, 618.
2. Methods, 619.
3. Irregular Issue, 619.
4. Overissue or Ultra Vires Issue, 619.
5. Issue of Watered Stock, 622.
6. Issue of Stock by Corporate Officers to Themselves, 623.

IV. Increase of Stock, 625.

1. Authority and Validity, 625.
 - a. Must Be Expressly Authorized, 625.
 - b. Power of the Legislature, 625.
2. Who May Direct Increase, 626.
3. Methods and Procedure, 627.
 - a. In General, 627.
 - b. Issue of Securities Convertible into Shares, 629.
 - c. Issue of Stock Dividends (See DIVIDENDS, vol. 5, p. 744a), 629.
4. Stockholders' Prior Right to the Increase (See STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23, p. 776—Right to Subscribe to New Stock), 629.
5. Effect of Increase on Liability (See STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23, p. 776), 629.

V. Reduction of Stock, 629.

1. Authority and Validity, 629.
2. Particular Methods, 631.
 - a. Purchase by the Corporation of Its Own Stock, 631.

- b. Refunding, etc., 631.*
- 3. Distribution of Surplus After Reduction, 631.
- 4. Effect of Reduction Upon Liability (See STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23, p. 776), 631.
- VI. Attachment and Execution (See also FOREIGN ATTACHMENT, vol. 8, p. 310), 631.
 - 1. Authority and Validity, 632.
 - 2. Locus and Venue, 632.
 - 3. Procedure, 633.
 - 4. Garnishment (See also GARNISHMENT, vol. 8, pp. 1152, 1158), 634.
 - 5. Relative Rights of Levying Creditors and Transferees (See also PLEDGE AND COLLATERAL SECURITY, vol. 18, p. 615), 635.
- VII. Transfer, 637.
 - 1. Right of Transfer, 637.
 - a. In General, 637.*
 - b. Origin and Foundation of Right, 637.*
 - c. Illustrations of the Doctrine, 638.*
 - d. Transfers by Directors, 641.*
 - e. Motive and Effect of the Transfer as Grounds for Refusal, 642.*
 - f. Authorized Restrictions, 645.*
 - 2. Formalities of the Transfer, 646.
 - a. In General, 646.*
 - b. Seals, 646.*
 - c. Waiver, 647.*
 - 3. Steps in the Transfer, 648.
 - a. Assignment of Certificate, 648.*
 - b. Surrender of Certificate, 651.*
 - (1) In General, 651.
 - (2) Effect of Failure to Surrender, 652.
 - c. Registration, 655.*
 - (1) Importance and Necessity, 655.
 - (2) What Constitutes Registration, 660.
 - (3) Application for Registry, 662.
 - (4) Wrongful Refusal of Registration, 663.
 - (a) What Constitutes, 663.
 - (b) Remedies, 664.
 - (1) Bill in Equity, 664.
 - (2) Action at Law, 665.

- (3) Mandamus, 666.
- (5) Liability of the Corporation for Allowing Wrongful Registry, 667.
 - (a) Forged Transfers, 667.
 - (b) Transfers in Breach of Trust, 669.
 - (c) Transfers Without Surrender of Certificate, 671.
- 4. Particular Forms of Transfer, 673.
 - a. Sales, 673.*
 - (1) Form and Validity of the Contract of Sale (See also FRAUDULENT SALES, vol. 8, p. 786; GAMBLING CONTRACTS, vol. 8, p. 992; ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, vol. 9, p. 879; ILLEGAL SALES, vol. 9, p. 923; STOCK EXCHANGE, vol. 23, p. 748), 673.
 - (2) Parties to the Sale, 676.
 - (a) Corporation as Purchaser of Its Own Stock, 676.
 - (1) Legality, 676.
 - (2) Effect, 678.
 - (b) Other Corporations as Purchasers (See also STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23, p. 776; MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS, vol. 16, p. 167; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 810), 678.
 - (c) Agents (See also AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 331; BROKERS, vol. 2, p. 591; STOCK EXCHANGE, vol. 23, p. 748), 678.
 - (d) Trustees (See generally TRUSTS), 679.
 - (1) Power of Trustee to Buy and Sell Stock, 679.

- (2) Rights of Purchasers From Trustees (See also PLEDGE AND COLLATERAL SECURITY, vol. 18, p. 620), 680.
 - (3) What Constitutes Notice, 680.
 - (e) Executors, Administrators, and Guardians, 682.
 - (f) Miscellaneous Parties, 683.
 - (3) Sales as Affected by Forgery, 683.
 - (a) What Constitutes (See also FORGERY, vol. 8, p. 452), 683.
 - (b) Status of Transferees, 684.
 - (4) Stolen and Lost Certificates (See also Negotiability, supra, this title; LOST PAPERS, vol. 13, p. 1059), 685.
 - (5) Effect of Lis Pendens Upon Sales of Stock (See LIS PENDENS, vol. 13, p. 873), 685.
 - (6) Performance and Tender, 685.
 - (7) Enforcement, 686.
 - (a) Specific Performance, 686.
 - (b) Damages (See also DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 29 et seq.; TROVER), 687.
 - (c) Defenses, 687.
 - b. Gifts, 688.
 - (1) Validity, 688.
 - (2) Formalities, 689.
 - c. Legacies (See LEGACIES AND DEVISES, vol. 13, p. 19; REMAINDERS, vol. 20, p. 828; WILLS), 689.
- VIII. Lien of the Corporation on Stock (See also NATIONAL BANKS, vol. 16, p. 201), 689.
- 1. Origin and Creation, 689.
 - a. The Rule at Common Law, 689.
 - b. Statutes and Charters, 690.
 - c. By-laws, 690.
 - d. Contract and Usage, 691.
 - e. Inference and Construction, 692.
 - 2. Nature and Extent, 693.
 - a. To What It Attaches, 693.
 - b. For What Debts, 693.
 - c. Time, 694.
 - 3. Priorities and Notice, 695.
 - 4. Waiver, 697.
 - a. How Effected, 697.
 - b. By Whom Effected, 697.
 - 5. Enforcement, 697.
- IX. Life Estates and Remainders (See DIVIDENDS, vol. 5, p. 736; LEGACIES AND DEVISES, vol. 13, p. 220; REMAINDERS, vol. 20, p. 828; WILLS), 698.

I. DEFINITION AND NATURE—1. In General.—Stock has been succinctly designated as “the sum of all the rights and duties” of the shareholders.¹ This phrase, while technically correct and admirably concise, is rather too pregnant in meaning, and too insufficiently specific, to serve as an elementary definition. Moreover, it will appear from what follows² that the term “stock” is employed in different senses by juridical writers, being used now to denote capital stock, and now shares of stock, and again being applied so as apparently to include both. It is evident, therefore, that these various meanings must be understood and these different elements examined separately before a satisfactory definition can be reached. The term stock is sometimes used in the plural to denote bonds or other corporate and government securities, but its use in this sense is of doubtful accuracy;³ and is at least obsolescent.¹ When used in a charter before subscriptions have been taken, stock means no more than power in the directors to receive subscriptions for shares.² While stock is commonly associated with corporate enterprise, the connection is not a necessary one. Partnerships and unincorporated joint stock companies,³ and even voluntary associations,⁴ sometimes issue stock; indeed, it is only within a comparatively recent period of the history of corporations that the issue of stock has become a feature of their life and organization.⁵

1. Lowell, Transfer of Stock, § 4; Compare Morawetz, Corp. (2d ed.) 226.

2. See infra, this title, Capital Stock; Shares of Stock.

3. Lowell, Transfer of Stock, § 6.

2. Capital Stock.—Capital stock is the fund of money or other property fixed as the basis for conducting the business of the corporation.⁶ Unless expressly required, it need not actually

1. Cook, Stock and Stockholders, § 569, n. 1.

2. Sturges v. Stetson, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 246.

3. The capital stock of a corporation is like that of a copartnership or joint-stock company—the amount which the partners or associates put in as their stake in the concern. Barry v. Merchants' Exch. Co., 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 307; Hightower v. Thornton, 8 Ga. 486; 52 Am. Dec. 412.

In England many of the most important trading companies (which correspond to business corporations in the United States) are unincorporated. See an interesting diagram in Lindley on Partnership, vol. 1, p. 14.* It will be noted, moreover, that this author uses the term "partnership" as a comprehensive designation of all forms of associated enterprise, whether corporate or not.

4. Crawford v. Gross (Pa. Com. Pl. 1889), 7 Ry. & Corp. L. J. 123; Compare Bryant v. Ohio Dental College, 7 Cin. Super. Ct. (Ohio) 307. In the former case a concern calling itself the "Beef Butchers' Hide Association" is thus described by the court in its opinion: "The association originally formed was so loose as hardly to deserve the name. Every man following the trade of a butcher might become a member on depositing a few pounds of hide or fat, and withdraw at the end of the year or sooner as freely as he came. There was no capital and nothing to which the members could lay claim, except the proceeds of the stuff which they had brought to be cured or melted. The purchase of the hide-house worked no change, except that the subscribers took the place of the landlord while remaining, like the other members, tenants. So long as they had hides or fat to be prepared for market, and the rent was paid out of the proceeds, it was their interest not to eject the depositors or take any step that would hinder the prosecution of the business which was carried on for the common good. Such was the relation of the parties for more than thirty years, and the long continued occupancy of the buildings tended to beget the idea that the depositors were the owners, whether they had or had not paid any of the purchase money." Yet this concern had taken subscriptions and issued certificates for "Shares in the stock of the Beef Butchers' Hide Association."

5. In McKim v. Odom, 3 Bland Ch. (Md.) 418, Chancellor Bland says that the history of colonial America affords no instance of a business corporation with capital stock. See also Cook, Stock and Stockholders, § 1; and an interesting sketch of the history of company law in Lindley on Partnership, vol. 1, p. 5 et seq. The "corporations" treated of by Blackstone and Kent were mostly counterparts of the non-trading and stockless, though incorporated, companies of the present day.

6. Bailey v. Clark, 21 Walh. (U. S.) 286; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 686. There have been many judicial decisions of the phrase "capital stock," but they correspond in substance with that given in the text.

The capital stock is that money or property which is put into a single corporate fund by those who, by subscriptions therefor, become members of the corporate body. That fund becomes the property of the aggregate body only. Burrall v. Bushwick R. Co., 75 N. Y. 216.

The term "capital stock" in 1 New exist as an entirety at any one time,¹ but those who deal with a company have a right to assume that the full capital stock is available; hence it has come to be known in legal phraseology as "a trust fund for creditors."² Capital stock does not usually include accumulated profits,³ or surplus,⁴ though it has been held to cover profits not segregated.⁵ The value of the capital stock is measured by that of the corporate property,⁶ but for purposes of taxation the value of the charter is not to be included.⁷

A distinction has been drawn between capital stock and capital,⁸ the latter being used in its strict, economic sense, in which

York Rev. St. 601, § 2, prohibiting the directors of a corporation from making dividends, except from the surplus profits of a corporation, etc., does not mean share stock, but it means the property of the corporation contributed by its stockholders or otherwise obtained by it to the extent required by its charter. Williams v. Western Union Tel. Co., 93 N. Y. 187; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 139.

The phrase "capital stock" is very generally, if not universally, used to designate the amount of capital to be contributed for the purposes of the corporation. The amount thus contributed constitutes the "capital stock" of the company. State v. Morristown Fire Assoc., 23 N. J. L. 195.

It must be distinguished from stock and stock certificates, which are the individual interest of the stockholder and the evidence of such interest in the dividends as they are declared, and the effects of the corporation on hand at its dissolution. Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 490.

The "capital stock" of a bank upon which, under the banking law of Wisconsin, a certain per cent. is to be paid annually in lieu of all other taxation, is the amount of funds paid in by the stockholders to be used and managed by the association for banking purposes. State Bank v. Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 284.

The interest in stock is nothing but a right to receive a perpetual annuity, subject to redemption. Grant, M. R., in Wildman v. Wildman, 9 Ves. 174.

In State Bank v. Charlestown, 3 Rich. (S. Car.) 346, stock is described as the original sum upon which a corporation commences business.

See also for other definitions: St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Loftin, 30 Ark. 693; Martin v. Zellerbach, 38 Cal. 300; 99 Am. Dec. 189; Hightower v. Thornton, 8 Ga. 486; 52 Am. Dec. 412; Field

v. Pierce, 102 Mass. 261; Bent v. Hart, 10 Mo. App. 146; People v. Com'rs of Taxes, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 353; Barry v. Merchants' Exch. Co., 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 307; Mutual Ins. Co. v. Erie Co., 4 N. Y. 442; State v. Cheraw, etc., R. Co., 16 S. Car. 524; Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 60.

1. It need only be "authorized or required to be paid in." Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 686. Hence the difference between "subscribed" and "paid up" capital stock. Compare Hightower v. Thornton, 8 Ga. 486; 52 Am. Dec. 412; State v. Morristown Fire Assoc., 23 N. J. L. 195; Philadelphia v. Philadelphia, etc., Ferry Pass. Co., 52 Pa. St. 177.

Under the New York statute a stockholder of any railroad or plank-road company may acquire, after sale of road by foreclosure, the same relative interest as he had before, upon paying the purchasers a sum equal to such proportion of the price paid at the sale as such shares bear to the whole capital stock. "The whole capital stock" here means stock actually subscribed and paid for. Pratt v. Munson, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 475.

2. See STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23, p. 776.

3. Hightower v. Thornton, 8 Ga. 486; 52 Am. Dec. 412; State Bank v. Milwaukee, 18 Wis. 281.

4. Williams v. Western Union Tel. Co., 93 N. Y. 188; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 139; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 686; Sun Mut. Ins. Co. v. New York, 8 N. Y. 241.

5. Phelps v. Farmers', etc., Bank, 26 Conn. 272.

6. Raleigh, etc., R. Co. v. Wake, 87 N. Car. 414; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 466. Compare People v. Howell, 69 N. Y. 91.

7. Coit v. North Carolina Gold, etc., Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 12.

8. See a paper read before the American Bar Association in 1884; "Stock Dividends and their Restraint," by M.

it has been most tersely defined as "wealth in use."¹ Thus it is said that capital stock "exists only nominally" and is the mere representative of the capital.² The funds of the company may fluctuate, but its capital stock remains invariable save in the prescribed mode.³ So, the corporation is not limited in its ownership of property to the amount fixed as its capital stock.⁴ Still the term is not infrequently used as synonymous with capital.⁵ Guaranty capital of the stock department of a mutual insurance company is neither a debt owed by, nor a loan to, the corporation.⁶

Again, capital stock is distinguished from shares of stock;⁷ and it is held that if each is separately taxed, the result is not

Dwight Collier, 1 Am. Bar Asso. Rep. 257. Beach, Priv. Corp. 426, says: "The capital stock is clearly not the same as property possessed by the corporation; for the capital stock remains fixed although the actual property of the corporation varies in value and is constantly increasing or diminishing in amount. What the amount of the capital shall be is within the discretion of the managers, but the amount of the capital stock is limited and determined by the charter and the laws governing it." See also Barry v. Merchants' Exch. Co., 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 307.

Ownership of stock in a corporation should not be confounded with ownership of its property. Humphreys v. McKissock, 140 U. S. 304; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 261.

1. Capital—Economic Definitions.—That in the text is by John S. Walters, in Belford's Magazine for October, 1890, vol. 5, p. 777. Other definitions by eminent economists are given below and will be seen to be mainly amplifications of the one quoted:

John Stuart Mill: "Whatever of the produce of the country is devoted to production, is capital." Principles of Political Economy, ch. 4, § 2.

Prof. A. L. Perry: "Capital is the aggregate of all products reserved as a means for further production." Int. to Political Economy, p. 110.

Francis A. Walker: "The capital of a community is that part of its wealth which is devoted to the production of wealth." Political Economy, § 58.

2. In Hannibal, etc., R. Co. v. Shacklett, 30 Mo. 550, the court, by Napton, J., said: "Confining ourselves entirely to the railroad corporation whose property has in this case been subjected to taxation, without undertaking to give any construction to the law with reference to corporations of a different character, the question is, upon this provision of the general revenue law, whether the roadbed, machinery, depots, and other property used by the company in operating the road, are to be considered as a part of the capital stock of the company. It is undoubtedly not literally the capital stock, taking these words in their usual acceptation. Capital stock, in its strict signification, exists only nominally; the money or property which it represents is the tangible reality. The one is the representative of the other; and if the stock and the property it represents are both taxed, the taxation is double."

3. State v. Morristown Fire Assoc., 23 N. J. L. 196.

4. Barry v. Merchants' Exch. Co., 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 307.

5. State v. Norwich, etc., R. Co., 30 Conn. 290; People v. Com'rs of Taxes, 23 N. Y. 222; Traders', etc., Ins. Co. v. Brown, 142 Mass. 403; 14 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 615; Pacific Hotel Co. v. Lieb, 83 Ill. 602; Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Weber, 96 Ill. 443.

6. Traders', etc., Ins. Co. v. Brown, 142 Mass. 403; 14 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 615.

7. Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 686; State Bank v. Richmond, 79 Va. 113; 11 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 640; Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 490. Compare State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Vance, 96 U. S. 450.

In People v. Coleman (N. Y.), 34 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 223, Finch, J., said: "The capital stock of a company is one thing; that of the stockholders is another and a different thing. That of the company is simply its capital, existing in money, or property or both; double taxation.¹ However, this distinction between the capital stock and its shares seems to amount to no more than a difference between the whole and its parts.

3. Shares of Stock—a. GENERAL NATURE.—Shares of stock are a species of incorporeal property consisting of rights in the profits, management, and assets of the company.² Participation in the profits and management is a right which may be realized while that of the shareholders is representative, not merely of that existing and tangible capital, but also of surplus, of dividend earning power, of franchise, and the good will of an established and prosperous business. The capital stock of the company is owned and held by the company in its corporate character; the capital stock of the shareholders they own and hold in different proportions as individuals. The one belongs to the corporation, the other to the corporators. The franchise of the company which may be deemed its business opportunity and capacity, is the property of the corporation, but constitutes no part or element of its capital stock; while the same franchise does enter into and form a part, and a very essential part of the shareholder's capital stock. While the nominal or par value of the capital stock and of the share stock is the same, the actual value is often widely different. The capital stock of the company may be wholly in cash or in property, or both, which may be counted and valued. It may have in addition, a surplus, consisting of some accumulated and reserved fund, or of undivided profits, or both; but that surplus is no part of the company's capital stock, and therefore, is not itself capital stock. The capital cannot be divided and distributed; the surplus may be. But that surplus does enter and form a part of the share stock, for that represents and absorbs into its own value surplus as well as capital; and the franchise in addition; so that the property of every company may consist of three separate and distinct things, which are its capital stock, its surplus, and its franchise; but these three things, several in the ownership of the company, are united in the ownership of the shareholders. The share of stock covers, embraces, and represents all three in their totality; for it is a business photograph of all the corporate possessions and possibilities. A company may also have no surplus, but, on the contrary, a deficiency which works an impairment of its capital stock. Its actual value is then less than its nominal or par value, while yet the share stock, strengthened by hope of the future and the support of earnings, may be worth its par, or even more. And thus the two things, the company's capital stock, and the shareholder's capital stock, are essentially and in every material respect, different. They differ in their character, in their elements, in their ownership, and in their values."

1. Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 687.

2. Shares of Stock—Judicial Definitions.—Parker v. Sun Ins. Co., 42 La. Ann. 1172; 32 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 334; Williams' Pers. Prop. 155; Allen v. Pegram, 16 Iowa 173.

In Fisher v. Essex Bank, 5 Gray (Mass.) 377, Shaw, C. J., said: "Shares in incorporated companies, such as banks, insurance companies, bridges, turnpikes and railroads, have long been considered in this commonwealth as property of a definite and important character, with many of the qualities of visible, tangible, personal property, and having a value, and as capable of appreciation as vessels, or merchandise, or other personal chattels. But it is not visible or tangible, and therefore not like merchandise, capable of passing by manual delivery. . . . The right is, strictly speaking, a right to participate, in a certain proportion, in the immunities and benefits of the corporation; to vote in the choice of their officers, and the management of their concerns; to share in the dividends and profits, and to receive an aliquot part of the proceeds of the capital on winding up and terminating the active existence and operations of the corporation."

In Plimpton v. Bigelow, 93 N. Y. 599; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 131, Andrews, J., said: "The right which a shareholder in a corporation has by reason of his ownership of shares, is a right to participate according to the amount of his stock in the surplus at any time, but the right to share in the corporate assets accrues only at dissolution.¹ Shares of stock are in no sense debts due profits of the corporation on a division, and ultimately on its dissolution, in the assets remaining after payment of its debts."

In Neiler v. Kelley, 69 Pa. St. 407, Sharswood, J., said: "A share of stock is an incorporeal, intangible thing. It is a right to a certain proportion of the capital stock of a corporation—never realized except upon the dissolution and winding up of the corporation—with the right to receive in the meantime such profits as may be made and declared in the shape of dividends."

Shares of stock empower the owners thereof "to meet at stockholders' meetings, to participate in the profits of the business, and to require that the corporate property shall not be diverted from the original purpose." Forbes v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S.) 323.

"A share of stock represents the interest which the shareholder has in the capital and net earnings of the corporation. The interest is of an abstract nature, that is, the shareholder cannot by any act of his, nor ordinarily by any act of the law, reduce it to possession. He can take, and is entitled to take, the surplus profits when a dividend has been declared by the proper officers of the corporation, and upon dissolution of the corporation he can take his share of the assets thereof left for distribution pro rata among the shareholders." Earl, J., in Jermain v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 91 N. Y. 492; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 111.

"The expression 'shares of stock,' when qualified by words indicating number and ownership, expresses the extent of the owner's interest in the corporation property. The interest is equitable, and does not give him the right of ownership to specific property of the corporation. But he does own the specific stock held in his name, and under the rules of law, the property of the corporation is held by the corporation in trust for the stockholders." Beck, J., in Bridgman v. Keokuk, 72 Iowa 42.

See further for definitions: Payne v. Elliot, 54 Cal. 339; 35 Am. Rep. 80; Bridgman v. Keokuk, 72 Iowa 42; Field v. Pierce, 102 Mass. 261; Spalding v. Paine, 81 Ky. 416; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp.

Cas. 187; Bent v. Hart, 10 Mo. App. 143; Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 159; Jones v. Davis, 35 Ohio St. 477; Bradley v. Bauder, 36 Ohio St. 35; 38 Am. Rep. 547; Arnold v. Ruggles, 1 R. I. 165; Brightwell v. Mallory, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 196; Harrison v. Vines, 46 Tex. 21; Barksdale v. Finney, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 357; Van Allen v. Assessors, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 585; Morrice v. Aylmer, L. R., 7 H. L. 717; Oak Bank Oil Co. v. Crum, L. R., 8 App. Cas. 65.

Definitions by Text Writers.—"A share in one of these companies may be defined to be a right to partake, according to the amount of the party's subscription, of the surplus profits obtained from the use and disposal of the capital stock of the company to those purposes for which the company is constituted." Ang. & A., Corporations (11th ed.) 557.

"The term 'stock' when not employed to denote the same thing as capital, has reference to the interests of the shareholders or individuals. The interest of each individual shareholder is a share of the net produce of the capital stock of the corporation when brought into one fund." Boone, Corporations, Par. 205.

"Shares in a corporation represent fractional interests in the entire corporate concern, and their value necessarily depends upon the real capital which the company owns. The whole and the sum of its parts must be equal." Morawetz, Corporations (2d ed.) 228.

"A share of stock may be defined as a right which its owner has in the management, profits, and ultimate assets of the corporation." Cook, Stock and Stockholders (2d ed.), § 5.

The term "stock," as used in the charter before it is taken by subscription, means nothing more than the power in the directors to receive subscriptions for stock. Sturges v. Stetson, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 246.

1. "The ownership of a share of stock involves a right to participate in the dividends declared from the profits of the business, and, upon the dissolution of the corporation, to a proportionate share of the fund remaining after payment of the corporate debts. This interest or right, however, does not enable the shareholder to withdraw to the owner; ¹ hence they are not credits.² Nor are they securities for money,³ nor representatives thereof,⁴ and they will not pass under a bequest of money,⁵ even if they are shares in a financial institution like the Bank of England.⁶ The term stock, which in the United States is used synonymously with "shares," in England means a number of shares en bloc, but capable of separation.⁷ For the individual portions the term "shares" is there used exclusively.

b. SHARES PERSONAL PROPERTY.—It has been said that shares of stock are property.⁸ Their status as such has finally been fixed as personalty,⁹ but this result has not been reached without some conflict of judicial opinion, and in several jurisdictions the present any portion of the capital stock of the corporation from its control, nor to exercise any authority over it, further than to participate, to the extent of his stock, in the election of a board of managers, charged with the conduct of the business for which the corporation was created." Jones v. Davis, 35 Ohio St. 477. See also Field v. Pierce, 102 Mass. 261; Bridgman v. Keokuk, 72 Iowa 42. And see generally cases in preceding note.

1. Bridgman v. Keokuk, 72 Iowa 42.

2. Bridgman v. Keokuk, 72 Iowa 42; New Orleans Nat. Banking Assoc. v. Wiltz, 4 Woods (U. S.) 43; Smith v. Crescent City Live-Stock, etc., Co., 30 La. Ann. 378.

3. Mechanics' Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 13 N. Y. 626.

4. Mechanics' Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 13 N. Y. 626.

5. Lowe v. Thomas, 6 De G. M. & G. 315; 54 Eng. Ch. 315; Gosden v. Dotterill, 1 M. & K. 56; 7 Eng. Ch. 56; Jones v. Brinley, 1 East 1. Compare Nightingal v. Devesme, 5 Burr. 2589; Douglas v. Congreve, 1 Keen 410.

6. "It appears to me to be utterly impossible to hold that bank stock, which is, after all, nothing but a share in the capital stock of a company incorporated by act of parliament, for the purpose of carrying on a banking business, is any more a security for money than a share in any other partnership whatever. It is merely a share in an incorporated partnership, which has certain statutory privileges, and does the banking business of the state. That cannot alter the character of it. It is really as much a share in a company as any partner's share in a brewery is." Sir W. M. James, V. C., in Ogle v. Knipe, L. R., 8 Eq. 434.

7. Rapalje & L. Law Dict. 1224;

Cook, Stock and Stockholders, § 5. "Shares are not necessarily converted into stock as soon as they are paid up; they may exist either as paid up shares or as not paid up shares. But, as regards stock, that can only exist in the paid up state. . . . There is a certain extent of change as well as consolidation in these paid up shares. They are changed from ordinary shares in this respect, that they are no longer capable of being subdivided." Norrice v. Aylmer, L. R., 7 H. L. 717. See also Trinder v. Trinder, L. R., 1 Eq. 695.

8. See supra, this title, Shares of Stock—General Nature. Stock is "property" within the meaning of the Kentucky Civil Code, § 180, authorizing the suing out of an order of arrest for a debtor about to leave the state, without leaving "property" sufficient to satisfy the claims against him. Field v. Montmollin, 5 Bush. (Ky.) 455.

9. Stock is Personal Property.—Berney Nat. Bank v. Pinckard, 87 Ala. 577; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 52; Payne v. Elliot, 54 Cal. 339; 35 Am. Rep. 80; San Francisco v. Flood, 64 Cal. 504; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 404; Tregear v. Etiwanda Water Co., 76 Cal. 537; 9 Am. St. Rep. 245; South Western R. Co. v. Thomason, 40 Ga. 408; Weyer v. Second Nat. Bank, 57 Ind. 198; Manns v. Brookville Nat. Bank, 73 Ind. 243; Seward v. Rising Sun, 79 Ind. 351; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 315; Allen v. Pegram, 16 Iowa 173; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Sewall, 35 Md. 238; Tippets v. Walker, 4 Mass. 596; Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90; 19 Am. Dec. 306; Johns v. Johns, 1 Ohio St. 350; Weaver v. Barden, 49 N. Y. 286; Arnold v. Ruggles, 1 R. I. 165; Dyer v. Osborne, 11 R. I. 321; 23 Am. Rep. 460; Bligh v. Brent, 2 Y. & C. 268; state of the law is the result of legislative interference in direct opposition to the courts.¹ Some of the older authorities hold that shares are realty or personalty according to the nature of the corporate capacity and enterprise.² Accordingly, shares in a turnpike company,³ a waterworks company,⁴ a canal company,⁵ a navigation improvement company authorized to col-

Ex parte Lancaster Canal Co., 1 D. & C. 411; Bradley v. Holdsworth, 3 M. & W. 422; Watson v. Spratley, 20 Eng. L. & Eq. 507; 10 Ex. 222; Edwards v. Hall, 6 De G. M. & G. 74.

In Cooper v. Corbin, 105 Ill. 224; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 394, the court, by Craig, J., said: "Capital stock has never, so far as we know, been treated as real property. It is in its very nature changeable, transitory, and has no element whatever which likens it to real property."

In Seward v. Rising Sun, 79 Ind. 351; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 315, the court, by Bicknell, C. C., said: "Shares of stock in incorporated companies, whether the property of such companies be tangible or intangible, are personal property."

See also an interesting monograph by Henry Budd, Jr., on the "Nature and Transfer of Stock," 7 South. L. Rev. 430.

1. In Connecticut, after the decision in Welles v. Cowles, 2 Conn. 567, and in Kentucky, after that of Copeland v. Copeland, 7 Bush (Ky.) 349, statutes were enacted providing that shares of stock should thereafter be regarded as personalty.

2. Thus, Prof. Greenleaf, in his edition of Cruise on Real Property 39, 40, says: "Shares in the property of a corporation are real or personal property, according to the nature, object and manner of the investment. Where the corporate powers are to be exercised solely in land, as where original authority is given by the charter to remove obstructions in a river and render it navigable, to open new channels, etc., to make a canal, erect waterworks, and the like, as was the case in the New river water, the navigation of the river Avon, and some others, and the property or interest in the land, though it be an incorporeal hereditament, is vested inalienably in the corporators themselves, the shares are deemed real estate. Such, in some of the United States, has been considered the nature of shares in toll bridge, canal and turnpike companies by the common law; though latterly it has been thought that railway shares were more properly to be regarded as personal estate."

3. Welles v. Cowles, 2 Conn. 567; Knapp v. Williams, 4 Ves. Jr. 430. In the former case, Swift, C. J., said: "When the legislature incorporated the turnpike company in question, they authorized and empowered them to make and maintain the road, to erect gates thereon, and collect a certain toll, till the expense of making and repairing the road should be reimbursed to the stockholders, with twelve per cent. interest. This is a right issuing out of real property, annexed to, and exercisable within it; and comes within the description of an incorporeal hereditament of a real nature, on the same principle as a share in the New river, in canal navigations, and tolls of fairs and markets. (Drybutter v. Bartholomew, 2 P. Wms. 127; Habergham v. Vincent, 2 Ves. Jr. 204; King v. Chipping-Norton, 5 East 239.) This is not a mere right of action in favor of the company to collect a toll from individuals passing the road; but they can, by erecting the gates, compel passengers to pay for the privilege of passing the road. This is a power annexed to, and exercisable upon, the turnpike road; and the toll is paid for passing the road, and, consequently, issues out of it. It has been urged that the individual stockholders have only a claim on the company, and not upon the realty, and this must be of a personal nature. But the stockholders, as members of the company, are owners of the turnpike road; and it is in virtue of this interest that they have their claims for the dividends, or their respective shares of the toll. It is not a mere claim on the corporation."

4. Townshend v. Ashe, 3 Atk. 336; Drybutter v. Bartholomew, 2 P. Wms. 127. See the review of these cases by Thurman, J., in Johns v. Johns, 1 Ohio St. 351.

5. Tomlinson v. Tomlinson, 9 Beav. 459.

lect tolls,¹ and even a railroad company,² have been held in some instances to be real estate.

But these decisions are practically obsolete and possess chiefly an historical interest. It is now settled that stock is personal property,³ and it is said moreover to be in the nature of a chose in action.⁴ But shares have been held not to be goods and chattels within the meaning of the statute of 13 Elizabeth, ch. 5, relating to conveyances in fraud of creditors, being incapable of seizure.⁵ Generally throughout the United States trover lies to recover shares of stock,⁶ though a different doctrine obtains in

1. Buckeridge v. Ingram, 2 Ves. Jr. 652. Compare Meason's Estate, 4 Watts (Pa.) 346, where the respective interests of two individuals authorized to build a bridge across a river between their lands were held to be real estate.

2. Price v. Price, 6 Dana (Ky.) 107. Compare Copeland v. Copeland, 7 Bush. (Ky.) 349.

3. See cases cited above.

4. Allen v. Pegram, 16 Iowa 173; Howe v. Starkweather, 17 Mass. 243; Hutchins v. State Bank, 12 Met. (Mass.) 426; Fisher v. Essex Bank, 5 Gray (Mass.) 377; James v. Woodruff, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 541; aff'd 2 Den (N. Y.) 574; Denton v. Livingston, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 96; 6 Am. Dec. 264; Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 150; Slaymaker v. Bank of Gettysburg, 10 Pa. St. 373; People's Bank v. Kurtz, 99 Pa. St. 349; 44 Am. Rep. 112; Arnold v. Ruggles, 1 R. I. 165; Union Bank v. State, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 500; Barksdale v. Finney, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 338; Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Paine, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 506; Humble v. Mitchell, 11 A. & E. 203; 39 E. C. L. 46; In re Jackson, L. R., 12 Eq. 354; Société Générale v. Tramways Co., 14 Q. B. Div. 424.

In Colonial Bank v. Whinney, 30 Ch. Div. 261, the question arose whether shares of stock were governed by that clause of the English Bankruptcy Act of 1883, which excepted choses in action from passing to the trustee in bankruptcy. A majority of the court held that shares were not so included, and Lord Justice Lindley, after a learned discussion of the phrase "chose in action," follows the earlier case of Ex parte Union Bank of Manchester, L. R., 12 Eq. 354, and says: "I confess that I feel a difficulty in seeing what the registered owner of a share can recover by action. He has the ownership of the share, and he cannot get anything more than he has got already. If he is kept out of his dividends he can bring his action for those dividends. They may be choses in action, that I can understand, but he cannot sue for the share, as he has it already. This appears to me to show that it cannot be a chose in action in the ordinary sense, although I do not say that it may not be so in the extended and loose sense of that expression." But when this case came before the house of lords, the judgment of the chancery division was reversed, and the English doctrine still conforms to that stated in the text. Lord Blackburn, on appeal, says: "I think it was hardly disputed that, in modern times, lawyers have accurately and inaccurately used the phrase 'choses in action' as including all personal chattels that are not in possession. In what sense, then, is it used in the 15th section of the act of 1869 from which the present is taken? It is not disputed that these words show that the legislature intended to take policies of insurance out of the order and disposition clause. Why not shares in companies also? I cannot answer that question in any way satisfactory to my mind."

5. Dundas v. Dutens, 1 Ves. 196; Grogan v. Cooke, 2 B. & B. 230; Colonial Bank v. Whinney, 30 Ch. Div. 261. Compare Rex v. Capper, 5 Price 217.

6. Trover Lies for Shares of Stock.—"The fiction on which the action of trover was founded, namely, that a defendant had found the property of another, which was lost, has become, in the progress of law, an unmeaning thing, which has been by most courts discarded; so that the action no longer exists as it did at common law, but has been developed into a remedy for the conversion of every species of personal property." McKee, J., in Payne v. Elliot, 54 Cal. 341; 35 Am. Rep. 80.

In Ayres v. French, 41 Conn. 151,

*Pennsylvania.*¹ Attachment and execution may, by statute, be levied upon stock in most of the states, whereas the common law did not warrant this procedure.²

c. STATUTE OF FRAUDS AS PERTAINING TO SHARES—(1) Seventeenth Section—(a) American Doctrine.—The seventeenth section of the original act of Parliament of 29 Car. 2, ch. 3, known as the Statute of Frauds, required every "contract for the sale of goods, wares and merchandise" of specified value, to be, in most cases, in writing.³ This provision has been substantially adopted in the states of the Union,⁴ and shares of stock have been there held to be subject to the requirements of the section.⁵

Park, C. J., said: "If a certificate of stock is unlawfully retained when demanded, what is presumed to have been converted? The certificate has no intrinsic value disconnected from the stock it represents. No one would say that the paper alone had been converted—that the conversion of the paper constitutes the entire wrong. The real act done in such cases is precisely the same as that done here, no more, no less, and to say that trover will lie in one case and not in the other is to make a distinction where in reality there is no difference. Conversion is the gist of the action of trover. Everywhere it is so held. 1 Swift's Digest 533. The stock in both cases was converted; and we think that, in these days, when the tendency of the courts is to do away with technicalities not based upon reason, a technical distinction of this character should no longer be sustained." See also Nabring v. Bank of Mobile, 58 Ala. 204; Sturges v. Keith, 57 Ill. 451; 11 Am. Rep. 28; Bank of America v. McNeil, 10 Bush (Ky.) 54; Maryland F. Ins. Co. v. Dalrymple, 25 Md. 242; 89 Am. Dec. 779; Jarvis v. Rogers, 15 Mass. 389; Morton v. Preston, 18 Mich. 60; 100 Am. Dec. 146; Freeman v. Harwood, 49 Me. 195; Boylan v. Huguet, 8 Nev. 345; Anderson v. Nicholas, 28 N. Y. 600; Barry v. Calder, 48 Hun (N. Y.) 449; Godfrey v. Pell, 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 226; Budd v. Multnomah St. R. Co., 12 Oregon 271; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 27; 53 Am. Rep. 355; Kuhn v. McAllister, 1 Utah 273; 96 U. S. 87. Compare Atkins v. Gamble, 42 Cal. 86; 10 Am. Rep. 286.

1. "Trover can no more be maintained for a share in the capital stock of a corporation than it can for the interest of a partner in a commercial firm." Sharswood, J., in Neiler v.

Kelley, 69 Pa. St. 407. See also Sewall v. Lancaster Bank, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 285.

2. See infra, this title, Attachment and Execution.

3. The full text of the section was as follows: "That no contract for the sale of any goods, wares, and merchandise for the price of £10 sterling or upwards, shall be allowed to be good except the buyer shall accept part of the goods so sold and actually receive the same; or give something in earnest to bind the bargain, or in part payment; or that some note or memorandum in writing of the said bargain be made and signed by the parties to be charged by such contract, or their agents thereunto authorized."

4. Parsons on Contracts, vol. 3, p. 3.*

5. Statute of Frauds—American Doctrine.—The leading American case is Tisdale v. Harris, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 9, in which Shaw, C. J., says: "Supposing this a new question, now for the first time calling for a construction of the statute, the court are of opinion, that as well by its terms, as its general policy, stocks are fairly within its operation. . . . There is nothing in the nature of stocks, or shares in companies, which, in reason or sound policy, should exempt contracts in respect to them from those reasonable restrictions, designed by the statute to prevent frauds in the sale of other commodities. On the contrary, these companies have become so numerous, so large an amount of the property of the community is invested in them, and as the ordinary indicia of property, arising from delivery and possession, cannot take place, there seems to be peculiar reason for extending the provisions of this statute to them. As they may properly be included under the term goods, as they are within the Part payment will, of course, take the contract out of the statute,¹ and this payment may consist of services rendered, such as furnishing information.² So, part performance will render a parol contract valid,³ but the performance of a merely collateral agreement will not suffice.⁴ A stockbroker may, as the agent of both parties, make the entire memorandum required by the statute,⁵ and the latter does not, inter partes, govern agreements by partners to purchase stock from an outsider,⁶ or by one party to buy in his own name for the benefit of himself and another.⁷ Nor does the statute apply to contracts for the purchase of stock in a company not yet formed,⁸ nor to parol promises to sub-reason and policy of the act, the court are of opinion, that a contract for the sale of shares, in the absence of the other requisites, must be proved by some note or memorandum in writing; and as there was no such memorandum in writing, in the present case, the plaintiff is not entitled to maintain this action." Other decisions are North v. Forest, 15 Conn. 400; Southern L. Ins., etc., Co. v. Cole, 4 Fla. 378; Mayer v. Child, 47 Cal. 142; Pray v. Mitchell, 60 Me. 430; Colvin v. Williams, 3 Har. & J. (Md.) 38; 5 Am. Dec. 417; Baldwin v. Williams, 3 Met. (Mass.) 365; Eastern R. Co. v. Benedict, 10 Gray (Mass.) 212; Somerby v. Buntin, 118 Mass. 279; 19 Am. Rep. 459; Boardman v. Cutter, 128 Mass. 388; Fine v. Hornsby, 2 Mo. App. 61; Baltzen v. Nicolay, 53 N. Y. 467; Mason v. Decker, 72 N. Y. 595; 28 Am. Rep. 190.

1. Thompson v. Alger, 12 Met. (Mass.) 428.

2. White v. Drew, 56 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 53.

3. Eastern R. Co. v. Benedict, 10 Gray (Mass.) 212. Compare Hinchman v. Lincoln, 124 U. S. 38, where the question of delivery was submitted to the jury.

4. In North v. Forest, 15 Conn. 400, defendant, in consideration of plaintiff's releasing him from a parol contract to sell shares, agreed to pay plaintiff one-half of the excess which should be realized from a sale to a third party over the original purchase price. In an action upon the promise, the court said: "It is further claimed that there has been a part performance of the contract by the sale of the stock. But we see no foundation for this claim. The defendant had indeed sold the stock; but this he could have done as well without any contract with the plaintiff, as with it. The contract made with the plaintiff was invalid, and did not prevent the defendant from treating the stock as his own, and selling it as such."

5. Colvin v. Williams, 3 Har. & J. (Md.) 38; 5 Am. Dec. 417.

6. Tomlinson v. Miller, 7 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 364.

7. Stover v. Flack, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 162.

8. Gadsden v. Lance, 1 McMull. Eq. (S. Car.) 87; 37 Am. Dec. 548. In Green v. Brookins, 23 Mich. 54; 9 Am. Rep. 74, it was said: "We think the agreement thus set forth in the declaration, by which Green was to find a man to take stock to be thereafter created in a company thereafter to be organized through the means contemplated, and which stock as it originated should stand in the name of Brookins, was not an agreement on the part of Green to buy goods, wares, and merchandise, within the meaning of the statute in question. This arrangement did not in strictness provide for a sale of the anticipated stock. In substance it was an arrangement by which, if Brookins would embark in the enterprise, Green undertook to procure someone to be substituted in Brookins' place as a shareholder and member of the company, if Brookins so desired."

But in Boardman v. Cutter, 128 Mass. 388, the court, in construing a contingent agreement to purchase in a corporation about to be formed, said: "It has been decided by this court that shares in a corporation are 'goods, wares, and merchandise,' within the Statute of Frauds. Tisdale v. Harris, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 9; Baldwin v. Williams, 3 Met. (Mass.) 365. There is some conflict in the decisions of other courts upon this point (see Somerby v. Buntin, 118 Mass. 279; 19 Am. Rep.

scribe,¹ nor to an agreement by the seller to repurchase.² Releasing a party from a parol contract to sell shares, will not afford consideration for a collateral agreement by him,³ nor will the assignment of such a contract support a promise on the part of the assignee.⁴

(b) English Doctrine.—The rule in England regarding the operation of the seventeenth section of the Statute of Frauds upon sales of shares, is exactly the reverse of the American. While the decisions prior to the middle of the eighteenth century hold that such sales are within the statute,⁵ the modern English authorities have established the rule that its provisions do not apply.⁶

(2) *Fourth Section.*⁷—A parol agreement by the projector of a company to find a purchaser for the shares which a party might subscribe for, is not a "promise to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another."⁸ Neither does an assurance of certain dividends by the president of a corporation to a prospective subscriber,⁹ nor the guaranty by the owner, of par value within 459), but we do not feel called upon to overrule the two decisions above cited. As the defendant's contract in this case was not in writing, we see no ground upon which any action can be maintained upon it, without violating the Statute of Frauds. Massachusetts Gen. Stats., ch. 105, § 5. The fact that the plaintiff was induced to become one of the stockholders by the defendant's promise that he would at some future time buy the stock of the plaintiff at a specific price, does not change the essential character of the transaction."

1. Bullock v. Falmouth, etc., Turnpike Road Co., 85 Ky. 184; Coleman v. Eyre, 45 N. Y. 38; Miles v. Bough, 3 Q. B. 845; 43 E. C. L. 1001; 3 Railway Cas. 668.

2. Thorndike v. Locke, 98 Mass. 340; Fitzpatrick v. Woodruff, 96 N. Y. 561; Meyer v. Blair, 109 N. Y. 600; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 307; 4 Am. St. Rep. 500; Bank of Lyons v. Demmon, Hill & D. Supp. (N. Y.) 398; Morgan v. Struthers, 131 U. S. 246; Fay v. Wheeler, 44 Vt. 292.

3. North v. Forest, 15 Conn. 400.

4. Mayer v. Child, 47 Cal. 142; Sherman v. Barnard, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 291.

5. Mussall v. Cooke, Pre. Ch. 533; Pickering v. Appleby, 1 Com. 354; Croll v. Dobson, Sel. Cas. in Ch. Temp. King (fol. 41, 1724).

6. Modern English Doctrine.—Humble v. Mitchell, 11 A. & E. 205; 39 E. C. L. 46; Duncuft v. Albrecht, 12 Sim. 189; Hibblewhite v. M'Morine, 6 M. &

W. 200; Knight v. Barber, 16 M. & W. 66 (construing the stamp act); Bradley v. Holdsworth, 3 M. & W. 422; Tempest v. Kilner, 3 C. B. 249; 54 E. C. L. 248; Walker v. Bartlett, 18 C. B. 845; 86 E. C. L. 844; Haseltine v. Siggers, 1 Exch. 856; Bowlby v. Bell, 3 C. B. 284; 54 E. C. L. 284; Watson v. Spratley, 10 Exch. 222; Pickering v. Appleby, 1 Com. 354; Colonial Bank v. Whinney, 30 Ch. Div. 261.

7. This section of the original statute reads: "That no action shall be brought whereby to charge any executor or administrator upon any special promise to answer damages out of his own estate; or whereby to charge the defendant upon any special promise to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another person; or to charge any person upon any agreement made in consideration of marriage; or upon any contract or sale of lands, tenements or hereditaments, or any interest in or concerning them; or upon any agreement that is not to be performed within the space of one year from the making thereof; unless the agreement upon which such action shall be brought, or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorized."

8. Green v. Brookins, 23 Mich. 48; 9 Am. Rep. 74.

9. Moorehouse v. Crangle, 36 Ohio St. 130; 38 Am. Rep. 564.

a certain time, for stock offered in exchange for lands,¹ constitute such a promise. The provision regarding contracts for the "sale of lands" does not apply even to agreements to buy and sell shares in cost book mining companies,² for all stock is personal estate.³ The words "Not to be performed within a year" refer to performance on "either side;" hence a contract to sell stock at the end of three years, with an option by the purchaser to close the agreement at any time, is not included.⁴ As in other cases, the defense of the Statute of Frauds in contracts for the sale of stock must be specially pleaded.⁵

d. IDENTIFICATION.—One of the peculiar features of this species of property is its entire want of legal identity. Shares of stock are without "earmarks" and one cannot be distinguished from others of the same company and issue.⁶ Hence, a transfer in which, by mistake, the shares are incorrectly numbered, has been held to pass title to those actually owned by the transferrer.⁷ So where a pledgee of shares has caused them to be transferred to himself,⁸ or has sold them,⁹ he need not, in order to place himself aright with the pledgor, make restoration of the original shares. Nor is the pledgee liable to account for them at the highest price for which he has sold stock during the continuance of his relation with the pledgor.¹⁰ It is sufficient in all such cases

1. Hill v. Smith, 21 How. (U. S.) 283.

2. Watson v. Spratley, 10 Exch. 222; Powell v. Jessopp, 18 C. B. 335; 86 E. C. L. 335; Walker v. Bartlett, 18 C. B. 845; 86 E. C. L. 844; Ashworth v. Munn, 15 Ch. Div. 363.

3. See cases cited supra, this title, Shares of Stock—Personal Property.

4. Seddon v. Rosenbaum, 85 Va. 928, containing an extensive review of the authorities bearing on this phase of the Statute of Frauds.

5. Porter v. Wormser, 94 N. Y. 450.

6. Hubbell v. Drexel, 11 Fed. Rep. 115.

In Skowhegan Bank v. Cutler, 52 Me. 517, the court, by Davis, J., said: "A share in the capital stock of a corporation is merely some aliquot part of it, and not any particular part. Any designation, therefore, except by stating the owner or owners, would seem to be impossible. Even if the shares were consecutively numbered, of which there is no evidence, this would be the same. For, as a share is not any particular part, but merely an intangible, undivided proportion of the whole, the number would but designate the successive owners."

7. Inds Case, L. R., 7 Ch. 485, where Mellish, J., says: "I think the numbers of the shares are simply directory, for the purpose of enabling the title of particular persons to be traced; but that one share, an incorporeal right to a certain portion of the profits of the company, is the same as another, and that share No. 1 is not distinguishable from share No. 2, in the same way that a gray horse is distinguishable from a black horse. If, therefore, a holder of shares has the same number of shares which he professes to transfer, or a larger number, and by mistake the wrong distinguishing numbers are put in the transfer, that will not prevent the fifty shares which belonged to him passing to the transferee."

8. Hubbell v. Drexel, 11 Fed. Rep. 115.

9. Atkins v. Gamble, 42 Cal. 86; 10 Am. Rep. 286, where the court says: "The defendant was at all times able, and ready and willing to transfer to the plaintiff the same number of shares of similar stock of the same company, and which had precisely the same value; and it is evident that if the defendant, in these transactions, committed a technical breach of his trust, it presents a case of damnum absque injuria."

10. Nourse v. Prime, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 490; 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 87; 8 Am. Dec. 606; 11 Am. Dec. 403. In this case the defendants were stockif the pledgee has retained shares enough of equal value to meet the pledgor's demand, when made.¹

4. Certificates of Stock—a. GENERAL NATURE.—Certificates of stock are distinct from the shares themselves,² and, therefore, deserving of separate treatment. The former are not the res, but rather the evidence of its ownership.³ They are assurances to the commercial world that the stock is the property of the person designated,⁴ and the corporation is estopped to deny their validity when issued to bona fide purchasers.⁵ Still they are no more than brokers, and the shares left with them were not distinguishable from other shares in the same company which had passed through defendants' hands. Chancellor Kent says in the opinion: "It is sufficient, under this contract, that the defendants always had the requisite quantity of shares on hand, and the law will presume that the shares so on hand, from time to time, were the shares deposited, because the parties have not reduced the shares to any more certainty. We must take the contract as we find it, and are not bound to enter into a labyrinth of inquiry and accounts to see if we cannot mend it. The plaintiff has no right to call for an account of the profits made on a like number of shares, when the defendants always had a sufficient quantity to comply with the contract, and when the plaintiff is not able to point out which were his shares. . . . If a person will suffer his property to go into a common mass in this way, without having put a mark upon it, by which it can be identified, he clearly has no right to ask anything more than that the quantity he put in should always be there and ready for him. By just fiction of law that residuum shall be presumed to be the portion he put in." See also Horton v. Morgan, 6 Duer. (N. Y.) 56; 19 N. Y. 172; 75 Am. Dec. 311; Allen v. Dykers, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 593; Gilpin v. Howell, 5 Pa. St. 42; 45 Am. Dec. 720; Le Croy v. Eastman, 10 Mod. 499.

1. Atkins v. Gamble, 42 Cal. 86; 10 Am. Rep. 286; Nourse v. Prime, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 490; 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 87; 8 Am. Dec. 606; 11 Am. Dec. 403; Hubbell v. Drexel, 11 Fed. Rep. 115.

2. Burr v. Wilcox, 22 N. Y. 551; McAllister v. Kuhn, 96 U. S. 89; and see generally cases in following notes:

3. Says Sanderson, J., in Hawley v. Brumagim, 33 Cal. 399: "Stock is one thing and certificates another. The former is the substance and the latter is the evidence of it."

"A certificate of title to a share is not a share. It is evidence of the shareholder's interest. His interest may be transferred by the transfer of the certificate; but it is not the certificate that is valued, when the worth of the share is estimated either by the speculator in the market, or by the tax assessor. It is the property which it represents that is valued by the speculator, often with reference to speculation only, but by the public officer, always, if he does his duty, by the real worth of the property, all things considered." Van Allen v. Assessor, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 598.

"The certificate does not constitute the title to the stock. . . . In legal contemplation the certificate is merely an additional and convenient evidence of the ownership of the stock." Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Pearce, 28 Ind. 502.

See also Payne v. Elliot, 54 Pa. St. 339; 35 Am. Rep. 80; Mitchel v. Beckman, 64 Cal. 117; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 40; Campbell v. Morgan, 4 Ill. App. 100; Johnson v. Albany, etc., R. Co., 40 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 193; Arnold v. Suffolk Bank, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 424; People's Bank v. Kurtz, 99 Pa. St. 344; 44 Am. Rep. 112; McAllister v. Kuhn, 96 U. S. 89; Hubbell v. Drexel, 11 Fed. Rep. 115.

4. Joslyn v. St. Paul Distilling Co., 44 Minn. 183.

5. Twin Creek, etc., Turnpike Road Co. v. Lancaster, 79 Ky. 552; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 58; Machinists' Nat. Bank v. Field, 126 Mass. 345; Pratt v. Taunton Copper Mfg. Co., 123 Mass. 110; 25 Am. Rep. 37; Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Richardson, 135 Mass. 473; Allen v. South Boston R. Co., 150 Mass. 200; 15 Am. St. Rep. 185; Eastern Plank Road Co. v. Vaughan, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 155; Northern R. Co. v. Miller, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 260; Cole v. Ryan, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 168; prima facie evidence either of the validity of the issue,¹ or of the stockholder's title.² It has been said that "the certificate has no intrinsic value disconnected from the stock it represents,"³ but on the other hand, certificates issued by a corporation without capital stock have been recognized as conferring substantial rights.⁴

b. NEGOTIABILITY.—See also, infra, this title, Sales.

(1) Certificates Not Negotiable.—In the present state of the law it is settled that certificates of stock are not negotiable instruments.⁵ Thus, a purchaser of stock receives it subject to the lien of the company for debts, though the corporate capacity is Spear v. Crawford, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 20; 28 Am. Dec. 513; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 64; Holbrook v. New Jersey Zinc Co., 57 N. Y. 616; Mechanics' Sav. Inst. v. Potthoff, 9 Mo. App. 574; Lee v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 2 Cin. Super. Ct. (Ohio) 298; Kisterbock's Appeal, 127 Pa. St. 601; Shaw v. Port Philip Gold Min. Co., 13 Q. B. Div. 103.

1. Hall v. Rose Hill, etc., R. Co., 70 Ill. 673.

2. Courtright v. Deeds, 37 Iowa 503; Walker v. Detroit Transit R. Co., 47 Mich. 338; Broadway Bank v. McElrath, 13 N. J. Eq. 24.

3. Ayres v. French, 41 Conn. 151. Compare Payne v. Elliot, 54 Cal. 339; 35 Am. Rep. 30.

4. A certificate issued by a college corporation, not empowered to issue stock, declaring the holder entitled to one share in the real property of the corporation, and drawing six per cent. interest, though not a certificate of stock, will be sustained as a contract to pay annual interest during the existence of the corporation; but it creates no lien on the realty. Bryant v. Ohio Dental College, 1 Cin. Super. Ct. (Ohio) 307.

5. Certificates Not Negotiable.—East Birmingham Land Co. v. Debbis, 85 Ala. 565; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 135; 7 Am. St. Rep. 73; Atkins v. Gamble, 42 Cal. 99; 10 Am. Rep. 282; Sherwood v. Meadow Valley Min. Co., 50 Cal. 412; Barstow v. Savage Min. Co., 64 Cal. 391; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 194; 49 Am. Rep. 705; Tiedeman v. Knox, 53 Md. 612; Anderson v. Nicholas, 28 N. Y. 600; Weaver v. Barden, 49 N. Y. 286; Hammond v. Hastings, 134 U. S. 401; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 421; Young v. South Tredegar Iron Co., 85 Tenn. 189; 4 Am. St. Rep. 752; Société Générale v. Tramways

Union Co., 14 Q. B. Div. 424; London, etc., Banking Co. v. London, etc., Bank, 20 Q. Div. 232; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 469; Taylor v. Great Indian, etc., R. Co., 4 De G. & J. 559.

In Mechanic's Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 13 N. Y. 627, Comstock, J., said: "Certificates of stock are not securities for money in any sense, much less are they negotiable securities. They are simply the muniments and evidence of the holder's title to a given share in the property and franchises of the corporation of which he is a member."

In Sewall v. Boston Water Power Co., 4 Allen (Mass.) 282; 81 Am. Dec. 701, the court, by Chapman, J., said: "The authorities cited show that a certificate of stock is not a negotiable instrument; and, without any authorities, it is apparent that it has not a negotiable character."

In Weaver v. Barden, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 338, the court, by Mullen, P. J., said: "Stock has none of the qualities of negotiable paper, hence it cannot be treated as other personal property, title to which can only be divested by the owner's consent or by operation of law."

In Parker v. Sun Ins. Co., 42 La. Ann. 1172; 32 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 334, the court, by Watkins, J., said: "Shares of stock possess inherently only a restricted negotiability, and transfers of them can be effected only by assignment of them, as of other credits or incorporeal rights."

A certificate of stock expressing on its face that it is "transferable only on the books of the company by the holder thereof in person, or by a conveyance in writing recorded on said books and surrender of this certificate," and indorsed in blank, is not a negotiable instrument. Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 382; 1 Am. Rep. 115; 97 Am. Dec. 102.

not indicated on the certificate and the purchaser is ignorant of the lien.¹ So even a bona fide purchaser of a lost certificate acquires no title.² Again, where certificates indorsed in blank are stolen, purchasers from the thief are not protected,³ and it is held in Nevada that such purchasers become liable in damages to the real owner.⁴ But the transferee, after intervening registry, of a stolen certificate, has been held to acquire a good title.⁵ In England, while certificates are not generally negotiable,⁶ they may become so by the usages of trade and will be treated by the courts accordingly.⁷

1. Hammond v. Hastings, 134 U. S. 401; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 421; Conant v. Reed, 1 Ohio St. 298.

2. Sherwood v. Meadow Valley Min. Co., 50 Cal. 412.

In Winter v. Belmont Min. Co., 53 Cal. 428, plaintiff transferred his stock to "M., Trustee," who subsequently indorsed the certificates in blank and delivered them back to plaintiff. Afterward M. stole the certificates from plaintiff and sold them, and it was held that as the purchaser was a bona fide one, he acquired a good title to the stock. The court here relied upon a peculiar statute of California, and upon the cases of Brewster v. Sime, 42 Cal. 139; Thompson v. Toland, 48 Cal. 112, and Weston v. Bear River, etc., Min. Co., 6 Cal. 425; 63 Am. Dec. 117. It seems to recognize, however, that its holding is a departure from the authority first above cited, for it says: "In the case of Sherwood v. Meadow Valley Min. Co., 50 Cal. 412, our attention was not called to the foregoing decisions, nor to the statute regulating the transfer of stocks in private corporations. Without referring to these decisions or to the statute on which they were founded, counsel in the Sherwood case discussed the sole proposition whether a certificate of this character, on general principles of commercial law, was negotiable in the sense in which bills of exchange and other similar instruments are negotiable, and we held they were not, which was the only point decided in that case."

3. Barstow v. Savage Min. Co., 64 Cal. 388; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 194; 49 Am. Rep. 705; Anderson v. Nicholas, 28 N. Y. 600; Aull v. Colkett, 33 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 44; Given's Appeal (Pa. 1886), 16 Atl. Rep. 75; East, etc., Co. v. Dennis, 5 Ry. & Corp. Law J. (Ala.) 296.

The mere fact of loss is not proof of negligence. Biddle v. Bayard, 13 Pa.

St. 150. The purchaser of a stolen certificate cannot compel registration. Sherwood v. Meadow Valley Min. Co., 50 Cal. 412. But the company is not entitled to an injunction against a possible suit by one who has been refused registration. Buffalo Grape Sugar Co. v. Alberger, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 349.

4. Bercich v. Marye, 9 Nev. 312.

5. Mandlebaum v. North American Min. Co., 4 Mich. 464, the court saying: "When the company permitted this transfer to Ingersoll to be intimated upon their books, and issued this certificate to him, they well knew that it might, and probably would, pass from hand to hand, upon his indorsement, through numberless bona fide holders, before it would be returned for a like intimation of transfer and new certificate thereon. . . . Once indorsed, the certificate passes from hand to hand, like commercial paper, and an ordinary purchaser would, and under our statute well might, regard the usual indorsement, if genuine, as sufficient; and suspicion would naturally be lulled, and inquiry would be silenced beyond such as would, by mercantile law and usage, be required upon the purchase of commercial paper. And if inquiry were further pressed, and the party desirous of purchasing should seek further evidence of the genuineness of the title of his vendor, the entry upon the company's books corresponding with the issuing of such certificate would, almost of necessity, impel him to the conclusion that, up to that point, the title was unquestionable, and that behind it he need not pursue his investigations. It would be regarded, and properly too, as the recognition by the company of a title upon which every subsequent purchaser could rely."

6. Shropshire Union R., etc., Co. v. Reg., L. R., 7 H. L. 496.

7. Rumball v. Metropolitan Bank, 2

(2) Quasi-Negotiability.—But while certificates of stock do not possess the incidents of negotiability, they are said by some of the authorities to be "quasi-negotiable."¹ Thus, where the real owner has conferred upon another the apparent power to dispose of stock, a bona fide purchaser from such transferrer will be protected, though the latter exceeded his authority in the sale.² This, however, is hardly more than the statement of a principle which applies equally as well to non-negotiable choses in action,³ and the use of the term quasi-negotiable in reference to certificates of stock has been criticised by the text writers.⁴ Still, this branch of the law

Q. B. Div. 194; Goodwin v. Robarts, L. R., 1 App. Cas. 476; Compare Pickard v. Sears, 6 A. & E. 469; 33 E. C. L. 115.

See generally NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS, vol. 16, p. 479.

1. Bridgeport Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 30 Conn. 275.

In Litchfield v. Wells, 48 N. Y. 613, it was said: "Since the decision of the case of McNeil v. Tenth Nat. Bank, 46 N. Y. 325, above cited, certificates of stock, with blank assignments and powers of attorney attached, must be nearly as negotiable as commercial paper."

And in Mandlebaum v. North Am. Mining Co., 14 Mich. 473, the court, by Martin, J., observed: "It is true that this is not commercial paper in the strict sense of the term; but by our statute, as has been stated, it is transferable by indorsement and delivery, so as to confer a valid title as between the parties thereto, and is, we think, by this provision of the statute, so far assimilated to such paper that the holder is entitled to every right respecting it, as against third parties, which the law confers upon the holder of commercial paper."

Compare also the following: Duke v. Cahawba Nav. Co., 10 Ala. 82; 44 Am. Dec. 472; East Birmingham Land Co. v. Dennis, 85 Ala. 567; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 135; 7 Am. St. Rep. 73; Supply Ditch Co. v. Elliott, 10 Colo. 333; Winter v. Belmont Min. Co., 53 Cal. 428; Campbell v. Morgan, 4 Ill. App. 100; Smith v. Crescent City Live Stock, etc., Co., 30 La. Ann. 1378; Sewall v. Boston Water Power Co., 4 Allen (Mass.) 282; 81 Am. Dec. 701; Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 388; 1 Am. Rep. 115; 97 Am. Dec. 107; Sargent v. Essex, etc., R. Co., 9 Pick. (Mass.) 205; Fisher v. Essex Bank, 5 Gray (Mass.) 373; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Richards, 6 Mo. App. 454;

First Nat. Bank v. Northern R. Co., 58 N. H. 203; Broadway Bank v. McIlrath, 13 N. J. Eq. 24; Prall v. Tilt, 28 N. J. Eq. 483; Kortright v. Buffalo Commercial Bank, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 91; 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 348; Finney's Appeal, 59 Pa. St. 398; Woods' Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 379; 37 Am. Rep. 694; Fraser v. Charleston, 11 S. Car. 486; Union Bank v. Laird, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 390; Black v. Zacharie, 3 How. (U. S.) 483; Matthews v. Massachusetts Nat. Bank, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 396; Johnson v. Laffin, 5 Dill. (U. S.) 65; First Nat. Bank v. Lanier, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 369; McAllister v. Kuhn, 96 U. S. 89; Shaw v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 557; Johnston v. Laffin, 103 U. S. 800; Famous Shoe Co. v. Crosswhite, St. Louis Ct. of App. Dec. 1892. See also an exhaustive note, 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 478.

2. Nutting v. Thomason, 46 Ga. 34; Stinson v. Thornton, 56 Ga. 377; Cohen v. Gwynn, 4 Md. Ch. 357; Salisbury Mills v. Townsend, 109 Mass. 115; McNeil v. Tenth Nat. Bank, 46 N. Y. 325; Moore v. Metropolitan Nat. Bank, 55 N. Y. 41; Bayard v. Farmers', etc., Bank, 52 Pa. St. 232; Caulkins v. Memphis Gas Light Co., 85 Tenn. 683; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 400; 4 Am. St. Rep. 786; Briggs v. Massey, 42 L. T. Rep., N. S. 49.

3. Moore v. Metropolitan Nat. Bank, 55 N. Y. 41.

4. "It is little satisfaction to the court, the practitioner, the student, or the owner of stocks, to be told that certificates of stock have a quasi-negotiability. The term itself has been coined to describe the character of certain things which can be understood only by a study and knowledge of the characteristics of the thing described. Especially is this true of certificates of stock. The information sought is not whether the certificate is quasi-negotiable, but whether the holder of it is has the appearance of being in a transitional stage, and the trend of decisions seems to be in the direction of endowing certificates of stock with greater transferable potentiality.¹

c. ISSUE.—A certificate is issued when it is executed and mailed to the party entitled to receive it;² and the stub of the stock book is evidence of such issue.³ The execution need not be under seal,⁴ nor in the state where the corporation has its domicile.⁵ The issue must be authorized by the directors⁶ and protected under different states of facts and circumstances. He who intends to purchase such certificates wishes to know what dangers or risks he incurs by the purchase. The practitioner is interested, not in the general character of the instrument, but in the law as applicable to his particular case. Many of the cases concede to the certificates of stock a quasi-negotiability; but it is extremely doubtful whether such discussions do not confuse the understanding of the character of such an instrument more than they explain it." Cook, Stock and Stockholders, § 413.

"The phrase 'quasi-negotiability' has been termed an unhappy one, and certainly it is far from satisfactory, as it conveys no accurate, well defined meaning. But still it describes better than any other short-hand expression, the nature of those instruments which, while not negotiable in the sense of the law-merchant, are so framed and so dealt with as frequently to convey as good a title to the transferee as if they were negotiable." Daniel, Neg. Inst., § 1708.

1. In Scott v. Pequonnock Nat. Bank, 15 Fed. Rep. 501; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 32; Shipman, J., says: "The tendency of modern decisions is to regard certificates of stock attached to an executed blank assignment, and power to transfer, as approximating to negotiable securities, though neither in form nor character negotiable," citing First Nat. Bank v. Lanier, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 369; Bank of Bridgeport v. New York, etc., R. Co., 30 Conn. 270.

It must be remembered also that the negotiability of all the instruments which possess that feature is the product of a long period of judicial evolution. The first reported case involving the negotiability of bills of exchange was about 1603, while promissory notes did not become fully negotiable until the act of Parliament of 1704. In recent years, moreover, the field covered by these instruments has been greatly enlarged until it now includes also in many states, bonds, warrants, certificates of deposit, bills of lading, warehouse receipts, etc. But little further advance is needed, it seems, to include certificates of stock.

2. Jones v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 17 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 529.

3. Weber v. Fickey, 47 Md. 196.

4. Halstead v. Dodge, 51 N. Y. Super. Ct. 169.

5. Courtright v. Deeds, 37 Iowa 503.

6. Ryder v. Bushwick R. Co. (N. Y. 1892), 31 N. E. Rep. 251, was an action by the purchaser of certain certificates issued by the executive committee of a corporation, to enforce recognition of his rights as a stockholder. The court thus states and disposes of the case: "It appears that the directors of the defendant consisted of thirteen stockholders; that they had appointed of their number five to act as an executive committee, who were to have the general direction and superintendence of the affairs of the company, and were vested with full authority for constructing, repairing, equipping and operating the road, etc. But no power was given to them to issue stock. The certificates in question, however, were issued by the president upon the authority of the executive committee. The trial court has found as facts that such certificates were not issued by the authority of the board of directors; that they had not ratified such issue, and had not authorized the executive committee, nor the president, to issue the same; and that the plaintiff was not a purchaser in good faith for full value. Our examination of the case leads us to conclude that the findings are supported by the evidence. We regard these findings as disposing of the case, for if the certificates were not legally issued, and the plaintiff is not a bona fide holder, he is not entitled to the relief demanded. Barnes v. Brown, 80 N. Y. 534; Burrall v. Bushwick R. Co., signed by the full number of officers required by law.¹ Where a corporate officer has authority to issue certificates, he may issue them to himself as well as to others, and the corporation is liable to one who has been damaged as the result of such issue.² While the possession of certificates is not essential to membership in a corporation,³ every stockholder is entitled to them and may enforce his right by action.⁴

II. PARTICULAR KINDS—1. Preferred or Guaranteed—a. DEFINITION.—See also DIVIDENDS, vol. 5, p. 743.

The most important classes into which shares of stock may be divided are common and preferred.⁵ Holders of the common

75 N. Y. 211; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30."

1. Holbrook v. Farquier, etc., Turnpike Co., 3 Cranch. (C. C.) 425.

2. Titus v. Great Western Turnpike Co., 61 N. Y. 237.

3. Corwith v. Culver, 69 Ill. 502; Dows v. Naper, 91 Ill. 44; Helm v. Swiggett, 12 Ind. 194; Beckett v. Houston, 32 Ind. 394; First Nat. Bank v. Gifford, 47 Iowa 575; Agricultural Bank v. Burr, 24 Me. 256; Agricultural Bank v. Wilson, 24 Me. 273; Chaffin v. Cummings, 37 Me. 76; Chester Glass Co. v. Dewey, 16 Mass. 94; 8 Am. Dec. 128; Ellis v. Essex Merrimack Bridge, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 243; Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Pearson, 128 Mass. 445; Minneapolis Harvester Works v. Libby, 24 Minn. 327; Choteau Spring Co. v. Harris, 20 Mo. 382; Shaeffer v. Missouri Home Ins. Co., 46 Mo. 248; New Hampshire Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson, 30 N. H. 390; 64 Am. Dec. 300; Wheeler v. Walker, 45 N. H. 355; In re Election of Directors, 44 N. J. L. 529; Dennis v. Kennedy, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 517; Strong v. Smith, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 222; Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Dudley, 14 N. Y. 336; Johnson v. Albany, etc., R. Co., 40 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 193; Thorp v. Woodhull, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 411; Downer v. Zanesville Bank, Wright (Ohio) 477; Com. v. Woodward, 4 Phila. (Pa.) 124; Galveston City Co. v. Sibley, 56 Tex. 269; Turnbull v. Payson, 95 U. S. 418; Hawley v. Upton, 102 U. S. 314; Cecil Nat. Bank v. Watontown Bank, 105 U. S. 217; Ferrar v. Walker, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 506; Upton v. Burnham, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 431; Becher v. Wells Flouring Mill Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 62. Certificates are only secondary evidence of membership. Bank of Commerce's Appeal, 73 Pa. St. 59. Compare Mitchell v. Beckman, 64 Cal.

117; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 40; Baker v. Woolston, 27 Kan. 185.

4. Fletcher v. McGill, 110 Ind. 395; Chester Glass Co. v. Dewey, 16 Mass. 94; 8 Am. Dec. 128; Wyman v. American Powder Co., 8 Cush. (Mass.) 168; Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Dudley, 18 N. Y. 336; Haldeman v. Hillsborough, etc., R. Co., 2 Handy (Ohio) 101; Rowley's Appeal, 115 Pa. St. 150; Cecil Nat. Bank v. Watontown Bank, 105 U. S. 217; Ferguson v. Wilson, L. R., 2 Ch. 77.

Readiness and willingness to issue certificates at the time payment is to be made, is all that can be required where payment is to be in installments. James v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 2 Disney (Ohio) 261. But the corporation must be in a position to issue them. McCord v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 13 Ind. 220.

Where there are two claimants to stock, and the certificate is issued to the wrongful claimant, the other has an adequate remedy by mandamus to compel the issue of certificates to him. Baker v. Marshall, 15 Minn. 177. But delivery cannot be compelled where the corporation has already issued the full amount of its stock. Williams v. Savage Mfg. Co., 3 Md. Ch. 418; Smith v. North American Min. Co., 1 Nev. 423; Mechanics' Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 13 N. Y. 599; Baker v. Wasson, 53 Tex. 150; 59 Tex. 140.

In Massachusetts, however, the corporation may, in a proper case, be compelled to purchase stock in the market and issue it to the complainant. Pratt v. Machinists' Nat. Bank, 123 Mass. 110; Machinists' Nat. Bank v. Field, 126 Mass. 345.

5. Called also indifferently preference or preferential. Henry v. Great Northern, etc., R. Co., 4 K. & J. 1.

stock stand on an equal footing and share pro rata in the corporate profits.¹ Preferred stock, on the other hand, entitles its owners to dividends before other shareholders may receive them.² In the United States the term "preferred stock" and "guaranteed stock" are used interchangeably,³ but in England the latter variety alone is entitled to arrears of dividends.⁴

b. POWER TO ISSUE.—While the issue of preferred stock is undoubtedly valid when authorized,⁵ it is generally true that such

1. Cook, Stock and Stockholders, § 9.

2. Totten v. Tison, 54 Ga. 139; Belfast, etc., R. Co. v. Belfast, 77 Me. 445; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 736; Taft v. Hartford, etc., R. Co., 8 R. I. 310; 5 Am. Rep. 575; Crawford v. Northeastern, etc., R. Co., 3 Jur. N. S. 1093; Chaffee v. Rutland R. Co., 55 Vt. 110; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408; "Preferred Stock," 20 Am. Law Reg. 633, article by John D. Lawson; see also DIVIDENDS, vol. 5, p. 743. "The holder of preferred shares may say, 'Nobody shall have any portion of the profits of the company until I have been paid my dividend.'" Henry v. Great Northern, etc., R. Co., 4 K. & J. 1; 1 De G. & J. 606.

In Elkins v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 36 N. J. Eq. 236; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 639, Van Fleet, V. C., said: "There are certain legal principles pertinent to this discussion which I think are so firmly established that they may be taken for granted, without argument or the citation of authorities: First, stockholders are not creditors, and until the winding up of the corporation are entitled to nothing from it but a distribution of its net earnings; second, dividends can only be paid out of profits; third, calling stock preferred stock does not, per se, define the rights of such stock, but in order to determine in what respect the holder of such stock is to be preferred to the holder of ordinary stock, resort must be had to the statute or contract under which it is issued; and, fourth, where the statute or contract under which preferred stock is issued declares or promises that the holder of such stock shall receive a dividend of a fixed and certain rate per annum, without limiting the annual sum to be paid as dividend to profits earned or made within a designated period—as, for example, that he shall receive a dividend of seven per cent. per annum before any dividend shall be paid on the ordinary stock—there the preferred stockholder is entitled to seven per cent. per annum from the date of the issuing of the stock held by him, whether profits sufficient to pay him each year are made or not; and if, at the first division of profits, sufficient shall not have been made to pay him the whole sum due, he may carry the arrears due him over to the next dividend, and continue to do so until he has received the whole sum due him, calculated at seven per cent. per annum from the date of the issue of the stock held by him. The principle last stated rests mainly on English adjudications, and has in that country received the approval of such judges as Lord Cranworth, Lord Hatherly, Lord Justice Knight Bruce and Lord Justice Turner. The cases in which it has been enunciated are: Henry v. Great Northern R. Co., 3 Jur. N. S. 1133; 1 De G. & J. 606; Crawford v. North Eastern R. Co., 3 Jur. N. S. 1093; Sturge v. Eastern Union R. Co., 7 De G. M. & G. 158; Matthews v. Great Northern R. Co., 5 Jur. N. S. 284. The doctrine of all these cases, on the point under consideration, was approved in Boardman v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 84 N. Y. 157; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 265."

3. See DIVIDENDS, vol. 5, p. 743.

4. Henry v. Great Northern R. Co., 4 K. & J. 1; Cook, Stock and Stockholders (2d ed.) 267.

5. Hazlehurst v. Savannah, etc., R. Co., 43 Ga. 15; Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Evansville, 15 Ind. 395; Covington v. Covington, etc., Bridge Co., 10 Bush (Ky.) 69; Bates v. Androscoggin, etc., R. Co., 49 Me. 497; Wright v. Vermont, etc., R. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 68; Waterman v. Troy, etc., R. Co., 8 Gray (Mass.) 433; Cunningham v. Vermont, etc., R. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 411; Barnard v. Vermont, etc., R. Co., 7 Allen (Mass.) 512; Lockhart v. Van Alstyne, 31 Mich. 81; 18 Am. Rep. 156; McLaughlin v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 8 Mich. 100; Prouty v. Michigan Southern, etc., R. Co., 1 Hun (N. Y.) 655; authority is not an incidental corporate power, but must be expressly conferred by charter or by statute,¹ and that a mere by-law is not sufficient.² But this rule is subject to numerous modifications. Thus, there is high authority, though obiter, for the rule that a corporation may, before the issue of any shares, classify them into common and preferred, independent of charter provisions.³ A general authority to increase the capital stock

West Chester, etc., R. Co. v. Jackson, 77 Pa. St. 321; Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 177; Taft v. Hartford, etc., R. Co., 8 R. I. 310; 5 Am. Rep. 575; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 537; Richardson v. Vermont, etc., R. Co., 44 Vt. 613; St. John v. Erie R. Co., 22 Wall. (U. S.) 136; 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 271; In re Anglo-Danubian Steam Nav. Co., L. R., 20 Eq. 339; In re Brighton R. Co., 44 Ch. Div. 28; Henry v. Great Northern R. Co., 1 De G. & J. 606; Matthews v. Great Northern R. Co., 28 L. J. Ch. 376; Memphis Grain, etc., Co. v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 85 Tenn. 703; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 522; Bard v. Banigan, 39 Fed. Rep. 16; Taylor v. South & North Ala. R. Co., 4 Woods (U. S.) 575; Hutton v. Scarborough Cliff Hotel Co., 2 D. & S. 521; Ashbury v. Watson, 30 Ch. Div. 376; 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 383; Guinness v. Land Corp., 22 Ch. Div. 349; In re South Durham Brewery Co., 31 Ch. Div. 261; Fielden v. Lancashire, etc., R. Co., 2 De G. & S. 531; Melhado v. Hamilton, 28 L. T. (N. S.) 578; 29 L. T. (N. S.) 364.

1. In Campbell v. American Zylonite Co., 122 N. Y. 455, the case and the principle governing it are thus stated by the court: "The articles of association divided the capital of the corporation into 7,500 shares, equal in amount and value. At the date of the agreement of May 22, 1885, by which it was provided that 3,000 of the shares should have priority over the remaining 4,500, all of the shares, save 20, had been sold, and were then registered in the names of their purchasers. The right of every shareholder to his proportion of the profits of the corporation was vested, and, in the absence of some power to change the relative value of the shares, conferred by statute or by the articles of association, no change could be made without the consent of all the shareholders," citing Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 159.

2. Guinness v. Land Corp., 22 Ch. Div. 349; Hutton v. Scarborough Cliff

Hotel Co., 4 De G. J. & S. 671; Ashbury v. Watson, 30 Ch. Div. 376; 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 383.

3. In Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 159, Folger, J., says: "We are not prepared to say that, at the first, the corporation might not have lawfully divided the interest in its capital stock into shares arranged in classes, preferring one class to another in the right it should have in the profits of the business. The charter gave power to make such by-laws as it might deem proper, consistent with constitution and law; and to issue certificates of stock representing the value of the property. We know nothing in the constitution or the law that inhibits a corporation from beginning its corporate action by classifying the shares in its capital stock, with peculiar privileges to one share over another, and thus offering its stock to the public for subscription thereto. No rights are got until a subscription is made. Each subscriber would know for what class of stock he put down his name and what right he got when he thus became a stockholder. There need be no deception or mistake; there would be no trenching upon rights previously acquired; no contract, express or implied, would be broken or impaired. . . . Shares of stock are in the nature of choses in action, and give the holder a fixed right in the division of the profits or earnings of a company so long as it exists, and of its effects when it is dissolved. That right is as inviolable as is any right in property, and can no more be taken away or lessened, against the will of the owner, than can any other right, unless power is reserved in the first instance, when it enters into the constitution of the right; or is properly derived afterwards from a superior law giver. The certificate of stock is the muniment of the shareholder's title, and evidence of his right. It expresses the contract between the corporation and his co-stockholders and himself; and that contract cannot, he being unwilling, be taken away from him or will, as a rule, warrant the enactment of by-laws providing for the issue of preferred shares.¹ So the validity of such an issue has been sustained on the ground of a right to raise funds by a sale of shares,² and on the power to borrow money,³ but the latter ground has been repudiated by eminent authority.⁴ It is immaterial that the capital stock has already been fixed, if au-changed as to him without his prior dereliction, or under the conditions above stated. Now it is manifest that any action of a corporation which takes hold of the shares of its capital stock, already sold and in the hands of lawful owners, and divides them into two classes—one of which is thereby given prior right to a receipt of a fixed sum from the earnings before the other may have any receipt therefrom, and is given an equal share afterwards with the other in what earnings may remain—destroys the equality of the shares, takes away a right which originally existed in it, and materially varies the effect of the certificate of stock."

1. Harrison v. Mexican R. Co., L. R., 19 Eq. 358; In re South Durham Brewery Co., 34 W. R. 126; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 545; Gordon v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 78 Va. 501; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 33, where, however, the corporation was empowered to borrow money. But see Moss v. Syers, 32 L. J. Ch. 711.

2. Chaffee v. Rutland R. Co., 55 Vt. 110; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408; State v. Cheraw, etc., R. Co., 16 S. Car. 524.

3. Hazlehurst v. Savannah, etc., R. Co., 43 Ga. 13; Harrison v. Mexican R. Co., L. R., 19 Eq. 358; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 545. In this case the court says: "Now there is nothing in the terms of the charter, or the subscription, that forbids the pledging or mortgaging of the capital invested to secure further loans. In this form it certainly makes two classes of stockholders—one whose capital is invested without any security for profits or interest upon their money, except what the prospective success of the enterprise may afford;—the other, to whom a profit, usually higher than simple interest on their money, is guaranteed upon the amount subscribed. Notwithstanding the evils growing out of having two classes of stockholders, with conflicting interests, we believe it has been a mode of raising money much used in this kind of enterprise, and regarded only as in the nature of a mortgage. This form of security practically, perhaps, does not make the conflict of interests of the different holders of securities any greater, or depreciate to any greater extent the value of the original stock, than if in the form of a loan or bond or mortgage, for those who purchase bonds secured by mortgage may also be stockholders and thus have the same motives for managing the company for their own interests as if their debt was in the form of preferred stock."

4. Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 159. The opinion of Folger, J., is especially valuable for its full review of the authorities. He says: "It is contended that the power to do so is an incidental and implied power, necessary to the use of the other powers of the corporation, and is a legitimate means of raising money and securing the agreed consideration therefor. We have already conceded that it is legitimate to borrow money, and to secure the repayment of it, with a compensation for the use of it. But that is when it is done in such way as to put the burthen upon every share of stock alike, and to enable every share of stock to be relieved therefrom alike; in such way as to preserve the equality of right and privilege and value of the shares, and maintain intact the contract thereto with the stockholder. Citations are made to us for the converse of this; but they do not come up—sometimes in their facts, sometimes in their declarations—to the necessity of the proposition. Either it is where the capital is not limited, and it is new shares that may be issued with a preference, and where there is express power to borrow on bond and mortgage (2 Redf. on Ry's, ch. 33, sec. 4, § 237; Harrison v. Mexican R. Co., 12 Eng. Rep. 793; L. R., 19 Eq. 358); or the amount of the capital has not been reached and such stock is issued therefrom (Hazlehurst v. Savannah, etc., R. Co., 43 Ga. 53; Totten v. Tison, 54 Ga. 139); or there was legislative authority (Davis v. Proprietors of Meeting-House, 8 Met. (Mass.) 321; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt.

thority may be found for issuing additional and preferred shares,¹ and new charter clauses may be substituted for the original ones which afford such authority,² or it may be entirely supplied by amendment.³ Even where the issue of preferred stock would otherwise be invalid, it may be legalized by acquiescence and laches on the part of stockholders⁴ or purchasers,⁵ and particularly where the rights of third parties have intervened.⁶ Hence, it has been held that a delay of ten,⁷ or even of four⁸ years, the 545); or a restriction to authorized capital, and there was unanimous consent of the stockholders (Prouty v. Michigan Southern, etc., R. Co., 1 Hun (N. Y.) 663; Hazlehurst v. Savannah, etc., R. Co., 43 Ga. 53); or there was power to redeem, which was a transaction in the nature of a debt (Westchester, etc., R. Co. v. Jackson, 77 Pa. St. 321); or the opinion was obiter (Bates v. Androscoggin, etc., R. Co., 49 Me. 491); or it was the cause of a subscription for stock with a condition for interest until the corporation was in operation (Richardson v. Vermont, etc., R. Co., 44 Vt. 613); or it was an action on a subscription more favorable to defendant than to other subscribers, and it was held that defendant could not set up the lack of equality (Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Evansville, 15 Ind. 395); or a solemn determination of this question was not necessary for the disposal of the case (Williston v. Michigan Southern, etc., R. Co., 13 Allen (Mass.) 400); or the issue was authorized by the articles of association (In re Anglo-Danubian Steam Nav., etc., Co., L. R., 20 Eq. 339); or there was full knowledge on the part of all concerned (Lockhart v. Van Alstyne, 31 Mich. 81; 18 Am. Rep. 156); or the power in the corporate body was conceded, and it was denied that it existed in the directors (McLaughlin v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 8 Mich. 100)."

1. Harrison v. Mexican R. Co., L. R., 19 Eq. 358.

2. In re Bridgewater Nav. Co., 39 Ch. Div. 1.

3. Everhart v. West Chester, etc., R. Co., 28 Pa. St. 339; Covington v. Covington, etc., Bridge Co., 10 Bush (Ky.) 69; Curry v. Scott, 54 Pa. St. 277.

4. Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 186; Hazlehurst v. Savannah, etc., R. Co., 43 Ga. 13; Lockhart v. Van Alstyne, 31 Mich. 81; 18 Am. Rep. 156; Taylor v. South & North Ala. R. Co., 4 Woods (U. S.) 575; McLaughlin v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 8 Mich. 100;

Harrison v. Mexican, etc., R. Co., 44 L. J. Ch. 403.

5. Bard v. Banigan, 39 Fed. Rep. 13; 134 U. S. 291; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 327. In this case it was held that a purchaser of preferred stock, issued without express statutory authority, who voluntarily subscribed and paid for it for the purpose of promoting the scheme under which it was issued, and who was a promoter of the scheme, may not hold it for twenty-eight months after the conditions upon which it was issued have been fulfilled, and then on the insolvency of the corporation recover his money on the ground of the invalidity of the issue.

6. "Where third parties have dealt with the company, relying in good faith upon the existence of corporate authority to do an act, there it is not needed that there be an express assent thereto on the part of stockholders to work an equitable estoppel upon them. Their conduct may have been such, though negative in character, as to be taken for an acquiescence in the act; and when harm would come to such third parties if the act were held invalid, the stockholders are estopped from questioning it." Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 187.

7. Taylor v. South & North Ala. R. Co., 4 Woods (U. S.) 575.

8. "In our view of the matter, the holder of common stock had an equitable right to restrain the privileged payment to a preferred stockholder from the profits of the company, and to have the contract therefor declared invalid. It was his duty to have been prompt in his application to the courts for that relief, before evil could fall upon innocent parties; and where application to the courts therefor has been delayed by his neglect, and advantages have been gained by the corporate body, assistance should be denied (Zabriskie v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 23 How. (U. S.) 398; Evans v. Smallcombe, L. R., 3 H. L. 249). It acceptance of dividends on the preferred shares,¹ or the enjoyment of benefits in respect to them not shared by other stockholders,² would bar the right to attack the validity of the issue. Authority to issue preferred stock does not extend to more than the prescribed number of shares,³ nor does it authorize the issue of common shares.⁴

c. STATUS AND RIGHTS OF PREFERRED SHAREHOLDERS—(1) In General.—Aside from their priority in respect to dividends, holders of preferred stock stand upon almost the same footing as ordinary shareholders. The ownership of such stock carries with it the voting power,⁵ and, indeed, if by the terms of its creation purchasers are exempted from the rights and liabilities of membership, the transaction becomes a loan rather than an issue of preferred stock.⁶

(2) Preferred Shareholders Not Creditors.—Ordinarily the owners of preferred shares are stockholders and not creditors of the corporation.⁷ As between the preferred shareholders and outside is said that the common stockholder should have some time within which to seek relief. It is enough to say in answer, that four years at least went by before a holder of common stock asked for the aid of the courts, and then not until a holder of preferred stock asked that aid, to restrain proposed corporate action meant to put the common stock upon an equality with his own." Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 188.

1. Branch v. Jesup, 106 U. S. 468; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 558.

2. Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Evansville, 15 Ind. 395.

3. Melhado v. Hamilton, 28 L. T., N. S. 578.

4. Covington, etc., Co. v. Sargent, 1 Cin. Super. Ct. (Ohio) 354.

5. Warren v. King, 108 U. S. 397; Burt v. Rattle, 31 Ohio St. 116. Compare Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536.

6. Burt v. Rattle, 31 Ohio St. 129.

7. Belfast, etc., R. Co. v. Belfast, 77 Me. 445; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 736; Bates v. Androscoggin, etc., R. Co., 49 Me. 491; Lockhart v. Van Alstyne, 31 Mich. 76; 18 Am. Rep. 156; Nickals v. New York, etc., R. Co., 15 Fed. Rep. 575; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 139; Miller v. Ratterman, 47 Ohio St. 141; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 339; Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Allegheny Co., 63 Pa. St. 126; Chaffee v. Rutland R. Co., 55 Vt. 110; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408; St. John v. Erie R. Co., 22 Wall. (U. S.) 136.

In Taft v. Hartford, etc., R. Co., 8 R.

I. 310; 5 Am. Rep. 575, the certificates promised the holders "preferred and guaranteed dividends at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, before any dividends shall be paid on any other stock in said company." It was held that these were payable only out of such earnings of the company as were legally applicable to the payment of dividends. The court also said: "The question presented is, what is the meaning and engagement of the company as expressed in these words? The relations between these parties are obviously those between shareholders and the corporation. They are not, on the face of the contract, those of creditor and debtor. A corporation may issue bonds or other obligations convertible, at certain times and upon certain contingencies, into stock. They may issue stock, as in this case, redeemable at a certain time and upon certain conditions. But until such change is made in either case the original relation remains. A holder of the stock retains his right to share in the management of the corporation and to participate in its profits. He is not its creditor in this relation. If he is to be constituted its creditor, there are well known modes and words by which that relation can be expressed. If, instead of adopting them, he receives a certificate of stock, and then claims to be both its creditor and stockholder by virtue of the same contract, the burden is upon him to show that such anomalous relation exists. The presumption of law and the creditors, the lien of the latter has priority.¹ But in order that dividends may be declared upon preferred stock, it is not necessary that the corporation be free from floating debt.² Where preferred stock is issued under the authority of a statute which expressly declares that the rights and liabilities of stockholders shall not attach to the purchasers thereof, they are creditors.³ So parties from whom the corporation effects a loan, securing them by the issue of stock indorsed "preferred," and which is afterwards surrendered for mortgage bonds, have been held to be bona fide creditors.⁴ The issue of preferred stock has been declared to be "a form of mortgage,"⁵ and there is even authority for the view that the status of the owner of preferred shares is dual, including rights both of stockholders and creditors.⁶ usual course of business are against him. In this case, the evidence of the relation is a certificate of stock, and the subject of the engagement or contract is the dividends, so called, to be paid upon it."

Where preferred shares are issued to redeem bonded indebtedness, as allowed under the Ohio Statute, they are held to be certificates of stock and not evidences of debt, unless the latter were clearly intended. Miller v. Ratterman, 47 Ohio St. 141; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 339.

1. Chaffee v. Rutland R. Co., 55 Vt. 110; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408; Garrett v. May, 19 Md. 177; Belfast, etc., R. Co. v. Belfast, 77 Me. 445; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 736; King v. Ohio, etc., R. Co. (Ind. 1880), 9 Rep. 431; Branch v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 3 Woods (U. S.) 481; Warren v. King, 108 U. S. 389; St. John v. Erie R. Co., 22 Wall. (U. S.) 137; 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 27. In the first named case the court, per Veazey, J., said: "Upon the plaintiff's theory, there was an unqualified obligation to declare and pay dividends of preferred stockholders from the earnings and income, notwithstanding there were debts of the company greater than the earnings and the income. The creditor must come after the stockholder. Under this claim the rule universally recognized in the books that the property of a corporation is a trust fund pledged for the payment of the debts of the corporation, and the distinction everywhere upheld between a stockholder and creditors, would have to be disregarded. In our view the terms of the charter neither force nor import such construction."

2. Hazeltine v. Belfast, etc., R. Co.,

79 Me. 411; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 456; 1 Am. St. Rep. 330. But see Chaffee v. Rutland R. Co., 55 Vt. 110; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408.

3. Burt v. Rattle, 31 Ohio St. 116; Chaffee v. Rutland R. Co., 55 Vt. 110; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408. In the former case the purchasers were secured by a bond and mortgage, and the court, in determining their status, said: "To call a thing a wrong name does not change its nature. A mortgage creditor, although denominated a 'preferred stockholder,' is a mortgage creditor nevertheless; and interest is not changed into a 'dividend' by calling it a dividend. Nothing is more common in the construction of statutes and contracts than for the court to correct such self-evident misnomers by supplying the proper words. To use the language of the court in Corcoran v. Powers, 6 Ohio St. 19, 'the question in such cases is not what did the parties call it, but what do the facts and circumstances require the court to call it.' A man who advances his money to a corporation, and takes a bond and mortgage for its repayment, and who, by express agreement between the parties, takes no interest or risk in the concerns of the company, is a creditor of the company, and to call him a 'stockholder' is a simple misnomer. He is a creditor and remains a creditor, until by some future act of his own he elects to become a stockholder, or otherwise changes his relation. The right to become a stockholder does not make its possessor a stockholder."

4. Totten v. Tison, 54 Ga. 139.

5. West Chester, etc., R. Co. v. Jackson, 77 Pa. St. 321; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536.

6. Emerson v. New York, etc., R.

(3) Remedial Rights.—The declaration of dividends usually rests in the sound discretion of the directors,¹ and there is high authority for applying this rule to preferred stock.² But the prevailing doctrine is, that where a dividend is guaranteed and the directors refuse to pay, though funds exist for that purpose, the courts will interfere and compel such payment.³ It has been held

Co., 14 R. I. 555; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 404, where the court says: "As a stockholder he had rights to a dividend and to repayment of the principal of his stock in preference to any of the ordinary stockholders. As a creditor he was entitled to be paid the amount of his debt in the same manner as other creditors, but with no preference over them."

1. Belfast, etc., R. Co. v. Belfast, 77 Me. 445; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 736; King v. Patterson, etc., R. Co., 29 N. J. L. 88; Union Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., 99 U. S. 402.

2. In New York, etc., R. Co. v. Nickals, 119 U. S. 296, an agreement between creditors and shareholders provided for noncumulative dividends "in preference to the payment of any dividend on the common stock, but dependent on the profits of each particular year as declared by the board of directors." The directors passed a resolution, at the end of a fiscal year, reciting that they did "not deem it wise or expedient" to declare a preferred dividend. In an action by the preferred shareholders the circuit court held (15 Fed. Rep. 575) that the directors should be compelled to pay the preferred dividend. But, on appeal, the supreme court, by Mr. Justice Harlan, said: "This, in our judgment, is an erroneous interpretation of both the agreement and the company's charter. There is nothing in the language of either necessarily depriving the directors of the discretion with which managing agents of corporations are usually invested, when distributing the earnings of property committed to their hands. As was said by the court, in Clearwater v. Meredith, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 25, 40, 'when any person takes stock in a railroad corporation he has entered into a contract with the company that his interests shall be subject to the direction and control of the proper authorities of the corporation, to accomplish the object for which the company was organized.' The directors of such corporations, having opportunities not ordinarily possessed by others of knowing the resources and condition of the property under their control, are in a better position to determine than stockholders, whether, in view of the duties which the corporation owes the public, and of all its liabilities, it will be prudent in any particular year to declare a dividend upon stock. While their authority in respect of these matters may, of course, be controlled or modified by the company's charter, and while the power of the courts may be invoked for the protection of stockholders against bad faith upon the part of directors, we should hesitate to assume that either the legislature or the parties intended to deprive the corporation, by its managers, of the power to protect the interests of all, including the public, by using earnings, when necessary, for the preservation or improvement of the property intrusted to its control."

3. Hazeltine v. Belfast, etc., R. Co., 79 Me. 411; 1 Am. St. Rep. 330; Dickinson v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., 7 W. Va. 390; Mackintosh v. Flint, etc., R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 350; Belfast, etc., R. Co. v. Belfast, 77 Me. 445; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 736. In this case the court observes: "As a general rule the officers of a corporation are the sole judges as to the propriety of declaring dividends, and the courts will not interfere with a proper exercise of their discretion. The company usually establishes its financial policy for itself; yet when the right to a dividend is clear, and there are funds from which it can properly be made, a court of equity will interfere to compel the company to declare it. Directors are not allowed to use their power illegally, or oppressively. See cases supra; also Williston v. Michigan Southern, etc., R. Co., 13 Allen (Mass.) 400; Boardman v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 84 N. Y. 157; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 265; Jermain v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 91 N. Y. 483; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 111. In the present case we are by all the parties invited to accept jurisdiction; the facts are agreed, and all technicalities are waived. We may that assumpsit would lie to recover preferred dividends,¹ and that specific performance would be decreed of a contract to pay them.² So injunction will lie to restrain the payment of a general dividend until there are sufficient funds,³ or until the preferred stockholders have been paid.⁴ In actions to enforce the rights of preferred stockholders the common stockholders are not always necessary parties,⁵ nor are the corporate officers.⁶ A consolidated corporation is liable for dividends guaranteed to shareholders in the old companies.⁷ But in Massachusetts an action at law is not maintainable to recover undeclared dividends,⁸ and the payment of preferred stockholders in any case will not be com-adopt such a standard of judgment in determining the question as we think would and should regulate the exercise of sound discretion of directors, acting in good faith, in deciding the same question. Barnard v. Vermont, etc., R. Co., 7 Allen (Mass.) 521."

1. West Chester, etc., R. Co. v. Jackson, 77 Pa. St. 321, where dividends were guaranteed "from the time of payment for the stock." Compare Chaffee v. Rutland R. Co., 55 Vt. 110; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408.

2. Boardman v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 84 N. Y. 157; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 265.

3. Sturge v. Eastern Union R. Co., 7 De G. M. & G. 158; 56 Eng. Ch. 157. See also Crauford v. North Eastern R. Co., 3 K. & J. 723; Stevens v. South Devon R. Co., 9 Hare 313; Corry v. Londonderry, etc., R. Co., 29 Beav. 263; Henry v. Great Northern R. Co., De G. J. 606.

4. Prouty v. Michigan Southern, etc., R. Co., 1 Hun (N. Y.) 655; Henry v. Great Northern, etc., R. Co., 4 K. & J. 1. Where the common stockholders claim that they are being defrauded by the preferred stockholders, a preliminary injunction will not be ordered unless imminent danger is shown. Mackintosh v. Flint, etc., R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 350.

5. Thompson v. Erie R. Co., 45 N. Y. 468.

6. Chase v. Vanderbilt, 62 N. Y. 307. Here the action was brought by preferred stockholders of one of two consolidated corporations to enforce a contract to pay specified dividends. The court says: "The claim of the plaintiff, as a stockholder, is a claim against the company and not against the directors, and cannot be regarded as in the nature of an action against directors for diverting funds to purposes not authorized by law, to the detriment and injury of the stockholders, or in the nature of a case where they fraudulently and collusively refuse to institute a suit. The corporation may sue and be sued, in its corporate name. It has a legal existence as such, and is liable to answer for any act which may be done, connected with its transactions. If the action could properly be brought against the corporation, the directors, as its officers, were bound to look after the rights of all the stockholders and parties in interest and to see that they were properly protected and cared for. As individual defendants, they could do no more, and, as officers, were bound to do thus much. It is not obvious how parties thus made defendants can be of any essential benefit in the conduct of the action. If, as may be assumed, they are adverse in interest to the plaintiff, clearly they could not be of any service to those who may have been similarly situated. If they agreed with the object of the suit then they could bring an action, or be benefited by success in the action brought by the plaintiff. They were clearly not necessary parties for the determination of the action. Nor were they proper parties under the circumstances presented, because in no way does it appear that the fact of their being parties was required, or was in any sense important, either in the prosecution of the suit, in obtaining the relief demanded, or in the defense of the same."

7. Boardman v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 84 N. Y. 181; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 265; Prouty v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 52 N. Y. 363; Chase v. Vanderbilt, 62 N. Y. 307. Compare In re Sage, 70 N. Y. 220.

8. Williston v. Michigan, etc., R. Co., 13 Allen (Mass.) 400.

pelled where it would work injustice to creditors or other stockholders.¹

d. EXCHANGE OF COMMON FOR PREFERRED STOCK.—When preferred stock is issued, with an option to the common shareholders of exchanging their stock therefor, the option must be exercised within the time prescribed, or, if no time is fixed, then within a reasonable time.²

A mere barter by the directors of certain preferred shares, held as corporate assets, for special common shares, in order to effect a settlement of certain claims, is not a transaction authorized by a resolution which provides for the issue of preferred stock with the option to exchange.³

e. PREFERRED DIVIDENDS—(1) General Nature.—Preferred dividends have been defined as “a charge upon all accruing profits at the stipulated rate, before anything is divided among the ordinary shareholders.”⁴ The guaranty of a dividend is said to mean nothing more than a pledge of the funds legally applicable to the purposes of a dividend.⁵

(2) From What Funds Payable—(a) Earnings and Profits.—Since the holders of preferred stock are not creditors but members of the corporation,⁶ the fund from which their income is derived is usually the same for them as for other stockholders. Hence it is said that “The preference is limited to profits whenever earned.”⁷

1. Culver v. Reno Real Estate Co., 91 Pa. St. 367.

2. Holland v. Cheshire R. Co., 151 Mass. 231. In this case the company had authorized its directors to issue preferred stock with the privilege of exchange, and under this plan exchanges continued to be made for some three years, during which time most of the common stock was surrendered. After a lapse of thirty-three years plaintiff sought to avail himself of the option. Independently of the question whether the terms of the resolution did not fix a limit, the court held that the plaintiff's offer was not within a reasonable time and he was therefore barred.

Converting Corporate Bonds or Loan Notes into Shares.—So, if the privilege is given of converting corporate bonds (Muhlenberg v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 47 Pa. St. 16; or loan notes, Campbell v. London, etc., R. Co., 5 Hare 519; 26 Eng. 515) into shares, time is of the essence of the transaction, and the right may not be claimed after the expiration of the limit.

The case of Pearson v. London, etc., R. Co., 14 Sim. 541, was not an instance of the issue of preferred stock at all, nor are the two cases last above cited, though the text writers have discussed them under this head. See Cook, Stock and Stockholders, p. 278; 2 Beach, Corp., p. 820.

3. Holland v. Cheshire R. Co., 151 Mass. 231.

4. Henry v. Great Northern R. Co., 1 De G. & J. 606, where the Lord Chancellor further says “This is substantially interest chargeable exclusively on profits.”

5. Taft v. Hartford, etc., R. Co., 8 R. I. 310; 5 Am. Rep. 575.

6. See supra, this title, Preferred Shareholders Not Creditors.

7. Veazey, J., in Chaffee v. Rutland R. Co., 55 Vt. 110; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408, citing Field on Corporations, § 121; Corry v. Londonderry, etc., R. Co., 29 Beav. 263; McGregor v. Home Ins. Co., 33 N. J. Eq. 181; St. John v. Erie R. Co., 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 271; 22 Wall. (U. S.) 136; Lockhart v. Van Alstyne, 31 Mich. 76; 18 Am. St. Rep. 156; Taft v. Hartford, etc., R. Co., 8 R. I. 310; 5 Am. Rep. 575. See also Elkins v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 36 N. J. Eq. 233; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 639; Griffith v. Paget, 6 Ch. Div. 511; In re London India Rubber Co., L. R., 5 Eq. 519; In re Quebrada R., etc., Co., 40 Ch. Div. 363; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas.

So a contract to pay dividends on preferred stock, whether or not the corporate earnings will justify such payment, has been held to be contrary to public policy and void.¹ Nevertheless, there is high authority for the rule that a statutory guaranty of specific dividends on preferred stock is absolute, and not conditioned upon the earning of sufficient profits.² Where the construction obtains that preferred dividends are payable only if the corporate earnings will permit, net earnings and profits are meant.³ The phrase "net earnings" has been defined as the "excess of the gross earnings over the expenditures defrayed in producing them, aside from and exclusive of the constructing and equipment of the works themselves."⁴ The term is practically synony-

380; also St. John v. Erie R. Co., 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 271; 22 Wall. (U. S.) 136; Boardman v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 84 N. Y. 157; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 265; Prouty v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 52 N. Y. 363; Thompson v. Erie R. Co., 45 N. Y. 465; Belfast, etc., R. Co. v. Belfast, 77 Me. 445; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 736; Bates v. Androscoggin, etc., R. Co., 49 Me. 491; Union Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., 99 U. S. 402; Nickals v. N. Y., etc., R. Co., 15 Fed. Rep. 575; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 139.

In Miller v. Ratterman, 47 Ohio St., 141; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 339, the court, by Spear, J., said: "Nor did the stipulation guarantying to the holders of the preferred stock payment of dividends thereon negative the idea that they were stockholders. It was not a stipulation to pay dividends in any event, but a stipulation to pay only out of surplus profits; for the company must be presumed to have proceeded in view of the terms of the second section of the act referred to, and the general rule of law on the subject. That rule is, that payment of dividends to preferred stockholders differs from such payment to the holders of common stock only in that they are entitled to dividends in priority to any dividends upon the common stock. Dividends to either are to come from one common source, to-wit: from funds properly applicable to the payment of dividends; that is to say, net earnings. In the nature of things, this must be so. As well might one member of a partnership be permitted to appropriate to his own use assets of the firm to the prejudice of creditors, as for a stockholder of a corporation to do it. A contract to permit this to be done would be contrary to public policy, and void. Pierce, R. R. 124, 125; St.

John v. Erie R. Co., 22 Wall. (U. S.) 136; Lockhart v. Van Alstyne, 31 Mich. 76; 18 Am. Rep. 156; Taft v. Hartford, etc., R. Co., 8 R. I. 310; 5 Am. Rep. 575; Painesville, etc., R. Co. v. King, 17 Ohio St. 534. And now provision to the same effect is made by statute. 1 Smith & B. Rev. St. 935."

1. Lockhart v. Van Alstyne, 31 Mich. 76; 18 Am. Rep. 156, where Cooley, J., says: "An agreement to pay semi-annual dividends from earnings, when there are any, and from capital, when there are not, is only a new form of the undertaking by which the debtor is to pay from his profits if the ship comes in, and from the pound of flesh if it does not; every dividend from the capital being an attack upon the very life of the corporation, before which, under ordinary circumstances, it must inevitably and speedily give away. And thus the contract, the only justification for which is the strengthening of the corporation, is found to contain within itself a provision which, except in the event of steady prosperity, must inevitably tend to its weakening, and almost certainly to its destruction." See also Taft v. Hartford, etc., R. Co., 8 R. I. 310; 5 Am. Rep. 575. Compare Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Evansville, 15 Ind. 395; Miller v. Ratterman, 47 Ohio St. 141; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 339.

2. Williams v. Parker, 136 Mass. 206; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 566.

3. Belfast, etc., R. Co. v. Belfast, 77 Me. 445; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 736; McGregor v. Home Ins. Co., 33 N. J. Eq. 184; Chaffee v. Rutland R. Co., 55 Vt. 110; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408.

4. Bradley, J., in Union Pac. R. Co. v. U. S., 99 U. S. 402. In Belfast, etc., R. Co. v. Belfast, 77 Me. 445; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 736, Peters, C. J., defines

mous with "net income,"¹ or "surplus earnings."² But before dividends may be declared there should be deducted from the net earnings an amount sufficient to pay interest on the debts of the corporation and to supply the needs of a sinking fund, if one has been established.³

(b) Capital.—As a general rule, capital of the corporation is not subject to preference. Even upon dissolution the general rule is that the preferred have no seniority over the common shareholders in the distribution of assets and capital.⁴ Still, it has been held that upon a division of the assets guaranteed stockholders are entitled to be paid therefrom to the exclusion of others.⁵ And if the general law governing the dissolution of corporations provides that the surplus funds shall be divided among the common stockholders "After payment of the preferred stockholders," the latter are entitled to preference in the distribution of capital, and the fact that the corporation is being wound up by its officers, and not under the direction of the the "net earnings" of a railroad as "The gross receipts less the expenses of operating the road to earn such receipts." See further for definition: Park v. Grant Locomotive Works, 40 N. J. Eq. 114; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 231; N. Y., etc., R. Co. v. Nickals, 119 U. S. 296; Salisbury v. Metropolitan R. Co., 22 L. T., N. S. 839; Coltness Iron Co. v. Black, 51 L. J., Q. B. 626; Corry v. Londonderry, etc., R. Co., 29 Beav. 263.

1. Phillips v. Eastern R. Co., 138 Mass. 122; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 247; People v. Niagara Co., 4 Hill (N. Y.) 23. Compare Park v. Grant Locomotive Works, 40 N. J. L. 114; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 231.

2. Williams v. Western Union Tel. Co., 93 N. Y. 191; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 139.

3. Belfast, etc., R. Co. v. Belfast, 77 Mc. 445; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 736.

4. In Griffith v. Paget, 6 Ch. Div. 511, Sir George Jessel, M. R., states as follows, the reason for the prevailing rule on this point, using the term "partnership" in its English sense of associated enterprise in general: "Therefore, if there were no provision to be found anywhere, you would distribute the assets in proportion to the capital, and the mere arrangement for the division of profits inter se during the continuance of the partnership would have no direct bearing on the division of the capital, as distinguished from profits earned up to the time of the dissolution, after the dissolution of the company." See also McGregor v. Home

Ins. Co., 33 N. J. Eq. 181; In re London India Rubber Co., L. R., 5 Eq. 519; In re Bridgewater Nav. Co., L. R., 14 App. 525; 32 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 586.

5. Gordon v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 78 Va. 501; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 33; In re Bangor, etc., Slate Co., L. R., 20 Eq. 59. In the latter case preferential shares were issued under a resolution providing for interest and bonus "Before any dividend, interest or other money is payable to the original shareholders." The court said: "It is clear to me that the articles of association did authorize the creation of preference shares, having such privileges as the company should think fit, including a preference in every respect, both as to dividend and as to capital; and it seems highly probable that unless a company could give such preference, they would frequently be unable to raise the money they require for the undertaking. Then the only remaining question is whether they have exercised their power in such a manner as to give a preference as to capital as well as dividend. That depends upon the resolution of April, 1863, and, from the terms of that resolution, I am quite clear that the power was executed, and that a priority was given to the new shareholders. The surplus assets must therefore be distributed among the preference shareholders, pro rata, in repayment of their capital and interest, in accordance with the resolution of April, 1863, in priority to the ordinary shareholders."

court, does not alter the rights of the parties, nor change the method of distribution.¹

(3) Payment of Arrears.—While, as above stated, it is the rule that preferred dividends are payable only in case that the net profits allow,² it is also generally true that where the accumulated earnings at any period of distribution are insufficient for that purpose, the arrears must be paid out of subsequent profits.³ Moreover, acquiescence in the declaration of a dividend on common shares while there is an arrearage on the preferred is not a

1. McGregor v. Home Ins. Co., 33 N. J. Eq. 181.

2. See supra, this title, Preferred Dividends.

3. Crauford v. North Eastern R. Co., 3 Jur. N. S. 1093; Sturge v. E. N. R. Co., 31 Eng. L. & Eq. 406; Stevens v. South Devon R. Co., 9 Hare 313; 12 Eng. L. & Eq. 229; Matthews v. Great Northern R. Co., 5 Jur. N. S. 284; Corry v. Londonderry, etc., R. Co., 29 Beav. 263; Harrison v. Mexican R. Co., L. R., 19 Eq. 358. Boardman v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 84 N. Y. 173; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 265. In this case the court says: "The contract is explicit as to the amount and the source out of which the dividends shall be paid, and the times when payable annually are also designated. The design evidently was that the stockholders should realize ten per cent. each year, payable semi-annually, upon the investment actually made. As they were entitled to receive such dividends from the net earnings and to have ten per cent. upon the investment, and this was absolutely guaranteed, it necessarily follows that in the event that such earnings should not reach the amount, or at any time failed, the dividends must afterward be paid from the net earnings when earned and received by the company. The reasonable and fair interpretation of the contract is, that the dividends were not only to be preferred, but being guaranteed, were cumulative and a specific charge upon the accruing profits to be paid as arrears, before any other dividends were divided upon the common stock. The doctrine that preference shareholders are entitled to be first paid the amount of dividends guaranteed, and of all arrears of dividends and interest, before the other shareholders are entitled to receive anything, and although they can receive no profits where none are earned, yet as soon as there are profits to divide they are entitled to the same, is fully supported by authority."

In Henry v. Great Northern R. Co., 1 De G. & J. 606, Lord Justice Knight Bruce thus illustrated the rule: "A and B and C are partners in a trade, each having contributed an equal share of capital, but they agree that out of the profits 5 per cent. shall preferably and in the first instance be paid to A on his portion of the capital. The division of the profits among them is agreed to be and is periodically made. At one of the periodical divisions the profits fall short of a sufficiency to pay this amount to A from the time to which out of the profits his interest had previously been paid. Is the deficiency not afterwards to be made good to him from profits more than adequate to answer it? I have heard no reason why not. If, indeed, such a thing is prohibited by the terms of the contract, they must, of course, be abided by. Is there any such prohibition in the present instance? As it seems to me, clearly not. A part of the argument for the defendants having been illustrated by the figure of the filling of a cup, I may be excused for suggesting another case. Let us suppose a right to have a tun of wine from a vineyard. Is that the same merely as a right to have a tun of wine from a vintage? I do not think so. In the former case the deficiency of an earlier would have to be supplied by a later vintage; not so, possibly, in the other. Here, as I apprehend, the plaintiffs have the vineyard, and not merely the chance of a particular vantage to look to."

See also Lockhart v. Van Alstyne, 31 Mich. 76; 18 Am. Rep. 156; Elkins v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 36 N. J. Eq. 233; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 639; Prouty v. Michigan Southern, etc., R. Co., 1 Hun (N. Y.) 655; Adams v. Fort Plain Bank, 36 N. Y. 255; Webb v. Earle, L. R., 20 Eq. 556.

waiver of the right to such arrears at a subsequent period¹ or to arrears in general.² Still where the terms under which preferred stock is issued imply that the entire net profits of a year shall be paid out in dividends, arrearages cannot be carried over.³ So a deficiency resulting from the fact that the amount payable in dividends on preferred stock has been limited by statute, cannot be supplied in a subsequent year.⁴ Interest may be recovered on arrears where they are payable⁵ and after the arrears have been satisfied common and preferred stock share equally.⁶ The English Companies Clauses Act forbids the payment of arrears.⁷ An assignment of preferred stock carries with it the undeclared and undivided arrears of dividends.⁸

2. Interest Bearing Stock.—Closely allied to preferred stock is another and at present less common variety issued by corporations with a promise to pay thereon a certain rate of interest. Such an issue of shares is generally valid and the promise enforceable,⁹ and the owner of such stock cannot be compelled to

1. Matthews v. Great Northern R. Co., 28 L. J. Ch. 375. Compare Dent v. London Tramways Co., 16 Ch. Div. 344.

2. Smith v. Cork, etc., R. Co., L. R., 5 Ir. Rep. Eq. 65.

3. Hazeltine v. Belfast, etc., R. Co., 79 Me. 411; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 456; 1 Am. St. Rep. 330. In this case the by-law provided: "Dividends on the preferred stock shall first be made semi-annually from the net earnings of the road, not exceeding six per centum per annum, after which dividend, if there shall remain a surplus, a dividend shall be made upon the non-preferred stock up to a like per cent. per annum; and should a surplus then remain of net earnings, after both of said dividends in any one year, the same shall be divided pro rata on all the stock."

In construing the above, the court said: "Had the by-law merely provided that the preferred shares should be entitled to a dividend of six per cent. annually, when earned, the arrearages of one year would have been payable out of the earnings of subsequent years, and there would have been no occasion for the present controversy between the two classes of stockholders. There is no question among the authorities on this point. Jones on Railways, § 620; Morawetz on Corporations (2d ed.), § 458; Cook on Stock and Stockholders, § 272. The latter author, in a note to section 269 of his work, published in 1887, cites Belfast, etc., R. Co. v. Belfast, 77 Me. 455; 23 Am. &

Eng. R. Cas. 736, supra, as inconsistent with the general rule, but states the ground for the variance: that inasmuch as the by-law implies that the entire net earnings of each year should be paid out in dividends, a deficiency of preferred dividend in any year could not be made up in subsequent years." Compare Gordon v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 78 Va. 501; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 33.

4. Elkins v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 36 N. J. Eq. 233; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 639.

5. Boardman v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 84 N. Y. 157; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 265. But compare Corry v. Londonderry, etc., R. Co., 29 Beav. 263.

6. Bailey v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 1 Dill. (U. S.) 174; 17 Wall. (U. S.) 96; Allen v. Londonderry, etc., R. Co., 25 W. R. 524.

7. 26 & 27 Vict., ch. 118, § 14.

8. Boardman v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 84 N. Y. 157; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 265; Jermain v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 91 N. Y. 483; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 111; Manning v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 24 Hun (N. Y.) 361; Hyatt v. Allen, 56 N. Y. 553.

But it is otherwise if the dividend is declared prior to the assignment. State v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 6 Ohio St. 489.

9. Waterman v. Troy, etc., R. Co., 8 Gray (Mass.) 433; Cunningham v. Vermont, etc., R. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 411; Barnard v. Vermont, etc., R. Co., 7 Allen (Mass.) 512; Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Evansville, 15 Ind. 395; Rut- accept bonds of the corporation in lieu of interest.¹ So, railroad companies may invite subscriptions by guarantying interest on the par value of the shares from the time the latter are fully paid up until some particular stage is reached in the prosecution of the enterprise;² but an indefinite arrangement, fixing no mode or time of payment, is invalid.³ And in general, the contract, in order to be lawful, must be construed as providing for the payment of interest only out of corporate profits; a promise to pay interest when the company has no resources for payment except its capital is ultra vires, and will not be enforced.⁴ In England, land, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536; Richardson v. Vermont, etc., R. Co., 44 Vt. 613.

In Wright v. Vermont, etc., R. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 68, Shaw, C. J., in speaking of such an issue of stock, says: "Supposing the original vote of the stockholders should be regarded as declaring a general right of the stockholders, previously to paying in any installments on their shares, that each should be entitled to interest, to be computed on his payments from the time of each payment to the time when the railroad should go into operation, and be in a condition to earn income and pay dividends, this would be equitable, because it would put stockholders on an equal footing, whether they should pay earlier or later. It would encourage capitalists to advance their money early, to meet the exigencies of the company before it could enjoy any income; and it seems right that the use of such capital should be paid for as a common charge on all."

Such certificates constitute the owner a full stockholder. McLaughlin v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 8 Mich. 99.

In Ohio v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 6 Ohio St. 490, the directors had passed the following resolution: "The treasurer is directed to allow interest on installments as paid, payable in stock, and carry to the account of each stockholder the interest annually, and, when the amount is sufficient, to issue stock certificates in payment." The interest was allowed to those who made payments on their subscriptions subsequent to the passage of the resolution, and the court held that those who had paid their subscriptions before the resolution had been passed were also entitled to claim its benefits and to demand the payment of interest.

1. McLaughlin v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 8 Mich. 99.

2. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co. v. Field,

12 Wis. 340; Racine Co. Bank v. Ayres, 12 Wis. 512; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536.

But a contract between the corporation and the subscriber, that the latter "shall have the privilege of paying in at any time the whole or any part of his subscription and shall receive interest thereon until the road goes into operation," is binding only from the happening of the event therein named, and does not entitle the subscriber to receive interest until the completion of the enterprise. Waterman v. Troy, etc., R. Co., 8 Gray (Mass.) 433.

And where the promise is to pay interest "until the road is completed," the stockholder is not entitled to interest beyond the time when the enterprise, as originally designed, is completed. The fact that an extension of the road to other points is subsequently authorized will not extend the interest bearing period. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Allegheny Co., 63 Pa. St. 126.

In Miller v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 40 Pa. St. 239; 80 Am. Dec. 570, it was held that where a railroad company had received subscriptions on a guaranty that they would pay interest on stock "as soon as paid," until the road was finished, interest would not accrue until the stock was fully paid, and where but a small part of the stock had been paid for by the defendant, he could not in a suit against him for the balance set up the non-payment of interest on his stock by the company as a breach of condition.

3. Wright v. Vermont, etc., R. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 75.

4. Painesville, etc., R. Co. v. King, 17 Ohio St. 534; Cunningham v. Vermont, etc., R. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 411; Lockhart v. Van Alstyne, 31 Mich. 75; 18 Am. Rep. 156; Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Tibbits, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 307; Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Allegheny

it is even held that payments of interest by the directors out of the capital renders them jointly and severally liable for the amounts so paid.¹

3. Special Stock.—The statutes of Massachusetts provide for a peculiar variety known as "special stock."² Its characteristics have thus been summarized: "It is limited in amount to two-fifths of the actual capital; it is subject to redemption by the corporation at par after a fixed time, to be expressed in certificates; the corporation is bound to pay a fixed half-yearly sum, or dividend upon it, as a debt; the holders of it are in no event liable for the debts of the corporation beyond their stock; and the issue of special stock makes all the general stockholders liable for all debts and contracts of the corporation until the special stock is fully redeemed."³ It differs also from preferred stock in being payable absolutely and without regard to corporate earnings.⁴ The statute provides for the issue of special stock at a meeting duly called for that purpose and upon a vote of three-fourths of the general stockholders.⁵ Hence, it has been held that a vote to issue such stock at a meeting called to consider the matter of preferred shares, is invalid,⁶ and that it must affirmatively appear from the record that the required number voted for the issue.⁷ The holder of such stock which has been illegally issued cannot, by estoppel or otherwise, become a member in respect thereto,⁸ but he may rescind his contract to accept it and prove the amount of his claim against the insolvent estate of the corporation,⁹ even though such insolvency occurs before the rescission.¹⁰

4. Other Kinds.—Some corporations issue what they term "treasury stock."¹¹ In England the Companies Clauses Act pro-

Co., 63 Pa. St. 126; McDougal v. Jersey, etc., Co., 2 Hen. & M. (Va.) 528; Salisbury v. Metropolitan R. Co., 38 L. J., Ch. N. S. 249; In re National Funds Assur. Co., 10 Ch. Div. 118.

In Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Allegheny Co., 63 Pa. St. 126, it is held that the payment of interest on stock before earnings are made is within the inhibition of a charter against the payment of dividends out of capital.

1. In re National Funds Assur. Co., 10 Ch. Div. 118.

2. Mass. Pub. Stats., ch. 106, §§ 42, 61.

3. Allen, J., in American Tube Works v. Boston Machine Co., 139 Mass. 9.

4. Williams v. Parker, 136 Mass. 204; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 566; Allen v. Herrick, 15 Gray (Mass.) 274.

5. Mass. Pub. Stats., 1870, ch. 224, § 25.

6. American Tube Works v. Boston Machine Co., 139 Mass. 5, citing Peo- ple's Mut. Ins. Co. v. Westcott, 14 Gray (Mass.) 440; Wiggin v. Freewill Baptist Church, 8 Met. (Mass.) 310; In re Bridport Old Brewery Co., L. R., 2 Ch. 191.

7. American Tube Works v. Boston Machine Co., 139 Mass. 5, citing Morrison v. Lawrence, 98 Mass. 219; Andrews v. Boylston, 110 Mass. 214; Judd v. Thompson, 125 Mass. 553.

8. American Tube Works v. Boston Machine Co., 139 Mass. 5.

9. American Tube Works v. Boston Machine Co., 139 Mass. 5; Reed v. Boston Machine Co., 141 Mass. 454; 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 153.

10. Reed v. Boston Machine Co., 141 Mass. 454; 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 153.

11. Stock transferred to the company itself, before the whole of its capital stock has been issued, and sold under the name of "treasury stock," at prices greatly below par, must, though purvides for the creation of "debenture stock," which is a charge on the net earnings and profits of the corporation.¹ The phrase "deferred stock," which appears often to be used as a synonym for common stock, is applied to that variety whose holders are entitled to no dividends until some other class of stockholders is paid.² Overissued or spurious stock is that issued in excess of the authorized capital, and, therefore, void,³ while watered or fictitious stock is that which has been issued as fully paid up, when in fact it is not.⁴

III. Issue⁵—1. General Considerations.—The issue of stock, while one of the most important of corporate functions, is not an essential one.⁶ The right to issue is a franchise held in trust for the stockholders, and must generally be exercised for the benefit of all.⁷ But where the allotment of shares is discretionary with commissioners, they may apportion to some and exclude others.⁸ It seems that a corporation has implied authority to reissue shares of its own stock which have been accepted in payment of or as security for debts due it,⁹ and such a reissue is not a creation of new stock within the meaning of charter clauses relating to original subscriptions.¹⁰ Where a certificate is issued to a porting to be fully paid up, be deemed to be paid only to the extent of the actual price, the holders being liable for the balance. Alling v. Wenzel, 133 Ill. 264; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 133.

1. In Attree v. Hawe, 9 Ch. Div. 337, James, L. J., thus discusses and construes the statutory provision: "The company may, from time to time, raise money by the creation and issue, at such times, on such terms, subject to such conditions, and with such rights and privileges as the company thinks fit, of stock, and may attach to the stock so created such fixed and perpetual preferential interest as it may think fit, not exceeding the prescribed limit. By the 23d section it is directed that the debenture stock, with the interest thereon, shall be a charge on the undertaking prior to all shares and stock of the company, and shall be transmissible and transferable like other stock of the company, and shall in all other respects have the incidents of personal estates. By the 24th section it is provided that the interest on debenture stock shall have priority of payment over all dividends or interest on any shares or stock of the company, ordinary, preference or guaranteed. So far, it is clear that the stock is of the same nature as other stock of the company, only with the important difference that it ranks in payment over all other stock, and that all arrears must be paid before a farthing is to reach the proprietors of other stock. It is nothing but preference stock with a special preference. There is nothing to give to the stockholders any right, either at law or in equity, under any circumstances, to take possession of a single item of the property of the company in specie, whether real or chattel."

2. Cook, Stock and Stockholders, §9.

3. See infra, this title, Issue—Overissue; Irregular Issue; and there note the distinction between an over-issue and an irregular increase.

4. See infra, this title, Issue of Watered Stock.

5. See supra, this title, Certificates of Stock; Preferred Stock.

6. Subscription and payment are sufficient for the validity of corporate organization or the transfer of stock. State v. Butler, 86 Tenn. 614; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 289; Cecil Nat. Bank v. Watontown Bank, 105 U. S. 217.

7. Reese v. Bank of Montgomery, 31 Pa. St. 78; 72 Am. Dec. 726.

8. Walker v. Devereaux, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 229.

9. Williams v. Savage Mfg. Co., 3 Md. Ch. 418.

10. City Bank v. Bruce, 17 N. Y. 507.

legatee under a will giving the administrator absolute power to assign the property, the corporation is not liable for failing to indicate the trust limitation upon the legatee's title.¹

2. Methods.—There are two general methods of issuing stock; first, in pursuance of the contract of subscription,² and, second, by stock dividend.³

3. Irregular Issue.—It is said that the power to issue stock is not to be extended by implication.⁴ Accordingly the absence of signatures of directors, when required, has been held to invalidate the issue of certificates,⁵ and the same ruling has been made of an allotment effected at a meeting of which not all the directors were notified.⁶ But the validity of the issue is not affected by failure to complete the enterprise and pay for the stock,⁷ nor by the existence of vacancies in the board of directors.⁸ Stock cannot be issued after the purpose for which it was authorized has ceased to be attainable.⁹ A wrong apportionment of shares cannot be corrected by issuing more than the fixed number,¹⁰ nor is such apportionment void,¹¹ but a subscriber who receives more than his proportion holds the excess in trust for the others whose allotment is deficient.¹² Stock issued in violation of the charter is void,¹³ but where the power to effect the issue exists, those who have acquiesced therein cannot raise the objection of irregularity in the proceedings and thus prejudice the rights of creditors.¹⁴ Moreover, an issue originally unauthorized may be rendered valid by a subsequent resolution¹⁵ of the stockholders or by their acquiescence,¹⁶ and a purchaser may waive irregularities in the issue by dealing with his vendor as the actual owner of the shares.¹⁷ A fraudulent issue of shares will be set aside in equity.¹⁸

4. Overissue or Ultra Vires Issue¹⁹—(See also OFFICERS, vol. 17, p. 3; STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23).—Stock sought to be created

1. Smith v. Nashville, etc., R. Co. (Tenn. 1892), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 278.

2. See STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23; SUBSCRIPTION.

3. See DIVIDENDS, vol. 5, p. 738.

4. Covington, etc., Bridge Co. v. Sargent, 1 Cin. Super. Ct. (Ohio) 354.

5. Holbrook v. Fauguier, etc., Turnpike Co., 3 Cranch (C. C.) 425. Compare Hill v. Jewett Pub. Co., 154 Mass. 172.

6. In re Portugese Copper Consolidated Min. Co. 42 Ch. Div. 160.

7. Savage v. Ball, 17 N. J. Eq. 142.

8. In re Scottish Petroleum Co., 23 Ch. Div. 413; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 193.

9. Richmond's Case, 4 K. & J. 305.

10. Smith v. North American Min. Co., 1 Nev. 423.

11. Walker v. Devereaux, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 229.

12. Walker v. Devereaux, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 229.

13. People v. Sterling, etc., Mfg. Co., 82 Ill. 457. See also infra, this title, Overissue or Ultra Vires Issue.

14. Handley v. Stutz, 139 U. S. 417; 34 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 624; Stutz v. Handley, 41 Fed. Rep. 531; Chubb v. Upton, 95 U. S. 667; Veeder v. Mudgett, 95 N. Y. 295; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 485.

15. Sewell's Case, L. R., 3 Ch. 131.

16. Richmond's Case, 4 K. & J. 305; Ex parte Barclay, 1 Jur. N. S. 1045.

17. Reed v. Hayt, 109 N. Y. 659; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 295.

18. Bailey v. Champlain Min., etc., Co., 77 Wis. 453.

19. Apropos of the term "over-issue", Judge Seymour D. Thompson has the following to say, in an article on "Fraudulent Overissues of Corporate Shares," in 36 Cent. Law Jour-in excess of the legalized capital is void, even in the hands of bona fide holders;¹ and the subscription therefor cannot be collected by the corporation, or by an assignee thereof, occupying the place of the corporation.² Holders of such unauthorized stock are not estopped to set up its invalidity as a defense to an action in the interest of creditors brought against them, to recover the balance unpaid thereon, by the fact that they attended the meeting at which it was voted to issue the same, or that they received and held certificates therefor, or that the officers and agents of the company represented its capital to be equal to the amount of both its authorized and unauthorized stock.³ Such unauthorized issue may afterwards be rendered valid by a duly authorized increase.⁴ But while the holder of overissued shares can realize nothing thereon he has a remedy against the corporation in damages,⁵ the measure of which has been diversely nal, p. 52: "It should be observed, at the outset, that notwithstanding the caption which the writer has placed at the head of this article there can, in strictness, be no such thing as a fraudulent overissue of shares. The reason is that there can be no overissue of shares at all. The capital of every stock corporation is fixed either by its charter or by its articles of incorporation, which, under the general statute permitting its organization, take the place of a charter granted by special act of the legislature. Now, if all the shares thus fixed have been issued, the power of the company in a primary sense (unless it increases its capital in the mode permitted by its charter or governing statute), and the power of its officers in a secondary sense, to issue any further shares, is exhausted; so that, if its officers thereafter assume to issue any further shares, they fail of their purpose by reason of mere want of power. The pretended shares so issued have been called ultra vires shares. There being no power to issue them, they are not shares at all, but are only the pretended similitude of shares. What then, is meant by the common expression, the fraudulent overissue of shares, is merely the fraudulent overissue of certificates purporting to represent shares."

1. Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143; Mechanics' Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 13 N. Y. 599; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30; Chicago City R. Co. v. Allerton, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 233; Stace's Case, L. R., 4 Ch. App. 682, note.

2. Clark v. Turner, 73 Ga. 1. See also Page v. Austin, 10 Can. Sup. Ct. 132.

But where a bill was filed against a corporation by the holder of shares overissued in violation of law, praying that their legality might be inquired into; that if they should be held to be illegal the plaintiff might be repaid the amount paid by him for the shares, and the corporation might be enjoined, pending the suit, from disposing of so much of its property as would indemnify the plaintiff, and that a receiver of that amount might be appointed; it appearing that the money received by the corporation had not been kept separate from its general funds, and could not be traced and identified, it was held that the injunction could not be granted nor the receiver be appointed. Whelpley v. Erie, etc., Co., 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 271.

So where the consideration for a promissory note was expressed in the note to be the stock of a railway corporation, and the directors of the corporation subsequently made an illegal and unauthorized increase in the stock of the company, which was not distinguishable from the valid stock, it was held that such illegal increase would constitute a defense to an action upon the note. Merrill v. Gamble, 46 Iowa 646; Merrill v. Beaver, 50 Iowa 404.

3. Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143.

4. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30; Sewell's Case, 3 Ch. App. 131. But see Fisk v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 513; O'Brien v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 568.

5. Allen v. South Boston R. Co., 150 Mass. 207; 15 Am. St. Rep. 185; Tome v. Parkersburg, etc., R. Co., 39 Md. 36.

viewed as the market value of the stock at the time of demanding transfer,¹ or as the price paid therefor with interest.²

A transferee of overissued shares cannot assert against the corporation rights which he could not assert in the case of genuine stock because of his indebtedness to the corporation and a consequent lien on his stock.³

The officers of a corporation also are personally liable not only to the immediate purchasers from them of spurious stock falsely and fraudulently certified by them, but to any subsequent purchaser buying upon the faith of the false certificate and sustaining damage thereby.⁴ And the injured party may recover from 17 Am. Rep. 540; Western, etc., R. Co. v. Franklin Bank, 60 Md. 36; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30; Bruff v. Mali, 36 N. Y. 206; Titus v. Great Western Turnpike Co., 61 N. Y. 237; Kisterbock's Appeal, 127 Pa. St. 601; Bank of Kentucky v. Schuylkill Bank, Par. Eq. Cas. (Pa.) 180; Willis v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 6 W. N. C. (Pa.) 461; Willis v. Fry, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 33; People's Bank v. Kurtz, 99 Pa. St. 344; 44 Am. Rep. 112; Cartwright v. Dickinson, 88 Tenn. 476; 17 Am. St. Rep. 910.

Where a corporation permits its agent to sell stock covered by certificates, where there is stock standing to their credit sufficient to cover such certificates, it is bound to make them good to the extent of any shares owned by the corporation within the limit of its capital stock, and such unsold shares should be applied to the oldest outstanding certificate of that character. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 534.

1. People's Bank v. Kurtz, 99 Pa. St. 344; 44 Am. Rep. 112; Willis v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 6 W. N. C. (Pa.) 461.

In Allen v. South Boston R. Co., 150 Mass. 207; 15 Am. St. Rep. 185, the court says: "The defendant cannot be compelled to issue new certificates, or to recognize the old ones as valid, because to do so would cause an over-issue of its capital stock, but it is liable in damages. In assessing damages, the superior court has taken the value of the stock to be its market value at the time when the defendant first refused to recognize the stock as valid, and to permit a transfer of it. This would be the rule of damages if the certificates were valid. Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90; 19 Am. Dec. 306; Wyman v. Ameri- can Powder Co., 8 Cush. (Mass.) 168. We think that the same rule of damages applies to these certificates. In re Railroad Co., L. R., 3 Q. B. 584."

2. Tome v. Parkersburg, etc., R. Co., 39 Md. 36; 17 Am. Rep. 540.

3. Mt. Holly Paper Co's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 513; Sharswood, C. J., there observes: "It is said, however, that these certificates, fraudulently issued, were null and void. They evidenced no stock. It is asked, triumphantly, How can there be a lien on that which had no existence? The argument is certainly ingenious, but it rests upon a misapprehension of the rights of the appellants. Their claim on the company was not, indeed, on the stock. It was a claim to be indemnified for the fraudulent acts of the officers of the company, from which they allege that they have suffered damage. They might have demanded a transfer, and upon refusal might have brought an action for damages. The defense to such an action could have been Morton's indebtedness. If, instead of taking that course, they had sued for damages for the fraudulent act, they could still have been met by the same plea. If you had been in possession of valid certificates, you could not have recovered for a refusal to allow you a transfer; how, then, can you recover on these false and fraudulent certificates? This would clearly be inequitable; and this proceeding is in a court of equity."

4. Shotwell v. Mali, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 445; Cazeaux v. Mali, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 578; Seizer v. Mali, 41 N. Y. 619; aff'g 6 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 270, note, and reversing 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 76; 11 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 129; Bruff v. Mali, 36 N. Y. 200; Fairbanks v. Humphreys, 182 B. D. 54. See also National Exchange Bank v. Sibley, 71 Ga. 726.

the officers in an action against them, either jointly with the corporation, or separately.¹ The holder of overissued stock has no right of action if he receives it from an officer who is in fact his agent,² or if the certificates are signed by less than the required number of officers.³ But incapacity to create the spurious stock would be no defense to an action.⁴ Spurious certificates form a cloud upon the title of genuine stockholders which equity will remove.⁵ The transfer of illegally issued stock will be enjoined,⁶ and the corporation⁷ or a stockholder⁸ may sue for its cancellation. There is no recourse against the bona fide vendor of over-issued stock.⁹

5. Issue of Watered Stock.¹⁰—The issue of shares fictitiously paid up has often been condemned by the courts,¹¹ and declared to be ultra vires.¹² Constitutional and statutory provisions in many of the states prohibit such an issue of stock, and this prohibition is designed to protect the public as well as the stockholders.¹³ According to some of the authorities the stock so

1. Shotwell v. Mali, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 445; Bruff v. Mali, 36 N. Y. 200; National Exchange Bank v. Sibley, 71 Ga. 726.

2. Wright's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 425.

3. Holbrook v. Fauquier, etc., Turnpike Co., 3 Cranch (C. C.) 425. Compare Granger's L. Ins., etc., Co. v. Kamper, 73 Ala. 341; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 497; Hill v. Jewett Pub. Co., 154 Mass. 172, and cases cited.

4. New York, etc., Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30.

5. New York, etc., Co. v. Schuyler, 17 N. Y. 592; Ticknor v. Kenniston, 41 N. H. 271.

6. Sherman v. Clark, 4 Nev. 138; 97 Am. Dec. 516; Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 159.

7. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 17 N. Y. 592. Compare Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. McFarland, 31 N. J. Eq. 730.

8. Wood v. Union, etc., B'ld'g Assoc., 63 Wis. 9.

9. People's Bank v. Kurtz, 99 Pa. St. 334; 44 Am. Rep. 112; State v. North Louisiana, etc., R. Co., 34 La. Ann. 947.

10. The subject of watered stock, in view of its interest and importance, will receive separate and independent treatment in a separate article, viz., WATERED STOCK.

11. "It is not claimed, and could not be claimed, that the corporation or its directors could create any valid stock by issuing the same without any consideration. The directors, assuming to issue stock in that way, would perpetrate a wrong upon the corporation and its stockholders, and a fraud upon every person who took such stock as full-paid stock, relying upon the appearances and deceived thereby." Earl, J., in Barnes v. Brown, 80 N. Y. 534; citing Mechanics' Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 13 N. Y. 599; Bruff v. Mali, 36 N. Y. 200; Morgan v. Skiddy, 62 N. Y. 319; Shotwell v. Mali, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 445. See also Oliphant v. Woodburn Coal, etc., Co., 63 Ia. 338, where the court quotes with approval the following from Green's Brice's Ultra Vires: "The sale of stock in a corporation by the directors, at a less rate than the price fixed in the charter, is a fraud upon the law and the stockholders;" citing Sturges v. Stetson, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 246; Fosdick v. Sturges, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 255; Mann v. Cooke, 20 Conn. 188; Fisk v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 513; O'Brien v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 568; Neuse River Nav. Co. v. Newbern, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 275; Osgood v. King, 42 Iowa 478. Compare Tobey v. Robinson, 99 Ill. 228; Ex parte Daniell, 1 De G. & J. 372.

12. "It is not a question of good faith, or of honest intention, or of wise policy, or skillful or discreet management on the part of the directors." Fisk v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 513. See also Ex parte Daniell, 1 De G. & J. 372; Bunn's Case, 2 De G., F. & J. 275; West Cornwall R. Co. v. Mowatt, 12 Jur. 407.

13. Fitzpatrick v. Dispatch Pub. Co., 83 Ala. 604; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas.

issued is void,¹ while others regard it as voidable at most,² and not necessarily fraudulent.³ An agreement to issue shares for a grossly disproportionate price is fraudulent and void,⁴ and a purchaser thereof may rescind and recover the amount paid.⁵ Fraud is established by proving that the stock was issued with knowledge that it exceeded in value the consideration,⁶ but the latter is presumed to be adequate,⁷ and a mere difference of opinion as to the value of property accepted in exchange for shares will not render their issue fraudulent.⁸ It is even held that a corporation is estopped to set up the invalidity of watered stock issued by its directors, though prohibited by the state constitution.⁹

6. Issue of Stock by Corporate Officers to Themselves.—Where officers of a corporation have general authority to issue stock under certain prescribed formalities, they may issue it to themselves in the same manner as to others.¹⁰ Moreover, a transaction by which an officer reissues to himself, at par, shares previously issued to another, but reconveyed to the corporation, and standing at a premium, is at most only voidable, and if the stockholders have acquiesced therein, the company cannot compel a surrender of the certificate.¹¹ But where an officer, who completely controls the board of directors, procures the issue of stock to himself, under pretense of paying a claim, the transaction will be closely scrutinized by the court and set aside upon a showing

423; Williams v. Evans, 87 Ala. 725; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 109; Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Dow, 120 U. S. 287; Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Thompson, 103 Ill. 187; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 101.

1. Sturges v. Stetson, 1 Bliss. (U. S.) 246; Congress Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49; 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 364; Knowlton v. Congress, etc., Spring Co., 57 N. Y. 518.

2. Fosdick v. Sturges, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 255; Flinn v. Bagley, 7 Fed. Rep. 785. Compare Gilman, etc., R. Co. v. Kelly, 77 Ill. 426; Campbell v. Morgan, 4 Ill. App. 100.

3. Brant v. Ehlen, 59 Md. 1; New Haven Horseshoe Nail Co. v. Linden Spring Co., 142 Mass. 349; 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71; Douglass v. Ireland, 73 N. Y. 100; Schenck v. Andrews, 57 N. Y. 133; Boynton v. Andrews, 63 N. Y. 93; Lake Superior Iron Co. v. Drexel, 90 N. Y. 87.

4. State v. Timken, 48 N. J. L. 87; 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 34.

5. Fosdick v. Sturges, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 255.

6. Douglass v. Ireland, 73 N. Y. 100.

7. Davis v. Montgomery Furnace, etc., Co. (Ala. 1890), 8 So. Rep. 496.

8. Medler v. Albuquerque Hotel, etc., Co. (N. Mex. 1892), 28 Pac. Rep. 551.

9. Gasquet v. Crescent City Brewing Co., 49 Fed. Rep. 496.

10. Titus v. Great Western Turnpike Road, 61 N. Y. 237. Compare Hill v. Jewett Pub. Co., 154 Mass. 172.

11. St. Croix Lumber Co. v. Mittlestadt, 43 Minn. 91, where the court says: "As those who now complain, and for whose benefit, it is said, this action is prosecuted, acquiesced in these acts for quite a period of time, and, on more than one occasion during the lifetime of Mr. Torinus, after being advised of all that had been done, ratified and approved the same, they cannot now be allowed to assail and cancel the certificate issued to him. The transaction, at most, was voidable, and, if the corporation, or any of its shareholders, desired to repudiate and avoid it, the option so to do should have been exercised within a reasonable time after knowledge. It certainly cannot be done after an express and undisputed ratification;" citing Kelsey v. National Bank, 69 Pa. St. 426; Mt. Washington Hotel Co. v. Marsh, 63 N. H. 230; Fleckner v. Bank of U. S., 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 338; Omaha Hotel Co. v. Wade, 97 U. S. 13; Indianapolis Rolling Mill Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 120 U. S. 256.

of unfairness.¹ So, an issue by corporate officers to themselves, immediately after the sale of valuable property and before the declaration of a dividend therefrom, of stock previously unissued, is a breach of duty and will be enjoined.² The issue of fictitiously paid-up stock by directors to themselves is especially condemned by the courts.³ Thus, transactions by which stock is issued to a director for land, at a gross overvaluation,⁴ or to an officer who does not pay the full price therefor,⁵ or in payment of unaudited accounts for labor performed under contract with the president, who sought to place the shares where they would be held for his benefit,⁶ are fraudulent. The acceptance by directors of a worthless consideration for stock issued to one of their number charges them with its full value.⁷ An officer who is active in effecting an issue of stock to which he subscribes, cannot afterward recover back the amount paid by him on the ground that the issue was ultra vires;⁸ but a corporation is not estopped to impeach the validity of an unauthorized issue of shares to himself by its president⁹ or secretary.¹⁰

1. Perry v. Tuscaloosa Cotton Seed Oil Mill Co., 93 Ala. 364; 33 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 346.

2. In Arkansas Valley Agricultural Soc. v. Eichholtz, 45 Kan. 164; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 79, Green, Commissioner, observes: "The principle of public policy forbids transactions of this kind. It appears from the evidence that the property owned by this corporation had been sold, and the proceeds held by its officers. The assets at the time of the sale belonged to the then stockholders, and the officers and stockholders had no right to subscribe for the remaining stock at par, and enrich themselves to the detriment and loss of the other shareholders. The directors cannot lawfully benefit or favor any particular shareholder or class of shareholders. Every authority possessed by them is a power and discretion in the directors, who are trustees for the benefit of all the shareholders alike, which is to be exercised for the benefit of all of them; 1 Wat. Corp., p. 620; Harris v. North Devon R. Co., 20 Beav. 384. The effort on the part of the officers and directors of a society to obtain the unsubscribed stock at par, when they knew that each share of the stock already issued was worth eighteen times its face value, was clearly a fraud upon the rights of the other stockholders, and a flagrant violation of their duties as directors and officers of such association. The officers and directors of a corporation are trustees of the stockholders, and in securing to themselves an advantage not common to all of the stockholders they commit a plain breach of duty. Kochler v. Black River Falls Iron Co., 2 Black (U. S.) 715; Shorb v. Beaudry, 56 Cal. 446; 1 Mor. Priv. Corp., § 518. The law does not permit the directors to manage the affairs of a corporation for their personal and private advantage, and this rule, we think, applies to the disposition of unsubscribed stock, as well as to other contracts. The character and relation of directors and officers of a corporation require of them the highest and most scrupulous good faith in their transactions for the corporation and the stockholders. Hale v. Republican River Bridge Co., 8 Kan. 466; Ryan v. Leavenworth, etc., R. Co., 21 Kan. 365; Hentig v. Sweet, 33 Kan. 244; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 326."

3. Osgood v. King, 42 Iowa 483.

4. Tutwiler v. Tuscaloosa Coal, etc., Co., 89 Ala. 391; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 445.

5. Huiskamp v. West, 47 Fed. Rep. 236.

6. Perry v. Tuscaloosa Cotton Seed Oil Mill Co., 93 Ala. 364; 33 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 346.

7. Van Cott v. Van Brunt, 2 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 283; Ottawa, etc., R. Co. v. Black, 79 Ill. 262.

8. Banigan v. Bard, 134 U. S. 291; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 327.

9. Hill v. Jewett Pub. Co., 154 Mass. 172.

10. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Citi-

IV. INCREASE OF STOCK—1. Authority and Validity—a. MUST BE EXPRESSLY AUTHORIZED.—Neither the increase nor the reduction of the capital stock of the corporation can be effected without express charter authority.¹ Not even the unanimous consent of the members and officers of the corporation can legalize an increase when not so authorized.² Nor can the authority to increase be implied from the fact that the power to reduce capital stock has been conferred.³

b*. POWER OF THE LEGISLATURE.—Since the effect of material legislative changes in a corporate charter is to release sub-zen's Nat. Bank, 24 Ohio L. J. (Cin. Super. Ct.) 198.

1. No Implied Authority.—Granger's L., etc., Ins. Co. v. Kamper, 73 Ala. 325; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 497; Crandall v. Lincoln, 52 Conn. 99; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 149; 52 Am. Rep. 560; Ferris v. Ludlow, 7 Ind. 517; Percy v. Millaudon, 3 La. 569; Oldtown, etc., R. Co. v. Veazie, 39 Me. 571; Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 23; Mutual L. Ins., etc., Co. v. McKelway, 12 N. J. Eq. 133; Mechanics' Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 14 N. Y. 599; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30; Lathrop v. Kneeland, 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 432; Sutherland v. Olcott, 95 N. Y. 100; Chicago City R. Co. v. Allerton, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 235; Knowlton v. Congress, etc., Spring Co., 14 Blatchf. (U. S.) 364; Congress, etc., Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49; Seignouret v. Home Ins. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 332; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 131; Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 148; Droitwich Patent Salt Co. v. Curzon, L. R., 3 Exch. 35; In re Financial Corporation, L. R., 2 Ch. 714; In re Ebbw Vale Steel, etc., Co., 4 Ch. Div. 827; Society v. Abbott, 2 Beav. 559; Smith v. Goldsworthy, 4 Q. B. 430; 45 E. C. L. 428. Compare Eidman v. Bowman, 58 Ill. 444; 11 Am. Rep. 90; Gill v. Balis, 72 Mo. 424; Howell v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 378. Where the act of incorporation merely provides a limitation, and the full amount is not at first issued, an increase within the limit may be effected without further authority. Gray v. Portland Bank, 3 Mass. 364; 3 Am. Dec. 155.

In Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 35, Shaw, C. J., says: "Every subscriber has a right to calculate upon a fund computed to be commensurate with the object, and that each of five thousand shares should be liable, like his own, to a tax of one hundred dollars, in order to produce that effect. A power in the corporation to reduce the shares to one thousand, without the power of taxing them beyond one hundred dollars, would be a power to expend one hundred thousand dollars and no more, upon a project, which, to be profitable or even useful, would require five times that amount."

In Finley Shoe, etc., Co. v. Kurtz, 34 Mich. 89, one of the officers of the corporation made an agreement with the defendant in error that the latter should receive shares of stock as remuneration for certain services which he had rendered to the company. The corporation itself took no steps to increase the capital, and as no individual stockholder offered to assign shares sufficient to redeem the promise, suit was brought to compel an issue of the stock, but it was held that it was not within the implied power of any corporate officer to obligate the corporation to an increase of its capital stock.

Under the English company's act, a resolution providing for the reduction of the capital stock is invalid, unless the regulations of the company have been so ordered as to specifically authorize the reduction. In re Patent Invert Sugar Co., 31 Ch. Div. 166.

2. People v. Parker Vein Coal Co., 10 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 543.

3. Sutherland v. Olcott, 95 N. Y. 93; Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Chandler, 13 Met. (Mass.) 314. In the latter case it was provided that the number of shares should "be determined from time to time by the board of directors." and Shaw, C. J., held that "these words authorize an enlargement, but could not authorize a reduction of the number."

scribers,¹ it would seem to follow that statutes providing for an increase or reduction of capital stock cannot be effectual, where the power cannot be inferred from the language of the charter, and where there is no reservation of legislative power;² but where the power of modifying or repealing charters is reserved by the legislature, or by the state constitution to the legislature, legislative amendments authorizing an increase or reduction may be valid and binding, even though the original charter was silent in regard thereto.³ So, the necessary legislative power existing, the consent of the directors to its exercise may be sufficient,⁴ or the consent of the stockholders;⁵ and such consent may be implied from acquiescence.⁶

2. Who May Direct Increase.—Until vested with the power, directors alone cannot effect an increase of the capital stock;⁷ but while that function is the prerogative of the stockholders, their consent to its exercise by the board of directors may be shown by acquiescence in the acts of the latter.⁸ Courts have no power to

1. See STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23; Charter Changes.

2 Changes in the purpose and object of an association, or in the extent of its constituencies or membership, involving the amount of its capital stock, are necessarily fundamental in their character, and cannot on general principles be made without the express or implied consent of the members. Chicago City R. Co. v. Allerton, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 236. Compare Oldtown, etc., R. Co. v. Veazie, 39 Me. 571; Hughes v. Antietam Mfg. Co., 34 Md. 316.

But an issue of increased stock, without having the articles amended to permit it, does not invalidate the original issue, and purchasers of the increased stock, believing that it was the entire amount, cannot maintain a bill to cancel the original. Byers v. Rollins, 13 Colo. 22.

A corporation cannot compel one of its members to submit to the retirement of his stock, nor does he waive the right to object to such proceeding by voluntarily consenting to the sale and retirement of a portion of his shares. Bergman v. St. Paul Mut., etc., Assoc., 29 Minn. 275.

3. Joslyn v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., 12 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 329; Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Elting, 17 Ill. 429.

4. Illinois River R. Co. v. Zimmer, 20 Ill. 654.

5. Chicago City R. Co. v. Allerton, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 235.

6. Chicago City R. Co. v. Allerton, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 235.

7. Who May Direct Increase.—Chicago City R. Co. v. Allerton, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 233; Finley Shoe, etc., Co. v. Kurtz, 34 Mich. 89; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 534; affirmed, 34 N. Y. 30; In re Wheeler, 2 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 361; People v. Parker Vein Coal Co., 10 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 543. In Eidman v. Bowman, 58 Ill. 444; 11 Am. Rep. 90, Walker, J., says: "It would be a dangerous power to intrust to directors to increase the stock of the company at pleasure, and to sell it to whom they might choose. Such a power would be liable to great abuse; it would enable directors to perpetuate their positions almost indefinitely on a reserved capital stock of $400,000; it would enable them, at pleasure, to depress the price of the stock in market; it would deprive the original shareholders of their just and legal right to dividends, if the new stock were issued to persons not already members of the corporation. Other injustice and wrong could be perpetrated, if this should be held to be an incidental power to be exercised by a board of directors of a corporation. The power is such that we will not infer its existence in a charter, unless clearly expressed; and the chapter in this case contains no such language."

8. Chicago City R. Co. v. Allerton, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 233; Payson v. Stoeve, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 428; Payson v. Withers, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 269; Lane's Case, 1 De G. J. & S. 504; Sewell's Case, L. R., 3 Ch. 131.

direct an increase,¹ but where an innocent purchaser would otherwise be deprived of his insignia of membership, and the remedy in damages would be inadequate, the corporation may be compelled to issue certificates to such party, in addition to those already inadvertently granted to another for the same stock.²

3. Methods and Procedure—a. IN GENERAL.—A vote of the stockholders at a meeting called for that purpose is the normal method of increasing the capital stock,³ but a formal vote at such meeting is not indispensable,⁴ nor does a vote per se constitute an increase.⁵ The proceeding has been held to be vitiated by a failure to give notice of the meeting in the precise form required by

In Bailey v. Champlain Min., etc., Co., 77 Wis. 453, a mine owner entered into an agreement with certain parties to organize a corporation, to the capital of which the former was to contribute his mines and receive half of the stock issued, while the latter were to furnish $20,000 and receive the remaining half of the stock. Through an oversight the articles of incorporation fixed the full capital stock at $20,000 instead of $40,000, as was intended. A resolution was subsequently passed increasing the capital stock to $40,000, and the court held that the fact that such resolution was adopted at a meeting of the directors instead of the stockholders, even if an irregularity, was cured by the assent and acquiescence of the stockholders. Citing Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143; Poole v. West Point Butter, etc., Assoc., 30 Fed. Rep. 513.

1. "When a corporation has issued certificates of stock (which are valid and not void) to the full extent of all the shares which by law and the constitution of the company it may issue, no court can order the issuance of other shares, because in that respect the powers of the corporation have been exhausted." Beatty, J., in Smith v. North American Min. Co., 1 Nev. 429; citing Mechanics Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 13 N. Y. 599. See also Baker v. Wasson, 59 Tex. 140; 53 Tex. 150.

2. An equitable action to compel a company to issue a new certificate of stock can be maintained where an adequate remedy at law for damages would not exist. Baker v. Wasson, 59 Tex. 140; citing Cushman v. Thayer Mfg. Jewelry Co., 76 N. Y. 368; 32 Am. Rep. 315. See also Pratt v. Machinists Nat. Bank, 123 Mass. 110; Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Richardson, 135 Mass. 473;

Machinists Nat. Bank v. Field, 126 Mass. 345.

An officer of a corporation cannot obligate it to increase its stock by promising to remunerate an employe by issuing shares in payment of services rendered by him. Finley Shoe, etc., Co. v. Kurtz, 34 Mich. 89.

3. Finley Shoe, etc., Co. v. Kurtz, 34 Mich. 89.

Where the power is vested in the company, to be exercised by the directors, their action is discretionary, and a resolution "that the capital stock of the ——— company be fixed and limited at ——— dollars, and that a certificate to that effect be properly prepared and sworn to and filed in the office of the county clerk, as required by the General Manufacturer's Law," will be sufficient as to them. Sutherland v. Olcott, 95 N. Y. 93.

4. Payson v. Stoeve, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 428. And see generally Chicago City R. Co. v. Allerton, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 233; Payson v. Withers, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 269; Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143; Poole v. West Point Butter, etc., Assoc., 30 Fed. Rep. 513; Lane's Case, 1 De G. J. & S. 504; Sewell's Case, L. R. 3 Ch. 131.

5. In Terry v. Eagle Lock Co., 47 Conn. 141, the resolution for the increase, though absolute in form, was understood to be contingent, and after the happening of the contingency a resolution to rescind the former action was adopted. The court said: "In such a case it cannot be said that the capital is actually increased until the new stock is subscribed for at least. Until then there is an element of uncertainty about it. It may never be taken. It is very clear that the vote to increase is not per se an increase. Nor is it such where the increase contemplated is from the surplus earnings."

statute,¹ and by a failure to announce the intended increase to the public.² But it is held that the validity of the increase is not affected by holding the meeting outside of the state,³ or failing to record the resolution providing for the increase.⁴ So the fact that the required time did not elapse between the passage of the resolution and its confirmation affects the stockholders inter se only, and does not relieve them from liability.⁵ Until the increased stock is actually issued, a resolution for its issue may be rescinded.⁶

1. In In re Wheeler, 2 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 361, the statute required that notice of the meeting to effect an increase should be signed by a majority of the directors, and also that none but stockholders could be directors. The number of directors was seven, and the notice was signed by four, but one of the signers was not a stockholder; and the court held that the notice was deficient and the subsequent vote to increase the stock illegal.

2. In State v. McGrath, 86 Mo. 239, the statute required the filing with the secretary of state of a statement showing inter alia the newspaper publication of the notice of a proposed increase of the stock. This requirement had not been complied with, but it was contended on the argument that the provision was intended simply to notify the stockholders and secure their attendance, and that, inasmuch as notice had actually been given to them, and their attendance and unanimous consent to the increase had been secured, any prior illegality was thereby cured. The court held that the statutory provision above mentioned was not intended simply for the benefit of the stockholders, but that it was designed to protect the public as against frauds resulting from stock-watering, etc., and that the non-observance of the requirement was fatal to the validity of the increase.

3. In Handley v. Stutz, 139 U. S. 417; 34 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 624, the case was one of a Kentucky corporation, and the statute of that state provided that "all elections for directors and other officers by private corporations . . . shall be held within the territorial limits of the State of Kentucky. . . . Any such election held outside of Kentucky shall be void." The meeting to effect the increase had been held at Nashville, Tenn., but the court held that the proceeding was nevertheless valid. Brown, J., said:

"Beyond the election of officers, however, there is no statutory restriction of corporate action to the limits of the state, and, in the absence of such inhibition, the proceedings of such meeting would, within the rule laid down by this court in Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Cowdrey, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 459, with regard to directors' meetings, be binding upon all those participating in it, as well as upon those acting upon the faith of its validity, or receiving stock authorized to be issued at such meeting. It is true there are cases holding that stockholders' meetings cannot be legally held outside of the home state of the corporation, but the question has generally arisen where a majority present at such meeting had attempted by their action to bind a dissenting minority, or had taken action prejudicial to the rights of third persons; Ormsby v. Vermont Copper Min. Co., 56 N. Y. 623; Hilles v. Parrish, 14 N. J. Eq. 380. Indeed, so far as we know, the authorities are uniform to the effect that the action taken at such meetings is binding upon those who participate in or take the benefit of them. Heath v. Silverthorn Lead Min., etc., Co., 39 Wis. 146. In this case the meeting was attended by all the stockholders but two, who were represented by proxy; the vote increasing the stock was unanimous, and it does not lie in the mouth of those who participated in this act or received the stock voted at this meeting to question its validity."

4. Handley v. Stutz, 139 U. S. 417; 34 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 624, where the court says: "The failure to enter this resolution at the time it was adopted did not affect its validity, as most corporate acts can be proved as well by parol as by written entries;" citing Moss v. Averell, 10 N. Y. 449.

5. In re Millers, etc., Lime Co., 31 Ch. Div. 211.

6. Terry v. Eagle Lock Co., 47 Conn. 141.

b. ISSUE OF SECURITIES CONVERTIBLE INTO SHARES.—Aside from the normal method of increasing capital, corporations are sometimes authorized to issue bonds or notes convertible into stock, and may exercise this authority even after the full amount of stock has been regularly issued.¹ So a corporation empowered to increase its stock may issue new shares in exchange for an equal amount of its indebtedness.² The option to exchange is terminated by a tender of the shares on the part of the company,³ and holders of notes convertible at a certain date are not entitled to exercise the option prior thereto because of an independent increase in the capital stock.⁴

c. ISSUE OF STOCK DIVIDENDS.—See DIVIDENDS, vol. 5, p. 744*a*.

4. Stockholders' Prior Right to the Increase.—See STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23—Right to Subscribe to New Stock.

5. Effect of Increase on Liability.—See STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23.

V. REDUCTION OF STOCK—1. Authority and Validity.—A corporation has no implied authority to reduce its capital stock.⁵ Even

1. Belmont v. Erie R. Co., 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 637, where the court, per Cardozo, J., said: "It is argued that this right can only be conferred when there is stock remaining unissued. The answer is, the statute has not said so. Nor has it said that the power, which is expressly granted to the 'directors,' not to the stockholders, shall be in any wise restricted or controlled by section 9, and it was very easy to have expressed it, if such had been the design, and I must assume that it would have been done, if such had been the intention, because there is nothing inconsistent in providing that the stockholders may increase the stock in a certain way, and that by the action of the directors an increase of stock may be worked in another way. The power to give the privilege of converting the bonds into stock is conferred in terms upon the directors, and no condition is imposed upon the right to give such option, except that the bonds shall have been issued for the purposes above mentioned." Ramsey v. Erie R. Co., 38 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 216; Jones v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 57 N. Y. 196; holding that owners of the securities are entitled to the stock and dividends thereon, though demand therefor is made immediately before a dividend is declared.

In Van Allen v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 7 Bosw. (N. Y.) 515, a transaction was held valid by which bonds were issued at fifty per cent. of their par value, convertible into stock upon the payment of the remaining portion.

2. Lohman v. New York, etc., R. Co., 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 39.

3. Van Allen v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 7 Bosw. (N. Y.) 515.

4. Pratt v. American Bell Teleph. Co., 141 Mass. 225; 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 110. In this case notes were issued by the corporation on October 20, 1882, containing the following provision: "The holder hereof may, on the 20th of April, 1884, or on the 20th of October, 1884, and at no other time, exchange this note, coupons not due being attached, for the stock of the company at par, that is, for one share." On March 27, 1883, the capital stock was increased, and existing stockholders were given the right to subscribe to their portion of the new shares, but it was held that the holders of the convertible notes were not entitled to share with the members of the corporation in the distribution of the increase.

5. Seignouret v. Home Ins. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 332; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 131. In this case it was held that as the constitution and laws of Louisiana provide for the increase of the capital stock, but are silent as to a decrease, the power to reduce the stock of a corporation was intentionally denied.

A clause in a deed of settlement providing that "For the better conduct where the power is expressly conferred, the directors cannot exercise it without the consent of the stockholders,¹ and all reductions must be fair and impartial as to the latter.² In some of the states and in England the power to reduce is regulated by statute,³ and management of the affairs of the company, it shall be lawful for a special general meeting, called for the purpose from time to time, to amend, alter, or annul, either wholly or in part, all or any of the clauses of the said deed, or of the existing regulations and provisions of the company," does not authorize a reduction of the capital stock. Smith v. Goldsworthy, 45 E. C. L. 428. And see generally cases cited in note 1, supra, this title, Increase of Stock. But the fact that, at the time when a class of preference shares was created, the articles of association did not authorize a reduction, will not prevent the company from reducing the number of such shares if a special resolution is first passed authorizing a reduction. In re Barrow, etc., Steel Co., 39 Ch. Div. 582.

1. Percy v. Millaudon, 3 La. 569; Gill v. Balis, 72 Mo. 424.

2. Bannatyne v. Direct Spanish Tel. Co., 34 Ch. Div. 287; 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 358; In re Direct Spanish Tel. Co., 34 Ch. Div. 307; 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 377.

A reduction which throws the whole burden upon the common stockholders to the exclusion of the preferred is unfair. In re Quebrada, R. etc., Co., 40 Ch. Div. 363; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 380.

A reduction of one-fourth on the ground that the capital to that extent had been lost is not unfair to preferred stockholders, if there is nothing in the company's bargain with them which prevents such reduction, though the articles confer no such power. In re Barrow, etc., Steel Co., 39 Ch. Div. 582.

Under the English Companies Acts of 1867 and 1877, it is not essential, though regular, that reduction should be uniform on all shares. In re Barrow, etc., Steel Co., 39 Ch. Div. 582.

3. In Strong v. Brooklyn Cross-Town R. Co., 93 N. Y. 426, 433; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 160, it was held that the object of the New York Act, 1878 (Ch. 264, Laws 1878), was to provide for an equalization of the capital stock with the value of the corporate assets, and that it was immaterial whether or not the capital had been paid in if the rights of third parties were not infringed.

Where stockholders in a national bank, acting under U. S. Rev. St. 1878, § 5143, effected a reduction of their capital stock, and at the same time voted to withdraw certain depreciated securities from the assets, and place them in the hands of trustees, it was held that such withdrawal could not be permitted, as the comptroller of the currency would be presumed to take into consideration any value which these collaterals might have in order to determine the degree of impairment which the capital had suffered. McCann v. First Nat. Bank (Ind. 1892), 30 N. E. Rep. 893.

The Railway Companies' Act of 1862 did not authorize a reduction of the capital stock or a decrease in the size of the shares. In re Financial Corp's Appeal, L. R., 2 Ch. App. 714. A company originally empowered to reduce its capital stock, and which afterwards registered under the act of 1862 was held to have lost that power. Droitwich Patent Salt Co. v. Curzon, L. R., 3 Exch. 35.

Under the English Companies Act of 1867, a reduction based on a shrinkage in value of the corporate property and for the purpose of making the capital stock equal thereto is not authorized. In re Ebbw Vale Steel, etc., Co., 4 Ch. Div. 832.

Portions of the capital used by a company in preliminary expenses cannot be treated as "lost capital or capital unrepresented by available assets," so as to authorize a reduction by the amount so expended as provided by section 3 of the Companies Act of 1877. In re Abstainers, etc., Ins. Co. (1891), 2 Ch. 124.

A reduction of the entire original capital may be sanctioned by the court aside from any reduction of the preference capital. In re Agricultural Hotel Co. (1891), 1 Ch. 396.

For an application of the English Companies Act of 1877, see In re Dido Peer Co. (1891), 2 Ch. 354.

Under the English Companies Acts of 1867 and 1877, a company has no and a strict compliance with the provisions thereof is commonly exacted.¹

2. Particular Methods—a. PURCHASE BY THE CORPORATION OF ITS OWN STOCK.—This may operate as a merger thereof, and a consequent reduction of the capital,² though the effect of such a transaction depends largely upon intent.³

b. REFUNDING, ETC.—Another method of reducing the capital stock is by refunding to each stockholder a certain proportion of his shares.⁴ But reduction cannot be effected by merely "writing off" a loss which the company has suffered.⁵

3. Distribution of Surplus After Reduction.—After the capital stock has been reduced, the surplus, if any, may be apportioned among the stockholders,⁶ and an action will lie on the part of the latter to compel the apportionment.⁷ But such a disposition of the surplus is subject to the claims of those who were creditors before the reduction.⁸

4. Effect of Reduction Upon Liability.—See STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23.

VI. ATTACHMENT AND EXECUTION.—(See also FOREIGN ATTACHMENT, vol. 8, p. 310.)

power to reduce a portion only of its shares. In re Union Plate Glass Co., 42 Ch. Div. 513. Contra, In re Gatling Gun, 43 Ch. Div. 628.

A corporation cannot cover up losses by reducing its stock. In re Ebbw Vale Steel, etc., Co., 4 Ch. Div. 827. Where the entire capital stock consists of land, a sale of a surplus portion thereof will be enjoined under the English Companies Act as a reduction of the stock. Holmes v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne, etc., Co., 1 Ch. Div. 682.

Evidence of the loss of capital held to be insufficient, reduction illegal, and stockholders receiving reduced shares still liable. In re New Chili Gold Min. Co., 38 Ch. Div. 475; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 372.

1. Granger's L., etc., Ins. Co. v. Kamper, 73 Ala. 325; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 497; Ferris v. Ludlow, 7 Ind. 517; Moses v. Ocoee Bank, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 398.

A statute providing for reduction does not necessarily authorize a purchase by the corporation of the shares of individual stockholders. Each stockholder should be allowed to surrender his due proportion. Currier v. Lebanon Slate Co., 56 N. H. 262.

Under a statute prohibiting loans to stockholders, and the issue of stock except for money and services actually received, a corporation cannot reduce its capital stock one-half and at the same time issue bonds for trust deeds to pay stockholders the amount of the surplus. Coquard v. St. Louis Cotton Press Co. (Mo.), 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 377.

2. Williams v. Savage Mfg. Co., 3 Md. Ch. 418; State v. Smith, 48 Vt. 266. See also infra, this title, Sales—Corporation as Purchaser of Its Own Stock.

3. State v. Smith, 48 Vt. 266; City Bank v. Bruce, 17 N. Y. 507; American, etc., Co. v. Haven, 101 Mass. 402; 3 Am. Rep. 377.

4. Currier v. Lebanon Slate Co., 56 N. H. 262.

5. In re Ebbw Vale Steel, etc., Co., 4 Ch. Div. 832.

6. Strong v. Brooklyn Cross-Town R. Co., 93 N. Y. 426; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 160; Seely v. New York Nat. Exch. Bank, 8 Daly (N. Y.) 400.

7. Seely v. New York Nat. Exch. Bank, 8 Daly (N. Y.) 400.

But where the stock of a national bank has been lawfully reduced because of the impairment of the capital, by reason of matured and suspended claims, the fact that the latter were subsequently realized upon and carried into the assets, will not entitle a stockholder to compel a distribution of the funds so realized in proportion to the stock surrendered by him. McCann v. First Nat. Bank, 112 Ind. 354; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 365.

8. See STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23; Liability—Effect of Reduction.

1. Authority and Validity.—At common law shares of stock are not subject either to attachment or execution.¹ Statutes authorizing these remedies have been enacted in most of the states, but the courts do not appear to be agreed as to what language will be sufficient to provide for them. On the one hand, it has been held that acts providing for the attachment of "estate"² and "rights and credits"³ would include shares of stock; on the other hand, the latter have been held not to be included under the phrases "real and personal property"⁴ and "estate both real and personal."⁵ Stock in a corporation organized for "sporting purposes" is not subject to execution, though the statute authorizes that proceeding as to shares in "any joint stock company."⁶ So, it is held that seizure of shares by a tax collector is not authorized, though by statute they are subject to attachment and execution.⁷ In Vermont, attachment proceedings have been sustained by virtue merely of the lien of the corporation on stock,⁸ and the tendency of the courts seems to be to hold stock subject to these remedies if possible.⁹

2. Locus and Venue.—The situs of stock, for the purposes of attachment and execution, is the domicil of the corporation and that place alone.¹⁰ Accordingly, the mere fact that the officers of a foreign corporation are within a state, even though engaged

1. Denny v. Hamilton, 16 Mass. 402; Ross v. Ross, 25 Ga. 297; Planters' etc., Bank v. Leavens, 4 Ala. 753; Williamson v. Smoot, 7 Martin (La.) 31; 12 Am. Dec. 494; Stewart v. Jones, 40 Mo. 140; Denton v. Livingston, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 96; 6 Am. Dec. 264; Anderson v. Nicholas, 28 N. Y. 600; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30; Plimpton v. Bigelow, 93 N. Y. 602; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 131; Coe v. Columbus, etc., R. Co., 10 Ohio St. 372; Blair v. Compton, 33 Mich. 414; Van Norman v. Circuit Judge, 45 Mich. 204; Goss, etc., Mfg. Co. v. People, 4 Ill. App. 510; Western Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Johnston, 59 Pa. St. 290; Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Brower, 38 Tex. 234; Voorhis v. Terhune, 50 N. J. L. 147; 9 Am. St. Rep. 781; First Nat. Bank v. Lanier, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 369; Gue v. Tide Water Canal Co., 24 How. (U. S.) 257; Cooper v. Canal Co., 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 195. Compare Haley v. Reid, 15 Ga. 437; Nashville Bank v. Ragsdale, 10 Peck (Tenn.) 296; Howe v. Starkweather, 17 Mass. 240; Foster v. Potter, 37 Mo. 525; Price v. Brady, 21 Tex. 614; Taylor v. Gillean, 23 Tex. 514; Barnes v. Hall, 55 Vt. 420; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 168.

2. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Paine, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 502.

3. Curtis v. Steever, 36 N. J. L. 304; Union Nat. Bank v. Byram, 131 Ill. 92.

4. Foster v. Potter, 37 Mo. 525.

5. Haley v. Reid, 16 Ga. 437.

6. Lyon v. Denison, 80 Mich. 371.

7. Kennedy v. Mary Lee Coal, etc., Co., 93 Ala. 494; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 127; Barnes v. Hall, 55 Vt. 420; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 168. See also Smith v. Northampton Bank, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 1; McNeal v. Mechanics' B'ld'g, etc., Assoc., 40 N. J. Eq. 351; 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 131. It was held otherwise in Parker v. Sun Ins. Co., 42 La. Ann. 1172; 32 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 334.

8. Sabin v. Bank of Woodstock, 21 Vt. 353.

9. Quarl v. Abbett, 102 Ind. 233; 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 27; 52 Am. Rep. 662. See also Wait, Fraudulent Conveyances, § 24.

10. Plimpton v. Bigelow, 93 N. Y. 593; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 131, where the court says: "We do not doubt that shares for the purpose of attachment proceedings may be deemed to be in the possession of the corporation which issued them, but only at the place where the corporation by intendment of law always remains, to-wit, in the state or country of its creation. In all other places it is an alien."

in promoting its business,¹ or that one of its branch registry offices is located in such state and that certificates may be found within its borders,² will not entitle a creditor to attach shares of stock in such foreign corporation. In Kentucky, it has been held that a statute conferring upon a foreign corporation all the privileges, with some minor restrictions, granted to it in the state of its domicil, does not constitute it a domestic corporation,³ but in Tennessee, the compliance by a foreign corporation with a statute requiring it to file its articles with the secretary of state sufficiently renders it a domestic corporation to authorize the attachment of its stock.⁴

3. Procedure.—It is generally held that statutory provisions regarding the exercise of the remedies of attachment and execution against stock are imperative.⁵ Thus, levies⁶ and sales,⁷ without the statutory notice, or with a notice which fails to state the precise number of shares to be sold,⁸ have been declared void. In Iowa, a provision that the levy shall include "notification" to a corporate officer, requires written notice,⁹ but in Alabama, under a similar provision, oral notice is sufficient.¹⁰ Sales not in accordance with the advertisement¹¹ or at a time of day other than that prescribed¹² are invalid. In Illinois, a levy is effected by leaving an attested copy of the writ with an officer of the corporation.¹³ In Louisiana, seizure of shares consists in taking

It may send its agents abroad or transact business abroad as any other inhabitant may do, without passing personally into the foreign jurisdiction or changing its legal residence. But such agents are not the corporation, and do not represent the corporation in respect to rights as between the corporation and its shareholders incident to the ownership of shares." Winslow v. Fletcher, 53 Conn. 390; 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 39; 55 Am. Rep. 122; Morton v. Grafflin, 68 Md. 567; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 515.

1. Plimpton v. Bigelow, 93 N. Y. 592; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 131.

2. Christmas v. Biddle, 13 Pa. St. 222; Childs v. Digby, 24 Pa. St. 23; Moore v. Gennett, 2 Tenn. Ch. 375.

3. Martin v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., 7 Bush (Ky.) 116.

4. Young v. South Tredegar Iron Co., 85 Tenn. 189; 4 Am. St. Rep. 752.

5. Stamford Bank v. Ferris, 17 Conn. 259; Benson v. Smith, 42 Me. 415; 66 Am. Dec. 285; James v. Pontiac, etc., Plank Road Co., 8 Mich. 91. Compare Mooar v. Walker, 46 Iowa 164.

6. Commercial Nat. Bank v. Farmers', etc., Bank (Iowa 1891), 47 N. W.

Rep. 1080, where the sheriff sought to make the levy by merely entering a transfer to the judgment on the stub of a certificate, though the statute required notice to the debtor.

7. Princeton Bank v. Crozer, 22 N. J. L. 383; 53 Am. Dec. 254; Voorhis v. Terhune, 50 N. J. L. 147; 7 Am. St. Rep. 781.

8. Blair v. Compton, 33 Mich. 443; Keating v. J. Stone & Sons Live Stock Co. (Tex. 1892), 18 S. W. Rep. 797. See, however, O'Brien v. Mechanics', etc., Ins. Co., 56 N. Y. 52.

9. Moore v. Marshalltown, etc., Co., 81 Iowa 45.

10. Abels v. Planters', etc., Ins. Co., 92 Ala. 382; citing Martin v. Brown, 75 Ala. 442; Wade, Notice, § 831. See, generally, NOTICE, vol. 16, p. 787.

11. Titcomb v. Union Marine F. Ins. Co., 8 Mass. 326; Howe v. Starkweather, 17 Mass. 240.

12. Carnick v. Myers, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 9.

So in the absence of a provision as to the time of day, a sale after nine o'clock at night when but few are present is void. McNaughton v. McLean, 73 Mich. 250.

13. Union Nat. Bank v. Byram, 131 Ill. 92.

possession either of the certificates or of the stockholder's interest in the corporate property;¹ but this formality may be waived.² The provisions of the charter as to levy and sale supersede those of a previous general statute governing the same subject.³ The shares may be sold in bulk instead of separately.⁴ A written instrument of conveyance from the officer to the execution purchaser is necessary to vest title in the latter.⁵ Contrary to the general rule in such cases, it has been held that mandamus would lie to compel a registry of the purchaser as a stockholder,⁶ but he must allege a tender of the papers and a refusal on the part of the corporation.⁷ The purchaser merely takes the place of the indebted stockholder and receives his shares subject to all existing liens and liabilities.⁸

4. Garnishment—(See also GARNISHMENT, vol. 8, pp. 1152, 1158).—Similarly garnishment is dependent upon statutes for its validity, and in the absence of statute is not available to a creditor in respect to shares of stock belonging to his debtor.⁹ When garnishment is authorized, the prescribed mode must be strictly followed. Constructive service of the writ, by leaving a copy of it in a room adjoining and connecting with that used by the garnishee corporation as its place of business, is insufficient.¹⁰ So, a proceeding intended as an attachment, but rather in the

1. Parker v. Sun Ins. Co., 42 La. Ann. 1174; 32 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 334.

2. People v. Goss, etc., Mfg. Co., 99 Ill. 355. In this case the officer of the corporation, without demanding an attested copy, gave to the sheriff a certificate of the number of shares held by the judgment debtor, and an indorsement of such shares as levied upon was made by the sheriff on the execution. The surrender of this certificate without first requiring the attested copy was considered to be a waiver of the right to the latter. The case reverses Goss, etc., Mfg. Co. v. People, 4 Ill. App. 510.

3. Titcomb v. Union Marine F. Ins. Co., 8 Mass. 326.

4. Morris v. Connecticut, etc., R. Co. (Montreal Court of Appeals, Sept. 1886).

5. Morgan v. Thames Bank, 14 Conn. 99.

6. Bailey v. Strohecker, 38 Ga. 259; 95 Am. Dec. 88; State v. First Nat. Bank, 89 Ind. 302. Contra Durham v. Monumental Silver Min. Co., 9 Oregon 41.

7. Lippitt v. American Wood Paper Co., 14 R. I. 301.

8. Titcomb v. Union Marine F. Ins. Co., 8 Mass. 326; Howe v. Starkweather, 17 Mass. 240; Stamford Bank

v. Ferris, 17 Conn. 258; Coleman v. Spencer, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 197; Mechanics' Bank v. Merchants' Bank, 45 Mo. 513; Grant v. Mechanics' Bank, 15 S. & R. (Pa.) 140; Sewall v. Lancaster Bank, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 285; West Branch Bank v. Armstrong, 40 Pa. St. 278.

9. Garnishment not Available in Absence of Statute.—Planters', etc., Bank v. Leavens, 4 Ala. 753; Denny v. Hamilton, 16 Mass. 402; Foster v. Potter, 37 Mo. 525; Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Kerr, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 581; Dayton v. Borst, 31 N. Y. 435; Johns v. Johns, 1 Ohio St. 350; Mansfield, etc., R. Co. v. Hall, 26 Ohio St. 310; Chesapeake, etc., R. Co. v. Paine, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 502; Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45; Rockville, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Andrews, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 451.

In Ross v. Ross, 25 Ga. 297, the court said: "Is stock in this railroad such a debt ('indebtedness') of the railroad to the stockholder that a garnishing creditor of the stockholder can enter up judgment for it against the railroad? It is not; it is a debt which the railroad dare not pay even to the stockholder himself. The railroad may pay him dividends, but that is all."

10. Harrell v. Mexico Cattle Co., 73 Tex. 612.

form of garnishment, will not avail as against a subsequent transfer.¹

5. Relative Rights of Levying Creditors and Transferees—(See also PLEDGE AND COLLATERAL SECURITY, vol. 18, p. 615).—Where there is no statutory or charter provision requiring transfers to be registered on the books of the corporation, transferees of stock naturally take precedence of their assignors' creditors who subsequently levy upon the same.² So a bona fide purchaser at execution sale may hold the stock as against the transferee under a prior unrecorded transfer.³ But where, as is generally the case, the requirement of registration exists, the question of priority as between one claiming under an unrecorded transfer and subsequent levying creditors has given rise to some want of harmony in the decisions. According to one group, constituting probably the weight of authority, bona fide purchasers who fail to register their transfers, will be protected nevertheless against subsequent attachment or execution.⁴ Opposed to this group is another class of cases holding that levying creditors are entitled to all the protection afforded to subsequent purchasers, and that their rights are superior to those of a previous transferee who has failed to register.⁵ But even under this doctrine a creditor who has actual

1. Mooar v. Walker, 46 Iowa 164.

2. Boston Music Hall v. Cory, 129 Mass. 435; Scott v. Pequonnock Nat. Bank, 15 Fed. Rep. 494; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 32.

3. Weston v. Bear River, etc., Min. Co., 5 Cal. 186; 63 Am. Dec. 117; Naglee v. Pacific Wharf Co., 20 Cal. 529; Sabin v. Bank of Woodstock, 21 Vt. 353.

4. Unregistered Purchasers Preferred to Levying Creditors.—New Orleans Canal, etc., Co. v. New Orleans, 30 La. Ann. 1371; Smith v. Crescent City Live-Stock, etc., Co., 30 La. Ann. 1378; Pitot v. Johnson, 33 La. Ann. 1286; Lund v. Wheaton, etc., Co. (Minn. 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 268; Broadway Bank v. McElrath, 13 N. J. Eq. 24; aff'd in Hunterdon Co. Bank v. Nassau, 17 N. J. Eq. 496; Smith v. American Coal Co., 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 317; Comeau v. Guild Farm Oil Co., 3 Daly (N. Y.) 218; Com. v. Watmough, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 117; U. S. v. Vaughan, 3 Binn. (Pa.) 394; 5 Am. Dec. 375; Finney's Appeal, 59 Pa. St. 398; Eby v. Guest, 94 Pa. St. 160; Fraser v. Charleston, 11 S. Car. 486; Seeligson v. Brown, 61 Tex. 114; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 143; Continental Nat. Bank v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 7 Fed. Rep. 369; Scott v. Pequonnock Nat. Bank, 15 Fed. Rep. 494; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp.

Cas. 32. Compare Mechanic's, etc., Bank v. Debolt, 18 How. (U. S.) 380; Bullard v. National Eagle Bank, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 589; Littell v. Scranton Gas., etc., Co., 2 Luz. Leg. Obs. (Pa.) 82.

5. Levying Creditors Preferred to Prior Unrecorded Purchasers.—Berney Nat. Bank v. Pinckard, 87 Ala. 577; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 52; Hardaway v. Semmes, 38 Ala. 657; Jordan v. Mead, 12 Ala. 247; Abels v. Planters, etc., Ins. Co., 92 Ala. 382; Fisher v. Jones, 82 Ala. 117; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 450; Weston v. Bear River, etc., Min. Co., 5 Cal. 186; 63 Am. Dec. 117; Naglee v. Pacific Wharf Co., 20 Cal. 529; Oxford Turnpike Co. v. Bunnell, 6 Conn. 558; People's Bank v. Gridley, 91 Ill. 457; People v. Goss, etc., Mfg. Co., 99 Ill. 355; State v. First Nat. Bank, 89 Ind. 302; Fort Madison Lumber Co. v. Batavian Bank, 71 Iowa 270; Skowhegan Bank v. Cutler, 49 Me. 315; Fisher v. Essex Bank, 5 Gray (Mass.) 373; Blanchard v. Dedham Gas-Light Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 213; Johnson v. Somerville Dyeing, etc., Co., 15 Gray (Mass.) 216; Rock v. Nichols, 3 Allen (Mass.) 342; Central Nat. Bank v. Williston, 138 Mass. 244; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 113. Compare Sibley v. Quinsigamond Nat. Bank, 133 Mass. 520; Buttrick v. Nashua, etc., R. Co., 62 N. H. 413; Young v.

notice (though it is not received until after the levy)¹ of a prior unrecorded transfer, takes subject thereto,² and may be prevented even from taking steps to protect his title.³ So it is held that where the corporation wrongfully refuses to register the transfer, the transferee will be protected against a subsequent levy,⁴ and may recover damages from the corporation for its refusal.⁵ Registration will protect the transferee, though he has not formally accepted the stock as required by statute.⁶ When he purchases stock after an order dissolving an attachment thereof he acquires title, though an appeal from such order is pending, the statute not otherwise providing.⁷ Transfers of stock in fraud

South Tredegar Iron Co., 85 Tenn. 189; 4 Am. St. Rep. 752; In re Murphy, 51 Wis. 519.

In Massachusetts, the rule seems to be so far modified as to protect the transferee if only the by-law will require registration. Sargent v. Essex, etc., R. Co., 9 Pick. (Mass.) 202; Boston Music Hall v. Cory, 129 Mass. 435.

In Maryland, a pledgee who delays for ten years to assert any claim to the stock has no rights as against a subsequent attaching creditor or against the corporation. Noble v. Turner, 69 Md. 519; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 439.

Purchase of the judgment by the unregistered transferee merges the attachment lien. Stout v. Natoma, etc., Min. Co., 9 Cal. 78.

1. Wilson v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. (Mo. 1891), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 290. But see Jones v. Latham, 70 Ala. 164; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 172.

2. Weston v. Bear River, etc., Min. Co., 6 Cal. 425; 63 Am. Dec. 117; Scripture v. Francetown Soapstone Co., 50 N. H. 571; Van Cise v. Merchants' Nat. Bank (Dak. 1887), 33 N. W. Rep. 897; Black v. Zacharie, 3 How. (U. S.) 483; Bridgewater Iron Co. v. Lissburger, 116 U. S. 8.

A purchaser at execution sale obtains no title where he has knowledge that the judgment debtor had already parted with his ownership of the stock. Blakeman v. Puget Sound Iron Co., 72 Cal. 321; Mowry v. Hawkins, 57 Conn. 453. But compare opinion of Cooley, J., in Newberry v. Detroit, etc., Mfg. Co., 17 Mich. 141.

But a corporation is not chargeable with knowledge on the part of a director who had notice of the transfer but not of the attachment. Buttrick v. Nashua, etc., R. Co., 62 N. H. 413.

3. Cheever v. Meyer, 52 Vt. 66; People v. Elmore, 35 Cal. 653. But see contra, Farmers Nat. Gold Bank v. Wilson, 58 Cal. 600.

4. Wrongful Refusal of Registration.—Colt v. Ives, 31 Conn. 25; 81 Am. Dec. 161; Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90; 19 Am. Dec. 306; Plymouth Bank v. Bank of Norfolk, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 454; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Richards, 6 Mo. App. 454; aff'd 72 Mo. 77; State Ins. Co. v. Gennett, 2 Tenn. Ch. 82. Compare Fiske v. Carr, 20 Me. 301.

5. Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90; 19 Am. Dec. 306; Robinson v. Nat. Bank, 95 N. Y. 637; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 548. See also Hazard v. Nat. Exch. Bank, 26 Fed. Rep. 94; Plymouth Bank v. Bank of Norfolk, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 454.

The corporation may be liable also to the purchaser of an outstanding certificate for allowing registry to one who buys at an execution sale. Smith v. American Coal Co., 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 317. See also Rogers v. Stevens, 8 N. J. Eq. 167. But the plaintiff must allege that he is a purchaser for value. Littell v. Scranton Gas, etc., Co., 42 Pa. St. 500.

6. Woodruff v. Harris, 11 U. C. Q. B. 490.

7. Loveland v. Alvord, etc., Min. Co., 76 Cal. 562. Here the court said: "As attachment is merely a creature of statute, its existence and operation in any case can continue no longer than the statute provides it may. And there is no express authority given to a sheriff to retain in his custody property seized by him under and by virtue of a writ of attachment issued out of a justice's court, after a judgment in the action in which the attachment issued is rendered in favor of the defendant. No provision is made for his detention of it pending an appeal from such a judgment. In the ab-of creditors will justify the interposition of courts of chancery,¹ as well as the remedy by attachment,² and an attaching creditor may, under a cross-bill, have a decree requiring the registration of the shares in his name.³ In other cases than those of fraud, however, equity as a general rule, will not interfere in the absence of statutory warrant to do so.⁴

VII. TRANSFER—1. The Right of Transfer—a. IN GENERAL.—It has been shown above that shares of stock are personal property.⁵ An incident of the ownership of any species of property is the unrestricted right of alienation—the jus disponendi.⁶ When the law makes stock personal property, it clothes it with all the incidents of personal property, and the owner has full dominion over it and may dispose of it at will.⁷

b. ORIGIN AND FOUNDATION OF RIGHT.—The right of alienation, though now an incident of the ownership of property, is not, as often seems to be taken for granted, an inseparable and sence of any such provision, it seems quite clear that, under section 553 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the defendant K., after judgment in his favor, could make any disposition of the property which he could have made before it was attached, with like force and effect. If that be so, it follows that his transfer of it to defendant O. was valid."

1. Hadden v. Spader, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 554; Scott v. Indianapolis Wagon Works, 48 Ind. 75; Lathrop v. McBurney, 71 Ga. 815; Van Norman v. Circuit Judge, 45 Mich. 204; Gillett v. Bate, 86 N. Y. 87.

2. Beckwith v. Borrough, 14 R. I. 366; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 553; 51 Am. Rep. 392.

3. Abels v. Planters, etc., Ins. Co., 92 Ala. 382.

4. Williams v. Reynolds, 7 Ind. 623; McFerran v. Jones, 2 Litt. (Ky.) 219; Disborough v. Outcalt, 1 N. J. Eq. 298; Erwin v. Oldhan, 6 Yerg. (Tenn.) 185; 27 Am. Dec. 458; Brightwell v. Mallory, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 198; Donovan v. Finn, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 59; 14 Am. Dec. 531. So in England: Dundas v. Dutens, 1 Ves. 196; Nantes v. Corrock, 9 Ves. 182; Bank of England v. Lunn, 15 Ves. 569; McCarthy v. Gould, 1 B. & B. 387; Grogan v. Cooks, 2 B. & B. 230. But see, contra, Storm v. Waddell, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 511; Watkins v. Dorsett, 1 Bland. Ch. (Md.) 530.

5. See supra, this title, Shares Personal Property.

6. The right of alienation is an incident of property, and a by-law prohibiting this right, or imposing any restriction on its exercise, would be in restraint of trade and against public policy, and therefore void. Moore v. Bank of Commerce, 52 Mo. 377.

It is a universal principle of the common law that the absolute ownership of property carries with it the right to transfer or dispose of it as the owner may see proper. Miller v. Great Republic Ins. Co., 50 Mo. 57.

So, in Poole v. Middleton, 29 Beav. 646, Lord Romilly says: "Shares in joint stock companies which do not belong to any of the directors, are perfectly distinct from such cases; they are, in fact, in the nature of property, and . . . therefore, unless there is something which prevents him from entering into such a contract he has a right to dispose of his property in any share in a joint stock company, which is a right to receive the dividends." See also Moffatt v. Farquhar, 7 Ch. Div. 605.

7. In re Klaus, 67 Wis. 401; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 568. See also Trisconi v. Winship, 43 La. Ann. 45; 33 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 271; Allen v. Montgomery R. Co., 11 Ala. 451; Mobile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cullom, 49 Ala. 558; Farmer's, etc., Bank v. Wasson, 48 Iowa 336; State v. American Cotton Oil Trust, 40 La. Ann. 8; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 448; Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90; 19 Am. Dec. 306; Moore v. Bank of Commerce, 52 Mo. 377; Chouteau Spring Co. v. Harris, 20 Mo. 381; Miller v. Great Republic Ins. Co., 50 Mo. 57; Heart v. State Bank, 2 Dev.

inherent one, but rather the result of a long period of judicial evolution.¹ But shares of stock came to be recognized as a species of property rather too late to be affected by the older doctrine by which alienation was regarded more as a limited privilege than as a right. Still there are traces of it even here.² There are later cases also which appear to recognize the principle that the right to transfer stock is derived from the corporate charter.³ But the modern tendency of judicial thought which favors the free and untrammelled interchange of property rights,⁴ has not been without its influence upon shares of stock. In nearly all of the later decisions it is assumed that the right to transfer them is incidental to their ownership, and this assumption is based upon the broad ground that shares of stock are characterized by the same features as other forms of property.⁵

c. ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE DOCTRINE.—Since, therefore, the right of transfer is incidental to the ownership of stock, it is generally true that corporate regulations which prohibit or otherwise unreasonably restrict this right, are void. It was said in an early Eq. (N. Car.) 111; Feckheimer v. National Exch. Bank, 79 Va. 80; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 156; Gould v. Head, 41 Fed. Rep. 240; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 231; In re Cawley, 42 Ch. Div. 209; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 425; Weston's Case, L. R., 4 Ch. 20; In re Stranton Iron, etc., Co., L. R., 16 Eq. 559.

1. Gray, Restraints on Alienation, secs. 3-6, where the development of this doctrine is traced with admirable clearness.

2. In Duvergier v. Fellows, 5 Bing. 248; 15 E. C. L. 436, decided by the king's bench in 1828, it was said that "Members of corporations cannot assign their interest . . . without the authority of an act of Parliament." The judgment was affirmed in 10 B. & C. 826; 21 E. C. L. 346.

3. Johnson v. Laflin, 5 Dill. (U. S.) 74; Bank of Attica v. Manufacturer's, etc., Bank, 20 N. Y. 501.

4. Gray, Restraints on Alienation, secs. 3-6.

5. Poole v. Middleton, 29 Beav. 560. See also Trisconi v. Winship, 43 La. Ann. 45; 33 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 271; Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90; 19 Am. Dec. 306; In re Klaus, 67 Wis. 401; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 568; Moffatt v. Farquhar, 7 Ch. Div. 605; In re Cawley, 42 Ch. Div. 209; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 425.

In Weston's Case, L. R., 4 Ch. 20, it was contended on the argument that the directors had implied discretion to approve or reject proposed transfers. Of the counsel who advanced this view, Lord Justice Selwyn asked arguendo: "How, according to your argument would the shares be transferable at all?" to which it was replied: "They are transferable by the common law of partnerships, subject to conditions, which are changed, first, by incorporation, from the unanimity of the partners to the will of a majority, and secondly, by the powers given to directors, from the assent of a majority in general meeting to that of the directors." But Lord Justice Wood, in delivering his opinion, said: "The very object of all the parties who enter into these companies is to have shares which are not like shares in ordinary partnerships, but which are transferable; and all the articles are framed on the supposition that they are so transferable. Indeed, it has always been a subject of discussion whether the establishment of joint stock companies were or not politic, for the very reason that the partners can immediately get rid of all their liability. I was therefore greatly surprised at the argument which has been addressed to us to-day, namely, that unless there is something in the articles which makes the shares transferable, they are not transferable at all, except by resolution of a general meeting. I apprehend the shares are transferable by virtue of the statute, and that the province of the Massachusetts case, "A by-law which limits the transfer of stock to be made only at the office, personally or by attorney and with the consent of the president, would be in restraint of trade and contrary to the general law of the commonwealth."¹ So a by-law which makes approval by the directors a condition precedent to transfer, cannot be enforced so as to defeat the rights of third parties,² and one which requires the assent of all the stockholders to a transfer is void as against public policy, even where the would-be transferrer voted for the by-law and the stockholders articles is to point out the mode in which they shall be transferred, and the limitations (if any) to which a shareholder shall be subjected before he can transfer."

1. Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90; 19 Am. Dec. 306. In this case the court said: "We think it cannot be maintained, that the right to the shares in the capital stock of this corporation cannot be transferred without a literal compliance with the by-laws. It is personal property. . . . It might be conveyed by will; it might descend from an intestate to his heir. It may be assigned without deed, by a delivery of the certificate with an indorsement upon it for a valuable consideration. Quiner v. Marblehead Social Ins. Co., 10 Mass. 476. And in such cases the legatee, heir, or assignee would be entitled to have the transfer made in the books, and to a certificate of his property. A by-law which limits the transfer of the stock to be made only at the office personally or by attorney, and with the assent of the president, would be in restraint of trade and contrary to the general law of the commonwealth, which permits the right to personal property and incorporeal hereditaments to be transferred in various other ways. The purchaser or other person entitled should make his right known to the corporation, that it may be entered upon their books; to the end that they may have proper evidence to whom the dividends or profits should be paid." See also Bond v. Mount Hope Iron Co., 99 Mass. 505; 97 Am. Dec. 49.

But in Dane v. Young, 61 Me. 160, a by-law provided "that shares shall be transferable by indorsement in writing and subscribed by the holder in presence of the cashier, or two other witnesses, . . . and in every case of transfer the former certificate shall be delivered up to the cashier to be canceled and a new certificate shall be issued in favor of the transferee;" and the court said: "We see nothing in these provisions of the by-laws inconsistent with the laws of the state or the charter of the bank. . . . The requirement that transfers of stock shall be by indorsement of the certificate of stock 'subscribed by the holder in the presence of the cashier or two other witnesses,' furnishes the other stockholders, and if need be the public, with the means of ascertaining as far as may be the nature of the transaction and the standing of the parties to it." And in Planters', etc., Mut. Ins. Co. v. Selma Sav. Bank, 63 Ala. 585, a by-law providing that "all transfers of stock shall be made in a book kept at the office of the company in the presence of the president or secretary, and no new certificate of stock shall be issued until the old is surrendered, except in case of loss," was under discussion; and the court said: "The mode of transferring stock provided by the by-laws, is intended for the protection and security of the bank, or of third persons who in good faith, on a valuable consideration, may in that mode acquire the stock, without notice of prior equitable transfers, or of outstanding equities. The legal title to the stock cannot pass, unless this mode of transfer is observed. But a complete equitable title may be acquired by a transfer in any form or manner appropriate to pass property of that kind, divesting the stockholder of all right and interest, and entitling the transferee to demand that he be invested with the legal title."

2. In Farmers', etc., Bank v. Wasson, 48 Iowa 339, Beck, J., says: "While it may be lawfully enforced to protect rights of the corporation, it cannot, in other cases, be exercised without limitation so as to defeat the rights of others. If the corporation has no rights to be protected by its exercise, and other parties would be deprived of originally were partners.¹ A by-law authorizing the corporation to "regulate the transfer of stock" does not confer the power to restrain transfers, prescribe to whom they may be made, or prohibit them from being made to an insolvent,² and an attempt to prohibit such transfers is void, though notice of the by-law is indorsed on the certificate.³ The mere fact that the transferee their property thereby, it cannot be enforced in such cases. Its enforcement would operate as an infringement upon the property rights of others, which the law will not permit. It would, besides, operate as a restraint upon the disposition of property in the stock of the corporation, in the nature of restraint of trade, which the courts will not tolerate. As the restriction is not imposed by express authority of the statute of the state, it cannot, in such cases, be enforced. These conclusions are supported by the following authorities: Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90; 19 Am. Dec. 306; Quiner v. Marblehead Social Ins. Co., 10 Mass. 476; Angell & Ames on Corporations, § 567; U. S. v. Vaughan, 3 Binn. (Pa.) 394; 5 Am. Dec. 375; Chambersburg Ins. Co. v. Smith, 11 Pa. St. 120; Chouteau Spring Co. v. Harris, 20 Mo. 382." See also Feckheimer v. National Exch. Bank, 79 Va. 80; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 156.

1. In re Klaus, 67 Wis. 401; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 568, where the court says: "Enough and perhaps too much has been said on general principles, and once for all we hold that a by-law of a corporation which prohibits the transfer of stock by a stockholder without the consent of all of the stockholders is void and against public policy. It is an unwarrantable and unlawful restriction upon the sale of personal property, the sale and interchange of which the law favors, and in restraint of trade." In reference to the former partnership character of the concern, it was further said: "It is again very plausibly argued by the learned counsel of the appellant that what might be against public policy in a public or quasi public corporation, would not be in a strictly private corporation, and that the latter corporation was in substance only an incorporated partnership. We cannot give countenance to any such distinction. The policy of incorporating a strictly private business with a limited liability of the stockholders towards their creditors, is at least questionable. But when a private business or partnership has become incorporated under the general law, and greatly favored by privileges and franchises and by restricted liability, there is no reason for making any distinction between such a corporation and others, and our statute makes none. The corporators have secured the advantages of a corporation, and they should be governed by all the other incidents of a corporation. Why not? They cannot be a corporation and still remain, in respect to the same business, a copartnership. The one must completely displace the other. We cannot, therefore, be governed by any authorities which make such a distinction. The stockholders, directors and officers cannot act as partners, or be personally bound as partners. The corporators, if formerly partners in the same business, and the partnership are merged in the corporation, not partially, but fully and completely."

But on this latter point compare Harper v. Raymond, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 29, where the nature of a partnership "association," whose rules were sustained and enforced, is thus described by the court: "The parties to the original association, in the 6th article, contemplate and allow a sale of a share or shares, but stipulate and direct that such sale shall not constitute the purchaser a partner. They intend also that such a sale shall not work a dissolution of the association. They contemplate a subsequent allotment of profits to the vendor in such sale. The purchaser being registered, and getting his certificate, could demand and receive the profits declared as belonging to his vendor, by getting a power of attorney or other authority for that purpose from him. In fact, it seems that such vendor was to be still regarded as a partner for management. At least he is not excluded." See also Tatam v. Williams, 3 Hare 347.

2. Chouteau Spring Co. v. Harris, 20 Mo. 382.

3. Feckheimer v. National Exch.

gives as his address a place at which he is but an occasional visitor, will not justify refusal of transfer, though the company is in difficulties and the transferrer sold his shares to escape responsibility.¹ The company may be estopped to refuse registration to one who has received a certificate from its secretary,² and if it has a valid excuse for declining to allow a transfer, the same must be urged at the time of application; it is not subsequently available as a defense if the refusal was based upon a different reason.³ Moreover, the existence of the alleged grounds must be established clearly and urged promptly,⁴ and courts will hesitate long before enjoining transfers by particular persons while others continue to exercise the right.⁵

d. TRANSFERS BY DIRECTORS.—Until recently, there seems to have been some question as to the right of directors to exercise that almost unrestricted power of alienation to which other owners of shares are entitled. This was especially true of "qualification shares," i. e. those which one must own in order to be eligible

Bank, 79 Va. 80; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 156.

1. Weston's Case, L. R., 4 Ch. 20. "The object of the address being given," says Wood, L. J., "is not, generally speaking, to know where the shareholder is to be served with process, but where his notices are to be sent."

2. Shaw v. Port Philip Gold Min. Co., 13 Q. B. Div. 103.

3. Bond v. Mount Hope Iron Co., 99 Mass. 505; 97 Am. Dec. 49; American Wire Nail Co. v. Bayless (Ky. 1891), 15 S. W. Rep. 10. In the former case a by-law of the defendant company required its members to first give it the option of purchasing their shares before transferring them. An applicant having been refused transfer because of failure to comply with this by-law, brought suit against the corporation, which set up the defense that at the time of the application its president was sick and unable to sign a certificate. The court, without passing directly upon the validity of the by-law, held that the defense finally urged was not available and that plaintiff was entitled to recover the value of his shares.

4. In American Wire Nail Co. v. Bayless (Ky. 1891), 15 S. W. Rep. 10, which was an action to compel transfer, the defense urged was that the stock was issued to plaintiff's vendor upon his fraudulent representations made more than three years before. Meanwhile the company had made no attempt to cancel the stock and had even accepted some of it as collateral. The court found as a matter of evidence, that the defense was not supported by the evidence, and further said: "The company has not only by delay, but by positive action, ratified the issue of the stock. It has accepted some of it as collateral. It has held it out to the world as valid; and if it were, in fact, not so, yet the appellant and the Gedges have unreasonably delayed saying so, or taking steps to annul it. It is transferable by delivery of the certificates so as to pass all the rights of the assignor, and is protected in the hands of an innocent holder, whatever may be its infirmity. Hence every reason exists for prompt action if the corporation or a stockholder claims it is invalid. A transfer upon the company's books is merely to protect the company and others who might propose to purchase the stock, as the contract of sale passes the rights of the vendor, and the vendee may, by proper action, compel the transfer upon the records of the company. 4 Wait, Act. & Def., p. 164; 8 Wait, Act. & Def., p. 79; Johnston v. Laflin, 103 U. S. 800; Mor. Priv. Corp., § 326 et seq. In view, therefore, of the laches of the appellant, its silence and conduct as to this stock until this suit was brought, were we in doubt upon the evidence as to the right of the case, the inclination would be to the side of the appellees."

5. State v. American Cotton Oil Trust, 40 La. Ann. 8; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 448.

to the directorship.¹ So late as 1870, Lord Romilly said, in reference to such an attempted transfer: "Whether a director can do that is a question which has never yet been determined. I apprehend that he cannot."² The subject was somewhat further obscured by later decisions, where either attempted transfers by directors were fraudulent³ or the directors were required by the charter to continue in office.⁴ But it was held, subsequently, that a director might mortgage his qualification shares.⁵ In another recent English case the right of transfer by a director not indebted to the company was upheld, even though he was seeking to evade liability,⁶ and a late judgment of the supreme court of Louisiana declared that directors "had the right to dispose at their pleasure, of the shares which they owned in the corporation."⁷ It may, therefore, be accepted as the settled law that the status of directors in this regard is not different from that of ordinary stockholders.⁸

e. MOTIVE AND EFFECT OF THE TRANSFER AS GROUNDS FOR REFUSAL.—It is said that the motives or objects of parties to a transfer are of no concern to the company⁹ or its ministerial officers,¹⁰ and hence do not constitute valid reasons for denying registration. Questions of this kind have most frequently arisen concerning transfers for the purpose of distributing the privileges of membership, multiplying votes and influencing corporate elections. The weight of authority certainly is that these purposes do not afford sufficient ground for declining to permit the consum-

1. Buckley on Companies (5th ed.) 25. See an article in 8 Ry. & Corp. L. J. 99., reprinted from the Law Times.

2. Gilbert's Case, 34 L. T., N. S. 34. As a reason for this view it was further stated that "His situation is that of trustee for the shareholders, and therefore he is not at liberty to do things which he does not think for the benefit of all the shareholders of the company." While this reasoning appears to have been repudiated by Lord Justice Giffard, on appeal, the judgment itself was affirmed. L. R., 5 Ch. 559.

3. In re South London Fish Market Co., 39 Ch. Div. 324; 60 L. T. Rep., N. S. 68.

4. Portal v. Emmens, 1 C. P. Div. 664.

5. Reeves v. Bainbridge, Weekly Notes (1889), 228.

6. In re Cawley, L. R., 42 Ch. Div. 209; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 425.

7. Trisconi v. Winship, 43 La. Ann. 45; 33 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 271.

8. Trisconi v. Winship, 43 La. Ann. 45; 33 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 271; In re Cawley, 42 Ch. Div. 209; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 271. Compare Beach, Corporations, § 613, where the author says: "Granting that the director who transfers his qualification shares gives up his seat on the board, cannot he make a perfectly valid transfer of his shares? As between him and the company he is no longer under the slightest obligation to retain the shares. Parting with his directorate, the shares no longer qualify him for anything, for no qualification is needed by him. He can surely transfer them as fully and as freely as can any shareholder in the company."

9. State v. McIver, 2 S. Car. 25.

10. In re Klaus, 67 Wis. 401; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 568. In this case, the secretary of the corporation, W., had refused to register the transfer by one M., and the court said: "Whatever may have been the motives of M. in making his transfer, it is of no concern to W. His duties are purely ministerial and clerical in entering upon the books transfers of stock. He certainly has not the judicial power to pass upon the motives and intentions of the parties to the assignment of stock," citing Helm v. Swiggett, 12 Ind. 194; State v. Smith, 48 Vt. 266.

mation of the transfer.¹ It is the general rule, sanctioned by the policy of the law, that those who have the largest interest in corporations may control them, as they have the largest interest that they shall be well managed.² Even where the personnel of transferees is subject to the approval of the directors, the latter cannot object on the ground that a transfer is colorable and designed to increase the voting power of the transferrer.³ So where the number of votes to which a member is entitled is limited by the charter, his transferees cannot be prevented from voting on the grounds that they are not the beneficial owners, but hold the shares merely to enable the transferrer to evade the charter limitation.⁴ Similarly it has been held that the right of a majority stockholder to demand a new election of directors cannot be defeated on the ground that he purchased his shares with the money of rival companies, and that his designs, including the proposed election, are inimical to the corporate interests.⁵ Want of consideration between the parties to the transfer will not authorize a denial of registry by the corporation,⁶ nor will the mere fact that the transferee is insolvent.⁷ There are, nevertheless, cases which appear to qualify the above rule, and it has

1. Moffatt v. Farquhar, 7 Ch. Div. 591; In re Stranton, etc., Iron Co., L. R., 16 Eq. 559.

In State v. Smith, 48 Vt. 290, Redfield, J., says: "It is insisted that this stock was transferred for the purpose of giving the preponderance of votes to the respondents. We have no doubt that such motives were strong inducements at the time, and that the respondents were determined to resort to every lawful agency to maintain their position, and repel the movement of the relator. We have no opinion of the merits of the controversy, or of the wisdom or propriety of the acts of the parties, as disclosed by the testimony. There are some matters disclosed which, in the forum of conscience, would be obnoxious to criticism, that are not unlawful and are not properly brought in question in this proceeding. The case shows that this stock was not merely transferred, but sold, and that the sale was actual, not colorable; and that there was no secret trust or condition; that the sale was for a necessary purpose, and beneficial to the company; that the full value was paid to the corporation which has gone to its use. We think such sale is not void, but like any other sale, can be impeached only for cause; and, that the controlling inducement for the purchase at the time, of this stock, was, to enable the purchaser and his friends to outvote the relator and his friends, does not vitiate the sale, if otherwise for honest purposes and for full value."

Jessel, M. R., says in Pender v. Lushington, 6 Ch. Div. 75: "In all cases of this kind, where men exercise their rights of property, they exercise their rights from some motive adequate or inadequate, and I have always considered the law to be that those who have the rights of property are entitled to exercise them, whatever their motives may be for such exercise—that is as regards a court of law as distinguished from a court of morality or conscience, if such a court exists. . . . That is really the question, because if these shareholders have a right of property, then I think all arguments which have been addressed to me as to the motives which induced them to exercise it are entirely beside the question."

2. Earl, J., in Barnes v. Brown, 80 N. Y. 527.

3. Moffatt v. Farquhar, 7 Ch. Div. 591; In re Stranton Iron, etc., Co., L. R., 16 Eq. 559.

4. Pender v. Lushington, 6 Ch. Div. 70; In re Stranton Iron, etc., Co., L. R., 16 Eq. 559.

5. Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Elkins, 37 N. J. Eq. 274.

6. Helm v. Swiggett, 12 Ind. 194.

7. Chouteau Spring Co. v. Harris, been said that courts do not look with favor upon transfers effected with improper objects.¹ Thus, in an action against corporate officers to compel registration, an answer in which it is alleged that the acquisition of the stock by the plaintiff was without consideration, and for the purpose of obtaining control of the company, to the exclusion of parties interested, states a good defense.² An interesting modification of the doctrine first stated appears in Pennsylvania. Shares of stock in a certain theatre corporation entitled its owners to free admission, and colorable transfers by heavy stockholders to outside parties, made for the purpose of conferring the privilege of admission, and with the understanding that the shares would be re-transferred at the end of the season, were enjoined.³ So in England, mandamus to 20 Mo. 382; Feckheimer v. National Exch. Bank, 79 Va. 80; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 156.

1. Kingman v. Rome, etc., R. Co., 30 Hun (N. Y.) 73.

2. Gould v. Head, 41 Fed. Rep. 240; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 331.

3. Baker's Appeal, 108 Pa. St. 510; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 137; 56 Am. Rep. 231. The court, while disclaiming any suspicion of fraud by the parties to the transfer, said: "It cannot be doubted that both at law and in equity the title to the shares in question was in the transferrers at all times. They held the certificates of stock and they held also the executed powers of attorney for the transfer. The transferees had not purchased the stock. No money was to be paid to them when the re-transfer was made upon the books. They were to do nothing in order to complete the re-transfer. That which they did buy, to-wit, —tickets of admission—they received, held and used. They have no right and did not and could not under the contract claim any right to anything more than this. They could not assert any ownership of any kind, legal or equitable, to the stock which the certificates represented. Why then shall we treat them as owners or holders? Because it is said the stock stood in their names on the books of the corporation. But the whole effect of that fact is evidentiary only. It is some evidence, prima facie evidence, of ownership. But this prima facies gives way instantly to proof of actual ownership. As a mere technical fact it is of no avail against an opposing possession of the certificate, together with an executed power of attorney for its transfer. The force of the fact of registry disappears, therefore, and is nugatory in the face of the other facts. Of course there are circumstances in which the registered title is sufficient for certain purposes. Upon it votes may be cast and dividends paid, and in special situations innocent purchasers may be protected. But these cases are exceptional and do not in any degree affect the present. Nor do we see how the understanding that the re-transfer shall not be made till the end of the season can change the question of ownership. It is but a postponement of the time when the holder of the certificate may change the registered title from another to himself. It does not affect the actual title conferred by the real ownership of the stock, by the possession of the certificate, and by the executed and delivered power of attorney. It is but an agreement that the one prima facie fact of registry shall remain as it is, to-wit: a prima facie fact only, during the stipulated period. After all has been said, and all theories exhibited and exhausted, we must fall back to the inquiry, who is the real actual owner and holder of the stock, and to that question there can be but the one answer. For by the terms of the law which authorizes the issue of the tickets they can only be given to holders of stock. How can we possibly say that this means persons who seem to be holders, or who are apparently holders, or who possess one *indiciu*m of hold-ership? How can a court, construing the law, say it means anything else than actual, real, true holders? It is not possible in any view of the case. We are not dealing with a shadow but with a substance. This is not a controversy over possible rights acquired innocently under a deceptive compel transfer has been refused to one whose real object was not the enjoyment of the rights of membership.¹

f. AUTHORIZED RESTRICTIONS.—But while in general the stockholder's right of alienation is inviolable, it is nevertheless subject, in some cases, to restrictions by the company. Thus, the latter may prescribe certain formalities of transfer,² for non-compliance with which it may refuse registration. It may also, as a means of enforcing its lien on shares, prohibit transfer by one indebted to it. This restriction is, indeed, of such importance to need separate treatment elsewhere.³ The corporation may also limit the right of transfer by denying registry to an applicant who is guilty of laches,⁴ or if the stock has already been transferred to another.⁵ In the charters of English⁶ and Canadian⁷ companies, it is not infrequently provided in express terms that all transfers shall be subject to approval by the directors. Where such is the case the directors may absolutely refuse transfers if they do so bona fide and for the benefit of the company.⁸ Nor are they bound to disclose their reasons for rejecting a transferee, if appearance of title, or in spite of facts which an opposing party is estopped from asserting. On the contrary the parties dealt at arm's length, with their eyes open, and virtually attempted to create a position by means of which they could defeat the substance of a statute by a nominal adherence to its letter. Between themselves this might avail, and equity might refuse to hear either complaining of the other. But between them and others, strangers whose rights become implicated, the question is entirely different. These latter may stand upon their strictest rights, and may set up whatever obstacles are within their reach against interference with them."

1. Reg. v. Liverpool, etc., R. Co., 21 L. J., Q. B. 284.

2. See infra, this title, Formalities of the Transfer.

3. See infra, this title, Lien of the Corporation on Stock.

4. Where the pledgee of stock delays for ten years to register the transfer, or to give notice to the corporation of any claim to the stock, and in the meantime the stock has been attached and sold as the property of the pledgor, and a transfer has been made by the sheriff on the books, as authorized by the statute, the pledgee is barred by his laches from setting up any claim to the stock as against the corporation and the purchaser at the execution sale. Noble v. Turner, 69 Md. 519; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 438.

A person proceeding under the statute to levy upon stock and sell it under execution, is bound within a reasonable time to have his title perfected, by having it transferred upon the books of the company, that it may obtain the rights against him which it is entitled by law to exercise against its stockholders; and a party who delays for several years to have such transfer recorded, and waits until the stock has become valuable by the activity and enterprise of others, and new interests have intervened, and then applies to obtain an account and transfer, is estopped from setting up such claim, and equity will not enforce his demands. Newberry v. Detroit, etc., Iron Co., 17 Mich. 141.

5. State v. Warren Foundry, etc., Co., 32 N. J. 430. When stock sold under execution is afterward, on devolutive appeal, decreed to belong to an intervenor, he cannot recover against the corporation for having refused to transfer to him, and permitted the judicial purchase, even though the stock is sold without appraisal. Chapman v. New Orleans Gas Light, etc., Co., 4 La. Ann. 153.

6. Robinson v. Chartered Bank, L. R., 1 Eq. 32; Shepherd's Case, L. R., 2 Eq. 564; Payne's Case, L. R., 9 Eq. 223; Ex parte Penny, L. R., 8 Ch. 446; Shortridge v. Bosanquet, 16 Beav. 84; Bargate v. Shortridge, 5 H. L. Cas. 297.

7. Smith v. Canada Car Co., 6 U. C. P. R. 107.

8. Shepherd's Case, L. R., 2 Eq. 564.

they fairly consider the question at one of their meetings and there is no showing of bad faith.¹ Under such a provision, moreover, where the directors have permitted a transfer which is subsequently shown to be fraudulent, the transaction may be avoided entirely, and the name of the transferrer placed upon the list of contributories, even after the lapse of three years.² But this power of approval must be exercised reasonably and will not authorize the directors to refuse transfers to anyone.³ Whether a refusal in a particular case is reasonable, has been held to be a question for the courts of equity.⁴ As before stated, objections to the motive or objects of the transferrer do not constitute sufficient grounds for refusal,⁵ nor can the power of approval be insisted upon unless it has been expressly conferred.⁶

2. Formalities of the Transfer—a. IN GENERAL.—The form, procedure, and methods of transferring stock are a legitimate subject of corporate regulation, and by-laws which attempt no more than this are valid. On this principle by-laws have been sustained when requiring registration in the presence of certain corporate officers,⁷ and execution of the transfer in the presence of attesting witnesses.⁸ Where the act of incorporation requires the delivery of a deed of transfer to the secretary, it must be such an instrument as he can properly accept, and if returned by him on account of not being stamped and dated, this will prevent the legal title from passing.⁹

b*. SEALS.—At common law, and independent of charter provisions and by-laws, no seal is required in order to effect a transfer of shares.¹⁰ And where the articles of association authorize

1. Ex parte Penny, L. R., 8 Ch. 446, where James, L. J., says: "I cannot conceive that any director would choose to accept office, or exercise the power intrusted to him, if he were liable to be called upon to say what the particular reasons were or the particular motive was which influenced him in coming to the conclusion that any person was not eligible as a shareholder. I think, therefore, that these directors were well advised in not subjecting themselves to be cross-examined and interrogated as to what particular reasons they might have for personally objecting to this gentleman, and in confining themselves to saying, by their secretary, that the question was discussed at a board of the directors, that the propriety of the transfer to the particular transferee was the subject matter for discussion, and having taken that into their consideration, they had arrived at the conclusion to which they had arrived."

2. Payne's Case, L. R., 9 Eq. 223.

3. Robinson v. Chartered Bank, L.

R., 1 Eq. 32; Smith v. Canada Car Co., 6 U. C. P. R. 107, where Richards, C. J., says: "I do not think they have any such power; if permitted to exercise such power they would, in effect, prevent the transfer of shares, which the statute and charter clearly contemplate, and arbitrarily control the value of the property of the stockholders."

4. Taft v. Harrison, 10 Hare 474. This case was decided, however, before the amalgamation of law and equity by the Judicature Acts.

5. See supra, this subdivision of the title.

6. Weston's Case, L. R., 4 Ch. 20, and see, generally, supra, this subdivision of title.

7. Planters', etc., Mut. Ins. Co. v. Selma Sav. Bank, 63 Ala. 585.

8. Dane v. Young, 61 Me. 160.

9. Nanney v. Morgan, 37 Ch. Div. 346.

10. Quiner v. Marblehead Social Ins. Co., 10 Mass. 476; Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90; 19 Am. Dec. 306; Atkinson v. Atkinson, 8 Allen (Mass.) 15. Compare German transfers by "an instrument in writing," a deed is not necessary even though it has been the uniform practice of the company to require one.¹ But the requirement of a seal may be imposed by charter² or by-laws,³ and it then becomes imperative, so that its omission will render the attempted transfer void.⁴ When such is the requirement, the words "place of seal" are not sufficient,⁵ and a blank transfer signed by the transferrer, with the word "seal" inclosed in brackets, is of no effect.⁶ Where certain rules are prescribed as to the mode in which, and the persons by whom, and in whose presence, the seal shall be affixed, these must be observed,⁷ but in the absence of such regulations, no particular formalities are required, and a seal affixed by the direction of parties who in fact manage the affairs of the company, is valid, even though it has not been authorized by a resolution of the board of directors.⁸

c. WAIVER.—Formalities prescribed in the execution of transfers may be waived by the corporation, either expressly or by implication. The latter is the case where a certain formality has

Union Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Sendmeyer, 50 Pa. St. 67; Matthews v. Massachusetts Nat. Bank, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 407; In re Tees Bottle Works, 33 L. T., N. S. 834; Easton v. London, etc., Bank, 55 L. T. Rep. 678; Walker v. Bartlett, 36 Eng. L. & Eq. 368; Ortigosa v. Brown, 47 L. J., Ch. 168; and see cases cited supra, this title, where blank transfers are held to be valid.

1. Ex parte Sargent, L. R., 17 Eq. 273.

2. Hibblewhite v. McMorine, 6 M. & W. 200, where Baron Parke says: "Assuming the instrument to be a deed, it was wholly improper if the name of the vendee was left out; and to allow it to be afterwards filled up by an agent appointed by parol. and then delivered, in the absence of the principal, as a deed, would be a violation of the principle, that an attorney to execute and deliver a deed for another must himself be appointed by deed. The only case cited in favor of the validity of a deed in blank, afterwards filled in, is that of Texira v. Evans, citing 1 Anst. 228, where Lord Mansfield held that a bond was valid which was given, with the name of the obligee and the sum in blank, to a broker to obtain money upon it; and he borrowed a sum from the plaintiff, and then inserted his name and the sum. But this case is justly questioned by Mr. Preston, in his edition of Shepp. Touch. 68, 'as it assumes there could be an attorney without deed;' and we think it cannot be considered to be law. On the other hand, there are several authorities that an instrument which has a blank in it, which prevents it from having any operation when it is sealed and delivered, cannot become a valid deed by being afterwards filed up." Tayler v. Great Indian Peninsula R. Co., 4 De G. & J. 559; Société Générale v. Tramways Union Co., 14 Q. B. Div. 424.

3. Bishop v. Globe Co., 135 Mass. 132; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 161.

4. Hibblewhite v. McMorine, 6 M. & W. 200; Tayler v. Great Indian Peninsula R. Co., 4 De G. & J. 559.

5. In re Balkis Consolidated Co., W. N. C. (1888) 3.

6. In Bishop v. Globe Co., 135 Mass. 132; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 161, the court said: "The blanks in the instrument of transfer for the name of the transferee, the number of shares to be transferred, and the name of the attorney, have not been filled, and the instrument was not under seal as required by the by-laws of the defendant. As we understand from the report, only the word 'seal' between brackets, was written or printed on the instrument, and this was not a seal. Bates v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 10 Allen (Mass.) 251."

7. Bank of Ireland v. Evans' Charities, 5 H. L. Cas. 389; Darcy v. Tamar, etc., R. Co., L. R., 2 Exch. 158; Weeks v. Maillardet, 14 East 568; Nation's Case, L. R., 3 Eq. 77.

8. In re Barnerd's Banking Co., L. R., 3 Ch. 105.

long been disregarded in practice.¹ So, where the non-observance of a requirement is due to the negligence of the corporation,² or where the latter unjustly refuses registration,³ the prescribed formalities are thereby waived. Moreover, in general, those requirements which are intended for the benefit of the corporation may be waived by it.⁴ Payment of dividends to a registered transferee,⁵ or the enrollment of his name on the list of stockholders,⁶ or the failure of the company to provide books of transfer,⁷ will constitute a waiver of the requirement of registration. A provision requiring the consent of the directors to a transfer may, when valid at all, be waived by them.⁸ But the company is not bound to notify a transferrer of its refusal to permit registration, and a failure to do so will not waive the requirement.⁹ Where the directors are empowered to refuse to register an irresponsible transferee, undue delay by them in acting will not effect a waiver of the condition precedent that the transferee must be responsible.¹⁰

3. Steps in the Transfer.—The transfer of shares in a corporation usually involves three separate acts: viz., the assignment of the certificate, the surrender of the certificate to the corporation, and registration of the transfer on the books of the company. Each of these proceedings is important in itself, and will be treated separately.

a. ASSIGNMENT OF CERTIFICATE.—While an assignment in writing is at once the most common and the safest mode of transferring the certificate, it does not appear to be essential to pass title to the shares. For where no certificate has ever been issued to the stockholder, his transferee may, nevertheless, acquire com-

1. Richmondville Mfg. Co. v. Prall, 9 Conn. 487; Walter's Case, 3 De G. & S. 149; Chambersburg Ins. Co. v. Smith, 11 Pa. St. 120.

2. Ex parte Bagge, 13 Beav. 162; Bargate v. Shortridge, 5 H. L. Cas. 297.

3. Robinson v. National Bank, 95 N. Y. 637, where the court says: "The requirement of a registry, existing only for its own protection and convenience, must be deemed waived and non-essential when it wrongfully refuses to obey its own rule. (Isham v. Buckingham, 49 N. Y. 220; Billings v. Robinson, 94 N. Y. 415.)" Compare Bond v. Mt. Hope Iron Co., 99 Mass. 505; 97 Am. Dec. 49; Chouteau Spring Co. v. Harris, 2 Mo. 382; State v. McIver, 2 S. Car. 25; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Richards, 6 Mo. App. 454; 74 Mo. 77.

4. Robinson v. National Bank, 95 N. Y. 637; Taylor v. Hughes, L. R., 6 Ir. Eq. 480.

5. Cutting v. Damerel, 88 N. Y. 410.

6. Upham v. Burnham, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 431.

7. Isham v. Buckingham, 49 N. Y. 220, where the court says: "It has never been held that a corporation can avail itself of its own negligence as a basis of a cause of action against a stockholder, nor that it is not competent to waive a performance of its own rules, nor that it may not be estopped by its own acts and official declarations, the same as natural persons. If it did not provide a transfer book or did not transfer the stock according to the prescribed form, the fault was its own and not the defendant's. It could waive the observance of any other rules which it had adopted." See also Purchase v. New York Exch. Bank, 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 164; Billings v. Robinson, 94 N. Y. 420.

8. Chambersburg Ins. Co. v. Smith, 11 Pa. St. 120; Ex parte Walton, 3 Jur. N. S. 853; 26 L. J., Ch. 545.

9. Gustard's Case, L. R., 8 Eq. Cas. 438.

10. Shipman's Case, L. R., 5 Eq. 219.

plete title.¹ So the mere manual delivery of the certificate to another may be sufficient to vest in him the ownership of the stock.² The common mode of assignment is the execution of an instrument of transfer coupled with a blank power of attorney and signed by the owner of the stock.³ The validity of this method has been firmly established by usage and judicial sanc-

1. First Nat. Bank v. Gifford, 47 Iowa 575. In this case the court said: "The by-law of the plaintiff referred to in the nineteenth finding provides 'that certificates of stock shall be signed by the president and cashier, with the seal of the corporation attached, . . . and registered in a book kept for that purpose. Certificates may be assigned by indorsement on the back, but no transfer of stock shall be valid except when made on the books of the bank, and upon the return of the certificate to be transferred.' The former owner of the stock, Mr. Ochs, delivered the certificate held by him to Porter, and the stock was assigned by the former to the latter by means of what is termed a transfer ticket, and an entry thereof was made in the transfer book of the bank. No certificate was ever issued to Porter, and the Ochs certificate was canceled, or at least the defendant does not claim that it was ever assigned to him. It is useless to consider what would be the rights of the defendant if a certificate had been issued to Porter, and by him assigned to the defendant, and no transfer entered on the books of the bank, for no such state of facts is presented by the finding. As between Porter and the corporation he was the undoubted owner of the stock. No certificate was required to perfect his title. It mattered not whether one ever was issued. He being such owner, and the bank not chargeable with notice of defendant's rights, Porter had the right to sell and transfer said stock, and the bank was bound to recognize his transferee as owner. Whatever title Porter had was obtained by Smith and Whitaker. It seems to us that the transfer on the books of the bank was sufficient to make Porter's title full and complete. A stock certificate would only be additional evidence of his title, but it was by no means essential. The foregoing views are supported by the following authorities: Agricultural Bank v. Burr, 24 Me. 263; Dutton v. Connecticut Bank, 13 Conn. 493; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30; Bank of Commerce's Appeal, 73 Pa. St. 59; Chouteau Spring Co. v. Harris, 20 Mo. 383."

In Brigham v. Mead, 10 Allen (Mass.) 245, an owner of stock for which the corporation had not yet issued certificates, effected a sale. Sometime afterward the company offered to issue certificates upon the payment of an assessment which had been levied since the sale. The court held that it was the duty of the purchaser to pay this assessment and said: "The transfer of the property as between the parties was effected by the bill of sale. The purpose of a certificate is not to make the transfer, but to furnish a species of evidence of a transfer which has already taken place between the parties. It is important for several collateral purposes; but not for the purpose of a transfer as between the parties. The issuing of a certificate is not the act of the vendor, but of the corporation." See also Boatmen's Ins., etc., Co. v. Able, 48 Mo. 136; Rio Grande Cattle Co. v. Burns, 82 Tex. 50; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 306.

2. Walsh v. Sexton, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 251; Allerton v. Lang, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 362. Compare Burrall v. Bushwick R. Co., 75 N. Y. 211; Sitgreaves v. Farmers, etc., Bank, 49 Pa. St. 359; Fraser v. Charleston, 11 S. Car. 486.

3. The procedure is thus described at length by Mr. Justice Chitty, in Colonial Bank v. Hepworth, 36 Ch. Div. 44, where the litigation involved the transfer of shares in the New York Central Railroad Company: "The normal mode of transfers, as appears from the documents themselves and the evidence, is as follows: The transfer and power of attorney are signed by the registered shareholder whose name appears on the face of the certificate, and his signature is attested by a witness. The name of the transferee is filled in and the documents are taken to the office of the company; the certificates are surrendered and canceled, and a new certificate is issued to the transferee whose name has been entered on the tion,¹ and a complete title may thus be vested in the transferee.² The blank may be filled out by any bona fide holder, with the number of the shares and the name of the attorney,³ and such insertions, when made, cause the transfer to relate back to the date of the assignment.⁴ But, of course, the blanks cannot be register. According to a practice which has extensively prevailed and has been recognized and acted upon by the company, the transferrer signs the transfer and power of attorney; and these blank transfers readily pass on the market from hand to hand by delivery only until the documents reach the hands of some holder who desires to be registered. His name is then filled in by himself or on his behalf. The documents are then left with the company, the certificates are canceled, the transferee is registered, and new certificates in his name are issued in the manner already described."

1. In McNeil v. Tenth Nat. Bank, 46 N. Y. 331, Rapallo, J., says: "The common practice of passing the title to stock by delivery of the certificates with blank assignments and power, has been repeatedly shown and sanctioned in cases which have come before our courts. Such was established to be the common practice in the city of New York, in the case of New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 41, and the rights of parties claiming under such instruments were fully recognized in that case. And in the case of Kortright v. Buffalo Commercial Bank (20 Wend. (N. Y.) 91, and 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 348), the same usage was established as existing in New York and other states, and it was expressly held that even in the absence of such usage, a blank transfer on the back of the certificate, to which the holder has affixed his name, is a good assignment; and that a party to whom it is delivered is authorized to fill it up, by writing a transfer and power of attorney over the signature." See also Walker v. Detroit Transit R. Co., 47 Mich. 338; Cutting v. Damerel, 88 N. Y. 410; Holbrook v. New Jersey Zinc Co., 57 N. Y. 616; Pennsylvania R. Co.'s Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 80; German Union Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Sendmeyer, 50 Pa. St. 67; Ex parte Sargent, L. R., 17 Eq. 273; Ortigosa v. Brown, 47 L. J. Ch. 168; In re Barnard's Banking Co., L. R., 3 Ch. 105. Also Colonial Bank v. Hepworth, 36 Ch. Div. 36; Williams v. Colonial Bank, 36 Ch. Div.

659; Nanney v. Morgan, 57 L. T. Rep. 48.

2. Cutting v. Damerel, 88 N. Y. 414; Holbrook v. New Jersey Zinc Co., 57 N. Y. 624; Driscoll v. West Bradley, etc., Mfg. Co., 59 N. Y. 101.

3. Holbrook v. New Jersey Zinc Co., 57 N. Y. 623; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30; McNeil v. Tenth Nat. Bank, 46 N. Y. 331; Kortright v. Buffalo Commercial Bank, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 91; 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 348; Leavitt v. Fisher, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 2; Broadway Bank v. McElrath, 13 N. J. Eq. 24; Matthews v. Massachusetts Nat. Bank, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 396; Bridgeport Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 30 Conn. 231; Otis v. Gardner, 105 Ill. 436; Mount Holly Turnpike, etc., Co. v. Ferree, 17 N. J. Eq. 117; Prall v. Tilt, 28 N. J. Eq. 479; Hawkins v. Maltby, L. R., 3 Ch. 188; Walker v. Bartlett, 18 C. B. 845; 86 E. C. L. 844; Colonial Bank v. Hepworth, 36 Ch. Div. 36; Ex parte Sargent, L. R., 17 Eq. 273; Winter v. Belmont Min. Co., 53 Cal. 428; Sewall v. Boston Water Power Co., 4 Allen (Mass.) 277; 81 Am. Dec. 701; Leitch v. Wells, 48 N. Y. 585; Persch v. Quiggle, 57 Pa. St. 247.

4. Bridgeport Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 30 Conn. 274, where the court says: "We are satisfied that in this country the rule of law is that a blank power of attorney, although under seal, may be filled up in conformity with the agreement of the parties, and when so filled up takes effect as of its date. The rule we suppose to be otherwise in England, where the old principle of the common law on the subject is more rigorously applied, and where the policy of the stamp system influences their decisions. The cases in this country in which the view taken by us is supported are numerous, and may be found in Redfield on Railways, § 35; and Mr. Redfield, himself a jurist of much learning and of long experience on the bench, gives it as his opinion that the doctrine of the American cases is decidedly preferable to that of the English. Nor can any reason be assigned, which is founded in good sense and is not entirely tech-filled up so as to give the instrument a legal effect contrary to the intention of the parties.¹ It is said that the power of attorney is in the nature of things irrevocable by implication,² and, at any rate, the death³ or bankruptcy⁴ of the transferrer, even when occurring before the exercise of the power, does not revoke it.

b. SURRENDER OF CERTIFICATE—(1) In General.—The second step, normally, in the transfer of shares is the delivery of the assigned certificates by the transferrer to the corporation. As is shown elsewhere, it is not only the right of the company to prescribe this formality, but, when prescribed, compliance with it should be insisted on as a precautionary measure. The requirement often appears in the form of by-laws,⁵ but a mere provision to this effect on the face of the certificate is sufficient to make its surrender necessary,⁶ and it has been even held that the renical, why a blank in an instrument under seal may not be filled up by the party receiving it, after it is executed, as well as any other contract in writing, where the parties have so agreed at the time. In either case the contract, when the blank has been filled, expresses the exact agreement of the parties and nothing but an extreme technical view, derived from the ancient law of England can justify the making of any distinction between them."

1. Buffalo Commercial Bank v. Kortright, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 358. Compare Mechanics' Banking Assoc. v. Mariposa Co., 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 395; Denny v. Lyon, 38 Pa. St. 98; 80 Am. Dec. 463.

2. "An express declaration that the power is irrevocable is, indeed, sometimes made, and then no question can arise. But the intention of the parties is usually to be gathered only from the circumstances under which the power is given and from the objects to be accomplished by its use. Now, if the object of the power is to put the property beyond the control of the principal, it is very evident that he is not to have power to take the property back again at pleasure. When the owner of the stock sells it, it is clear that he does not intend the passage of the legal title to depend upon the continuance of his life; it is clear, therefore, that a power of attorney, given to a purchaser of stock in order to enable him to transfer it on the books of the corporation, is irrevocable. And it is equally clear that a power of attorney, given as part of a security, cannot be revoked by the principal, for otherwise the chief object in taking the security would be lost." Lowell, Transfer of Stock, p. 42-3, citing Story on Agency, § 477; Wharton on Agency, § 95; Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 174; Marziou v. Pioche, 8 Cal. 522; Bonney v. Smith, 17 Ill. 531; Gilbert v. Holmes, 64 Ill. 548.

3. Fraser v. Charleston, 11 S. Car. 486; Merry v. Lynch, 68 Me. 94; Leavitt v. Fisher, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 1; Davis v. Lane, 10 N. H. 156; U. S. v. Cutts, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 144. Compare Knapp v. Alvord, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 205; 40 Am. Dec. 241.

"It is not merely that the principal has given to his agent a power to sell the stock and has contracted that he will transfer the stock as the attorney desires, or even that he will accept as his own the future act of the attorney; but he has, in effect, granted away the right to sell, and the attorney transfers by virtue of a right that has become vested in himself. The right is derived from the principal, it is true, but it has been conveyed to the attorney. This is not a case of estoppel, for it is a matter of right, not of excuse; and it makes no difference that the death of the principal is known. He has simply conveyed something which he cannot recall in his lifetime, and which is not destroyed by his death." Lowell, Transfer of Stock, § 42.

4. Dayton Nat. Bank v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 37 Ohio St. 208.

5. First Nat. Bank v. Gifford, 47 Iowa 575; State v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 30 La. Ann. 308; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Robbins, 35 Ohio St. 483. See also Seligson v. Brown, 61 Tex. 114; 18 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 143.

6. In Cushman v. Thayer Mfg. Co., quirement was imposed by a statute which provided for transfer by delivery of the certificates.¹ Where no other condition is required for transfer than the surrender of the certificate, the corporation, after such requirement has been complied with, is estopped to claim that the shares are not transferable.² It is not essential to the title of the transferee that new certificates be issued to him.³

(2) Effect of Failure to Surrender.—While a provision regarding the surrender of the old certificate is imperative so far as the corporation is concerned, what the effect of its non-observance is, as between the parties to the transfer, is less certain. In a leading New York case it is said that "The non-production and surrender of the certificate at the time of the transfer, is not fatal to the title of the transferee. It is only essential to the safety of the corporation."⁴ The court below had held in the same case that provisions like the one under consideration could not affect third parties who were ignorant of their contents.⁵ On the other hand it is held that a by-law requiring the surrender and cancellation of certificates is for the company's benefit only, and that a transfer without complying therewith is valid as against an attaching creditor of the vendor.⁶ There is high authority for the rule that the purchaser must see that his vendor's certificate has been surrendered,⁷ but this decision has been somewhat severely

76 N. Y. 370, Miller, J., said: "The assignments to Beals, which, it is claimed, are entitled to priority, bore date sometime after the transfer to plaintiff. As they were subsequent to such transfer, and as by the certificate the stock was only transferable upon the books of the company upon a surrender of the same, no title could pass, unless the transfer was thus made." See also First Nat. Bank v. Lanier, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 369; Platt v. Birmingham Axle Co., 41 Conn. 255; Smith v. Crescent City, etc., Co., 30 La. Ann. 1378; Brisbane v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 25 Hun (N. Y.) 438.

1. Factor's, etc., Ins. Co. v. Marine, etc., Co., 31 La. Ann. 149.

2. Driscoll v. West Bradley, etc., Mfg. Co., 36 N. Y. Super. Ct. 488.

3. First Nat. Bank v. Gifford, 47 Iowa 575; Chouteau Spring Co. v. Harris, 20 Mo. 382. See also Comins v. Coe, 117 Mass. 45.

4. Per Davis, J., in New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 81. This was a part of the extensive litigation which arose out of the great frauds perpetrated by Robert Schuyler, the President of the New York & New Haven Railroad, between 1846 and 1854. His fraudulent acts consisted chiefly in the issue and sale of spurious stock.

"A regulation that stock shall be transferred only on surrender of the certificates does not render a transfer without the surrender of the certificates invalid. A person who obtains a transfer in violation of the rule gets the legal title of the stock, and, if he is a bona fide purchaser for value, his title cannot be assailed in equity; because, if the corporation makes no objection to the transfer, he may presume that no certificate has been issued, or that it has already been surrendered and canceled. He has no means of knowing about these facts, but the corporation knows from its books whether a certificate is outstanding or not." Lowell, Transfer of Stock, § 122.

5. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30.

6. Seligson v. Brown, 61 Tex. 114; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 143.

7. Moore v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 111 U. S. 156; Hall v. Rose Hill, etc., Road Co., 70 Ill. 673; Seligson v. Brown, 61 Tex. 114; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 143. In the first case the plaintiff, Mrs. Moore, made an extensive loan to the cashier of the defendant bank, accepting as security there-criticised.¹ It is held that the owner of outstanding certificates has no right of action against one who purchases without requir-

for a certificate of shares of stock in the bank for an amount equal to the loan, and which were claimed by the cashier to represent stock owned by him. The certificates contained a provision requiring surrender before transfer, but nothing of the kind was done, and, in fact, the certificate was one which the president of the bank had signed in blank, and had left for use in case of need, and which the cashier had fraudulently filled out and delivered to plaintiff. The cashier being insolvent, Mrs. Moores brought an action against the bank for the value of the certificate. The reasoning of Mr. Justice Gray concerning the effect of the cashier's acts is as follows: "The certificate which he delivered to the plaintiff was not in his name, but in hers, stating that she was entitled to so much stock, and showed, upon its face, that no certificate could be issued without the surrender of a former certificate and a transfer thereof upon the books of the bank. The by-laws, passed under the authority expressly conferred by the act of Congress under which the bank was organized, contained a corresponding provision, designed for the security of the bank as well as persons taking legal transfers of stock without notice of any prior equitable title therein. Union Bank v. Laird, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 390; Black v. Zachary, 3 How. (U. S.) 513. The very form of the certificate was such as to put her upon her guard. She was not applying to the bank to take stock, as an original subscriber or otherwise; but she was bargaining with Robert B. Moores for stock which she supposed him to hold as his own. She knew that she had not held or surrendered any certificate, and she never asked to see his certificate or a transfer thereof to her; and he in fact made no surrender to the bank or transfer on its books. She relied on his personal representation, as the party with whom she was dealing, that he had such stock; and she trusted him as her agent to see that the proper transfer thereof was made in the books of the bank. Having distinct notice that the surrender and transfer of a former certificate were prerequisites to the lawful issue of a new one, and having accepted a certificate that she owned stock, without taking any steps to assure herself that the legal prerequisites to the validity of her certificate which were to be fulfilled by the former owner and not by the bank, had been complied with, she does not, as against the bank, stand in the position of one who receives a certificate of stock from the proper officers without notice of any facts impairing its validity."

1. The Doctrine Criticised.—In 29 Albany Law Journal 364, appears an extensive review by J. L. Thorndike, of the foregoing case of Moores v. Citizens Nat. Bank, 111 U. S. 156, from which the following excerpt is taken: "The circumstance that the person with whom the plaintiff dealt was the cashier, borrowing on his own account, is not alluded to as a ground of the decision, and the case is treated as if he had been any one else. The decision is placed simply on the ground that the certificate showed on its face that no certificate could be lawfully issued without the surrender of a former certificate and a transfer on the books. Now, it is submitted with deference that the certificate showed nothing of the kind. It contained the very common clause, quoted above, stating that the shares specified in the certificate were transferable only on the books of the bank on the surrender of this certificate. It says nothing about a former certificate or about previous transfers. And it is not the fact that it could not have been lawfully issued without the surrender of a former certificate. There might have been no former certificate, and the shares might have been transferred on the books of the bank many times from one owner to the other without any certificate having been issued. Shares are often properly transferred in this way by those who have many dealings in them. It is only when a certificate has been issued that its surrender is required upon a transfer. It is plain, therefore, that the certificate did not give the notice supposed, and if such notice had been given, it would have been contrary to the fact. It is mentioned in the opinion that the plaintiff had no notice of any irregularity otherwise than from the certificate. The certificate would have obviously given to any one else that saw it the same notice that it gave to the plaintiff. The consequences are startling, for, if the decision be sound, any one who purchased the shares from the plaintiff, and paid for them on the faith of the certificate, would have been affected with the same notice as the plaintiff, and so would have had no claim to damages against the bank. A corporation, therefore, will never be liable to any one who acts on the faith of a certificate improperly issued, if it contains the clause that the shares are transferable only on the books of the corporation on surrender of the certificate. If a purchaser taking such a certificate ascertains that the legal prerequisites were actually complied with, and that a former certificate was surrendered, the former certificate would also give him notice of similar prerequisites to its validity, and he would have to continue his inquiry into the fulfillment of legal prerequisites ad finitum. But was it in any way material that Mrs. Moores knew (as she must have known) that there must have been a valid transfer of the shares to her before a certificate that she was entitled to them could lawfully be issued? The certificate was a representation by the bank that everything had been done that ought to have been done to make her the owner of the shares. This is the only ground on which a corporation is ever liable to one who acts on the faith of a certificate. The step Mrs. Moores took to assure herself that the legal prerequisites were complied with, was to get the certificate of the bank to that effect before she parted with her money. Saying that she knew it could not be lawfully issued unless the legal prerequisite, a transfer of the shares to her, had been complied with, is only equivalent to saying that she knew the representation ought not to have been made unless it was true. Yet it was because she knew this (who does not?), that she was held not entitled to recover. It should be added that if this legal prerequisite to the validity of the certificate had been complied with, she certainly would have had no cause of action."

ing a surrender of the old certificate,¹ though the rule seems to be different if the purchaser knows that his vendor had already

And in Lowell on the Transfer of Stock, p. 123, n. 2, the author thus criticises the above named case: "In the first place, it is said that the corporation has power to waive the rule which requires a surrender of the outstanding certificate before transfer . . . and if this is true, it follows that a purchaser of stock has no notice of any defect in his title, even if he knows the new certificate was issued to him without the surrender of an old one. Again, it is to be noticed that the rule which requires the surrender of the old certificate when stock is transferred limits the authority of the agent, and although the form of the certificate gives notice of this limitation to the purchaser, yet, without any such rule, the agent would have no authority to issue a new certificate except when stock had been transferred by the owner, and this every purchaser must know without any special notice in the certificate. If, therefore, the purchaser in the principal case was bound to see that the old certificate had been surrendered, it would seem that a purchaser ought to be bound, in any case, to see that the former owner has in fact transferred his stock. But such a doctrine would mean that a corporation could never be liable to the first holder of a certificate fraudulently issued. Thirdly, the rule laid down in the principal case does not allow the purchaser to presume that the transfer is properly made unless he has reason to suspect the contrary, but obliges him to discover facts which lie peculiarly within the knowledge of the agent of the corporation; for the officers of the corporation certainly have peculiar means of knowing whether a certificate has been issued, and whether it has ever been canceled. If it were an uncommon thing for a purchaser to receive a fresh certificate in his own name without seeing the certificate of his vendor, the case would present a different aspect, for in that case the absence of the certificates would naturally cause the purchaser to suspect that something was wrong. But, as a matter of fact, far from being uncommon, this mode of conveying stock is customary among brokers, and most of the transfers of stock are now made in that way."

1. Baker v. Wasson, 53 Tex. 150.

transferred the unsurrendered certificates, the element of fraud, actual or constructive, then entering into the case.¹

c. REGISTRATION—(1) Importance and Necessity.²—Most modern corporations have a provision, either in their acts or articles of incorporation, charters, or by-laws, that stock shall be transferable only upon the books of the company. The question of the effect of a failure to observe this requirement has been answered by the courts in several ways. There is a substantial agreement in the cases that a transfer, in other respects regular, but without the required registration, is valid as between the parties, and passes the interest of the transferrer.³ But where the rights of third parties, innocent purchasers, or creditors, are in judgment, the authorities are at variance as to the effect of the unregistered

1. Scripture v. Francetown Soapstone Co., 50 N. H. 571.

2. In this connection questions arise, at once the most complicated and important of those concerning the law of stock. The subject derives additional interest from its relation to the question of land transfer reform. Should the present movement for the adoption of the "Torrens" or Australian system of registration of title prove successful, resulting legal problems must arise, in the solution of which, the principles already applied to the law of the transfer of stock, will afford much light. See articles in 25 Am. L. Rev., pp. 367, 755, 806. Report of Am. Bar Ass'n. 1890, President's Address.

3. Unregistered Transfer Passes the Transferrer's Interest.—Duke v. Cahawba Nav. Co., 10 Ala. 82; 44 Am. Dec. 472; People v. Elmore, 35 Cal. 652; Ross v. Southwestern R. Co., 53 Ga. 514; Parrott v. Byers, 40 Cal. 614; Farmer's, etc., Bank v. Wasson, 48 Iowa 336; 30 Am. Rep. 398; People's Bank v. Gridley, 91 Ill. 457; Otis v. Gardner, 105 Ill. 436; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 643; Bruce v. Smith, 44 Ind. 1; Bank of America v. McNeil, 10 Bush (Ky.) 54; Smith v. Crescent City Live Stock, etc., Co., 30 La. Ann. 1378; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Sewell, 35 Md. 238; Swift v. Smith, 65 Ind. 428; 14 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 111; 57 Am. Rep. 336; Nesmith v. Washington Bank, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 324; Sargent v. Essex, etc., R. Corp., 9 Pick. (Mass.) 202; Brown v. Smith, 122 Mass. 589; Dickinson v. Metacomet Nat. Bank, 130 Mass. 132; Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90; 19 Am. Dec. 306; Newberry v. Detroit, etc., Iron Co., 17 Mich. 41; Baldwin v. Canfield, 26 Minn. 43; Lund v. Wheaton

Roller Mill Co. (Minn.), 52 N. W. Rep. 268; St. Louis Perpetual Ins. Co. v. Goodfellow, 9 Mo. 149; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Richards, 6 Mo. App. 454; Carroll v. Mullanphy Sav. Bank, 8 Mo. App. 249; Chouteau Spring Co. v. Harris, 20 Mo. 382; White v. Salisbury, 33 Mo. 150; Wilson v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. (Mo. 1891), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 290; Scripture v. Francetown Soapstone Co., 50 N. H. 587; Broadway Bank v. McElrath, 13 N. J. Eq. 24; Leavitt v. Fisher, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 1; Bates v. New York Ins. Co., 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 238; Gilbert v. Manchester Iron Mfg. Co., 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 627; Comeau v. Guild Farm Oil Co., 3 Daly (N. Y.) 318; Stebbins v. Phoenix F. Ins. Co., 3 Paige (N. Y.) 350; Cutting v. Damerall, 23 Hun (N. Y.) 339; Mechanics' Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 13 N. Y. 599; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30; Cushman v. Thayer Mfg., etc., Co., 76 N. Y. 365; 32 Am. Rep. 315; Haldeman v. Hillsborough, etc., R. Co., 2 Handy (Ohio) 101; Conant v. Reed, 1 Ohio St. 298; U. S. v. Vaughan, 3 Binn. (Pa.) 394; 5 Am. Dec. 375; Wood v. Maitland, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 84; Bank of Commerce's Appeal, 73 Pa. St. 59; Beckwith v. Burrough, 13 R. I. 294; Lippitt v. American Wood Paper Co., 15 R. I. 141; Cornish v. Richards, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 1; Rio Grande Cattle Co. v. Burns (Tex. 1891), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 306; Ex parte Murphy, 51 Wis. 519; Black v. Zacharie, 3 How. (U. S.) 513; Johnston v. Laffin, 103 U. S. 804; Becker v. Wells Foundry Mill Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 62; Crawford v. Provincial Ins. Co., 8 U. C. C. P. 263; Société Générale v. Walker, L. R., 11 App. Cas. 20; Colonial Bank v. Hepworth, L. R., 36 Ch. Div. 36; 19

transfer; some holding that it gives the transferee a legal title, or one that will protect him, and some that it passes only an equitable title, inferior to the prior rights of third parties.¹ A few of the cases appear to announce different distinctions, holding that the element of notice determines the priorities, and that

Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 480; Roots v. Williamson, L. R., 38 Ch. Div. 485; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 444.

Some of the early Connecticut cases appear to announce the doctrine that no title (legal or equitable) passes without the required registry. Marlborough Mfg. Co. v. Smith, 2 Conn. 579; Northrop v. Newton, etc., Turnpike Co., 3 Conn. 544; Oxford Turnpike Co. v. Bunnell, 6 Conn. 552.

So in New York: Commercial Bank v. Kortright, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 362. But the later authorities are in line with the text. See Colt v. Ives, 31 Conn. 25; 81 Am. Dec. 161; and New York cases above cited.

Where the corporation has no register, an assignment on the back of the certificate makes the transferee the equitable owner, and after notice to the corporation, he is entitled to the dividends. Telford, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Gerhab (Pa.), 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 471.

Where the corporation neglects to provide transfer books, as required by law, and the certificate is not signed by the officers, but the transfer is acquiesced in, original stockholders are not liable for unpaid stock and subsequently transferred stock. Isham v. Buckingham, 49 N. Y. 216.

An unregistered transferee from the lawful owner takes priority from an unregistered purchaser in good faith from one who has the certificate in his possession without authority. Bangor Electric Light, etc., Co. v. Robinson, 52 Fed. Rep. 520.

1. Equities of Transferee and Prior Claimants. — Lowell's Transfer of Stock, p. 103, note, collates and classifies the authorities as follows: "In the following cases this is made part of the ratio decidendi: Ross v. Southwestern R. Co., 53 Ga. 532; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Richards, 6 Mo. App. 463; 74 Mo. 77; Carroll v. Mullanphy Sav. Bank, 8 Mo. App. 252 (but see other Missouri cases infra, this note); McNeil v. Tenth Nat. Bank, 46 N. Y. 325; 7 Am. Rep. 341; Scripture v. Frances-town Soapstone Co., 50 N. H. 571 (semble); Leitch v. Wells, 48 N. Y. 585; Smith v. American Coal Co., 7

Lans. (N. Y.) 317; Noyes v. Spaulding, 27 Vt. 420; Cherry v. Frost, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 13. In the following cases the same principal was laid down obiter: State v. Leete, 16 Nev. 250; Eastman v. Fiske, 9 N. H. 182; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30; Grymes v. Hone, 49 N. Y. 17; 10 Am. Rep. 313; Johnson v. Underhill, 52 N. Y. 203; Holbrook v. New Jersey Zinc Co., 57 N. Y. 623; Cushman v. Thayer Mfg., etc., Co., 76 N. Y. 371; 32 Am. Dec. 315; and see Purchase v. New York Exchange Bank, 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 164. In Adderly v. Storm, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 624, Bronson, J., draws this distinction: if the stock is transferred by means of an assignment which is to be recorded on the books, the title passes before the record is made; but if the parties prefer to convey the stock by executing a power of attorney to make a transfer on the books, the title does not pass until the transfer is made on the books. But such a distinction does not seem to be in accordance with the object of the rule, or with the intention of the parties.

"That the legal title does not pass until transfer on the books. In the following cases . . . this principle is made a part of the ratio decidendi: Union Bank v. Laird, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 390; Lowry v. Commercial, etc., Bank, Taney's Dec. (U. S.) 310; Brown v. Adams, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 181; Williams v. Mechanics Bank, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 59; Becher v. Wells Flouring Mill Co., 1 Fed. Rep. 276; Marlborough Mfg. Co. v. Smith, 2 Conn. 579; Northrop v. Newton, etc., Turnpike Co., 3 Conn. 544; Oxford Turnpike Co. v. Bunnell, 6 Conn. 552; Dutton v. Connecticut Bank, 13 Conn. 493; Vansands v. Middlesex Co. Bank, 26 Conn. 144; Coleman v. Spencer, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 197; Helm v. Swiggett, 12 Ind. 194 (semble); Weyer v. Second Nat. Bank, 57 Ind. 198; Fisher v. Essex Bank, 5 Gray (Mass.) 373; Boyd v. Rockford Steam Cotton Mills, 7 Gray (Mass.) 406; Blanchard v. Dedham Gas Light Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 213; M'Courry v. Suydham, 10 N. J. L. 245; Stebbins v. Phoenix F. Ins. Co., 3 Paige (N. Y.) 350; Mechanics Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 13 N. Y. 599;

New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 534 (but see later New York cases, supra); Lockwood v. Mechanics Nat. Bank, 9 R. I. 331; 11 Am. Rep. 253. In the following cases the same doctrine is laid down obiter: Black v. Zacharie, 3 How. (U. S.) 483; U. S. v. Cutts, 1 Sumn. (U. S.) 133 (this was, however, a case of government debt, not of corporate stock); Planters, etc., Mut. Ins. Co. v. Selma Sav. Bank, 63 Ala. 585; Otis v. Gardner, 105 Ill. 436 (semble); 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 643. And see Kellogg v. Stockwell, 75 Ill. 68; People's Bank v. Gridley, 91 Ill. 457; Bruce v. Smith, 44 Ind. 1; State v. First Nat. Bank, 89 Ind. 302; Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 382; 1 Am. Rep. 115; 97 Am. Dec. 107; Sibley v. Quinsigamond Nat. Bank, 133 Mass. 519; White v. Salisbury, 33 Mo. 150; Boatmen's Ins., etc., Co. v. Able, 48 Mo. 136 (but see other Missouri cases, supra); Conant v. Reed, 1 Ohio St. 298; U. S. v. Vaughan, 3 Binn. (Pa.) 394; 5 Am. Dec. 375; Bank of Commerce's Appeal, 73 Pa. St. 59; Fraser v. Charleston, 11 S. Car. 486 (semble).

"In the following cases the question is raised but no opinion upon it is given: Johnston v. Laffin, 103 U. S. 800; 5 Dill. (U. S.) 65; People v. Robinson, 64 Cal. 373; Colt v. Ives, 31 Conn. 25; 81 Am. Dec. 161; Green Mount, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Bulla, 45 Ind. 1; Broadway Bank v. McElrath, 13 N. J. Eq. 24; Com. v. Watmough, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 117; Finney's Appeal, 59 Pa. St. 398; State Ins. Co. v. Gennett, 2 Tenn. Ch. 105. See also Bank of America v. McNeil, 10 Bush (Ky.) 54. The case of Fiske v. Carr, 20 Me. 301, turned on a statute which provided expressly that the title should not pass until transfer on the books.

"In the following cases nothing is said of the legal title, but it is laid down that the rule avails bona fide purchasers: People v. Elmore, 35 Cal. 653; Winter v. Belmont Min. Co., 53 Cal. 428; Skowhegan Bank v. Cutler, 49 Me. 315; Wonson v. Fenno, 129 Mass. 405. (In this case no transfer rule appears, but doubtless there was one.) Cady v. Potter, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 463. (No transfer rule appears in the report, but the case professes to follow the case New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30, supra) Sabin v. Bank of Woodstock, 21 Vt. 353. And see Morrison v. Harrison, 3 Rettie 406."

Additional and Later Authorities.—

To the foregoing list of cases may be added under the first head (that the legal title passes): Duke v. Cahawba Nav. Co., 10 Ala. 82; 44 Am. Dec. 472; Smith v. Crescent City Live Stock, etc., Co., 30 La. Ann. 1378; Sargent v. Essex, etc., R. Corp., 9 Pick. (Mass.) 202 (where simply by-laws required registry); Newberry v. Detroit, etc., Iron Co., 17 Mich. 141; Pinkerton v. Manchester R. Co., 42 N. H. 424 (diligence required of pledgee); Broadway Bank v. McElrath, 13 N. J. Eq. 24; Hunterdon Bank v. Nassau Bank, 17 N. J. Eq. 496; Commercial Bank v. Kortright, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 348; Fraser v. Charleston, 11 S. Car. 486; Cheever v. Meyer, 52 Vt. 66.

"A complete equitable and legal title passes by the act of the owner in assigning the certificate." Smith v. Nashville, etc., R. Co. (Tenn. 1892), 18 S. W. Rep. 546.

Where the owner has his stock registered in the name of a third party, the legal title is in the latter. Dawson v. Rishworth, 1 B. & Ad. 574.

In Wilson v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. (Mo. 1891), 18 S. W. Rep. 286; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 290, it was held that where only a by-law required registration a transferee's title was good against that of an execution creditor who had no notice of the transfer at the time of the levy, but received notice before he purchased at the execution sale. But see Jones v. Latham, 70 Ala. 164; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 172.

The rights of an assignee, without the required registration, are superior to those of subsequent attaching creditors, if notice be given to the corporation. State Ins. Co. v. Gennett, 2 Tenn. Ch. 100; State Ins. Co. v. Sax, 2 Tenn. Ch. 507. So where the corporation refuses to register the transfer. Merchants Nat. Bank v. Richards, 6 Mo. App. 454.

In England, a pledge of blank certificates signed by the pledgor passes legal title, if the articles of incorporation do not require a deed; otherwise only equitable title. Ex parte Sargent, L. R., 17 Eq. 273.

Under the second head (that the legal title does not pass without registration): Weston v. Bear River, etc., Water, etc., Co., 5 Cal. 186; 63 Am. Dec. 117; Strout v. Natoma Water, etc., Co., 9 Cal. 78; Naglee v. Pacific Wharf. Co., 20 Cal. 529; Otis v. Gardner, 105 Ill. 436; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp.

a bona fide transferee without notice of existing equities will be protected.¹ Still others construe the requirement as one existing

Cas. 643; Hall v. Rose Hill, etc., Road Co., 70 Ill. 673; Ft. Madison Lumber Co. v. Batavian Bank, 71 Iowa 270; 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 419; Koons v. First Nat. Bank, 89 Ind. 178; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 176; Dane v. Young, 61 Me. 160; Swift v. Smith, 65 Md. 428; 14 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 111; 57 Am. Rep. 336; Baltimore, etc., Brick Co. v. Mali, 65 Md. 93; 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 49; 57 Am. Rep. 304; Pinkerton v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., 42 N. H. 424; Wight v. Steinkemeyer, 6 Mo. App. 575; Worrall v. Judson, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 210; Richards v. Abendroth, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 162; Cady v. Potter, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 463; Cutting v. Damerel, 23 Hun (N. Y.) 339; Shellington v. Howland, 53 N. Y. 371; Wehrman v. Reakirt, 1 Cin. Sup. Ct. Rep. (Ohio) 230; Lippett v. American Wood Paper Co., 15 R. I. 141; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 125; Becher v. Wells Flouring Mill Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 62.

"The true view, it is submitted, is that such a transfer does not pass the legal title, but that it passes the equitable interest, coupled with irrevocable power to acquire the legal title. This view avoids the objection of disregarding the language of the statute prescribing the mode of transfer and also explains the decisions in Redfearn v. Ferrier, 1 Dow. 50, and Dodds v. Hills, 2 H. & M. 424, where a purchaser for value from a trustee of stock, without notice of the trust, was allowed to retain the stock, although before registration he learned of the trust." Ames, Bills and Notes, vol. 2, p. 784.

Where the lien of execution against stock has attached before notice to the creditor of a prior unregistered transfer, the purchaser at the execution sale takes a good title, though he had actual notice of the transfer. Jones v. Latham, 70 Ala. 164; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 172. But see Wilson v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. (Mo. 1891), 18 S. W. Rep. 286.

Where the transferee fails to register as required, and delays in claiming the ownership and transferrer goes into insolvency, the transferee has no lien on the stock as against the trustee in insolvency. Shipman v. Aetna Ins. Co., 29 Conn. 245; In re London, etc., Tel. Co., L. R., 9 Eq. 653.

A partner in whose name the stock was registered, upon inchoate transfers to the firm, is entitled to it upon the bankruptcy of the firm. Colonial Bank v. Whinney, 51 L. T., N. S. 354.

Unregistered transfer of stock as collateral passes no title as against a subsequent attachment, if no demand for registry is made until after the levy. Abels v. Mobile Real Estate Co. (Ala. 1891), 9 So. Rep. 423; Planters, etc., Ins. Co. v. Mobile Real Estate Co. (Ala. 1891), 9 So. Rep. 423. But an entry on the register that stock has been assigned as collateral, will protect the assignee from the claims of the assignor's judgment creditors. Moore v. Marshalltown Opera House Co., 81 Iowa 45.

Where stock is transferable only on the books of the company, and the administrator of the assignor received the accrued dividends before the assignee registered the transfer, the latter cannot compel payment to him of the same dividends. Brisbane v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 25 Hun (N. Y.) 438.

A corporation which attaches stock of one of its members, which has been transferred but not registered, is not chargeable with such transfer, nor is the latter effectual against the corporation, though one of the directors who took no part in causing, and had no knowledge of the attachment knew of the transfer. Butterick v. Nashua, etc., R. Co., 62 N. H. 413.

In Maine, under Rev. Sts., § 411, ch. 46, in force in 1860, no transfer of bank stock will secure it from attachment until entered on the corporate books; to hold the transferee liable there must be proof that the transfer was so recorded; and the verbal statement of the cashier to that effect, will not suffice. Skowhegan Bank v. Cutler, 49 Me. 315.

A pledgee who fails for ten years to register his transfer, cannot claim title as against the corporation and purchaser of the stock at an execution sale. Noble v. Turner, 69 Md. 519; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 438. See also Société Générale v. Walker, L. R., 11 App. Cas. 20; Colonial Bank v. Hepworth, L. R., 36 Ch. Div. 36; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 480; Roots v. Williams, L. R., 38 Ch. Div. 485; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 444.

1. Notice as Affecting Validity of Transfer.—Otis v. Gardner, 105 Ill.

for the benefit of the corporation alone, liable to be waived by it, and not to be invoked by third parties.¹ Sometimes the subject 436; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 643; Atkinson v. Atkinson, 8 Allen (Mass.) 15; Broadway Bank v. McElrath, 13 N. J. Eq. 24; Johnson v. Laflin, 5 Dill. (U. S.) 84; 103 U. S. 800; Dodds v. Hills, 2 H. & M. 424; 12 L. T. 139. Compare Winter v. Montgomery Gas Light Co., 89 Ala. 544; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 57. See also an interesting discussion of this point in Lowell on the Transfer of Stock, § 99. Contra, Stebbins v. Phoenix F. Ins. Co., 3 Paige (N. Y.) 350; Lockwood v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 9 R. I. 308; 11 Am. Rep. 253; Union Bank v. Laird, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 390.

Where the assignee gives notice of his ownership to the corporation, the purchaser from the receiver of the original holder acquires no title. Purchase v. New York Exch. Bank, 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 164.

A bona fide transferee must be a purchaser without notice and for value; merely giving security for the purchase money, or credit upon a pre-existing debt, is not sufficient to constitute one a purchaser for value. Weaver v. Barden, 49 N. Y. 292.

A letter from the assistant treasurer of the company, referring to another letter, wherein the receiver of the first claims ten shares of stock, is not notice to the company of an unregistered transfer. Brisbane v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 94 N. Y. 204; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 135.

The purchasers of stock are not bound to look beyond the certificate or to examine the books of the corporation to ascertain the validity of the transfer. Lowry v. Commercial, etc., Bank, Taney's Dec. (U. S.) 310.

Registration vests the legal title in the holder and clothes him with all the insignia of ownership, and the apparent right of possession; and a bona fide purchaser from him is not affected by an equity as to the title to the stock of which the registration holder has notice, although the transfer to the purchaser has not been registered. Winter v. Montgomery Gas Light Co., 89 Ala. 544; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 57.

The doctrine of lis pendens does not apply to the transfer of stock. Leitch v. Wells, 48 N. Y. 585; Holbrook v. New Jersey Zinc Co., 57 N. Y. 616.

The purchaser of a judgment enjoining the corporation from transferring stock, cannot recover from it, if the stock was transferred before the injunction was granted. Hawes v. Gas Consumer's Ben. Co., 12 N. Y. Supp. 924.

1. Duke v. Cahawba Nav. Co., 10 Ala. 82; 44 Am. Dec. 472; Southwestern R. Co. v. Thomason, 40 Ga. 408; Ross v. S. W. R. Co., 53 Ga. 514; Smock v. Henderson, 1 Wils. (Ind.) 241; Blouin v. Liquidators of Hart, 30 La. Ann. 714; Smith v. Crescent City Live Stock, etc., Co., 30 La. Ann. 1378; Baldwin v. Canfield, 26 Minn. 55; Lund v. Wheaton Roller Mill Co. (Minn. 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 268; St. Louis Perpetual Ins. Co. v. Goodfellow, 9 Mo. 149; Stockwell v. St. Louis Mercantile Co., 9 Mo. App. 133; Mt. Holley, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Ferree, 17 N. J. Eq. 117; Bank of Utica v. Smalley, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 770; 14 Am. Dec. 526; Gilbert v. Manchester Iron Mfg. Co., 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 627; Comeau v. Guild Farm Oil Co., 3 Daly (N. Y.) 218; National Bank v. Robinson, 95 N. Y. 637; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 548. See also 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 653; Smith v. Nashville, etc., R. Co. (Tenn. 1892), 18 S. W. Rep. 546. In many of these cases the discussions of the point are largely obiter.

In Bank of Utica v. Smalley, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 770; 14 Am. Dec. 526, the court said: "The transfer, it is said, was not valid, because it was not registered in a book kept by the company for that purpose, the sixth section of the act providing that no transfer of stock shall be effectual until it is so registered, and all debts due from the stockholder to the company are paid, etc. This provision was intended exclusively for the benefit and protection of the bank. Their lien upon the stock for any debts due them cannot be affected by a transfer of the stock; and the only notice of a transfer which they are bound to regard, is a registry of it in their books. Payment of dividends to the original stockholder at any time before the assignment was registered would probably be good. The legislature intended by this section to afford to the bank a means of ascertaining with certainty who they were bound to consider and treat as stockholders. But if A, being a stockholder in the is dealt with by statute,¹ and, where this is the case, the question is simplified and set at rest.

(2) What Constitutes Registration.—As a general rule courts will place a liberal construction upon requirements as to the manner in which registration is to be effected. It has been held that the term “registered” does not mean the same as “recorded;” that registration does not involve the copying of the transfer on the proper books in haec verba; and that a memorandum on the stub books of the corporation will suffice.² A requirement of transfer on the books of the corporation does not necessitate the keeping of a separate set of books for that exclusive purpose, but the other books of the company may be utilized.³ Under a statute which requires transfer on the corporate books in such manner as the by-laws may prescribe, entries on the stubs of certificates in the stock register constitute a sufficient record of transfers, and a stockholder who has failed to adopt this method is not excluded from registry because no by-law prescribing the mode was enacted.⁴ It is not necessary that the book be attested by bank, and also indebted to the bank, transfer his stock to B, all his interest passes. It is a valid transfer as between A and B, but B takes it subject to the claims of the bank against A.”

A provision requiring transfer in person or by attorney, is waived by permitting transfer in other ways. American Nat. Bank v. Oriental Mills (R. I. 1891), 23 Atl. Rep. 795.

1. As, for example, in California, Kentucky and Montana, in which states the statutes provide that unrecorded transfers (in California, of bank stock) shall be valid only as between the parties; in Alabama, Connecticut and Massachusetts, where registry is required; in Colorado, where, in the absence of registry, the transferrer is liable on unpaid subscriptions.

Where the requirement of registration exists merely in a by-law, a transfer without registration is not invalid. Wilson v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 108 Mo. 588; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 290.

2. Fisher v. Jones, 82 Ala. 117; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 450. In this case the company kept only a single book of stock certificates with a stub attached to each, on which were entered the date, name, serial numbers, etc., corresponding with each certificate issued. The following memorandum was entered on the stub: “Transf. to Winston Jones, assignee, for collateral, Dec. 1, '84.” The statute required transfers to be registered or made upon the book or books of the company. The court, by Somerville, J., said:

“The word ‘registration’ in our judgment, is used here in the sense of memorials or evidence. The purpose of the statute on this subject is so as to prevent fraudulent transfers, and to protect the corporation itself in determining the question of membership, the right to vote, the payment of dividends, the other incidents of ownership. Scripture v. Francetown Soapstone Co., 50 N. H. 584; Cheever v. Meyer, 52 Vt. 66; Cook, Stocks, §§ 486-490; Jones v. Latham, 70 Ala. 164; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 172; Black v. Zacharie, 3 How. (U. S.) 483. A written memorandum in proper form would as well answer the purposes thus intended as a formal record.” See also Skowhegan Bank v. Cutler, 52 Me. 509.

3. In Cecil Nat. Bank v. Watson-town Bank, 105 U. S. 217, the court, by Matthews, J., said: “All that is necessary, when the transfer is required by law to be made upon the books of the corporation is, that the fact should be appropriately recorded in some suitable register or stock list, or otherwise formally entered upon its books. For this purpose, the account in a stock ledger, showing the names of the stockholders, the number and amount of the shares belonging to each, and the sources of their title, whether by original subscription and payment, or by derivation from others, is quite suitable, and fully meets the requirements of the law.”

4. In Plumb v. Bank of Enterprise, 48 Kan. 484, the court, by Johnston, J., all the corporate officers; one which the cashier of the bank testifies is its stock ledger, is a proper place for entries required to be made upon the "books of the bank."¹ In an early New Jersey case,² where the charter provided for transfer on the "books of the company in such manner as the by-laws of the company shall ordain," the court considered that until the company had books, and until by-laws had ordained the manner in which shares should be transferred, no legal transfer could be made. But in a later adjudication, where no stock ledger was kept as the law required, a transfer on the subscription list, indorsed upon the old certificate, and followed by the issue of a new one to the transferee, was held to be a ratification by the company and to relieve the transferrer.³ So, neglect by the company to provide corporate books for registration effects a waiver of that formality,⁴ and mere notice to the company of the transfer will suffice.⁵ Where the registration book has been lost, it is proper to open a new one, making it, so far as possible, a copy of the old, and the former may be used to ascertain who are voters, although the latter, if again produced, will govern with regard to transfers before the loss.⁶ Under a by-law requiring an assignment of transfers on the treasurer's book, a written assignment is necessary, and a mere entry of credit to the assignee, for the amount of the stock, will not be sufficient.⁷ Where, however, the requirement simply is said: "This record showed the date of issue, the number of the certificate, the number of shares included, and the name of the person to whom issued. The practice, in case of sales of stock, was to note the transfer upon the stub of the old certificate, then take up the old and issue a new certificate to the transferee. The number of the new certificate was specifically referred to on the stub of the old one; and by turning to the stub of the new certificate anyone could ascertain to whom the stock had been transferred, the time of the transfer and the form of the issue, and that the new had been issued in lieu of the old certificate. This, we think, was a sufficient record of the transfer, within the meaning of the statute. Fisher v. Jones, 82 Ala. 117; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 450. The statute does not provide the nature of the book to be kept, nor the manner in which stock shall be transferred, but provides that it shall be done in such manner as the by-laws may prescribe. The method pursued by the Kansas Harvester Company is the common mode of keeping a register of stockholders in a corporation; and a stockholder who knew, or must be held to have known, of this mode, is not in a position to complain of the want of facilities to register the transfer, or that no by-law had been enacted prescribing the manner of transfer. As to a stockholder, the common usage of the corporation supplies the place of such a by-law, and a member of a corporation can hardly claim exemption from liability on account of its neglect to enact one."

1. Skowhegan Bank v. Cutler, 52 Me. 509.

2. M'Courry v. Doremus, 10 N. J. L. 245.

3. Stewart v. Walla Walla Printing, etc., Co., 1 Wash. Ter. 521; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 229.

4. Isham v. Buckingham, 49 N. Y. 216; Purchase v. New York Exch. Bank, 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 164.

5. Crawford v. Prov. Ins. Co., 8 U. C. C. P. 263.

6. Schoharie Valley R. Case, 12 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 394.

7. Marlborough Mfg. Co. v. Smith, 2 Conn. 579, where the court, by Swift, J., says: "Though the form of the assignment is not pointed out, yet the by-law, on its fair construction, requires that there must be a written assignment on the treasurer's book, subscribed by the assignor, or his au-that the transfer shall be registered on the books of the company, a written assignment in pais is valid, though registration is not effected until afterward.¹ But the latter step must be taken within the statutory period, or the transfer will be void as to creditors and subsequent purchasers.² A by-law requiring the transfer to be entered and attested by the secretary is complied with substantially where the secretary is empowered to transfer certain stock and does so without signing the transfer as attorney, but by simply attaching the power.³ But registration is not effected by the delivery of the certificate of transfer to a corporate officer with the request that he transfer it,⁴ nor by the entry by the clerk on the instrument of transfer of the words "Received for record,"⁵ nor by a letter from the transferee to the president of the company stating that the former holds the certificates and desires transfer on the books.⁶ Registration at a branch office is not effective until entered on the books at the principal office, where such principal office is in another state.⁷

(3) Application for Registry.—The phrase "Transferable only on the books of the company," requires, when coupled with a provision for the surrender of the certificate, a transfer by the corporate officers, and not by the assignor of the stock.⁸ In making a formal demand for registration, it is not necessary that the applicant should seek the directors and have one appointed who may comply with the demand; it is sufficient to apply at the principal office during business hours and to the officers and agents there in attendance.⁹ An application to the president is thorized attorney, to constitute a transfer of the stock. In this case, no assignment is made on the treasurer's book, but merely an entry of credit to the defendant of the share in question. This is no compliance with the by-law, and does not transfer the share to the defendant so as to constitute him a member of the company. Whether such acts were done by the directors as would have given the defendant a claim on the company for the dividends of the share, if the business had been profitable, is a very different question, not necessary to be decided." Compare Union Bank v. Laird, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 390.

1. Northrop v. Curtis, 5 Conn. 246; Northrop v. Newtown, etc., Turnpike Co., 3 Conn. 544.

2. Berney Nat. Bank v. Pinchard, 87 Ala. 577; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 52.

3. Chambersburg Ins. Co. v. Smith, 11 Pa. St. 120.

4. Brown v. Adams, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 181.

5. Oxford Turnpike Co. v. Bunnell, 6 Conn. 552; Marlborough Mfg. Co.

v. Smith, 2 Conn. 579; Northrop v. Newtown, etc., Turnpike Co., 3 Conn. 544.

6. Newell v. Williston, 138 Mass. 240.

7. Pinkerton v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., 42 N. H. 424.

8. Green Mount, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Bulla, 45 Ind. 1.

9. Commercial Nat. Bank v. Kortright, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 348. The chancellor, in delivering the opinion of the court, further says: "In case they are not authorized to transact that particular business, they must either refer him to the proper officers in the bank, or procure the attendance of such officers, or of the board of directors, if necessary, without any unreasonable delay. The transferring the shares of the capital stock on the books of the bank is a matter of ordinary occurrence; and in the absence of any proof to the contrary, it may be fairly presumed that the principal officer or clerk in attendance at the bank, during the usual hours of business, is authorized to permit such a transfer when proper."

proper,¹ even though he has a personal interest to subserve in refusing registry.² So the cashier³ of a bank, and the corporation secretary,⁴ either alone or in conjunction with the treasurer,⁵ are proper persons to make demand upon for registry. The application should be granted at the instance of either of the parties to the transfer.⁶

(4) Wrongful Refusal of Registration—(a) What Constitutes.—While a corporation is justified in refusing to register transfers of stock from one who is indebted to it and whose stock is subject to a lien,⁷ or where there has been no surrender of the certificate,⁸ and in certain other instances,⁹ generally, the owner of the stock is entitled to registration, and a refusal to allow it may constitute conversion of the shares.¹⁰ Thus, registration cannot be refused because the transfer is without consideration¹¹ or is made for the purpose of distributing shares and commanding greater influence at an approaching corporate election,¹² nor because of a lien conferred¹³ or a resolution passed¹⁴ since the application for registry, nor because only a portion of the stock has been paid in, no more having been called for by the directors,¹⁵ nor on account of an agreement between the company and the applicant's vendor that he should not transfer his stock,¹⁶ nor by reason of the fraudulent

1. Green Mount, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Bulla, 45 Ind. 1.

2. Commercial Nat. Bank v. Kortright, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 348. In this case the president of the bank had pledged certain shares as collateral, and the pledgee had re-transferred them, and then absconded, being in debt to the bank. His transferee applied to the pledgor for registry and this was held to be sufficient.

3. Case v. Citizens' Bank, 100 U. S. 446.

4. McMurrich v. Bond Head Harbour Co., 9 U. C. Q. B. 333.

5. In re Goodwin v. Ottawa, etc., R. Co., 13 U. C. C. P. 254.

6. Johnston v. Laffin, 103 U. S. 804; Webster v. Upton, 91 U. S. 71.

7. See infra, this title, Lien of the Corporation on Stock.

8. See supra, this title, Surrender of Certificate.

9. See supra, this title, Issue.

10. In Rio Grande Cattle Co. v. Burns, 82 Tex. 50; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 306, where the company refused either to issue a certificate or allow registration, the court said: "That these acts amount to a conversion under the law is well settled by the authorities, and that thereupon it was at the election of the plaintiff to have either sued for specific performance or in assumpsit upon the case for damages, the measure of which would ordinarily be the market value of the stock converted. The plaintiff pursued practically, though not technically (being unnecessary under our system) the latter course, and recovered the value of the stock. Mor. Priv. Corp., §§ 337, 338, and notes; Kortright v. Buffalo Commercial Bank, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 91; Baker v. Wasson, 53 Tex. 150; Franco-Texan Land Co. v. Bousselet, 70 Tex. 422; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 359. It was not alleged nor proved that the stock was liable for any debts, or, for that matter, that the company was in debt at all."

11. Helm v. Swiggett, 12 Ind. 194. But see Gould v. Head, 41 Fed. Rep. 240; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 331.

12. In re Stranton Iron, etc., Co., L. R., 16 Eq. 559; Moffatt v. Farquhar, 7 Ch. Div. 591; State v. Smith, 48 Vt. 266; and see supra, this title, Motive and Effect of Transfer.

13. People v. Crockett, 9 Cal. 112. Compare Bond v. Mount Hope Iron Co., 99 Mass. 505; 97 Am. Dec. 49.

14. Reg. v. Hotel Co., L. J., Q. B. 369.

15. Kahn v. St. Joseph Bank, 70 Mo. 262.

16. Gould v. Head, 41 Fed. Rep. 240; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 331.

representations by such owner, made long previously, when the stock was issued to him.¹ And if the company has permitted the transfer on its books of a part of a bequest of shares, it cannot enforce its lien by refusing registry as to the remainder.² One who holds a certificate from the company is entitled to have his transferees registered, though his vendor previously sold the shares to another.³

(b) Remedies—(1) BILL IN EQUITY.—It is well settled that the registration of transfers may be enforced in equity⁴ and this has been said to be the “surest, most complete, and most just remedy.”⁵ Where evidence which demonstrates the applicant's right to registry is ignored by the corporation, it will be compelled not only to register the transfer, but will be charged also with the costs of the suit.⁶ In California, such an action cannot be joined with one to recover from the purchaser other stock sold under a fraudulent assessment.⁷ In an action by a purchaser at foreclosure sale to compel the issue of a certificate, the mort-

1. American Wire Nail Co. v. Bayless (Ky. 1891), 15 S. W. Rep. 10.

2. Presbyterian Congregation v. Carlisle Bank, 5 Pa. St. 345.

3. Tomkinson v. Balkis Consolidated Co. (1891), 2 Q. B. 614.

4. In Cushman v. Thayer Mfg., etc., Co., 76 N. Y. 365; 32 Am. Rep. 315, Miller, J., said: “To say that the holder shall not be entitled to the stock, because the corporation, without any just reason, refuses to transfer it, and that he shall be left to pursue the remedy of an action for damages, in which he can recover only a nominal amount, would establish a rule which would work great injuries in many cases, and confer a power on corporate bodies which has no sanction in the law. A court of equity will enforce a specific performance on a contract for the sale of real estate and compel the execution of a deed by the vendor to the vendee, although an action at law may be brought to recover damages for the breach of the contract. Such a case bears a striking analogy to the one now presented, and the same principle is manifestly applicable where the remedy in law is inadequate to furnish the proper relief;” citing Middlebrook v. Merchants' Bank, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 481; 27 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 474; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Kortright, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 348; Pollock v. National Bank, 7 N. Y. 274; 57 Am. Dec. 520; Purchase v. N. Y. Exch. Bank, 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 164; White v. Schuyler, 1 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 300; Buck- master v. Consumers' Ice Co., 5 Daly (N. Y.) 313; Seymour v. Delaney, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 222; 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 445.

“Although it might be the duty of the bank to permit such transfer, it would be difficult to sustain an action at law for refusing to open its books and permitting the transfer. Nor have the appellants shown such a claim to the stock as to authorize the court to turn the appellees round to their remedy at law, against Lynn, admitting they might have it. At all events, the remedy at law is not clear and perfect; and it is not a case for compensation in damages, but for specific performance which can only be enforced in a court of chancery.” Mechanics' Bank v. Seton, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 305. See also Jewett v. Bradford Sav. Bank, etc., Co., 45 Fed. Rep. 801; Iasigi v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 129 Mass. 46; Archer v. American Water Works Co. (N. J. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 508; Middlebrook v. Merchants' Bank, 3 Abb. Ct. of App. Dec. (N. Y.) 295; Buckmaster v. Consumers' Ice Co., 5 Daly (N. Y.) 313. Compare Birmingham v. Sheridan, etc., Ins. Co., 33 Beav. 660; Eustace v. Dublin, etc., R. Co., L. R., 6 Eq. 182; Wynne v. Price, 3 De G. & S. 310; In re Cawley, 42 Ch. Div. 209; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 425.

5. Cook, Stock and Stockholders (2d ed.), § 391.

6. Iasigi v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 129 Mass. 46.

7. Johnson v. Kirby, 65 Cal. 482.

gagor is not a necessary party,¹ nor is the corporation a necessary party in a suit against the officers to enforce registration.²

(2) ACTION AT LAW.—Assumpsit, or, in states having the code practice, an action for damages will generally lie for the wrongful refusal to register transfers.³ In Pennsylvania, however, it is held that assumpsit is not available, and that case is the proper remedy.⁴ The measure of damages has been variously held to be

1. Tregear v. Etiwanda Water Co., 76 Cal. 537; 27 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 489.

2. Gould v. Head, 41 Fed. Rep. 240; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 331.

3. In Kimball v. Union Water Co., 44 Cal. 175; 13 Am. Rep. 157, the court says: "It has been so frequently decided that a party entitled to stock in a private corporation has an action for damages against the corporation for the refusal of its officers to transfer the stock to him upon the company's books, that it must be considered as a settled principle of law;" citing Rex v. Bank of England, 2 Doug. 526; Shipley v. Mechanics' Bank, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 484; Wilkinson v. Providence Bank, 3 R. I. 22; Ex parte Fireman's Ins. Co., 6 Hill (N. Y.) 243; American Asylum v. Phoenix Bank, 4 Conn. 172; 10 Am. Dec. 112; Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90; 19 Am. Dec. 306.

In Kortright v. Buffalo Commercial Bank, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 94, the court, by Nelson, J., says: "It is contended, that the action should have been case instead of assumpsit. The former remedy, no doubt, would have been appropriate, perhaps the most appropriate, but the latter appears to be warranted by sufficient authority;" citing Rex v. Bank of England, 2 Doug. 523; Parbury v. Bank of England, Doug. 526n.; Gray v. Portland Bank, 3 Mass. 381; 3 Am. Dec. 156; Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 98; 19 Am. Dec. 306; Bank of Columbia v. Patterson, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 209; 2 Kent's Comm. 289, 291; Angel & Ames on Corp. 129. See also Hazard v. National Exch. Bank, 26 Fed. Rep. 94; Pinkerton v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., 42 N. H. 424; Helm v. Swiggett, 12 Ind. 194; Hill v. Pine River Bank, 45 N. H. 300; Arnold v. Suffolk Bank, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 424; Catchpole v. Ambergate R. Co., 1 El. & Bl. 111.

A pledgee of shares of bank stock brought suit against the bank for the value of the stock, a transfer having been refused by the bank after notice that the pledgor had been adjudicated a bankrupt. The pledgor's assignee in bankruptcy became a party to the suit and asked for an account of the amount due the pledgee and for a sale of the stock. His petition was granted. It was held that it was error for the court to render a further judgment; that in case the proceeds of the sale should be insufficient to satisfy the pledgee's claim, the bank should pay the deficiency not exceeding the difference between the proceeds of the sale and the value of the stock at the time of the refusal to permit the transfer. Dayton Nat. Bank v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 37 Ohio St. 208.

4. Telford, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Gerhab (Pa. 1888), 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 471. The supreme court affirms the case on the opinion of the nisi prius judge who, after saying that "The refusal was a tort, the necessary remedy for which was a special action on the case," proceeds as follows: "It cannot be said that there ever was a conversion of this stock by the turnpike company, so as to raise the implied promise to pay for it. The mere marking it upon the so-called transfer books as having been transferred to the bank was no conversion for the use of the turnpike company; nor was it any conversion at all, for such marking in itself conferred no title to the real ownership of the stock, nor deprived the lawful owner of his rights. In this regard, therefore, the marking the stock as transferred to the bank was a nullity; and the refusal of the company to mark the stock as transferred to Jacobs, in accordance with the practice of the company in changes of ownership, was simply a tort, and not such an one from which an implied contract can arise. The case of Bank of Montgomery v. Reese, 26 Pa. St. 143, cited by plaintiff's counsel, has no application; for there was an unlawful conversion of the stock by the bank to which the plaintiff was a stockholder ratably entitled, but from the benefit of which he was excluded.

the value of the shares at the time of the refusal,¹ or their highest price between such refusal and the commencement of the suit.²

(3) MANDAMUS.—On the question of the issue of the writ of mandamus to compel registration of transfers, there is a conflict of authority, probably a majority of the courts holding it not available, both because the applicant has an adequate remedy otherwise, and because registration is at best only a private property right of which enforcement should not be secured by the extraordinary writ.³ Still there is not wanting strong authority, both in numbers and eminence, for the doctrine that rightful registry

That was a tort, therefore, from which an implied promise arose upon which assumpsit could be sustained."

1. Gray v. Portland Bank, 3 Mass. 364; 3 Am. Dec. 156; Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90; 19 Am. Dec. 306.

2. Kortright v. Buffalo Commercial Bank, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 90; Clark v. Plinney, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 681.

3. Authorities Holding that Mandamus Will Not Lie.—Shipley v. Mechanic's Bank, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 484, is the leading American authority on this side of the controversy. It was an application by the assignees in bankruptcy of a stockholder in the defendant, the shares having been included in the inventory. The opinion, like most of those rendered by the New York court of that day, is a model of brevity, and is quoted entire: "The applicants have an adequate remedy, by a special action on the case, to recover the value of the stock, if the bank have unduly refused to transfer it. There is no need of the extraordinary remedy by mandamus, in so ordinary a case. It might as well be required in every case where trover would lie. It is not a matter of public concern as in the case of public records and documents; and there cannot be any necessity, or even a desire of possessing the identical shares in question. By recovering the market value of them, at the time of the demand, they can be replaced. This is not the case of a specific and favorite chattel, to which there might exist the pretium affectionis. The case of Rex v. Bank of England, 2 Doug. 524, is in point, and this remedy in that case was denied."

In Murray v. Stevens, 110 Mass. 96, the court said: "The writ of mandamus is not a writ of right, and is only to be granted at the discretion of the court. The question must always be, not merely whether it is within the power of the court to grant it, but whether, as a matter of sound judicial discretion, upon the special circumstances of the case under consideration, it ought to be granted. Without undertaking to lay down an invariable rule on the subject, we think it must be said that this process was not intended, and is not well adapted for the trial of mere questions of property. Where the relator merely seeks to be put in possession of corporate shares which have an ascertainable market value, or which can be bought in the market; and where the incidental rights of ownership (such as eligibility to corporate offices, or the right to vote at corporation meetings) do not depend upon the ownership of the specific shares which are in dispute, but could be as well and fully enjoyed by virtue of the ownership of an equal number of other shares, there would seem to be no occasion to resort to the extraordinary remedy of mandamus. The damages which the relator might recover in an action at common law for the violation of his rights would be exactly measured by the sum of money which it had cost him, or would have cost him, to obtain the same right in another way, namely by purchase. That is to say, with the amount in money of the market value of the shares in dispute they could be replaced."

Townes v. Nichols, 73 Me. 515, where it is said: "All the authorities declare that the remedy by mandamus cannot be resorted to in a case like this, unless the legal right of the petitioner to the possession of the thing sought for is clear and unquestionable. If there be doubt as to what his legal right may be, involving the necessity of litigation to settle it, mandamus must be withheld. Mandamus is the right arm of may be compelled by mandamus.¹ Where this is the rule, a demand by letter is sufficient, and the writ may issue upon non-compliance therewith.² But mandamus will not be granted where the relator is guilty of bad faith,³ nor where the certificates have been issued to another whose rights would be prejudiced,⁴ unless indeed the applicant shows a better title,⁵ nor even where the duty to register is prescribed by statute, unless the applicant's right to possession is clear and unquestionable.⁶

(5) Liability of the Corporation for Allowing Wrongful Registry—(a) Forged Transfers.—"Forgery can confer no power nor the law. Its principal office is not to inquire and investigate but to command and execute. It is not designed to assume a part in ordinary law suits or equitable proceedings. It is properly called into requisition in cases where the law has been settled, or in cases where questions of law or equity cannot properly and reasonably arise. Its very nature implies that the law, although plain and clear, fails to be enforced and needs assistance."

In Freon v. Carriage Co., 42 Ohio St. 40; 51 Am. Rep. 794, Johnson C. J., says: "Under our statute now in force, there is no such specific duty imposed as to transfers of shares in this corporation, but a general authority is given to manage the corporate business in the interest of all the stockholders? This power imposes a corresponding duty to make such by-laws and to keep such accounts and books as are necessary to the discharge of the duties imposed. If transfer books and registers of stock are necessary for this purpose, the law implies a duty to keep them, but we cannot say, that it is a duty specially enjoined by law, but rather an implied duty growing out of the trust relation, which the officers bear to the stockholders. We annex some of the many decisions in support of our conclusion: Rex v. Bank of England, 2 Doug. 524; Reg. v. Mid. Co., etc., R. Co., 9 L. T. R., N. S. 151; Stackpole v. Seymour, 127 Mass. 104; Birmingham Fire Ins. Co. v. Com., 92 Pa. St. 72; Rex v. London Assurance Co., 5 B. & Ald. 899; 7 E. C. L. 295; State v. Peoples Bldg., etc., Assoc., 43 N. J. L. 389; State v. Warren Foundry, etc., Co., 32 N. J. L. 439." See also Kimball v. Union Water Co., 44 Cal. 173; 13 Am. Rep. 157; Tobey v. Hakes, 54 Conn. 274; Bank of Georgia v. Harrison, 66 Ga. 696; Gray v. Portland Bank, 3 Mass. 364; 3 Am. Dec.

156; Stackpole v. Seymour, 127 Mass. 104; Baker v. Marshall, 15 Minn. 177; State v. Rombauer, 46 Mo. 155; State v. St. Louis Paint Mfg. Co., 21 Mo. App. 526; State v. Guerrero, 12 Nev. 105; Ex parte Fireman's Ins. Co., 6 Hill (N. Y.) 243; People v. Parker Vein Coal Co., 10 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 543; People v. Miller, 39 Hun (N. Y.) 557; Curry v. Scott, 54 Pa. St. 276; Birmingham F. Ins. Co. v. Com., 92 Pa. St. 72; Wilkinson v. Providence Bank, 3 R. I. 22; Rex v. Bank of England, 2 Doug. 524; Rex v. London Assurance Co., 1 D. & R. 510. Also Burnsville Turnpike Co. v. State, 119 Ind. 382.

1. Contrary Authorities.—People v. Goss, etc., Mfg. Co., 99 Ill. 355; Green Mount, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Bulla, 45 Ind. 1; State v. First Nat. Bank, 89 Ind. 302; State v. Cherau, etc., R. Co., 16 S. Car. 524; Crawford v. Provincial Ins. Co., 8 U. C. C. P. 263; Goodwin v. Ottawa R. Co., 13 U. C. C. P. 254; Reg. v. Carnatic R. Co., L. R., 8 Q. B. 299; Norris v. Irish Land Co., 8 El. & Bl. 512; 92 E. C. L. 511; Ward v. South Eastern R. Co., 2 El. & El. 812; Ex parte Sargant, L. R., 17 Eq. 273.

In People v. Crockett, 9 Cal. 112, the supreme court affirms a nisi prius order granting the writ, apparently as a matter of course, and without discussing the general right to do so.

2. State v. McIver, 2 S. Car. 25.

3. Reg. v. Liverpool, etc., R. Co., 21 L. J., Q. B. 284.

4. Bailey v. Strohecker, 38 Ga. 259; 95 Am. Dec. 88; State v. First Nat. Bank, 89 Ind. 302; Durham v. Monumental Silver Min. Co., 9 Oregon 41.

5. Reg. v. Charwood Forest R. Co., 1 C. & E. 419.

6. Slemmons v. Thompson (Oregon, 1892), 31 Pac. Rep. 514. Compare Bangor Electric Light, etc., Co. v. Robinson, 52 Fed. Rep. 520.

transfer any rights,"¹ and where a corporation has permitted the registry of a forged transfer, it must make reparation to the real owner.² This reparation may consist either in restoring the wronged party to the position of the registered stockholder and paying him accrued dividends,³ or in requiring the corporation to procure and transfer to plaintiff the equivalent of his shares,⁴ or in rendering an alternative decree for the value of the stock.⁵ This right to relief is not forfeited by negligence unless it be such as will amount to an estoppel.⁶ Thus, the owner's remedy is not barred by the negligence of his guardian,⁷ nor by the fact that

1. Field, J., in Western Union Tel. Co. v. Davenport, 97 U. S. 369.

2. "The officers of the company are the custodians of the stock books, and it is their duty to see that all transfers of shares are promptly made, either by the stockholders themselves or persons having authority from them. If upon the presentation of a certificate for transfer they are at all doubtful of the identity of the party offering it with its owner, or if not satisfied with the genuineness of a power of attorney produced, they can require the identity of the party in the one case, and the genuineness of the document in the other, to be satisfactorily established before allowing the transfer to be made. In either case they must act upon their own responsibility. In many instances they may be misled without any fault of their own, just as the most careful person may sometimes be induced to purchase property from one who has no title, and who may perhaps have acquired its possession by force or larceny. Neither the absence of blame on the part of the officers of the company in allowing an unauthorized transfer of stock, nor the good faith of the purchaser of stolen property, will avail as an answer to the demand of the true owner. The great principle that no one can be deprived of his property without his assent, except by the process of the law, requires in the case mentioned that the property wrongfully transferred or stolen should be restored to its rightful owner. The maintenance of that principle is essential to the peace and safety of society, and the insecurity which would follow any departure from it would cause far greater injury than any which can fall, in case of unlawful appropriation of property, upon those who have been misled or defrauded." Western Union Tel. Co. v. Davenport, 97 U. S. 371.

3. Gray, C. J., in Pratt v. Taunton Copper Co., 123 Mass. 112; 25 Am. Rep. 37, says: "It is quite clear that the plaintiff could not be deprived of her stock without consent or negligence on her part, and that the power of attorney in her name being forged, she may maintain each of these bills to compel the corporation to issue a certificate to her for her shares, and to pay her the dividends thereon. Ashby v. Blackwell, 2 Eden 299; Ambl. 503; Sloman v. Bank of England, 14 Sim. 475; Midland R. Co. v. Taylor, 8 H. L. Cas. 751; Pollock v. National Bank, 7 N. Y. 274; 57 Am. Dec. 520; Sewall v. Boston Water Power Co., 4 Allen (Mass.) 277; 81 Am. Dec. 701." See also Pratt v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 126 Mass. 443; Johnston v. Renton, L. R., 9 Eq. 181; Cottam v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 1 J. & H. 243; Davis v. Bank of England, 2 Bing. 293; 9 E. C. L. 444; Swan v. North British Australasian Co., 7 H. & N. 603; American Tel., etc., Co. v. Day, 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. 128; Dalton v. Midland R. Co., 12 C. B. 458; 74 E. C. L. 457; Baltimore v. Ketchum, 57 Md. 23; Coates v. S. W., etc., R. Co., 41 L. T., N. S. 553; Blaisdell v. Bohr, 68 Ga. 56; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Davenport, 97 U. S. 369.

4. Pratt v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 126 Mass. 443.

5. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Davenport, 97 U. S. 369; Pollock v. Nat. Bank, 7 N. Y. 274; 57 Am. Dec. 520.

6. Bank of Ireland v. Evans Charities, 5 H. L. Cas. 389.

7. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Davenport, 97 U. S. 369, where the court says, speaking of the guardian: "The negligence alleged consisted in the fact that she intrusted her brother with the key to the box in which they were deposited, when she knew that he was insolvent, and that he had used, some only of the shares specified in the certificate were indorsed on the back,¹ or that the owner delayed sufficiently long to permit the escape of the forger,² or that by his giving a wrong address, a letter of inquiry failed to reach him,³ or, that the owner, a corporation, intrusted its seal to the secretary who was responsible for the transfer.⁴ The transferee of a forged certificate, requiring on its face the surrender of the certificate, cannot recover from the corporation, if no such surrender has been made.⁵ The corporation only, but not the transferee of the forged certificate, is a necessary party,⁶ though it has been held that the latter may be joined.⁷ The corporation cannot maintain an independent suit and enjoin the stockholder's action,⁸ nor in England can it take advantage of the interpleader act.⁹ Equity has concurrent jurisdiction with law in granting the relief,¹⁰ and the Statute of Limitations runs only from the denial of liability by the corporation.¹¹

(b) Transfers in Breach of Trust.—Where transfers are required to be made upon the corporate books, the company may be liable for allowing registration of sales in violation of a trust of which the company is chargeable with notice, express or implied.¹² Thus, without her authority, funds received by him on a previous sale of a portion of her property; and the further fact, that when, in the summer of 1871, before leaving for Europe, she sent for the box, she returned it to the bank without examining its contents. . . . There is no circumstance here upon which an estoppel against the plaintiffs can be raised. To create an estoppel against them, there must have been some act or declaration indicating an authorization of the use of their names, by which the company was misled, or a subsequent approval of their use by acceptance of the moneys received, with knowledge of the transfer."

1. Sewall v. Boston WaterPower Co., 4 Allen (Mass.) 277; 81 Am. Dec. 701.

2. Davis v. Bank of England, 2 Bing. 393; 9 E. C. L. 444.

3. Johnston v. Renton, L. R., 9 Eq. 181, where, however, costs were adjudged against the stockholder.

4. Merchants', etc. v. Bank of England, 56 L. T. 665.

5. Moore v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 111 U. S. 156.

6. Pratt v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 126 Mass. 443, citing Pratt v. Taunton Copper Co., 123 Mass. 110; 25 Am. Rep. 37; Machinists' Bank v. Field, 126 Mass. 345; Salisbury Mills v. Townsend, 109 Mass. 115; Loring v. Salisbury Mills, 125 Mass. 138; West- ern Union Telegraph Co. v. Davenport, 97 U. S. 369; Dalton v. Midland R. Co., 12 C. B. 458; 74 E. C. L. 457; Duncan v. Luntley, 2 M. & G. 30, 2 H. & T. 78; Taylor v. Midland R. Co., 28 Beav. 287; 8 H. L. Cas. 751. See also Baltimore v. Ketchum, 57 Md. 23; Barton v. London, etc., R. Co., 59 L. T. Rep. 122.

7. Blaisdell v. Bohr, 68 Ga. 56.

8. American Tel., etc., Co. v. Day, 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. 28.

9. Dalton v. Midland R. Co., 12 C. B. 458; 74 E. C. L. 457.

10. Blaisdell v. Bohr, 68 Ga. 56.

11. Barton v. North, etc., R. Co., 58 L. T. Rep. 549.

12. Taft v. Presidio, etc., R. Co., 84 Cal. 131; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 625; Woodhouse v. Crescent Mut. Ins. Co., 35 La. Ann. 238; Albert v. Baltimore Sav. Bank, 1 Md. Ch. 407; Farmers', etc., Bank v. Wayman, 5 Gill. (Md.) 336; Stewart v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 53 Md. 564; Marbury v. Ehlen (Md. 1890), 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 1; Atkinson v. Atkinson, 8 Allen (Mass.) 15; Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 382; 1 Am. Rep. 115; Loring v. Salisbury Mills, 125 Mass. 138; Fisher v. Brown, 104 Mass. 259; 6 Am. Rep. 235; Holden v. New York, etc., Bank, 72 N. Y. 286; Bayard v. Farmers', etc., Bank, 52 Pa. St. 232; Bohlen's Estate, 75 Pa. St. 312; Peck v. Bank of America, 16 R. I. 710; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp.

Cas. 90; Magwood v. Railroad Bank, 5 S. Car. 379; Chapman v. Charleston, 28 S. Car. 373; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 396; Covington v. Anderson, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 310; Caulkins v. Memphis Gas Light Co., 85 Tenn. 683; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 400; Porter v. Bank of Rutland, 19 Vt. 410; Lowry v. Commercial, etc., Bank, Taney's Dec. (U.S.) 310; Mechanics' Bank v. Seton, 1 Pet. (U.S.) 299; Duncan v. Jaudon, 15 Wall. (U.S.) 165; Barton v. London, etc., R. Co., 24 Q. B. Div. 77; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 14; Hill v. Simpson, 7 Ves. 166.

"Corporations stand upon the footing of trustees, in relation to their stockholders, for the protection of their interests. Being custodians of the primary evidence of title to the stock, they are held to the exercise of reasonable care and diligence in its preservation. Their safety, therefore, requires them, before permitting a transfer, to be satisfied of the authority of the person to make it. Hence they are entitled to require the production of satisfactory evidence of such authority, and though, generally, the possession of the legal title is sufficient evidence thereof, it is not always so, since the real equitable ownership may be in some other than the holder of the legal right; and this is especially true of an executor, for it not infrequently happens that, under the provisions of the will, others are equitably interested in the stock. An unauthorized transfer, therefore, may work a serious wrong to the equitable owner; and if the corporation allows it to be made with notice of the want of authority, or if put upon inquiry, without proper investigation into the authority, it becomes a party to the wrong." Peck v. Bank of America, 16 R. I. 710; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 12.

"That a bank or other corporation, and also these defendants, are trustees to a certain extent for stockholders—that is, for the protection of individual interests—cannot be denied. They are alike trustees of the property and of the title of each owner. They have in their keeping the primary evidence of title, and they are justly held to proper diligence and care in its preservation. From this it results that they may rightfully demand evidence of authority to make a transfer before they permit it to be made. Their own safety requires that they be satisfied of the right of the person proposing to make a transfer to do what he proposes. Generally, sufficient evidence of such right is found in the possession of legal title to the stock. Yet it is well settled that it is not in all cases sufficient, notwithstanding that the true equitable ownership may be in some other than the holder of the legal right, and a transfer may be a gross wrong to such an equitable owner. To that wrong the corporation or keepers of the register make themselves parties, if, with knowledge that there is no equitable right to transfer, they permit it to be done." Bayard v. Farmers', etc., Bank, 52 Pa. St. 235.

In Taft v. Presidio, etc., R. Co., 84 Cal. 131; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 625, plaintiff had executed a very comprehensive power of attorney, authorizing another to dispose of and deal in shares of stock in the defendant company. The party to whom the power was given secured from the secretary a transfer of the stock to himself in his own name. The court held that the company was liable to the real owner for conversion of the shares, saying: "After a careful inspection of the power of attorney we are unable to discover any clause which even constructively authorized Bowman to convert the shares of his principal into shares of his own. And that is precisely what he did by the assistance of the appellant, without which he could not have converted them. Appellant invokes the familiar rule 'that where one of two innocent persons must suffer, the loss shall fall on him who has afforded the opportunity for the same.' But it was the appellant in this case who afforded the agent an opportunity to inflict loss upon his principal, and also aided him in inflicting it. As was said in Bayard v. Farmers', etc., Bank, 52 Pa. St. 235: 'With them (the corporation) was the registry, and transfers could be made only with their consent, by the surrender of the certificates and the issue of new ones.' We think it clear that a transfer not made by the party transferring, or some agent duly authorized, can have no effect. And we think in this case the transfer was not made by the owner of the stock, or by an agent duly authorized to make it as it was made, and, as respondent was divested of her property by the unauthorized act of appellant, it must be held responsible to her for the damage she has suffered in consequence of such wrongful act."

the registration of a transfer by only one of two trustees, though that one has a power of attorney from the other,¹ or of stock held in trust for a feme sole, to take effect upon her marriage,² will be sufficient to incur the liability. But a corporation is not liable for a transfer in breach of trust by the apparent and registered owner, unless it has notice thereof and its act directly contributes to loss of the stock by the cestui que trust.³ The remedy in states retaining the old procedure is in equity,⁴ and the court may decree a purchase by the corporation for the beneficiary of an amount of stock equivalent to that wrongfully transferred.⁵ A cestui que trust does not lose his right to present relief by having waived former breaches of trust,⁶ but he must show diligence in seeking his remedy.⁷ The action may be brought against the corporation alone without joining the purchaser or his transferees.⁸

(c) Transfers Without Surrender of Certificate.—The American authorities hold it to be the duty of the corporation to require the surrender of the transferee's certificates before permitting registry, and that a failure to insist upon this requirement will render the company liable to a bona fide purchaser of the outstanding certificate.⁹ This rule imposes no real hardship on the corporation,

1. Bohlen's Estate, 75 Pa. St. 304, decided on the principle that the trustee's power could not be delegated.

2. Magwood v. Railroad Bank, 5 S. Car. 379.

3. Smith v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 91 Tenn. 221; citing Lowell, Transfer of Stock, § 153.

4. Loring v. Salisbury Mills, 125 Mass. 138.

5. Bohlen's Estate, 75 Pa. St. 318.

6. Loring v. Salisbury Mills, 125 Mass. 138; holding also that a judgment against the trustee will not bar a suit against the company, except in so far as satisfaction has been obtained.

7. Albert v. Baltimore Sav. Bank, 1 Md. Ch. 407; 2 Md. 158.

8. St. Romes v. Levee Colton Press Co., 127 U. S. 614; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 507, where Bradley, J., says: "If a corporation has by negligence cancelled a person's stock, and issued certificates therefor to a third party who has purchased it from one not authorized to sell it, is the true owner bound to pursue such purchaser, or may he directly call upon the corporation to do him right and justice by replacing his stock, or paying him for its value? The weight of authority would seem to favor the latter alternative. See Western Union Tel. Co. v. Davenport, 97 U. S. 369; Loring v. Salisbury Mills, 125 Mass. 138; Pratt v. Taunton Copper Co., 123 Mass. 110; 25 Am. Rep. 37; Pennsylvania R. Co.'s Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 80; Loring v. Frue, 104 U. S. 223; Salisbury Mills v. Townsend, 109 Mass. 115."

9. "We think, that by thus making stocks transferable by mere delivery of the certificate, the law has intended to interdict corporations from transferring stocks on their books except upon surrender of the certificate, or upon proof of its loss or destruction. These certificates of stock have become such important factors in trade and credit that the law has intended to surround those who take them with the safeguards it accords to the holders of the other great agencies of commerce—bills, notes, bills of lading, etc." Factors, etc., Ins. Co. v. Marine, etc., Co., 31 La. Ann. 149.

"In this state of the case Lanier and Handy made their purchase of Culver. They bought for value, without knowledge of any adverse claim, in full faith that the bank would observe its engagements, and pursued in all respects the directions given in the certificates. They were not told to give notice to the bank of their purchase, nor was there any necessity for notice, because, by the rules of the bank, Culver could not transfer the stock in the absence of the certificates, and these they had in their possession. It is therefore clear, in making their purchase of Culver, that they had a right to rely on the certificates as securing to them the stock which they represented. And it is equally clear that the bank, in allowing this stock to be transferred to other parties while the certificates were outstanding in the hands of bona fide holders, was guilty of a breach of corporate duty, and as its conduct operated to the injury of Lanier and Handy, an action will lie in their behalf to obtain satisfaction for the injury." First Nat. Bank v. Lanier, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 378.

since it may protect itself by refusing registry without the production of certificates.¹ Even where the new certificates are issued upon apparently satisfactory evidence of loss of the originals, the corporation is not relieved from liability,² though it will not be compelled to pay accrued dividends to the plaintiff.³

"The meaning of the certificate was, that the company gave to some one an assurance—1st, that the person named in it as a stockholder, was such; 2d, that on the surrender of the certificate the stock mentioned in it was transferable on their books; 3d, that no transfer would be allowed without the surrender of the certificate—in effect that the party named in the certificate, or the holder of it under authority from such party, had the possession and control of the stock therein expressed. The issuing of such assurances was a lawful and proper exercise of the powers given by the charter; it was beneficial to the stockholders, not as giving them proof of title (which would always appear on the corporation books), but as giving proof to others of their title, of the transferability of the stock, and of the control which the possession of the certificate conferred." Bridgeport Bank v. New York, etc., R. Co., 30 Conn. 246.

"It cannot now be denied, that if a corporation having power to issue stock certificates does in fact issue such certificate, in which it affirms that a designated person is entitled to a certain number of shares of stock, it thereby holds out to persons who may deal in good faith with the person named in the certificate, that he is an owner and has capacity to transfer the shares. This proposition does not rest on any view of the negotiability of stock but on general principles appertaining to the law of estoppel." Holbrook v. New Jersey Zinc Co., 57 N. Y. 622.

In Cushman v. Thayer Mfg. Co., 76 N. Y. 371; 32 Am. Rep. 315, it is said: "Any act suffered by the corporation that invested a third party with the ownership of the shares, without due production and surrender of the certificate, rendered it liable to the owner; and it was its duty to resist any transfer in the books without such production and surrender;" citing Smith v. American Coal Co., 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 317; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 83. See also Strange v. Houston, etc., R. Co., 53 Tex. 162; Smith v. Crescent City, etc., Co., 30 La. Ann. 1378. Compare Comeau v. Guild Farm Oil Co., 3 Daly (N. Y.) 218.

The holder of the outstanding certificate may compel a cancellation of the registry. Lee v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 2 Cin. Super. Ct. 298.

The rule stated in the text seems never to have been declared in England. In Shropshire Union R., etc., Co. v. Reg., L. R., 7 H. L. 496, the court says obiter, that the question of permitting transfers without the surrender of the certificates is "entirely within the discretion of the directors. They were not bound to permit a transfer, without the production of the certificate; but though not bound to permit a transfer, I apprehend they would not be in any way answerable if the transfer should be in any case made without the production of the certificates of the shares." But see Hart v. Frontino, etc., Gold Min. Co., 15 Ex. 111; Société Générale v. Tramways Union Co., 14 Q. B. Div. 424.

1. State v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 30 La. Ann. 308; National Bank v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 21 Ohio St. 221; and see generally cases in preceding note.

2. Brisbane v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 94 N. Y. 204; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Robbins, 35 Ohio St. 483. In the latter case there was even a by-law providing for the issue of new certificates upon proving loss of the old ones and indemnifying the company.

3. Brisbane v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 94 N. Y. 204; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Robbins, 35 Ohio St. 483.

The rule does not obtain where no certificates have been issued,¹ and in the absence of fraud or collusion, the corporation, by merely permitting registry, does not guarantee the vendor's title.² Permitting registry in other than the prescribed modes is a breach of contract and not a tort.³

4. Particular Forms of Transfer—a. SALES—(1) Form and Validity of the Contract of Sale.—(See also FRAUDULENT SALES, vol. 8, p. 786; GAMBLING CONTRACTS, vol. 8, p. 992; ILLEGAL CONTRACTS, vol. 9, p. 879; ILLEGAL SALES, vol. 9, p. 923; STOCK BROKERS, vol. 23, p. 699.)

The general operation of the Statute of Frauds, as relating to stock, has been discussed above.⁴ An oral contract for the sale of shares, if part payment is made subsequently,⁵ is not avoided by the statute. A contract to purchase stock in a company not yet formed, is not within the provisions of the statute,⁶ nor is an agreement by the seller to repurchase.⁷ Neither an immediate delivery of certificates, nor a stipulated time therefor is essential.⁸ The lex loci of the sale has been held to be that of the state

1. First Nat. Bank v. Gifford, 47 Iowa 575.

2. Central R., etc., Co. v. Ward, 37 Ga. 515. See also Bishop v. Balkis Consolidated Co., 25 Q. B. Div. 77; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 38.

3. Chapman v. Charleston, 28 S. Car. 373; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 396.

4. See supra, this title, Statute of Frauds as Pertaining to Shares.

5. Thompson v. Alger, 12 Met. (Mass.) 428.

6. Gadsden v. Lance, 1 McMull. Eq. (S. Car.) 87; 37 Am. Dec. 548.

"We think the agreement thus set forth in the declaration, by which Green was to find a man to take stock to be thereafter created in a company thereafter to be organized through the means contemplated, and which stock as it originated should stand in the name of Brookins, was not an agreement on the part of Green to buy goods, wares and merchandise, within the meaning of the statute in question. This arrangement did not in strictness provide for a sale of the anticipated stock. In substance it was an arrangement by which, if Brookins would embark in the enterprise, Green undertook to procure someone to be substituted in Brookins' place as a shareholder and member of the company, if Brookins so desired." Green v. Brookins, 23 Mich. 54; 9 Am. Rep. 74.

But in Boardman v. Cutter, 128 Mass. 388, the court, in construing a contingent contract to purchase stock in a corporation about to be formed, said: "It has been decided by this court that shares in a corporation are 'goods, wares and merchandise,' within the Statute of Frauds. Tisdale v. Harris, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 9; Baldwin v. Williams, 3 Met. (Mass.) 365. There is some conflict in the decisions of other courts upon this point (see Somerby v. Buntin, 118 Mass. 279), but we do not feel called upon to overrule the two decisions above cited. As the defendant's contract in this case was not in writing, we see no ground upon which any action can be maintained upon it, without violating the Statute of Frauds. Gen. Sts., ch. 105, § 5. The fact that the plaintiff was induced to become one of the stockholders by the defendant's promise that he would at some future time buy the stock of the plaintiff at a specific price, does not change the essential character of the transaction."

7. Thorndike v. Locke, 98 Mass. 340; Fitzpatrick v. Woodruff, 96 N. Y. 561; Meyer v. Blair, 109 N. Y. 600; Bank of Lyons v. Demmon, Hill & D. Supp. (N. Y.) 398; Fay v. Wheeler, 44 Vt. 292; Morgan v. Struthers, 131 U. S. 246.

8. Bruce v. Smith, 44 Ind. 1, where the court says: "The performance of a contract, or the tender of performance, is no part of the contract. The making of a contract is one thing, but the performance thereof, or the tender of performance, is another and quite different thing. The contract set up where the certificates are delivered and not that where the contract is formed.¹ In the notes will be found various other instances illustrating the principles which govern the validity and enforcement of sales of stock.²

in the paragraph in question is an extraordinary one, by which the plaintiff agreed to sell to the defendant the shares of stock, and the defendant agreed to pay him therefor the sum of $2,500. No time was fixed for the performance; the law will imply, therefore, that it was to be performed immediately, or perhaps within a reasonable time. Had a future day been agreed upon for the performance of the contract on each side, there could have been no doubt as to its validity, or the right of either party to enforce it, he having done all he was required to do on his part. The fact that no time was agreed upon for performance does not change the character of the contract. The contract did not pass any title to the stock, but it was, nevertheless, a valid contract and one which either party can enforce, he having been in no default himself." Compare Kerchuer v. Gettys, 18 S. Car. 521; Cheale v. Kenward, 3 De G. & J. 27.

A contract for the sale of stock "payable and deliverable at seller's option, in this year, with interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum" effects a sale in præsenti, the vendor becoming a quasi trustee for the purchaser, who is entitled to all dividends thereafter accruing. Currie v. White, 45 N. Y. 822. But see Kelley v. Upton, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 336.

An option to purchase stock within three years is enforceable. Seddon v. Rosenbaum, 85 Va. 928. See Park v. Whitney, 148 Mass. 278.

1. Don v. Gould, etc., Silver Min. Co., 31 Cal. 629, where the court says: "The legality and sufficiency of the sale and assignment of the stock to the purchaser must also be ascertained by the provisions of the laws of this state, for the sale was not complete as between the parties until the certificates were delivered to the purchaser, and that act was performed in this state. There is a further reason for interpreting the contract by the lex rei sitæ already alluded to in discussing questions relating to the gift. Contracts respecting public funds or stock, bank stock and other property of that incorporeal character which owes its existence to, or is regulated by peculiar local laws, must be made and carried into execution according to those laws. They constitute exceptions to the rule requiring the validity of contracts respecting most sorts of personal property to be determined by the lex domicilii or the lex loci contractus, as the case may require. (Story, Conflict of Laws, § 383.) It is obvious that there may be peculiar reasons, and to which the law will give heed, why the stock of a mining corporation should be assigned in a certain mode, as by an instrument in writing, or by transfer upon the books of the corporation, or in any other mode prescribed by the local law."

2. Sales—Validity, etc.—Instances.—A sale, where the consideration was to be paid out of the net earnings of the stock, and a note was given in payment, conditioned that the principal should become due if the installments were not regularly paid, held to be valid. Dean v. Nelson, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 158.

A contract to furnish another with money to buy stock in a corporation formed to monopolize trade, is void. Richardson v. Buhl, 77 Mich. 632; 27 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 256.

The right of a stockholder to sell and pass the legal title ceases upon dissolution; if sold thereafter, purchaser takes it subject to all claims against the original stockholder in favor of the corporation. James v. Woodruff, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 541; affirmed, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 574.

Where the price was par value with a pro rata proportion of an anticipated dividend, it was held that the purchaser could recover back that portion of the price paid in anticipation of the dividend, upon the event proving that no dividend had been earned. Riggs v. Tayloe, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 687.

Where permission is given by an agent to enter upon the corporate books a transfer of reputed stock, no new certificate being given, does not amount to a representation by him that the person making the entry owned any genuine stock. Henning v. New York, etc., R. Co., 9 Bosw. (N. Y.) 283.

Where there is neither fraud nor warranty in the sale of stock, which, at the time, is apparently paid up, but is found to be in arrears, owing to a subsequent resolution of the directors, the transferee cannot recover from the seller the unpaid amount. Cunningham v. Spier, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 392.

No such confidential or fiduciary relation exists between the officers of a corporation and the stockholders, as will enable a stockholder to rescind a sale of his stock to the secretary where the latter, at the time of his purchase, discloses all the information he has, and conceals nothing concerning the condition of the corporation or the value of its stock. Krumbhaar v. Griffiths (Pa. 1892), 25 Atl. Rep. 64.

Where the seller is ready to transfer and comply with the rule requiring payment of calls before sale, he may recover from the purchaser refusing to accept. Shaw v. Rowley, 16 M. & W. 810.

Stock received and transferred on the same day, is in equity to be considered as received before it was transferred, although the numbers of the transfers may be such as to make the transfer by the assignor appear prior to that to him; unless it be proven that such transfer was made prior to the one by which the stock was assigned to the transferee. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 534.

Where the vendee gives in payment a draft on a third party to whom the vendor surrenders it upon receipt of a check, and the latter being dishonored, refuses to transfer, but does not tender back the check until trial, an action may be maintained for non-delivery. Sears v. Ames, 117 Mass. 413.

A purchase of all the corporate stock by two persons jointly, does not render them joint tenants, tenants in common, or partners, nor are they so rendered by the circumstance that the corporation has been without officers for more than two years. Russell v. McLellan, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 63.

Where the purchaser of shares of stock to be issued by a mining corporation pays the purchase price, and the corporation is prevented by an injunction from issuing the stock so that the vendor cannot perform his contract, the purchaser, after waiting a reasonable time and making demand for the repayment of the purchase money, may maintain an action therefor against the vendor's administrator. Rose v. Foord, 96 Cal. 152.

A signed and delivered to B a paper reciting that A held certain stock sold to B, and which, though standing in A's name belonged to B, subject to a payment of $8,000 with interest at same rate, and from same date as interest on A's purchase of C's stock. It was held, that this was an executed contract, by which the ownership of the stock passed to B, with a reservation of title, simply as security for the purchase money. Beardsley v. Beardsley, 138 U. S. 262.

The sale of all the stock of a corporation by the shareholders to the president of the corporation is not void as a withdrawal from the corporation, in violation of a statute requiring the capital stock of a corporation to "be paid into the treasury," where the stock has been paid in and transfer is made in accordance with the by-laws of the corporation. Parke County Coal Co. v. Terre Haute Paper Co., 129 Ind. 73.

A complaint alleged that the plaintiff exchanged land with the defendant for shares of the capital stock of a corporation of which the defendant was president; that the defendant knew the financial condition of the corporation and the value of its capital stock; that for the purpose of defrauding the plaintiff and to induce him to accept the stock, the defendant represented that the financial condition of the corporation was good and its capital stock was of par value; that for the purpose of preventing the plaintiff from ascertaining the condition of the corporation and the value of its capital stock, the defendant fraudulently requested the plaintiff not to make any inquiries as to the financial condition of the company, or as to the value of its capital stock, for the reason that he did not want other stockholders to know that he was selling his stock; that the plaintiff relying upon the representations of the defendant, exchanged his land for the stock; that the defendant knew at the time of making the representations, that the corporation was insolvent and its capital stock worthless. It was held, that the complaint stated a cause of action for damages caused by fraudulent representations, and was good against demurrer. Nysegander v. Lowman, 124 Ind. 584.

Parties who are interested in opposi-

(2) Parties to the Sale—(a) Corporation as Purchaser of Its Own Stock—

(1) LEGALITY.—In the United States the weight of authority supports the view that corporations have the implied power to acquire in good faith shares of their own capital stock.¹ In any event the transaction is valid as between the corporation and the seller.²

tion to the business of the corporation, have a right to purchase shares of its stock in order to defeat a contract which it is about to make. Carson v. Iowa City Gas Light Co., 80 Iowa 638.

In Perry v. Pearson, 135 Ill. 218, it was held that a contract between the directors and a stockholder of a corporation, regarding the sale of stock by the latter to the former, is not voidable by the latter on the ground of the trust relation between the parties, it appearing that the stockholder was also a director, and had taken charge of the business of the corporation.

A contract to sell stock to one forbidden by law to hold it, is unenforceable. State v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 6 Ohio Cir. Ct. Rep. 415.

A purchase of shares by two of the three stockholders in a corporation, under an agreement to "share and share alike," carries title in that proportion irrespective of the amount of stock owned at the time by the purchasers. Schilling, etc., Brewing Co. v. Schneider, 110 Mo. 83.

1. American Rule.—Cooper v. Fredericks, 9 Ala. 738; Robinson v. Beale, 26 Ga. 17; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Marseilles, 84 Ill. 145; Chetlain v. Republic L. Ins. Co., 86 Ill. 220; Clapp v. Peterson, 104 Ill. 26; Republic L. Ins. Co. v. Swigert, 135 Ill. 150; 32 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 555; Fraser v. Ritchie, 8 Ill. App. 554; Iowa Lumber Co. v. Foster, 49 Iowa 26; 21 Am. Rep. 140; Rollins v. Shaver Wagon, etc., Co., 80 Iowa 380; 33 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 291; Williams v. Savage Mfg. Co., 3 Md. Ch. 451; Leland v. Hayden, 102 Mass. 542; Dupee v. Boston Water Power Co., 114 Mass. 37; Crease v. Babcock, 10 Met. (Mass.) 525; City Bank v. Bruce, 17 N. Y. 510; Otter v. Brevoort Petroleum Co., 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 247; East New York, etc., R. Co. v. Lighthall, 36 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 481; Verplank v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 54; Vail v. Hamilton, 85 N. Y. 453; Blalock v. Kernersville Mfg. Co., 110 N. Car. 99; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 84; Taylor v. Miami Exporting Co., 6 Ohio 176; State v. Franklin Bank, 10 Ohio 91;

Coleman v. Columbia Oil Co., 51 Pa. St. 74; Early's Appeal, 89 Pa. St. 411; Eby v. Guest, 94 Pa. St. 160; Rivanna Nav. Co. v. Dawson, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 19; 48 Am. Dec. 183; State Bank v. Fox, 3 Blachf. (U. S.) 431; Johnson County v. Thayer, 94 U. S. 631. See also an article by E. C. Moore, 8 So. Law Rev., N. S. 369. In one of the earliest of these numerous cases the rule is thus stated: "If, from the course of business or the state of things the capital of the bank cannot be usually employed in loans, there can, I think, be no objection against the purchase of its own stock. In such purchases a part of the capital stock is withdrawn, but it is represented by the stock purchased; when dividends are declared, the profits of so much of the stock as may have been purchased belong to the remaining stockholders, and are nothing more than the profit to which they would have been entitled if, instead of appropriating so much of the capital to the purchase of stock, it had been used for making loans. But when a different state of things occurs, it may be deemed more profitable to invest again the amount appropriated for the purchase of stock in cash to be used for making loans. . . . In purchasing and again selling a portion of the stock, the directors neither extend nor curtail those limits (i. e. the limits prescribed by charter), because the capital stock remains the same, neither diminished nor increased, since the stock represents so much of the capital as was invested in its purchase, and when sold the money then stands in the place of stock." Per Davis, J., in Hartridge v. Rockwell, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 260.

In Ex parte Holmes, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 426, the court said: "No doubt, the company may, from necessity, as in this case, take their own stock in pledge or payment, and keep it outstanding in trustees to prevent its merger, and convert it to their security; but it is not stock to be voted on within the meaning of the charter."

2. Thus, a resolution authorizing subscribers to surrender unpaid shares

A foreign corporation will be presumed to have authority to purchase its own stock,¹ and stock so purchased may be sold by the company even though the original transaction was unauthorized.² But the rule above stated is not universal,³ and a company cannot traffic in its own shares to the prejudice of its creditors,⁴ or stockholders.⁵ In England, corporations cannot purchase their own stock without express authority from the statute.⁶

is valid as between the company and the subscribers. Glenn v. Hatchett, 91 Ala. 316; Republic L. Ins. Co. v. Swigert, 135 Ill. 150; 32 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 555. And the assignee of the company cannot sue for the face value of the shares until the surrender has been set aside in a direct proceeding. Glenn v. Hatchett (Ala. 1890), 8 So. Rep. 656. Compare Cooper v. Frederick, 9 Ala. 738; Johnson v. Laflin, 5 Dill. (U. S.) 65; 103 U. S. 800; First National Bank v. Stewart, 107 U. S. 676; Case of Reciprocity Bank, 22 N. Y. 9; U. S. Trust Co. v. Harris, 2 Bosw. (N. Y.) 91; Gold Min. Co. v. National Bank, 96 U. S. 640; Shoemakers v. National Mech. Bank, 31 Md. 396; O'Hare v. Second Nat. Bank, 77 Pa. St. 96; Stewart v. National Union Bank, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 424.

1. Yeaton v. Eagle Oil, etc., Co., 4 Wash. 183.

2. Jefferson v. Burford (Ky. 1891), 17 S. W. Rep. 855.

3. In Kansas, banks organized under the state law cannot acquire their own stock except in some cases to secure a pre-existing debt. German Sav. Bank v. Wulfekuhler, 19 Kan. 60.

In New York (Rev. Sts., ch. 18, p. 201, § 1) and Colorado (Gen. Sts. 1883, p. 189, § 35; p. 183, § 10) such purchases are forbidden by statute, and the same prohibition is imposed upon national banks by U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5201.

Columbian Bank's Estate, 147 Pa. St. 422, was a case where a bank president, as one of the executors of an estate, and without authority, invested some of the trust funds in the shares of his own bank, and caused the same to be re-sold to the bank at par a few days before the suspension of the institution. It was held that the estate acquired no greater rights in the liquidation of the bank's affairs than any other stockholder, and could not recover as against the creditors the price agreed to be paid.

4. Heggie v. People's Building, etc., Assoc., 107 N. Car. 581; 32 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 605. Compare Clapp v.

Peterson, 104 Ill. 26; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Burch, 40 Ill. App. 505; Peterson v. Illinois Land, etc., Co., 6 Ill. App. 257; Currier v. Lebanon Slate Co., 56 N. H. 262; Fraser v. Ritchie, 8 Ill. App. 454; Johnson v. Laflin, 5 Dill. (U. S.) 65; Gillet v. Moody, 3 N. Y. 479; Crandall v. Lincoln, 52 Conn. 73; 52 Am. Rep. 560; Blalock v. Kernersville Mfg. Co., 110 N. Car. 99; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 84.

5. Gill v. Balis, 72 Mo. 424; Currier v. Lebanon Slate Co., 56 N. H. 262.

6. Hope v. International Financial Soc., 4 Ch. Div. 327; Zulueta's Claim, L. R., 5 Ch. 444; Cree v. Somervail, L. R., 4 App. Cas. 648; Eyre's Case, 31 Beav. 177; Morgan's Case, 1 De G. & S. 750; In re Marseilles Extension R., etc., Co., 7 Ch. Div. 161; Ex parte Morgan, 1 M. & G. 225; Evans v. Coventry, 25 L. J. Ch. 489; Cross' Case, 38 L. J. Ch. 583; Ward's Case, 29 W. R. 768; Cockburn's Case, 4 De G. & S. 177; Trevor v. Whitworth, L. R., 12 App. Cas. 409; In re Walker, W. N. (1887) 202; nor can the power be delegated to a manager, Cartmell's Case, L. R., 9 Ch. 691. The object of the rule is to preserve the rights of creditors and to restrict the company to the exercise of express powers, and those necessary to the transaction of its business. Zulueta's Claim, L. R., 5 Ch. 444; In re Dronfield, etc., Coal Co., 17 Ch. Div. 76. An exception to the rule appears to be allowed where the purchase is made for the benefit of the whole company and not for profit.

The difference between the English and American doctrine is largely due to the fact that in England corporate creditors have no greater rights than the corporation has, and hence would be liable to an unreasonable risk if the corporation could purchase shares of its own capital stock. In this country the familiar principle that the capital stock is a trust fund for the benefit of creditors obviates this objection to a purchase by a corporation of its own stock. Cook on Stock and Stockholders, § 312.

(2) EFFECT.—It is not entirely clear from the authorities as to whether the purchase by a corporation of shares of its own stock will operate as a merger thereof. On the one hand it is said that the question is one of intent,¹ and that the transaction will have the effect of merger in the absence of contrary charter provisions;² but other authorities hold that the purchased shares are not extinguished.³ The corporation may re-sell the shares,⁴ even where the original purchase was without authority,⁵ but it is not entitled through its officer to vote on them.⁶

(b) Other Corporations as Purchasers.—See MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS, vol. 14, pp. 275, 277; NATIONAL BANKS, vol. 16, p. 167; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 810; STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23, p. 776.

(c) Agents—(See also AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 331; BROKERS, vol. 2, p. 591; STOCK BROKERS, vol. 23; STOCK EXCHANGE, vol. 23).—The powers of one who sells and purchases stock for another are subject usually to strict limitations. Authority to sell stock does not include power to pledge it,⁷ and one who buys stock for another will not be permitted to reap a secret profit from the transaction.⁸ A party, who, in pursuance of parol authority, purchases in his own name for himself and another, becomes part owner of the stock.⁹ A broker as agent of both parties to the

In Ontario, Canada, a company cannot cancel or accept the surrender of stock in compromising a claim against it by the shareholders, where the validity of the shares or the member's right to them is not in dispute. Livingston v. Temperance Colonization Soc., 17 Ont. App. 371; 37 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 541.

1. State v. Smith, 48 Vt. 266; City Bank v. Bruce, 17 N. Y. 507; American Railway Frog Co. v. Haven, 101 Mass. 402; 3 Am. Rep. 377.

2. Williams v. Savage Mfg. Co., 3 Md. Ch. 418; State v. Smith, 48 Vt. 266.

3. "The stock was not extinguished or destroyed by the purchase thereof by the corporation." State Bank v. Fox, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 431. See also Chetlain v. Republic L. Ins. Co., 86 Ill. 220; Com. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 142 Mass. 146; Vail v. Hamilton, 85 N. Y. 453. Compare Percy v. Millaudon, 3 La. 568.

4. State Bank v. Fox, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 431; State v. Smith, 48 Vt. 266. Compare Otter v. Brevoort Petroleum Co., 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 247.

5. Jefferson v. Burford (Ky. 1891), 17 S. W. Rep. 855.

6. "It is not to be tolerated that a company should procure stock, in any shape, which its officers may wield to the purposes of an election, thus securing themselves against the possibility of removal." Ex parte Holmes, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 426.

7. Merchants' Bank v. Livingstone, 74 N. Y. 223.

8. Kimber v. Barber, L. R., 8 Ch. 56. In this case Barber, who knew that Kimber was anxious to acquire stock in a certain company, represented to the latter that he could procure a certain number of shares at £3 each. Kimber agreed to purchase at that price and the shares were transferred in accordance with the agreement. It was subsequently discovered that Barber had, just before the transfer, purchased the stock himself for £2 per share, and Kimber brought suit for the difference between the price paid by Barber and that received by him. The master of the rolls dismissed the action without costs, but Lord Selborne, on appeal, said: "To my mind, with the greatest deference to the master of the rolls, . . . this is a very clearly established case of agency; that being so, I see no difficulty in the relief which is asked," citing Hichens v. Congreave, 4 Russ. 567; Bank of London v. Tyrrell, 10 H. L. Cas. 26.

9. Stover v. Flack, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 162; aff'd, 30 N. Y. 64.

transaction may sign a memorandum required by the statute of frauds.¹

(d) Trustees—(See, generally, TRUSTS)—(1) POWER OF TRUSTEE TO BUY AND SELL STOCK.—There are numerous American cases which assert the rule that the investment of funds held in a fiduciary capacity is at the peril of the trustee.² There are, however, some well considered adjudications to the contrary,³ and in England such investments are now generally approved.⁴ Trustees have no implied power to sell stock held in trust.⁵ Where they sell in breach of their trust the beneficiary may elect either to have the shares replaced or to demand the entire proceeds thereof with the highest interest.⁶ But sales by trustees even without express authority are sanctioned where depreciation is threatened,⁷ and where there is good reason to believe that the estate will be benefited thereby.⁸ A trustee cannot delegate his power to sell stock, even to a co-trustee.⁹

1. Colvin v. Williams, 3 Har. & J. (Md.) 38; 5 Am. Dec. 417.

2. Kind v. Talbott, 40 N. Y. 76, where the court states the reason for the rule. In the following cases the doctrine is affirmed: Kimball v. Redding, 31 N. H. 352; 64 Am. Dec. 333; French v. Currier, 47 N. H. 99; Gray v. Fox, 1 N. J. Eq. 259; 22 Am. Dec. 508; Halstead v. Meeker, 18 N. J. Eq. 136; Ward v. Kitchen, 30 N. J. Eq. 31; Adair v. Brimmer, 74 N. Y. 551; Mills v. Hoffman, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 594; Ackerman v. Emott, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 626; Berry v. Yates, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 210; Brown v. Campbell, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 265; Leitch v. Wells, 48 N. Y. 585; Nyce's Appeal, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 254; 40 Am. Dec. 498; Morris v. Wallace, 3 Pa. St. 319; 45 Am. Dec. 642; Worrell's Appeal, 9 Pa. St. 508; Rush's Estate, 12 Pa. St. 375; Hemphill's Appeal, 18 Pa. St. 303; Pray's Appeal, 34 Pa. St. 100; Ihmsen's Appeal, 43 Pa. St. 431.

3. Gray v. Lynch, 8 Gill. (Md.) 403; Smyth v. Burns, 25 Miss. 422; Washington v. Emery, 4 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 32; Boggs v. Adger, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 408. In Massachusetts the tendency seems to be to sanction investments in stock: Harvard College v. Amory, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 446; Lovell v. Minot, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 116; 32 Am. Dec. 206; Brown v. French, 125 Mass. 410; 28 Am. Rep. 254; and the same is true in Georgia, though the decisions there are partially determined by statute: Brown v. Wright, 39 Ga. 96; so in Alabama: Bryant v. Craig, 12 Ala. 359; Foscue v. Lyon, 55 Ala. 452. The subject is extensively discussed in note to 40 Am. Dec. 515. See also Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 452, where the authorities are exhaustively reviewed by Judge Gray.

4. Speight v. Gaunt, 22 Ch. Div. 727; 9 App. Cas. 19; Knight v. Plymouth, 1 Dick. 120; 3 Atk. 480; Ex parte Belchier, Amb. 219. In Traford v. Boehm, 3 Atk. 440, Lord Hardwicke held that a trustee was liable for loss occasioned by the investment of trust funds in South Sea stock. But in another case he had previously held that, "To compel trustees to make up a deficiency not owing to their willful fault is the harshest demand that can be made in a court of equity." Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Atk. 514.

5. "A trustee presumptively holds his trust property for administration and not for sale." Jaudon v. National City Bank, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 430; 15 Wall. (U. S.) 165; Murray v. Feinour, 2 Md. Ch. 418; Bayard v. Farmer's, etc., Bank, 52 Pa. St. 232; Bohlen's Estate, 75 Pa. St. 312; Waite v. Whorwood, 2 Atk. 159; Ward v. Kitchen, 30 N. J. Eq. 31.

6. Hart v. Ten Eyck, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 117; Murray v. Feinour, 2 Md. Ch. 418; Earl Powlett v. Herbert, 1 Ves. 297; Pinkett v. Wright, 2 Hare 120.

7. Ward v. Kitchen, 30 N. J. Eq. 36. But one who in good faith retains an investment is not liable for depreciation. Bowker v. Pierce, 130 Mass. 262.

8. Washington v. Emery, 4 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 32.

9. Bohlen's Estate, 75 Pa. St. 304.

(2) RIGHTS OF PURCHASERS FROM TRUSTEES—(See also PLEDGE AND COLLATERAL SECURITY, vol. 18, p. 620).—Purchasers from one who sells stock in breach of trust acquire no title as against the real owner if they have notice, even constructively, of the trust.¹ But a bona fide purchaser will be protected even though it afterwards transpires that the transferrer has violated his trust.² The question of the purchaser's title depends upon the further one of what constitutes notice.

(3) WHAT CONSTITUTES NOTICE.³—The decisions are somewhat conflicting as to what facts will charge the corporation itself, and purchasers from a trustee, with notice that the stock is held in trust. By one line of cases the addition of the word "trustee" to the signature of the transferrer will constitute notice;⁴ while

1. Jaudon v. National City Bank, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 430; aff'd, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 165; Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 382, 389; 1 Am. Rep. 115; Field v. Schieffelin, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 150; 11 Am. Dec. 441; White v. Price, 39 Hun (N. Y.) 394; Baker v. Bliss, 39 N. Y. 70; Walsh v. Stille, 2 Pars. Sel. Cas. (Pa.) 17; Simons v. Southwestern Railroad Bank, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 279; Pendleton v. Fay, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 202; Lowry v. Commercial, etc., Bank, Taney Dec. (U. S.) 310; Bayard v. Farmers, etc., Bank, 52 Pa. St. 232; Carr v. Hilton, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 390; McLeod v. Drummond, 17 Ves. 152; Raphael v. McFarlane, 18 Can. Sup. Ct. 183; 34 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 662.

2. Bayard v. Farmers, etc., Bank, 52 Pa. St. 232; Nutting v. Thomason, 46 Ga. 34; Stinson v. Thornton, 56 Ga. 377; Cohen v. Gwynn, 4 Md. Ch. 357; Salisbury Mills v. Townsend, 109 Mass. 115; Caulkins v. Memphis Gas Light Co., 85 Tenn. 683; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 400; Briggs v. Massey, 42 L. T. 49.

3. See generally, NOTICE, vol. 16, p. 787.

4. Loring v. Salisbury Mills, 125 Mass. 138; Loring v. Brodie, 134 Mass. 453; Gaston v. American Exch. Nat. Bank, 29 N. J. Eq. 98; Simons v. South Western Railroad Bank, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 270; Walsh v. Stille, 2 Pars. Sel. Cas. (Pa.) 17; Sweeny v. Bank of Montreal, 12 Can. Sup. Ct. 661; Raphael v. McFarlane, 18 Can. Sup. Ct. 183; 34 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 662; Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 382; 1 Am. Rep. 115. In this last case the court says: "The appropriation of corporate stock, held in trust as collateral security for the trustee's own debt, or a debt which he owes jointly with others, is a transaction so far beyond the ordinary scope of a trustee's authority, and out of the common course of business, as to be in itself a suspicious circumstance, imposing upon the creditor the duty of inquiry. This would hardly be controverted in a case where the stock was held by 'A B, trustee for C D.' But the effect of the word 'trustee,' alone, is the same. It means trustee for some one whose name is not disclosed; and there is no greater reason for assuming that a trustee is authorized to pledge for his own debt the property of an unnamed cestui que trust than the property of one whose name is known."

Maryland Rule.—In Maryland, the decisions on this question have fluctuated considerably. But the rule stated in the text seems to have been finally adopted. In Farmer's, etc., Bank v. Weyman, 5 Gill (Md.) 337, the entry on the transfer book of the bank explained the character of the trust and gave the names of the beneficiaries, and the court held as follows: "The bank by this transfer had notice of the trust with which the stock was clothed, and that the complainants were the legal proprietors of the stock and its officers, or the trustees of the stockholders, could not, without making the bank responsible, by any negligence or mistake, allow the title to pass to the stock by a transfer by any other persons than the trustees, without involving the bank in responsibility."

In the later case of Albert v. Baltimore Sav. Bank, 1 Md. Ch. 407; 2 Md. 159, the entry on the corporate books showed only that the stock was in the name of certain parties as trustees and did not show who were the cestuis que trustent or what was the character of the trust, and it was held there was other authorities decline to regard that circumstance as sufficient.¹ A similar conflict exists on the question whether the corporation is charged with notice of the contents of a will.² A notice to a not sufficient in this entry to place the corporation upon inquiry and make it liable for negligent transfer.

In the recent case of Marbury v. Ehlen (Md. 1890), 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 1, it is held that where the trustee in executing the transfer, adds the word "trustee" to his signature, the corporation is charged with notice of his trust and is bound to satisfy itself that he has authority to make the transfer. Commenting on the case of Albert v. Baltimore Sav. Bank, 1 Md. Ch. 407; 2 Md. 159, the court says: "In that case the stock involved never stood on the books of the company as the property of the testator in his lifetime. Here it was the testator's property, and stood in his name, at his death, on the books of the company. When the transfer made by the executors in Albert's Case was made, the assignment by the executor might be presumed to be rightful by reason of his general power over the estate; for the act of 1843, chap. 304, had not been passed. That act declared that no title should pass where the executor disposed of property without an order of the orphans' court first had and obtained. Section 274, art. 93, of the code of 1860, makes that provision, and was the law when the transfers here involved were made, and the law still is, under section 276, art. 93, of the present code, that such sale, without the previous order of the orphans' court is void. Judge Taney, in Lowry's Case, already cited, which grew out of the same will as did Albert's Case, adverts to the fact that the act of 1843, chap. 304, had not then been passed, so as to make the act of the executor subject to suspicion and question. If the authority of Albert's Case is to be regarded as still binding, and unshaken by subsequent decisions in the state, still we think the distinctions we have noticed are sufficient to withdraw this case from its control. The modern doctrine in respect to what constitutes notice in such cases, and that which obtains everywhere, is so much broader in its reach than that which is found in Albert's Case that, to keep in harmony with the decisions and law as received elsewhere, we do not think the Case of Albert, in 2 Md., should be followed in any case which is not precisely analogous in all its facts." See also Third Nat. Bank v. Lange, 51 Md. 144; 34 Am. Rep. 304; Swift v. Williams, 68 Md. 255.

1. In Brewster v. Sine, 42 Cal. 139, the court said: "It is a common practice to transfer stocks into the name of some person as 'trustee,' for the sole purpose of concealing the name of the real owner, whose transactions in buying or selling a particular stock, if his name were known, might operate to enhance or depress its market value. . . . In view of the general prevalence of this practice, what effect in law should be given to the fact that there is appended to the name of the person to whom the certificate is issued the word 'trustee?' Shall this be held to operate as constructive notice to all persons dealing with the so-called 'trustee' that he is not the owner? Must they deal with him at arm's length, and if they shall purchase the stock, or loan him money upon it, do they take the hazard that on the next day, or the next month, the secret owner may disclose himself and repudiate the transaction and demand the stock? In my opinion, considerations of public policy and common justice demand that, when stock is placed in the name of a 'trustee' under these circumstances, the secret owner shall be bound by the acts of his 'trustee' dealing with persons who have no actual notice of the relations between the parties. If nothing more appear on the books of the corporation, or on the face of the certificate, to indicate the trust and its nature, than the mere addition to the name of the word 'trustee,' the owner, who has clothed his agent with the legal title, one of the highest indicia of ownership, should bear the consequences resulting from the acts of the agent, rather than an innocent person who advances his money on the faith that the agent is the real owner, or at least has authority, to sell or hypothecate the stock." See also Thompson v. Toland, 48 Cal. 99; Stockdale v. South Sea Co., Barnardiston's Ch. 363.

2. In Hutchins v. State Bank, 12 Met. (Mass.) 423, Shaw, C. J., says:

board of directors is notice to the bank whose affairs they manage and to all successors of such board.¹ Purchasers are charged with notice of statutes requiring sales by executors to be made at public auction, and will not be protected if they buy at private sale.² And in general "whatever puts upon inquiry is notice of what inquiry would disclose."³

(e) Executors, Administrators, and Guardians.—While the general principles apply to both classes, there is at least one important difference between executors, administrators, and guardians on the one hand, and the class technically known as trustees⁴ on the other. The function of the latter is custody or management, while the duties of the former include also the power of administration and sale.⁵ Hence, purchasers from executors, administrators, and guardians are not bound to see that the proceeds of the sale are faithfully applied by the transferrer.⁶ But transferees

"The bank must be presumed to know what are the legal powers of an executor; but they cannot be presumed to know the particular provisions of each will." But in Stewart v. Firemen's Ins. Co., 53 Md. 564, the court said: "We have said that when the parties making the transfers proposed to do so, and professed to act as executors, that fact of itself gave the company notice of the will and made it chargeable to the same extent as if it had actually read it; and in our judgment this imputation of knowledge is not affected by the fact that the parties thus declaring themselves to the company, and holding themselves out and professing to act as executors, might at the time, by operation of law, have held title to the stock as trustees. No actual transfer on the books of the company by the executors to themselves as trustees had ever been made. Having then this notice of the will, the company had notice of the trusts it contained, including the names of the trustees, of the cestuis que trust for life, and of the provisions in favor of children thereafter to be born." And this decision is supported by the later cases. Caulkins v. Memphis Gas Light Co., 85 Tenn. 683; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 400; Chapman v. Charleston, 30 S. Car. 549; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 538. Compare Peck v. Bank of America, 16 R. I. 710; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 9.

1. Mechanics' Bank v. Seton, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 299. So a pledge of stock to a bank by a trustee who is also a director in that institution vests no title in the bank where it is forbidden to make loans to the directors, though it is without notice of the trust. Albert v. Baltimore Sav. Bank, 2 Md. 171.

2. Nutting v. Thomason, 57 Ga. 418; Nutting v. Boardman, 43 Ga. 599; Weyer v. Second Nat. Bank, 57 Ind. 198. Compare Nutting v. Thomason, 46 Ga. 34.

3. Peck v. Bank of America, 16 R. I. 710; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 9; Bayard v. Farmers', etc., Bank, 52 Pa. St. 232. In the former case, a transfer of stock was made by an executrix nearly nine years after testator's death and nearly six years after the time limited by law for the settlement of estates. The transfer was made to the executrix herself individually, not for the purpose of raising funds for the benefit of the estate, but to afford security for her indorsement on the note of a third person to the corporation, and these circumstances were held sufficient to place the company upon inquiry as to her powers.

4. See supra, this title, Trustees. See also Prall v. Tilt, 27 N. J. Eq. 393; White v. Price, 39 Hun (N. Y.) 394.

5. Wood's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 379; 37 Am. Rep. 694; Prall v. Hamil, 28 N. J. Eq. 66. Compare Ellis v. Essex Merrimack Bridge, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 243; Field v. Schieffelin, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 150; 11 Am. Dec. 441; Lamar v. Micou, 112 U. S. 475; Bank of Virginia v. Craig, 6 Leigh (Va.) 399.

6. Leitch v. Wells, 48 N. Y. 585. In Keeney v. Globe Mill Co., 39 Conn. 145, the administrator of one who had bequeathed certain shares of stock to his wife, remainder over to his children, made by mistake an absolute from executors who have actual notice that the latter are committing a breach of trust are not protected,¹ nor are pledgees from a guardian who is authorized simply to sell the stock.² Executors appointed in one state may transfer shares in a corporation domiciled in another,³ but the power does not extend to those appointed in foreign countries.⁴ In Georgia, a foreign guardian may, if authorized by the law of the state where he is appointed, pass title to stock without applying to the Georgia courts.⁵

(1) Miscellaneous Parties—(See also INFANTS, vol. 10, p. 634; MARRIED WOMEN, vol. 14, pp. 589–680; OFFICERS, vol. 17, p. 39).—Sales by intoxicated persons⁶ and those *non compos mentis*⁷ may be set aside. One partner may sell firm stock,⁸ but the rule does not apply to one of two joint owners.⁹

(3) Sales as Affected by Forgery—(a) What Constitutes—(See also FORGERY, vol. 8, p. 452).—The most common instance of forgery in connection with sale of stock, is that of the owner's name on the back of the certificate.¹⁰ But the question sometimes arises in other ways. Thus, a change in the name of the corporation in which stock is sought to be transferred,¹¹ and in the number of shares as stated in the certificate,¹² are examples of forgery in tribution of the same to the widow. Subsequently they were levied upon by a judgment creditor of the latter and sold at execution sale to a purchaser in good faith. One of the testator's children, who was a minor when these proceedings took place, brought suit on coming of age to set aside the transfer, though the execution purchaser obtained title. But the court said: "To dispossess him of his property in the face of these facts, or to interfere at all with the proper enjoyment and disposition of it, would be an act of arbitrary power. None of the incidents of a perfect title are wanting. What stockholder in this company, what owner of any property, could be considered safe, if such a title as this is not to be recognized and protected? That the petitioner, Helen, was a minor while these proceedings were had in the court of probate; that an appeal has been taken by her from some of these orders and decrees since she became of age, and a reversal of the same obtained, cannot affect this question. If she has been wronged in the distribution of this estate she can have redress against the administrator on his probate bond. Hough v. Bailey, 32 Conn. 290."

1. Prall v. Hamil, 28 N. J. Eq. 66; White v. Price, 39 Hun (N. Y.) 394; Keane v. Robarts, 4 Madd. Ch. 332;

Odd Fellows', etc., Bank's Appeal, 123 Pa. St. 356.

2. Webb v. Graniteville Mfg. Co., 11 S. Car. 396.

3. Middlebrook v. Merchants' Bank, 3 Keyes (N. Y.) 135; Luce v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., 63 N. H. 588; Hobbs v. Western Nat. Bank, 8 Weekly Notes 131; In re Cape May, etc., Co. (N. J. 1888), 16 Atl. Rep. 191.

4. Alfonso's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 347.

5. Ross v. Southwestern R. Co., 53 Ga. 514.

6. Thackrah v. Haas, 119 U. S. 499.

7. Chew v. Bank of Baltimore, 14 Md. 299.

8. Quiner v. Marblehead Social Ins. Co., 10 Mass. 476. Compare Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90; 19 Am. Dec. 306.

9. Standing v. Bowring, 27 Ch. Div. 341; Comstock v. Buchannan, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 127.

The surviving owner acquires title to the whole. Hill's Case, L. R., 20 Eq. 585; Garrick v. Taylor, 3 L. T., N. S. 460. And a previous transfer by him conveys the whole. Slaymaker v. Bank, 10 Pa. St. 373.

10. See cases cited in following notes.

11. Swan v. North British Australasian Co., 7 H. & N. 603.

12. Matthews v. Massachusetts Nat. Bank, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 396; Sewall v.

sales of stock. So, a transfer is forged if, without authority, the names of several co-trustees are signed to it by one of them,¹ and the rule applies to similar signatures by one of two partners in whose joint names the stock stands,² or by the secretary of the corporation who signs his own and the names of other officers.³

(b) Status of Transferees.—While bona fide transferees, without notice, of certificates which have been forged, are sometimes protected as against the real owner,⁴ they will not be thus protected unless the latter has been guilty of negligence constituting an estoppel.⁵ Even where the original purchase was bona fide, it has been held that a re-sale by such purchaser after a demand made upon him by the real owner, would make the former liable in trover for the stock.⁶ Transferees claiming through a forger can neither compel registry, nor prevent a cancellation thereof when once permitted.⁷ One whose stock has been sold without his knowledge under a forged power of attorney, may sustain an action for money had and received against the party who holds the proceeds of the sale.⁸ So a corporation may recover from a transferee for damages sustained by it for registering his forged

Boston Water Power Co., 4 Allen (Mass.) 277; 81 Am. Dec 701.

1. Cottam v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 1 J. & H. 243; Sloman v. Bank of England, 14 Sim. 475.

2. Midland R. Co. v. Taylor, 8 H. L. Cas. 751, affirming 29 L. J. Ch. 731.

3. Shaw v. Port Philip Gold Min. Co., 13 Q. B. Div. 103. Compare Duncan v. Luntley, 2 McN. & G. 30.

4. Machinist's Nat. Bank v. Field, 126 Mass. 345; In re Bahia, etc., R. Co., L. R., 3 Q. B. 584. An extreme instance of the protection afforded to the purchaser, is the case of Matthews v. Massachusetts Nat. Bank, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 396, where a bank which had accepted stock as collateral, the certificates of which had been fraudulently altered by the owner who pledged them, was held liable to a subsequent purchaser from the forger, to whom the bank had indorsed and retransferred the certificates.

5. Swan v. North British Australasian Co., 7 H. & N. 603. In this case the owner of certain shares in one company employed a broker to sell shares in another company. The broker represented that it was necessary for him to sign ten blank forms of transfer, which were accordingly signed, sealed and delivered by the owner to the broker. The latter used but eight of the blank forms, and having stolen the certificates from a box deposited at the bank for safe keeping, filled out the two remaining certificates with transfers of shares in the company whose stock he was employed to sell, and after forging attestations, delivered the certificates to bona fide purchasers. It was held that the latter acquired no title, and that the owner's conduct in thus intrusting the matter to his broker did not constitute such negligence as would estop him. The principle agreed upon by all the judges was that the negligence, to operate as an estoppel, must be the approximate cause of the loss. So in Johnston v. Renton, L. R., 9 Eq. 181, the fact that the owner intrusted his certificates to a bank whose manager committed the forgery, was held to constitute negligence.

6. Monk v. Graham, 8 Mod. 9.

7. Simm v. Anglo-American Tel. Co., 5 Q. B. Div. 188; Whitewright v. American Tel., etc., Co., N. Y. Daily Reg., Aug. 6, 1886; Waterhouse v. London, etc., R. Co., 41 L. T., N. S. 553; Hambleton v. Central Ohio R. Co., 44 Md. 551; Brown v. Howard F. Ins. Co., 42 Md. 384; Hildyard v. South Sea Co., 2 P. Wms. 76; Ashby v. Blackwell, 2 Eden 299. But see Metropolitan Sav. Bank v. Baltimore, 63 Md. 6.

8. Marsh v. Keating, 1 Bing. N. Cas. 198; 27 E. C. L. 354.

transfer,¹ but it cannot recover from the broker or auctioneer who sold the stock for the forger.²

(4) Stolen and Lost Certificates.—See supra, this title, Negotiability. See also LOST PAPERS, vol. 13, p. 1059.

(5) Effect of Lis Pendens Upon Sales of Stock.—See LIS PENDENS, vol. 13, p. 873.

(6) Performance and Tender.—An executory contract for the sale of stock is sufficiently performed by a delivery of the certificates.³ In England it is even held that one who contracts to "deliver" performs when he places the other party in the position of legal owner.⁴ The purchaser may refuse a tender of the

1. Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Richardson, 135 Mass. 473, where the court says: "If one buys stock and takes a transfer, and presents the certificate to the corporation and demands a new one, he thereby impliedly represents that he is entitled to the new certificate. He demands it as his right. This implies that he is the owner and has a right to it. The corporation has the right to understand him as asserting this. It is not bound to question or investigate the genuineness of the transfer, and see if the purchaser has not been defrauded. When the purchaser presents his transfer and certificate, the transfer officer naturally understands that he claims the transfer to be valid, and to have a right to a certificate; he has a right to act as if this had been said in terms. And if, relying upon such tacit and implied representations, the corporation suffers a loss, the purchaser who misled it is liable."

2. Machinists' Nat. Bank v. Field, 126 Mass. 345.

3. The delivery of certificates of shares to a purchaser, is analogous to the delivery of chattels upon a sale thereof—and the assignment of it is a symbolical delivery of the shares themselves. Howe v. Starkweather, 17 Mass. 243; Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 98; 19 Am. Dec. 306. This being as complete a delivery as the subject matter admits of, a title to the stock passes by the tender of the certificate, and the purchaser's refusal to receive it leaves the certificate in the hands of the seller as the trustee or bailee of the purchaser. 2 Kent Com. 741, note b; Noyes v. Spaulding, 27 Vt. 427; Bruce v. Smith, 44 Ind. 1; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Richards, 6 Mo. App. 454; Eastman v. Fiske, 9 N.

H. 182; Munn v. Barnum, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 283.

4. Hunt v. Gunn, 13 C. B., N. S. 226; 106 E. C. L. 226. In this case the purchaser had executed the company's "Deed of Settlement," which resembles in part the American charter, but is signed by the original members. The court held in the above case that when the purchaser signed this instrument, he became the owner of the shares, and hence that a delivery of the scrip certificates by the seller was unnecessary. In the opinion, Byles, J., says: "When this agreement was entered into, there were two modes by which the plaintiff might become a shareholder in the company; by executing the deed, and so becoming an original shareholder, or by becoming a transferee of the shares. He executed the deed as a holder of sixty shares and so became an original shareholder; and he was afterwards registered as such. The condition of the contract, therefore, has been satisfied. The only person who could in any way deal with the shares after the execution of the deed of settlement and the complete registration of the company, is the plaintiff who now sues for the non-performance of the agreement to deliver the shares to him. In the events which have happened, it seems to me, that, upon the strict construction of the document, as well as according to the manifest justice of the case, the defendant is entitled to a verdict on the second plea. And, if there be any technical difficulty in the way, it would be the duty of the court to amend, in order to advance the real justice of the case." And Erle, C. J., says in the same case: "I am clearly of opinion that the shares were delivered, if they vested in the plaintiff. To a person who understands anything certificates unless accompanied by a registration of the transfer,¹ or if they are indorsed in blank by some previous owner and not by the seller;² or, if the stock has been attached;³ but not on the ground that the company has, since the formation of the contract, issued other shares at a discount.⁴ So the party who contracts to sell need not tender the identical shares owned by him when the agreement was made.⁵ Where the contract provides that the certificates and the purchase-money are to be left with a trust company, tender is unnecessary.⁶ The duty of furnishing the deed by which a transfer of shares is effected in England is controlled by the usage of the market.⁷

(7) Enforcement—(a) Specific Performance.⁸—Where the contract for sale is clear and the value of the stock is uncertain,⁹ or where the remedy in damages is inadequate,¹⁰ or some other valid ground is shown,¹¹ specific performance may be awarded. But of the subject the scrip certificate is something totally distinct from the shares. The certificate may be delivered though the shares are not, and vice versa. Upon the facts proved here, the shares were clearly vested in Hunt from the moment the company became a completely registered company; and that was a delivery within the meaning of this contract."

1. White v. Salisbury, 33 Mo. 150. Compare Wilkinson v. Lloyd, 7 Q. B. 27.

2. Hare v. Waring, 3 M. & W. 362, where Baron Parke says: "These certificates would be prima facie evidence of somebody else, not the assignees, being entitled to the shares, and there is no proof of the assignees deriving the title from that party by assignment, even assuming that to be sufficient. We are satisfied that the true meaning of the contract is, that the party is to convey and deliver certificates, showing, either on the face of them or from the indorsements, that the title is in the person conveying."

3. Eastman v. Fiske, 9 N. H. 182.

4. Noyes v. Spaulding, 27 Vt. 427.

5. Noyes v. Spaulding, 27 Vt. 427; Frost v. Clarkson, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 24; Shales v. Signoret, 1 Ld. Raym. 440.

6. Reed v. Hayt, 109 N. Y. 659; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 295.

7. Shaw v. Rowley, 16 M. & W. 810; Stephens v. DeMedina, 4 Q. B. 422.

8. See generally, SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE, vol. 22, p. 908.

9. Treasurer v. Commercial Coal Min. Co., 23 Cal. 390; White v. Schuyler, 1 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 300; 31 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 38; Sank v. Union Steamship Co., 5 Phila. (Pa.) 499;

Goodwin Gas Stove, etc., Co.'s Appeal, 117 Pa. St. 514; Cheale v. Kenward, 3 De G. & J. 27; Walker v. Bartlett, 18 C. B. 845; 86 E. C. L. 844.

10. Cushman v. Thayer Mfg. Co., 76 N. Y. 365; 32 Am. Rep. 315, where the court says: "A recovery of damages would furnish inadequate compensation; the remedy by mandamus cannot be invoked as the authorities hold, and there can be no question that, in a case of this kind, a court of equity alone can grant the proper relief." See also Johnson v. Brooks, 93 N. Y. 343; Tobey v. Hakes, 54 Conn. 276; Walker v. Detroit Transit R. Co., 47 Mich. 342; Freon v. Carriage Co., 42 Ohio St. 41; 51 Am. Rep. 794; Phillips v. Berger, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 608; 1 Story, Eq. Jur., § 717.

11. Duncuft v. Albrecht, 12 Sim. 189; Parish v. Parish, 32 Beav. 207; Poole v. Middleton, 29 Beav. 646; Turner v. May, 32 L. T., N. S. 56; Beckitt v. Billsborough, 8 Hare 188; Treasurer v. Commercial Coal Min. Co., 23 Cal. 390; Frue v. Houghton, 6 Colo. 318; Chater v. San Francisco Sugar Refinery Co., 19 Cal. 219; White v. Schuyler, 1 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 300; Price v. Minot, 107 Mass. 49; Buckmaster v. Consumers' Ice Co., 5 Daly (N. Y.) 313. Compare Austin v. Gillaspie, 1 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 261; Nutbrown v. Thornton, 10 Ves. 160; Shaw v. Fisher, 5 De G. M. & G. 596; Wynne v. Price, 3 De G. & S. 310; Willson v. Keating, 7 W. R. 484; Oriental Co. v. Briggs, 2 J. & H. 625; Paine v. Hutchinson, L. R., 3 Eq. 257; Shepherd v. Gillespie, L. R., 5 Eq. 293; Birmingham v. Sheridan, etc., Ins. Co., 33 Beav. 660; Stras-

the purpose of the contract must not be contrary to public policy,¹ nor detrimental to the interests of the corporation.² So specific performance will not be granted, if the defendant is no longer in possession of the stock,³ or if the delivery forms but one of several parts of the contract,⁴ or if the default is capable of exact compensation in damages.⁵ A contract to transfer stock at any time will not be enforced against the insolvent estate of a stockholder since deceased,⁶ and, in general, the plaintiff must be diligent in seeking his remedy. A delay of seven,⁷ and even of five⁸ years has been held sufficient to constitute a bar to specific performance. But where that remedy is denied, equity will sometimes award damages without sending the plaintiff to a court of law.⁹ The contract, like others, will be enforced, if at all, so as to promote the apparent intention of the parties.¹⁰

(b) Damages.—See DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 29; TROVER.

(c) Defenses.—It is no defense to an action upon a contract for the purchase of stock that the company was at the time insolvent,¹¹ or has suffered a loss of its property,¹² or is being wound up,¹³ or is only proven to be a de facto corporation,¹⁴ or has since effected an ultra vires issue of stock at a discount.¹⁵ One who contracts to sell stock is bound to execute the transfer though the directors refuse to allow it.¹⁶ So a director who agrees to burg R. Co. v. Echternacht, 21 Pa. St. 121; 60 Am. Dec. 49; Ferguson v. Paschall, 11 Mo. 267; Cowles v. Whitman, 10 Conn. 121; 25 Am. Dec. 60; Clark v. Flint, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 231; 33 Am. Dec. 733; Mechanics' Bank v. Seton, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 299; Cruse v. Paine, L. R., 6 Eq. 641.

1. Tobey v. Robinson, 99 Ill. 222; Noyes v. Marsh, 123 Mass. 286.

2. Foll's Appeal, 91 Pa. St. 434; 36 Am. Rep. 671.

3. Columbine v. Chichester, 2 Ph. 27. But where he has retained a part, the contract will be specifically enforced as to it. Turner v. May, 32 L. T., N. S. 56.

4. Ross v. Union Pac. R. Co., Woolw. (U. S.) 26.

5. Eckstein v. Downing, 64 N. H. 248; Noyes v. Marsh, 123 Mass. 286; Thorndike v. Locke, 98 Mass. 340; Jones v. Newhall, 115 Mass. 244; 15 Am. Rep. 97; Somerby v. Buntin, 118 Mass. 287; 19 Am. Rep. 459.

6. Chafee v. Sprague, 16 R. I. 189.

7. York v. Passaic Rolling Mill Co., 30 Fed. Rep. 471.

8. Diamond State Iron Co. v. Todd (Del. 1888), 14 Atl. Rep. 27, where there was also uncertainty and misrepresentation.

9. Wonson v. Fenno, 129 Mass. 405;

Austin v. Gillaspie, 1 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 261.

10. Cook, Stock and Stockholders (2d ed.), p. 374. See also Central, etc., Assoc. v. James, 81 Ga. 762; Donahue v. M'Cosh, 70 Iowa 733; Kernochan v. Murray, 111 N. Y. 306; Hill v. Smith, 21 How. (U. S.) 283; Eagan v. Clasby, 5 Utah 154; Reynolds v. Myers, 51 Vt. 444.

11. Rudge v. Bowman, L. R., 3 Q. B. 689; Gordon v. Parker, 10 La. 56. A contract to deliver stock free from incumbrances is not broken by the existence of liens against the corporation. Williams v. Hanna, 40 Ind. 535.

12. Kerchne v. Gettys, 18 S. Car. 521. Compare Donahue v. M'Cosh, 70 Iowa 733.

13. Crubb v. Miller, 19 W. R. 519.

14. Reynolds v. Myers, 51 Vt. 444.

15. Faulkner v. Hebard, 26 Vt. 452. But the fact that shares are issued at less than the charter price is a good defense to an action for the purchase thereof, though the corporation is also liable to the holder. Sturges v. Stetson, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 246.

16. Poole v. Middleton, 29 Beav. 646. But see London Founders' Assoc. v. Clarke, 20 Q. B. Div. 576; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 428, where it is held that a contract for sale on the stock transfer shares to an employe of the corporation, unless he should leave its employ, is not released by a dismissal of the employe.¹ A transferee from one who is entitled to receive stock from a corporation, upon the performance of certain acts, cannot plead their non-performance as a ground of forfeiture, if the corporation does not.² The Statute of Limitations is, of course, available as a defense.³

b. GIFTS—(1) Validity.—Gifts of stock once made cannot be revoked by the donor.⁴ But the intent to vest title in the donee must be clear.⁵ In the case of an infant donee, acceptance will be inferred from the beneficial nature of the grant.⁶ Delivery may be effected so as to consummate the gift by transfer on the corporate books, even though the donor retains possession of the certificates.⁷ So parol evidence has been held admissible, as against the creditors of the donor, to show that he intended a purchase in the donee's name, as a gift.⁸ But it has been held that there was no valid delivery to one claiming as donee where exchange does not import an understanding that the company will register the transfer.

1. Price v. Minot, 107 Mass. 49. There was also a by-law that no shares could be transferred without first being offered to the corporation.

2. Bradley v. Chase, 22 Me. 511.

3. Williams v. Meyer, 41 Hun (N. Y.) 545.

4. Francis v. New York, etc., R. Co., 17 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 1; Standing v. Bowring, 27 Ch. Div. 341; Delamater's Estate, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 362; Dummer v. Pitcher, 5 Sim. 35.

5. Jackson v. Twenty-third St. R. Co., 88 N. Y. 521.

A woman at the time of her marriage owned thirty-six shares of bank stock standing in her name. Some time after the marriage her husband transferred it to himself for the purpose of pledging it to the bank for a loan, and after the loan was repaid, retransferred it to her, stating that it was hers and that he wished it to stand in her name as before. The husband afterwards purchased fourteen other shares of the stock of the same bank and had them transferred to his wife. The transfers were made in good faith and there were no creditors to be injured. Held, that in equity the husband had made a valid gift of the whole fifty shares to the wife, and that she took a sole and separate estate therein. Deming v. Williams, 26 Conn. 226.

6. Francis v. New York, etc., R. Co., 17 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 1; Spencer v.

Carr, 45 N. Y. 406; 6 Am. Rep. 112; Jackson v. Bodle, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 184.

7. Robert's Appeal, 85 Pa. St. 84, where the donor, since deceased, had effected such a transfer to his niece. The court said: "The gift is complete by the delivery of the thing itself, for transferring the shares to her upon the books of the company is putting her in complete possession of the thing assigned, and clothing her with the complete legal title. It stands in the place of a delivery. Such an act performs precisely the office which an actual delivery would perform if it were a chattel. It is as complete a delivery as the nature of the thing will admit of. There can be no clearer evidence of a design to part with the right of property in favor of another than an absolute transfer of the legal title to her for her own use. Retaining in his possession the certificates which are in her name, and which he could not use without her consent, cannot undo or qualify the decisive ownership with which he had invested her by the actual delivery to her on the books of the company. The best evidence of her ownership is the transfer on the books of the company. The certificates were but secondary evidence of her ownership, and only useful for purposes of transfer. They were nothing more than the official declaration by the company of what already appeared on their books. There was here no locus penitentiae."

8. Rider v. Kidder, 10 Ves. 361.

the latter never received the certificates and his alleged donor notified the company that he would give further orders as to the disposition of the shares; though the shares had been set aside in the claimant's name and the dividends paid to him at the donor's direction.¹ A gift of certain original shares, together with "the dividends and income thereof," does not pass new shares issued subsequently and apportioned among the holders of the original shares,² but a gift of dividends has been held to pass the stock.³

(2) Formalities.—In most cases a gift may be complete and effectual without registration on the corporate books.⁴ As between donor and donee the gift may be valid without registration, notwithstanding a requirement of such formality; so it may be valid without a written assignment of the certificate.⁵ In England, a gift of railroad stock requires a deed,⁶ and a decedent's memorandum that he makes a gift of certain stock, but retains it during life in order to draw dividends, passes no title.⁷

c. LEGACIES.—See LEGACIES AND DEVISES, vol. 13, p. 19; REMAINDERS, vol. 20, p. 828; WILLS.

VIII. LIEN OF THE CORPORATION ON STOCK—(See also NATIONAL BANKS, vol. 16, p. 201)—1. Origin and Creation of Lien—a. RULE AT COMMON LAW.—At common law a corporation has no lien on shares of stock belonging to a member indebted to the corporation.⁸ Authority for such a lien must be founded on charter or statute, or, in some instances, on by-law or custom.

1. Jackson v. Twenty-third St. R. Co., 88 N. Y. 520.

2. Spooner v. Phillips (Conn. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 524.

3. Delamater's Estate, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 362.

4. See supra, this title, Registration. See also Grymes v. Hone, 49 N. Y. 17; 10 Am. Rep. 313; De Caumont v. Borgert 36 Hun (N. Y.) 382; Jackson v. Twenty-third St. R. Co., 88 N. Y. 520.

In Maryland, under the statute the rule is otherwise. Baltimore Retort, etc., Co. v. Mali, 65 Md. 93; 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 49; 57 Am. Rep. 304; Pennington v. Gittings, 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 208.

5. Walsh v. Saxton, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 251. In Allerton v. Lang, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 362, the delivery by the stockholder of a hand-bag containing a certificate of stock, with the statement, "I make you a present of it," was held sufficient to constitute a gift of the stock.

6. Moore v. Moore, 43 L. J. Ch. 617.

7. In re Shield, 53 L. T., N. S. 5.

8. Mobile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cullom, 49 Ala. 558; People v. Crockett, 9 Cal. 112; Vansands v. Middlesex Co. Bank, 26 Conn. 154; Farmers', etc. Bank v. Wasson, 48 Iowa 336; 30 Am. Rep. 395; Dana v. Brown, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 304; Fitzhugh v. Bank of Shepherdsville, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 126; 16 Am. Dec. 90; Byrne v. Union Bank, 9 Rob. (La.) 433; Bryon v. Carter, 22 La. Ann. 98; Hagar v. Union Nat. Bank, 63 Me. 509; Gemmell v. Davis (Md.), 23 Atl. Rep. 1032; Crease v. Babcock, 10 Met. (Mass.) 525; Grew v. Breed, 10 Met. (Mass.) 569; Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 99; 19 Am. Dec. 316; Massachusetts Iron Co. v. Hooper, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 183; Holly Springs Bank v. Pinson, 58 Miss. 421; 38 Am. Rep. 330; Carroll v. Mullanphy Sav. Bank, 8 Mo. App. 249; Williams v. Lowe, 4 Neb. 382; Bates v. New York Ins. Co., 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 238; Bank of Attica v. Manufacturers', etc., Bank, 20 N. Y. 501; Driscoll v. West Bradley, etc., Mfg. Co., 59 N. Y. 96; Heart v. State Bank, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 111; Steamship Dock Co. v. Heron, 52 Pa. St. 280; Merchant's Bank v. Shouse, 102 Pa. St. 488; Nealey v. Janney, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 108; Case v. Bank, 100 U. S. 446.

b. STATUTES AND CHARTERS.—Legislatures, however, frequently provide for the lien by general law or by charter.¹

c. BY-LAWS.—Whether, in the absence of authority conferred by statute or charter, a corporation by a by-law can create a lien on the stock, is a question upon which the authorities are not harmonious. The weight of authority, however, at least at the present day, appears to assert the existence of the right.² The

1. Liens By Statute and Charter.—Allen v. Montgomery R. Co., 11 Ala. 437; First Nat. Bank v. Hartford L., etc., Ins. Co., 45 Conn. 22; Ryder v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 516; German Security Bank v. Jefferson, 10 Bush (Ky.) 326; Merrill v. Call, 15 Me. 428; Farmers' Bank v. Iglehart, 6 Gill (Md.) 50; Hodges v. Planters' Bank, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 306; Reese v. Bank of Commerce, 14 Md. 271; 74 Am. Dec. 536; Bank of Utica v. Smalley, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 770; 14 Am. Dec. 526; Leggett v. Bank of Sing Sing, 24 N. Y. 383; Stebbins v. Phoenix F. Ins. Co., 3 Paige (N. Y.) 350; Arnold v. Suffolk Bank, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 424; Gaff v. Flesher, 33 Ohio St. 107; Rogers v. Huntington Bank, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 77; Presbyterian Congregation v. Carlisle Bank, 5 Pa. St. 345; Everhart v. West Chester, etc., R. Co., 28 Pa. St. 339; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Clarke, 29 Pa. St. 146; Cross v. Phenix Bank, 1 R. I. 39; Bohmer v. City Bank, 77 Va. 445; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 36; Sabin v. Bank of Woodstock, 21 Vt. 353; Union Bank v. Laird, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 390; Brent v. Bank of Washington, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 596; Cecil Nat. Bank v. Watson-town Bank, 105 U. S. 217; Hammond v. Hastings, 134 U. S. 401; McMurrich v. Bond Head Harbor Co., 9 U. C. Q. B. 333; Pinkett v. Wright, 2 Hare 120; Weston's Case, L. R., 4 Ch. 20.

In Stebbins v. Phoenix F. Ins. Co., 3 Paige (N. Y.) 350, Chancellor Walworth says: "I have no doubt that in equity the lien given by this charter upon the stock belonging to debtors of the company, and upon the dividends thereon, extends to all stock actually owned by such debtors, whether standing in their own names or in the names of other persons as their trustees. But the defendants could not be permitted to enforce that lien against bona fide purchasers of the stock who had no notice of such equitable lien."

So the lien may be conferred by articles of association. Bradford Banking Co. v. Briggs, L. R., 12 App. Cas.

29; Bank v. Saulsbury, etc., Co., L. R., H. L. (1892) 281.

See the statutes of Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Utah, and Wisconsin for instances of general statutes conferring the lien.

A statute authorizing the sale of stock for unpaid installments, relates entirely to the remedy and applies to corporations organized under a former statute authorizing a lien, but providing a definite method of enforcing it. Tutweiler v. Tuscaloosa Coal, etc., Co., 89 Ala. 391; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 445.

2. This is the view reached by recent text-book writers. Beach on Corporations, § 644; Spelling on Corporations, §§ 477, 478; Morawetz on Corporations, § 201; Cook on Stock and Stockholders, § 522. The subject is discussed in NATIONAL BANKS, vol. 16, p. 163. The writer of that article, after examining and comparing the cases, thinks that the weight of authority is otherwise.

In Cunningham v. Alabama L. Ins. Co., 4 Ala. 652, decided in 1843, it was held that under a charter which enacted that stock should be assignable on the books of the corporation under such regulations as the board of trustees should establish, it was competent for the trustees to declare by a by-law that no stockholder should be permitted to transfer his stock for the company while he was in default.

In Planters', etc., Mut. Ins. Co. v. Selma Sav. Bank, 63 Ala. 585, the right of an incorporated savings bank to make such a by-law seems to have been conceded, the point of contention being whether the by-law as passed was or was not the equivalent of an immediate and clear reservation by the bank of a lien for other debts and liabilities than on account of the unpaid stock.

In People v. Crockett, 9 Cal. 113, a by-law was refused a retroactive operation.

In Tuthill v. Walton, 1 Ga. 43, a chief difficulty arises where a bona fide purchaser denies notice of the lien.¹

d. CONTRACT AND USAGE.—Independent of other authority, the lien may be created by contract, and the acceptance by the stockholder of a certificate containing a provision for a lien, is a ratification of such a contract.² The lien may also arise from by-law asserting a lien was held valid as between the corporators themselves.

The recent case of Farmers', etc., Bank v. Haney (Iowa, 1893), 54 N. W. Rep. 61, recognized the validity of a lien created by a by-law.

In Holly Springs Bank v. Pinson, 58 Miss. 421; 38 Am. Rep. 330, the bank charter authorized the board of directors to make "all needful rules and by-laws for the management of the business of said company, and the mode and manner of transferring its stock." It was held that a by-law giving a lien was valid.

In St. Louis, etc., Ins. Co. v. Goodfellow, 9 Mo. 149, the facts and the decision were similar to those of the Mississippi case last cited.

In Mechanics' Bank v. Merchants' Bank, 45 Mo. 513; 100 Am. Dec. 388, the court founded its decision upon the Missouri case last cited, and held in effect that the by-law of a bank forbidding the transfer of stock where the owner was indebted to the bank, was valid, though inconsistent with the general law of the state governing the transfer of property.

Spurlock v. Pacific R. Co., 61 Mo. 319, is in line with the earlier Missouri cases.

In Young v. Bough, 23 N. J. Eq. 325, the chancellor said, that "A by-law of a money corporation declaring that the debts of a stockholder should be a lien on his stock and that he was not to transfer it until such debt was paid, was reasonable and legal."

In Lockwood v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 9 R. I. 308; 11 Am. Rep. 258, it was held that a power to make by-laws to justify the management of the business of an association was sufficient to justify a by-law creating a lien on the stock. In this case the subject underwent long and critical discussion. See in this connection, McDowell v. Wilmington Bank, 1 Harr. (Del.) 27; Geyer v. Western Ins. Co., 3 Pittsb. (Pa.) 41; Brent v. Bank of Washington, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 596; Knight v. Old Nat. Bank, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 429; In re Dunkerson, 4

Biss. (U. S.) 227; Pendergast v. Bank of Stockton, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 108; In re Bachman, 2 Cent. L. J. 119; 12 Nat. Bank Reg. 223; Child v. Hudson's Bay Co., 2 P. Wms. 207.

The early Massachusetts cases of Plymouth Bank v. Norfolk Bank, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 454, and Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90, questioned the validity of a by-law giving a corporation such a lien.

1. In Anglo-California Bank v. Grangers' Bank, 63 Cal. 359, the court said that the bank might make by-laws regulating the transfer of stock, but could not under that power create a secret lien upon stock which would attach to it in the hands of a bona fide purchaser without notice. In line with this decision are the cases of Driscoll v. West Bradley, etc., Co., 59 N. Y. 96; Attica Bank v. Manufacturers' Bank, 20 N. Y. 501; Leggett v. Sing Sing Bank, 24 N. Y. 283; Conklin v. Second Nat. Bank, 45 N. Y. 655; Arnold v. Suffolk Bank, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 424; Rosenback v. Salt Springs Nat. Bank, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 495; Byron v. Carter, 22 La. Ann. 98; Petot v. Johnson, 33 La. Ann. 1268; New Orleans Banking Assoc. v. Wiltz, 4 Woods (U. S.) 43; Steamship Dock Co. v. Henon, 52 Pa. St. 280; Mechanics' Bank v. Shouse, 102 Pa. St. 488; Fechheimer v. Exchange Bank, 79 Va. 80; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 156. See also Carroll v. Mullanphy Sav. Bank, 8 Mo. App. 249; Evansville Bank v. Metropolitan Bank, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 527; Lee v. Citizens' Bank, 2 Cin. Super. Ct. 298. Compare also Neal v. Janney, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 188.

2. Liens by Contract.—Jennings v. Bank of California, 79 Cal. 323; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 145; Vansands v. Middlesex Co. Bank, 26 Conn. 144; Farmers', etc., Bank v. Haney (Iowa, 1893), 54 N. W. Rep. 61. In the first case the court, by Hayne, C., said: "It is argued that the terms upon which shares of stock may be transferred are prescribed by the statute, and that the corporation had no power to annex other conditions. So far usage,¹ but the absence of usage does not affect the validity of a lien created by contract.²

e. INFERENCE AND CONSTRUCTION.—Where the lien is not otherwise expressly created, a general statutory provision prohibiting or restricting an indebted stockholder from transferring his shares or receiving dividends, will authorize the lien.³ So a general authority to regulate transfers,⁴ or even to regulate the coras the power of corporate legislation is concerned, this may be conceded, and it may be assumed for the purpose of the case that a corporation could not make a by-law which would operate in and of itself to create a lien upon the stock for the indebtedness of the stockholder. But the power to legislate is one thing, and the power to contract is quite another."

1. Liens by Usage.—Wain v. Bank of N. A., 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 73. But such usage has been held not binding as against judgment creditors. Bryon v. Carter, 22 La. Ann. 98.

In Driscoll v. West Bradley, etc., Mfg. Co., 59 N. Y. 96, the court says: "A further point is made by the defendant that the by-law was, in this case, adopted with the assent and vote of Bradley, as one of the trustees of the defendant. There are cases in which it has been held that a holder of stock is bound by a usage of the company, or by an informal regulation, made known at the time of taking his certificate, that the company may have a lien thereon for an indebtedness; and it has been held that assignees in insolvency of such a stockholder are also bound. Morgan v. Bank of N. A., 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 73; Vansands v. Middlesex Co. Bank., 26 Conn. 144. But no authority is cited for the further position that a bona fide purchaser of stock, without notice or knowledge of such usage or regulation derived from the contents of the certificate, or otherwise, is bound thereby."

In the recent case of Reading Trust Co. v. Reading Iron Works, 137 Pa. St. 282, a by-law provided that the shares of an indebted stockholder might be applied in payment if the latter were not made within a given time. The corporation, instead of declaring dividends, allowed annual credits, and one of the stockholders had drawn in excess of his allowance. The court said: "This indebtedness was a lien on his stock by virtue of the by-laws he assisted in making. The stock was pledged for its payment. Morgan v. Bank of N. A., 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 73; Rogers v. Huntingdon Bank, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 77; Grant v. Mechanics' Bank, 15 S. & R. (Pa.) 140; Sewall v. Lancaster Bank, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 285."

2. Jennings v. Bank of California, 79 Cal. 323; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 145.

3. Liens by Construction.—Arnold v. Suffolk Bank, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 424; Reading Trust Co. v. Reading Iron Works, 137 Pa. St. 282; Kenton Ins. Co. v. Bowman, 84 Ky. 430; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 578; Farmers' Bank Case, 2 Bland (Md.) 394; Mechanics Bank v. Seton, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 309; Brent v. Bank of Washington, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 614; Union Bank v. Laird, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 390; Pierson v. Bank of Washington, 3 Cranch (C. C.) 363; In re Dunkerson, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 227; Cecil Nat. Bank v. Watsontown Bank, 105 U. S. 220.

4. Cunningham v. Alabama L. Ins., etc., Co., 4 Ala. 652; Bryon v. Carter, 22 La. Ann. 97; St. Louis Perpetual Ins. Co. v. Goodfellow, 9 Mo. 149; Spurlock v. Pacific R. Co., 61 Mo. 319; Lockwood v. Mechanics Nat. Bank, 9 R. I. 308; 11 Am. Rep. 253; Pendergast v. Bank of Stockton, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 108; Brent v. Bank of Washington, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 596.

An act prohibiting banks from making loans or discounts on the security of their shares, will also prevent them from acquiring liens for debts so created, though such liens are authorized by a prior by-law. Nicollet Nat. Bank v. City Bank, 38 Minn. 85; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 423. But see Vansands v. Middlesex Co. Bank, 26 Conn. 144. An option to prohibit transfers by an indebted stockholder must be exercised by the corporation before a lien arising therefrom will attach. Perrine v. Fireman's Ins. Co., 22 Ala. 575. And the lien does not attach to shares issued with powers of attorney to enable non-resident allottees to deal with them as negotiable securities, or as money payporate management, has been held to confer the power to create a lien.¹

2. Nature and Extent—a. TO WHAT IT ATTACHES.—When the lien does exist, its operation is very comprehensive. It attaches to all the shares of the debtor, though spurious and obtained by fraud,² though the corporation has been dissolved,³ sometimes where a portion of the stock is paid up,⁴ and whether the debtor holds the legal⁵ or equitable⁶ title. But the lien cannot be enforced against an unregistered transferee by retaining dividends as a set-off to debts due from the assignor where the corporation has knowledge of the assignment.⁷ It attaches also to dividends,⁸ unless they are declared after the stockholder's death.⁹

b.* FOR WHAT DEBTS.—The lien is a general one and secures all debts¹⁰ due from the stockholder or firm of which he is a mem-ments. Hunter v. Stewart, 4 De G. F. & J. 168.

1. Mechanics' Bank v. Merchants' Bank, 45 Mo. 513; 100 Am. Dec. 388; Knight v. Old Nat. Bank, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 429. Contra, Bank of Attica v. Manufacturers, etc., Bank, 20 N. Y. 501; Driscoll v. West Bradley, etc., Mfg. Co., 59 N. Y. 96.

2. Mount Holley Paper Co.'s Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 513.

3. In re General Exchange Bank, L. R., 6 Ch. 818.

4. Stebbins v. Phoenix F. Ins. Co., 3 Paige (N. Y.) 350. Contra, Petersburg Sav., etc., Co. v. Lumsden, 75 Va. 327; Shenandoah Valley R. Co. v. Griffith, 76 Va. 913; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 120; Hubbersty v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., L. R., 2 Q. B. 471.

5. New London, etc., Bank v. Brocklebank, L. R., 21 Ch. Div. 302; 51 L. J. Ch. 711; Burns v. Laurie, 2 Court of Session Cas. (Scotland) 2d series, 1340. Compare Young v. Vough, 23 N. J. Eq. 325.

Unless the corporation has notice that the registered stockholder is a mere trustee. Mechanics' Bank v. Seton, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 299.

6. Planters, etc., Mut. Ins. Co. v. Selma Sav. Bank, 63 Ala. 585; Stebbins v. Phoenix F. Ins. Co. 3 Paige (N. Y.) 350.

7. Gemmell v. Davis (Md. 1892), 23 Atl. Rep. 1032; Mechanics' Bank v. Seton, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 299.

8. Hagar v. Union Nat. Bank, 63 Me. 509; Sargent v. Franklin Ins. Co., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 90; 19 Am. Dec. 306; Bates v. New York Ins. Co., 3 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 238; Hague v.

Dandeson, 2 Exch. 741. But see Attorney Gen'l v. State Bank, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 545.

9. Brent v. Bank of Washington, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 517; Merchants Bank v. Shouse, 102 Pa. St. 488.

10. The lien attaches for unpaid subscriptions for which calls have been made. Spurlock v. Pacific R. Co., 61 Mo. 319; McCready v. Rumsey, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 574; Rogers v. Huntingdon Bank, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 77; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Clarke, 29 Pa. St. 146; Petersburg Sav., etc., Co. v. Lumsden, 75 Va. 325; In re Bachman, 12 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 223; Great North of Eng. R. Co. v. Bidulph, 7 M. & W. 243; Reg. v. Wing, 33 Eng. L. & Eq. 80; Shaw v. Rowley, 16 M. & W. 810; 5 Railw. Cas. 47; Ex parte Littledale, L. R., 9 Ch. 257; Hubbersty v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., L. R., 2 Q. B. 471.

Contra.—If installments have not been called in. Hall v. U. S. Ins. Co., 5 Gill (Md.) 484. The lien attaches for debts accruing either before or after the stock was acquired. Schmidt v. Hennepin, etc., Co., 35 Minn. 511; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 576.

But the debt must be due to the company, and not to a mere trustee of it. Child v. Hudson's Bay Co., 3 P. Wms. 207; and the debt must be bona fide; one assigned to the corporation for the express purpose of enforcing its lien will not suffice. White's Bank v. Toledo F. & M. Ins. Co., 12 Ohio St. 601. The lien is good against the registered holders only. Helm v. Swiggett, 12 Ind. 194; In re Ystalyfera Gas Co., W. N. (1887) 30.

ber,¹ even where they arise out of transactions not connected with his shares,² and though the stockholder is but a surety for the debt,³ and though it is contracted after the transfer without notice to the corporation.⁴

c. TIME.—The lien attaches though the debt is not due and payable at the time,⁵ and may continue after an action upon

In Rogers v. Huntingdon Bank, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 77, the act of incorporation provided that "no stockholder indebted to the institution shall be authorized to make a transfer or receive a dividend, till such debts have been discharged," etc. Plaintiffs' vendor was "indebted to the bank for money borrowed on discount, in the usual manner." Chief Justice Tilghman says: "It was contended on the part of the plaintiffs that the words indebted to the institution should be restrained to debts on account of the original subscription to the capital of the bank. But I can perceive no ground for such restriction. The words embrace all debts, and there is good reason for their extending to all. When the directors discount the note of a stockholder, they know that his stock is liable, and therefore may be less attentive to the sufficiency of the indorsers. The indorsers, too, have an interest in the lien of the bank, and it may be presumed that many persons have been induced to indorse on the strength of this lien. We must not reject the plain meaning of words and resort to probable conjectures."

1. Planters', etc., Mut. Ins. Co. v. Selma Sav. Bank, 63 Ala. 585; Arnold v. Suffolk Bank, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 424; Mechanics' Bank v. Earp, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 384; Geyer v. Western Ins. Co., 3 Pittsb. (Pa.) 241; In re Bigelow, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 471.

2. Cunningham v. Alabama L. Ins., etc., Co., 4 Ala. 652; Mobile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cullom, 49 Ala. 558; Jennings v. Bank of California, 79 Cal. 323; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 145 (indebtedness from overdrafts); Mechanics' Bank v. Earp, 4 Rawle (Pa.) 334; Rogers v. Huntingdon Bank, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 77; Burford v. Crandell, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 86; Union Bank v. Laird, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 350; Ex parte Stringer, L. R., 9 Q. B. Div. 436.

3. St. Louis Perpetual Ins. Co. v. Goodfellow, 9 Mo. 149; Leggett v. Bank of Sing Sing, 24 N. Y. 283.

4. Platt v. Birmingham Axle Co., 41 Conn. 255; First Nat. Bank v. Hart- ford L., etc., Ins. Co., 45 Conn. 22; Sabin v. Bank of Woodstock, 21 Vt. 353. Otherwise if the corporation has notice of the transfer. Bank of America v. McNeil, 10 Bush (Ky.) 54; Nesmith v. Washington Bank, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 324; Conant v. Reed, 1 Ohio St. 298. But not so where the corporation has knowledge of the transfer, though it be unrecorded. Gemmell v. Davis (Md.), 23 Atl. Rep. 1032.

5. Cunningham v. Alabama L. Ins., etc., Co., 4 Ala. 652; St. Louis Perpetual Ins. Co. v. Goodfellow, 9 Mo. 149; Leggett v. Bank of Sing Sing, 24 N. Y. 283; McCready v. Rumsey, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 574; Downer v. Zanesville Bank, Wright (Ohio) 477; Rogers v. Huntingdon Bank, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 77; Grant v. Mechanics Bank, 15 S. & R. (Pa.) 140; Sewall v. Lancaster Bank, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 285; Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Clarke, 29 Pa. St. 146; In re Bachman, 12 Nat. Bank Reg. 223; Brent v. Bank of Washington, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 596; In re London, etc., Banking Co., 34 Beav. 332. Contra, where the limitation "actually due and payable" is provided. Reese v. Bank of Commerce, 14 Md. 271; 74 Am. Dec. 536; and see In re Stockton Malleable Iron Co., L. R., 2 Ch. Div. 101; 45 L. J. Ch. 168.

In construing the meaning of "indebted" in the act forbidding transfers by indebted stockholders, Tilghman, C. J., says in Grant v. Mechanics' Bank, 15 S. & R. (Pa.) 143: "It is said by the counsel for the plaintiffs, that it would be extremely inconvenient and hard on stockholders if they were to lose the right of making transfers or receiving dividends merely because they happened to draw or indorse a note which was discounted in a bank, perhaps without their knowledge. That an inconvenience might sometimes happen in this way, is true; but it is believed not often, because the directors would not be apt to refuse permission to transfer, or withhold dividends in stock, unless there was danger of loss; besides the stockholders derive no small advantage from it would be barred by the Statute of Limitations.¹ The lien dates from the time when a call is made,² and its existence should be ascertained immediately after an application for a transfer.³

3. Priorities and Notice.—The lien of the corporation is generally superior to any rights acquired by transferees;⁴ and all per-the facility with which they obtained discounts on the faith of a lien on their stock. The question is, however, not whether stockholders might be put to inconvenience, but what was the intent of the law. Now, no doubt, this restraint on the transfer of the stock was intended for the benefit of the bank, but of what benefit would it be if the stockholder had the unrestrained right of transfer at any time before this note fell due? The time of making this loan is that at which the directors must look out for security. If the stock was pledged by law, they might be easy as to other security, but if, trusting to this pledge, they discounted a stockholder's note, who had the right to withdraw his stock at pleasure, then the security in fact amounted to nothing. To be sure, if it were clearly ascertained that by indebteding the law meant nothing but a debt actually due, the bank directors would have no right to complain; because they would know that the stock was no security, and therefore they must look well to the character and property (other than stock) of the drawers and indorsers before a note was discounted, or demand an actual pledge of the stock."

1. Farmers' Bank v. Iglehart, 6 Gill (Md.) 50; Geyer v. Western Ins. Co., 3 Pittsb. (Pa.) 41; Brent v. Bank of Washington, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 596.

A by-law providing that if any debt to the corporation is not paid by a certain time the debtor's stock may be applied to its payment, authorizes a lien for advances from the company to the stockholder in excess of his profits, and the Statute of Limitations does not run against such lien when the debt is not paid. Reading Trust Co. v. Reading Iron works, 137 Pa. St. 282.

In Brent v. Bank of Washington, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 596, Judge Baldwin says: "In Bank of U. S. v. Donnelly, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 361, this court laid it down as an established principle that the act of limitations operated only to bar the remedy, not to extinguish the right or cause of action; and that a judgment on a plea of the statute was only to bar the remedy on a contract, when sued for in Virginia, as the limitation act of that state embraced the one declared on; but did not operate to extinguish the contract when sued on elsewhere, or in Kentucky, where by the lex loci it was not affected by any limitation. Ib. 370. We cannot take this case out of this established rule; the legal remedy is barred, but the debt remains as an unextinguished right; and the bank, when called into a court of equity, may hold to an equitable lien, or other means in their hands, till it is discharged."

2. Reg. v. Londonderry, etc., R. Co., L. R., 13 Q. B. 998.

3. In re Cawley, L. R., 42 Ch. Div. 209; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 425.

Under the Connecticut statute, giving the corporation a lien on stock for debts due the corporation, it is held that such act, immediately upon going into effect, created a lien in favor of the corporation for old indebtedness. First Nat. Bank v. Hartford L., etc., Ins. Co., 45 Conn. 22.

4. Mobile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cullom, 49 Ala. 558; Conant v. Reed, 1 Ohio St. 298; Petersburg Sav., etc., Co. v. Lumsden, 75 Va. 327; Bohmer v. City Bank, 77 Va. 445; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 36; New Orleans Nat. Banking Assoc. v. Wiltz, 4 Woods (U. S.) 43; Watson v. Eales, 23 Beav. 294.

Where the amount of the lien exceeds the value of the stock, the purchaser acquires nothing except on payment of the former. Newberry v. Detroit, etc., Iron Co., 17 Mich. 141.

A purchaser under execution of stock, with notice of the corporation's lien for indebtedness, the latter being older than the judgment, takes it subject to such lien. Tuttle v. Walton, 1 Ga. 43.

But where the lien is acquired subsequently to an attachment, the rights of the attaching creditor are superior. Geyer v. Western Ins. Co., 3 Pittsb. (Pa.) 41; and where stock stands in a fictitious name, a bona fide purchaser will be protected against a lien for debts of the real owner. Stebbins v. Phoenix F. Ins. Co., 3 Paige (N. Y.) 350.

sons are charged with notice of a statute or charter authorizing the lien,¹ though not of a by-law.²

Where no lien is authorized, either by statute or by-law, the purchaser of stock, who died insolvent and indebted to the corporation, is entitled to transfer though the directors, without notice to him pass a by-law after his death prohibiting such transfer. Steamship Dock Co. v. Heron, 52 Pa. St. 280. See also Crease v. Babcock, 10 Met. (Mass.) 525; Grew v. Breed, 10 Met. (Mass.) 569.

The lien does not overreach a prior assignment of stock, so as to preclude its transfer, where the corporation before obtaining its charter had no lien on the stock. Neale v. Janney, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 188.

Where the holder of a certificate of withdrawn stock issued by a bank, assigns the same, and afterwards, in ignorance of it the bank discounts a note for the assignor believing him to be still the owner of such claim against it, the bank acquires no lien upon the certificate and no equity as against the real owner. Callanan v. Edwards, 32 N. Y. 483.

In England the recent decision of the House of Lords, in Bradford Banking Co. v. Briggs, L. R., 12 App. Cas. 28, would seem to settle at last the priorities in favor of a pledgee of shares as against the company for advances to the shareholder, after notice to the company of the pledge. The case is a striking instance of fluctuating litigation, as the final holding reverses L. R., 31 Ch. Div. 19, and restores L. R., 29 Ch. Div. 19, changing the rule as announced in Cook on Stock and Stockholders (2d. ed.), § 533, note. See also Miles v. New Zealand, etc., Estate Co., L. R., 32 Ch. Div. 266.

1. Statutes and Charters as Notice.—First Nat. Bank v. Hartford L. Ins. Co., 45 Conn. 22; Reese v. Bank of Commerce, 14 Md. 271; 74 Am. Dec. 536; Bishop v. Globe Co., 135 Mass. 132; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 161; St. Louis Perpetual Ins. Co. v. Goodfellow, 9 Mo. 149; Bank of Utica v. Smalley, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 770; 14 Am. Dec. 526; McCready v. Rumsey, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 574; Downer v. Zanesville Bank, Wright (Ohio) 477; Rogers v. Huntingdon Bank, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 77; Grant v. Mechanics' Bank, 15 S. & R. (Pa.) 140; Sewall v. Lancaster Bank, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 285; Bohmer v.

City Bank, 77 Va. 445; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 36; Union Bank v. Laird, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 390; Brent v. Bank of Washington, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 616; Cecil Nat. Bank v. Watontown Bank, 105 U. S. 217; Hammond v. Hastings, 134 U. S. 401; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 431.

In the recent case of Hammond v. Hastings, 134 U. S. 401, the controversy was between one who had purchased from a pledgee ignorant of the lien and the corporation. Mr. Justice Brewer said: "The law in terms provides for a lien, and that being a public law, all are charged with knowledge of its provisions. Generally, wherever paper of a similar nature to this is issued, under authority granted by general statute, whoever deals with that paper is charged with notice of all limitations and burdens attached to it by such statute. And this is true whether the party lives in or out of the state by which the law was enacted."

2. By-Law Not Constructive Notice Per Se.—Planters', etc., Mut. Ins. Co. v. Selma Sav. Bank, 63 Ala. 585; Anglo-Californian Bank v. Grangers Bank, 63 Cal. 359; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 543; where the purchasing bank had a similar by-law. Holly Springs Bank v. Pinson, 58 Miss. 421; 38 Am. Rep. 330; Driscoll v. West Bradley, etc., Mfg. Co., 59 N. Y. 109. Otherwise of a stockholder of a bank who borrows money from it. Tete v. Farmers, etc., Bank, 4 Brews. (Pa.) 308; Brent v. Bank of Washington, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 596.

"By-laws of private corporations are not in the nature of legislative enactments, so far as third persons are concerned. They are mere regulations of the corporation for the control and management of its own affairs. They are self-imposed rules, resulting from an agreement or contract between the corporation and its members to conduct corporate business in a particular way. They are not intended to interfere in the least with the rights and privileges of others who do not subject themselves to their influence. It may be said with truth therefore that no person not a member of the corporation can be affected in any of his rights by a corporate by-law of which he has no notice." Bank of Holly Springs v. Pinson, 58 Miss. 421; 38 Am. Rep. 333.

4. Waiver—a. HOW EFFECTED.—The lien of a corporation may be waived by it,¹ but waiver is not to be inferred without proof.² Thus, the acceptance of other security, though permissible,³ is not necessarily a waiver,⁴ nor is consent to the transfer of a portion of the stock a waiver as to the remainder.⁵

b. BY WHOM EFFECTED.—Representations of corporate officers that the stock is unincumbered may estop the company from claiming a lien.⁶ So waiver may be effected by representations of the general manager of the corporation;⁷ by the cashier of a bank,⁸ or by the secretary of an insurance company;⁹ but one in the employ of the corporation, known to have no power to transact its general business, cannot waive the lien.¹⁰

5. Enforcement.—The lien is most frequently enforced by the refusal of the corporation to register transfers from an indebted member.¹¹ Other methods of enforcement are foreclosure and

In Bishop v. Globe Co., 135 Mass. 132, plaintiff, a citizen of Massachusetts, was the assignee of one Wilkins, an indebted stockholder. The other facts and judgment are thus stated by the court: "The defendant had a statutory lien upon the stock to the full amount of Wilkins' indebtedness, and the plaintiff took the stock subject to that lien. He must be presumed to have known the public laws of Connecticut under which the corporation existed and the stock was held." First Nat. Bank v. Hartford L., etc., Ins. Co., 45 Conn. 22.

1. Hall v. U. S. Ins. Co., 5 Gill (Md.) 484; Hodges v. Planters' Bank, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 306; Cross v. Phenix Bank, 1 R. I. 39; Cecil Nat. Bank v. Watson-town Bank, 105 U. S. 217; Hammond v. Hastings, 134 U. S. 401; In re Hoylake R. Co., L. R., 9 Ch. 259; Bank v. Salisbury Gold Mining Co., L. R., H. L. (1892) 281. Intervening equities of creditors may restrict the right of waiver. In re Bachman, 12 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 223.

Where a bank issues new certificates to an assignee of one of its stockholders, making his shares "transferable after the holder pays all his liabilities to said bank," it thereby waives its lien upon such shares for payments due from the stockholder. Hill v. Pine River Bank, 45 N. H. 300.

2. First Nat. Bank v. Hartford L., etc., Ins. Co., 45 Conn. 22. The corporation, by assenting to an assignment by stockholders for creditors, "with no other preference than is or may be authorized by law," does not lose its lien on the stock for debts due from the assignor. Dobbins v. Walton, 37 Ga. 614; 95 Am. Dec. 37. See also Higgs v. Northern Assam Tea Co., L. R., 4 Exch. 387; In re Northern Assam Tea Co., L. R., 10 Eq. 458.

Waiver cannot be inferred from testimony that the right of a stockholder in good standing to transfer was not questioned or that one stockholder was allowed a large overdraft, nor is the lien lost by reorganization of the corporation and the adoption of a by-law removing restrictions. Jennings v. Bank of California, 79 Cal. 323; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 145.

3. Dunlop v. Dunlop, L. R., 21 Ch. Div. 583.

4. Kenton Ins. Co. v. Bowman, 84 Ky. 430; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 578; Union Bank v. Laird, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 390; In re Peebles, 2 Hughes (U. S.) 394.

5. First Nat. Bank v. Hartford L., etc., Ins. Co., 45 Conn. 22. But see Presbyterian Congregation v. Carlisle Bank, 5 Pa. St. 345. A temporary suspension of the lien may constitute a waiver. Bank of America v. McNeil, 10 Bush (Ky.) 54.

6. Moore v. Bank of Commerce, 52 Mo. 377, an officer in charge of the bank.

7. Bishop v. Globe Co., 135 Mass. 132; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 161; Young v. Vough, 23 N. J. Eq. 325.

8. Cecil Nat. Bank v. Watson-town Bank, 105 U. S. 217.

9. Chambersburg Ins. Co. v. Smith, 11 Pa. St. 120.

10. Kenton Ins. Co. v. Bowman, 84 Ky. 430; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 578.

11. Vansands v. Middlesex Co. Bank, sale¹ and attachment.² Enforcement is a right belonging exclusively to the corporation, and is to be exercised for its benefit alone.³

IX. LIFE ESTATES AND REMAINDERS.—See DIVIDENDS, vol. 5, p. 736; LEGACIES AND DEVICES, vol. 13, p. 220; REMAINDERS, vol. 20, p. 828; WILLS.

STOCK (LIVE)—(See also LIVE, vol. 13, p. 928).—The word stock used in connection with farm or land has a settled meaning whereby it is restricted to the animals which are used with, supported by, or reared upon it.⁴

26 Conn. 144; First Nat. Bank v. Hartford L., etc., Ins. Co., 45 Conn. 22; Farmers Bank v. Iglehart, 6 Gill (Md.) 56; Reese v. Bank of Commerce, 14 Md. 271; 74 Am. Dec. 536; Mechanics' Bank v. Merchants' Bank, 45 Mo. 513; 100 Am. Dec. 388; McCready v. Rumsey, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 574; Geyer v. Western Ins. Co., 3 Pittsb. (Pa.) 41; Klopp v. Lebanon Bank, 46 Pa. St. 88; Mount Holly Paper Co.'s Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 514; Bohmer v. City Bank, 77 Va. 445; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 36.

If the corporation claims more than is due, the stockholder must tender what he admits to be due, in order to put the bank in the wrong for refusing to transfer. Peirson v. Bank of Washington, 3 Cranch (C. C.) 363. See also Ex parte Stringer, L. R., 9 Q. B. Div. 436; Gustard's Case, L. R., 8 Eq. 438.

1. Sabin v. Bank of Woodstock, 21 Vt. 353.

2. Farmers Bank Case, 2 Bland (Md.) 394; In re Morrison, 10 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 105; Brent v. Bank of Washington, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 596.

3. Bank of Utica v. Smalley, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 770; 14 Am. Dec. 526. See also Planters, etc., Mut. Ins. Co. v. Selma Sav. Bank, 63 Ala. 585; Anglo-Californian Bank v. Grangers' Bank, 63 Cal. 359; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 543; Bishop v. Globe Co., 135 Mass. 132; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 161; Mount Holly Paper Co.'s Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 513.

Bibliography.—The literature of the law of stock is to be sought, not only in the works treating specially on that subject, but also in the general treatises on corporation law. American authorities used in the preparation of this article: Abbott's Digest of the Law of Corporations, 1879; Potter, Corporations, 1879; Angell & Ames, Corporations, 1882; Boone, Corporations, 1882; Morawetz, Corporations, 1882; Lowell, Transfer of Stock, 1884; Taylor, Corporations, 1888; Waterman, Corporations, 1888; Wait, Insolvent Corporations, 1888; Cook, Stock and Stockholders, 1889; Kerr, Business Corporations, 1890; Beach, Corporations, 1891; Spelling, Corporations, 1892; Reno, Non-Residents and Foreign Corporations, 1892; Boisot, By-Laws, 1892; Thompson, Corporations, 1894; American and English Corporation Cases, vols. 1-38; American and English Railroad Cases, vols. 1-50. English authorities used are: Kyd, Corporations, 1793-4; George, Joint Stock Companies, 1825; Grant, Corporations, 1854; Wordsworth, Companies, 1865; Digby, Sale and Transfer of Shares, 1868; Shelford, Companies, 1870; Healey, Companies, 1875; Thring, Companies, 1880; Lumley, By-Laws, 1877; Buckley, Companies, 1887; Lindley, Companies, 1892; Manson, Trading and other Companies, 1892.

For the periodical literature of the subject, see Nature and Transfer of Stock, 7 Southern Law Review (N. S.) 430 (Henry Budd, Jr.); Preferred Stock, 16 American Law Review 460; Fraudulent Transfers, 20 Albany Law Journal 344 (Irving Browne); Transfer of Title, 10 American Law Review 276 (B. B. Boone); Railway and Corporation Law Journal. And see generally, Jones' Index to Legal Periodicals.

4. Graham v. Davidson, 2 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 155.

The word "stock" in agriculture means domestic animals collected, raised, or used on a farm. Webster's Dict. followed in State v. Clark, 65 Iowa 336; Inman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 60 Iowa 461; Baker v. Baker, 51 Wis. 546.

In State v. Clark, 65 Iowa 336, it was held that the word "stock," as used in a statute making it a misde-

STOCK-BROKERS.—(See also AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 331; BROKERS, vol. 2, p. 577; GAMBLING CONTRACTS, vol. 8, p. 992; STOCK, vol. 23, p. 582; STOCK EXCHANGE, vol. 23, p. 748; STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23, p. 777; USAGES AND CUSTOMS.)

- I. Definitions, 700.
- II. Relation to Client, 702.
- III. The Order to Purchase, 703.
 - 1. Execution of Order, 703.
 - 2. Title to and Custody and Disposition of Stock Purchased, 706.
 - 3. Ownership of Stock Purchased, 709.
 - 4. Sale by Broker for Want of Margins, 710.
 - 5. Sale by Order of Client, 712.
 - a. In General, 712.
 - b. Stop Orders, 713.
 - 6. Broker's Right to Close the Transaction, 714.
 - a. After Reasonable Time, 714.
 - b. Upon Bankruptcy or Death of the Client, 715.
- IV. Sale of Stock, 716.
 - 1. For Immediate Delivery, 716.
 - 2. "Short Sales," 718.
 - a. In General, 718.
 - b. When Broker May Close the Transaction, 720.
 - c. Order to "Buy in" Stock, 722.
 - (1) In General, 722.
 - (2) "Stop Orders" in Short Sales, 723.
 - d. Legality of Short Sales, 723.
- V. Options, 724.
- VI. Rights and Liabilities of Brokers, 725.
 - 1. Right to Buy and Sell in the Customary Manner, 725.
 - 2. Right to Act by Substitute, 726.
 - 3. May Not Act in Dual Capacity in the Same Transaction, 726.
 - 4. Liability to Undisclosed Client of Another Broker, 728.
 - 5. Right to Commissions, 729.
- VII. Special Contracts and Joint Undertakings, 730.
- VIII. Usages and Customs, 732.
- IX. Transfer, Registration and Negotiability of Certificates (See STOCK, vol. 23, p. 582), 735.
- X. Pledge of Stock Certificates and Other Securities (See PLEDGE, vol. 18, p. 610), 735.
- XI. Avoidance of the Contract, 736.
 - 1. For Failure of Consideration, 736.
 - 2. By Operation of the Statute of Frauds (See STOCK, vol. 23, p. 582), 737.
 - 3. For Illegality of the Transaction, 737.
 - a. Stock-Jobbing Acts, 737.
 - b. Wagering Contracts, 741.
 - c. "Corners" in Stocks, 746.
- XII. Measure of Damages, 746.

meanor to release distrained stock, had its ordinary meaning and included swine.

The term in its primary sense includes the domestic animals generally; all the animals used by man for labor or food. Thus, a statute which punishes driving any stock or cattle to feed upon lands without the consent of the landowner, includes sheep. U. S. v. Mattock, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 148.

In Inman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 60 Iowa 459, a team of horses harnessed to a wagon, which had escaped from the control of the owner, was held to be "live stock running at large," within a statute allowing damages against a railroad company for stock killed or injured.

A testator devised and bequeathed a certain farm and "all the stock, grain, and farming utensils." It was held, in accordance with the definition above, that "stock" did not include wool. Baker v. Baker, 51 Wis. 538.

In England it has been held that the terms "stock of my farm" and "farming stock" include all the movable property upon or belonging to the farm, and even the growing crops. Harvey v. Harvey, 32 Beav. 441; Evans v. Williamson, 17 Ch. Div. 696 and cases cited. In Howze v. Howze, 19 Tex. 553, however, this English construction of "farm stock" was particularly noticed, and was held not applicable to this country, a bequest of stock in that case being held not to include a wagon.

In Dudley v. Deming, 34 Conn. 173,

I. DEFINITIONS.—A stock-broker is a broker who, for a commission, attends to the purchase and sale of stocks or shares, and of government and other securities, in behalf and for the account of clients.¹

Stock-brokers as a class made their appearance in the latter part of the seventeenth century.²

The functions of the stock-broker are broader than those of the ordinary broker who, as a rule, acts as a mere negotiator, and is not intrusted with the possession of the property concerning which he acts,³ while the stock-broker frequently is intrusted with the possession of the securities, and may even take and transfer them without the name of his principal appearing in the transaction, and often pays or advances the price and receives payment.⁴ For a better understanding of the subject a list of definitions of various terms employed in stock transactions is subjoined.⁵

it was said "that the term stock as used in the finding, uniformly imports cattle and not horses, and such is its popular meaning when used in respect to a farm." This, however, does not conform with the definitions given supra.

"Live and Dead Stock" as used in a will, see DEAD, vol. 5, p. 114.

Ordinary Stock.—See ORDINARY, vol. 17, p. 273.

Dogs are not "stock." within the meaning of Rev. Sts. of Texas, art. 4245, requiring railroads to fence against "stock." Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Scott (Tex. App.), 17 S. W. Rep. 116.

1. Century Dict.

2. In Gibbons v. Rule, 12 Moore 539; 4 Bing. 301; 13 E. C. L. 444. Best. C. J., said: "The statute 8 & 9 Wm. III., ch. 20, by which the first government loan was raised, speaks of a new description of brokers, persons employed in buying and selling tallies, the government securities of those days. These have since been called stock-brokers."

3. Fowler v. Hollins, L. R., 7 Q. B. 616; Pott v. Turner, 6 Bing. 702; 19 E. C. L. 211; Coddington v. Goddard, 16 Gray (Mass.) 436; Hinckley v. Arey, 27 Me. 362; Northrup v. Shook, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 242. See BROKERS, vol. 2, p. 571, et seq.

4. In Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 235, Woodruff, J., thus defined the distinction between the stock-broker and the ordinary broker: "In the first place, the stock dealer who is employed, though called a stock-broker, does not act as broker in this transaction. It is no part of the office or duty of a broker to pay the price. It is no part of the office or right of a broker to receive the property, still less to take the title to his own name. In this transaction he acts in a peculiar business, in his own name and on his own responsibility, protected against loss by the indemnity furnished, or by the agreement to be furnished to him. The idea of mere agency, ordinarily suggested by the name 'broker,' does not, therefore, arise out of the fact that the dealers in stocks for account of others, as to profit and loss, are called stock-brokers. In the next place, the transaction, according to the intent and purpose of the employment of the broker, does not contemplate that the customer will ever receive the stock or own it. It may be that if the broker desires to close his connection with the transaction, the customer, if he pays the cost, interest, and all commissions which the broker has earned, or is entitled to earn, will receive the stock, whether he may so insist or not, is a collateral question; and if he be so entitled, it will nevertheless be true, that this is not in pursuance of the arrangement, but a departure from it, for the intent is that the stock shall be carried by the broker until directed to be sold, the customer never having the title to the stock at all." See also Northrup v. Shook, 10 Blatchf. (U. S.) 243, where the same judge referred with approval to the language just quoted.

5. A "bear" is one who sells stocks for future delivery which he does not own or possess, hoping to make a profit by reason of the decline of prices before the day named for delivery. Such operations are called "selling short." Knowlton v. Fitch, 52 N. Y. 289; White v. Smith, 54 N. Y. 522.

A "bull" is one who buys stocks with the expectation of making a profit through a rise of prices. Such person is said to be "long of stocks."

"Carry."—Where a broker advances the money, or the principal part of it, to buy stocks, and holds them subject to the orders of his client, he is said to "carry" the stocks. Price v. Gover, 40 Md. 102; Salters v. Genin, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 250.

"Call."—A "call" is a contract by which the holder, for a consideration paid to the maker, has the option to claim the delivery of securities therein named on a certain day for a price named.

"Put."—A "put" is the opposite of a "call." The holder has the option to deliver certain securities or not to the maker on a certain day for a certain price.

"Straddle."—A "straddle," sometimes called a "put and call," gives the holder a right to either claim or deliver the specified stocks at a certain day and price. "The word, if not elegant, is at least expressive. It means the double privilege of a put and call, and secures to the holder the right to demand of the seller at a certain price within a certain time a certain number of shares of a specified stock, or to require him to take at the same price within the same time the same shares of stock." Harris v. Tumbridge, 83 N. Y. 92; 38 Am. Rep. 398.

"Spread Eagle."—"A 'spread eagle' is the operation of a broker who sells a large quantity of stock; for example, sixty days' buyer's option, and buys the same quantity at a lower price on the same time, seller's option. If both contracts run their full time he makes his differences, but if a buyer or seller calls for a settlement before the time, he may be seriously embarrassed." Lewis, Stocks, Bonds and Securities, pp. 16, 17.

"Shave."—"Shave" is a premium paid for an extension of the time of delivery, or time of payment, or for the right to vary a stock contract in any particular. Biddle, Stock Exchange, p. 74.

"Wash Sales."—"Wash sales" are not real sales, but are made by persons interested to each other for the purpose of giving a fictitious value to the stock." Dos Passos, p. 117.

"Where a broker receives an order to buy and also an order to sell the same number of shares of the same stock, he is bound to execute both orders separately to the best advantage of each principal. Where, however, he simply transfers the stock from one to the other and retains the difference, the operation is said to be a 'wash,' which is invalid." Biddle, Stock-brokers, p. 74.

"Corner."—"A 'corner' in stocks is where the owners or holders (i. e., bulls) refuse to lend stocks to the bears with which to carry out their short contracts, in which event the bears, being unable to deliver, are compelled to go into the market or Exchange and buy the stocks at any price at which they can obtain them" Dos Passos, Stock-brokers, etc., pp. 116, 117.

In Sampson v. Shaw, 101 Mass. 145; 3 Am. Rep. 327, the process of cornering stocks is described as follows: "To buy up a large quantity of a certain stock and control it in such a manner as to make a large demand for it, so that parties selling on time will be compelled to pay large differences; then to receive and make proposals and agreements for the purchase of stock to be delivered at a future date; the parties agreeing to sell not then having the stock in possession or owning it, and then the sellers, when the day for delivery arrives, will be compelled to pay such prices or differences as the parties to this combination may ask."

The following definitions are taken from Biddle, p. 70, et seq., and are of terms used principally on the London Stock Exchange:

"Backwardation."—This is the seller's postponement to deliver shares with the consent of the buyer upon payment of a premium to the latter.

"Contango," is the postponement of payment by the buyer of stock on the payment of a premium to the seller.

"Contango Day" is the day to which the contracts for "contango" are postponed.

"Continuation" is the agreement to postpone the settlement until the next settling day.

"Settling Day" is the day on which the accounts are settled up and the contracts completed.

"Name Day" is the day preceding settling day.

II. RELATION TO CLIENT.—It seems never to have been seriously questioned that a stock-broker, in executing the instructions of his client, acts as an agent;¹ but, as we have seen, the stock-broker assumes duties and obligations which are not incident to his calling as a mere broker, and this fact has given rise to considerable discussion as to the nature of the fiduciary relation he sustains toward his client in those transactions where he furnishes the whole or a portion of the money to buy stock and carries it for the client for purposes of speculation. In the absence of a special agreement, it seems that in such transactions the relation of pledgor and pledgee exists between the client and broker, and that the latter holds the stock so purchased as security for his commissions and the portion of the purchase price thereof which has not been furnished by the former,² although the rights of the

The "regular way" (in the United States) is a sale with delivery and payment on the following day.

A "lame duck" is one who is unable to meet his contracts in the Exchange—an insolvent.

"Making a Price" is the jobber's naming two prices to the broker, at one of which he binds himself to sell, and at the other to buy.

"Jobber" is the intermediary acting between brokers on the Stock Exchange. The term is probably peculiar to the London Stock Exchange.

"Option Account Day" is the day before account day or name day.

1. In cases involving a broker's rights and liabilities, the courts assume that he is an agent.

In Galigher v. Jones, 129 U. S. 193, Justice Bradley said, arguendo: "A broker is but an agent, and is bound to follow the directions of his principal, or give notice that he declines to continue the agency. In the absence of a special agreement to the contrary, it is the principal's judgment, and not his, that is to control in the purchase and sale of stocks." See Thacker v. Hardy, 4 Q. B. Div. 685.

2. Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 235, is the leading case on this subject. Hunt, C. J., analyzes the contract between the parties as follows: "The broker undertakes and agrees—1. At once to buy for the customer the stocks indicated. 2. To advance all the money required for the purchase beyond the ten per cent. furnished by the customer. 3. To carry or hold such stocks for the benefit of the customer so long as a margin of ten per cent. is kept good, or until notice is given by either party that the transaction must be closed.

An appreciation in the value of the stocks is the gain of the customer and not of the broker. 4. At all times to have in his name or under his control ready for delivery the shares purchased, or an equal amount of other shares of the same stock. 5. To deliver such shares to the customer when required by him upon a receipt of the advances and commissions accruing to the broker; or, 6. To sell such shares upon the order of the customer upon payment of the like sums to him, and account to the customer for the proceeds of such sale. Under this contract the customer undertakes—1. To pay a margin of ten per cent. on the current market value of the shares. 2. To keep good such margin according to the fluctuations of the market. 3. To take the shares so purchased on his order whenever required by the broker, and to pay the difference between the percentage advanced by him and the amount paid therefor by the broker." It was contended by the plaintiff that in addition to the relation of agency, the broker was also a pledgee of the shares after they were bought. The defendants, on the other hand, contended that the relation of the parties was wholly by force of a mutual and dependent contract, and that defendant's agreement to hold or carry the stock was dependent on the plaintiff's furnishing them with the means to do so, and that when the plaintiff failed in that respect, the obligation to hold the stock ceased and the right to sell it was complete. The chief justice, continuing, said: "A pledge is a delivery of goods by a debtor to his creditor to be kept till the debt is discharged; or, again, it is a bailment of personal parties have sometimes been determined by considering this as a conditional contract between the broker and client.¹

III. THE ORDER TO PURCHASE — 1. Execution of Order.—A broker, who receives instructions from his client to buy stock at a fixed price, must buy at or below that price.² If he is ordered to buy a certain number of shares, and undertakes not to deliver the whole absolutely but to buy as many as he can, and there is nothing to show that the client regards the purchase of the whole property as security for some debt or engagement. 2 Kent's Com. 577. Story on Bailments, § 286. . . . So if the pledgee has the thing already in his possession, as by deposit or loan, the very contract transfers to him by operation of law a virtual possession thereof, as a pledge, the moment the contract is completed. (Story on Bailments, § 297.) . . . While it is true that the dealer in the present case never had actual possession of the property which he claims to have pledged, he had it sufficiently to bring his case within the principles of the law of pledge. . . . To have delivered the certificates to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff should then have returned them to the defendants, to be held by them as security for the advance in their purchase, would leave the parties in precisely the same situation as if the defendants had retained them for that purpose; the form of a delivery to the plaintiff, and a redelivery by him to the defendants, being waived by agreement of the parties. It comes fully within the principle that I have already quoted from Story on Bailments, that where the pledgee has the thing in his possession, the contract of pledge operates as a delivery the moment the contract is completed. The certificates are appropriated as security for an engagement—to-wit, the payment of the advance with interest and commissions. The possession and the delivery are complete in the abbreviated manner I have described. . . . In my judgment the contract between the parties to this action was in spirit and in effect, if not technically and in form, a contract of pledge." This case was followed in Stenton v. Jerome, 54 N. Y. 480; Baker v. Drake, 66 N. Y. 518; 23 Am. Rep. 80; Gruman v. Smith, 81 N. Y. 25, and Gillett v. Whiting, 120 N. Y. 402, and overrules Sterling v. Jaudon, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 459, and Hanks v. Drake, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 186.

1. In Wood v. Hayes, 15 Gray (Mass.) 375, Shaw, C. J., in considering such a transaction, said: "Lobdell advanced the money to buy the shares for account of Wood, and held the shares in his own name. It stood on the footing of contract. The contract was strictly conditional, to deliver so many shares on payment of so much money. The money was never paid, and the title to have performance never accrued." And in Covell v. Loud, 135 Mass. 41; 46 Am. Rep. 446, the court again held that the relation of the parties under such circumstances existed by force of a mutual and dependent contract; but remarked that if the transaction was treated as creating a pledge, a similar result would be reached.

2. An order to purchase at $57\frac{1}{8}$ is not fulfilled by a purchase at $57\frac{1}{8}$ or 58. Genin v. Isaacson, 6 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 213.

In Day v. Holmes, 103 Mass. 306, it appeared that on August 30, 1866, the defendant gave to the plaintiffs, who were stock-brokers, an order to buy for Holmes 500 shares of Pontiac mining stock, deliverable at any time at buyer's option, in sixty days and three days grace, with interest, at a price not exceeding $2 per share, the order to stand open for two weeks. On September 6, 1866, the plaintiffs exchanged with defendant bought-and-sold contracts, upon which the said 500 shares of Pontiac stock were stated as bought at $1.75 per share, deliverable in sixty days at buyer's option, and the words "and brokerage" added at the foot. At the expiration of sixty days and three days' grace, the plaintiffs rendered a written account to defendant, and thereupon their bought-and-sold contracts were mutually surrendered, and the defendant gave the plaintiffs his note for $916.61. The plaintiffs were unable at the time when the order was given to buy the stock in question on sixty days, but number of shares as essential to the value of a part, the contract is not necessarily entire, and is performed by the purchase of all the shares to be had.¹ It has been held that in contracts to buy and carry stock on a margin, subject to the orders of the client, for purposes of speculation, the broker is not bound to make an actual purchase of stock, and that it is a sufficient performance of the contract if he is ready and able to deliver it on demand at the price of the day of the contract.² The broker is not a guarantor of the genuineness of the securities he purchases for his client. If he exercises the care and diligence which a reasonably prudent purchaser himself would exercise, he will not be liable if the stock proves worthless.³ But where a broker, who has

they did buy it from other brokers on thirty days at $1.62½ per share and not at $1.75, as charged in their written statement. At the end of the thirty days and grace, the plaintiffs paid for the stock at $1.62½ per share, with interest and commissions, and the certificate was issued in their name, they holding the same as collateral to cover this contract of defendant, and defendant had no knowledge of the manner in which the plaintiffs procured this stock or of the amounts paid therefor. The court said: "Upon these facts, we are of opinion that the defendant is not liable upon the note in question. The course of the plaintiffs in buying the 500 shares of stock, as above stated, was not an execution of the order of the defendant and was unauthorized by him. It was a departure from the instructions of their principal, and he was not bound to take and pay for the stock thus purchased."

1. In Marye v. Strouse, 5 Fed. Rep. 483, it appeared that brokers had received an order to buy 500 shares of stock at $3 per share. They were able to purchase only 125 shares at that figure, and in passing upon this as a performance of the contract, the court said: "It was suggested, however, that the order for 500 shares might and ought to be regarded as an entire contract, and that the defendant was not bound to take less than the whole 500 shares. A sufficient answer to this position is that upon receiving the defendant's order to buy 500 shares at a limit of $3, the undertaking of Frankel & Block, as brokers, was not to deliver the whole absolutely, but to buy so much as could be bought in the regular way below or at the limit. Moreover, there are no circumstances in this case showing or tending to show that the defendant regarded the purchase of the whole number of shares as essential to the value of a part. An ordinary broker's contract for the buying of stock, each share of which has a distinct and independent value, cannot be regarded as entire."

2. In Ingraham v. Taylor, 58 Conn. 503, the court said: "Inasmuch as each share is the equal of any other in the same corporation, and the shares of the corporation specified were in the market on every day, the possession of a certificate bearing a particular date is not required; only that they should be able to deliver it upon demand, at the price of the day of the contract. The contract required the plaintiff to put his margin money at the hazard of their ability to respond in the event of a rise in the price of shares; required him to furnish all capital necessary for the speculation; secured to him all profits, and denied to them any advantage other than the customary commission."

The same question was before the court of appeals of New York in Caswell v. Putnam, 120 N. Y. 153, and the court held that the broker fulfills his duties if he keeps in his possession ready to deliver to his principal on demand, an amount of stock equal to that purchased by him, citing, in support of this proposition, Horton v. Morgan, 19 N. Y. 170; 75 Am. Dec. 311; Stewart v. Drake, 46 N. Y. 449; Taussig v. Hart, 58 N. Y. 425; Levy v. Loeb, 85 N. Y. 365; Nourse v. Prime, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 490; 13 Am. Dec. 606; 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 69; 11 Am. Dec. 403.

3. In Lamert v. Heath, 15 M. & W. 486, a broker was instructed to purchase Kentish Coast Railway Scrip, and he bought what was known as bought stock and is carrying it on a margin for his client, receives instructions from the latter to sell the stock so carried and invest the proceeds in other stocks, he will be liable for any damages that may result from his failure to make the conversion promptly and in good faith.¹

An order from a customer to a broker to buy stock for delivery within a specified time at "buyer's option," does not authorize the broker to buy the stock and "carry" it on the customer's account.² But where the order for the purchase is in general terms, the broker may execute it in the customary way, and may, if necessary, purchase the stock at the market price through sub-agents residing and doing business in a distant city.³ The authority to purchase may be revoked at any time before the broker such and paid for it. It was held that he was not liable to refund the money he had received from his client, although it turned out that he had bought scrip issued without due authority, and, in fact, utterly worthless.

In Peckham v. Ketchum, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 506, it appears that brokers were instructed to purchase a specified number of shares of stock of a corporation named. They accordingly bought them and received a certificate of stock, regular in form and issued by the proper officer of the corporation, and received payment therefor from their principal, and made payment to the vendor. The certificate proved to be valueless and not to represent actual stock. Hoffman, J., said: "I do not think that the employment of the defendants in this case can justly be treated as an employment to purchase genuine stock to the extent and import of making them guarantors of the validity of that which they should purchase. It was rather to purchase what in the market was passing as stock of this description (Lamert v. Heath, 15 M. & W. 486). Then the rule of indemnity to the agent when the principal is a seller, involves the exemption of the agent from responsibility when under similar circumstances the principal is the purchaser. Again, an agent employed to purchase and control stock of a particular character or quality is only bound to use all the circumspection and diligence which a prudent purchaser himself would exercise. The nature of the article, the opportunity of detecting the defect or inferiority with proper diligence are elements in every case of this description. Mainwaring v. Brandon, 8 Taunt. 202; 4 E. C. L. 71; Van Alen v. Vanderpool, 6 Johns.

(N. Y.) 69; 5 Am. Dec. 192; Liotard v. Graves, 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 226. The defendants could not be held responsible under this rule." See also Mitchell v. Newhall, 15 M. & W. 308.

1. Galigher v. Jones, 129 U. S. 193.

2. In Pickering v. Demeritt, 100 Mass. 416, it appeared that in February, 1867, the defendant employed one G. as his agent to buy for him 100 shares of the stock of the H. Company on a sixty days' buyer's option; that G. gave the order to the plaintiff, who was a stock-broker and member of the Brokers' Board in Boston; and that the plaintiff afterwards on the same day, for the purpose of fulfilling this order at the regular meeting of the board, bought from H. & Co., brokers, 100 shares of said stock for cash. The court said: "The declaration alleges that the defendant employed the plaintiff to purchase for him certain shares of stock, the same to be delivered to him in sixty days from the time of the purchase. Assuming this to import, as the plaintiff claims, an order to buy the stock and carry it on the defendant's account for sixty days, we find no evidence of any such employment. The evidence was merely of an order to buy the stock 'on a sixty days' buyer's option,' that is, with a right on the part of the purchaser to take and pay for it at any time within sixty days he might choose. If the course pursued by the plaintiff amounted to a purchase and 'carrying' of stock, then it was an unauthorized proceeding, one which the order given to the plaintiff did not warrant him in pursuing."

3. In Rosenstock v. Tormey, 32 Md. 169; 3 Am. Rep. 125, a broker in Baltimore was ordered to buy 100 shares has acted upon it;¹ but not after he has so far executed the order as to render himself personally liable.² And when the broker has made the purchase as directed, it is his duty to send a notice to his client containing the price of the stock purchased and the name of the broker from whom it is purchased.³

2. Title to and Custody and Disposition of Stock Purchased.—A broker who buys stock on a margin to carry for his client, has a right to take the title in his own name or to have it transferred to some third person, provided it remains under the broker's control.⁴ And the broker is not bound to keep the identical shares purchased for his customer separate and apart from other shares of the same company in his possession; but may sell them, pledge them, or use them as the necessities of his business may demand, provided always that he keeps on hand or under his control a sufficient quantity of stock of the description ordered to be purchased ready for delivery to his customer upon the latter's paying for the same and requesting that the delivery be made. In such case, the law will presume that the stock thus of railroad stock. According to the custom of the trade, he wrote to his New York correspondents directing them to purchase, and they accordingly bought the stock and the Baltimore broker paid for the same. His customers failed to pay for the stock, and he, after notice to them, and in accordance with the custom of the business, directed his New York correspondents to make a sale of it, which was done. He then sued his customers in Baltimore for the difference between the amount paid in the purchase and that realized from the sale. It was held that he had a right to make the purchase in the above-described manner, and that it was sufficient if he notified his customers of the fact of the purchase and had certificates of the stock or other usual evidences of title thereto in his own hands or in those of his New York agents ready to be delivered or transferred to the defendants upon their tender of payment therefor.

1. Fletcher v. Marshall, 15 M. & W. 755.

2. McEwen v. Woods, 12 Q. B. 13; 63 E. C. L. 12; Sutton v. Tathan, 10 Ad. & El. 27; 37 E. C. L. 25; Remfry v. Butler, 1 E. B. & E. 887; 96 E. C. L. 887.

3. In Hoffman v. Livingston, 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. 552, it was held that the failure to give such notice was such negligence on the part of the broker as precluded him from recovering his commissions. See also Finney v. Gallaudet, 15 Daly (N. Y.) 66.

4. Horton v. Morgan, 19 N. Y. 170; 75 Am. Dec. 311; Genin v. Isaacson, 6 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 213. See also Worthington v. Tormey, 34 Md. 182; Price v. Gover, 40 Md. 102, and cases cited in next note.

In Horton v. Morgan, 19 N. Y. 170; 75 Am. Dec. 311, the court said: "The practice at the stock board, by which the brokers only, and not their customers, are known in their dealings with each other, was not unreasonable, and the plaintiff, by directing this purchase to be made, must be understood as consenting that it should be done in the usual manner. No breach of duty was committed by the defendant, therefore, in making a purchase in his own name. As he was to hold the shares as security for the balance of the purchase money which he had advanced, it was proper and entirely consistent with the nature of the transaction that he should take the title in his own name. This was necessary, moreover, for his safety, for if default should be made he would have a right to sell it to reimburse himself, and he would be obliged in that event to give a title to the purchaser from him; and we do not see anything unlawful in his transferring it to his clerks, if it remained under his control and if he was ready, when called on by the plaintiff, to transfer it to him upon the advance being paid."

on hand and ready for delivery is the property of the customer.¹ And where the broker wrongfully disposes of stock which he is carrying for his customer and puts it out of his power to deliver the same, it seems that the customer is nevertheless bound to pay for it, if the broker has complied substantially with the contract of purchase; the broker, in such case, being liable to his customer for such damages as may have resulted from the broker's

1. Nourse v. Prime, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 490; 13 Am. Dec. 606; 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 69; 11 Am. Dec. 403; Horton v. Morgan, 19 N. Y. 170; 75 Am. Dec. 311. See also Genin v. Isaacson, 6 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 213; Salters v. Genin, 7 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 193; 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 250; Stewart v. Drake, 46 N. Y. 449; Lawrence v. Maxwell, 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 511; 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 469; 53 N. Y. 19; Taussig v. Hart, 58 N. Y. 425; Rogers v. Gould, 6 Hun (N. Y.) 229; Marston v. Gould, 69 N. Y. 226; Chamberlain v. Greenleaf, 4 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 178; Clarke v. Meigs, 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 467; 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 340; reversing 12 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 267; 21 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 187; Boylan v. Huguet, 8 Nev. 345; Worthington v. Tormey, 34 Md. 193; Price v. Gover, 40 Md. 102; Gilpin v. Howell, 5 Pa. St. 41; 45 Am. Dec. 720; Wynkoop v. Seal, 64 Pa. St. 361; Wood v. Hayes, 15 Gray (Mass.) 375; Atkins v. Gamble, 42 Cal. 86; Hawley v. Brumagim, 33 Cal. 394; Thompson v. Toland, 48 Cal. 100; Berlin v. Eddy, 33 Mo. 426; Le Croy v. Eastman, 10 Mod. 499; Mocatta v. Bell, 27 L. J. Ch. 237.

In Nourse v. Prime, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 490, it appeared that the defendants, who were stock and exchange brokers in the city of New York, had purchased shares of United States bank stock for the plaintiff, and had received a transfer of other shares for the plaintiff, making together 430 shares in their hands. They rendered to the plaintiff a general account of their transactions showing a balance of $53,917.15, for which the plaintiff agreed to give his note to the defendants, the defendants retaining the 430 shares of stock in their hands as collateral security for the payment of the note. They did not keep in their possession the identical shares bought for or received from the plaintiff, but disposed of the same in the course of their business, and the bill was brought to compel them to account for the shares at the highest price at which they had sold such shares. Chancellor Kent said: "The shares in question were not defined and designated, so as to be distinguished from other bank shares in the same bank; and if the defendants had always in their possession and names, and under their control, shares to that amount during the whole time of credit given by the note, and were ready, able, and willing, at all times, to account to the plaintiff for that number of shares, and the dividends arising thereon, whenever he entitled himself to such an account, it is all that he could ask under the contract. The answer is explicit on this point; and while it admits that the shares in question constituted part of one indiscriminate mass, or fund of stock placed in their names and subject to their control, and from which they, from time to time, made such transfers and appropriations as the exigencies of their business and engagements required, yet it avers that there was no time during the year 1818 in which they were not possessed of shares standing in their own names, at their absolute and rightful control, subject to no contract of sale, to an amount far exceeding the shares deposited by the plaintiff; nor was there any moment at which they would not have been ready, and willing, and able, and rightfully able, without any breach of trust to others, to have transferred the said shares to the plaintiff, upon payment of his note. What color of equity, then, has the plaintiff to call on the defendants to account for the sale of the like amount of shares at the highest price obtained during that year? Nothing could be more unreasonable or unjust. The defendants were not bound to separate 430 shares from the common stock, and mark, or otherwise designate them as the separate property of the plaintiff, inasmuch as the plaintiff had left the shares undefined, and was content to take from the defendants a certificate to return, generally, '430 shares of United States bank stock.' It is sufficient, under this con-wrongful act.¹ But in order that this rule may apply, it must appear that the broker has complied substantially with the contract of purchase; and, if he has not done so, the customer may repudiate the transaction and recover back money advanced in partial payment of the purchase price of the stock.² And the broker has no right to pledge the stock of his client or otherwise tract, that the defendants always had the requisite quantity of shares on hand, and the law will presume that the shares so on hand, from time to time, were the shares deposited, because the parties have not reduced the shares to any more certainty."

1. Gruman v. Smith, 81 N. Y. 25.

In Capron v. Thompson, 86 N. Y. 418, the plaintiffs purchased for the defendant, 56,650 shares of stock of a certain railroad company. The referee, in stating the account between the parties gave the plaintiffs credit for 24,200 shares sold by them and excluded from the account 32,450, although he found that the plaintiffs had bought and paid for the whole on account of the defendant. As to the last-named shares, he found that, on the 20th of April, 1874, on which day the plaintiffs failed in business, said shares were not in possession of the plaintiffs, but prior to that time had been pledged by them for a loan for their use and had never been tendered to the defendant and the amount due thereon demanded, but were subsequently sold by the pledgee. Accordingly the referee found as a conclusion of law that the plaintiffs could not recover for the purchase of the last-named shares unless they showed performance of the contract on their part. On appeal, this decision was reversed. The court said: "The purchase of the stock as found by the referee was upon the defendant's account and was a proper charge against the defendant. In this respect the plaintiffs had performed the contract. The sale of the stock was a failure to perform a subsequent and not a precedent duty, and hence no condition precedent was broken which prevented the plaintiffs from charging the defendant for the purchase of the stock."

But in Minor v. Beveridge (Supreme Ct.), 21 N. Y. Supp. 691, the doctrine of this case is questioned. Van Brunt, P. J. (O'Brien and Follett, J. J., concurring), said: "In one of the cases, that of Capron v. Thompson, 86 N. Y. 418, it was undoubtedly held that a sale of stock which had been bought upon a margin without notice to the customer, did not constitute a failure to perform a condition precedent, but was a breach of a condition subsequent to the purchase. But it seems to me that this is a mistake in reference to the relations of the parties. A contract in regard to the carrying of the stock is an entire contract, and a failure to carry until the customer has been placed in default is a breach of the entire contract, and the broker under such circumstances is not in a position to establish a condition of affairs which entitles him to any recovery arising out of anything which has been done in connection with that contract. . . . Therefore, it seems to follow that where a purchase of stock is made upon a margin, and where, upon the facts, there is an implied agreement to carry upon a margin, and the broker sells in violation of this agreement, he violates the contract which governs the relations between himself and his customers, and he ought not to be allowed to recover upon the implied promise to pay for the stock purchased, which is part and parcel of the same contract to carry."

2. In Levy v. Loeb, 47 N. Y. Super. Ct. 61, the defendants, who were brokers, were employed by plaintiffs to purchase for their account and risk $100,000 of "United States sixes" of 1881 and the same amount of United States bonds of 1867. The bonds so purchased were to be held by the brokers as collateral security for money advanced by them. The bonds of 1881 were bought by defendants in Frankfurt in their own names through agents there on February 16, 1881. On the 18th of the same month, the defendants gave plaintiffs notice of a purchase on their account at a price which made the amount of the purchase $577.82 more than the actual cost of the bonds. The bonds of 1867 were bought by defendants in June, 1876, and they rendered an account of the purchase for $31.25 more than they actually paid, and the defendants carried the bonds use it as his own after the client has discharged his indebtedness to him, and the broker's lien upon the stock is gone.¹

3. Ownership of Stock Purchased.—Where stock is purchased and carried by the broker, the client for whom it is purchased is the general owner of it² and may order it sold or converted into stock or securities of another description, and the broker is bound to obey the instruction or respond in damages.³ The customer has the right to demand possession of the securities upon payment of the purchase price, together with the broker's until March 30, 1877, when they rendered an account to plaintiffs, who, relying thereon, paid $10,746.74, and defendants, in consideration thereof, agreed to carry the original bonds until June 30, 1877; which time was afterwards extended to January 2, 1878. Before that time, defendants sold the bonds for their own account without the knowledge or consent of the plaintiffs. On January 9th of the same year, defendants demanded of plaintiffs payment of the balance of the amount with notice that upon default the bonds would be sold the next day for account and risk of the plaintiffs, and on that day defendants did sell the amount so purchased of similar bonds. Plaintiffs did not discover the excessive charges or the prior sale until after the last sale. Plaintiffs brought their action to recover back the $10,746.74 paid by them. Defendants set up a counterclaim for the deficiency arising on the second sale. The special term disallowed the counterclaim and directed judgment in favor of plaintiffs for $713.77, being the amount of the charges in excess of the sums paid on said purchases with interest. Plaintiffs appealed from that portion of the judgment which disallowed them the balance of the sum so paid by them, and defendants appealed from that portion which disallowed their counterclaim, and the appeals were argued separately. Defendants' appeal is reported in Levy v. Loeb, 85 N. Y. 365, where it was held that the counterclaim set up by the defendants for the deficiency arising upon the sale of the bonds was properly rejected upon the ground that a substantial performance was a condition precedent to the right to recover, and that this was not shown. Plaintiffs' appeal is reported in Levy v. Loeb, 89 N. Y. 306, where the judgment in their favor is reversed on the ground that they had a right under the facts as stated to repudiate the transaction and recover back the whole amount of money paid by them. The court said, inter alia: "No such purchases were made as reported, and upon discovery of this fact clearly the principal was authorized and justified in repudiating the fictitious transaction reported. It was upon this ground that the former appeal from that portion of the judgment rejecting defendants' counterclaim was sustained, and it is this which distinguishes the case from Capron v. Thompson, 86 N. Y. 418 and Gruman v. Smith, 81 N. Y. 25, wherein we held that the unauthorized sale by a broker of stock purchased and carried on a margin was not a breach of a condition precedent which prevented the broker from charging for the purchase of the stock, and was not a defense to an action to recover the purchase price, but that he was liable in damages for the unauthorized sale."

1. Van Voorhis v. Rea, 153 Pa. St. 19.

2. Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 245.

3. In Galigher v. Jones, 129 U. S. 193, it appeared that the customer had ordered the broker to sell certain stocks and invest the proceeds in certain other stocks, which the broker neglected and refused to do. The court said: "A broker is but an agent, and is bound to follow the directions of his principal, or give notice that he declines to continue the agency. In the absence of a special agreement to the contrary, it is the principal's judgment, and not his, that is to control in the purchase and sale of stocks. The latter did not ask for any further advances by the order in question. He only directed a conversion or change of one stock into another. The plaintiff should have given prompt notice that he objected and declined to make the change. Telegraphic communication was used by the defendant, and no reason appears why the plaintiff could not have used the same. The delay caused by using the mail alone was in-commissions and proper expenses; and if the broker, by an unauthorized sale or other wrongful disposition of the stock, renders himself unable to respond to the demand, it amounts to an unlawful conversion.¹

So stock carried on a margin does not go to the assignee of an insolvent broker as part of the broker's estate, but may be claimed by the client for whom it was purchased.² On the other hand, the client is subject to the duties and responsibilities of ownership and must pay all assessments and calls upon shares carried for him by his broker, and if the broker has first paid them, as he frequently does, by reason of his carrying the shares in his own name, his client must reimburse him.³

4. Sale by Broker for Want of Margins.—If the customer fails to keep the margin good, the broker may sell the stock carried and close the transaction, in the absence of an understanding to the contrary, or conduct such as to estop him from calling for further margins.⁴ But the customer is entitled to notice, in the absence of an agreement or understanding to the contrary, and a sale without notice may operate as an unlawful conversion⁵ and de-excusable under the circumstances. The plaintiff charged ample compensation for his services and was bound to act faithfully, fairly, and promptly. We think that he was liable for all the damages which the defendant sustained by his refusal to change the stocks."

1. Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 235; Gruman v. Smith, 81 N. Y. 25; Capron v. Thompson, 86 N. Y. 418; Gillett v. Whiting, 120 N. Y. 402; Stewart v. Drake, 46 N. Y. 449.

In Clarke v. Meigs, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 337, it was held that an offer by the broker to replace the stock did not, so long as it was unaccepted, deprive the client of his right of action for the conversion.

2. Taylor v. Plumer, 5 M. & S. 562; Ex parte Cooke, 4 Ch. Div. 123; Willard v. White, 56 Hun (N. Y.) 581.

3. In Robbins v. Edwards, 15 W. R. 1065, it appeared that a broker, at the request of his principal, carried shares in his own name, and had been compelled to pay a call on said shares. The Master of the Rolls ordered the principal to repay the broker and have the shares registered in his own name. See Taylor v. Stray, 2 C. B. N. S. 175; 89 E. C. L. 175; Chapman v. Shepherd, L. R., 2 C. P. 228; Whitehead v. Izod, L. R., 2 C. P. 228; Emerson's Case, L. R., 1 Ch. 433. See also McCalla v. Clark, 55 Ga. 53, where it appears that the pledgee of the stock had been compelled to pay calls, and the court held that the pledgor was bound to reimburse him.

4. In Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 235, the customer's agreement to advance and keep good the margin is neatly stated. The court said: "The customer employs the broker to buy certain stocks for his account, and to pay for them, and to hold them subject to his order as to the time of sale. The customer advances 10 per cent. of their market value and agrees to keep good such proportion of the advance according to the fluctuations of the market." In Gruman v. Smith, 81 N. Y. 25, it is said: "In such a transaction it is expressly or impliedly agreed that the margin (so called) shall, if the stock depreciates, be replenished and kept good upon demand, and, upon failure to do so, the stock may be sold upon reasonable and customary notice."

5. Stenton v. Jerome, 54 N. Y. 480; Ritter v. Cushman, 35 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 284; Hanks v. Drake, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 186; Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 235; Baker v. Drake, 66 N. Y. 518; 23 Am. Rep. 80; Gruman v. Smith, 81 N. Y. 25.

In Gillett v. Whiting, 120 N. Y. 402, it appeared that the plaintiffs, who were brokers, brought an action against the defendant to recover losses resulting from a sale of stock which they were carrying for him on feat the broker's recovery for a loss.¹ And in those jurisdictions where the relation of pledgor and pledgee is held to exist between the client and the broker, it follows that the latter must not only demand additional margins, but also must give his client notice that the stock will be sold upon his failure to comply with the demand, unless such notice is waived by agreement.² And this notice may accompany the demand for further margins or be given separately from and subsequently to the demand. But the client's response to the demand for further margins may render it unnecessary for the broker to give this notice.³ margins, which sale had been made without giving the client notice to deposit further margins, and the court said: "The plaintiffs had undertaken to purchase and hold the stock for the defendant subject to his order. The defendant had undertaken to make good his margin within a reasonable time after notice so to do, and if this was not done the broker could sell upon giving reasonable notice; but if he sold without demand to supply additional margins, or notice that the sale would be made, the sale would be wrongful and operate as a conversion of the stock."

1. In Minor v. Beveridge (Supreme Ct.), 21 N. Y. Supp. 691, the assignors of the plaintiff, who were stock-brokers, were carrying stock for the defendant on margin, which they sold without first demanding the deposit of additional margins, and upon their failure the plaintiff, who was their assignee, brought an action against the defendant to recover losses resulting from said sale. The court held that the sale without such notice was a breach of the implied agreement to carry the stock that would defeat a recovery for any losses arising out of the sale.

2. Stewart v. Drake, 46 N. Y. 449; Stenton v. Jerome, 54 N. Y. 480; Baker v. Drake, 66 N. Y. 518; 23 Am. Rep. 80; Gruman v. Smith, 81 N. Y. 25; Gillett v. Whiting, 120 N. Y. 402; Esser v. Linderman, 71 Pa. St. 76.

In Stenton v. Jerome, 54 N. Y. 480, the court said: "Under this agreement the relation of pledgor and pledgee existed between the plaintiff and defendants as to all stocks purchased, they holding a lien upon the stocks for any advances made. It was so decided in Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 235, and in Morgan v. Jaudon, 40 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 366. There was only one contingency in which they could under the agreement sell the stock without notice, and that was if the plaintiff's margin fell below 20 per cent. and she failed upon demand to make the margin good, then by the express stipulation in the agreement they could sell without notice."

In Baker v. Drake, 66 N. Y. 518; 23 Am. Rep. 80, it appeared that a broker had sold stock which he was carrying for his client without first giving notice of sale, and the court, after referring to the nature of such contracts as expressed in Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 235 and Stenton v. Jerome, 54 N. Y. 480, said: "But it is further considered that the parties to such a transaction, which thus creates the relation of pledgee and pledgor between them, may provide by contract for the manner of disposing of the pledge to satisfy the claim upon it. This is not dissented from by any judge. This restriction is affixed, however, that the manner agreed upon must not be in contravention of the statute, nor against public policy, nor fraudulent." Citing Wheeler v. Newbould, 16 N. Y. 392, and Milliken v. Dehon, 27 N. Y. 364.

3. In Covell v. Loud, 135 Mass. 41; 46 Am. Rep. 446, the same question arose, and the court said: "The relation of the parties existed by force of a mutual and dependent contract, by which the defendants agreed to purchase and hold or carry for the plaintiff a certain number of shares of stock, he paying a certain sum of money at the time, agreeing to pay interest on the sums advanced, and in case the stock depreciated, to make what is termed a margin of ten dollars per share in excess of the market price of the stock as that might change from time to time. As the plaintiff failed to perform his part of the contract by making the necessary advances upon demand, the stock having rapidly depreciated in value, he has no ground of complaint

After giving the client due notice of sale, the broker may sell the stock and close the transaction, unless the client, before the time appointed for the sale, deposits the additional margins called for;¹ and the sale, it seems, may be made in the manner usual in the case of sales of such property.²

5. Sale By Order of Client—a. IN GENERAL.—The client may at any time, in the absence of a special agreement to the contrary, order the sale of stock carried for him, and the broker is that defendants ceased to hold and carry it for him and thereafter disposed of it. . . . When the plaintiff was called on to make good his margin by advancing the necessary sums, he told the defendants that he could pay them no more, and requested them to do the best they could for him. This was sufficient to give them authority to sell the stock, if in so doing they acted fairly and with proper regard to the interests of the plaintiff."

1. See cases cited in other notes of this section.

2. In Brass v. Worth, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 648, it appears that brokers were carrying stock for their client upon a margin, and that certain other stock was deposited with them as such margin. The price of the stock carried declined so that the margin became insufficient; and, without demand for additional margins, or a notice of sale, they sold both the stock carried and the margin on the floor of the Stock Exchange in the usual manner for such sales. The court held that this was a conversion of the stock sold, and that the brokers were liable in damages to their client. In the course of the opinion the court took occasion to say, that a sale on the floor of the Stock Exchange was essentially a private sale, and that such sale should be made in public, following out the analogy of the sale of a pledge by the pledgee. This was a mere obiter dictum, inasmuch as it appears that there was no demand for further margins or a notice of sale which alone rendered the transaction an unlawful conversion of the stock, no matter in what manner the sale was made.

In Porter v. Wormser, 94 N. Y. 432, it was objected that the sale of the stock was private and not public. The court said that a broker authorized to sell the stock of his client might do so in the usual and ordinary way.

In Covell v. Loud, 135 Mass. 41; 46 Am. Rep. 446, it appears that a broker, who was carrying stock for his client, on failure to put up the additional margins after a demand to do so, sold the stock at the board of brokers in New York city. The point was not directly raised, but the court said: "When the plaintiff was called on to make good his margin by advancing the necessary sums, he told the defendants that he could pay them no more, and requested them to do the best they could for him. This was sufficient to give them authority to sell the stock if in so doing they acted fairly and with proper regard to the interests of the plaintiff. Nothing appears tending to show they acted otherwise."

In Maryland F. Ins. Co. v. Dalrymple, 25 Md. 242; 89 Am. Dec. 779, it appears that the plaintiff had made an actual pledge of stock to defendant, which had been sold in default of the payment of a debt. At pages 264 and 5 the court said: "In the absence of any express agreement to the contrary, it has been held in some cases to be necessary for a pledgee before exercising the power of sale to give notice to the pledgor of the time and place of sale. A sale at the board of brokers publicly and fairly made would, in our opinion, have been legal and valid, and if the sale of the 20th of November had been made to a third person, it would be a legal sale under the contract, vesting a good title in the purchaser and terminating the bailment. It was contended by the plaintiff's counsel that the sale must in all cases be made at public auction, and that a sale at the broker's board would not be legal, and some decisions in New York were cited in support of this view. There is no evidence of any such custom in Baltimore; and considering the requirements of the law and the reason and nature of the transaction, we are of opinion that the most proper and suitable place for a sale of stock is at the board of brokers. There is the stock market; the mart to which vendors and purchasers resort by their bound to comply with the order. If he fails to do so, he will be liable to his client for such damages as result from his disobedience to the order.¹

b. STOP ORDERS.—Sometimes the client gives his broker instruction to sell the stock and close the transaction when the price of such stock reaches a certain figure. In such event the broker may not make the price himself; he must wait until some other broker by a distinct transaction has made the stock sell at the price designated. This order is called a "stop order," and is as binding on the broker as any other order to sell. He is bound to sell when the stock reaches the point named by his client in his order.²

agents to buy and sell stock; where competition among bidders is most apt to be found. Such sales are public, and unless there be in the particular case some ground for impeaching their fairness, we are of opinion that they are reasonable and ought to be supported." See Rosenstock v. Tormey, 32 Md. 169; 3 Am. Rep. 125; Robinson v. Norris, 51 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 442; Baker v. Drake, 66 N. Y. 518; 23 Am. Rep. 80; Robinson v. Mollett, L. R., 7 H. L. 802; Westropp v. Solomon, 8 C. B. 346; 65 E. C. L. 344; Young v. Cole, 3 Bing. N. Cas. 724; 32 E. C. L. 302; Child v. Morley, 8 T. R. 610.

1. Ryder v. Sistare, 15 Daly (N. Y.) 90; Davis v. Gwynne, 4 Daly (N. Y.) 218; affirmed 57 N. Y. 676; Allen v. McConihe, 124 N. Y. 342; Smith v. Bouvier, 70 Pa. St. 325; Jones v. Gallagher, 3 Utah 54; Galigher v. Jones, 129 U. S. 193.

In Allen v. McConihe, 124 N. Y. 342, it appears that a firm of brokers in Troy, N. Y., were buying stock and carrying it on a margin for the defendant. They in turn bought it through a firm of brokers who were members of the New York Stock Exchange, who carried it on a margin for them. On the 15th of August, 1887, the defendant directed his brokers in Troy to sell 300 shares of Manhattan Consolidated stock for $111 per share, and the shares could then and up to the 20th have been sold for that price, when they fell in the market and did not sell for as much until October. His brokers in Troy neglected to obey the order, and did not notify him of their neglect until the 29th of August. They subsequently sold 100 of the Manhattan shares for $109.75 each and kept on hand 500 shares. In October the firm of Troy brokers made a general assignment for the benefit of their creditors, and on the 10th, 11th and 13th of that month the New York brokers, who were carrying the stock for them, sold the 500 shares at $97 and credited the avails to the firm of Troy brokers, whose assignee in turn credited them to the defendant. The sale was made without the knowledge of defendant, and he was not at that time in default with the Troy firm. The referee found that the defendant had never assented to, waived, or acquiesced in the failure of the Troy brokers to sell as directed, and allowed him as damages the difference between the price at which he ordered the sale and the price at which said stock was sold. On appeal this decision was affirmed.

2. Wronkow v. Clews, 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. 176; Wicks v. Hatch, 62 N. Y. 535; Hope v. Lawrence, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 258; Porter v. Wormser, 94 N. Y. 431.

In Hope v. Lawrence, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 258, the plaintiff instructed the defendants, his brokers, on the 27th of January, 1865, if gold rose to 217 that afternoon, to sell his gold for him which they held. The gold market being firm, they did not do so, hoping to make a greater profit by delay. The court held, assuming the order to sell to have been peremptory, that the defendants were bound to sell when the price of the gold reached 217, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the actual loss sustained by him by reason of the neglect to obey such order, and that the defendants were not to be charged with any loss from their neglect to sell at a price above the limit.

In Porter v. Wormser, 94 N. Y. 431, it appears that the defendants were carrying $1,000,000 of United States

6. Broker's Right to Close the Transaction—a. AFTER A REASONABLE TIME.—As the client has the right to pay the broker's commissions and advances and demand the possession of the stock, so the broker, in the absence of an express agreement, has the reciprocal right, after carrying the stock a reasonable time, to tender the certificates, or other securities, to his client, and demand payment therefor, together with his commissions. If the client fails to take up and pay for the stock, the broker may sell it to satisfy his lien, after giving due notice of the time and place of sale;¹ and if such sale is honestly and fairly made, and the proceeds of the stock are insufficient to reimburse him, he may recover the amount of the deficiency from his client.² He is not bound, however, to rely upon his lien on the stock, but may hold four per cent. bonds for the plaintiff. In June, 1869, he gave them a stop order to sell $500,000 at 100¼ and $500,000 at 100½. On August 13th the bonds sold at the Stock Exchange at 101 "flat," that is, carrying the accrued interest from July 1st. Thereupon defendants sold $200,000 at that price on plaintiff's account; the accrued interest at that time was less than one-half per cent. The next day the bonds sold at 100⅝, and defendants sold $300,000 at 101 and 100⅝, and on August 15th they sold $500,000 at 100⅝, the lowest price for that day. The losses on the transaction were charged to the plaintiff's account. In an action to open and review the account, it was held that the first limit of the stop order was reached and the sale was authorized after July 1st, when bonds of the description of those in question had sold in the market for a flat price, which, after deducting therefrom the accrued interest from that date, would leave 100½; that as the decline had not reached that point when the first sale was made, it was unauthorized, and the plaintiff was entitled to damages.

In Wronkow v. Clews, 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. 176, a "stop order," in transactions, such as those under consideration, was thus defined: "It is agreed that usually a stop order signifies that the broker has received and is bound to obey a direction of his principal to sell at a price described when that price is reached in the market. A stop order may, however, describe the price by referring to contingencies and conditions."

1. Stenton v. Jerome, 54 N. Y. 480; Rosenstock v. Tormey, 32 Md. 169; 3

Am. Rep. 125. In the New York case, the court said: "Under this agreement the defendants were not obliged to carry the stock indefinitely. Whenever they desired to close the transaction in reference to any stocks, it was their duty to tender the certificates thereof to the plaintiff and demand payment for them; then if within a reasonable time she did not take and pay for the stocks, they had a right to sell them to satisfy their lien, after giving her notice of the time and place of sale."

2. In Rosenstock v. Tormey, 32 Md. 169; 3 Am. Rep. 125, it appeared that a stock-broker of Baltimore was ordered by his clients to buy 100 shares of railroad stock. According to the custom of the trade he wrote to his correspondents in New York city directing them to purchase, and they accordingly bought and were paid by the Baltimore broker. The clients failed to pay for the stock, and after notice to them and in accordance with the customs of the business, the Baltimore broker directed his correspondents to make sale thereof in New York, which was accordingly done. There was a loss from the transaction, and the Baltimore broker sued his clients for the difference. He failed in his action, and upon appeal, the court, after reviewing the facts, said: "Having thus made the purchase and expended the money, it was his duty to notify his principals of the fact and request them to receive the stock and pay him the price he had paid for it with the usual and reasonable commissions for making the purchase. At the time of this notice he must show that he was in condition to deliver or transfer the stock by having his client personally responsible for the full amount due him, including commissions.¹

b. UPON BANKRUPTCY OR DEATH OF THE CLIENT.—Where a broker is carrying stock on a margin for his client, and the latter becomes a bankrupt, or makes an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, it is usual for the broker to sell the stock so carried and credit the proceeds to the bankrupt or insolvent estate.² And it has been held that if the broker continues to hold the stock for an unreasonable length of time and then sells at a sacrifice, without the consent of the assignee or bankruptcy court, and without notice to any one, the insolvent estate will not be chargeable with the loss.³ And in England, where the stock is carried for the client until a day certain called the settling day, the broker may, in case of the death, insolvency, or bankruptcy of the client, summarily close the account. Under such circumstances the broker may enforce his claim against the client's estate for any balance that may be due him on the account, which balance is subject to deduction for any loss that may the certificates or other property indicia of title actually in hand, or in the hands of his New York agents, ready to be delivered or transferred to the defendants. Upon receiving this notice, it was the duty of the defendants to pay for and receive the stock, and on their failure to do so the plaintiff had, in our judgment, the clear right, after a reasonable time and after giving notice to that effect to defendants, to direct it to be sold in New York, and, upon showing by legal and competent proof that it was actually sold by his agents, either at public sale in market overt, or at a sale publicly and fairly made at the Stock Exchange or stock board, or a broker's board where such stocks were usually sold, at its fair market value on the day of sale, he is entitled to recover from the defendants the amount, if any, of the resulting loss."

1. Esser v. Linderman, 71 Pa. St. 76; Wynkoop v. Seal, 64 Pa. St. 361. See Merwin v. Hamilton, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 244; Genin v. Isaacson, 6 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 213.

In Esser v. Linderman, 71 Pa. St. 76, Esser employed brokers to buy stock and carry it. The client was asked to increase his margin or take up the stock. He did neither, and the brokers sold a portion of the stock, and the rest remained with them until it became worthless. They brought an action of assumpsit against him to recover the balance which they claimed to be due them on their purchase of the stock for him. They recovered, and he brought a writ of error. It was contended by the client that the broker should have sold all the stock and credited him with the purchase price, and that having failed to do so, they ought not to recover losses that might have thereby been avoided. The appellate court said: "Had the plaintiffs (brokers) sold without giving further notice, and the stock had afterward gone up, they would have been responsible according to Diller v. Brubaker, 52 Pa. St. 498; 91 Am. Dec. 177. It is nothing to the purpose that they did sell the St. Nicholas. They assumed the risk, but had a right not to do so as to the Royal, but to hold it until they should receive orders to sell." The judgment was accordingly affirmed.

In Wynkoop v. Seal, 64 Pa. St. 361, the broker bought stock for his principal and paid his own money for it. He notified his principal of the purchase and frequently asked him to take and pay for it. The principal never called for the stock or tendered payment for the same, and the broker brought his action of assumpsit to recover the price paid for the stock. The broker recovered and upon error the judgment was affirmed.

2. See statement of facts in Allen v. McConihe, 124 N. Y. 342.

3. In re Daniels, 13 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 46.

have resulted from his selling the stock before the next settling day.¹

IV. SALE OF STOCK—1. For Immediate Delivery.—Where the principal employs the broker to sell stock which the principal owns and is prepared to deliver, the broker, in the United States, usually receives the certificates or other securities from his principal, and, after selling them, delivers them to the purchaser's broker and receives the purchase price on behalf of his own principal; although it has been held in England that it is no part of his duty as a broker to do so.² In the absence of special instructions, he may sell in the usual and ordinary way,³ but not, without special authority, upon credit, even with a view to the benefit of his principal.⁴ In this connection, the customary methods of dealing on the Stock Exchange must be kept in view. In England there are two methods of dealing, namely, "for money" and "for the account." The former is a contract for immediate execution. The money is paid down and the stock delivered at once. But the great majority of bargains on the Stock Exchange are made for a certain day called the "account day," and it is not expected that settlement will sooner be made.⁵

1. Lacey v. Hill, L. R., 8 Ch. 921; 42 L. J., Ch. 657; 29 L. T., N. S. 280; 21 W. R. 857; Lacey v. Hill, L. R., 18 Eq. 182; 43 L. J., Ch. 551; 30 L. T., N. S. 484; 22 W. R. 586.

2. Booth v. Fielding, 1 W. R. 245.

3. Porter v. Wormser, 94 N. Y. 431; Robinson v. Norris, 51 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 442; Baker v. Drake, 66 N. Y. 518; 23 Am. Rep. 80. See also Robinson v. Mollett, L. R., 7 H. L. 802; Westropp v. Solomon, 8 C. B. 346; 65 E. C. L. 344; Young v. Cole, 3 Bing. N. Cas. 724; 32 E. C. L. 302; Child v. Morley, 8 T. R. 610.

4. Wiltshire v. Sims, 1 Campb. 258. See also Baring v. Corrie, 2 B. & Ald. 137; State v. Delafield, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 527; 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 192.

5. In Maxted v. Paine, L. R., 4 Exch. 203, the method of selling stock on the London Stock Exchange is set out as follows: "When a broker is instructed by his principal to sell shares on his account, he goes on the Stock Exchange and deals with either a jobber or another broker, as the case may be. In case a broker deals with a jobber, he asks the jobber for the price of a particular class of shares, without saying whether he, the broker, desires to sell or buy. The jobber then names two prices to the broker, the one that at which he will buy, the other that at which he will sell. If the broker be willing to sell at the price named he declares to sell and accepts the offer of the jobber to buy at that price; thereupon the bargain, which is as follows, is concluded between them: The bargain is made for a certain specified day which is known on the Stock Exchange as the 'account day,' and on the day preceding the account day (which latter day is known on the Stock Exchange as the 'name day') the jobber is bound to pass to the broker the name of a person or persons, as the case may be, as the ultimate purchaser, or respective purchasers, of said shares. But the jobber may in lieu thereof give his own name to the broker as the ultimate purchaser of the shares, or, in the event of his having had no dealing with the shares subsequent to the original bargain, then as the purchaser of the shares, in which latter cases he is bound himself to take the same. This name is passed upon a document called a ticket. The dealings in the shares after the concluding of the first bargain may have been either many or few; but in all cases the ticket is indorsed, either in pencil or ink, with the names of the members of the Stock Exchange, whether acting as principals or brokers, through whose hands the ticket has passed. In addition to his obligation to give the name or names aforesaid, the jobber is also liable to the broker for the price of the shares

A broker employed to sell stock has no implied authority by reason of such employment to make an express warranty, and the principal is not bound thereby, even though, in ignorance of such warranty, he receives and retains the purchase price.¹ But there is an implied condition that the thing delivered shall be the thing sold. There is no implied warranty that the thing is of any value, but the vendor must deliver what he sells, and if he fails to do so, the selling broker may reimburse the purchaser, and, if the purchase price has already been paid over to his principal, may recover it back.²

as agreed upon, and the broker can either apply for the price to the jobbers, or can apply to the brokers of the ultimate purchaser for the amount of the purchase money which he is to pay for the shares, looking to the jobber for the difference, if any. But the usual practice is to make application in the first instance to the broker of the ultimate purchaser, and whose name appears on the ticket as the person to pay. In the event of the jobber failing to give a name by two o'clock on the name day, the broker has the right after the lapse of an hour to sell out the shares as against him by auction on the Stock Exchange through the medium of another broker who is, however, in most instances the secretary or clerk of the Stock Exchange; the jobber then becomes liable to the broker for the difference, if any, between the price at which the shares are so sold and the price originally bargained for between the broker and jobber. At any time before the transfer of the shares has been executed by the seller the broker may object to any name or names given by the jobber, and in the event of the jobber and broker failing to agree, the broker may appeal to the committee of the Stock Exchange, who on such appeal have the power to require the jobber to give the broker a better name, in case they consider the broker to be thereunto entitled."

1. In Smith v. Tracy, 36 N. Y. 79, an agent employed to sell bank stock made a warranty of the same. His principal, in ignorance of such warranty, received and retained the purchase price of the stock. The vendee of the stock sued the vendor's personal representative to recover the purchase price, and had judgment in the court below, on the ground that the warranty was within the scope of the agent's authority, and that though the testator neither expressly authorized nor assented to the contract, his act in receiving the proceeds of an authorized sale of his own property estopped his executor from denying the collateral agreement unlawfully entered into by another in his name. The court of appeals said: "We think this view cannot be maintained. It is founded on a misapprehension of the principles settled by a series of decisions in a class of cases to which this does not belong. When a party claims, receives and retains the property of another, knowing that it was obtained through an unauthorized use of his name, it is a ratification of the assumed agency which evinces his assent to the contract or the wrong. The courts, however, have been careful in the leading cases of that class to note as the precise ground of legal liability the knowledge of the facts by the party appropriating the benefit." The judgment was accordingly reversed and a new trial ordered.

2. In Young v. Cole, 3 Bing. N. Cas. 724; 32 E. C. L. 302, it appeared that the plaintiff, a stock-broker, was employed by the defendant to sell for him four Guatemala bonds. The plaintiff sold them, and after they had been in the hands of the purchaser two days they were discovered to be not marketable, whereupon the plaintiff took them back and reimbursed the purchaser. He had before doing this turned over the purchase price of the bonds to his principal, and he brought this action against his principal for money paid to his use. Tindal, C. J., said: "It appears to me that the sum for which the verdict has been given is properly called money received by the defendant to the use of the plaintiff. The money which the plaintiff delivered to the defendant was his own money, for he had sold the bonds as a principal to Briant, and was subject to

Where a broker has sold stock in obedience to the instructions of his customer, and the latter refuses or fails to deliver the same, he will be liable to the broker for any losses he may sustain by reason of his inability to complete the contract.¹

2. "Short Sales"—a. IN GENERAL.—When the customer, through the agency of his broker, sells stocks which he does not own and is not prepared to deliver, the transaction is called a all the responsibilities of a principal. He delivered the money to the defendant on an understanding that the bonds he had received from the defendant were real Guatemala bonds, such as were salable on the Stock Exchange. It seems, therefore, that the consideration on which the plaintiff paid his money has failed as completely as if the defendant had contracted to sell foreign gold coin and had handed over counters instead. It is not a question of warranty, but whether the defendant has not delivered something which, though resembling the article contracted to be sold, is of no value."

In Westropp v. Solomon, 8 C. B. 345; 65 E. C. L. 345, it appeared that the defendant had employed a stock-broker, a member of the London Stock Exchange, to sell for him certain documents which purported to be scrip or certificates, each for fifty shares in a projected railroad company. The broker sold these certificates and handed over the proceeds to his principal. The certificates being subsequently found to be forged, the broker was called upon and obliged under the rules of the Stock Exchange to pay the purchaser a certain agreed value as for genuine certificates of that company, which considerably exceeded the price at which he had sold the spurious certificates. The broker brought his action against the principal to recover the sum so paid to the purchaser. The declaration contained a special count averring a promise by the principal that the certificates were genuine, and a count for money paid. Upon the latter count the court held that he was entitled to recover the amount actually paid by him to the principal, but that he was not entitled to recover upon the special count, there being no promise, express or implied, that the certificates were genuine.

1. In Sutton v. Tatham, 10 Ad. & El. 27; 37 E. C. L. 25, it appears that a person employed brokers to sell shares, directing them by mistake to sell 250 shares, meaning 50. The brokers contracted with another broker on the Stock Exchange for the sale. The shareholder on the next day informed his brokers of the mistake and asked them if the contract could not be made void. The brokers answered that it could not, and the shareholder left the matter in their hands. The selling brokers applied to the purchasing broker the next day to cancel the bargain, informing him of the mistake, but he declined, saying it was too late. The selling brokers being unable to complete the contract the purchasing broker bought the shares on the best terms in his power, and there was a loss from the transaction. The selling brokers paid this, and brought their action against the customer to recover the amount, together with their brokerage. It was held that for the difference so advanced the shareholder was liable to the brokers in assumpsit for money paid.

In Sistare v. Best, 88 N. Y. 527, affirming 16 Hun (N. Y.) 611, it appears that a savings bank authorized its president to sell a number of shares of stock held by it as security for a loan. In accordance with such authority the president employed a broker to sell the same. The broker, pursuant to this authority, sold at the price mentioned, and immediately notified the president of the bank, who, however, before this, had sold the shares without notifying the broker or revoking his authority. The president of the bank declined to furnish the stock to meet the broker's contract, and the stock was thereupon bought in under the rules of the Stock Exchange, and the selling broker paid the difference between the price paid and what he was to receive. He brought an action against the bank for this difference, and it was held that the private sale of the stock by which it was disabled from furnishing the stock to meet the sale made by the plaintiff was no defense to the action,

"short sale." In such cases it is not pretended that the customer has any of the stock which he orders sold. He sells with a view of purchasing at a future time and at a lower price to complete his contract. If the contract is made for future delivery, that is, "seller's option" or "buyer's option," as the case may be, then it is not necessary for the vendor to deliver the stock until the expiration of the option or until the buyer calls for it. But if the sale is made in the regular way, in which case the stock is deliverable the next day, the stock must be temporarily procured by the vendor for delivery to the vendee. The customer does not himself so procure the stock. He deposits margins with his broker who borrows the stock for delivery to the vendee. It is a part of the agreement that the broker shall carry the stock for a reasonable time, if the margins are kept good. The transaction having reached this point, the customer bides his time for a fall in prices, that he may buy in stock at a lower figure to replace that borrowed, and thus make a profit. He is called a "bear."¹ A broker, who has thus sold stock "short" for his customer, usually borrows the requisite number of shares from some other broker who has the stock to lend, and pays him the market price for them. Although this transaction has every appearance of a sale, it is treated by the brokers as a loan and is so registered on their books; and if the stock so borrowed fluctuates in price, they put up margins to protect one another against losses until it is returned.² Sometimes a broker who is short of stock for one client borrows that of another, and, in that event, no one except the client from whom he borrows may question his right to do so.³

and hence the plaintiff was entitled to recover the amount of the loss so sustained by him. See also Bayliffe v. Butterworth, 1 Exch. 425; 11 Jur. 1019; 17 L. J. Exch. 78.

1. Knowlton v. Fitch, 52 N. Y. 288; White v. Smith, 54 N. Y. 522; Hess v. Rau, 95 N. Y. 359; Rogers v. Wiley, 131 N. Y. 527; Smith v. Bouvier, 70 Pa. St. 325; Maxton v. Gheen, 75 Pa. St. 166.

2. By-laws of New York Stock Exchange.

3. In Knowlton v. Fitch, 52 N. Y. 288, it appears that the shares were borrowed from another client of the brokers. The court said: "The fact that the shares thus used belonged to a customer of the defendants can make no difference to the plaintiff. The result of the transaction was to leave the defendants liable to their customer as before, to deliver to him an equal number of shares when demanded, the plaintiff being substituted in the place of Brownell as the borrower of the shares, and the defendants standing responsible to their customer for the plaintiff instead of for Brownell. Whether or not the defendants were authorized thus to employ the stock of their customer depends upon the arrangements between them, which do not appear in the evidence. In the absence of any evidence, it is not to be presumed that the defendants were acting improperly in that respect. That question is not in issue in this case, and is one in which the plaintiff can have no interest or concern. The shares were procured on the responsibility of his brokers for his benefit and used in his business, and he was bound to provide for replacing them. It does not appear that any advantage could accrue to the defendants from the transaction beyond their commissions, and, so far as the plaintiff is concerned, it is immaterial whether the defendants borrowed the shares from other brokers or employed the shares of their own customer."

The loan amounts in substance to a sale of the stock to be paid for in kind, and the title vests in the borrower.¹

b. WHEN BROKER MAY CLOSE THE TRANSACTION.—The object of a speculation of this character is to remain short until the market price shall fall, and then secure as profit the difference between the sum for which the borrowed shares were sold and the cost of those purchased for return to the lender. It follows that it is a part of the contract of employment that the broker should carry the stock for a reasonable time, provided his customer keeps on deposit a sufficient margin to protect him against losses occasioned by an advance in prices.² This being done, the broker has no right to buy in shares to return to the lender without notice to his client or an instruction from him to do so.³

When the client fails to keep on deposit with his broker a sufficient margin to protect the latter, or lets his margin fall below that agreed to be kept on deposit, the broker should notify him that his margin is impaired and demand that it be made good. If, after such notice and demand, the client fails to make the margin good, the broker may buy in the stock at the market price for return to the lender and charge the loss, if any, to his client,⁴ unless he has conducted the transaction in such a manner

1. In Dykers v. Allen, 7 Hill (N.Y.) 497; 42 Am. Dec. 87. Walworth, Ch., said: "There is no doubt that upon an ordinary loan of one hundred shares of the stock of a particular corporation, or of other stock of the like nature, where one share of the stock is just as good as another, it would only be necessary to return the amount of stock in kind. The loan in such a case is in substance a sale to be repaid in kind and quantity, and the title to the fungibles loaned is immediately transferred to the borrower; whereas upon the loan of specific articles to be returned in specie, the title remains in the lender, and the borrower is only entitled to the temporary use thereof;" citing 3 Erskine's Inst., tit. 1, § 18.

2. Knowlton v. Fitch, 52 N. Y. 288; White v. Smith, 54 N. Y. 522; Hess v. Rau, 95 N. Y. 359; Rogers v. Wiley, 131 N. Y. 527.

In White v. Smith, 54 N. Y. 522, Earl, J., said: "Every short sale is made by the seller with the contemplation of covering it when the markets shall have declined, and for the purpose of making a profit by the decline. I believe in such case, until the stock is bought in and the short sale covered, the broker is said to carry the stock for his principal; and while he carries it he generally relies upon the margin placed in his hands as security against loss by any advance in the market. I am of opinion that when a broker agrees for a commission to be paid to him and upon the deposit with him of the margin agreed on, to make a short sale for a customer, it is part of the bargain that the broker shall carry the stock for a reasonable time, for in no other way can the object of the parties be effectuated. A short sale to be covered immediately without waiting for any decline in the market would be a very idle transaction."

3. In White v. Smith, 54 N. Y. 522, Earl, J., said: "The broker has not a right, unless it be specially conferred upon him, to buy in the stock, cover the sale, and thus close the transaction, without some notice to, or direction from, his customer. He is the agent of his customer, and must obey his orders both in making the sale and in covering it. If he acts without orders, or against the orders of his principal, he commits a breach of duty and becomes liable like any agent for any loss he may thus occasion his principal."

4. In Knowlton v. Fitch, 52 N. Y. 288, reversing 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 593, the plaintiff employed defendants, stock-brokers, to operate for him in stocks. All the transactions were as to lose his right to demand further margins.¹ In such transactions the agency of the broker is coupled with an interest and is not revoked by the death of the client. It follows that he is not bound to close the transaction upon his client's death but may continue the same until the appointment and qualification of the personal representative who may thereafter receive notices and give directions as to the conduct of the transaction.²

"short sales," defendants' selling deliverable the next day and borrowing stock to deliver until plaintiff directed a purchase to replace it. At the close of the transactions, defendants had to the order of the plaintiff $1,249.19. He then ordered the sale of one hundred shares of Michigan Southern. Defendants sold accordingly and borrowed the stock for delivery. The stock rose so as to exhaust the margin, and the defendants notified the plaintiff to furnish more. Upon his failure to comply they bought in to replace the borrowed stock. He then sought to repudiate the latter transaction, and brought his action to recover the money due him on the former transactions. He had judgment in the court below, but upon appeal the judgment was reversed and a new trial ordered. The court said: "We think it was clearly established by the evidence that the defendants had furnished the shares for plaintiff in carrying out his order of the 5th of October, and that when the plaintiff failed to keep his margin good, they had the right to buy in shares to replace those so furnished, and that such purchase was in legal effect for account of the plaintiff."

In Appleman v. Fisher, 34 Md. 540, it appears that brokers were instructed by their client to sell $100,000 gold "short" at $1.31. The brokers accordingly sold at the price named and credited the proceeds to their client, whose margin subsequently became impaired owing to an advance in the price of gold, when they notified him of the fact and demanded a further deposit. He failed to respond to the demand, and the brokers bought in gold at $1.35 to cover the sale. Gold subsequently fell to $1.29 and the client sought to repudiate the purchase, tendered the gold to his brokers and demanded the proceeds of the "short sale" at $1.31, after which he brought his action to recover the sum. The court held that he could not recover, and that he was liable for the loss resulting from the purchase to cover the short sale.

1. In Rogers v. Wiley, 131 N. Y. 527, the defendants, who were stock-brokers, sold shares of stock short for the plaintiff under an agreement which required plaintiff to keep on deposit a margin to protect the brokers, defendants to give reasonable notice of want of sufficient margin and of their intention to buy in if the requisite margin was not made good. The stock advanced and the plaintiff in various interviews informed the defendants that he had concluded to close his short account and go long on the stock, but was dissuaded therefrom by them. They finally agreed that if the stock went up to a price specified, which would have exhausted the margin, they would not close plaintiff out but would carry the stock for him until he could get out all right. The plaintiff thereupon consented to leave the matter as it was. The stock continued to advance; but did not go above the price named. The defendants bought in at a price which almost exhausted the margin without notice to the plaintiff. Upon receiving notice of the purchase he repudiated it. The market subsequently declined and the plaintiff directed the defendants to buy to cover the short sale. This they declined to do. In an action to recover damages, it was held that the defendant's promise to carry the stock without further margin gave the plaintiff a right to recover, whether considered as an agreement with sufficient consideration, or as a waiver of notice to furnish more margin, or as an estoppel. In either case, the purchase was unauthorized and the plaintiff was entitled to recover the difference between the amount paid on such purchase and what the stock might have been bought for when the plaintiff gave directions to purchase.

2. In Hess v. Rau, 95 N. Y. 359, it appears that a broker had sold stock short for a customer, and, in accordance with the usual custom, had borrowed

c. ORDER TO "BUY IN" STOCK—(1) In General.—When the client instructs his broker to buy in stock and return it to the lender, the broker is bound to do so or become liable for such damages as result from his neglect or refusal to obey instructions.¹ On the other hand, if he does buy in the stock in obedience to his client's instructions and is obliged by reason of an advance in prices to pay more for it than he realized from the sale of the borrowed stock, his client is bound to reimburse him to the extent of such loss.²

the stock to deliver it, becoming himself obliged to return the borrowed stock, and borrowing from time to time as required to replace the stock previously borrowed. But while the transaction was so kept alive the customer died. The brokers continued the transaction until the appointment of the executrix of their client's estate, after which they notified her to furnish additional margin, and that in default of so doing they would buy in stocks on her account. The margin was not furnished, and the brokers bought in the stocks at a loss on the transaction of more than $9,000. They brought an action to recover the same, and it was contended by defendant that the death of the client revoked the agency and that the brokers should have closed the transaction at once. The court said: "But the rule that the death of the principal revokes the authority of an agent has a well settled exception when the agency is coupled with an interest. (Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 174.) The death of Rau left the plaintiffs in the position they had previously occupied of being borrowers of stocks to be delivered with a personal liability to replace them when called for by the lenders. This obligation was not and could not be terminated by Rau's death. The estate of Rau, on the other hand, was bound to indemnify the plaintiffs for any loss they might sustain in closing out the transaction, or, as the phrase is, 'covering the sale.' Until the appointment of a representative of Rau's estate, there was no one on whom the plaintiffs could call for additional margin, or to close the transactions, and no one to give directions in its behalf. The result of continuing the transactions might be favorable or unfavorable, but which could not be foreseen. . . . As it turned out, it would have been to the advantage of the estate if the stock had been bought in immediately after Rau's death. But if this course had been taken and the market had gone the other way, the plaintiffs would then have been called upon to justify the transaction. We think the plaintiffs were not bound to place themselves in this dilemma, but were authorized, acting in good faith, to maintain the existing situation until a representative of the estate should be appointed."

1. In White v. Smith, 54 N. Y. 522, it appears that on October 18th, defendants, stock-brokers, on plaintiff's order, sold 300 shares of stock short at 186. On November 1st, without plaintiff's order or knowledge, they bought in stock to cover the sale. On November 2d, the stock having declined to 180 $\frac{1}{4}$, the plaintiff ordered defendants to cover the sale; which they refused to do. The plaintiff repudiated the purchase made by defendants and sued them for the amount of profits he would have made if they had obeyed his orders. It was held that he was entitled to recover. The court said: "It is quite clear that the plaintiff was entitled to recover something, and the next inquiry is, How much? If the defendants had not disabled themselves from obeying the order and had obeyed it, the plaintiff would have made the precise sum which the jury awarded him. The loss of this profit was the direct and proximate consequence of the defendants' breach of duty to the plaintiff, and I know of no rule of law that was violated by the measure of damages adopted."

2. In Smith v. Bouvier, 70 Pa. St. 325, it appears that one Kames, not owning stock, employed a broker to sell stock for him at a named price, to be delivered at a particular day. The stock was sold and at the time of delivery the prices having risen, the broker borrowed stocks to meet the engagements. He afterwards under instructions from Kames bought at a

(2) "Stop Orders" in Short Sales.—This instruction to buy in may also be given in a stop order—that is, the client gives the broker instructions to buy in stock and cover the short sale when the market price of such stock reaches a certain point. If the order is mandatory and leaves nothing to the discretion of the broker, he is bound to obey it when the price of the stock reaches the point named in the order.¹

d. LEGALITY OF SHORT SALES.—Short sales such as have just been described, although made purely for purposes of speculation, are real transactions; and, in the absence of statutory prohibition of such contracts, rights acquired under them may be enforced in courts of justice.² It was once thought in England that an executory contract for the sale and delivery of chattels which the seller did not have and had not contracted for, but intended to buy before the day of delivery, was invalid as a mere wager on the price of the commodity;³ but this doctrine has been thoroughly exploded.⁴

higher rate to replace the stock borrowed. It was held that Kames was liable to the broker for the difference.

1. Smith v. Bouvier, 70 Pa. St. 325.

2. See cases above cited on Short Sales.

In Smith v. Bouvier, 70 Pa. St. 325, the legality of a short sale of stock was under consideration, and the court said: "They (plaintiffs in error) insisted that the jury should have been instructed that all purchases of stocks with a view to resell and make profit on their rise, or contracts to furnish stocks on time, should be declared gambling contracts and illegal, not only between the buyer and seller, but as to the brokers or agents through whom the sales and purchases had been made. This would make a great inroad into what has for an indefinite period been regarded as a legitimate business, and would either destroy it altogether, or, if continued, put the brokers at the mercy of those for whom they transact such business. Let it be understood that a broker has no power to recover either for advances or commissions, however honestly he may have dealt, and there will be found enough persons whose consciences would throw their loss upon the shoulders of those who advanced the money and earned commissions in their services. It would be a very palpable wrong to the brokers who are licensed to do such business if such were held to be the law. To this extent Brua's Appeal, 55 Pa. St. 294, never was intended to go."

In Maxton v. Gheen, 75 Pa. St. 166, the same question was before the court, and Agnew, C. J., said: "But here the stock was in every instance actually sold and delivered, and the transaction carried into final execution. The plaintiffs, who were the brokers of the defendant, were not even aware that he was selling short until the term of credit was expiring and he bought to fill his sales. It will not do to say because there is so much gambling in stocks that every sale short, as it is termed, is ipso facto a wager." See also Porter v. Viets, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 177.

3. In Bryan v. Lewis, 1 R. & M. 386, Lord Tenterden held that if goods be sold to be delivered at a future day, and the seller has not the goods, nor any contract for them, nor any reasonable expectation of receiving them on consignment, but intends to go into the market and buy them, it is not a valid contract but a wager on the price of the commodity.

4. The doctrine of Bryan v. Lewis, 1 R. & M. 386, was questioned in the common pleas in Wells v. Porter, 2 Bing. N. Cas. 722; 29 E. C. L. 469, and in Hibblewhite v. McMorine, 5 M. & W. 462, it was held that a contract for the sale of 50 shares of Brighton Railway Company, to be transferred, delivered and paid for at a future day, the vendor not having the shares in his possession at the time of the contract, nor any reasonable expectation of getting them otherwise than by purchase after the contract had been made, was

In England, short sales of bank shares are prohibited by statute,¹ and in some of the states of the Union there are statutes designed to prevent such sales altogether.² And where such contracts are prohibited by the law of the forum, it has been held that they will not be enforced, even though they are legal and valid in the jurisdiction where they are made.³

V. OPTIONS.—Many transactions in stocks are made under what are called option contracts. Many of these contracts are rendered incapable of being enforced by the statutes aimed at wagering contracts, but it is proposed to consider them at this point so far only as they have been held to be legal and enforceable in the courts. Option contracts are of three sorts, viz., “puts,” “calls” and combinations of these, sometimes called “straddles.” A “put” is an agreement whereby one party for a valuable consideration paid to the other party acquires the privilege of delivering or not at his option a certain amount of stock valid. Parke Barron said: “I have always entertained considerable doubt and suspicion as to the correctness of Lord Tenterden’s doctrine in Bryan v. Lewis. It excited a good deal of surprise in my mind at the time, and when examined I think is untenable. I cannot see what principle of law is at all affected by a man’s being allowed to contract for the sale of goods of which he has not possession at the time of the bargain and has no reasonable expectation of receiving. Such contract does not amount to a wager, inasmuch as both the contracting parties are not cognizant of the fact that the goods are not in the vendor’s possession.” Alderson, B., said: “I have always considered the doctrine laid down in Bryan v. Lewis, 1 R. & M. 386, as contrary to law and most inconvenient in practice. I have often heard it spoken of with great suspicion, both by lawyers and mercantile men, upon both grounds as against law and against all mercantile convenience. It was with great surprise I heard so accurate a lawyer give utterance to a doctrine so utterly erroneous.”

In Mortimer v. McCallam, 6 M. & W. 58, the court followed Hibblewhite v. McMorine, 5 M. & W. 462, thus completely overruling Bryan v. Lewis, 1 R. & M. 386.

1. Stat. 30 Vict., ch. 29, requires the sellers of bank shares to specify the numbers or give the names of the registered proprietors of the shares which they are selling for future delivery.

2. See Stebbins v. Leowolf, 3 Cush.

(Mass.) 137; Barrett v. Hyde, 7 Gray (Mass.) 160; Barrett v. Mead, 10 Allen (Mass.) 337; Durant v. Burt, 98 Mass. 161; Rock v. Nichols, 3 Allen (Mass.) 342; Brown v. Phelps, 103 Mass. 313; Brigham v. Mead, 10 Allen (Mass.) 245; Colt v. Clapp, 127 Mass. 476; Bullard v. Smith, 139 Mass. 492; Frazier v. Simmons, 139 Mass. 531; Pratt v. American Bell Teleph. Co., 141 Mass. 225; 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 110; 55 Am. Rep. 465; Duchemin v. Kendall, 149 Mass. 171; Jones v. Ames, 135 Mass. 431, construing the Massachusetts statute.

In New York, an act against stock jobbing was passed in 1812, and in 1830 was re-enacted. Under this statute the court of appeals held a short sale of stock to be illegal, in the case of Staples v. Gould, 9 N. Y. 521. This statute was repealed by ch. 134, Laws of 1858. Since that time courts have upheld contracts of short sales of stock in the state of New York. See also Flagg v. Baldwin, 38 N. J. Eq. 219; 48 Am. Rep. 308; construing New Jersey statutes on the subject, and Pickering v. Cease, 79 Ill. 328, construing the statute of Illinois.

3. In Flagg v. Baldwin, 38 N. J. Eq. 219; 48 Am. Rep. 308, it was held that such contracts, though made in another state where they are presumed to be lawful and enforceable, would not be enforced in New Jersey, at least against residents and citizens of that state, because their enforcement would violate the plain public policy of the state, on the subject of gambling and betting, evinced by the statute.

within a specified time and for a price named in the agreement.¹ A "call" is the opposite of a "put," in that the party who pays the consideration has the right to claim delivery of the stock within the time and at the price agreed upon.² A "straddle" is a combination of a "put" and "call," and the party who pays the consideration may either claim or deliver the stock, or do neither, at his option.³ There is nothing on the face of such contracts to brand them as wagers, and, in the absence of extrinsic evidence to show that they are made in violation of the statutes against gaming, they will be presumed to be valid and may be enforced.⁴ And when a broker is conducting such a transaction for his customer, it is his duty, in the absence of instructions from his customer, to exercise the option at the most favorable time.⁵ But a contract purporting on its face to be a contract of sale may, if the illegality of the contract is set up in defense, be impeached by parol evidence of circumstances which show that the parties were merely gambling on the prices of stocks.⁶

VI. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF BROKERS—1. Right to Buy and Sell in the Customary Manner.—It may be stated as a general proposition that the known usages of trade and business enter into the employment of stock-brokers, and that, if a broker conducts his business in accordance with such usages in good faith

1. Bigelow v. Benedict, 70 N. Y. 202; 26 Am. Rep. 573.

2. Yerkes v. Salomon, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 471. See Kirkpatrick v. Bonsall, 72 Pa. St. 155.

3. Story v. Salomon, 71 N. Y. 420; Harris v. Tumbidge, 83 N. Y. 92; 38 Am. Rep. 398.

4. Bigelow v. Benedict, 70 N. Y. 202; 26 Am. Rep. 573; Yerkes v. Salomon, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 471; Kirkpatrick v. Bonsall, 72 Pa. St. 155; Story v. Salomon, 71 N. Y. 420; Harris v. Tumbidge, 83 N. Y. 92; 38 Am. Rep. 398; Porter v. Viets, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 177; Hibblewhite v. McMorine, 5 M. & W. 462, overruling Bryan v. Lewis, Ry. & M. 386; 21 E. C. L. 467.

5. In Harris v. Tumbidge, 83 N. Y. 92; 38 Am. Rep. 398, the plaintiff bought, through the agency of defendant, a stock option or privilege, known in the language of brokers as a "straddle." On the next day after the purchase the defendant sold the stock short which resulted in a loss. Plaintiff brought an action to recover damages, upon which she recovered, and defendant appealed. The judgment was affirmed. The court said: "It is made very apparent by the evidence that the only right of the defendant, as the agent of the plaintiff, after the purchase for her of the 'straddle' contract, was to exercise the option secured by it at such time within sixty days as she might direct; or, if no instructions were given and the situation was left to his care, then to exercise that option at such time within the sixty days as, taking into view the state of the market, appeared to be prudent and proper. In no event had he the right to involve the plaintiff in another and distinct speculation having no necessary connection with the straddle contract, except that as the evidence seems to show, it had the effect to neutralize one part of the contract."

6. Story v. Salomon, 71 N. Y. 420; Yerkes v. Salomon, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 471; Harris v. Tumbidge, 83 N. Y. 92; 38 Am. Rep. 398; Bigelow v. Benedict, 70 N. Y. 202; 26 Am. Rep. 573; Kirkpatrick v. Bonsall, 72 Pa. St. 155; North v. Phillips, 89 Pa. St. 250; Hibblewhite v. McMorine, 5 M. & W. 466. Porter v. Viets, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 177, is opposed to other authorities on this point, holding as it does, that the defendant cannot be permitted to show that the intention of the parties was not to deliver or accept the property, but simply to settle the "differences" in cash.

and with reasonable care, he will be exonerated from all further responsibility;¹ and if he has acted within the scope of his authority and conducted his business as above described, his client must protect him against losses and repay him his necessary expenses in the conduct of the business.²

2. Right to Act by Substitute.—It is doubtless true that a stock-broker has no more power than any other agent to free himself from responsibility by delegating his authority to another, but there are circumstances under which he may act through a sub-agent, as where the purchase or sale is to be made in a distant city,³ or where the act to be performed is purely ministerial and calls for the exercise of no peculiar skill or discretion.⁴

3. May Not Act in Dual Capacity in the Same Transaction.—A stock-broker may not act as principal and agent in one and the same transaction; therefore, if he assumes to buy his client's stock, or to sell his own stock to a client without his knowledge and assent, the client may either repudiate the assumed purchase or sale, or elect to affirm it and hold the broker

1. Mitchell v. Newhall, 15 M. & W. 308; Westropp v. Solomon, 8 C. B. 345; 65 E. C. L. 345; Pollock v. Stables, 12 Q. B. 765; 64 E. C. L. 765; Tempest v. Kilner, 3 C. B. 253; 54 E. C. L. 248; Bayley v. Wilkins, 7 C. B. 886; 62 E. C. L. 885; Hunt v. Gunn, 13 C. B. N. S. 227; 106 E. C. L. 227; Taylor v. Stray, 2 C. B. N. S. 175; 89 E. C. L. 175; Lamert v. Heath, 15 M. & W. 486; 15 L. J., Exch. 298; Morrice v. Hunter, 14 L. T. 897; Smith v. Lindo, 5 C. B. N. S. 587; 94 E. C. L. 587; Rosewarne v. Billing, 15 C. B. N. S. 316; 109 E. C. L. 316; Remfry v. Butler, 1 E. B. & E. 887; 96 E. C. L. 887; Brederman v. Stone, L. R., 2 C. P. 504; Chapman v. Shepherd, L. R., 2 C. P. 228; Webb v. Challoner, 2 F. & F. 120; McEwen v. Woods, 11 Q. B. 13; 63 E. C. L. 13; Bayliffe v. Butterworth, 1 Exch. 425; Sutton v. Tatham, 10 Ad. & El. 27; 37 E. C. L. 25; Peckham v. Ketchum, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 506; 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 220; Porter v. Wormser, 94 N. Y. 431; Gheen v. Johnson, 90 Pa. St. 38.

2. See cases in last note, and also Sistare v. Best, 83 N. Y. 527; Willard v. White, 56 Hun (N. Y.) 581; Sweeney v. Rogers, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 469; Hill v. Morris, 21 Mo. App. 256; Jones v. Gallagher, 3 Utah 54; Marshall v. Levy, 66 Cal. 236; Ball v. Clark, 28 Fed. Rep. 179.

In Marshall v. Levy, 66 Cal. 236, a broker who was carrying stock for his client, paid assessments thereon. It was held that he was entitled to credit for the amount of the assessments so paid.

In Hill v. Morris, 21 Mo. App. 256, a broker through his agent paid his customer's loss. The court having held that the agent had no right of action against the customer for want of privity of contract, the broker was allowed to recover the amount so paid himself.

3. Rosenstock v. Tormey, 32 Md. 169; 3 Am. Rep. 125; Allen v. McConihe, 124 N. Y. 342; Booth v. Fielding, 1 W. R. 245; Gheen v. Johnson, 90 Pa. St. 38.

4. In Sims v. May (Supreme Ct.), 1 N. Y. Supp. 671, it appeared that brokers who were authorized to buy and sell stock did so in part through a sub-agent. It was contended that the brokers had no authority to order another firm to execute the purchase or sale, upon the ground that the execution of the order involved an exercise of discretion, and that it was of the character of a trust, and, in its nature, personal. The court said: "In this contention we think the plaintiff has taken an erroneous view of the relations of the parties. There was certainly a discretion vested as to whether a sale should be made or not, but when a sale had been determined upon, the discretion had been exercised and the execution of the order involved the exercise of no discretion whatever. It was not necessary that a member of

to the price which he has reported.¹ But if the client elects to rescind the purchase or sale, he must return to the broker the consideration for the sale, or the certificates or other securities delivered to him.² Neither may a broker act as agent for both the buyer and seller in the same transaction.³

the firm of John J. Cisco & Son should personally make such sale. They had the right to employ a sub-agent for that purpose."

1. Conkey v. Bond, 36 N. Y. 427; Taussig v. Hart, 49 N. Y. 301; 58 N. Y. 425; Quincey v. White, 63 N. Y. 370; Pickering v. Demerritt, 100 Mass. 416; Day v. Holmes, 103 Mass. 306; Todd v. Bishop, 136 Mass. 286; Robinson v. Mollett, L. R., 7 H. L. 802; Brookman v. Rothchild, 3 Sim. 153, 224, affirmed H. of L., 5 Bligh N. S. 165; Crull v. Dodson, Macn. Sel. Cas. 114; Sel. Ch. Ca. 41; Marve v. Strouse, 5 Fed. Rep. 483; Gillett v. Peppercorne, 3 Beav. 78; Kimber v. Barber, L. R., 8 Ch. 56; Bentley v. Craven, 18 Beav. 76; Trevelyan v. Charles, 9 Beav. 140; Dunne v. English, L. R., 18 Eq. 524; Com. v. Cooper, 15 Am. L. Rev. 360.

Neither can he sell to the firm of which he is a member. Martin v. Moulton, 8 N. H. 504.

In Conkey v. Bond, 36 N. Y. 427, it appeared that a broker employed to purchase stock imposed his own stock on his principal without his assent. The court said: "There is no view of the facts in which the transaction can be upheld. He stood in a relation to his principal which disabled him from concluding a contract with himself without the knowledge or assent of the party he assumed to represent. He undertook to act at once as seller and purchaser. He bought as agent and sold as owner. The ex parte bargain thus concluded proved advantageous to him and very unfortunate for his principal. It was the right of the latter to rescind it on discovery of the breach of confidence. It is not material to inquire whether the defendant had any actual fraudulent purpose. The making of a purchase from himself without authority from the plaintiff was a constructive fraud in view of the fiduciary relation which existed between the parties. In such a case the law delivers the agent from temptation by a presumptio juris ei de jure, which good intentions are unavailing to repel."

In Todd v. Bishop, 136 Mass. 386, a broker employed to purchase certain shares of stock upon a margin and carry them for his client reported that he had made a purchase. Upon a decline in prices the client instructed the broker to sell the shares. He reported that he had done this and the client paid him the difference between the purchase price and the selling price, together with interest and commissions. It was held that if no purchase or sale was in fact made and the broker simply assumed the contract himself, his client was entitled to recover the money paid him, unless he made the payment with full knowledge of the facts.

But a broker's notice of sale showing that he himself had been the purchaser will not preclude him from showing that the sale was in fact made to another. Porter v. Wormser, 94 N. Y. 431.

2. In Mayo v. Knowlton, 10 N. Y. Supp. 230, it appears that a broker was ordered to purchase mining stock for his client, and assumed to act as agent and broker in the transaction. The stock which he delivered to the plaintiff was in reality stock owned by himself which he had merely transferred to the purchaser, himself retaining the purchase price. Afterwards the mine was bought by another company and the shares were made convertible into shares of the new company, and the client so converted his shares. Upon discovery of the fact that his broker had delivered to him his own shares and had not bought them as directed, he sought to repudiate the transaction. The court held that in order that he might do so he must tender the shares which he received in the new company, as he could not retain the subject of his purchase and at the same time maintain an action for the wrongful act of the broker in delivering stock owned by himself.

3. Levy v. Loeb, 85 N. Y. 365.

In Rice v. Davis, 136 Pa. St. 439; 29 Am. St. Rep. 931, a broker employed to sell stock accepted commissions from both the buyer and the seller.

4. Liability to Undisclosed Client of Another Broker.—It is of course true that in every purchase and sale of stock the real parties to the contract are the clients of the brokers who effect such purchase and sale, but their names are not disclosed and they are never brought together; consequently, the rights and liabilities of the ultimate parties to a stock contract are generally determined and enforced by and against their respective brokers. But upon the execution of an order to purchase or sell, it has been seen that the broker reports to his client the name of the broker from whom he has purchased or to whom he has sold, who thus appears to the client as the other party to the transaction. In the majority of cases the contract is enforced between the brokers as principals by the rules of the Stock Exchange, where they are treated as the real parties to the transaction and left to adjust matters with their respective clients afterwards. But there are a few cases in which the relations between a broker and the undisclosed client of another broker have been adjudicated, and they establish the rule that a broker who does not disclose the name of his principal is liable as principal to the other party to the contract in accordance with the general law of agency on this subject;¹ but if the broker dis-

The court said: "The principle underlying this case that an agent for the sale of property cannot at the same time act as agent for the purchase thereof, or interest himself therein, and thus entitle himself to compensation from both vendor and vendee, is grounded on the infallible declaration that no man can serve two masters. As a rule of public policy it is distinctly recognized in our text-books on agency and in numerous adjudicated cases, among which are Everhart v. Searle, 71 Pa. St. 256; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Flanigan, 112 Pa. St. 558; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 88, and cases there cited. It forbids that any one intrusted with the interests of others shall in any manner make the business an object of personal interest to himself, because from the frailty of nature one who has the power will be too readily seized with the inclination to use the opportunity for serving his own interests at the expense of his principal."

1. In Royal Exchange Assur. Co. v. Moore, 11 W. R. 592, the plaintiffs authorized a stock-broker to purchase for them certain debentures. On the same day the broker reported that he had bought the debentures of the defendants, who were also stock-brokers. The defendants gave a sold note signed with their own names for the amount, not acting as principals, but as brokers for an undisclosed principal, who subsequently delivered to them a deed of transfer of the debentures, which was forged. This deed of transfer was handed to the plaintiffs by their broker, and they were afterwards compelled to deliver it to the true owner, together with the dividends collected thereon. The plaintiffs thereupon brought suit against the defendants, who were held liable on the ground that they had signed the sales note and were concluded thereby.

In Nickalls v. Merry, L. R., 7 H. L. 530, reversing L. R., 7 Ch. 733, a jobber, who had agreed with a broker of an undisclosed principal to purchase shares, and who had given the name of an infant as the transferee, by reason of which the principal was compelled to pay certain calls, was held liable to pay the same in an action brought against him by such undisclosed principal. Lord Hatherley said: "Nobody denies that when a broker sells shares for his principal (who is what is called an outsider, and who has employed him to sell the shares) to anybody in the market, whether a jobber or a broker, there is a good and valid contract made between those parties—that is to say, between the person whose shares are to be sold and the jobber who purchases those shares from the vendor's broker." See also Watson v.

closes the name of his principal, he will not himself be liable in that capacity.¹

5. Right to Commissions.—When a broker has completed the stock transaction for his client, he is entitled to compensation for his services, and the amount of such compensation is fixed by either an express or implied agreement. If there is an express agreement, it, of course, is binding upon the parties in that regard;² but if there is no such agreement, the law will imply an agreement on the part of the client to pay the broker customary or reasonable commissions for his services.³ But to entitle a broker to his commissions he must have performed his whole duty in his client's behalf.⁴ A broker who has negotiated an unlawful wag-

Miller, 11 Wkly. Notes 18, and Stray v. Russell, 1 El. & El. 888.

1. In Coles v. Bristowe, L. R., 4 Ch. 3, the plaintiff, a holder of 200 shares in a company, by his brokers, contracted on the Stock Exchange for the sale of that number of shares to the defendants, who were jobbers, for a future day called a "settling day." Before the settling day the jobbers on a day called a "name day," in accordance with the custom at the Stock Exchange, gave to the vendor's brokers the names of seventeen persons as ultimate purchasers, to whom the shares were to be transferred in different parcels. The brokers of the vendor accordingly prepared seventeen deeds of transfer, got them executed by the vendor, and on said day handed them and the share certificates to the jobbers, who thereupon paid the price agreed upon. In the meantime the company had stopped payment and was ordered to be wound up. The seventeen transferees, through their brokers, had paid their purchase money to the jobbers, and had received but not executed the deeds of transfer, and the plaintiff, whose name remained on the list of shareholders, was obliged to pay calls on these shares. He thereupon filed a bill against the jobbers claiming indemnity against the calls. It was held that after the jobbers had paid to the vendor his purchase money and given the names of the transferees to whom the vendor executed the transfers, and these transferees through their brokers had received the transfers and paid their purchase money to the jobbers, the liability of the jobbers ceased and the bill was dismissed.

2. In Mattingly v. Roach, 84 Cal. 207, it appears that the owner of certain mining stock made a written agreement with a broker that the broker should have all in excess of a certain price for which he might be able to sell the stock. He claimed to have found a purchaser for the stock ready and willing to buy the same and pay for it, and the owner thereof refused to perform his part of the contract. The broker accordingly sued for $125,000, the amount which he claimed to have sold the stock for in excess of that agreed to be accepted by the owner. It was held that proof tending to show this state of facts was sufficient to entitle him to have the cause submitted to the jury as to whether or not he had performed the contract on his part.

3. As to the effect of custom to determine the rate of commissions, see Morgan v. Mason, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 636; Miller v. Insurance Co. of N. A., 1 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 470 and note; Erben v. Lorillard, 2 Keyes (N. Y.) 567; Adams v. Capron, 21 Md. 186; 83 Am. Dec. 566; Deshler v. Beers, 32 Ill. 368; 83 Am. Dec. 274; Potts v. Aechternacht, 93 Pa. St. 138.

4. In Hoffman v. Livingston, 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. 552, it was held that a failure on the part of a broker to give his client notice and information of the exact condition and state of her account in his hands by which she could see at any time that in the end it would prove to be an irremediable loss to her, and of profit to him, was such negligence as would preclude him from recovering his commission. The court said: "If the duties of a broker are executed in such a manner that no benefit results from them, he is not entitled to recover either his commission or even a compensation for his trouble." Citing Hamond v. Holiday, 1 C. & P. 384. See also Taylor v.

ering contract for his client cannot recover his commissions therefor;¹ and where the broker is required to have a license, one who is not a licensed broker cannot recover his commissions,² although it seems he may recover money expended for the use of his client in the transaction.³

VII. SPECIAL CONTRACTS AND JOINT UNDERTAKINGS.—The customary rights and obligations which exist between broker and client may be modified by special agreement, whereby the liabilities of either party may be limited;⁴ as where the client agrees that his business may be conducted in accordance with the usage of a particular office,⁵ or agrees that his broker may sell the stock without notice under certain circumstances mentioned in the agreement.⁶

Stray, 2 C. B. N. S. 179; 87 E. C. L. 179.

A person who as a broker and commission merchant violates a contract of purchase to hold and carry grain for another by selling the grain contrary to contract cannot recover his commissions and advances. Ball v. Clark, 24 Blatchf. (U. S.) 81.

1. In Josephs v. Pebrer, 3 B. & C. 639; 10 E. C. L. 209, a stock-broker sued for his commissions and money expended in the purchase of shares in a concern called the Equitable Loan Bank Company. It appeared that the company was not legally organized, and upon a finding that the company was to be considered illegal and against the operation of 6 Geo. I., ch. 18, as having transferrable shares and affecting to act as a body corporate without authority by charter or act of parliament, it was held that the plaintiff could not maintain his action which arose out of an illegal transaction. See also Harvey v. Merrill, 150 Mass. 1; 15 Am. St. Rep. 159; Ream v. Hamilton, 15 Mo. App. 577.

2. In Field v. Sawyer, 5 C. B. 844; 57 E. C. L. 842, note A, it was held that a broker could not recover his commissions unless he was a sworn broker.

In Hustis v. Pickands, 27 Ill. App. 270, it was held that brokers in mining stocks are embraced within an ordinance of the city of Chicago which renders it unlawful for any person to exercise within the city the business of a money-changer or banker, broker or commission merchant, without a license therefor, and that a broker who has purchased mining stock for a third party in violation of such ordinance without a license cannot maintain an action for his commissions.

3. In Watts v. Brooks, 3 Ves. 612, it was held that if a broker had made disbursements on behalf of his client, he could recover them whether he was a sworn broker or not.

In Jessopp v. Lutwyche, 10 Exch. 614; 3 C. L. R. 359; 24 L. J. Exch. 65, to a declaration for money paid and on accounts stated, the defendant interposed a plea that the causes of action accrued to the plaintiff as a broker in the city of London about the purchasing and selling for the defendant in the city of London of shares, and that he was not duly licensed. It was held that the plea was bad, as the statute 6 Anne, ch. 16, does not prevent an unlicensed broker from recovering money paid at the request of his employer, or for money due on accounts stated with his employer.

4. Baker v. Drake, 66 N. Y. 518; 23 Am. Rep. 80; Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 244; Wicks v. Hatch, 62 N. Y. 535; Stenton v. Jerome, 54 N. Y. 480; Hyatt v. Argenti, 3 Cal. 151.

5. In Baker v. Drake, 66 N. Y. 518, 23 Am. Rep. 80, the plaintiff employed the defendants to purchase stocks for him upon a margin, he agreeing that all transactions in stocks should be in every way subject to the usages of the defendants' office. In an action for conversion by sale without notice of stocks so purchased, the defendants offered to prove that it was the custom of their office to sell on account of failure to furnish sufficient margins at the Stock Exchange without giving notice to the customer of the time and place of sale. The offer was rejected. On appeal it was held error.

6. In Wicks v. Hatch, 62 N. Y. 535, the plaintiff executed a written contract authorizing his brokers to sell in their discretion at public or private sale, without notice, the stocks, etc.,

Sometimes the broker and his client engage in joint adventures, as where one of them furnishes the information, and the other contributes the capital to carry on the operation; and it has been held that the contribution of information which is acted upon in a stock transaction is a sufficient consideration to support an agreement to give the party furnishing it a portion of the profits.¹ Where it is agreed between the broker and his client that the former shall have a certain proportion of the proceeds of stock as compensation for his services in handling and disposing of it, the client cannot compel a surrender of the certificates without showing a breach of duty on the part of the broker.² And where two parties agree to operate jointly in stocks, and one of them opens an account with a broker in his own name and manages the transactions, keeping the broker in ignorance of the other party's interest, and at the same time carries on transactions of his own in which the other party has no interest, the silent partner cannot compel the broker to account for his share of the proceeds of the joint adventures without a settlement of the other party's entire account.³ And where parties bought stock agreeing to pay a certain sum per share therefor, and in addition to such sum one-half of the profits they might realize from a sale thereof, after deducting commissions and expenses, and they subsequently agreed to which they might be carrying for him whenever the margin should fall below five per cent. It was held that the defendants were authorized to sell at the board of brokers, without notice, in good faith and in sound discretion, when they deemed the state of the market justified or demanded it, and that the plaintiff was liable for any loss on sales beyond the amount of the margin.

In Robinson v. Norris, 51 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 442, affirmed in 6 Hun (N. Y.) 233, the client signed an agreement which authorized the brokers to sell at their discretion at the brokers' board or elsewhere, or at public or private sale, with or without advertising, and without prior demand of any kind upon or notice to the customer, of the time and place of sale, all or any gold, stocks, property, things in action, or collateral securities held by them and belonging to the customer. It was held that the customer was bound by the terms of the agreement.

1. White v. Drew, 56 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 53; Marston v. Gould, 69 N. Y. 220; Crosby v. Watts, 49 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 364; Monroe v. Peck, 3 Daly (N. Y.) 128; Strong v. Place, 33 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 114.

In White v. Drew, 56 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 53, the plaintiff was in possession of valuable information in relation to certain stock which he proposed to impart to the defendant upon condition that if the defendant should consider it sufficiently important to warrant his acting upon it, he should hold 5,000 shares of such stock at cost for the plaintiff's account and at his risk and subject to his orders for the period of sixty or ninety days. To this the defendant assented, and thereupon the plaintiff imparted the information which the defendant accepted and acted upon, pronouncing it the best point he had heard of in a long time. It was held the moment the information was given and the transaction assented to by the defendant it was an executed contract and the defendant bore the same relation to the plaintiff in regard to this stock as stock-brokers ordinarily bear to the customers for whom they are carrying stocks, and that such information being concededly of great value, was just as effective to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds as if cash payment had been made.

2. Wight v. Wood, 85 N. Y. 402.

3. Read v. Jaudon, 35 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 303.

divide their profits with a third party, who undertook to dispose of the stock, and succeeded in doing so at a profit through the agency of a stock-broker, it was held that the original vendees must account to the original vendors for the full amount of the profits realized from the sale of the stock, less their own expenses and the commissions of the broker who effected the sale, and that the interest of the third party who undertook to dispose of the stock was not chargeable either as expenses or commissions.¹

VIII. USAGES AND CUSTOMS.—Persons who voluntarily become members of an organization are bound by the laws and usages of the same, provided they do not contravene the law of the land or public policy. It will readily be seen that there may be usages and customs of the Stock Exchange which are binding on its members in their dealings with one another, but would not be enforced in transactions between members and non-members. For example, the usage authorizing a pledgee to sell stock held as collateral security for a debt without notice to the pledgor has been held valid and lawful as between members of the Stock Exchange;² but in another case such custom was not upheld in a transaction the parties to which were not both members of the Exchange.³

1. Berdell v. Allen, 54 N. Y. Super. Ct. 38, affirmed 116 N. Y. 661.

2. In Colket v. Ellis, 32 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 82; 10 Phila. (Pa.) 375, the parties were both members of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange. The plaintiffs borrowed on call a sum of money from defendants, depositing as collateral security certain stocks. The plaintiffs failed to repay the money upon demand, and the defendants sold the stock without notice to the plaintiffs. Several months afterward, the stock having advanced, the plaintiffs tendered the full amount of their debt and demanded a return of the stock, which was refused, and the plaintiffs brought their action, basing their claim upon the law that the sale of collaterals must be public after due notice, and that a usage to the contrary was bad and of no effect. It was shown on the trial that there was an established general usage among brokers, when a call loan was not paid on the day it was demanded, to sell out the collateral securities at the board of brokers without further notice to the borrower. The trial court found that both parties were familiar with the usage and both acted throughout on the basis of its validity. The court was of the opinion that, as between the plaintiffs and defendants who were both members of the board of brokers, familiar with and dealing on the basis of the usage, it was a valid and lawful custom and should control the rights of the parties.

3. In Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 235, the same question arose, except that the pledgor was not a member of the Stock Exchange. The court said: "On the trial the defendants offered to prove the existence of a custom in the city of New York between brokers and their customers, by which brokers have the right to sell out their customer's stock on the exhaustion of the margin. This was an offer not to explain the meaning of particular terms or to prove attending circumstances to enable the court to construe the agreement, but to change the rights of the parties to the contract. By the law as I have interpreted it, the customer did not lose the title to his stock by any process less than a sale upon a reasonable notice or by judicial proceedings. The broker had no right to sell without such notice. A practice or custom to do otherwise would have no more force than a custom to protest notes on the first day of grace, or a custom of brokers not to purchase shares at all in a case like the present, but to content themselves with a memorandum or entry in their books of the contract made with their customer. Such practice in each case would be in hostility to the terms of the contract, an at-

But it may be laid down as a general proposition that one who employs a broker to operate in stocks for him must be presumed to give him authority to act as other brokers do, and in the execution of his orders to follow the rules and usages of the Stock Exchange.¹ And in the application of this rule, it has been held that it is immaterial whether the principal is familiar with such rules and usages or not.² And it seems that no private instructions given by a principal to his broker will so limit his general tempt to change its application and would be void. The proof could not therefore be legally given;" citing Mutual Safety Ins. Co. v. Hone, 2 N. Y. 235; Beirne v. Dord, 5 N. Y. 102; 55 Am. Dec. 321; Thompson v. Ashton, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 317; Thompson v. Riggs, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 679.

1. Sutton v. Tathan, 10 Ad. & El. 27; 37 E. C. L. 25; Pollock v. Stables, 12 Q. B. 765; 64 E. C. L. 765; Mitchell v. Newhall, 15 M. & W. 308; Smith v. Lindo, 5 C. B. N. S. 587; 94 E. C. L. 587; Mortimer v. McCallan, 6 M. & W. 58; Magee v. Atkinson, 2 M. & W. 440; Lloyd v. Guibert, 35 L. J. Q. B. 74; Nickalls v. Merry, L. R., 7 H. L. 530; Bayliffe v. Butterworth, 1 Exch. 425; Higgins v. Senior, 8 M. & W. 834; Lacey v. Hill, L. R., 8 Ch. 921; Stray v. Russell, 29 L. J. Q. B. 115; Cruse v. Paine, L. R., 4 Ch. 441; Griswell v. Bristowe, L. R., 4 C. P. 36; Coles v. Bristowe, L. R., 4 Ch. 3; Johnston v. Osborne, 11 A. & E. 549; 39 E. C. L. 549; Maxted v. Paine, L. R., 4 Exch. 205; Stewart v. Cauty, 8 M. & W. 160; Westropp v. Solomon, 8 C. B. 345; 65 E. C. L. 345; Hodgkinson v. Kelly, L. R., 6 Ex. 501; Nourse v. Prime, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 490; 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 69; 13 Am. Dec. 606; 11 Am. Dec. 403; Horton v. Morgan, 19 N. Y. 170; 75 Am. Dec. 311; Lawrence v. Maxwell, 53 N. Y. 19; Whitehouse v. Moore, 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 142; Kingsbury v. Kirwin, 43 N. Y. Super. Ct. 451; affirmed 77 N. Y. 612; Porter v. Wormser, 94 N. Y. 431; Rosenstock v. Tormey, 32 Md. 169; 3 Am. Rep. 125; Sumner v. Stewart, 69 Pa. St. 321; Durant v. Burt, 98 Mass. 161.

2. In Sutton v. Tathan, 10 Ad. & El. 27; 37 E. C. L. 25, it was held that a person who employs a broker must be supposed to give him authority to act as other brokers do; and that it does not matter whether or not he himself is acquainted with the rules by which brokers are governed.

In Pollock v. Stables, 12 Q. B. 765; 64 E. C. L. 765, it is held that if a party authorizes a broker to buy shares for him in a particular market where the usage is that when a purchaser does not pay for his shares within a given time, the vendor giving the purchaser notice may resell and charge him with the difference, and the broker acting under this authority buys at such market in his own name, such broker if compelled to pay a difference on the shares through the neglect of his principal to supply funds, may sue the principal for money paid to his use, and it is not necessary in such action to show that the principal knew of the custom. See also Bayliffe v. Butterworth, 1 Exch. 425, and Mitchell v. Newhall, 15 M. & W. 308.

In Walls v. Bailey, 49 N. Y. 464; 10 Am. Rep. 407, which was not, however, a case in which the usages of the Stock Exchange were under consideration, the court cited Pollock v. Stables, 12 Q. B. 765; 64 E. C. L. 765, on this point, with approval, saying: "There are cases, too, of principal and agent where one has been set by another to do acts in a particular business to be done at a particular locality as on Stock Exchange, where the power to deal is a privilege obtained by a payment of a fee and is restricted to a body which has, for its regulation and government, come under certain prescribed rules or established usages. And as the agent could not do the will of his principal, nor the principal himself save in conformity with those rules or usages, it is held that the principal must be bound thereby whether cognizant of them or not, and that ignorance will not excuse him."

In Whitehouse v. Moore, 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 142, it was held that one who employs a broker is presumed to deal with reference to the customs of brokers whether known to him or not. In the complaint by the broker against his principal an allegation of the prin-authority to transact business on the Stock Exchange in accordance with the usages thereof as to affect the rights of third parties with whom the broker deals on the Exchange.¹

But it has been held that a rule of the Stock Exchange can have no retroactive operation on the dealings of non-members, notwithstanding its observance and enforcement among the members themselves.² The rule that a jobber³ is relieved from the liabilities of a purchaser after he has passed a name which was not objected to within the time required by the rules, has been held reasonable and valid, although the party named as the ultimate purchaser is financially worthless.⁴ So also the custom of closing all a broker's transactions on the Exchange when he becomes a defaulter, has been held reasonable;⁵ but his customers will not be liable for any losses occasioned purely by his insolvency and principal's knowledge of the custom relied upon was omitted. The court said: "The omission to aver that the defendants had knowledge of the custom appeared to me at first to be a clear objection to the complaint, but the authorities cited by counsel, particularly that of Pollock v. Stables, 12 Q. B. 765, 64 E. C. L. 765, are decisive as to the English rule, and I do not find that it has been ruled with us that knowledge is necessary. It existed in Horton v. Morgan, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 56, but it is not relied upon as essential."

1. Coles v. Bristowe, L. R., 4 Ch. 3.

2. Westropp v. Solomon, 8 C. B. 345; 65 E. C. L. 344.

3. It should here be remembered that the members of the London Stock Exchange are divided into two classes, viz., brokers and jobbers. A broker never acts as a principal, but buys and sells for other parties whose names are not disclosed. The jobber either deals on his own account, or passes names of other parties whom he represents; in case no name is passed a jobber is considered as dealing in his own behalf. See Maxted v. Paine, L. R., 4 Exch. 205.

4. In Maxted v. Paine, L. R., 6 Exch. 132, a party through his broker on the Stock Exchange sold to a jobber ten shares in Overend, Gurney & Co., Limited. The jobber on the same day passed a ticket to the plaintiff's brokers, containing the name of the ultimate purchaser; no objection was made to the name, and the plaintiff executed a transfer, to the party named, for the ten shares. It was afterwards discovered that the party named on the ticket was insolvent, and was not the real purchaser of the stock.

Calls were made on the shares which the plaintiff was compelled to pay, and being unable to recover the amount so paid from the person named as the ultimate purchaser, he sought to recover it from the jobber, on the theory that he had not relieved himself from the liabilities of a purchaser. The court held that the jobber's duty was fulfilled when he had passed a name to which no objection had been raised within the time limited by the rules, and that no recovery could be had against him, saying: "It is not likely that any rules will satisfactorily meet all the questions which may arise in cases of this kind, where the real nature of the transaction is that the holders of shares with large prospective liabilities are trying to dispose of them to unknown substitutes, but we confess that it seems to us that the usages of the Stock Exchange in this respect, if acted on, would reasonably provide for the security both of the seller and of the jobber; and if the brokers of the sellers will take care to exercise the power of objection in the cases requiring it, their employers may in the future be protected from the danger of transferring any shares to persons unable to fulfill the obligations they undertake."

5. In Duncan v. Hill, L. R., 6 Exch. 255, the defendant had directed plaintiffs, his brokers, to buy various stocks for the account, as it is called. Before the settling day arrived the broker was declared a defaulter, and by the rules of the Stock Exchange his transactions were closed as of the date of his default; the result was a difference against the defendants of more than £6,000, for which the plaintiffs, as the broker's assignees, brought this action, the consequent closing of his transactions before the settling day.¹ And a custom prevailing on the Stock Exchange as to the form and character of transfers required to put a particular kind of securities in condition for delivery is sufficient to put the transferee on notice if the usage has not been observed.² But the general rule is that customs which are unreasonable, or are contrary to the fixed principles of the law, or to public policy, will not be upheld by the courts.³

IX. TRANSFER, REGISTRATION AND NEGOTIABILITY OF CERTIFICATES.

—See STOCK, vol. 23, p. 582.

X. PLEDGE OF STOCK CERTIFICATES AND OTHER SECURITIES.—See PLEDGE, vol. 18, p. 610.

and they were held to be entitled to recover. Counsel for the defendant took the position in the argument that while it must be admitted that the usages of the Stock Exchange are incorporated into contracts made with persons who are not members, yet that the defaulting broker had no right to avail himself as against his principal of the usages, the object of which was solely to regulate and control in case of defaulters, and to fix their liabilities to other members of the Exchange with whom they had entered into contracts. The chief baron, however, did not think this point well taken. He held that the principal must be considered as having become completely identified with his brokers, even to the extent of having his liability regulated by the accidental default of the latter, and of being subject, so far as his responsibility under the contract was concerned, to all the rules to which the latter were liable.

1. On appeal to the exchequer chamber the decision of the court of exchequer in the above case, Duncan v. Hill, L. R., 6 Exch. 255, was reversed in Duncan v. Hill, L. R., 8 Exch. 245, in so far as it held the principal liable for the losses occasioned by the insolvency of his brokers, upon the ground that while a principal who employs a broker undoubtedly authorizes the latter to bind him according to the rules and usages of the Stock Exchange, yet he does not enter into any obligation to be answerable for a liability which has arisen solely by reason of his agent's insolvency.

2. Taliaferro v. First Nat. Bank, 71 Md. 200.

3. In Hamilton v. Young, 7 L. R. Ir. 289, it was held that a usage of the Stock Exchange relied upon as authorizing stock-brokers, who are entitled to sell stock or shares of the customer for the realization and payment of money due to them from such customer, to take over to themselves at the price of the day stock or shares of the customer for which there was an inadequate demand, or where a forced sale would lower the selling price, was unreasonable and incapable of being supported.

In Neilson v. James, 9 Q. B. Div. 546; 51 L. J. Q. B. 369; 46 L. T. 791, a stock-broker who had undertaken to sell shares of a joint stock bank sold them to a jobber on the Stock Exchange and sent an advice note of such sale to his client, but in accordance with the custom of the Stock Exchange omitted to state the name of the registered proprietor of the shares as required by 30 and 31 Vict., ch. 29, § 1, by reason of which the contract for the sale was void, and the bank having stopped, and an order for its winding up having been made before the day on which the jobber was entitled to name a person willing to be the purchaser, the contract for sale was repudiated and the plaintiff remained the holder of the shares. It was held that the defendant had committed a breach of duty in not making a valid contract of sale, notwithstanding the custom of the Stock Exchange to disregard the above-named statute, as such custom was both unreasonable and illegal.

In Parson v. Martin, 11 Gray (Mass.) 111, it was held that the custom among brokers to transfer shares to the name of another person, or to their own names for purposes other than those for which they were entrusted to them by their clients, was bad, and would not be supported.

XI. AVOIDANCE OF THE CONTRACT—1. For Failure of Consideration.—It has been seen¹ that while there is no implied warranty that stocks or other securities sold by a broker are valuable, yet there is an implied condition that the thing delivered shall be the thing sold. If it is not, there is a failure of the consideration, and the vendee may avoid the contract and recover back the purchase price.²

In Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 382; 1 Am. Rep. 115; 97 Am. Dec. 107, it appeared that a certificate of stock was transferred to one as trustee, and was by him fraudulently pledged for his own debt and accepted without inquiry. Upon the trial it was attempted to be shown that it was customary for stock certificates appearing to be held in trust to be bought and sold without inquiry. The court said: "The circumstance that stock certificates issued in the name of one as trustee, and by him transferred in blank, are constantly bought and sold in the market without inquiry, is likewise unavailing. The usage to disregard one's legal duty, to be ignorant of a rule of law, and to act as if it did not exist, can have no standing in the courts."

In Day v. Holmes, 103 Mass. 306, it was attempted to enforce a custom whereby a broker ordered to buy stock deliverable at any time at buyer's option in sixty days, might buy the stock himself at thirty days and deliver it to his customer at the end of sixty days at an increased price with interest and the usual commissions. It was held that such usage was bad.

In Lombardo v. Case, 30 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 117, it was attempted to show that by a custom among brokers and dealers in stocks the word, "dividends," or "surplus dividends" in the contract was intended to mean dividends declared on the stock without regard to whether they had been announced before or after the date of the contract, provided that on the day the contract was made the stock was selling "dividend on" and not "ex dividend." The court held that the custom would not be allowed to be proven, for the reason that effect could not be given to it without making a new contract between the parties. See also Spear v. Hart, 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 420.

In DeCordova v. Barnum, 130 N. Y. 615, the court refused to admit evidence of a custom of stock-brokers, where collateral was put up as a margin, and the account became sufficiently reduced to jeopardize it, to advertise and sell the collateral and charge the customer with the balance. Upon appeal it was held no error to exclude such evidence.

In Evans v. Waln, 71 Pa. St. 69, a person employed one Wister, a broker in Philadelphia, to sell stock. He sold it through a broker in New York, who kept this together with other transactions of the Philadelphia broker in one account, settling with him from time to time by paying and receiving net balances in cash. Upon the failure of the Philadelphia broker it was insisted on the part of the New York broker that he was authorized so to keep his account by a custom among stock-brokers. The court said: "Nor was there any error in rejecting the offer to show that it was a custom of stock-brokers, when dealing with stock-brokers in other cities, to put all the transactions between them into one account, and to remit, or draw, for the general balance. Such custom, if proven, would have constituted no defense to the action; admitting its existence, the defendant had no right to credit Wister's account with the proceeds of the stock. If there is a custom among stock-brokers, when dealing with others, to appropriate money belonging to the principal to the payment of the broker's indebtedness, the sooner it is abolished the better: Malus usus est abolendus. A custom so iniquitous can never obtain the force or sanction of the law, and the marvel is that it should be set up as a defense to this action."

In Marye v. Strouse, 5 Fed. Rep. 483, it was held that a custom among stock-brokers to charge an arbitrary sum for telegrams, regardless of the actual cost of the same, was bad.

1. See supra, this title, Sale of Stock.

2. Young v. Cole, 3 Bing. N. Cas. 724; 32 E. C. L. 302; Westropp v. Solomon, 8 C. B. 345; 52 E. C. L. 345.

2. By Operation of the Statute of Frauds.—See STOCK, vol. 23, p. 582.

3. For Illegality of the Transaction—a. STOCK-JOBGING ACTS.—In the absence of statutory limitations, stock may be bought and sold the same as any other species of personal property.¹ But in *England*² and in some of the states of the Union,³ statutes known as “Stock-Jobbing Acts” have been enacted for the purpose of checking speculation in stocks generally, or of preventing it in some particular kinds of securities.

It is not proposed to make a minute examination of the provisions of these statutes, but to inquire how far they render stock contracts incapable of enforcement. For the purpose of this inquiry these statutes may be divided into two classes, viz., those which are intended to prohibit altogether the transactions embraced within their terms and impose penalties for engaging therein, as did Sir John Barnard’s Act, and those which simply declare certain transactions void or voidable and impose no penalties for engaging in them. Contracts in violation of statutes of the first class are not only incapable of enforcement themselves, but obligations incurred by the parties thereto to third parties who have knowledge that their means are to be used in the promotion of such transactions, cannot be enforced.⁴ So a promis-

1. Barklay’s Case, 26 Beav. 177; Aston’s Case, 4 De G. & J. 320; Harrison v. Heathorn, 6 M. & G. 81; 46 E. C. L. 81; Tempest v. Kilner, 2 C. B. 308; 52 E. C. L. 300; Bagge’s Case, 13 Beav. 162; Noyes v. Spaulding, 27 Vt. 429.

2. 7 Geo. II., ch. 8 and 10 Geo. II., ch. 8, known as “Sir John Barnard’s Act,” was enacted to prevent speculation in the government securities of England. The act applied only to public stocks and not to railway and joint-stock shares. Williams v. Trye, 18 Beav. 366; Hewitt v. Price, 5 Scot. N. R. 229; 4 M. & G. 355; 46 E. C. L. 188; Ex parte Turner, 3 De G. & J. 46; Thacker v. Hardy, 4 Q. B. Div. 689. The act did not apply where the seller really had possession of the stock intended to be transferred. Saunders v. Kentish, 8 T. R. 162; Tate v. Wellings, 3 T. R. 531. It did not apply to bargains in foreign funds, but was confined to the stocks of England. Elsworth v. Cole, 2 M. & W. 31; Henderson v. Bise, 3 Stark 158; Wells v. Porter, 3 Scot. 141; 2 Bing. N. Cas. 722; 29 E. C. L. 469; Oakley v. Rigby, 2 Bing. N. Cas. 732; 29 E. C. L. 469; Robson v. Fallows, 3 Bing. N. Cas. 392; 32 E. C. L. 173; Morgan v. Pebrer, 3 Bing. N. Cas. 457; 32 E. C. L. 202;

Patterson v. Powell, 9 Bing. 329; 2 M. & S. 399; 23 E. C. L. 290; Thackoorseydass v. Dhondmull, 12 Jur. 315.

One possessed of omnium was considered as potentially in possession of stock and could legally contract to sell out omnium to be replaced by stock. Oliviersson v. Coles, 1 Stark 496.

Omnium is the aggregate value of the different stocks in which the loans of the government are usually funded. McCulloch, “Sir John Barnard’s Act” was repealed by 23 and 24 Vict. ch. 28.

3. See supra, this title, Legality of Short Sales.

4. The law on this point has undergone a change since the first decisions were rendered. In Faikney v. Reynolds, 4 Burr. 2070, which came before the King’s Bench in 1767, a party had paid, at the request of another, money on a contract which was illegal, and sued for its recovery. Judgment was given for the plaintiff. Lord Mansfield said: “One of these two persons has paid money for the other and on his account, and he gives him his bond to secure the repayment of it. This is not prohibited. He is not concerned in the use which the other makes of the money.” Next came Petrie v. Hanay, 3 T. R. 418, which was decided in 1769. In this case Faikney v. Rey-

Avoidance of the Contract. STOCK-BROKERS. For Illegality of Transaction.

nous, 4 Burr. 2070, was followed with considerable hesitation and against the opinion of Lord Kenyon. Much stress was laid upon the distinction between malum in se and malum prohibitum. These two cases were repeatedly questioned and disapproved in Booth v. Hodgson, 6 T. R. 405; Aubert v. Maze, 2 B. & P. 371; Mitchell v. Cockburn, 2 H. Bl. 379; Webb v. Brooke, 3 Taunt. 6, and Langton v. Hughes, 1 M. & S. 594. In these cases the distinction between malum in se and malum prohibitum was overruled. Next came the case of Bowry v. Bennett, 1 Camp. 348, which followed the earlier decisions on this point; as did also the case of Hodgson v. Temple, 5 Taunt. 181, decided in the year 1813. But in the same year Langton v. Hughes, 1 M. & S. 593, was decided in the King's Bench. It was tried before Lord Ellenborough at nisi prius, and was an action for the price of drugs sold to the defendants who were brewers, the plaintiffs knowing that the defendants intended to use the drugs for mixing with beer—a use prohibited by the statute. His lordship charged the jury that the plaintiffs, in selling drugs to the defendants knowing that they were to be used contrary to the statute, were aiding them in a breach of the law, and were, therefore, not entitled to recover. He, however, reserved the point, and the ruling was maintained by all the judges. Next came the leading case of Cannan v. Bryce, 3 B. & Ald. 179; 5 E. C. L. 255, which was decided in the King's Bench in 1819, and definitely settles the law as it is stated in the text. In this case it appears that the plaintiffs had loaned money to a party engaged in an illegal stock transaction in violation of Sir John Barnard's Act. Upon their refusal to repay he brought his action to recover the money. Abbot, C. J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "On the part of the plaintiffs it was contended, that this loan being made for the purpose of enabling Amos to pay or compound differences upon illegal stock-jobbing transactions, was in itself illegal, and, consequently, all securities given for repayment of the loan were void. On the part of the defendant it was contended, that as he was not a party to the illegal transaction, the loan was not illegal, and the securities, therefore, were available in law. The case was very fully and ably argued; all the authorities bearing upon it on one side or the other were quoted and discussed in such a manner that it is not necessary to notice many of them with any particularity. The authorities principally in favor of the defendant are those of Faikney v. Reynous, 4 Burr. 2070, and Petrie v. Hannay, 3 T. R. 418. The propriety of these decisions has been questioned in several subsequent cases that are quoted on the part of the plaintiff, and the distinction taken in the former of them between malum prohibitum and malum in se was expressly disallowed in the case of Aubert v. Maze, 2 B. & P. 371. Indeed we think no such distinction can be allowed in a court of law. The court is bound in the administration of the law to consider every act to be unlawful which the law has prohibited to be done. The statute upon which the objection to the loan in this case arises, viz., 7 Geo. II. ch. 8, was founded upon public policy to prevent, according to the language of the preamble, 'the pernicious and destructive practice of stock-jobbing, whereby many of his majesty's subjects are diverted from pursuing their lawful trades and vocations to the utter ruin of themselves and families, to the great discouragement of industry, and to the manifest detriment of trade and commerce.' By the 5th section, upon which this case more particularly depends, it is enacted that no money or other consideration shall be voluntarily given, paid, had or received for the compounding and satisfying or making up any difference for not transferring any public stock, or not performing any contract or agreement stipulated to be performed, and all and every person who shall voluntarily compound, make up, pay, satisfy, take or receive such difference money, etc., shall forfeit the sum of one hundred pounds. . . . Then as the statute in question has absolutely prohibited the payment of money for compounding differences, it is impossible to say that the making of such payment is not an unlawful act, and if it is unlawful for one man to pay, how can it be lawful for another to furnish him with the means of payment? It will be recollected that I am speaking of a case wherein the means were furnished with a full knowledge of the object to which they were to be applied, and for the express purpose of accomplishing

sory note, given for a balance of money advanced to be used in illegal stock-jobbing transactions, is void;¹ and a bill given for the amount of stock-jobbing differences is void in the hands of an indorsee with notice,² or in the hands of one to whom it was indorsed for value after maturity.³ But a bill of exchange or promissory note, given for such differences, is valid in the hands of one to whom it was indorsed for value, before it was due, and without notice of the illegal consideration.⁴

But where the statute imposes no penalty for engaging in such transactions, and does not make it unlawful to meet the obligations incurred therein, the payment of debts contracted with third parties for the purpose of meeting such obligations may be enforced, notwithstanding the knowledge of such third parties of the use to which the money is to be put.⁵ So where a broker buys stock upon the order of his principal, who refuses to accept and pay for the same, and the broker sells it at a loss, he may recover the difference between the purchasing and selling price that object." This case was followed in the later cases of McKinnell v. Robinson, 3 M. & W. 435, and Pearce v. Brooks, L. R., 1 Exch. 213. See Staples v. Gould, 9 N. Y. 520, holding that a principal who had sold stock "short," through the agency of his broker, in violation of the act against stock-jobbing, could not recover any differences from the broker, although he would otherwise be entitled to them.

1. Ex parte Bulmer, 13 Ves. 313.

2. Steers v. Laishley, 6 T. R. 61; 1 Esp. 166; Amory v. Merryweather, 4 D. & Ry. 86; 2 B. & C. 573; 9 E. C. L. 183.

3. Brown v. Turner, 7 T. R. 630; 2 Esp. 631.

4. Day v. Stuart, 6 Bing. 109; 3 M. & P. 334; 19 E. C. L. 20; Greenland v. Dyer, 2 M. & R. 422; Amory v. Merryweather, 4 D. & Ry. 86; 2 B. & C. 573; 9 E. C. L. 183.

5. In Wyman v. Fiske, 3 Allen (Mass.) 238; 80 Am. Dec. 66, it appears that a third party, upon the request of one of the parties to a stock-jobbing transaction, furnished the money to pay debts incurred therein, for which the party who borrowed it gave his promissory note. Upon the point as to whether or not the note was valid, the court said: "The auditor credits the defendant with a note of $1,724.28. In respect to this item it was proved that one Wheelock, a broker, contracted to sell on time for the plaintiff certain stocks which he did not own, and of which he had no control; that Wheelock purchased other stocks in order to fulfill this contract; that this transaction resulted in a loss of $1,724.28, and that the defendant, knowing the facts, paid this sum to Wheelock for the plaintiff and took his note therefor. The plaintiff contended before the auditor that this transaction was within St. 1836, ch. 279, which is re-enacted in Gen. Sts. ch. 105, § 6, against stock-jobbing. It provides, in substance, that all contracts for the sale or transfer of stock shall be absolutely void, unless the party contracting to sell or transfer is at the time of making the contract the owner or assignee of the stocks, or authorized by the owner or assignee, or his agent, to make the sale; but it does not make the act penal, and does not, like the statutes of England and New York on the same subject, provide that any money paid on such a contract may be recovered back. It merely denies to the parties all legal aid in enforcing such contracts, and this places them on similar grounds with oral agreements that are within the Statute of Frauds. It is not criminal to make them; they are merely deprived of legal validity. It is clear that the plaintiff's contract, which he made through his broker, Wheelock, was within the statute. It is not necessary to decide whether Wheelock could have compelled the plaintiff to refund the money which he had advanced for the plaintiff to enable him to make good his losses, for if the plaintiff chose to reimburse him he had a legal right to do so. The payment would at least be legal as a from his principal, and the fact that the original vendor was not the owner of the stock at the time he bargained for the sale of it is no defense to the action.¹ And if the vendor of stock owns it at the time of making a contract for future delivery, the fact that he sells it before the time set for the delivery is not sufficient to avoid the contract.² But a contract within the statute cannot be enforced between the parties to it; the courts will leave them to their own resources.³ The general rule is that one who seeks to avoid a contract on the ground of illegality has the burden of proving such defense,⁴ and it has been held that this rule applies to contracts within the statutes against stock-jobbing,⁵ although the contrary conclusion has been reached in a very forcible opinion in another jurisdiction.⁶ gift, and the plaintiff having a legal right to make this voluntary payment had a right to procure a third person to make it, and such payment would be a valid consideration for a note. The note in question has such a consideration, and is therefore valid, and the auditor properly allowed it."

1. Durant v. Burt, 98 Mass. 161.

A broker employed to purchase stock contracted for it in his own name with J. S., who owned it at the time, but had made a prior contract for its sale. The employer, for groundless reasons, repudiated the contract; but the broker, having no knowledge of or reasons to suspect a prior sale by J. S., paid for the stock when tendered to him. It was held that the Gen. Sts., ch. 105, § 6, making void contracts for the sale of stocks not owned by the seller did not debar the broker from recovering from his employer the amount so paid. Brown v. Phelps, 103 Mass. 313.

2. Frost v. Clarkson, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 26. See also Barrett v. Hyde, 10 Allen (Mass.) 160; Barrett v. Mead, 7 Gray (Mass.) 337; Thompson v. Alger, 13 Met. (Mass.) 428; Price v. Minot, 107 Mass. 49.

3. Staples v. Gould, 9 N. Y. 520; Dykens v. Townsend, 24 N. Y. 57; Wyman v. Fiske, 3 Allen (Mass.) 238; 80 Am. Dec. 66; Stebbins v. Leowolf, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 137.

4. Rex v. Hawkins, 10 East 211; Bennett v. Clough, 1 B. & Ald. 461; Sissons v. Dixon, 5 B. & C. 758; 12 E. C. L. 371; Monke v. Butler, 1 Rol. 83; Harris v. White, 81 N. Y. 532.

5. Dykens v. Townsend, 24 N. Y. 57, was an action against a purchaser to recover for a refusal to perform his contract to purchase certain shares of stock. He set up as a defense that the contract was void under the stock-jobbing act, and it was held that the burden of proof was on him to show that the sellers at the time the contract was made did not own and were not authorized to sell the stock contracted for. The court said, after referring to the case of Stebbins v. Leowolf, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 143: "If, as has been shown, the contract is a valid one upon its face, and not void by the Statute of Frauds, all that was necessary for the plaintiff to do was to prove the execution of the contract, a readiness and offer to perform on his part, and a refusal of the defendant, to entitle him to recover. Such a contract at common law and in absence of the stock-jobbing act would be clearly valid, and the courts will not presume that the party contracting to sell stocks was not the owner thereof for the purpose of rendering the contract void. On the contrary, the presumption is that the contract is valid until the contrary is shown by the defendant. Where a contract is apparently valid upon its face, the party seeking to impeach it must prove that it is made under such circumstances or for such purposes as to render it void before the defense can be made available. We are quite clear that the burden of proof rested upon the defendant to show that the plaintiffs at the time they made these contracts did not own and were not authorized to sell the stock contracted for."

6. In Stebbins v. Leowolf, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 137, a conclusion directly the opposite of that in Dykens v. Townsend, 24 N. Y. 57, was reached. In this case a contract to be performed in the state of New York was before the court, and

b. WAGERING CONTRACTS—(See GAMBLING CONTRACTS, vol. 8, p. 1004).—At common law wagering contracts are not void, unless they tend to violate some rule of public decency or morality, or some principle of public policy.¹ But in England, and perhaps all of the states of the Union there are now statutes designed to prevent gambling, and these take away from the parties to wagering contracts all remedy in the courts of justice. In the absence of statutes aimed specifically at stock-jobbing, many stock transactions have been held to be within the purview of the statutes against wagering generally. As has been seen, bona fide contracts for the future delivery of stocks or other chattels are legal and valid;² but the general rule is that if the transaction is fictitious, and the parties to the contract do not intend an actual sale and delivery of the article dealt in, but contemplate merely a settlement of the differences between the

the defendant, as in the other case, set up the New York statute as a defense to the action. The court said: "The next question is, upon whom is the burden of proof to show that the vendors at the time of making the contract had the shares of stock to the amount stipulated to be sold, and that such shares were so held by them as to authorize them to contract for a sale and delivery thereof at a future day? If this was a contract in writing promising to pay a certain sum of money, and the promise was of a character which imported a consideration on the face of it, so that the proof of the contract would of itself make a prima facie case, there is no doubt that if the defendant would avail himself of any secret taint which rendered the contract illegal—as, for example, if the defendant in an action upon a note of hand alleges usury, or sets up in defense that the note was given for a gaming debt—the burden of proof rests upon the party who relies upon such defense; but the present case differs from the one just stated. The plaintiff, in this case, must show a legal contract binding upon the vendor and vendee with relation to these shares before he can establish a prima facie case. He proposes, then, in the first instance, to show an agreement by the one party to sell, and by the other to buy, certain shares of Harlem railroad stock to be transferred, at a future day; but evidence to this extent shows no valid contract. The law requires that the vendor shall be the owner of the stock he stipulates to transfer at the time he makes such contract, and this fact he is bound to prove. It is an element essential to the validity of the contract, and one without which the contract could not be enforced against the plaintiff, as the purchaser, or the plaintiff as agent have any claim against the defendant as his principal." Considering that this is a case in which a peculiar knowledge of the fact to be proved rests with the plaintiff, it is hard to see how the New York court has the best of the argument.

1. Sherbon v. Colebach, 2 Vent. 175; Morgan v. Pebrer, 4 Scott 230; Goold v. Elliott, 3 T. R. 693; Johnson v. Lansley, 12 C. B. 468; 74 E. C. L. 468; Dalby v. India, etc., L. Assur. Co., 15 C. B. 365; 24 L. J. C. P. 2, 6; 80 E. C. L. 365; Hussey v. Crickitt, 3 Camp. 168; Jones v. Randall, Cowp. 39; Thackoorseydass v. Dhondmull, 6 Moore P. C. C. 300; Doolubdas v. Ramlool, 3 Eng. L. & Eq. 39.

2. See supra, this title, Legality of Short Sales; also Grizewood v. Blane, 11 C. B. 540; 73 E. C. L. 525; Story v. Salomon, 71 N. Y. 420; Bigelow v. Benedict, 70 N. Y. 202; 26 Am. Rep. 573; Cassard v. Hinman, 1 Bosw. (N. Y.) 207; Kingsbury v. Kirwin, 43 N. Y. Super. Ct. 451; Stanton v. Small, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 230; Harris v. Tumbridge, 83 N. Y. 92; 38 Am. Rep. 398; Kirkpatrick v. Bonsall, 72 Pa. St. 158; Brua's Appeal, 55 Pa. St. 294; Pickering v. Cease, 79 Ill. 330; Logan v. Musick, 81 Ill. 419; Corbett v. Underwood, 83 Ill. 327; 25 Am. Rep. 392; Pixley v. Boynton, 79 Ill. 353; Barnard v. Backhaus, 52 Wis. 593; Porter v. Viets, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 178.

alleged selling price and the market price at the maturity of the contract, it is a mere wager upon the price of the article, and does not constitute a valid and enforceable contract.¹

It is not, however, a contract between the principals that is the special object of this inquiry, but the rights of the stock-broker through whom such contract is made. In England the statute against gaming² imposes no penalty for paying gambling debts, and does not make wagering contracts unlawful, but simply declares them null and void. In this respect it differs from Sir John Barnard's Act, and, as might be expected, the courts have made a distinction between the two as regards the right of third parties to recover money advanced to pay the losses of one of the parties to contracts within these statutes, respectively. It is well settled there, that if a stock-broker negotiates a wagering contract for his principal, he may nevertheless recover his commissions, and if he pays losses at the request of his principal, or himself suffers loss from the transaction through the operation of the rules of the Stock Exchange, he may recover from his principal the amount so paid, or the amount of such loss, notwithstanding his knowledge of the nature of the transaction.³

In the United States there is a manifest disposition on the part of many of the courts to ignore the distinction between contracts to do an unlawful act and those which are simply void and the parties thereto left remediless in the courts. It should be observed also that many of the statutes against gaming declare such contracts unlawful; and when cases arise under such statutes, due consideration should be given to that fact. There is also a tendency on the part of the courts to declare such contracts unlawful, in the absence of statutory declarations on the subject, on the ground that they are contrary to public policy. The cases on

1. Flagg v. Baldwin, 38 N. J. Eq. 219; 48 Am. Rep. 308; Brua's Appeal, 55 Pa. St. 294; Kirkpatrick v. Bonsall, 72 Pa. St. 155; Maxton v. Gheen, 75 Pa. St. 166; North v. Phillips, 89 Pa. St. 250; Dickson v. Thomas, 97 Pa. St. 278; Ruchizky v. De Haven, 97 Pa. St. 202; Wolcott v. Heath, 78 Ill. 437; Walls v. Bailey, 49 N. Y. 472; 10 Am. Rep. 407; Tyler v. Barrows, 6 Robt. (N. Y.) 104; Cassard v. Hinman, 1 Bosw. (N. Y.) 207; Yerkes v. Salomon, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 471; Durant v. Burt, 98 Mass. 167; Sampson v. Shaw, 101 Mass. 150; 3 Am. Rep. 327; Harvey v. Merrill, 150 Mass. 1; 15 Am. St. Rep. 159; Rourke v. Short, 5 E. & B. 904; 85 E. C. L. 904; Hibblewhite v. M'Morine, 5 M. & W. 466; Petrie v. Hannay, 3 T. R. 424; Brown v. Speyers, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 309; Dickson v. Thomas, 97 Pa. St. 279, and other cases cited in last note.

2. 8 & 9 Vict., ch. 109, § 18.

3. Jessopp v. Lutwyche, 10 Exch. 614; Knight v. Cambers, 15 C. B. 562; 80 E. C. L. 562; Knight v. Fitch, 15 C. B. 566; 24 L. J. C. P. 122; 80 E. C. L. 566; Rosewarne v. Billing, 15 C. B. N. S. 316; 109 E. C. L. 316; Bubb v. Yelverton, 24 L. T., N. S. 822; Thacker v. Hardy, 4 Q. B. Div. 685. In Rosewarne v. Billing, 15 C. B. N. S. 316; 109 E. C. L. 316, a broker conducted a stock transaction for his principal, which was within 8 & 9 Vict., ch. 109, and at the request of his principal paid losses which resulted from such transaction. He sued his principal to recover the money, and the plea was set up that the contract between the principals was a wagering contract and therefore void. The plea was held bad in an action between the broker and his client. Erle, C. J., said: "I am of opinion that our judgment upon this demurrer must be for the plaintiff. He sues the defendant for money which he alleges he paid for the defendant at his request. The answer the defendant sets up is that the money became due by reason of certain wagering contracts made by the plaintiff for the defendant with certain other persons since the passage of 8 & 9 Vict., ch. 109. Now the law, as to gaming contracts, is that all such contracts are null and void, and no action can be maintained upon them; but they are not therefore illegal. The parties making them are not liable to any actions or to any penalties. Here the plaintiff paid the differences according to the result and at defendant's request. I am clearly of opinion that if a man loses a wager and gets another to pay the money for him, an action lies for the recovery of the money so paid. In Jessopp v. Lutwyche, 10 Exch. 614, and Knight v. Cambers, 15 C. B. 562; 80 E. C. L. 562, the court of Exchequer and this court both say that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment, on the ground that the money was alleged to have been paid at request of the defendant, and that there was nothing to show that there was any illegality. Those cases are in point to show this to be a bad plea. I should incline to think that if one requests another to make a wagering contract on his account and to pay the loss, if loss happens, that would be a continuing request to pay until revoked. If the party were a broker who by the usage of the share market was bound in all events to pay, it might be a question whether the principal could be allowed to rescind. It will be time enough to decide that question whenever it shall arise."

In Thacker v. Hardy, 4 Q. B. Div. 685, the question suggested by the court in Rosewarne v. Billing, 15 C. B. N. S. 316; 109 E. C. L. 316, did arise. In that case the plaintiff, a broker, was employed by the defendant to speculate for him upon the Stock Exchange. To the knowledge of the plaintiff the defendant did not intend to accept the stock bought for him, or to deliver the stock sold for him, but expected that the plaintiff would so arrange matters that nothing but differences should be payable by him. The plaintiff accordingly entered into contracts on behalf of the defendant, upon which the plaintiff became personally liable, and he sued the defendant for indemnity against the liability incurred by him and for his commissions as a broker; and it was held that he might recover notwithstanding the contracts which he negotiated were within 8 & 9 Vict., ch. 109, § 18. Lindley, J., said: "This act does not expressly mention or allude to Stock Exchange transactions, but it has been decided that agreements between buyers and sellers of shares and stocks to pay or receive the differences between their prices on one day and their prices on another day are gaming and wagering contracts within the meaning of the statute. Grizewood v. Blane, 11 C. B. 526; 3 E. C. L. 526; Barry v. Croskey, 2 J. & H. 21, and Cooper v. Neil, 13 W. N. 128, all decided that. But the plaintiff did not agree to buy or sell from or to the defendant. I have the authority of Brett, Lord, J., for saying that the statute only affects the contract which makes the bet or wager. The agreement between the plaintiff and defendant rendered it necessary that the plaintiff should himself as principal enter into real contracts of purchase and sale with jobbers, and the plaintiff accordingly did so, and in respect to these contracts he incurred obligations, for the non-performance of which actions could and can now be brought against him. It is against the liability so incurred that he seeks to be indemnified.

Now, if the gaming and wagering were illegal, I should be of the opinion that the illegality of the contracts in which the plaintiff and defendant were engaged would have tainted as between themselves whatever the plaintiff had done in furtherance of their illegal designs, and would have precluded him from claiming in a court of law any indemnity from the defendant in respect of the liabilities that he had incurred. Cannan v. Bryce, 3 B. & Ald. 179; 5 E. C. L. 255; M'Kinnell v. Robinson, 3 M. & W. 434; Lyne v. Siesfield, 1 H. & N. 278. But it has been held that although gaming and wagering contracts cannot be enforced they are not illegal. Fitch v. Jones, 5 E. & B. 238; 85 E. C. L. 238, is plain to that effect. Money paid in discharge of a bet is a good consideration for a bill of exchange. Oulds v. Harrison, 10 Exch. 572; and if money be paid by plaintiff at the request of a defendant, it can be recovered by action against him. Knight v. Cambers, 15 C. B. 562; 80 E. C. L. 562; Jessopp v. Lutwyche, 10 Exch.

this point arising out of stock transactions are not numerous; but from such as there are, and from analogous cases, the rule may be evolved that where the broker enters into a gambling transaction with full knowledge of the nature of the same, and renders his assistance in its consummation, he can recover neither his commissions nor advances made by him to one of the parties in furtherance of the undertaking.¹ And it has been held that, in stock transactions, where the contract between the principals is shown to be tainted with gambling, the broker himself will be considered a principal, and, as such, left without remedy in the courts;² and that a minor, for whom he has conducted stock transactions of a wagering character, may recover back the margins deposited with him and lost in such transactions, notwithstanding the bro-

614; Rosewarne v. Billing, 15 C. B. N. S. 316; 109 E. C. L. 316. And it has been held that a request to pay may be inferred from an authority to bet. Oldham v. Ramsden, 44 L. J. C. P. 309. Having regard to these decisions, I cannot hold that the statute above referred to precludes the plaintiff from maintaining his action."

1. Fareira v. Gabell, 89 Pa. St. 89; Ruchizky v. De Haven, 97 Pa. St. 202; Waugh v. Beck, 114 Pa. St. 422; 60 Am. Rep. 354; Flagg v. Baldwin, 38 N. J. Eq. 219; 48 Am. Rep. 308; Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 510; Embrey v. Jemison, 131 U. S. 336; Bartlett v. Smith, 13 Fed. Rep. 263; In re Green, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 338; Clarke v. Foss, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 540; Crawford v. Spencer, 92 Mo. 498; 1 Am. St. Rep. 745 and note. See also Sondheim v. Gilbert, 117 Ind. 71; 10 Am. St. Rep. 23 and note; Kahn v. Walton, 46 Ohio 195; Cothran v. Ellis, 125 Ill. 496; Whitesides v. Hunt, 97 Ind. 191; 49 Am. Rep. 441; First Nat. Bank v. Oskaloosa Packing Co., 66 Iowa 41; Rumsey v. Berry, 65 Me. 570; Marshall v. Thurston, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 740; McLean v. Stuve, 15 Mo. App. 317; Ream v. Hamilton, 15 Mo. App. 577; Warren v. Hewitt, 45 Ga. 501. Wyman v. Fiske, 3 Allen (Mass.) 238; 80 Am. Dec. 66, which arose out of a stock-jobbing transaction, supports the English rule.

But in Harvey v. Merrill, 150 Mass. 1; 15 Am. St. Rep. 159, the court decided that the broker who knowingly makes a wagering contract and advances money on account thereof, at the request of his principal, cannot recover either the money so advanced or commissions for his services. After a review of the American and English authorities, the court said: "It is not denied that wagering contracts are void by the common law of Massachusetts; but it is argued that they are not illegal, and that, if one pays money in settlement of them at the request of another, he can recover it of the person at whose request he pays it. It is now settled here that contracts which are void at common law, because they are against public policy, like contracts which are prohibited by statute, are illegal as well as void. They are prohibited by law because they are considered vicious, and it is not necessary to impose a penalty in order to render them illegal."

In Irwin v. Williar, 110 U. S. 499, it is said: "In England, it is held that the contracts, although wagers, were not void at common law, and that the statute has not made them illegal, but only non-enforceable; Thacker v. Hardy, 4 Q. B. Div. 685; while generally, in this country, all wagering contracts are held to be illegal and void as against public policy." Citing Dickson v. Thomas, 97 Pa. St. 278; Lyon v. Culbertson, 83 Ill. 33; 25 Am. Rep. 349; Melchert v. American Union Tel. Co., 3 McCrary (U. S.) 521; 11 Fed. Rep. 193 and note; Barnard v. Backhaus, 52 Wis. 593; Kingsbury v. Kirwan, 77 N. Y. 612; Love v. Harvey, 114 Mass. 80. It was accordingly held that when a broker is privy to the unlawful design of the parties, and brings them together for the very purpose of making an illegal agreement, he is particeps criminis and cannot recover for services rendered or losses incurred by himself in behalf of either in forwarding the transaction.

2. Ruchizky v. De Haven, 97 Pa. St.

ker's ignorance of his customer's infancy.¹ But these decisions have been much criticised, and it would seem that their authority is somewhat shaken by late utterances of the court in which they were rendered.² But on the other hand, it appears to be the rule in the United States as in England, that if the broker acts in good faith, and enters into bona fide contracts with third parties on his customer's behalf in which he incurs a personal liability, he may recover his commissions and advances made in payment of losses, notwithstanding the gambling intent of his principal.³ Where, after the successful termination of a series of speculative transactions in stocks, an account was rendered and the profits paid over to the principal, it was held that he was also entitled to recover back the margins he had deposited with his brokers, not-

202; Fareira v. Gabell, 89 Pa. St. 89; Flagg v. Baldwin, 38 N. J. Eq. 219; 48 Am. Rep. 308.

1. Ruchizky v. De Haven, 97 Pa. St. 202.

2. In Peters v. Grim, 149 Pa. St. 163, decided in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania in May, 1892, Mitchell, J., said: "In dealing with stock transactions falling within or in any way connected with wagering contracts, the law of Pennsylvania is of exceptional and, for myself I would say, of illogical and untenable severity in its interference with the business contracts of parties sui juris, and entirely competent to manage their own affairs. But, even in this class of cases, the decisions have only gone so far as to sustain the opening of the whole transaction after it has nominally closed, where the demand is for a part of the actual gains or losses of the illegal acts. See Brua's Appeal, 55 Pa. St. 294; North v. Phillips, 89 Pa. St. 250; Dickson v. Thomas, 97 Pa. St. 278; Griffiths v. Sears, 112 Pa. St. 523. Even Fareira v. Gabel, 89 Pa. St. 89, and Ruchizky v. De Haven, 97 Pa. St. 202—two extreme cases, of which it is justly said by Mr. Biddle, in his Law of Stock-brokers, p. 308, that they are 'opposed in principle to all the decisions both of the English courts and of every court of every state in the Union'—were decided upon the ground that the cause of action was loss in the illegal transactions."

3. Bartlett v. Smith, 13 Fed. Rep. 263; Lehman v. Strassberger, 2 Woods (U. S.) 554; In re Green, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 338; Clarke v. Foss, 7 Biss. (U. S.) 553; Marshall v. Thurston, 3 Lea (Tenn.) 740; Warren v. Hewitt, 45 Ga. 501; Owen v. Davis, 1 Bailey (S. Car.)

315; Durant v. Burt, 98 Mass. 167. See also Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 258.

In Warren v. Hewitt, 45 Ga. 507, the court said: "The judge, in his charge to the jury, and in his judgment refusing a new trial, treats Warren, Lane & Co. as a principal party to the transaction, and as selling the cotton to Hewitt. This error is fundamental. The evidence shows that they only acted as his agents in effecting the purchase in Baltimore. The transaction for the purchase of the cotton was clearly such as indicated in section 2596 of the Code, and would not have been enforced, as between Hewitt and the seller, in favor of either party. But where the transaction has been completed, and Warren, Lane & Co. seek to recover advances made by them, in good faith, as the agents of Hewitt, which advances were authorized or ratified by him, we think they are entitled to do so."

In Bartlett v. Smith, 13 Fed. Rep. 268, Nelson, J., after stating the law applicable to the case if it should be found that the brokers were privy to and knowingly assisted in the illegal transaction, charged the jury as follows: "On the other hand, if you believe the evidence shows that the plaintiffs, acting as the defendant's brokers in the sale and purchase of wheat, without disclosing the name of their principal, entered into bona fide contracts for the actual sale and delivery of wheat with third parties for defendant's account, and at his request subsequently settled the losses and paid the amount due under the contracts, they are entitled to recover from the defendant the moneys thus paid out at his request."

withstanding the wagering character of the transactions in which they had been engaged.¹

c. "CORNERS" IN STOCKS.—A "corner" is a scheme whereby a greater or less number of "bulls" or those who are "long" of certain stocks or securities obtain control of the available quantity thereof, and thus compel the "bears" who have sold such stocks or securities "short" to pay exorbitant prices for stock to cover their short sales, or to pay large sums as differences at the maturity of their contracts. Contracts made for the consummation of such agreements are illegal and void,² and conspiracies to enhance the prices of stocks to the damage of the purchasing public are indictable offenses in England.³

XII. MEASURE OF DAMAGES—(See also DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 1).—In cases arising out of breaches of contract for the purchase and sale of stock, and out of breaches of duty on the part of the agent when ordered to purchase or to sell, the law of damages is the same as in similar transactions concerning other personal property and will not be considered here.⁴ But in reference to the unlawful conversion of stock certificates and other securities which fluctuate widely in value, the law of damages differs somewhat from that applied in cases arising out of the conversion of other chattels, and it is to this difference that attention is here directed. It was formerly the rule that, where a broker was carrying stocks for his customer and unlawfully converted them to his own use, he was liable in damages to an amount equal to the highest market price of the stocks converted at any time between

1. Peters v. Grim, 149 Pa. St. 163; Repplier v. Jacobs, 149 Pa. St. 167.

2. Sampson v. Shaw, 101 Mass. 145; 3 Am. Rep. 327; Barry v. Croskey, 2 Johns. & H. 21. See also Raymond v. Leavitt, 46 Mich. 447; 41 Am. Rep. 170; Morris Run Coal Co. v. Barclay Coal Co., 68 Pa. St. 173; Arnot v. Pittston, etc., Coal Co., 68 N. Y. 558; 23 Am. Rep. 190; Ex parte Young, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 53, sub nom; In re Chandler, 13 Am. Law. Reg. N. S. 210.

In Sampson v. Shaw, 101 Mass. 145; 3 Am. Rep. 327, it appears that the plaintiff, together with the firm of Thaxter & Co. and one John Richardson, entered into an agreement to operate in the stocks of the Melden & Melrose Horse Railway Company for the purpose of getting a "corner," Thaxter & Co. taking one-half and the plaintiff and Richardson each one-quarter interest in the operation. The plan of operation was as follows: Thaxter & Co. were to be the managers and were to buy up a large quantity of the stock and control it in such a manner as to make a large demand for it, so the parties selling on time would be compelled to pay large differences. Thaxter & Co. were then to receive and make proposals and agreements thereon for the purchase of stock to be delivered at a future day; the parties agreeing to sell not then having the stock in possession or owning it, and then the sellers when the day for delivery should arrive would be compelled to pay such prices as differences as the parties to this combination might ask. This was an action against the executor of Thaxter for money had and received by the testator to the plaintiff's use in furtherance of the scheme above described. The court held that the contract was illegal and void, and that no recovery could be had for the money expended in such transaction.

3. Rex v. De Berenger, 3 M. & S. 67; Reg. v. Aspinall, 1 Q. B. Div. 730; affirmed 2 Q. B. Div. 48. See also Rex v. Gurney, 11 Cox C. C. 414; Reg. v. Esdaile, 1 F. & F. 213.

4. See DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 1.

the date of the conversion and the day of trial.¹ But the manifest hardship of this rule in cases where the trial has been greatly delayed, for years it may be, and stocks which were comparatively worthless at the time of their unlawful conversion have fluctuated widely in value, has compelled the adoption of a different rule. The better rule now appears to be that, in such cases, the broker is liable in damages to an amount equal to the highest market value of the stock converted at any time between the act of conversion and a date which gives his customer a reasonable time, after notice of the unlawful act, to replace the stocks so converted.² But in such cases, the customer may elect to affirm a wrongful sale made by his broker, and in that event, the broker is

1. Romaine v. Van Allen, 26 N. Y. 309; Lawrence v. Maxwell, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 469; Nauman v. Caldwell, 2 Sweeny (N. Y.) 212; Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 235; Ritenbaugh v. Ludwick, 31 Pa. St. 131; Bank of Montgomery v. Reeve, 26 Pa. St. 143; North v. Philips, 89 Pa. St. 250; Douglas v. Kraft, 9 Cal. 562. In Page v. Fowler, 39 Cal. 412; 2 Am. Rep. 462, the court seemed disposed to change the rule, but in Dent v. Holbrook, 54 Cal. 145, it was again applied. See also Shepherd v. Johnson, 2 East 211; Downes v. Back, 1 Stark 318; McArthur v. Seaforth, 2 Taunt. 257; Harrison v. Harrison, 1 C. & P. 412; 11 E. C. L. 436; Owen v. Routh, 14 C. B. 327; 78 E. C. L. 327; Williams v. Archer, 5 C. B. 318; 57 E. C. L. 318; Archer v. Williams, 2 C. & K. 26; 61 E. C. L. 25; Cud v. Rutter, 1 P. Wms. 572; France v. Gaudet, L. R., 6 Q. B. 199.

2. Baker v. Drake, 53 N. Y. 211; 13 Am. Rep. 507; 66 N. Y. 518; 23 Am. Rep. 80; Gruman v. Smith, 81 N. Y. 25; Colt v. Owens, 90 N. Y. 368; Wright v. Bank of Metropolis, 110 N. Y. 237. In Baker v. Drake, 53 N. Y. 211; 13 Am. Rep. 507, there is a very thorough consideration of the subject, and the earlier case of Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 235, is overruled on the question of damages and the modified rule stated in the text is adopted.

In Galigher v. Jones, 129 U. S. 193, Bradley, J., said: "It has been assumed, in the consideration of the case, that the measure of damages in stock transactions of this kind is the highest intermediate value reached by the stock between the time of the wrongful act complained of and a reasonable time thereafter, to be allowed to the party injured to place himself in the position he would have been in had not his rights been violated. This rule is most frequently exemplified in the wrongful conversion by one person of stocks belonging to another. To allow merely their value at the time of conversion would, in most cases, afford a very inadequate remedy; and, in the case of a broker, holding the stocks of his principal, it would afford no remedy at all. The effect would be to give the broker the control of the stock, subject only to nominal damages. The real injury sustained by the principal consists not merely in the assumption of control over the stock, but in the sale of it at an unfavorable time, and for an unfavorable price. Other goods wrongfully converted are generally supposed to have a fixed market value at which they can be replaced at any time; and hence with regard to them, the ordinary measure of damages is their value at the time of conversion, or in case of sale and purchase, at the time fixed for their delivery. But the application of this rule to stocks would, as before said, be very inadequate and unjust. The rule of highest intermediate value as applied to stock transactions has been adopted in England and in several of the states in this country; whilst in some others it has not obtained. The form and extent of the rule have been the subject of much discussion and conflict of opinion. The English cases usually referred to are Cud v. Rutter, 1 P. Wms. 572, 4th ed., n. 3; Owen v. Routh, 14 C. B. 327; 78 E. C. L. 327; Loder v. Kekule, 3 C. B. N. S. 128; 91 E. C. L. 128; France v. Gaudet, L. R., 6 Q. B. 199. It is laid down in these cases that where there has been a loan of stock and a breach of the agreement to replace it, liable for the amount actually received for the stock.¹ And if he fails to keep and produce an account, all presumptions of value will be against him.²

STOCK EXCHANGE.—(See also AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 331; BROKERS, vol. 2, p. 571; DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 1; GAMBLING CONTRACTS, vol. 8, p. 992; PLEDGE, vol. 18, p. 585; SOCIETIES AND CLUBS, vol. 22, p. 803; STOCK, vol. 23, p. 582; STOCK-BROKERS, vol. 23, p. 699; TRADE, BOARDS OF; USAGES AND CUSTOMS.)

- | | |
|---|---|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> I. Definition, 748. II. Legal Status, 749. III. Origin and History, 750. IV. Property Rights of Members, 751. V. Individual Liability of Members, 753. VI. Seats, 754. VII. Parties to Actions, 758. VIII. Expulsion of Members, 759. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Power to Expel, 759. 2. Remedy for Improper Expulsion, 764. | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> IX. Furnishing Quotations, 765. X. Rules and Regulations, 767. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Right to Adopt, 767. 2. Members as Preferred Creditors, 768. 3. The Arbitration Clause, 772. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> a. In General, 772. b. Limit of Jurisdiction, 773. c. May Not Oust the Courts of Jurisdiction, 774. XI. The Clearing House, 775. |
|---|---|

I. DEFINITION.—A Stock Exchange has been defined as “an association or body of stock-brokers who meet and transact busithe measure of damages will be the value of the stock at its highest price on or before the day of trial. The same rule was approved by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania in Bank of Montgomery v. Reese, 26 Pa. St. 143; and Musgrave v. Beckendorff, 53 Pa. St. 310. But it has been restricted in that state to cases in which a trust relation exists between the parties—a relation which would probably be deemed to exist between a stock-broker and his client. See Wilson v. Whitaker, 49 Pa. St. 114; Huntingdon, etc., R., etc., Co. v. English, 86 Pa. St. 247. Perhaps more transactions of this kind arise in the state of New York than in all other parts of the country. The rule of highest intermediate value up to the time of trial formerly prevailed in that state, and may be found laid down in Romaine v. Van Allen, 26 N. Y. 309; and Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 235, and other cases—although the rigid application of the rule was depreciated by the New York superior court in an able opinion by Judge Duer, in Suydam v. Jenkins, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 614. The hardship which arose from estimating the damages by the highest price up to the time of trial, which might be years after the transaction occurred, was often so great that the court of appeals of New York was constrained to introduce a material modification in the form of the rule, and to hold the true and just measure of damages in these cases to be the highest intermediate value of the stock between the time of its conversion and a reasonable time after the owner has received notice of it to enable him to replace the stock. This modification of the rule was very ably enforced in an opinion of the court of appeals delivered by Judge Rapallo, in the case of Baker v. Drake, 53 N. Y. 211; 13 Am. Rep. 507, and in Gruman v. Smith, 81 N. Y. 25; Colt v. Owens, 90 N. Y. 368; Wright v. Bank of Metropolis, 110 N. Y. 237. It would be a herculean task to review all the various and conflicting opinions that have been delivered on this subject. On the whole it seems to us that the New York rule, as finally settled by the court of appeals, has the most reason in its favor, and we adopt it as a correct view of the law.”

- 1. Taussig v. Hart, 49 N. Y. 301; 58 N. Y. 425.
- 2. Bate v. McDowell, 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 106.

ness by certain recognized forms, regulations, and usages;"¹ and again, as "a voluntary association (usually unincorporated) of persons who, for convenience in the transaction of business with each other, have associated themselves to provide a common place for the transaction of their business. It is usually not a corporation, and in such case it is not a partnership."² Again, the Stock Exchange in its present form in England and the United States, may be defined to be a voluntary business association or club formed by its members for the purpose of buying and selling stocks and other money securities, among each other, either as principals in their transactions, or as agents acting for parties who are not members of the body, and having a code of laws regulating the admission, conduct, suspension, and expulsion of its members.³

II. LEGAL STATUS.—The legal status of the Stock Exchange is anomalous; ordinarily, it is not a corporation, neither is it a partnership, and yet it possesses some of the characteristics of both. It may, perhaps, be more properly classified with voluntary societies and clubs than with any other institution known to the law.⁴

Like a corporation the Stock Exchange may adopt a constitution and by-laws which are laws as to its members,⁵ and it has perpetual being unless dissolved by its voluntary act.⁶ But unlike a corporation it has no charter and does not exist by virtue of any legislative act; it issues no stock and the members have no claim to its property as stockholders. The privileges of membership may be conferred or withheld at the pleasure of the body, and courts will not interfere to compel the admission of one seeking to become a member.⁷ It has no special privileges conferred

1. Webster's Dict.

2. Bouv. L. Dict.

3. This last definition is that of the Messrs. Biddle in their treatise on the law of Stock-brokers. See also Paterson, Stock Exchange, p. 26.

4. In Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571, Peirce, J., said: "These associations have some elements in common with corporations, joint stock companies, and partnerships; such as association, and being governed by regulations adopted by themselves for that purpose. They are what is known to the law of Pennsylvania as unincorporated societies or associations." The association here under discussion was the Philadelphia Board of Brokers. See generally SOCIETIES AND CLUBS, vol. 22, p. 803.

5. Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571. See Thompson v. Adams, 93 Pa. St. 55; MacDowell v. Ackely, 93 Pa. St. 277; Kuehnemundt v.

Smith, 2 N. Y. Supp. 625; Weston v. Ives, 97 N. Y. 222; Belton v. Hatch, 109 N. Y. 593; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 365; 4 Am. St. Rep. 495; Lewis v. Wilson, 121 N. Y. 284; affirming 50 Hun (N. Y.) 166; Goddard v. Merchants' Exchange, 9 Mo. App. 290; Albers v. Merchants' Exchange, 39 Mo. App. 583.

6. Dos Passos, Stock-brokers, etc., p. 17.

7. In White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 329; 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 318. Van Vorst, J., in speaking of the Open Board of Brokers (an institution similar to the Stock Exchange, and which has since been consolidated with it), said: "It follows from the very nature of such an organization with such objects, intents and purposes, that there must be rules and regulations for the good order of the association, and which rules shall be held to be conclusive as to the mode of transacting upon it by the state and it owes no special duties to the public.¹ Neither does the Stock Exchange come within the legal definition of a partnership. There is no contribution of capital by its members for the prosecution of a common business. The ownership of property is a mere incident and not an end for which the organization is maintained. The members do not share each other's profits or losses; neither is there a division among the members of any profits which may accrue to the association from such property as it possesses; nor does the death, resignation, or bankruptcy of a member work a dissolution of the organization.²

III. ORIGIN AND HISTORY.—The Stock Exchange as it now exists cannot be said to have originated at any particular epoch, either in the United States or in Europe. It is comparatively a modern business between the members, and as to the privilege of admission to and continued enjoyment of membership. As this association is not organized in pursuance of any statute, nor the terms of membership fixed by the principles of the common law, it follows that the agreement which the members make among themselves on the subject must establish and determine the rights of the parties on the subject. The constitution of the association, and its laws agreed upon by the members, contains all the stipulations of the parties, and is the law which should govern. The members have established a law for themselves. No person is entitled to membership in the Open Board of Brokers except he is approved by the appropriate committee, voted for by the board, and shall agree to, adopt, and affix his name to the constitution; and having done this, each member should stand by his contract." See also White v. Brownell, 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 192.

1. In Commercial Tel. Co. v. Smith, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 494, Van Brunt, P. J., said: "The claim that the Stock Exchange has no right to exclude the Commercial Telegram Company from its floors upon the ground of public policy, evidently proceeds upon an entirely erroneous theory. The Exchange is a private association; it has the right to admit to its floor whom it pleases; it obtained nothing from the state, except that protection which the law affords to every citizen; it has sought no special privilege and obtained no special powers. It is, therefore, just as much the master of its own business and of the method of conducting the same as any private individual within the state. It may make public the transactions which occur within its walls, or it may refuse all information in respect thereto. No matter which course is pursued, so long as it violates no law, it has a right to continue its business as it pleases."

2. Not a Partnership.—In White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 329, Van Vorst, J., said: "The association is engaged in no business and does not devote its funds to the prosecution of any undertaking to produce profit or gain to its members; nor is it a copartnership; in its organization, the essential features which characterize a partnership are wholly wanting. There are no profits earned to be divided among the members, nor are there losses to be borne. The constitution, the contract between the parties, does not establish copartnership relations between the members; the associates do not hold themselves out to the world as copartners, nor is there anything to show that they regard themselves, the one to the other, in that relation. The association looks to a continued existence, unaffected by the death, resignation, suspension or removal of its members. If it was a simple copartnership, the death or retirement of an associate would dissolve it. It is an established principle in the law of partnership that if it be without any definite period, any partner may withdraw at a moment's notice, when he pleases, and dissolve the partnership, and the civil law contains the same rule (Kent's Com. vol. 3, p. 53). The death of either party is, ipso facto, from the time of the death a dissolution of the partnership, however numerous the association may be. But in this organization, although individual members retire, die, or are institution, and has been developed step by step in response to the demands of business necessity.¹

IV. PROPERTY RIGHTS OF MEMBERS.—As has been seen, it is not one of the functions of the Stock Exchange to hold property and accumulate profits for the benefit of its members. But such bodies alway possess more or less property as a necessary incident to their existence. While the Stock Exchange differs essentially in many respects from a partnership, yet, in respect to the expelled, the body lives. The status, rights, and obligations of this plaintiff are not, therefore, to be determined by a consideration of this association in the light of its existence either as a corporation, joint stock association, or copartnership."

In Belton v. Hatch, 109 N. Y. 506; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 365; 4 Am. St. Rep. 495, the court, by Gray, J., said: "The New York Stock Exchange is a voluntary association of individuals, united, without a charter, in an organization for the purpose of affording to the members thereof certain facilities for the transaction of their business as brokers in stocks and securities, and a convenient exchange or salesroom for the conduct of such transactions. It cannot be said to be strictly a copartnership, for its objects do not come within the definition of one. A copartnership results from a contract between the parties by which they agree to combine their property or labor, or both, in some common enterprise and for a common profit, to be shared in the proportion stated in their agreement. The objects of a voluntary association of brokers do not, however, involve any such combination, or any communion of profits from the business transacted by the members. Like a business club, its principal object is the promotion of the convenience of its members by furnishing facilities which aid them in doing their business, and are, therefore, of benefit to them. It may be said, however, that the rights of the associates are not substantially different from those of partners, so far as their rights in the property of the association are concerned. The interest of each member in the property of the association is equal, but it is subject to the constitution and by-laws, which are the basis on which is founded the association."

In Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 575, the court, by Peirce, J., said: "The Philadelphia Board of Brokers is not a corporation. It is not a joint stock company in the sense in which such companies are regarded by the English law, although it has a large amount of property which belongs to it in its joint or aggregate capacity. Such private associations are said not to be partnerships as between themselves, whatever may be their relations to third persons. (White v. Brownell, 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 318; Thomas v. Ellmaker, 1 Pars. Eq. Cas. (Pa.) 98.) The Board of Brokers is a voluntary association of persons, who, for convenience in the transaction of business with each other, have associated themselves to provide a common place for the transaction of their individual business; agreeing among themselves to pay the expenses incident to the support of the objects of the association, in which each for himself at stated hours of the day, and for his individual profit, may prosecute his own business, and enter into separate engagements with his fellow-members."

See the following cases in which this question arose as to unincorporated societies and clubs: Park v. Spaulding, 10 Hun (N. Y.) 131; Lafond v. Deems, 81 N. Y. 514; Ebbinghausen v. Worth Club, 4 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 300; Koehler v. Brown, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 78; Gorman v. Russell, 14 Cal. 532; Fleming v. Hector, 2 M. & W. 172; Ellison v. Bignold, 2 J. & W. 503; Brown v. Dale, 9 Ch. Div. 78; Beaumont v. Meredith, 3 Ves. & B. 180; Pierce v. Piper, 17 Ves. 15; Babb v. Reed, 5 Rawle (Pa.) 159; 28 Am. Dec. 650.

1. The London Stock Exchange was organized in 1801, though brokers and jobbers had congregated together to conduct their operations for more than a hundred years before that time. The Paris Bourse has had a legal character ever since 1724. Its present building was completed in 1826. The New York Stock Exchange dates ownership of its personal property, it is much like a partnership. It is true that the member has no severable proprietary interest in such property and may not demand his part of it upon his withdrawing, but when the body ceases to exist, those who are then members may claim their proportionate share of its assets.¹

In respect to the real estate which such bodies may acquire, more difficult questions may arise. According to the common law, the title would be vested in such members only as were named as grantees in the instrument of conveyance, and all would be obliged to join in the execution of the deed in order effectually to dispose of such property.² And even if some of the members should hold the title as trustees for all, grave complications might arise owing to the changes which necessarily occur in the membership of the body. In order to avoid such difficulties, the title to the property of such associations is usually held by a corporation organized for the purpose.³

from 1817, and in Philadelphia a board of stock-brokers possessed a formal organization before that time. Dos Passos, Stock-brokers, etc., p. 89; Medbury's Men and Mysteries of Wall St. 286; Lewis, Stocks, Bonds, etc., p. 10.

1. "It may be said, however, that the rights of the associates are not substantially different from those of partners, so far as their rights in the property of the association are concerned. The interest of each member in the property of the association is equal, but it is subject to the constitution and by-laws which are the basis on which is founded the association." Belton v. Hatch, 109 N. Y. 596; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 365; 4 Am. St. Rep. 495.

In White v. Brownell, 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 162, Daly, J., at pp. 190, 191, said: "There may be property belonging to this body derived from the payment of dues or fines or consisting of the furniture of the room where the board meets, yet possession of it is merely an incident and not the main purpose or object of the association. A member has no severable proprietary interest in it or a right to any proportionate part of it upon withdrawing; he has merely the enjoyment and use of it while he is a member, but the property remains with and belongs to the body, while it continues to exist, like a pew, the ultimate and dominant property in which is in the congregation and not in the pewholder, and when the body ceases to exist those who may then be members become entitled to their proportionate share of its assets. (St. James Club, 13 Eng. L. & Eq. 592; Fassett v. Boylston, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 361.) This board of stock-brokers is in fact analogous to the organization which came under consideration in Caldicott v. Griffith, 8 Exch. 898, called Midland Counties Guardian Society for the Protection of Trade, which was decided not to be a partnership."

2. Co. Litt. 3 a; Comyn's Dig., tit. Capacity B. 1; Sugd. Law of Vendors, 388; Jackson v. Cory, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 385; Hornbeck v. Westbrook, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 73; Hornbeck v. Sleight, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 198; East Haddam Cent. Baptist Church v. East Haddam Baptist Eccles. Soc., 44 Conn. 259.

In some jurisdictions the rule is changed by statute and unincorporated societies may hold real property in the name of the organization. Hamlett v. Bennett, 6 Allen (Mass.) 140; Oakes v. Hill, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 344.

3. "The London Stock Exchange now consists of two distinct bodies: First, the shareholders or proprietors who own the building where business is transacted, and who are interested as members of a joint-stock undertaking; second, the subscribers or persons generally described as members of the Stock Exchange, or members of the house, who transact the business." Lewis, Stocks, Bonds, and other Securities 11; Cavanaugh, Law of Money Securities 515.

"To avoid many questions of the above nature which doubtless would have arisen if real estate were held by the Exchange, a company was incorpo-

V. INDIVIDUAL LIABILITY OF MEMBERS.—In unincorporated associations, such as the Stock Exchange, the members of which are not engaged in the prosecution of a common enterprise and do not share profits and losses, the law of partnership may not be safely relied upon to hold the members individually liable for the debts of the association. The better opinion seems to be that such liability should be determined rather by the law of principal and agent. The rule is that such members as incur the debt are personally liable for the payment, as are also all members who advise, sanction, or ratify the incurring of the same. And if it is the rule or custom of the association to allow its officers and servants to deal on credit in its behalf, it seems that all of the members may be liable personally for debts so contracted.¹ rated under the laws of the State of New York (incorporated Jan. 30, 1863) duly empowered to hold real estate; the stock of the company being exclusively owned and held by the Stock Exchange." Dos Passos, Stock-brokers, etc., p. 20.

In Clute v. Loveland, 68 Cal. 254, the court by Ross, J., said: "The findings show that during the times mentioned in the record the San Francisco Stock and Exchange Board was, and yet is, a voluntary association, consisting of one hundred members, formed for the purpose of dealing in stocks, and buying and selling the same on commission in the city and county of San Francisco; that the Company of Associated Stock-brokers was, and yet is, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the state, with its principal place of business in the said city; that the said corporation was formed by and is composed of the members of said volunteer association solely, of both of which institutions the defendant in this action was at all times, and yet is, a member; that the members of the association and of the corporation are entitled to an equal share or proportion of its property, effects, and assets; that the only qualification for membership in the corporation is that such member shall be a member in good standing of the volunteer association, and shall sign the constitution and by-laws of the corporation; that the corporation was formed for the purpose of receiving donations with which to purchase land in the city of San Francisco, upon which to erect a building for the use of its members as stock-brokers, and has no shares or capital stock; that the lot of land described in the complaint was purchased, and the building thereon erected in 1875, with funds belonging to the aforesaid volunteer association, at a cost of more than five hundred thousand dollars, in which building the board has since held its sessions; and that each member's right and title to the property, goods, effects, and assets of the association, and the privilege of participating in the meeting of the board, is represented by what is called and known as a 'seat in the San Francisco Stock and Exchange Board.'"

1. In Fleming v. Hector, 2 M. & W. 172, Lord Abinger stated the difference between a body of gentlemen forming a club and meeting together for one common object, and a partnership where persons engage in the community of profit and loss, and each partner has the right of property for the whole, and in particular transactions may bind the partnership by a credit. He held that a club and its committee must stand on the ground of principal and agent, and that the authority of the committee depends on the constitution of the club, which is to be found in its own rules. See also Lloyd v. Loaring, 6 Ves. 773.

In Ash v. Guie, 97 Pa. St. 500; 39 Am. Rep. 818, the court, by Trunkay, J., said: "Here there is no evidence to warrant an inference that when a person joined the lodge he bound himself as a partner in the business of purchasing real estate and erecting buildings, or as a partner, so that other members could borrow money on his credit. The proof fails to show that the officers or a committee, or any number of the members, had a right to contract debts for the building of a temple, which would be valid against

VI. SEATS.—A seat in the Stock Exchange is practically synonymous with membership in the association. The membership of the Exchange as a rule is limited, and if any one desires to become a member or obtain a seat in case a vacancy occurs, he makes his application to the proper officers or committee, and an election, usually by ballot, is held for his admission. In the event of his election a fixed initiation fee is paid and the member elect is entitled to his seat. As a rule also an outgoing member of good standing may sell his seat, and the purchaser, upon being duly elected and paying the fees in such case provided, is entitled to the seat and all the privileges incident thereto, subject to the constitution and by-laws of the association.¹

It is well settled that a seat in the Stock Exchange is a species of property, but the member is not the absolute owner of it. His ownership is qualified and restricted by the rules and regulations of the body, and he cannot in any manner dispose of the seat so as to free it from the operation of such rules and regulations.² The legal character of seats has frequently been considered by the every member from the mere fact that he was a member of the lodge. But those who engaged in the enterprise are liable for the debts they contracted, and all are included in such liability who assented to the undertaking, or subsequently ratified it. Those who participated in the erection of the building, by voting for and advising it, are bound the same as the committee who had it in charge. And so with reference to borrowing money. A member who subsequently approved the erection or borrowing could be held on the ground of ratification of the agent's acts. We are of opinion that it was error to rule that all the members were liable as partners in their relation to third persons in the same manner as individuals associated for the purpose of carrying on a trade."

In Richmond v. Judy, 6 Mo. App. 465, Bakewell, J., said: "Associations and clubs, the objects of which are social or political and not for purposes of trade or profit, are not partnerships, and pecuniary liability can be fastened upon the individual members of such associations only by reason of the acts of such individuals or of their agents. Agency must be made out; none is implied from the mere fact of association. Bailey v. Macauley, 19 L. J. Q. B. 73; Wood v. Finch, 2 F. & F. 447; De-launay v. Strickland, 2 Stark. 416; Suckomb v. Carleton, 2 F. & F. 787." See also Cockerill v. Ancompte, 40 Eng. L. & Eq. 284; 2 C. B. N. S. 439;

In re St. James Club, 2 De G. M. & G. 383; 16 Jur. 1073; Jenne v. Sutton, 43 N. J. L. 257; 39 Am. Rep. 578; Downing v. Mann, 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 36; Secor v. Law, 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 188; Ridgely v. Dobson, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 118; Robinson v. Robinson, 10 Me. 240; Abbott v. Cobb, 17 Vt. 597; Cheeny v. Clark, 3 Vt. 434; 23 Am. Dec. 219; Newell v. Borden, 128 Mass. 31; Todd v. Emly, 8 M. & W. 505; Ebbinghausen v. Worth Club, 4 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 300; McGrew v. City Produce Exchange, 85 Tenn. 572.

1. Constitution and By-laws of N. Y. & Phila. Stock Exchanges; Const. and By-laws San Francisco Stock and Exchange Board; Biddle, Law of Stock-brokers, pp. 49 and 50.

2. In Hyde v. Woods, 94 U. S. 524, Miller, J., said: "There can be no doubt that the incorporeal right which Fenn had to this seat when he became bankrupt was property, and the sum realized by the assignees from its sale proves that it was valuable property. Nor do we think that there can be any reason to doubt that if he had made no such assignment it would have passed, subject to the rules of the stock board, to his assignee in bankruptcy, and if there had been left in the hands of the defendants any balance after paying the debts due to the members of the board, that balance might have been recovered by the assignee."

In Ritterband v. Baggett, 4 Abb. N.

courts in cases where creditors have sought to attach or seize upon execution the seat of a member of the Stock Exchange. It has been held that seats are not subject to seizure and sale in this manner.¹ Nevertheless it appears that such property may be reached by a creditor's bill or by proceedings supplemental to execution, and the court will compel the debtor to perform such acts as may be necessary under the rules and regulations of the association to transfer the seat to the purchaser thereof.² But there is conflict of authority on this point. Some courts, still adhering to the strict rules of the common law, hold that such

Cas. (N. Y.) 67, Speir, J., said: "The question whether the seat in the board was property has been fully settled in a late case, almost, if not entirely, identical with the case at bar (Hyde v. Woods, 94 U. S. 524). It is there held that a seat in such a board is not a matter of absolute purchase; that there is no reason why the stock board should not make membership subject to the conditions and rules of the board, unless it is a violation of some statute, or of some principle of public policy. The reason given is sound, that the rule entered into and became an incident of the property when it was created, and remains a part of it into whose hands soever it may come. (See also Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U. S. 716.)"

In Londheim v. White, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 467, Hall, J., said: "It must be conceded, I think, in the light of all the decisions, that a seat or membership in the Stock Exchange is property, and should be applied in the same manner as other property of a debtor to the payment of his debts. It may be surrounded and clogged with conditions and restrictions, and still it is property available for the payment of debts and can be made available for that purpose subject to and by an observance of those restrictions and conditions. That the membership is valuable is shown by the fact that the initiation fee is ten thousand dollars, and among all business men has an established and tangible value. It is an asset upon which creditors have a right to rely for payment of debts. This question has been passed upon so frequently by the courts as to make it no longer doubtful or debatable. Grocers' Bank v. Murphy, 60 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 426; Ritterband v. Baggett, 4 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 67; U. S. Dist. Ct., In re Ketcham, Daily Reg. Feb. 9th, 1880; Powell v. Waldron, 89 N. Y.

328; 42 Am. Rep. 301; Platt v. Jones, (Sup. Ct. Gen. Term, Ms. Opin.)"

1. Thompson v. Adams, 93 Pa. St. 55.

In Pancoast v. Gowen, 93 Pa. St. 66, the court said: "A seat in the board of brokers is not property subject to execution in any form. It is a mere personal privilege, perhaps more accurately a license to buy and sell at the meeting of the board. It certainly could not be levied on and sold under a fi. fa. The sheriff's vendee would acquire no title which he could enforce. Whether the proceeds of the sale of the seat in the hands of the treasurer of the board and payable to the defendant according to the regulations and by-laws of the board, could be thus reached is an entirely different question. This and no more is what we understand to have been decided by the Supreme Court of the United States in Hyde v. Woods, 94 U. S. 525, where Mr. Justice Miller says: 'If there had been left in the hands of the defendants any balance after paying the debts due to the members of the board, that balance might have been recovered by the assignee in bankruptcy.'" See Moxey v. Philadelphia Stock Exchange, 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 441; Evans v. Wister, 1 W. N. C. (Pa.) 182; Leech v. Leech, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 211; Singerly v. Johnson, 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 541.

2. In Grocers' Bank v. Murphy, 60 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 426, Beach, J., after criticising Thompson v. Adams, 93 Pa. St. 55, and Pancoast v. Gowen, 93 Pa. St. 66, said: "If such a result may be attained, the effort of active imagination cannot circumscribe the associations human ingenuity will produce to thus transmute veritable assets into intangible and yet most substantial and valuable shadows. Thus would follow the nullification of the legal principle which makes the debtor's property cannot be reached by the creditor either upon execution or by any proceeding in aid thereof.¹ The question of the legal character of seats has been considered in another class of cases, viz., where the owners of such seats have become bankrupt, and it has been sought to reach the seats or the proceeds possessions liable to his creditors, and honest claimants would be remediless because of the insufficiency of the statute enacted to facilitate the collection of just demands. There may be minor difficulties in the practicable application of the statute, but these, in my opinion, are easily surmounted; probably an order appointing a receiver containing directions for the judgment debtor to do whatever may be deemed needful to transfer the seat under the rules of the Exchange would accomplish the result sought."

In Ritterband v. Baggett, 4 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 67, Speir, J., said: "The question being settled that the seat in question is property of value, I think it is the duty of the court to enforce its transfer for the plaintiff's benefit in this action, either to a receiver or to a third person qualified to work out the designs of the law. Rights of property from time immemorial could be reached by a creditor's bill, and it is now well settled that the same result may be accomplished by proceedings under the code which furnish a substitute for that proceeding in chancery. Personal property passes to the receiver without assignment; but if an assignment be necessary to effect the purpose of the law, I do not question the power of the court to direct it to be done. It is not an indispensable requisite that such an assignment should be made direct to the receiver. It may be made to said purchaser from him who is either a member or member elect of the Exchange, or to a member or member elect to hold in trust to assign under the receiver's direction to said purchaser from him who shall be either a member or a member elect." See Roome v. Swan, 2 N. Y. Supp. 614; Powell v. Waldron, 89 N. Y. 330; 42 Am. Rep. 301; Londheim v. White, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 467.

In Clute v. Loveland, 68 Cal. 254, the court held that a member of the San Francisco Stock and Exchange Board has power to pledge his seat, and that the lien thereby created may be foreclosed and the seat sold subject to the conditions imposed by the rules of the association. And in Habenicht v. Lissak, 78 Cal. 351; 12 Am. St. Rep. 63, the court, after a review of the authorities, held that a seat in the San Francisco Stock and Exchange Board is property, and should be applied as other property of the debtor to the payment of his debts, and might be reached for that purpose by proceedings supplemental to execution. See Freeman on Executions (2d ed.), § 110.

In Eliot v. Merchant's Exchange, 14 Mo. App. 234, it was held by the court, after a review of the authorities, that a judgment debtor who was a member of the Exchange might be compelled to transfer the certificate of his membership to such purchaser at sheriff's sale as possessed the qualifications of membership in the Exchange.

1. In Barclay v. Smith, 107 Ill. 249; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 298; 47 Am. Rep. 437 (which was a creditor's bill to enforce the sale of a certificate of membership in the Board of Trade of the city of Chicago), Craig, J., said: "A certificate of membership in the Board of Trade of Chicago empowers the person who is admitted as a member to attend the meetings of the board and deal in the various products of the country. This right to appear at a certain place and transact certain business, in our judgment, is not property, but it is a mere privilege conferred upon the member which cannot be reached and sold by the process of the courts. It is a right which may be regarded as valuable but which cannot be divested or destroyed except by the board itself for a failure of the member to conform to the rules and regulations of the association. This view is in harmony with the rule announced by the Supreme Court of the state of Pennsylvania where a similar question arose. (Thompson v. Adams, 93 Pa. St. 55; Pancoast v. Gowen, 93 Pa. St. 66.) We have been referred to some cases which seem to hold a different view, but without entering upon a review of the cases cited, we do not think they establish the correct rule, thereof as assets of the bankrupts' estates. In such cases it seems to be settled, notwithstanding an early opinion to the contrary,¹ that such title to the seat as the insolvent member possesses passes to the assignee in bankruptcy, who may dispose of the same subject to the rules and regulations of the association. And, as in the case of a judgment debtor, the courts will compel the bankrupt member to perform such acts and execute such instruments as may be necessary to vest the title to the seat in such purchaser from the assignee as may be acceptable to the association, who may be admitted to membership in the same in accordance with its rules.² But the bankrupt cannot after his discharge be com-and we are not inclined to follow them."

And in Weaver v. Fisher, 110 Ill. 146, Schofield, J., said: "It is a misapprehension to suppose, as counsel for plaintiff in error seem to, that we held in Barclay v. Smith, 107 Ill. 349; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 298; 47 Am. Rep. 437, that there are no property rights of any kind in a certificate of membership in the Board of Trade of the city of Chicago. We simply there held that such a certificate is not property which is liable to be subjected to the payment of debts of the holder by legal proceedings. We did not intimate that from the nature of a certificate of membership in the Board of Trade it could not by statute be subjected to the payment of debts, but only that under the law as it now is, it cannot be. Whether property shall be liable to be subjected to the payment of debts by legal proceedings, and if so in what manner, is merely a matter of statutory regulation. At common law, shares in stock were held not to be chattels (Ang. & Ames, Corp. 5th ed., § 560; Hermann on Executions, § 362); and also to be of such an intangible nature that there could be no change of possession, and therefore that they could not be sold on execution."

1. In re Sutherland, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 526.

2. McCabe v. Emmons, 51 N. Y. Super. Ct. 219; Platt v. Jones, 96 N. Y. 24; In re Gallagher, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 410.

In Re Ketchum, 1 Fed. Rep. 840, Choate, J., said: "The case of In re Sutherland, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 526, can perhaps be distinguished from Hyde v. Woods, 94 U. S. 525, and from In re Gallagher, 16 Blatchf. (U. S.) 410, on the ground suggested in the latter case, that the right in that case was less distinctly of a mere business character. But if not, I am not satisfied by the reasoning in that case that property like this seat in the New York Stock Exchange was not intended to pass to the assignee in bankruptcy under the bankrupt law. The controlling consideration is, it seems to me, that practically and whatever its form or incidents with respect to other matters may be, it is a part of the bankrupt's business assets, or, more generally of his property, which it was the primary design of the bankrupt law to distribute among his creditors, and that the peculiarities which distinguish this from other property are, in view of the evident purpose and scope of the bankrupt law, unessential—mere technicalities, cobwebs which the law is strong enough to break through. Let an order be entered requiring the bankrupt to execute any transfer, assignment, or instrument necessary for the purpose of vesting the title to his seat in the New York Stock Exchange in such person as an assignee in bankruptcy may procure as transferee."

In Re Warder, 10 Fed. Rep. 275, Nixon, J., said: "I am aware that in Re Sutherland, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 526, Judge Blodgett seems to have come to a different conclusion. I have read the case with care hoping to find some provisions in the charter of the Chicago Board of Trade to distinguish it from the case under consideration. This I have been unable to do, but Hyde v. Woods, 94 U. S. 525, is subsequent in date, and in questions of this sort it is my duty to follow the supreme court. The district court of the United States for the southern district of New York in February, 1880, made an order requiring a bank-

pelled by order of court to execute such instruments as will enable the assignee to make his seat available as assets.¹

Upon the death of a member it seems that his seat may be sold and the proceeds, after payment of his debts to his fellow members, be turned over to his personal representative as a part of the assets of his estate.²

VII. PARTIES TO ACTIONS.—At common law an unincorporated company or association cannot sue or be sued in the name of the company or association, but the individual members of the body must be made parties to any action by or against it.³ The inconvenience of this rule has led to statutory changes of the law in many of the states, providing that joint stock companies and unincorporated associations may sue and be sued, either in the name of the association itself or of some officer thereof. Stock Exchanges, being unincorporated associations, are within the pro-

rupt to vest the title to his seat in the New York Stock Exchange in the assignee in bankruptcy. I think the present application falls within the principle of that case, and I approve of the ruling of Judge Choate in his opinion granting the order. In re Ketchum, 1 Fed. Rep. 840. Let an order be entered directing the bankrupt to transfer his membership from the New York Produce Exchange to the assignee." See In re Werder, 15 Fed. Rep. 789; Hyde v. Woods, 94 U. S. 523; Sparhawk v. Yerks, 142 U. S. 1, where it is held, in an opinion by Fuller, C. J., that the assignee in bankruptcy, after sleeping twelve years on his rights and allowing the bankrupt member to pay off liens on his seat, cannot claim it as a part of the assets of the bankrupt's estate.

1. In re Nichols, 1 Fed. Rep. 842.

2. In Grocers' Bank v. Murphy, 60 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 426, Beach, J., said: "The controlling feature appurtenant to a seat in the Stock Exchange is that it may be bought and sold subject to the rules of the association, and in case of the owner's death a sale is made by the Exchange and the proceeds distributed. Herein exists the difference between it and membership of a social club; the latter can neither be bought nor sold; it has no general value or marketable quality, and nothing remains after a member's death."

In Thompson v. Adams, 93 Pa. St. 55, it is said in the agreed statement of facts for the opinion of the court that "originally a seat in the Board of Brokers (i. e., the collective privileges of a full member of the board) was valuable only during the life or membership of its owner. Subsequently by the said constitution the members were allowed under certain conditions to transfer their seats for value, and subsequently to that a clause was added to the constitution giving value upon certain conditions to a member's seat after his death." And section 12 of the constitution of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, late Board of Brokers, provides that "when a member dies his seat may be sold by the secretary, and after satisfying the claims of the members of the board, the balance shall be paid to his legal representatives."

An article of the New York Stock Exchange, provides: "When a member dies, his membership may be disposed of by the Committee on Admissions, and after satisfying the claims of the members of the Stock Exchange, they shall pay any balance to the legal representatives of the deceased."

3. Dicey on Parties to Actions (2d Am. ed.) 169; Wright v. Williamson, 3 N. J. L. 532; Smith v. Crichton, 33 Md. 106; American Cent. R. Co. v. Milas, 52 Ill. 178; Choteau v. Raitt, 20 Ohio 144; Haskins v. Alcott, 13 Ohio St. 216; Halliday v. Doggett, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 359; East Haddam Cent. Baptist Church v. East Haddam Baptist Eccles. Soc., 44 Conn. 259; Williams v. Bank of Michigan, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 542; Wells v. Gates, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 554. See also Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571, where the action was brought against the members of a visions of such statutes, and may sue and be sued as provided therein.¹

VIII. EXPULSION OF MEMBERS—1. Power to Expel.—Corporations established for purposes other than the pecuniary gain of their members have an inherent power, without express authority in their charters, to disfranchise or expel members who have been convicted in a court of justice of infamous offenses or have committed acts against their respective societies which tend to their destruction and injury.²

Whether or not Stock Exchanges, being unincorporated associations, possess the same inherent power to expel their members, in the absence of by-laws or rules providing therefor, does not committee and the members of the Board of Brokers of Philadelphia.

1. In Sewell v. Ives, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 54, it was held that as the New York Stock Exchange was composed of more than seven persons owning and having an interest in property in common, and who would be liable to an action on account of such ownership and interest, an action brought by a member, in relation to his interest in that property was properly brought against the president. See Birdseye's Rev. St. of New York, vol. 2, p. 1684; New York Code Civ. Proc., § 1919. In the following cases in that state the president was named as the party defendant under the statute. Heath v. Gold Exchange, 7 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 251; 38 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 168; White v. Brownell, 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 318; 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 162; Rorke v. Russell, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 244; Olery v. Brown, 51 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 92; Weston v. Ives, 97 N. Y. 222; Belton v. Hatch, 109 N. Y. 593; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 365; 4 Am. St. Rep. 495.

The Pennsylvania statute provides that such associations shall sue and be sued in their association name, and that when suit is brought against any such association, service of process shall be made upon the chairman, secretary, or treasurer thereof. Bright. Purd. Dig., vol. 1, p. 939. In the following cases, the association itself was named as the party defendant: Moxey v. Philadelphia Stock Exchange, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 185; Sexton v. Commercial Exchange, 10 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 607; Moxey v. Philadelphia Stock Exchange, 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 441.

Where the action is brought against the president or treasurer of such association, the remedy against the property of the association must be exhausted before an action can be brought against one or more of the individual members. Robbins v. Wells, 18 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 191; 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 15. And the judgment against the president or other officer is only prima facie evidence in the plaintiff's favor, in a subsequent action against the individual members. Allen v. Clark, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 563; Withehead v. Allen, 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 628; Robbins v. Wells, 18 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 191; 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 15; Kingsland v. Braisted, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 17.

2. "There is a tacit condition annexed to the franchise of a member which if he breaks he may be disfranchised. The cases in which this inherent power may be exercised are of three kinds: First, when an offense is committed which has no ordinary relation to a member's corporate duty but is of so infamous a nature as renders him unfit for the society of honest men; such are the offenses of perjury, forgery, etc. But before an expulsion is made for a cause of this kind, it is necessary that there should be a previous conviction by a jury according to the law of the land. Second, where the offense is against his duty as a corporator. And in that case he may be expelled on trial and conviction by the corporation. And the third is an offense of a mixed nature against the member's duty as a corporator and also indictable by the law of the land." Lord Mansfield, in Rex v. Liverpool, 2 Burr. 733. See also State v. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, 20 Wis. 71; Com. v. St. Patrick's Ben. Soc., 2 Binn. (Pa.) 441; 4 Am. Dec. 453; People v. Medical Soc., etc., 32 N. Y. 187; Society for Visitation of Sick v. Com., 52 Pa. St. 125; 91 Am.

seem to be thoroughly settled. But the better opinion seems to be that where there is no property in which all the members have a joint interest, a member may be expelled after giving him notice of the charges made against him and an opportunity to make his defense.¹

Dec. 139; Dickenson v. Chamber of Commerce, 29 Wis. 49; 9 Am. Rep. 544; Loubat v. LeRoy, 15 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 1. See elaborate review of English authorities in Evans v. Philadelphia Club, 50 Pa. St. 107.

1. In Innes v. Wylie, 1 C. & K. 257; 47 E. C. L. 255. Lord Denman, C. J. (in summing up), said: "I am of opinion that where there is not any property in which all the members of the society have a joint interest, the majority may by resolution remove any one member. I think that in this instance the members of this society had that power in case the plaintiff misconducted himself." And again, on motion for a new trial, he said: "Any society may undoubtedly make any rules by which the admission and expulsion of its members are to be regulated, and the members must conform to and cannot question them. But where there are no directions on the subject contained in the rules, a party expelled may lawfully complain that his expulsion has been effected contrary to the general principles of law; and a member is not to be expelled by vote unless there be regular notice given to him and an opportunity of his being heard."

In White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 329, the plaintiff was a member of the Open Board of Brokers in New York, a voluntary association, and sought to restrain the body from interfering with his privileges as a member. In the course of the opinion, Daly, F. J., said, at page 359: "Such an organization may prescribe the conditions upon which persons will be admitted to membership as well as the conditions upon which the continuance of membership will depend. And where they have no regulation upon the subject, they may expel a member by vote of a majority if he has been notified of the charge against him and afforded an opportunity of being heard in his defense." Citing Innes v. Wylie, 1 C. & K. 257; 47 E. C. L. 255.

In Otto v. Journeymen Tailors' Protective, etc., Union, 75 Cal. 308, Searls, C. J., said: "The contention of appellant is that the power of expulsion is inherent in every society, and that the offense of which plaintiff was found guilty was sufficient ground for expulsion as matter of law irrespective of any provision of the constitution or by-laws. We subscribe to that portion of the proposition which asserts the inherent right of expulsion, subject, however, to the limitations hereinbefore expressed."

In Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571, in which the legality of plaintiff's expulsion from the Philadelphia Board of Brokers, an unincorporated association, was under consideration, the court found that the charges against the plaintiff did not come within any of the regulations of the board providing for the suspension or expulsion of its members. And after quoting the language of Lord Mansfield, cited above, as the law of the case, proceeded to inquire whether or not the plaintiff was subject to expulsion through the inherent or common law power of such associations to expel a member for an infamous offense, or for an offense against his duty as a member of the association thus assuming the possession of such power by the board. But see Dawkins v. Antrobus, 17 Ch. Div. 615; affirmed 44 L. T., N. S. 577, in which Jessel, M. R., said: "There are two principal points raised as to whether the rule in question under which the expulsion of Colonel Dawkins has taken place is or is not a rule binding on him as a member of the 'Travelers' Club.' Now that does not depend on the inherent power of a club to pass a rule to expel one or more of its members. I for one am not aware of the existence of such a power and I am surprised to hear such a proposition put forward. There is no more inherent power in the members of a club to alter their rules so as to expel one of its members against the wishes of the minority than there is in the members of any society or partnership which is founded on a contract; that written contract, of course, expressing the terms on which the mem-

The members of a Stock Exchange may agree to be governed by such rules as they think proper to adopt, provided there is nothing in them in conflict with the law of the land; and for a violation of such rules, they may suspend or expel a member after a fair and orderly hearing in accordance with the methods prescribed in the constitution and by-laws.¹

The legality of proceedings in the exercise of this jurisdiction is called in question in judicial tribunals, sometimes in actions for damages for wrongful expulsion, but more frequently by injunction to prevent such expulsion, or to prevent the enforcement of the decision, if the expulsion has been determined upon. And here again the courts recognize a distinction between incorporated and unincorporated associations, in that a corporation is subject to the visitatorial power of the courts of the state from which it receives its franchise, while an unincorporated association has its foundation in contract and is subject to no such visitatorial power. In the one case, wrongful prevention of a member's enjoyment of the franchise is sufficient cause for the interference of a court of justice; whereas, in the other, the courts usually refuse to interfere unless the complaining member has some pecuniary interest involved or the action complained of involves a violation of the law.²

And if the Stock Exchange or other voluntary association has provided means whereby a member, who has been wrongfully suspended or expelled, may have the matter reviewed within the association, the courts will not interfere in such case until the members associate together. And it is intolerable to imagine that the majority should in such case claim an inherent power of expelling the minority."

1. Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571; Thompson v. Adams, 93 Pa. St. 55; McDowell v. Ackley, 93 Pa. St. 277; Moxey v. Philadelphia Stock Exchange, 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 441; White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 359; Fischer v. Raab, 57 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 87; Fritz v. Muck, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 69; Kuehnemundt v. Smith, 2 N. Y. Supp. 625; Weston v. Ives, 97 N. Y. 222; Belton v. Hatch, 109 N. Y. 593; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 365; 4 Am. St. Rep. 495; Lewis v. Wilson, 121 N. Y. 284; Hyde v. Woods, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 655; 94 U. S. 523; Otto v. Journeymen Tailors' Protective, etc., Union, 75 Cal. 308; Innes v. Wylie, 1 C. & K. 257; 47 E. C. L. 255; Wachtel v. Noah Widows, etc., Soc., 84 N. Y. 28; 38 Am. Rep. 478.

2. In State v. Georgia Medical Society, 38 Ga. 608; 95 Am. Dec. 408, Brown, C. J., said: "It is insisted in this case that the Georgia Medical Society was in existence long before it was incorporated, and that its objects were in no way changed by its application for, and acceptance of, its present charter from the state. This may be very true, but its legal responsibilities were changed by the acceptance of the charter; while it remained a voluntary society the courts had no jurisdiction over it if it violated no law of the state, and its members had no property in their membership which the law could protect, but its acceptance of a charter subjected it to the supervision of the proper legal authorities having jurisdiction in such case. When the voluntary society accepted the charter it became a private civil corporation, and the corporators then in being acquired a property in the franchise; every person who has since become a corporator has acquired a like property. The property which the corporator acquires is not a visible, tangible property, but it is none the less property because it is invisible and intangible; it is not a corporal hereditament, but it is incor-poral. . . . The law on this subject is thus stated by Judge Blackstone, vol. 1, p. 381. The king being thus constituted by law visitor of all civil corporations, the law has also appointed the place where he shall exercise this jurisdiction, which is the court of the king's bench, where, and where only, all misbehaviors of this kind of corporations are inquired into and redressed, and all other controversies decided. In this state the same visitatorial power of correcting the misbehavior of corporations and deciding their controversies is vested in the superior courts of the counties where they are located, which in England belongs to the king's bench."

In Porter v. Rockford, etc., R. Co., 76 Ill. 561, it was held that the franchise of a corporation was property, and as such a proper object of taxation. Citing West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. (U. S.) 529; Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 547; Wilmington, etc., R. Co. v. Reid, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 264; Monroe Sav. Bank v. Rochester, 37 N. Y. 367. But in Anacosta Tribe v. Murbach, 13 Md. 91; 71 Am. Dec. 625, and People v. Chicago Board of Trade, 80 Ill. 134, this principle seems to have been lost sight of.

In State v. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, 47 Wis. 670, Lyon, J., said: "The visitatorial or superintending power of the state over corporations created by the legislature will always be exercised in proper cases through the medium of the courts of the state, to keep those corporations within the limits of their lawful powers, and to correct and punish abuses of their franchise. (State v. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, 20 Wis. 63; Dickenson v. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, 29 Wis. 45.) In the light of these judgments we cannot accept the doctrine which seems to have received the sanction of the Supreme Court of Illinois in People v. Chicago Board of Trade, 80 Ill. 134, that the power of such corporations to enact by-laws is unlimited, and that the courts will not interfere with the enforcement of any by-law thus enacted. The case seems to be in conflict with earlier decisions of that court, and we are not aware that the court has reasserted any such doctrine, although it has since considered several cases involving the legality of the proceedings of the same board of trade.

See Fisher v. Chicago Board of Trade, 80 Ill. 84; Sturges v. Chicago Board of Trade, 86 Ill. 441; Baxter v. Chicago Board of Trade, 83 Ill. 146. True these were equity cases, in which the respective complainants sought to restrain the board from expelling them, or to compel it to restore them after expulsion, yet the doctrine of People v. Chicago Board of Trade, 80 Ill. 134, is referred to hypothetically in the opinions of the court, and no mention whatever is made of that case; whether that learned and able court adheres to that doctrine, we are unable, as at present advised, to adopt it as the law of this state."

In Rigby v. Connol, 14 Ch. Div. 482, Jessel, M. R., said: "The first question that I will consider is, what is the jurisdiction of a court of equity as regards interfering at the instance of a member of a society to prevent his being improperly expelled therefrom? I have no doubt, whatever, that the foundation of the jurisdiction is the right of property vested in the member of the society, and of which he is unjustly deprived by such unlawful expulsion. There is no such jurisdiction that I am aware of reposed in this country, at least, in any of the queen's courts, to decide upon the rights of persons to associate together when the association possesses no property."

Courts of equity have jurisdiction over unincorporated voluntary associations where pecuniary rights of members are involved. Thomas v. Ellmaker, 1 Par. Eq. Cas. (Pa.) 98; Adley v. Whitstable Co., 17 Ves. 316; Lyman v. Bonney, 101 Mass. 562; Olery v. Brown, 51 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 92; Nachtrieb v. Harmony Settlement, 3 Wall. Jr. (C. C.) 66. See Dolan v. Court Good Samaritan, 128 Mass. 437; Lamphere v. Grand Lodge, 47 Mich. 429; Babb v. Reed, 5 Rawle (Pa.) 151; 28 Am. Dec. 650; Berry v. Cross, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; Van Houten v. Pine, 36 N. J. Eq. 133.

Recourse to law cannot be had where no pecuniary rights are involved. Thompson v. Society of Tammany, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 30; White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 329; Bauer's Appeal (Pa.), 18 Alb. L. J. 218. The Board of Brokers is not a corporation so as to be subject to the interference of equity to restore a member. White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 329.

party complaining exhausts his remedy before the tribunals provided by the association itself.¹

As every member of the Stock Exchange agrees, on becoming a member, to be obedient to the constitution and by-laws of the association, his suspension or expulsion, in the manner provided in such constitution and by-laws, is analogous to an award made by a tribunal of his own choosing. In the matter of such expulsion, the society acts in a quasi judicial capacity; and, if there is nothing unreasonable or contrary to law in the rules providing for expulsion, and the expelled member has had due notice of the charges made against him, and has had an opportunity to defend himself, and has had a fair and impartial trial in pursuance of the methods prescribed by the laws of the association, the sentence of expulsion is conclusive, and the courts will not sit as appellate tribunals to review such decisions.² In such cases the courts will inquire into the regularity of the proceedings under the constitution and rules of the association, will hold the association to a fair administration of its rules, will inquire whether or not such rules are reasonable, and whether or not the proceedings of the association are within the bounds of its proper jurisdiction;³ but they will not inquire into the merits of a cause which has been

1. Moxey v. Philadelphia Stock Exchange, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 185; White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 329; 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 162. See also Lafond v. Deems, 81 N. Y. 507; Poultney v. Bachman, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 49; Loubat v. Le Roy, 40 Hun (N. Y.) 546; Olery v. Brown, 57 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 92; Grosvenor v. United Soc. of Believers, 118 Mass. 78; Dolan v. Court Good Samaritan, 128 Mass. 437; Chamberlain v. Lincoln, 129 Mass. 70; Karcher v. Supreme Lodge, 137 Mass. 368; Harrington v. Workingmen's Benev. Assoc., 70 Ga. 340; Rex v. Ginever, 6 T. R. 732; Rex v. Head, 4 Burr. 2513; Carlen v. Drury, 1 Ves. & B. 154; Mulroy v. Supreme Lodge, 28 Mo. App. 463; Bauer v. Samson Lodge, 102 Ind. 262; 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 618; Supreme Council v. Garigus, 104 Ind. 133; 54 Am. Rep. 298.

2. Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571; White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 329; Kuehnemundt v. Smith, 2 N. Y. Supp. 625; Belton v. Hatch, 109 N. Y. 593; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 365; 4 Am. St. Rep. 495; Lewis v. Wilson, 121 N. Y. 284; affirming 50 Hun (N. Y.) 166. See also Bachmann v. New York Deutcher Arbitr Bund, 64 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 442; Poultney v. Bachman, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 49; McAlees v. Supreme Order of Iron Hall

(Pa.), 17 Ins. L. J. 832; Osceola v. Schmidt, 57 Md. 98; Woolsey v. Independent Order of Odd Fellows, etc., 61 Iowa 492; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 172; Harrison v. Hoyle, 24 Ohio St. 254; Pitcher v. Chicago Board of Trade, 121 Ill. 412; Robinson v. Yate City Lodge, 86 Ill. 598; Burt v. Grand Lodge, 44 Mich. 208; Schmidt v. Abraham Lincoln Lodge, 84 Ky. 490.

3. Hutchinson v. Lawrence, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 38; Sewell v. Ives, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 54; Kuehnemundt v. Smith, 2 N. Y. Supp. 625; Belton v. Hatch, 109 N. Y. 593; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 365; 4 Am. St. Rep. 495; Lewis v. Wilson, 121 N. Y. 284; affirming 50 Hun (N. Y.) 166; Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571; Powell v. Abbott, 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 231; Moxey v. Philadelphia Stock Exchange, 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 440. See also Medical & Surg. Soc. v. Weatherly, 75 Ala. 248; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 26; State v. Georgia Medical Soc., 38 Ga. 608; 95 Am. Dec. 408; Bouldin v. Alexander, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 131; Shannon v. Frost, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 253; German Reformed Church v. Com., 3 Pa. St. 282; State v. Farris, 45 Mo. 183; Dawkins v. Antrobus, 17 Ch. Div. 615; Innes v. Wylie, 1 C. & K. 257; 14 E. C. L. 255; Fisher v. Keane, 11 Ch. Div. 353; 41 L. T. 335; 49 L. J. Ch. 11; Sibley v. Carteret Club, 40 N. J. L. 295.

decided by the association, or a committee thereof duly empowered to act in such matters.¹

2. Remedy for Improper Expulsion.—If a member of an incorporated association is improperly expelled, he may, as a rule, seek the assistance of a court of law by a writ of mandamus to restore him to the enjoyment of his rights and privileges in the association.² But over unincorporated associations, such as the Stock Exchange, the courts exercise no visitatorial power, and a writ of mandamus will not issue to restore an expelled member to his rights and privileges in the association,³ unless the issuance of the writ in such case be authorized by statute.⁴ However, a

1. See cases in last note; also Toram v. Howard Ben. Soc., 4 Pa. St. 519; Com. v. Pike Ben. Soc., 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 247; Franklin Ben. Assoc. v. Com., 10 Pa. St. 327; Sperry's Appeal, 116 Pa. St. 391; Black & White Smith's Soc. v. Vandyke, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 308; 30 Am. Dec. 263; Com. v. German Soc., 15 Pa. St. 247; State v. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, 47 Wis. 670; Pitcher v. Chicago Board of Trade, 121 Ill. 412; Barrows v. Massachusetts Medical Soc., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 402; Gregg v. Massachusetts Medical Soc., 111 Mass. 185; 15 Am. Rep. 24; Burt v. Grand Lodge, 44 Mich. 208.

2. Witherington's Case, 1 Keb. 2; Middleton's Case, Dyer 333a; Rex v. Liverpool, 2 Burr. 732; Earle's Case, Carthew 173; Rex v. Mayor, etc., 2 Ld. Raym. 1564; Rex v. Chalke, 1 Ld. Raym. 225; State v. Georgia Medical Soc., 38 Ga. 608; 95 Am. Dec. 408; Savannah Cotton Exchange v. State, 54 Ga. 668; Evans v. Philadelphia Club, 50 Pa. St. 107; Sweeney v. Ben. Soc., 14 W. N. C. (Pa.) 466; Com. v. St. Patrick's Ben. Soc., 2 Binn. (Pa.) 441; 4 Am. Dec. 453; Soc. for Visitation of Sick v. Com., 52 Pa. St. 125; 91 Am. Dec. 139; Com. v. German Soc., 15 Pa. St. 251; Com. v. Guardians of Poor, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 469; State v. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, 20 Wis. 68; State v. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, 47 Wis. 670; People v. Medical Society, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 570; People v. St. Francis Ben. Soc., 24 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 216; People v. New York Ben. Soc., 3 Hun (N. Y.) 361; People v. American Institute, 44 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 468; People v. New York Cotton Exch., 8 Hun (N. Y.) 216; State v. Union Merchants' Exchange, 2 Mo. App. 96; People v. Mechanics' Aid Soc., 22 Mich. 86; Medical, etc., Soc. v. Weatherly, 75 Ala. 248; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 26; Delacy v.

Neuse River Nav. Co., 1 Hawk. (N. Car.) 274; 9 Am. Dec. 636.

But in a few cases where the right of membership was said to be of no pecuniary value, the visitatorial power of the courts has been denied and this relief withheld. See State v. Grand Lodge, 8 Mo. App. 148; People v. Chicago Board of Trade, 80 Ill. 134; Hatch v. City Bank, 1 Rob. (La.) 470. See State v. Slavonska Lipa, 28 Ohio St. 665.

3. In Burt v. Grand Lodge, 66 Mich. 85, Campbell, C. J., said: "The only ground on which this court can interfere with organized bodies by mandamus in aid of a member is that, as corporations, they are subject to our judicial oversight to prevent their depriving members of corporate privileges illegally. Where such bodies are not corporations, or where the question presented does not involve tangible and valuable corporate privileges, we cannot interfere in this way. A person who is wronged, if he has a legal cause of action, may pursue it in the appropriate action for damages against the person who wronged him, but mandamus cannot lie."

In Fritz v. Muck, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 69, Merwin, J., said: "Coming to the merits of the case, the question is whether the propriety of the expulsion of plaintiff can be reviewed here, and if so, whether it was proper. Cases are cited showing that the proper remedy is by mandamus where parties seek restoration to the membership of a corporation. (People v. New York Ben. Soc., 3 Hun (N. Y.) 361, and cases cited.) This does not, I think, apply to an unincorporated association. (See White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 358.)" See also Merrill on Mandamus, § 157.

4. In Otto v. Journeymen Tailors' Protective, etc., Union, 75 Cal. 308, an member of such association who is threatened with wrongful expulsion may invoke the equitable power of the court by injunction to restrain the association from the commission of the wrongful act of expulsion, if he has property rights involved and no adequate remedy at law for the threatened injury;¹ or, if the resolution of expulsion has been passed, he may in such case have an injunction to prevent its being carried into execution.²

If one who has been wrongfully expelled from such voluntary association does not wish to seek restoration to membership therein, he may bring an action against the association to recover his damages.³ But he may not have both forms of relief; if he enforces his remedy in the recovery of damages, the court will not interfere to restore him to membership.⁴

IX. FURNISHING QUOTATIONS.—It has been held that an unincorporated Stock Exchange is under no obligation to furnish quotations of prices to the public, and may furnish or refuse to furnish information of the business transactions on its floor to such persons or companies as it sees fit.⁵

unincorporated society was compelled by mandamus to reinstate an expelled member. See 3 Deering's California Code (1885), § 1085.

1. Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571; Powell v. Abbott, 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 231; Hutchinson v. Lawrence, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 38; Heath v. Gold Exchange, 7 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 251. See also Lutheran Evangelical Church v. Gristgau, 34 Wis. 328; Riddell v. Harmony Fire Co., 8 Phila. (Pa.) 310; Harmstead v. Washington Fire Co., 8 Phila. (Pa.) 331; Knights of Pythias Case, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 452; Metropolitan Base Ball Club v. Simmons, 17 W. N. C. (Pa.) 153; Brunnenmeyer v. Buhre, 33 Ill. 183; Fisher v. Keane, 41 L. T. 335; Lambert v. Addison, 46 L. T. 20; Lyttelton v. Blackburn, 33 L. T., N. S. 641. In Illinois, the decisions are otherwise. See Waugelin v. Goe, 50 Ill. 463; Menard v. Hood, 68 Ill. 122; Fisher v. Chicago Board of Trade, 80 Ill. 85; Baxter v. Chicago Board of Trade, 83 Ill. 146; Sturges v. Chicago Board of Trade, 86 Ill. 441; Pitcher v. Chicago Board of Trade, 121 Ill. 412. But see State v. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, 47 Wis. 670, for a review and criticism of the Illinois cases. And see supra, this title, Expulsion of Members—Power to Expel.

2. Kuehnemundt v. Smith, 2 N. Y. Supp. 625; White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 329; Lewis v. Wilson, 121 N.

Y. 284; Rorke v. Russell, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 244; In re St. James Club, 2 D. M. & G. 383; 16 Jur. 1075; Hopkinson v. Marquis of Exeter, L. R., 5 Eq. 63; Labouchere v. Wharnccliffe, 13 Ch. Div. 346.

3. In Sewell v. Ives, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 54. Speir, J., said: "Although the plaintiff is a suspended member of the New York Exchange, it having been held and decided by this court that his alleged expulsion therefrom was void and of no effect, it clearly follows that the sale of his seat by the board having been made solely upon the ground of his wrongful expulsion, the Exchange have become by that act responsible to the plaintiff for any injury or damage done thereby." See also Washington Ben. Soc. v. Bacher, 20 Pa. St. 425; Burt v. Grand Lodge, 66 Mich. 85; Fritz v. Muck, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 69.

4. State v. Slavonska Lipa, 28 Ohio St. 665.

5. Commercial Tel. Co. v. Smith, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 494, a case determined in the first department of the general term of the New York Supreme Court, in 1888.

In Wilson v. Commercial Tel. Co. (Supreme Court), 3 N. Y. Supp. 636; 18 N. Y. St. Rep. 78, a special term case, decided also in 1888, Brown, J. said: "We come, therefore, to the real question in the case, which is, Does any public duty rest upon the New York Exchange to make known the prices of securities dealt in by members on its floor? The direct authorities upon this question are few. With the exception of the decisions that have been made in the litigation between the parties to this action, the only direct authorities to which I have been referred, or which I have been able to find, arose in the state of Illinois. In two cases in the circuit court of that state it has been decided that the Chicago Board of Trade could not exercise any discrimination as to who should receive its market quotations, or as to what telegram companies should be allowed facilities for distributing the information to the public. Stock Exchange v. Telegraph Co., reported in note to Bryant v. Telegraph Co., 17 Fed. Rep. 830; Murphy v. Board, 20 Chicago Leg. N. No. 7. But in the case of Stock Exchange v. Board, in the appellate court of the first district of that state, directly the opposite was held, and an injunction against the board of trade was dissolved, the court holding that the board of trade was a private corporation, in whose affairs no one was especially interested except its members, and that it had the right of discrimination in the distribution of its market reports. This decision affirmed an order of Justice Bagby, dissolving an injunction against the board of trade, and must be regarded as overruling the decision of Justice Collins in the Murphy Case, and Chancellor Tuley in Stock Exchange v. Telegraph Co. See Const. Illinois, art. 11, § 6; 1 Gen. St., p. 702, § 28. To the same effect are the decisions of the circuit court of the United States. Bryant v. Western Union Tel. Co., 17 Fed. Rep. 825; Stock Exchange v. Board, 15 Fed. Rep. 847; Stock Exchange v. Western Union Tel. Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 25. In these cases it was held that the board of trade was a private corporation, and could give or withhold from the public its transactions, and that it might give the transactions to the public through such agents or upon such conditions as the board may deem advisable. In this state we have the decision of Justice Dykman, made on granting the temporary injunction in this action, against the Stock Exchange, holding the doctrine of the public character of the business of the Exchange, and its duty to make public its transactions; and the decision of the general term of the first department, in the case of Commercial Tel. Co. v. Smith, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 494, holding the contrary doctrine, and that there was no duty on the defendant to make known the transactions taking place on its floor. The weight of judicial authority is thus adverse to the plaintiff's claim. The cases in the circuit court of Illinois, and also the decision of Justice Dykman, were based on the doctrine of Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 130, in which it was held that property, when used in a manner to make it of public consequence and affect the community at large, became clothed with a public interest, and might be controlled by the public for the common good, and the plaintiff's whole argument is based on the doctrine in this case. I am unable to see how Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 130, has any application to the question involved in this case. That case arose under the statute of Illinois regulating the use of elevators and warehouses in the city of Chicago, and which was enacted pursuant to the general police power of the legislature. The question presented to the court was as to the constitutionality of that law. But we are not dealing with any legislation in reference to the Stock Exchange or its property. . . . In the absence of any act of the legislature regulating the stock business, or imposing any public duty upon the New York Stock Exchange, we must therefore be guided solely by the common law in determining the rights and obligations of the parties; and I think it will not be disputed that, if any duty rests upon the Stock Exchange to make public the ruling price of transactions on its floor, such duty must be found either in the character of the organization or in the nature of the business there transacted."

Competency of Quotations as Evidence.

—The published reports of sales by the Stock Exchange Board are not competent evidence to show the market value of shares of stock at a given time, unless accompanied by evidence showing or tending to show in what manner the reports were made up. Vogt v. Cope, 66 Cal. 31.

Incorporated Boards of Trade, etc.—

Metropolitan Grain, etc., Exch. v. Chicago Board of Trade, 15 Fed. Rep. 847; Bryant v. Western Union Tel. Co., 17 Fed. Rep. 825, and Marine Grain, etc., Exchange v. Western Union Tel. Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 23, seem

X. RULES AND REGULATIONS—1. Right to Adopt.—The Stock Exchange, in common with other voluntary associations, has a right to adopt a constitution and by-laws, and to make such rules and regulations concerning the conduct of its business as it may see fit, provided there is nothing in them which is unreasonable or contrary to law, and the members are bound by them as the laws of the body after they are regularly adopted.¹ No member, to put boards of trade, although incorporated, upon the same basis as to their duties to the public in this respect as the Stock Exchange. But the Supreme Court of Illinois in New York, etc., Grain, etc., Exch. v. Chicago Board of Trade, 127 Ill. 153, which is later than Wilson v. Commercial Tel. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 3 N. Y. Supp. 636, note 1, supra, expressly denies the power of the board of trade to make discriminations against individuals when once it has undertaken to furnish quotations to the public. The court said: "Assuming these market quotations and reports are property, and the private property of the board of trade, yet if they have been so used by the board, and by the telegraph companies with the knowledge and consent of the board, as to become affected with a public interest, then they are subject to such public regulation by the legislature and the courts as is necessary to prevent injury to such public interest. The doctrine in question has application both to the property of individuals and of corporations, and it is therefore immaterial that any such corporation may be a mere private corporation. . . . The question here is not one of withholding altogether instantaneous quotations and information respecting the prices at which grain and provisions are being sold upon the market of the exchange, nor one of discriminating between its own members and such persons as are not members, in giving such information. Before the board itself assumed to control the sending of this news, no discrimination was made in distributing it between those who were and those who were not members of the board, and since the change was made, a very large proportion of the approved correspondents are not members, and the rule contemplates that persons other than members should be such correspondents. The question is, can the board so conduct its affairs for a long term of years as to create a standard market for agricultural products, and acting in concert or combination with the telegraph companies, build up a great system for the instantaneous and continuous indication of that market and its fluctuations, until the public and all persons dealing in such products conform their business to this system, and until, by the usage and custom of merchants, thus advanced by the methods adopted by the board and telegraph companies, such instantaneous market quotations become necessary to the successful and safe transaction of business, and until such system has become impressed and affected with a public interest, and then be allowed to discriminate between persons and parties, and, where all alike are willing to conform to reasonable rules and requirements, and pay for the information desired, say that one shall and another shall not have such information. If the board has such right, and these corporations are lawfully permitted so to do, then they have the power to create monopolies, and dictate who shall deal in the agricultural products of the country, and at will impoverish or enrich merchants, shippers and producers. . . . We do not wish to be understood as holding that the board of trade is bound, by law, to continue the business of collecting and furnishing to the public market quotations, or that it may not voluntarily abandon such business; but we hold that so long as it continues to carry it on, either directly or indirectly, it must do so without unjust discrimination as to persons, and must furnish market quotations to all who may desire to obtain them for lawful purposes, and upon the same terms." And see note by Adelbert Hamilton to Bryant v. Western Union Tel. Co., 17 Fed. Rep. 828.

1. Hyde v. Woods, 94 U. S. 523; Thompson v. Adams, 93 Pa. St. 55; Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571; Singerly v. Johnson, 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 541; Leech v. Leech, 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 542, note; Evans v. Wister, 1 W. N.

however, is thus bound unless such laws have received his personal assent;¹ but such assent need not be expressed; it may be implied from the circumstances, such as his admission to membership and acting as a member.²

Such associations in enforcing their laws act in a capacity analogous to that of arbitrators chosen by the parties. They will be held to a fair and impartial administration of their rules.³ And in case such rules are contrary to established legal principles, the courts will declare them void and without binding effect upon the members, notwithstanding their personal assent thereto.⁴

2. Members as Preferred Creditors.—The seat of a member, as has been seen,⁵ is a species of property, but the member is not the unqualified owner of it. His ownership is subject to the condi-

C. (Pa.) 181; Moxey v. Philadelphia Stock Exchange, 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 441; affirming 37 Leg. Int. 82; Hibernia F. Engine Co. v. Com., 93 Pa. St. 264; Hochreiter's Appeal, 93 Pa. St. 479; Com. v. St. Patrick's Ben. Soc., 2 Binn. (Pa.) 442; 4 Am. Dec. 453; White v. Brownell, 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 162; Weston v. Ives, 97 N. Y. 222; Belton v. Hatch, 109 N. Y. 593; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 365; 4 Am. St. Rep. 495; Lewis v. Wilson, 121 N. Y. 284; affirming 50 Hun (N. Y.) 166.

"Individuals who form themselves together into a voluntary association for a common object may agree to be governed by such rules as they think proper to adopt, if there is nothing in them in conflict with the law of the land, and those who become members of the body are presumed to know them, to have assented to them, and they are bound by them." Daly, J., in White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 359; citing Innes v. Wylie, 1 C. & K. 262; 47 E. C. L. 255; Brancher v. Roberts, 7 Jur. N. S. 1185; Hopkinson v. Marquis of Exeter, London Times, Dec. 21, 1867, L. R., 5 Eq. Cas. 63. See also People v. Chicago Board of Trade, 80 Ill. 134; Baxter v. Chicago Board of Trade, 83 Ill. 146; Sturges v. Chicago Board of Trade, 86 Ill. 441; State v. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, 47 Wis. 670; Grosvenor v. United Soc. of Believers, 118 Mass. 96; Venable v. Baptist Church, 25 Kan. 177; State v. Williams, 75 N. Car. 134; Note to Austin v. Searing, 69 Am. Dec. 672; Master Stevedores' Assoc. v. Walsh, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 1.

1. Austin v. Searing, 16 N. Y. 112; 69 Am. Dec. 665; Heath v. Gold Exchange, 7 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 251.

2. White v. Brownell, 2 Daly (N. Y.) 329; Palmyra v. Morton, 25 Mo. 593; Innes v. Wylie, 1 C. & K. 262; 47 E. C. L. 255; Brancher v. Roberts, 7 Jur. N. S. 1185; Hopkinson v. Marquis of Exeter, L. R., 5 Eq. 63.

Amendments to the constitution and by-laws adopted in the regular way after one becomes a member are binding on him whether he was present at the time of their adoption or not. MacDowell v. Ackley, 93 Pa. St. 277.

The Gratuity Fund.—In MacDowell v. Ackley, 93 Pa. St. 277, it was held that, with the loss of full membership, one's right to the gratuity fund of the Stock Exchange fell with it during his life, and there was nothing to transmit to his personal representatives.

3. Hutchinson v. Lawrence, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 38, citing Sharpe v. Bickerdike, 3 Dow 102; Wood v. Woad, L. R., 9 Exch. 194; Thorburn v. Barnes, L. R., 2 C. P. 384; Capel v. Child, 2 C. & J. 558; In re Plews, 6 Q. B. 845; 51 E. C. L. 845; Oswald v. Grey, 24 L. J., Q. B. 69; Walker v. Frobisher, 6 Ves. 69; Drew v. Drew, 2 McQueen H. L. Cas. 1; Fisher v. Keane, 11 Ch. Div. 353. See infra, this title, Expulsion of Members.

4. Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571; Kent v. Woodhull, 55 N. Y. Super Ct. 311; Hutchinson v. Lawrence, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 38; Phillips v. Wickham, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 590; People v. New York Ben. Soc., 3 Hun (N. Y.) 361; State v. Union Merchants' Exchange, 2 Mo. App. 96; Pulford v. Fire Department, 31 Mich. 458; State v. Williams, 75 N. Car. 134.

5. See supra, this title, Seats.

tions prescribed in the rules and regulations of the Exchange which constitute and define his contract of membership, and the proceeds of his seat may be applied first to the payment of his debts to fellow-members. Such a rule is not contrary to the established principles of law or opposed to public policy, and therefore may be enforced.¹ This rule has been enforced even against an outside creditor, who had furnished money to buy the seat and was in a sense the equitable owner of it, on the ground that the members of the Exchange knew no one in the transaction except the sitting member and gave him credit as the owner of the seat.² And if in the course of dealing which leads to a member's insolvency he is guilty of such misconduct as results in his expulsion under the rules of the Exchange, it has been held

1. In Hyde v. Woods, 94 U. S. 523, this question came before the Supreme Court of the United States. In the course of the opinion, Miller, J., said: "It is very ingeniously argued by counsel for the assignee, that, being property of the bankrupt, he had no right to make the disposition of it which he did, by preferring his creditors who were members of the board to those who were not. The answer to this, so far as Fenn's assignment to defendants is concerned, is, that the part of it which gives this direction to the proceeds of the sale was wholly unnecessary and nugatory; for if the article of the association which we have cited in full was effective, it controlled the disposition of those proceeds; if it is void, or for any other reason ineffectual, then it must be conceded that the assignment of Fenn was an unlawful preference within the meaning of the bankrupt law. The question turns solely upon the validity of that article of the association. There is no reason why the Stock Board should not make membership subject to the rule in question, unless it be that it is a violation of some statute, or of some principle of public policy. It does not violate the provision of the bankrupt law against preference of creditors, for such a preference is only void when made within four months previous to the commencement of the bankrupt proceedings. Neither the bankrupt law nor any principle of morals is violated by this provision, so far as we can see. A seat in this board is not a matter of absolute purchase. Though we have said it is property, it is incumbered with conditions when purchased, without which it could not be obtained. It never was free from the conditions of article 15, neither when Fenn bought, nor at any time before or since. That rule entered into and became an incident of the property when it was created, and remains a part of it into whose hands soever it may come. As the creators of this right—this property—took nothing from any man's creditors when they created it, no wrong was done to any creditor by the imposition of this condition. The fundamental vice of plaintiff's argument is to treat the case as though Fenn, owning this property absolutely as his own without restriction, had then fettered it, of his own accord, with the condition that it must always stand incumbered by a preferred lien to his fellow members." The same rule is upheld in the courts of Pennsylvania. Evans v. Wister, 1 W. N. C. (Pa.) 181; Leech v. Leech, 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 542, n.; Singerly v. Johnson, 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 541; Thompson v. Adams, 93 Pa. St. 55; Moxey v. Philadelphia Stock Exchange, 9 W. N. C. (Pa.) 440.

2. In Thompson v. Adams, 93 Pa. St. 66, the court said: "The plaintiff below was not a member, but had furnished the money by which Richards obtained a seat. His contention is that he was the equitable owner of the seat, and had title to what was received for it, and that the defendant had no right to apply the proceeds to debts due by Richards to other members in pursuance of the terms of the constitution of the club. But why not? Richards was the member of the board, the legal owner of the seat, and the plaintiff an entire stranger, unknown to the association. The members gave credit to each other in part, that neither he nor his assignee is entitled to receive even the surplus of the proceeds of his seat after payment of his debts to his fellow-members.¹ But if the Exchange wrongfully expels a member and disposes of his seat, it is liable for the proceeds thereof, and the payment of his debts to his fellow-members may not be shown in mitigation of damages.² Authority for this preference in favor of a fellow-member of an insolvent broker must be sought in the constitution and laws of the association, and where such laws make exceptions of certain classes of debts the courts will also exclude them in the application of the rule.³

no doubt, upon the faith of the liability of a member's seat to them for his debts. There is nothing unlawful or unreasonable in this regulation. The seat is not property in the eye of the law, it could not be seized in execution for the debts of the members. It is the mere creation of the board, and, of course, was to be held and enjoyed with all the limitations and restrictions which the constitution of the board chose to put upon it."

1 In Belton v. Hatch, 109 N. Y. 503; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 365; 4 Am. St. Rep. 495, Gray, J., said: "The plaintiff, appellant, contends that in such a case as this of Des Marets' severance from membership, there was no power under the constitution to distribute the proceeds arising from the sale of his membership, and that, in the absence of some express reservation of the right to dispose of those proceeds, they are the property of the member. The vice in plaintiff's argument is in the assumption that a member has any absolute property of his own in such a case. As we have before seen, the rules of the association were an incident to the rights acquired by a person upon admission; and one of those rules was that for conviction of an offense against or under the laws of the Exchange, a suspended member might be deprived of right to readmission to membership. When expelled he ceases to have any interest in the association. His privilege to transact his business at that place has been lost. The association may fill the vacancy caused by his expulsion, or not, as they please. They can be compelled to do so; but if they elect to admit a new member, and can derive, from so doing, any profit, that is their unquestionable right, with the exercise of which others are not concerned. They may do with their own as they like. As I construe section 2 of article 13, above cited, its effect is that of an express reservation of the right to deprive a member, found guilty of an offense under its provisions, of all rights, interest and claim whatever. The right is given to a member in good standing to propose for admission in his stead some one acceptable to the committee on admissions, and any profit he derives from his negotiations with the candidate is his. So if a member becomes honestly insolvent and fails to qualify under the rules for readmission, or if he dies, after the claims of the association are discharged, the proceeds may be paid to him or his legal representatives, as the case may be. But in the case of a member, who, by misconduct cognizable by the laws of the association, forfeits his right to continue to remain a member, there is reserved by the constitution the right to dispose of his membership. These rules are reasonable and do not contravene any rule of public policy, and having been consented to by the plaintiff's assignor, deprived him of any interest or rights in the association, of which he has ceased to be a member."

2 Sewell v. Ives, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 54.

3. In Weston v. Ives, 97 N. Y. 222, the following provision of the New York Stock Exchange was before the court: "If any suspended member fails to settle with his creditors within one year from the time of his suspension, his membership shall be disposed of by the committee on admissions and the proceeds paid pro rata to his creditors in the Stock Exchange." This was qualified by an amendment which was passed before the suspension of the plaintiff's assignor as follows: "No difference growing out of a claim on a put or call notified for and reduced to a contract after failure, will be recognized as entitled to a distributive share of the proceeds of a membership" The court said: "That provision seems to be a perfect answer to the defendant's claim. It forms part of the agreement of Weston's membership. It is not controverted that every debt in question grew out of transactions on 'puts and calls,' that none of them were notified or reduced to a contract before his failure, but all afterward and after notice of that failure to the Stock Exchange. We do not find it necessary to consider whether such contracts are valid or not. It is immaterial. The provisions of the constitution and the laws of the association are obligatory upon the parties as a contract. By their terms and his membership, Weston assented to the appropriation of his property in a particular way, and to certain debts to the exclusion of others. It is by that assent only that the defendant had power to convert his property into money, and no application can be made of it to which he has not in like manner assented."

The rule by which members of the Exchange are preferred to outside creditors of a defaulting member, is not always confined to the application of the proceeds of such member's seat or membership. The fund arising from the closing of a defaulting member's transactions on exchange, and the payment of differences in his favor by his fellow-members with whom he has made winning contracts, may also, under the rules of the Exchange, be applied to the payment of his debts to his fellow-members in preference to those he owes to outside creditors.¹

1. In Nicholson v. Gooch, 5 El. & Bl. 999, 85 E. C. L. 999, it appeared that one Lodge was a member of the London Stock Exchange, and that he became insolvent and contemplated bankruptcy; that he was declared a defaulter on exchange and the official assignees of the Exchange proceeded to close his transactions and collected the differences due him from other members of the Exchange and paid out a large portion of the funds so collected to other members to whom he owed differences. He subsequently went into bankruptcy, and the assignees in bankruptcy sued to recover this fund as a part of the bankrupt estate. The court held that they could not recover, on the grounds that the official assignees had paid over a portion of the fund bona fide before the act of bankruptcy, and that as to the rest of the funds it appeared that the transactions were illegal, and the assignees in bankruptcy could not have collected it if the official assignees of the Exchange had not done so. But Cotton, Lord Justice, took occasion to remark: "Without reference to the illegality of paying or receiving differences and treating the case as if the contracts were merely illegal and void, and assuming that the differences might legally be received for the use of the bankrupt, I am not satisfied by the evidence that the differences in question were so received in the present case as to fall within the principle contended for. The money seems to me rather to have been received under an adverse claim to receive and distribute according to the rules of the Stock Exchange by reason of the bankrupt having become a member subject to such rules, than by virtue of any such new directions or authority from the bankrupt to receive and distribute, as the plaintiff insists might be inferred from the evidence to have been the authority under which the defendant acted in receiving the differences. And if he received them under such adverse claim, then I should be disposed to think that the defendant would not be estopped from setting up that the bankrupt had no legal right to or property in the money by reason of illegality or otherwise. If it were necessary for the decision of the case, I should be disposed to think that the plaintiff's case failed on this ground also, and I quite agree that there should be judgment for the defendant."

Ex parte Grant, 13 Ch. Div. 667, is another case in which this question arose, and this time it was held by the court that the funds received by the official assignees of the Stock Exchange upon a settlement of differences due to the defaulting member, being an artificial fund created by the rules

But the application of this rule must be confined to the distribution of the proceeds of property of which the defaulting member's ownership is subject to the rules of the Stock Exchange, or to funds which owe their existence to the enforcement of such rules. The general estate of a bankrupt or insolvent member may not be distributed among his creditors on exchange in preference to his outside creditors.¹

3. The Arbitration Clause—a. IN GENERAL.—The constitutions and by-laws of Stock Exchanges and other voluntary associations provide for domestic forums before which violations of their laws and regulations are inquired into and certain matters of dispute among the members are investigated and determined. Each member on joining the association agrees to support the constitution and abide by the rules and regulations of the body, and the of the Stock Exchange, did not form part of the assets of the defaulter's estate and did not pass to the trustee in bankruptcy. Cotton, Lord Justice, said: "Many matters have been discussed upon which it would not be right to give an opinion, because all that we have to consider is whether the trustee in bankruptcy can obtain from the official assignee of the Stock Exchange, as he is called, the fund in question. And it seems to me that that question is shortly disposed of in this way: The fund was an artificial one which never belonged to the bankrupt but has been created by the rules of the Stock Exchange for a particular purpose, and only has an existence for the purpose of being dealt with in a peculiar way. What is to be done with any surplus after that purpose has been satisfied is another question. But the trustee wants to take from the official assignee of the Stock Exchange a fund created for a particular purpose without applying it to that particular purpose. In my opinion he is not entitled to do that."

1. In Ex parte Saffery, 4 Ch. Div. 555, it appears that one Cooke, was a member of the London Stock Exchange, and having become financially embarrassed he gave formal notice to the secretary of the Exchange that he could not fulfill his engagements, and his failure was announced in the room in the usual way. At a meeting of his Stock Exchange creditors he announced that he had no creditors off exchange, and his creditors on exchange agreed to accept a composition, and he gave to the official assignees of the Exchange a check on the bank of England for five thousand pounds to be distributed among his Stock Exchange creditors, and the official assignees received the proceeds of the check. He was subsequently adjudged a bankrupt, and the trustee in bankruptcy moved that the official assignee might be ordered to pay to him the five thousand pounds received from the bankrupt. Mr. Registrar Pepys, on hearing the motion, held that the five thousand pounds was received before any act of bankruptcy; that the payment of it was not a fraudulent preference, and accordingly denied the motion with costs. The trustee in bankruptcy appealed to the high court of justice, and the decision of the Registrar was reversed. James, Lord Justice, said: "We are of opinion that that demand was lawfully and rightfully made by the trustee in bankruptcy, and upon this broad, general, and universal principle that any cessio bonorum made by an insolvent on the eve of bankruptcy for the benefit of some creditors to the exclusion of others, or any scheme or arrangement made for the distribution of the assets by such person otherwise than according to the provisions of the bankrupt law, is a plain and palpable fraud on the bankruptcy laws; a plain and palpable fraud upon the creditors who are excluded or disappointed or who are delayed or hindered thereby.

... It was suggested that this was done merely in obedience to the rules and regulations of the Stock Exchange. My answer to that is, that the Stock Exchange is not an Alsatia. The Queen's laws are paramount there, and the Queen's writ runs even into the decisions of the domestic forum having been provided for in the contract of membership are quasi judicial in their character and are analogous to awards made by arbitrators chosen by the parties.¹ As has been seen, when such a decision is arrived at after a fair and orderly trial in accordance with the laws of the association, and the matter investigated is within the jurisdiction of the domestic tribunal, the courts will generally refuse to interfere.²

b. LIMIT OF JURISDICTION.—But the jurisdiction of these bodies is confined to matters which arise out of transactions conducted by their members as members. They do not possess the power to compel the attendance of witnesses or to issue any compulsory process, and the law will not allow them to usurp the powers of the regularly constituted courts of justice. Therefore, if they assume to take cognizance of matters which the members have not agreed to submit to the arbitrament of the domestic forum, the courts may interfere by injunction to prevent their doing so,³ or may declare their decisions of no binding effect when sacred precincts of Capel Court." The official assignees of the Exchange appealed from this order to the House of Lords, and the case is reported sub nom. Tomkins v. Saffery, L. R., 3 App. Cas. 213. It was held that the rules of the Stock Exchange as to defaulting members of a body are the rules of a domestic forum which have no influence on the rights of those who are not amenable as members to the jurisdiction of that body, that they cannot therefore govern the rights of the general creditors of a defaulting member; and the order appealed from was affirmed with costs.

1. In Hutchinson v. Lawrence, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 53, the court said: "While these proceedings are not to be governed by the strict rules which apply to actions at law or suits in equity, or even perhaps by the rules which obtain in regard to arbitrations, there is, I think, a strong analogy between the principles which govern in arbitrations and those which relate to proceedings of this character."

In Heath v. Gold Exchange, 7 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 251, the court said: "Assuming that the plaintiffs in this action assented to the constitution of the Gold Exchange in such a manner as to establish a valid contract between them and the other members of the association, the question arises what binding force or effect has this 7th article (the arbitration clause) upon them? In my opinion the most that can possibly be claimed for it is that it should have the same force and effect as an agreement in writing made by persons to submit to the decision of one or more arbitrators a controversy existing between them."

In Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 576, it is said: "It is like an award made by a tribunal of the party's own choosing, for he became a member under and subject to the articles and conditions of the charter and of course to the provisions on this subject as well as others."

2. Lewis v. Wilson, 121 N. Y. 284; Hutchinson v. Lawrence, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 38; Heath v. Gold Exchange, 7 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 251; Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571. See supra, this title, Expulsion of Members, and cases cited.

3. Leech v. Harris, 2 Brewst. (Pa.) 571. Here a stock-broker of New York made complaint against the plaintiff to the board of brokers of Philadelphia that the plaintiff had sold him an interest in a tract of land and an interest in several leases of oil wells for sums largely in excess of their value; which sums he claimed to recover and required said board of brokers to take cognizance of his complaint, and through the aid of its machinery to coerce the plaintiff to pay the said sums to him on pain of suspension from the board. The board was proceeding to investigate the matter, and the court, on prayer of the the matters they have assumed to decide come before the court for judicial determination.¹ And if the association is incorporated, a mandamus may issue, in such case, to compel the restoration of a member to his rights.²

c. MAY NOT OUST THE COURTS OF JURISDICTION.—It is a well established principle of law that the courts will not enforce an agreement to arbitrate, except as a condition precedent to bringing an action.³ And a by-law of a voluntary association designed to enforce the arbitration of disputes among its members and prevent recourse to the courts of justice, being in the nature of such an agreement, is contrary to public policy, and void in so far as it is attempted to oust the courts of their jurisdiction.⁴

plaintiff, perpetually enjoined it from doing so. Peirce, J., said: "What the plaintiff really submitted to when he became a member of the board of brokers was that the board should take jurisdiction if he should refuse to comply with his stock contracts, not that they should have jurisdiction of his contracts touching houses, lands, leasehold estates, or farming interests. . . . I do not perceive that either by the law of the association, by the law of the land, or by submission to its jurisdiction, the board of brokers has acquired any right to arbitrate and settle the matters in dispute between the plaintiff and Reuben Manley, Jr. The courts of law are open to Mr. Manley to vindicate his rights and to reverse any wrongs done to him, but the board of brokers cannot erect itself into a tribunal for this purpose. The plaintiff has, in my opinion, a clear right to the protection of a court of equity. . . . Like every member of such an association, he (the plaintiff) is bound by the laws of the association to which he has assented in becoming a member and by the law of the land as affecting these associations, but not by an exercise of power on the part of his fellow-members to which he has not assented, or which is not derived from the law of the land." See also Hurst v. New York Produce Exchange, 100 N. Y. 605; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 362.

1. Morris v. Grant, 34 Hun (N. Y.) 377.

2. Com. v. St. Patrick's Ben. Soc., 2 Binn. (Pa.) 441; 4 Am. Dec. 453; State v. Union Merchants' Exchange, 2 Mo. App. 96.

3. Scott v. Avery, 8 Exch. 487; 25 L. J. Exch. 308; in error, 6 H. L. Cas. 811; Tredwen v. Holman, 31 L. J.

Exch. 308; Russell v. Pellegrini, 6 El. & Bl. 1020; 25 L. J. Q. B. 75; Hemans v. Picciotti, 1 C. B. N. S. 646; 87 E. C. L. 645; Braunstein v. Accidental Death Ins. Co., 31 L. J. Q. B. 17; Westwood v. Secretary of India, 1 W. R. 262; Elliott v. Royal Exchange Assur. Co., L. R., 2 Ex. 237; Sharp v. San Paulo R. Co., L. R., 8 Ch. 597; Dawson v. Fitzgerald, L. R., 1 Ex. Div. 257; Edwards v. Aberayron Mut. Ship Ins. Soc., 1 Q. B. Div. 563; Collons v. Locke, L. R., 4 App. Cas. 674; Smith v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 36 N. H. 458; Rowe v. Williams, 97 Mass. 163; Heath v. Gold Exchange, 7 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 251.

4. In State v. Union Merchants' Exchange, 2 Mo. App. 96, it appears that the relator had been suspended from the Union Merchants' Exchange of St. Louis in accordance with a by-law of that body, which compels members to submit their business controversies to arbitration on pain of suspension or expulsion. The court held the by-law unreasonable and void, and awarded a writ of mandamus to restore the relator to his rights and privileges in the Exchange. And after an elaborate review of authorities, the court said: "In view of the character and objects of this corporation and the manifest inconvenience to which every trader must necessarily be subject who is not permitted to join or is expelled from the chief mart of commerce in the place of which he is a citizen and a trader, we think a by-law compelling the members of the Union Merchants' Exchange to submit their controversies to arbitration on pain of suspension or expulsion, is unreasonable in the legal and technical sense of that term and that it cannot be sustained." And see Player v. Archer, 2

XI. THE CLEARING HOUSE.—An important feature of the Stock Exchange is the clearing house, through the agency of which much of the business of the brokers in respect to the delivery of shares of stock and payment for the same is carried on. At the close of each day, sheets, each of which contains the history of a broker's transactions on exchange for that day are sent to the clearing house. Each broker's clearing-house sheet contains a record of all the stocks bought and sold by him that day, together with the prices paid and received therefor. The clearing house acts as agent for all parties in making and accepting deliveries of stock, and also in the adjustment of the balances in cash to be paid and received by the members, respectively. If a broker's clearing-house sheet shows that he has bought and sold the same number of shares of any particular stock, his sheet is balanced as to that stock, and no actual delivery of the same is made by or to him. If it does not so balance, he delivers or accepts, as the case may be, an amount of the stock sufficient to make it balance. As in the delivery of shares, the clearing house acts also in the payment for them as a common and convenient agent. Each broker's transactions for the day are balanced on a cash basis, and if it appears that the aggregate price of his sales exceeds that of his purchases he is entitled to receive the amount of such excess in cash. If, on the contrary, the aggregate price of his purchases exceeds that of his sales, he must pay the amount of such excess in cash. Thus, it will be seen, that enormous transactions may be carried on with an actual manual delivery of but few stock certificates and the handling of comparatively small amounts of cash.¹

Sid. 121; London v. Bernardiston, 1 Lev. 16; Ballard v. Bennett, 2 Burr. 778; Middleton's Case, Dyer 333a; Dos Passos. Stock-brokers. etc., p. 78; note to Austin v. Scaring, 69 Am. Dec. 665.

1. Stock Exchange Clearing Houses.—In an article on "Stock Exchange Clearing Houses," by Alexander D. Noyes, in the Political Science Quarterly, vol. 8, No. 2, p. 252 et seq. (June, 1893), it is said: "The system of clearing houses for stocks is not new. It was adopted in the New York Stock Exchange only in the early months of 1892, but it has been in existence elsewhere for at least twenty-five years. . . . Ordinarily, in the first experiments, they took the form of the so-called 'ringing out' of contracts in the same security. By this plan if A had sold B a given amount of one security, and if B had presently sold the same amount to C, the series of trades could be personally adjusted between the three traders so that the only actual exchange required would be the transfer of the securities from A to C. Of course, the number of the traders in the series might be extended indefinitely, for the system did not require that the prices at which the trades were made should have been uniform.

. . . . The first official establishment of this kind in Europe was founded at the Handelskammer of Frankfort, May, 1867, principally for the purpose of dealing in government securities; United States bonds in particular. The Berlin Exchange adopted the system in 1869; Hamburg in 1870; Vienna in 1873, and London in 1876; The Paris Bourse, owing to its peculiar system of limitation on exchange membership, has never established a regular clearing house for stocks, but the same ends are attained by a voluntary comparison of accounts by brokers' representatives, similar in its general workings to the system of bank clearings. It should be noticed as the particular feature of the European stock clearing houses that their purpose is to

STOCKHOLDERS.—(See ASSOCIATION, vol. 1, p. 881; BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATIONS, vol. 2, p. 171; BUILDING ASSOCIATIONS, vol. 2, p. 604; COMPANY, vol. 3, p. 366; CORPORATION, vol. 4, p. 184; DISFRANCHISEMENT, vol. 5, p. 684; DIVIDEND, vol. 5, p. 725; FOREIGN CORPORATIONS, vol. 8, p. 329; JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES, vol. 11, p. 1036; MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS, vol. 14, p. 269; MINING COMPANIES, vol. 15, p. 613; NATIONAL BANKS, vol. 16, p. 143; OFFICERS (PRIVATE CORPORATIONS), vol. 17, p. 39; PARTNERSHIP, vol. 17, p. 824; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 775; RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES, vol. 20, p. 773; SOCIETIES AND CLUBS, vol. 22, p. 803; STOCK, vol. 23, p. 582; STOCK EXCHANGE, vol. 23, p. 748; ULTRA VIRES.)

I. Definition and Status, 779.

1. Who Are Stockholders, 779.
2. Evidence and Criteria of Membership, 782.
3. Status and Inter-relations, 783.

II. How Stockholders Become Such: The Contract of Subscription, 786.

1. Form, 786.
 - a. In General, 786.
 - b. Statute of Frauds; Writing or Parol, 789.
 - c. Subscriptions Delivered in Escrow, 790.
 - d. The English System, 791.
2. Consideration and Payment, 791.
 - a. General Doctrine, 791.
 - b. What May be Received in Payment, 794.
 - (1) In General, 794.
 - (2) Property, 795.
 - (3) Labor and Services, 796.
 - (4) Negotiable Paper, 796.
 - (5) Satisfaction of Debts, 797.

3. Parties to the Contract, 798.

- a. In General, 798.
- b. Other Corporations, 798.
- c. Who May Receive Subscriptions, 800.

4. Enforcement of the Contract, 801.

- a. Subscriber's Liability to Pay, 801.
- b. Calls and Assessments, 803.
 - (1) Definition, 803.
 - (2) When Calls Are Necessary, 804.
 - (3) Who May Levy Calls, 805.
 - (a) The Directors, 805.
 - (b) The Courts, 807.
 - (4) How Formulated, 808.
 - (5) Requisites and Validity, 808.
- (6) Notice, 810.
 - (a) Necessity, 810.
 - (b) Form, 811.
 - (c) Proof, 812.
 - (d) Specifications as to Payment—Time, Place, etc., 812.

deal with exchanges not of money but of securities. Their work is made up solely of a comparison of contracts to receive and to deliver securities between the brokers concerned. The principle is thus merely an extension of the 'ringing out' plan already described. In London, and in most of the continental cities, the scope of the clearing-house is made broader through the system of a fortnightly settlement of Stock Exchange accounts. . . . The clearing-house sheet of a broker comprises the record made up into 'receive' and 'deliver' columns of all his transactions for the day. As this sheet will ordinarily include trades in a considerable number of securities, the transactions in each separate security are to be grouped together. All transactions having been entered in one or the other column, the balance is struck. If the sheet as drawn up by the clearing-house shows a debit balance, the difference is entered as 'balance cheque,' and the sheet presented at the clearing-house must be accompanied by a check for the balance on a clearing-house association bank near Wall street, drawn to the order of the Stock Exchange Clearing-House's own bank. If, on the other hand, the sheet shows a credit balance, it must have with it a draft on the clearing-house's own bank for the amount of the difference."

- (7) Maturity, 813.
- (8) Interest, 813.
- (9) Limitations, 814.
- (10) Evidence, 815.
- (11) Calls After Transfer, 815.
- (12) Assessments Proper, 817.
- c. Actions and Remedies, 818.
 - (1) In General, 818.
 - (2) Forfeiture, 818.
 - (a) Nature, Origin and Authority, 818.
 - (b) How Exercised, 820.
 - (c) Notice, 821.
 - (d) Effect of Forfeiture—Deficiency, 822.
 - (e) Stockholder's Protective Remedies, 824.
 - (3) Application of Remedies, 826.
- d. Defenses, 827.
 - (1) Abandonment or Delay of Enterprise, 827.
 - (2) Charter Changes, etc., 828.
 - (3) Conditions Not Performed, 833.
 - (a) Conditional Subscriptions in General, 833.
 - (b) Validity of Conditions, 834.
 - (c) Common and Important Conditions, 837.
 - (1) Capital Stock to be Fixed, 837.
 - (2) Capital Stock to be Fully Subscribed, 838.
 - (a) Rule Generally Imperative—Exceptions, 838.
 - (b) How Performance Is Determined, 841.
 - (3) Percentage Required Down, 843.
 - (4) Consolidation (See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 272 i; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 775), 844.
 - (5) Fraudulent Representations (See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, pp. 255, 259; FALSE PRETENSES, vol. 7, p. 699; FRAUD, vol. 8, p. 635; OFFICERS (PRIVATE CORPORATIONS), vol. 17, p. 115), 844.

(6) Increase of Capital Stock (See STOCK—Increase, vol. 23, p. 582), 844.

(7) Irregular Organization (See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 197), 844.

(8) Mismanagement (See also ULTRA VIRES), 844.

(9) Mistake or Ignorance (See MISTAKE, vol. 15, p. 625), 845.

(10) Reduction of Capital Stock (See STOCK—Reduction, vol. 23, p. 582), 845.

(11) Release, 845.

(12) Set-off and Counter-Claim, 846.

(13) Statute of Limitations (See supra, this title, Calls and Assessments—Limitations; also LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 721), 847.

(14) Ultra Vires Acts (See ULTRA VIRES), 847.

(15) Miscellaneous Defenses, 847.

(16) Waiver of Defenses, 848.

III. Rights, Powers, and Prerogatives, 851.

1. In General, 851.

2. Legislative Rights (See BY-LAWS, vol. 2, p. 705; CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 211), 852.

3. Electoral Rights (See also CUMULATIVE VOTING, vol. 4, p. 954; OFFICERS (PRIVATE CORPORATIONS), vol. 17, p. 41), 852.

4. Right to Share in Distribution of New Stock, 853.

5. Right to Dividends, 855.

6. Right to Inspect Corporate Books (See PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS, vol. 19, p. 227), 855.

7. Right of Action (See, for actions by Stockholders, CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 280; actions against officers, see OFFICERS (PRIVATE CORPORATIONS), vol. 17, p. 172. See also ULTRA VIRES), 855.

8. Rights Upon Dissolution (See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 306), 855.

IV. Liability, 855.

1. Nature and Extent, 855.

a. Equitable or Subscription Liability, 855.

(1) The "Trust-Fund Doctrine," 855.

(a) In General, 855.

(b) Applications of the Doctrine, 858.

(1) Stock Issued for Overvalued Consideration, 858.

(2) Discounting Shares and Releasing Subscribers, 861.

(3) Effect of Increasing Stock, 864.

(4) Effect of Reduction, 866.

(5) The Rule in England, 866.

b. Additional or Statutory Liability, 867.

(1) In General, 867.

(2) Degrees, 867.

(a) Ordinary, 867.

(b) Proportional, 867.

(c) Double, 867.

(d) Unlimited, 868.

(3) Statutes Imposing, 868.

(a) Constitutionality, 868.

(b) Construction, 869.

(c) Constitutional Provisions, 870.

(4) Kinds, 870.

(a) Contractual, 870.

(1) Nature, 870.

(2) What Included, 871.

(a) Whether Damages Arising from Torts, 871.

(b) Debts Due Laborers, etc., 872.

(b) Penal, 873.

c. Partnership or Individual Liability, 875.

(1) Anie-Corporate Debts, 875.

(2) Abortive Corporations, 875.

(a) Defective Incorporation, 875.

(b) Unauthorized Incorporation, 878.

(3) Corporate Migration, 878.

(4) Fraud, 879.

(5) Miscellaneous Instances, 880.

2. Effect of Transfer, 880.

a. Upon Subscription Liability, 880.

b. Upon Statutory Liability, 884.

3. Enforcement, 885.

a. Judgment Against Corporation, 885.

b. Statute of Limitations, 888.

(1) When It Begins to Run, 888.

(a) Where Execution Against the Company Must be Returned Unsatisfied, 888.

(b) Where Stockholders May be Sued Immediately and Primarily, 888.

(2) Period of the Limitation, 889.

c. Enforcement of Statutory Liability in Foreign Jurisdictions, 890.

(1) In General, 890.

(2) Jurisdictions Where Liability Imposed by a Foreign Statute Will be Enforced, 891.

(3) Jurisdictions Where Liability Imposed by a Foreign Statute Will Not be Enforced, 892.

(4) Remedies Are Strictly Local, 894.

d. Remedies, 894.

e. Joinder of Parties, 896.

f. Death of Parties, 896.

g. Priority Among Creditors, 898.

(1) Where Actions by Individual Creditors Are Authorized, 898.

(2) Where Suits Are in Behalf of all Creditors, 898.

h. Contribution Between Stockholders (See CONTRIBUTION, vol. 4, p. 7, 899.

V. Termination of Membership (See DISFRANCHISEMENT, vol. 5, p. 684), 899.

I. DEFINITION AND STATUS—1. Who Are Stockholders.—A stockholder is one who holds membership in a corporation or joint-stock company by virtue of owning one or more shares of its stock.¹ In the United States the term is used synonymously

1. State v. Ferris, 42 Conn. 568; Marlborough Mfg. Co. v. Smith, 2 Conn. 579; Northrop v. Newtown, etc., Turnpike Co., 3 Conn. 544; Van Sands v. Middlesex County Bank, 26 Conn. 144; Ex parte Willcocks, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 402; In re Barker, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 509. These cases hold that the books and records of a corporation determine who are its stockholders for the time being and who have the right to vote on the stock, although the same may have been sold or pledged as collateral security; that in such cases the party who appears to be the owner on the books of the corporation, has the right to be treated as a stockholder, and to vote on whatever stock stands in his name.

In Worrall v. Judson, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 210, the defendant had sold the stock and transferred to the vendee a certificate of stock with his name indorsed thereon, but the stock continued to stand upon the books of the company in the name of the defendant, and it was held that he was liable as a stockholder for a debt contracted by the company.

In Ohio, where by statute the equitable owner of shares is considered a stockholder, one for whose benefit stock is held by another is liable the same as a registered member, for corporate debts. Lloyd v. Preston, 146 U. S. 630. One who transfers stock to the president of a corporation so that it may be wound up, remains the equitable owner. Thompson v. Stanley, 20 N. Y. Supp. 317.

One who was to pay cash for his shares but did not, and received no certificate, is not shown to be the owner by the mere fact of subscription. Bank of Yolo v. Weaver (Cal. 1892), 31 Pac. Rep. 100.

In Adlerly v. Storm, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 624, the court, by Bronson, J., observed: "The legislature has provided for the creation of the 'stock,' prescribed the mode in which it may be transferred, and conferred certain rights and liabilities upon the 'stockholders.' After the defendants had once become the legal owners they could only throw off the liabilities incident to that relation by transferring the stock. Until that was done they continued to be 'stockholders' within the meaning of the statute. If we depart from the terms of the law, and inquire into the equities which may exist between the stockholder and some third person, it cannot fail to embarrass creditors in seeking a remedy for the wrongs which may be done by the corporation. If creditors must look beyond the legal title, they can never know against whom to proceed. If the stock has been fraudulently transferred for the purpose of avoiding responsibility, and at the same time securing all the advantages of a stockholder, I do not intend to say that the real owner cannot be reached."

In Rosevelt v. Brown, 11 N. Y. 151, Edwards, J., delivering the opinion of the court, said: "A corporation, although it is an artificial existence, must be composed of natural persons, who manage and administer its affairs and receive its benefits. These persons are not generally named in the charter of incorporation, and there must be some way of ascertaining who they are. In a joint-stock company they are, and they necessarily must be, those who hold the evidence that they are the owners of the stock—they are called the stockholders and not the stock-owners, and they are generally those who appear upon the transfer books of the company to be stockholders. This must be so in the case of corporations which are subject to the provisions of the revised statutes. (1 N. Y. Rev. St. 604, § 8.) As between himself and third parties, the person who appears on the transfer books to be a stockholder may have parted with all his interest in the stock, but as between himself and the corporation such person, and he only, is treated as a stockholder."

A finding that parties are "stockholders" includes a finding that they have complied with the conditions precedent of membership. Arthur v. Clarke, 46 Minn. 491.

Instances.—One who has not paid his subscription in full is none the less a shareholder. Curry v. Scott, 54 Pa.

St. 276. Under the Ontario Joint Stock Letters Patent Act, those only are shareholders who are named in the letters patent and to whom stock is allotted. In re London S. P. Co., 16 Ont. App. 508.

The fact that a corporation recognizes a party as owner of stock and pays him dividends thereon, binds it to nothing in the future, and does not determine the right of the party in regard to the stock. Cady v. Potter, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 463.

Where the corporation is rechartered and stockholders accept the new organization, they become stockholders therein. Hammond v. Straus, 53 Md. 1.

"The right to become a shareholder does not make its possessor a shareholder," per Welch, C. J., in Burt v. Rattle, 31 Ohio St. 116, holding that issue of so-called preferred stock, convertible into common, did not make its holders members.

One whose stock has been forfeited for non-payment of calls, is not a stockholder within the meaning of section 10 of the General New York Railway Act of 1850, so as to render him liable to the creditors of the company for amounts unearned on the forfeited stock, though the debt was contracted before forfeiture. Miles v. Stewart, 41 N. Y. 384.

Parties who meet, adopt a plan of organization, elect officers, subscribe for some of the shares, and sign articles, are stockholders, though the articles are not recorded as the statute requires. Heald v. Owen, 79 Iowa 23.

Purchasers of stock, received and treated by the corporation as stockholders, become such, although the transfer was irregular. Murray v. Bush, L. R., 6 H. L. 37.

The mere fact that one is a director in a corporation does not make him liable as a stockholder under Gross' Illinois Stats., ch. 25, § 14. Steel v. Dunne, 65 Ill. 298.

Where the constitution of a charitable corporation provided that any person could, after signing the constitution, vote and be eligible to office, it was held, that where one was duly elected and paid dues for several years, the corporation could compel payment of dues, although he had never signed the constitution. United Hebrew Assoc. v. Benshimol, 130 Mass. 325.

Parties become stockholders under a contract to take stock though coupled with an option to resell to the corporation. Melvin v. Lamar Ins. Co., 80 Ill. 446; 22 Am. Rep. 199.

One who has a mere option to take stock but refuses, is not a stockholder, though a vice-president and one of the incorporators. Medler v. Albuquerque Hotel Co. (N. Mex. 1892), 28 Pac. Rep. 551.

Under the California statute, a person to whom stock has been issued as trustee without knowledge, is not a bona fide holder, and not a stockholder. Stuart v. Mahoney Min. Co., 54 Cal. 149.

But one who has received stock, and appears on the corporate books, will be held liable to creditors for the unpaid subscriptions, though in fact he is not the owner. Baines v. Babcock, 95 Cal. 581.

One who subscribes to an increase, which is never made, is not estopped to deny liability as a stockholder, because old stock has been transferred to him without his knowledge, and he has received dividends thereon. Stephens v. Follett, 43 Fed. Rep. 842; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 466.

The mere entry of a party's name on a list of stockholders by one authorized to subscribe for him, does not constitute such party a stockholder. Granger's Market Co. v. Vinson, 6 Oregon 172.

A stockholder is presumed to continue as such until the contrary is shown. Barron v. Paine, 83 Me. 312.

Where a corporation effects a loan by issuing stock indorsed "preferred," the contract stipulating that the holders, at the end of two years may become ordinary stockholders, or redeem their certificates, and they choose the latter plan, they are entitled to claim as bona fide creditors. Totten v. Tison, 54 Ga. 139.

Where one subscribed "subject always to the by-laws, rules and articles of incorporation," he was held to be a stockholder and liable to be called on for payment as the by-laws provided without regular assessment. Waukon, etc., R. Co. v. Dwyer, 49 Iowa 121.

Where the directors transfer charter without authority, and the stockholders participate in the company's affairs under the new management, they are estopped from denying the transfer and are stockholders. Upton v. Jackson, 1 Flipp. (U. S.) 413.

One who loaned money to a corpowith "shareholder,"¹ though the latter is less common, but in England the word shareholder is almost exclusively employed.² The terms "corporator,"³ "member,"⁴ and "subscriber,"⁵ are often used in senses closely approaching that of "stockholder," but are distinguishable from it by certain shades of meaning.

ration and received stock absolute on its face, was held to be liable as a stockholder. Griswold v. Seligman, 72 Mo. 110.

A gratuitous transferrer to trustees whose names he does not know, who pays the expenses of the transfer, the purpose of which is indefinite, is still a stockholder within the meaning of a statute authorizing service of process on such. Colorado Iron Works v. Sierra Grande Min. Co. (Colo. 1890), 32 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 201.

One who accepts and retains a certificate after paying face value therefor, cannot be heard to say that he intended the payment as a gift to the company, but will be held as a subscriber. McDowall v. Sheehan (N. Y. 1891), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 137.

Mere Pledges Are Not Stockholders.—"If the shares of stock are merely pledged by the assignment of the certificates, the holders would not be entitled to the rights, nor subject to the liabilities of the owners of the shares; they could only become owners by a sale and purchase of the stock pledged on failure of the pledgee to pay the debt." Nelson, J., in Becher v. Wells Flouring Mill Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 62.

"Where a person is merely in possession of bank stock as collateral security, and does not participate in the meetings of the stockholders, and is not recognized by the stockholders as a member, he is not such a part of the corporation as to be bound to have knowledge of the facts in possession of the corporation, or its officers as officials of such corporation." Horton C. J., in Baker v. Woolston, 27 Kan. 185. See also Merchants' Bank v. Cook, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 405; Baldwin v. Canfield, 26 Minn. 43; Ex parte Willcocks, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 402; McHenry v. Jewett, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 453; Butterworth v. Kennedy, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 143; Prouty v. Prouty, etc., Shoe Co. (Pa. 1893), 25 Atl. Rep. 1001; Columbia Bank v. Rogers, 10 Pa. Co. Ct. 61; McDaniels v. Flower Brook Mfg. Co., 22 Vt. 274.

But a pledgee to whom shares have been transferred on the books is liable to creditors as a stockholder. National Commercial Bank v. McDonnell, 92 Ala. 387.

1. "A shareholder in this country means the same thing as a stockholder, and the terms are used interchangeably to indicate one who owns stock in a corporation and has been accepted as a stockholder by the corporation." Cook on Stock and Stockholders (2d ed.), § 4.

2. See English joint stock company cases, and text-books on Company Law passim.

3. "Corporators exist before stockholders, and do not exist without them. When stockholders come in, corporators cease to be." Danforth, J., in Chase v. Lord, 77 N. Y. 11; 6 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 258.

Under the Illinois statute of 1861, to regulate the liabilities of the stockholders, the words "trustees" and "corporators" mean also stockholders. Shufeldt v. Carver, 8 Ill. App. 545.

4. The terms "member" and "corporator" are each broader in meaning than stockholder, and apply, as the latter does, not to persons belonging to non-trading corporations, or those without capital stock. The use of these terms interchangeably is a survival of the time when corporations were mere associations without fixed shares, and definite liability of members. See 1 Lindley on Partnership, p. 6, et seq.

5. "Subscriber" means one who has stipulated to pay, not one who has paid. Thames Tunnel Co. v. Sheldon, 9 D. & R. 278; 6 B. & C. 341.

A statute making "stockholders and members" liable for employees' services, does not include mere subscribers. Wheeler v. Thayer, 121 Ind. 64.

An averment that defendant "subscribed," is not sufficient where the statute provides for an action only against a "shareholder." Wolverhampton, etc., Co. v. Hawkesford, 6 C. B., N. S. 336; 95 E. C. L. 336.

A subscriber is a locus penitentiae holder. The association has a right to file its articles and he to withdraw.

2. Evidence and Criteria of Membership.—The books of the corporation are prima facie evidence of its membership,¹ but they are not conclusive.² As authentications of membership certificates of stock are usual and proper,³ but not essen-

Garrett v. Dillsburg, etc., R. Co., 78 Pa. St. 465.

One who gives a promissory note for a certain number of shares and takes a receipt from a corporation officer, stating that the note when paid will be in full for such shares, does not become a stockholder until the note matures and the certificate is issued; and such party will not be liable under the New York Act of 1848 for corporate debts contracted before he became a stockholder. Tracy v. Yates, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 152.

In England the terms "owners," "proprietors," and "subscribers" are sometimes used indiscriminately. See West London R. Co. v. Bernard, L. R., 3 Q. B. 873.

1. Corporate Books Prima Facie Evidence.—Semple v. Glenn, 91 Ala. 245; 24 Am. St. Rep. 894; Howard v. Glenn, 85 Ga. 238; 21 Am. St. Rep. 156; Coffin v. Collins, 17 Me. 440; Penobscot R. Co. v. Dummer, 40 Me. 172; 63 Am. Dec. 654; Whitman v. Granite Church, 24 Me. 236; Downing v. Potts, 23 N. J. L. 66; Lewis v. Glenn, 84 Va. 947; Vanderwerken v. Glenn, 85 Va. 9; In re St. Lawrence Steamboat Co., 44 N. J. L. 529; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 359; Hamilton, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Rice, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 157; Hoagland v. Bell, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 57; McHose v. Wheeler, 45 Pa. St. 32; Bank of Commerce's Appeal, 73 Pa. St. 59; Glenn v. Orr, 96 N. Car. 413; Haynes v. Brown, 36 N. H. 545; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Applegate, 21 W. Va. 172; Glenn v. McAllister, 46 Fed. Rep. 883; Glenn v. Liggett, 47 Fed. Rep. 472; Turnbull v. Payson, 95 U. S. 418; Rockville Turnpike, etc., Co. v. VanNess, 2 Cranch (C. C.) 449; Stephens v. Follett, 43 Fed. Rep. 842; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 466; Taylor v. Hughes, 2 Jones & L. (Ir. Ch.) 55.

In Rhode Island, a book purporting to be the record book of the company, containing entries authenticated in part by the secretary's signature and in part identified by the bookkeeper who copied them, is admissible. Congdon v. Winsor, 17 R. I. 236; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 199.

But such books have been held inadmissible in an action by a corporate creditor against a stockholder, on the ground that corporate books purporting to contain subscriptions were not per se evidence thereof. Mudgett v. Horrell, 33 Cal. 25.

When books have been lost, a certified copy of the recorded list of stockholders is prima facie evidence as to the ownership of the stock. Cleveland v. Burnham, 64 Wis. 347; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 221.

A paper containing none of the essentials required by the act of incorporation, though styled a register of shareholders, is not a sufficient evidence of membership. Wolverhampton, etc., Co. v. Hawksford, 7 C. B., N. S. 795; 97 E. C. L. 795. But the register may be evidence, though not authenticated. Cornwall, etc., Min. Co. v. Bennett, 5 H. & N. 432. And a requirement that the register be sealed within a certain time is directory merely; without such sealing a subscriber may be held liable for calls. Wolverhampton, etc., Co. v. Hawksford, 11 C. B., N. S. 456; 103 E. C. L. 456. Where the company is required to keep two registers which are to be prima facie evidence of membership, production of both is necessary, though either contains the list of members; but where the defendant is properly registered, it is no objection to the sufficiency of the evidence that other members are not. London, etc., R. Co. v. Fairclough, 2 M. & G. 674.

2. Mudgett v. Horrell, 33 Cal. 25; Chaffin v. Cummings, 37 Me. 76; Brewer's F. Ins. Co. v. Burger, 10 Hun (N. Y.) 56; Stephens v. Follett, 43 Fed. Rep. 842; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 466; Waterford, etc., R. Co. v. Pidcock, 8 Exch. 279.

Under the New York statute the court is warranted in going behind the entries in the transfer book to determine membership. Strong v. Smith, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 222.

3. Société Générale v. Walker, L. R., 11 App. Cas. 20. A certificate issued in the ordinary form, but containing a promise of the corporation to pay interest thereon until the happen-

tial.¹ The relation of the stockholder may be proved by parol,² and slight evidence thereof will be accepted.³ The admissions of a stockholder as to the number of shares held by him are competent,⁴ and in the absence of the stock book the treasurer may testify as to certificates issued by him.⁵

3. Status and Inter-relations.—The stockholders of a corporation do not stand in the relation of co-partners,⁶ nor of tenants in ing of a specified event, constitutes the person to whom it is issued a stockholder. McLaughlin v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 8 Mich. 100.

1. Certificates Not Essential.—Mitchell v. Beckman, 64 Cal. 117; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 49; Fulgam v. Macon, etc., R. Co., 44 Ga. 597; Corwith v. Culver, 69 Ill. 502; Dows v. Naper, 91 Ill. 44; Helm v. Swiggett, 12 Ind. 194; Beckett v. Huston, 32 Ind. 394; First Nat. Bank v. Gifford, 47 Iowa 575; Baker v. Woolston, 27 Kan. 185; Agricultural Bank v. Burr, 24 Me. 256; Agricultural Bank v. Wilson, 24 Me. 273; Chaffin v. Cummings, 37 Me. 76; Chester Glass Co. v. Dewey, 16 Mass. 94; 8 Am. Dec. 128; Ellis v. Essex Merrimac Bridge, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 243; Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Pearson, 128 Mass. 445; Minneapolis Harvester Works v. Libby, 24 Minn. 327; Chouteau Spring Co. v. Harris, 20 Mo. 382; Shaeffer v. Missouri Home Ins. Co., 46 Mo. 248; New Hampshire Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson, 30 N. H. 390; 64 Am. Dec. 300; Wheeler v. Walker, 45 N. H. 355; In re St. Lawrence Steamboat Co., 44 N. J. L. 529; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 359; Dennis v. Kennedy, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 517; Strong v. Smith, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 222; Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Dudley, 14 N. Y. 336; Johnson v. Albany, etc., R. Co., 40 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 193; Thorp v. Woodhull, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 411; Downer v. Zanesville Bank, Wright (Ohio) 477; Com. v. Woodward, 4 Phila. (Pa.) 124; Galveston City Co. v. Sibley, 56 Tex. 269; Turnbull v. Payson, 95 U. S. 418; Hawley v. Upton, 102 U. S. 314; Cecil Nat. Bank v. Watsontown Bank, 105 U. S. 214; Farrar v. Walker, 3 Dill. (U. S.) 506, note; Upton v. Burnham, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 431; Becher v. Wells Flouring Mill Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 62. Certificates are only secondary evidence of membership. Bank of Commerce's Appeal, 73 Pa. St. 59.

2. Chaffin v. Cummings, 37 Me. 76.

In Haynes v. Brown, 36 N. H. 545, it was held that the absence of the proper documentary evidence being accounted for, parol evidence that the defendant was present at the organization of the corporation, was elected, and acted as president, was competent evidence of his being a stockholder.

3. Upton v. Burnham, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 431.

4. Congdon v. Winsor, 17 R. I. 236; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 199.

5. Congdon v. Winsor, 17 R. I. 236; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 199.

6. Cook on Stock and Stockholders (2d ed.), § 4; Mickles v. Rochester City Bank, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 118; 42 Am. Dec. 103; Baker v. Backus, 32 Ill. 79 (holding that their liability is several, contingent, and does not extend to all matters); Coburn v. Wheelock, 34 N. Y. 440; Verplanck v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 84.

Subscription by stockholders does not contemplate the conduct of the business as a partnership, nor authorize trustees to contract debts or make advances on the credit of the stockholders. Shibley v. Angle, 37 N. Y. 626.

But payment by subscribers before they were obliged, under a resolution promising them proportionate dividends on anticipated payments, is not a loan to the corporation, but constitutes a partnership agreement, the consideration being the sharing in the profits, and not interest; such subscribers are liable for losses to the extent of the payment, even in the face of an express stipulation. Purton v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 3 La. Ann. 19.

An agreement under which a joint stock association was formed for mining coal, provided that two stockholders should receive from the profits of the first coal sent to market, $810 of the company's money, as compensation for excess in the value of the land contributed by them, over that given by others. Before any profits were realized all the lands were sold. It was held that the two were entitled to their $810, but that the other stockholders were not individually liable, common of the corporate property.¹ They occupy, however, a quasi trust relation which courts of equity will interfere to preserve. Thus, a majority will be restrained from oppressing a minority.²

The stockholders are not co-sureties for,³ nor creditors of,⁴ the corporation, nor does a fiduciary relation subsist between them.⁵ But as between the directors and the stockholders, the relation of trustee and cestui que trust exists.⁶ This doctrine, however, has reference only to the acts of the directors in connection with the unless they had received either proceeds or profits. Bainbridge v. Gehring, 3 W. Va. 240.

1. Mickles v. Rochester City Bank, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 113; 42 Am. Dec. 103. But until the issue of certificates, members own the stock in common and are jointly and severally liable for the corporate debts. Hawes v. Anglo Saxon Petroleum Co., 111 Mass. 200.

2. In re Importers, etc., Exchange, 2 N. Y. Supp. 257; Ervin v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 20 Fed. Rep. 577; and see infra, this title, Rights, Powers and Prerogatives.

3. Mokelumne Hill Canal, etc., Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 265; 73 Am. Dec. 658; Young v. Rosenbaum, 39 Cal. 646; Davidson v. Rankin, 34 Cal. 503. But stockholders who give a note for money loaned to the corporation, are co-sureties for it as between themselves; payment by one entitles him to contribution from the others, and their liability is not to be measured by the amount of stock owned by them. Coburn v. Wheelock, 34 N. Y. 440. So where directors are makers, whether payment by one is compulsory or voluntary. Slaymaker v. Gundacker, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 75.

An agreement between stockholders that notes should be made and indorsed by one or more of them from time to time, and that each should bear his proportion of any loss incurred thereby, is terminated as to any stockholder by his death, and his personal representatives are not liable. Helmer v. St. John, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 166.

An alternative agreement by certain stockholders to pay a corporate debt makes them sureties only, and does not cancel the debt. Home Nat. Bank v. Waterman (Ill. 1890), 29 N. E. Rep. 503.

4. Verplanck v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 84.

A preservation, therefore, by legislation, of the assets of a dissolved bank for the benefit of the creditors of the bank, does not operate in favor of stockholders, but indicates rather a legislative intent to exclude them and leave them to their fate at common law. Coulter v. Robertson, 24 Misa. 278; 57 Am. Dec. 168.

5. Karnes v. Rochester, etc., R. Co., 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 107; Gillett v. Bowen, 23 Fed. Rep. 625.

In Verplanck v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 84, McCoun, Vice-Chancellor, said: "The latter (referring to the corporation) is merely a creature of the law; a political, not a natural body, made up of the compact entered into by the stockholders, each of whom becomes a corporation, identified with, and forming a constituent part of, the corporate body. And, therefore, when we speak of stockholders and the incorporated company of which they are the components, we refer to one and the same collection of persons. How, then, can the relation of trustee and cestui que trust exist, for such a relation requires separate and distinct persons, or separate and distinct bodies to constitute it."

6. Williams v. Page, 24 Beav. 661; Benson v. Heathern, 1 Y. & Coll. 326; Robinson v. Smith, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 222; 24 Am. Dec. 212; Koehler v. Black River Falls Iron Co., 2 Black (U. S.) 715; Taylor v. Miami Exporting Co., 5 Ohio 162; 22 Am. Dec. 785; Verplanck v. Mercantile Ins. Co., 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 84; Cumberland Coal, etc., Co. v. Sherman, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 553; Bedford R. Co. v. Bowser, 48 Pa. St. 29; Hodges v. New England Screw Co., 1 R. I. 312; 53 Am. Dec. 624; Tippicanoe County v. LaFayette, etc., R. Co., 50 Ind. 85; Brinkerhoff v. Bostwick, 88 N. Y. 52; Chetlain v. Republic L. Ins. Co., 86 Ill. 220.

"The directors," observed Romilly, M. R., in York, etc., R. Co. v. Hudson, 19 Eng. L. & Eq. 365; 16 Beav. 485, "are persons selected to manage property held by the corporation itself, and to their management of its general affairs.¹

the business of the company for the benefit of the shareholders. It is an office of trust which, if they undertake, it is their duty to perform fully and entirely."

In Great Luxembourg R. Co. v. Magnay, 25 Beav. 586, the Master of Rolls says: "He (referring to the director of a joint stock company) is in point of fact not merely a director, but also fills the character of a trustee for the shareholders, and he is, in regard to all matters entered into in their behalf, to be treated as an agent. Therefore, there attaches to a director for the benefit of the shareholders all the liabilities and duties which attach to a trustee or agent. Accordingly, if a director enter into a contract for the company he may not personally derive any benefit from it."

In Scott v. Depeyster, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 513, it is said that persons who become directors or managers of the corporation place themselves in the situation of trustees, and the relation of trustees and cestui que trust is thereby created between them and the stockholders. The former are obliged to take the same care and use the same diligence as factors and agents. They are answerable not only for their own fraud and gross negligence, but also for all faults which are contrary to the care required of them.

In Bayliss v. Orne, Freem. ch. (Miss.) 161, the trust relation is asserted and applied to the case of an abuse of their trust by the directors, or waste or misapplication of the funds of the company.

Holding a fiduciary relation the directors cannot be permitted to acquire interests adverse to such relation. European, etc., R. Co. v. Poor, 59 Me. 277.

And any agreement to influence the action of the directors for the benefit of others, and to the prejudice of the corporation, cannot be upheld. Bliss v. Matteson, 45 N. Y. 22.

If the directors pay over the funds in their hands or in the treasury to an individual upon a pretended claim which they know or must be presumed to know, is wholly unfounded in law, it is a breach of trust on their part. Butts v. Wood, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 181; affirmed in 37 N. Y. 317.

The directors, not the corporate body, are the trustees, and should be parties to an action for the enforcement of the trust. Karnes v. Rochester, etc., R. Co., 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 107.

In Ex parte Bennett, 18 Beav. 339, the directors permitted a class of dissentient shareholders in an embarrassed company to transfer their shares to the company, under a power in the deed, upon payment of a sum of money which it was arranged should be paid to one of the directors in discharge of a debt due from the company. It was held that the transaction was void, and on the winding up of the company that the dissentients still remained shareholders; the relation of trustee and cestui que trust was assumed in the case, and the decision was put upon the ground that the director had obtained an undue advantage in securing the payment of his debt from an embarrassed company.

Mandataries—Not Technical Trustees.

—In Spring's Appeal, 71 Pa. St. 11; 10 Am. Rep. 684, it was held that trustees as to the stockholders are not technically trustees, but mandataries, and are bound to use no more than ordinary skill and diligence. See also Smith v. Hurd, 12 Met. (Mass.) 371; 46 Am. Dec. 690; Allen v. Curtis, 26 Conn. 456.

Bailees.—In Gardiner v. Pollard, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 674, the court by Robertson, J., said: "There may be a confidential relation subsisting between a stockholder and a director creating a certain duty by the latter to the former, or certain rights in the former which gives the former a right to prevent, or sue for, malfeasance of the latter; but I think it will be found that neither 'trustee' nor 'agent' expresses such relation, and that bailee of the capital of the corporation to perform specific duties therewith comes much more near to it."

1. Accordingly a sale of stock by a stockholder to a director, or the stock itself, is not so far connected with, or the subject of, the trust or trust relation, which is admitted to exist, as to subject the director to, or give the seller the benefit of, the principle or equity applicable to the dealings and contracts by parties be-

II. HOW STOCKHOLDERS BECOME SUCH: THE CONTRACT OF SUBSCRIPTION.—Original subscription to shares of stock is the most important, from a legal standpoint, of the methods by which corporate membership arises.¹ The contract of subscription is governed by principles which obtain generally in the law of contracts.²

1. Form—a. IN GENERAL.—No particular form is essential to the validity of the contract of subscription; any form by which an intent to effect a contract of membership is manifest will suffice,³ and even without a formal subscription, or where it is irreg-tween whom there is a trust or confidential relation, and to require the purchaser to prove not only that he paid a full and fair price for the stock, but also that he disclosed to the seller every fact or circumstance known to him and not known to the seller, material on the question of the value of the stock. Carpenter v. Danforth, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 581.

Where the president of a railroad company, who was also one of its directors, having knowledge, by reason of his official relation to the company, that the true value of the stock of the company was very largely in excess of its nominal market value, purchased at much less than its real worth, the stock of an unofficial stockholder who was ignorant of the company's financial condition and of facts giving an extraordinary value to the stock, without disclosing to the seller the facts and circumstances within his knowledge as to its real value, it was held that the relation of trustee and cestui que trust did not exist between the parties, and that the purchaser was not bound to communicate to the seller his knowledge of the worth of the stock, although the same was obtained by virtue of his official relation to the company. Tippecanoe County v. Reynolds, 44 Ind. 509.

1. For a discussion of the method of acquiring membership by purchase of shares, see Stock—Transfer, vol. 23, p. 582.

2. In Blunt v. Walker, 11 Wis. 349; 78 Am. Dec. 709, Dixon, C. J., speaking for the court, said: "It is well established, both upon natural reason and legal authority, that a stock subscription is a contract between the corporation on one side and the subscriber on the other; and that as such, courts of justice will enforce it for or against either. It was a contract which this company was fully authorized to enter into. Whatever diversity of opinion may have been formerly entertained upon the subject, it is well settled by modern decisions, and the rational and sound rule no doubt is, that whenever a corporation has the power to make a contract, and is not restricted in the manner of so doing, as to such contract, it stands on the same footing as a natural person; and that in relation thereto it may adopt any of the modes immediately calculated to accomplish it which the individual could."

The object of a subscription in filling the stock book of a corporation is to furnish evidence of the subscriber's liability to pay up his shares, and to identify the persons who have become shareholders. Lohman v. New York, etc., R. Co., 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 39.

3. Fry v. Lexington, etc., R. Co., 2 Metc. (Ky.) 314; Gill v. Kentucky, etc., Min. Co., 7 Bush (Ky.) 635; Wellersburg, etc., Road Co. v. Young, 12 Md. 476; Oler v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 583; Lohman v. New York, etc., R. Co., 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 39.

Question of Intent.—"Whenever an intent to become a subscriber is manifested, the courts incline, without particular reference to formality, to hold that the contract of subscription subsists. It is, as in the case of other contracts, very much a question of intent. Formal rules are for the most part disregarded. And in general a contract of subscription may be made in any way in which other contracts may be made. Any agreement by which a person shows an intention to become a stockholder, is sufficient to bind both him and the corporation." Cook, Stock and Stockholders, § 52.

Instances of Forms Held Valid.—The contract may be in form of a promissory note. Magee v. Badger, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 262. The signature of the subscriber affixed to the certificate of incorporation opposite to the number of shares taken is sufficient. Phoenix

Warehousing Co. v. Badger, 6 Hun (N. Y.) 293. Subscription to any valid instrument may make one a stockholder; the instrument need not be articles of association, and acceptance of a stock certificate is a waiver of informality. Eastern Plank Road Co. v. Vaughan, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 155; Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Clark, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 359. But see contra, Bucher v. Dillsburg, etc., R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 306. A subscription to stock of a corporation incorporated as "B. & R. Railroad," is not invalidated by stating the name as the "B. & R. Horse Railroad," nor by omitting the name entirely. Oler v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 583. Where a statute prescribes a formula for subscriptions, but the form used omits the word "President" prescribed, it may nevertheless be binding on the subscribers. Hagerstown R. Co. v. Creeger, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 122; 9 Am. Dec. 495. Where the form is prescribed in the charter and there is a further provision that the company should have common-law corporation powers, stipulations under this head added to the prescribed form and not inconsistent therewith are valid. Fisher v. Evansville, etc., R. Co., 7 Ind. 407. Subscriptions are not invalid because made on separate paper in lieu of the books, nor because the company is not yet in existence. Eastern Plank Road Co. v. Vaughan, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 155. A subscription unexceptionable in other respects is valid, although made on a separate paper instead of in the books provided for by statute. Woodruff v. McDonald, 33 Ark. 97; Brownlee v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 18 Ind. 68; Hamilton, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Rice, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 157; Ashtabula, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 15 Ohio St. 328. In this last case it is said that "the opening of subscription books, though one, is not the exclusive mode in which a railroad company is authorized to dispose of its stock." Compare Charlotte, etc., R. Co. v. Blakely, 3 Stroth. (S. Car.) 247.

In Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Gifford, 87 N. Y. 294, it was held that a subscription entered in a pocket memorandum book was valid and binding. But in McClelland v. Whiteley, 11 Biss. (U. S.) 444, it was held that entering one's name in the personal memorandum book of the president of a stock company with the amount and number of shares which he orally agreed to take upon a certain contingency, which book at the time had nothing about it to show that it was to contain a list of stock subscribers, could not be construed as a subscription of stock.

A contract to take stock, coupled with an option to resell to the corporation, is an actual subscription and not a mere security for a loan; the option being a right secured by the contract and in addition to the absolute title. Melvin v. Lamar Ins. Co., 80 Ill. 446; 22 Am. Rep. 199.

A promise to pay to a railroad company upon the completion of a certain quantity of its construction, a certain sum in exchange for a certificate of stock, is a subscription and not a purchase. Ottawa, etc., R. Co. v. Black, 79 Ill. 262; Hays v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 61 Ill. 422.

A transfer of subscriptions to a company by one authorized so to do before its formation, binds subscribers as much as if they had signed articles of incorporation. Eastern Plank Road Co. v. Vaughan, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 155.

A certificate signed by individuals, stating that they have associated themselves according to statute to carry on the business of banking, and which complies with the statute in other respects, and declares that such individuals have subscribed, etc., is a sufficient subscription. Cole v. Ryan, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 168.

Stricter Rule.—Some of the decisions announce a stricter rule as to form; unless the subscription is attached to articles of association the subscriber is not bound. Bucher v. Dillsburg, etc., R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 306.

Where the statute requires subscriptions to a railroad company to be made "in the manner to be provided by its by-laws," subscriptions made before the by-laws are adopted create no rights or liabilities. Carlisle v. Saginaw Valley, etc., R. Co., 27 Mich. 315.

When taken by those authorized, but in a manner exceeding the authority, the subscriber cannot enforce recognition as a stockholder. Farmers, etc., Bank v. Nelson, 12 Md. 35.

A provision requiring the acknowledgment of subscriptions is mandatory. Coppage v. Hutton, 124 Ind. 401.

The mere entry of a party's name on a list of stockholders by one who was authorized to subscribe for such party, ular, the contract may be inferred from acquiescence and acceptance of the benefits of membership.¹ But the subscription must be for stock which the corporation owns at the time.² A purchase of stock from a bank without the signing of any contract is not a subscription.³ Mere informal offers or promises to subscribe, pending corporate organization, will not constitute one a stockholder, nor support a note given for shares of stock.⁴ On the does not constitute a subscription. Granger's Market Co. v. Vinson, 6 Oregon 172.

1. Boggs v. Olcott, 40 Ill. 303; Newell v. Rock River, etc., Co., 101 Ill. 57; Chaffin v. Cummings, 37 Me. 76; Musgrave v. Morrison, 54 Md. 161; Chester Glass Co. v. Dewey, 16 Mass. 94; 8 Am. Dec. 128; Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Wellington, 113 Mass. 79; Griswold v. Seligman, 72 Mo. 110; Haynes v. Brown, 36 N. H. 545; Phoenix Warehousing Co. v. Badger, 67 N. Y. 294; Wheeler v. Millar, 90 N. Y. 353; Hamilton, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Rice, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 159; Dorris v. French, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 292; Palmer v. Lawrence, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 161; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Cowell, 28 Pa. St. 329; Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45; Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 56; Clark v. Farrington, 11 Wis. 306; Ex parte Besley, 2 Mac. & G. 176; Cheltenham, etc., R. Co. v. Daniel, 2 Q. B. 281; 42 E. C. L. 475; West Cornwall R. Co. v. Mowatt, 15 Q. B. 521; 69 E. C. L. 521; Spackman v. Evans, L. R., 3 H. L. 197; Harrison v. Heathorn, 6 M. & G. 81; Ness v. Angas, 3 Exch. 305; Ness v. Armstrong, 4 Exch. 21; Moss v. Steam Gondola Co., 17 C. B. 180; Bailey v. Universal Prov. L. Assoc., 1 C. B. N. S. 557.

2. Bates v. Great Western Tel. Co., 134 Ill. 536.

3. Columbia Bank v. Rogers, 10 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 61.

4. Fanning v. Hibernia Ins. Co., 37 Ohio St. 339; 41 Am. Rep. 517, where the court, per Johnson, J., says: "The criterion of liability is whether any act has been done by which the corporation is compelled to recognize the promisor as a stockholder. If the corporation was not bound, by what took place, to recognize Mrs. Fanning as a stockholder, neither is she bound to pay for stock. A careful consideration of the statutes authorizing the formation of such a corporation, as well as of the authorities cited, requires us to hold that a mere verbal agreement to take stock in a company whose promoters are engaged in securing the amount of stock required before it can organize, does not constitute the promisor a member of such corporation, and is without a sufficient consideration to support it."

See to the same effect, Angell & Ames on Corp., ch. 15 et seq.; Thompson on Liability of Stockholders, §§ 105-110; Valk v. Crandall, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 179; Tonica, etc., R. Co. v. Stein, 21 Ill. 96; Chester Glass Co. v. Dewey, 16 Mass. 94; 8 Am. Dec. 128; Spear v. Crawford, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 20; 28 Am. Dec. 513; Selma, etc., R. Co. v. Tipton, 5 Ala. 787; 39 Am. Dec. 344; Phillips Limerick Academy v. Davis, 11 Mass. 113; 6 Am. Dec. 162; New Bedford, etc., Turnpike Corp. v. Adams, 8 Mass. 138; 5 Am. Dec. 81; Essex Turnpike Corp. v. Collins, 8 Mass. 292; Lake Ontario, etc., R. Co. v. Mason, 16 N. Y. 451; Vreeland v. New Jersey Stone Co., 29 N. J. Eq. 188; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Gazzam, 32 Pa. St. 340; Thames Tunnel Co. v. Sheldon, 6 B. & C. 341; California Sugar Mfg. Co. v. Schafer, 57 Cal. 396; Thrasher v. Pike County R. Co., 25 Ill. 393; Dayton, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Coy, 13 Ohio St. 84; Sterling Coal Road Co. v. Little, 14 Bush (Ky.) 429; Starrett v. Rockland F., etc., Ins. Co., 65 Me. 374; Andover, etc., Turnpike Corp. v. Hay, 7 Mass. 102; Plank's Tavern Co. v. Burkhard, 87 Mich. 182; Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Tibbits, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 297; Goff v. Winchester College, 6 Bush (Ky.) 443; Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Warren, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 310; Lake Ontario Shore R. Co. v. Curtiss, 80 N. Y. 219; Strasburg R. Co. v. Echternacht, 21 Pa. St. 220; 60 Am. Dec. 49; Charlotte, etc., R. Co. v. Blakely, 3 Strobb. (S. Car.) 245; Stowe v. Flagg, 72 Ill. 397.

But the failure to incorporate a mining company will not prevent recovery on a note given by the promoters for certain mining claims which were to constitute the capital other hand, actual subscriptions, though made before incorporation, are binding.¹

b. STATUTE OF FRAUDS; WRITING OR PAROL.—Where the stock of the proposed company. Smith v. Gillen, 52 Ark. 442.

In Ontario, parties who merely sign a purported subscription to a proposed company, but are not named in the letters patent, nor allotted shares, are not liable. In re London Speaker Printing Co., 16 Ont. App. 508.

A subscription conditioned upon the acceptance of a proposition by directors, is in fact but the basis of a contract, and when drawn up, but repudiated by the subscriber as being variant from the proposition, though the latter has been accepted, is invalid. Oldtown, etc., R. Co. v. Veazie, 39 Me. 571.

A legislature cannot provide that a promise to subscribe shall be deemed a subscription to the capital stock of a particular company. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Gazzam, 32 Pa. St. 340.

1. Selma, etc., R. Co. v. Tipton, 5 Ala. 787; 39 Am. Dec. 344; Maryville Electric Light Co. v. Johnson (Cal. 1892), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 55; New Albany, etc., R. Co. v. McCormick, 10 Ind. 499; West v. Crawford, 80 Cal. 19; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 185; 71 Am. Dec. 337; Instone v. Frankfort Bridge Co., 2 Bibb (Ky.) 576; 5 Am. Dec. 638; Waukon, etc., R. Co. v. Dwyer, 49 Iowa 121; Wight v. Shelby R. Co., 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 4; 63 Am. Dec. 522; Penobscot R. Co. v. White, 41 Me. 512; 66 Am. Dec. 257; Thigpen v. Mississippi Cent. R. Co., 32 Miss. 347; Hughes v. Antietam Mfg. Co., 34 Md. 316; International, etc., Assoc. v. Walker, 83 Mich. 386; Spear v. Crawford, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 20; 28 Am. Dec. 513; Red Wing Hotel Co. v. Friedrich, 26 Minn. 112; Minneapolis Threshing Machine Co. v. Davis, 40 Minn. 110; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 61; Burrall v. Bushwick R. Co., 75 N. Y. 211; Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Dudley, 14 N. Y. 337; Milford, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Brush, 10 Ohio 111; 36 Am. Dec. 78; Ashuelot Boot, etc., Co. v. Hoit, 56 N. H. 548; East Tennessee R. Co. v. Gammon, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 567; Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Yandal, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 294; Connecticut, etc., R. Co. v. Bailey, 24 Vt. 465; 58 Am. Dec. 181.

In Athol Music Hall Co. v. Carey, 116 Mass. 473, Wells, J., said: "In agreements of this nature entered into before the organization is formed, or the agent constituted to receive the amounts subscribed, the difficulty is to ascertain the promisee in whose name alone suit can be brought. The promise of each subscriber 'to and with each other' is not a contract capable of being enforced, or intended to operate literally as a contract to be enforced between each subscriber and each other who may have signed previously, or who should sign afterwards, nor between each subscriber and all the others collectively as individuals. The undertaking is inchoate and incomplete as a contract until the contemplated organization is effected, or the mutual agent constituted to represent the association or individual rights in accepting and acting upon the propositions offered by the several subscriptions. When thus accepted, the promise may be construed to have legal effect according to its purpose and intent, and the practical necessity of the case; to-wit, as a contract with the common representative of the several associates."

Subscription before incorporation is binding, though the subscriber makes no cash payment. Lake Ontario, etc., R. Co. v. Mason, 16 N. Y. 451. And though all proceedings after incorporation are without notice to him. Burke v. Lechmere, L. R., 6 Q. B. 297. And he is liable for calls even if he sells before incorporation, unless the purchaser is registered. Midland, etc., R. Co. v. Gordon, 16 M. & W. 804.

Members of a partnership formed for the purpose of incorporation acquire no undivided interests in the property of the concern, and cannot enforce partition; they have only an equitable right to stock to be issued. Marseilles Land Co. v. Aldrich, 83 Ill. 504.

If one agrees, before incorporation, to take certain shares, but fails to comply with the terms, he cannot sue the corporation after organization for refusal to deliver shares upon his tender of payment, though his name has been entered as a subscriber, and he is requested to pay, and his shares are issued to another without sale for non-payment. Perkins v. Union Button-hole, etc., Co., 12 Allen (Mass.) 273.

contract of subscription is to be performed within the year, it is not within the Statute of Frauds.¹ On the question whether the contract must be in writing or may be by parol the authorities are not harmonious.²

c. SUBSCRIPTIONS DELIVERED IN ESCROW.—As to subscriptions thus delivered, the general rule applies that the delivery, to be good as an escrow, should be, not to the corporation or its

1. Bullock v. Falmouth, etc., Road Co., 85 Ky. 184; Straughan v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 38 Ind. 185; Miles v. Bough, L. R., 3 Q. B. 845. See on questions of the statute, Stock—Statute of Frauds as Pertaining to Shares.

2. In Colfax Hotel Co. v. Lyon, 69 Iowa 683; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 555, the court says: "It is said by Thompson, in his work on Liability of Stockholders (§ 108), that parol subscriptions for stock are not valid, and that contracts of that character can be proven only by written evidence. The following cases are cited in support of the text: Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Gazzam, 32 Pa. St. 340; Vreeland v. New Jersey Stone Co., 29 N. J. Eq. 188; Thames Tunnel Co. v. Sheldon, 6 B. & C. 341; Brouwer v. Appleby, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 170. And Fanning v. Hibernia Ins. Co., 37 Ohio St. 339; 41 Am. Rep. 517, is cited by counsel as sustaining the same doctrine. It is to be observed, however, that the holding in each of these cases is based very largely upon provisions of the charters of the corporations, or of some general statute governing the question. It is not claimed, however, that there is any statute of this state which requires contracts of that character to be in writing, and we think there is no provision of plaintiff's articles of incorporation which has that effect. The provision quoted above, which is the only one at all relating to the subject, simply recites that the stock has all been subscribed, and is payable at the call of the directors, as provided in the subscription. It clearly does not create any limitation on the power of the corporation to contract for the disposal of its capital stock. When the articles of incorporation were adopted, it was not contemplated that the company would ever have occasion to contract for the disposal of any portion of its stock. The stock had then all been subscribed for, and there was apparently no necessity for making any provision on the subject, and accordingly none was made. The question presented by the case, then, is whether, in the absence of any provisions as to the manner in which such contracts shall be entered into, either in the charter or the general statutes of the state, a corporation may contract by parol for the disposal of its capital stock. In our opinion it may. There is nothing in the nature of the contract which requires it to be in writing. For the purpose of effecting the object of its organization, the powers of the corporation, unless restricted by statute, are as broad as those of a natural person. There can be no doubt that, under our general statute governing the organization of such bodies, they may, by express provision of their articles of incorporation, clothe themselves with power to contract in that manner, or they might provide that they should be bound only when the contract was entered into in writing. But when no provision or limitation on the subject is made, and the object is one concerning which they have power to contract, it follows necessarily, we think, that they may contract in either manner, as may be determined by the incorporators or directors." See also Phoenix Warehousing Co. v. Badger, 67 N. Y. 294; Galveston Hotel Co. v. Bolton, 46 Tex. 633; Fothergill's Case, L. R., 8 Ch. App. 270.

Where subscription is to be paid by an interest in a ferry, requiring a transfer not only of the franchise, but of the landings appurtenant, it must be in writing; but a renunciation of the right granted by statute, to make such subscription, need not be in writing. White v. Florence Bridge Co., 4 Ala. 464.

In Cookney's Case, 3 De G. & J. 170, it is held that one who makes an oral statement to a director that he will subscribe to a definite amount of stock, and gives his check for a part, is liable.

It is said in Cook, on Stock and Stockholders, § 52: "There have been agent, but to a third person.¹ Parol evidence is admissible to show that a subscription was not intended to be binding until the performance of a specified condition.²

d. THE ENGLISH SYSTEM.—The system prevailing in England by which the contract of subscription is formed, is peculiar and technical,³ and many of the cases which arise under it are wholly inapplicable in American jurisdictions.

2. Consideration and Payment—a. GENERAL DOCTRINE.—The consideration which will support a subscriber's promise is estimated by the same standards which determine the validity of a consideration elsewhere. It may be his right to receive any valuable thing or privilege, or the fact that, for his benefit, another has incurred a disadvantage. Thus, the consideration for the ordinary subscription has been variously viewed as the mutual promises of all the subscribers,⁴ or of company and sub-various dicta to the effect that a subscription cannot be entered into by parol, but the later and better opinion is that such a subscription is valid and binding." See also cases cited supra, this title, The Contract of Subscription—Form—In General.

1. In Ottawa, etc., R. Co. v. Hall, 1 Ill. App. 612, a delivery to a director was held good as an escrow, on the ground that the director did not occupy such a position in the service of the corporation as to prevent him from holding the contract of subscription as an escrow, it appearing that he was a mere volunteer having no authority from the company to receive subscriptions, and, therefore, should not be treated as its agent in the premises, but rather as a third person.

In Cass v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 80 Pa. St. 31, the general rule that delivery of a deed as an escrow cannot be made to the grantee was recognized, but the delivery to an agent of a corporation engaged in taking subscriptions was deemed good as an escrow, on the ground that the subscription was not absolute, but imposed a burden on the company.

A delivery to a commissioner of a corporation appointed to receive subscriptions has been held bad as an escrow. Wight v. Shelby R. Co., 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 4; 63 Am. Dec. 522. See also Madison, etc., R. Co. v. Stevens, 10 Ind. 1; Price v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 34 Ill. 36.

2. Ottawa, etc., R. Co. v. Hall, 1 Ill. App. 612; Tonica, etc., R. Co. v. Stein, 21 Ill. 96; Bucher v. Dillsburg, etc., R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 306; Cass v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 80 Pa. St. 31. But see Wight v. Shelby R. Co., 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 4; 63 Am. Dec. 522.

3. The English System.—It includes a written application for a definite number of shares, acceptance by the company, notice of allotment, and allotment of shares. All these steps appear to be essential. Hebbs' Case, L. R., 4 Eq. 9; Adams' Case, L. R., 13 Eq. 474; Pellatt's Case, L. R., 2 Ch. 527; Rogers' Case, L. R., 3 Ch. 637; Tucker's Case, 20 W. R. 89. Compare Bloxam's Case, 33 Beav. 529, distinguished in Pellatt's Case, L. R., 2 Ch. 527; except (under the Companies' Act of 1862) allotment. In re London, etc., Coal Co., 5 Ch. Div. 525; Evans' Case, L. R., 2 Ch. 427; Sidney's Case, L. R., 13 Eq. 228; Levick's Case, 30 L. J. Ch. 180; Hall's Case, L. R., 5 Ch. 707, distinguishing Snell's Case, L. R., 5 Ch. 22. Application for shares may be withdrawn and repudiated. Ex parte Graham, 7 Jur. N. S. 981; Ex parte Miles, 4 De G., F. & J. 71; Ex parte Wilson, 20 L. T., N. S. 962; Adams' Case, 20 W. R. 356; Ritso's Case, 4 Ch. Div. 774; Ex parte Pentelow, L. R., 4 Ch. 178; Slaterry's Case, 7 Irish Eq. 245; MacLagan's Case, 51 L. J. Ch. 841; Baily's Case, L. R., 5 Eq. 428; and the withdrawal may be oral. Ex parte Wilson, 20 L. T., N. S. 962.

4. Twin Creek, etc., Road Co. v. Lancaster, 79 Ky. 552; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 58; Eastern Plank Road Co. v. Vaughan, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 155; Northern R. Co. v. Miller, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 260; Cole v. Ryan, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 168; Spear v. Crawford, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 20; 28 Am. Dec. 513.

A modification of this doctrine ap-scriber,¹ the advantages of membership,² or of the interest acquired by the subscriber in the corporation, and the right to stock and dividends.³ Preliminary proceedings and partial execupears in Cottage St. M. E. Church v. Kendall, 121 Mass. 528; 23 Am. Rep. 236. It was an action to enforce a subscription to a church building fund. The building was erected, but the trial court did not decide the question whether the plaintiff had incurred any liability in reliance upon the promise sued for, and the court held that therefore no consideration was shown. Gray, C. J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "The suggestion in Pembroke Church v. Stetson, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 508, substantially repeated in Ives v. Sterling, 6 Met. (Mass.) 316, and in Watkins v. Eames, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 539, that 'it is a sufficient consideration that others were led to subscribe by the very subscription of the defendant,' was in each case but obiter dictum, and appears to us to be inconsistent with elementary principles. Similar promises of third persons to the plaintiff may be a consideration for agreements between those persons and the defendant; but as they confer no benefit upon the defendant, and impose no charge or obligation upon the plaintiff, they constitute no legal consideration for the defendant's promise to him."

1. Maryville Electric Light Co. v. Johnson (Cal. 1892), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 55.

2. In Fort Edward, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Payne, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 567, the court, per Hand, J., says: "It is well settled that a subscription to the capital stock of any company, from the membership of which a shareholder may derive pecuniary advantage, gives to the subscriber such an interest as will support a promise to pay for the shares. Such an enterprise is a combination of means for mutual profit, and is in no sense a gift or promise without consideration."

And in Lake Ontario, etc., R. Co. v. Mason, 16 N. Y. 463, Judge Brown says: "The subscription of the defendant to the articles of association was, in effect, a contract to pay for and accept the twenty shares of stock. 'The advantage to be derived from being a member of such a company, and of the consequent right to participate in the pecuniary dividends, is a positive benefit; and where the agreement secures that advantage to the subscriber, on the organization of the company, the objection of want of consideration cannot be made with success.' Hamilton, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Rice, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 157; Stanton v. Wilson, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 153; Barker v. Bucklin, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 45; 43 Am. Dec. 726; Schenectady, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Thatcher, 11 N. Y. 102; Barnes v. Perine, 12 N. Y. 18. If the contract to pay for and take the stock was a valid contract, made upon a sufficient consideration, then his subscription was not open to revocation. Until the incorporation of the company was perfected, the other subscribers had an interest in its execution and performance of which they could not be deprived by the act of the defendant; and after the articles were filed and recorded in the secretary's office, and the corporation had a legal existence, it acquired a vested interest in the defendant's agreement." See also Bullock v. Falmouth, etc., Road Co., 85 Ky. 184; Osborn v. Crosby, 63 N. H. 583; Eastern Plank Road Co. v. Vaughan, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 155; Stewart v. Hamilton College, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 403; Hamilton College v. Stewart, 1 N. Y. 581; Dutcher's Mfg. Cotton Co. v. Davis, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 238; 7 Am. Dec. 459; Whittlesey v. Frantz, 74 N. Y. 456.

3. Selma, etc., R. Co. v. Tipton, 5 Ala. 787; 39 Am. Dec. 344; Smith v. Gillen, 52 Ark. 442; Danbury, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, 22 Conn. 435; Bish v. Bradford, 17 Ind. 490; New Albany, etc., R. Co. v. Fields, 10 Ind. 187; Fry v. Lexington, etc., R. Co., 2 Metc. (Ky.) 314; St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Robbins, 23 Minn. 439; Union Turnpike Co. v. Jenkins, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 381; Goshen, etc., Turnpike Road v. Hurtin, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 217; 6 Am. Dec. 273; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Gammon, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 567.

In Union Turnpike Co. v. Jenkins, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 381, the subscription was as follows: "We, whose names are hereunto subscribed, do for ourselves and our legal representatives, promise to pay to the president, directors and company of the Union Turnpike Road, the sum of 25 dollars for every share of stock in said company, tion of the corporate design¹ may form a sufficient consideration, and likewise the selection of a particular route for a plank road,² or other concession to the subscriber.³ The consideration has even been held to be conclusively implied from the subscription itself,⁴ but where it does not appear that the corporation does, or becomes bound to do, anything, there is no showing of consideration.⁵

set opposite to our respective names, in such manner and proportion, and at such time and place, as shall be determined by the said president, directors and company." And the court, per Radcliff, J., said: "We cannot discover any ground on which this promise ought to be considered as void. The subscription was taken by commissioners who were authorized to receive it, and in the form prescribed by the act. That form contains an absolute promise to pay the money to the president, directors and company. On the one side, the interest of the company in selling the shares, and the public advantage to be derived from the success of the institution; and on the other, the expected profits to accrue from the stock were sufficient considerations to uphold the promise. By force of the act itself, also, it must have intended that it should be obligatory, for else the formal manner in which it was prescribed to be taken would be senseless and nugatory. We cannot imagine that a contract in terms so express and complete should be designed to mean nothing."

1. In Amherst Academy v. Coles, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 427, which was an action of assumpsit on a promissory note given for a subscription, Parker, C. J., after carefully reviewing the authorities, says: "We have then in the present case a subscription to a charitable fund made after the incorporation of the body who were its trustees, and more than a year after that a promissory note, made for value received, payable to the same party, referring expressly to the subscription and the purposes of it as the consideration of the note. And we find that those purposes are in process of execution, the funds being needed for and applied to the faithful execution of the trust. We cannot doubt that the note is valid, and that the defense is maintainable, neither in law nor in conscience. The party bound admits by his contract the consideration to be good and valuable, and he has shown nothing to authorize us to deny the justice or legality of the construction which he chose to put on his own antecedent engagement."

Ohio Wesleyan Female College v. Higgins, 16 Ohio St. 20, was an action upon an agreement to make donations to a certain educational corporation. Scott, J., after determining that the subscription was one authorized by law, says: "It was evidently intended by the maker that the managing officers of the corporation should rely upon it as a part of the means and resources of the institution. It was but reasonable that they should rely upon the solemn pledge thus given, and incur liabilities upon the faith of it. And that such liabilities were, in fact, so incurred the petition distinctly avers. By accepting this subscription or written promise of defendant's testator, the corporation took upon itself the obligations of a trustee, and became bound faithfully to execute the trust by applying the proceeds, when paid, in furtherance of the objects for which the corporation had become incorporated. All these facts, when viewed in connection with the provisions of the statute to which reference has been made, will not permit the plaintiff's action to be defeated by an alleged want of a legal or valuable consideration."

2. Rhey v. Ebensburg Plank Road Co., 27 Pa. St. 261. But compare Bish v. Bradford, 17 Ind. 490; Miller v. Wild Cat, etc., Road Co., 52 Ind. 64.

3. Postponement of payment of part of a conditional subscription, which has become due by performance, is a sufficient consideration, for unconditional note for payment of the whole at a future time, and before the residue would have been due by the original terms of the subscription. Henderson, etc., R. Co. v. Moss, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 242.

4. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Gammon, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 567.

5. In New York, etc., Min. Co. v.

b. WHAT MAY BE RECEIVED IN PAYMENT—(1) In General.—Independent of statute,¹ payment for stock need not be required in cash,² but may be made in property, labor and services,

Martin, 13 Minn. 417, the court, by Wilson, C. J., said: "It is true that the changing of the stock from the hands of one officer or servant of the company into the hands of another, or even the accepting or holding of the defendant's written agreement, may strictly be said to be an inconvenience or detriment to the plaintiff—but it is not in the eye of the law of any value. It is too shadowy a consideration to support a contract. But let it be supposed that the stock was owned by the 'original proprietors,' and not by the company, and we will inquire whether in that view the complaint states facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The stockholders do not appear to have done, or agreed to do anything, so far as the complaint shows; they did not deliver or agree to deliver the stock to the trustees. The allegation in the complaint of performance on the part of the plaintiff, is not equivalent to an allegation that they performed, nor does it imply performance on their part. It does not appear that they would be under any obligation to deliver to the defendants the stock on payment therefor to the plaintiff."

In Parker v. Northern, etc., R. Co., 33 Mich. 25, the court, by Campbell, J., said: "It has been held uniformly that the subscribers were only bound when the company was bound, and that no unilateral subscription could be upheld. And as the statute did not create any obligation on the corporation, unless upon subscriptions regularly made, no others could be enforced unless they were made upon some actual consideration or agreement binding the company. See Carlisle v. Saginaw Valley, etc., R. Co., 27 Mich. 315; Shurtz v. Schoolcraft, etc., R. Co., 9 Mich. 269."

1. Payment—Statutory Provisions.—Under the statutes of Alabama, Colorado, Delaware, Michigan, Mississippi, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania payment for stock may be made in property.

Under Georgia Code 1882, § 1689, subscriptions to railroads may be paid in property, and so under Indiana Rev. Stat. 1887, § 3901.

Under the Nevada Gen. Stat. 1885, ch. 8, § 819, subscriptions to mining corporations may be paid for in mines.

Under Maryland Gen. Laws 1888, p. 301, payment may be made in property on a subscription at a valuation agreed upon and authorized by stockholders.

Under the Massachusetts statute a subscriber's note or obligation cannot be accepted for stock; property may be accepted only when the president, treasurer and a majority of the directors sign a sworn statement that the property at a fair valuation is worth the amount named, and the commissioner of corporations certifies that he believes the valuation to be fair and reasonable.

Where the act of incorporation requires payment in cash, cancellation of a debt due from the company for services is not sufficient. Cleland's Case, L. R., 14 Eq. 387. Nor is a receipt for newspaper advertising. Andress' Case, 8 Ch. Div. 126; Pagin & Gill's Case, 6 Ch. Div. 681. Nor a transfer of lands. Appleyard's Case, 49 L. J. Ch. 290; White's Case, 12 Ch. Div. 511. But any bona fide transaction between the company and the stockholder, which, in an action for calls, would support a plea of payment, is sufficient. Spargo's Case, L. R., 8 Ch. 407. So amounts credited to a director in consideration of his surrender of certain benefits. Ex parte Bentley, L. R., 12 Ch. 850.

2. In New Haven Nail Co. v. Linden Spring Co., 142 Mass. 349; 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71, it is said: "That in the absence of fraud, an agreement may ordinarily be made by which stockholders can be allowed to pay for their shares in patents, mines or other property, to which it is not easy to assign a determinate value, appears to be well settled."

"There is a long line of cases sustaining the validity of an issue of stock for money's worth instead of money itself. So well established has this principle of law become that the few cases holding to the contrary can no longer be considered good law." Cook, Stock & Stockholders, § 13, note 4. See also Frenkel v. Hudson, 82 Ala. 158; 60 Am. Rep. 736; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 231; Coffin v. Ransdell, 110 negotiable paper, or by way of satisfaction of debts due from the corporation to the subscriber.¹

(2) Property.—Property which the corporation is authorized to purchase, or the ownership of which promotes the objects of its organization may be received.² Thus, a plank road or railroad company may accept materials for use in the construction of its line;³ and corporations empowered to purchase land may take

Ind. 417; 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 432; Ashuelot Boot, etc., Co. v. Hoit, 56 N. H. 548; Brant v. Ehlen, 59 Md. 1; Foreman v. Bigelow, 4 Cliff. (U. S.) 544; East New York, etc., R. Co. v. Lighthall, 5 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 458; 36 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 481; Searight v. Payne, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 283; Steacy v. Little Rock, etc., R. Co., 5 Dill. (U. S.) 348; Forbes & Judd's Case, L. R., 5 Ch. 270; Ex parte Drummond, L. R., 4 Ch. 772; Spargo's Case, L. R., 8 Ch. 412; Maynard's Case, L. R., 9 Ch. 60.

Some of the older American cases incline to a different doctrine. See Neuse River Nav. Co. v. Comm'rs, 7 Jones (N. Car.) 275; Henry v. Vermillion, etc., R. Co., 17 Ohio 187.

Specie or its equivalent only can be received for the amount required down on subscription. Crocker v. Crane, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 211; 34 Am. Dec. 228. And an equivalent does not mean property of equal value, where the incorporating act requires the stock to be paid in money. People v. Troy House Co., 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 625.

1. See infra, the following subdivisions of this title.

2. Coffin v. Ransdell, 110 Ind. 417; 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 432; Liebke v. Knapp, 79 Mo. 22; 49 Am. Rep. 212; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 520; Kehlner v. Lademann, 11 Mo. App. 50; Brant v. Ehlen, 59 Md. 1; Van Cott v. Van Brunt, 2 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 283; American Silk Works v. Solomon, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 135; Carr v. LeFevre, 27 Pa. St. 413; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Hickman, 28 Pa. St. 318; Bedford County v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 14 Lea (Tenn.) 525; Clark v. Farrington, 11 Wis. 306; Phelan v. Hazard, 5 Dill. (U. S.) 45; Green's Brice's Ultra Vires (2d ed.) 145; Angell & Ames Corporations (11th ed.), § 517.

A stockholder who consents to payment by another in property cannot afterward compel him to pay in cash. Knoop v. Bohmrich (N. J. 1891), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 315.

3. Haywood, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Bryan, 6 Jones (N. Car.) 82; Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Cramer, 23 Ind. 490; Phillips v. Covington, etc., Bridge Co., 2 Metc. (Ky.) 219; Van Cott v. Van Brunt, 2 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 283; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Hickman, 28 Pa. St. 318; Bedford County v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 14 Lea (Tenn.) 525; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clarkson, 7 Ind. 595; Peck v. Coal-field Coal Co., 11 Ill. App. 88; Brant v. Ehlen, 59 Md. 1; Goodin v. Evans, 18 Ohio St. 150; Jones' Case, L. R., 6 Ch. 48; Maynard's Case, 22 W. R. 119. Compare Brown v. Duluth, etc., R. Co., 53 Fed. Rep. 889.

In Clark v. Farrington, 11 Wis. 306, the court said: "It is not true, as seems to be assumed, that the great primary object of the charter is to raise an amount of money equal to the capital stock. The primary object is to build and equip a railroad. Money is necessary as a means, but it is not the end. And we can see no objection whatever to a railroad company issuing stock and taking in payment materials, or labor, or land necessary for its road. So far as it can build and equip its road for stock, it is the most simple and direct method of accomplishing it. It gets the object, then, by a single transaction, when it would require two, if the subscriber must first pay the money and then receive it back again for whatever he furnished. And we think it might be safely asserted, that no railroad was ever built in the country without disposing of more or less stock in payment for labor, materials or land. And there are but few cases where the propriety of this course, or the power of the companies so to dispose of it, was ever called in question, and in those the power was sustained, while there are many cases where such contracts have been enforced, without question, disputes having arisen on other points. The following may be referred to as illustrations: Vermont Coal R. Co. v. Claves, 21 Vt. 30; Boody v. Rutland, the land in payment.¹ Patent rights,² and even prospective patents,³ good will,⁴ and stock⁵ in other corporations, have all been approved as valid equivalents for the issue of shares. But it seems that the possibility of obtaining a patent is not a valid consideration under a constitutional clause authorizing the issue of stock for property only when "actually received."⁶

(3) Labor and Services.—So labor and services may be received in payment for stock under conditions similar to those which authorize the acceptance of property.⁷

(4) Negotiable Paper.—In most states promissory notes may be taken, where the power is inferable from the corporate charter;⁸

etc., R. Co., 24 Vt. 660. These are cases where a large proportion of the payments to contractors were to be made in stock. Moore v. Hudson River R. Co., 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 156; Porter v. Buckfield Branch R. Co., 32 Me. 539; Barker v. Troy, etc., R. Co., 27 Vt. 767, and many others that might be referred to are of the same character."

A subscription made payable in materials to be used in operation becomes demandable in money, if the materials are not furnished. Haywood, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Bryan, 6 Jones (N. Car.) 82.

1. Peck v. Coalfield Coal Co., 3 Ill. App. 619; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clarkson, 7 Ind. 595; Brant v. Ehlen, 59 Md. 1; Goodin v. Evans, 18 Ohio St. 150; Foreman v. Bigelow, 4 Cliff. (U. S.) 508; Jones' Case, L. R., 6 Ch. 48; Maynard's Case, 22 W. R. 119. And in such case the corporation is a bona fide purchaser. Frenkel v. Hudson, 82 Ala. 158; 60 Am. Rep. 736; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 231; In re Barrow, etc., Land Co., 14 Ch. Div. 400.

Where one conveys land to a corporation in consideration of a specific number of shares of stock, and afterwards conveys the same to another party, the latter is entitled to the shares, and equity will not aid the grantor to recover them from the corporation. O'Meara v. North American Min. Co., 2 Nev. 112.

2. Edwards v. Bringier Sugar, etc., Co., 27 La. Ann. 118. But payment in patent rights of unascertained value, is not a compliance with a statute requiring payment in money. Tasker v. Wallace, 6 Daly (N. Y.) 364 (where the cases are reviewed).

3. Whitehill v. Jacobs, 75 Wis. 476, where the statute authorizes the issue of stock for "property."

4. Pell's Case, L. R., 5 Ch. 11.

5. East New York, etc., R. Co. v. Lighthouse, 6 Robt. (N. Y.) 407, where the other corporation was conducting a similar branch of business. In such case payment is made when the certificates are delivered. Leathers v. Janney, 41 La. Ann. 1120; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 399.

6. State v. Webb (Ala. 1893), 12 So. Rep. 377.

7. Stock Paid for in Labor and Services.—Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clarkson, 7 Ind. 595; Phillips v. Covington, etc., Bridge Co., 2 Metc. (Ky.) 219; Van Cott v. Van Brunt, 2 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 283; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Hickman, 28 Pa. St. 318; Liebke v. Knapp, 79 Mo. 22; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 520; 49 Am. Rep. 212. In the latter case the services consisted in newspaper advertising of the corporate enterprise.

After payment in labor and services a stockholder will not be liable further. Woodfall's Case, 3 De G. & Sm. 63. Even if a transfer be made to directors. Ex parte Currie, 11 W. R. 675. But an allotment to a director of paid-up shares for services does not relieve him from liability thereon. Daniell's Case, 1 De G. & J. 372. See also Jackson v. Traer, 64 Iowa 469; 54 Am. Rep. 449; Reed v. Hayt, 51 N. Y. Super. Ct. 121; Clark v. Farrington, 11 Wis. 306; Branch v. Jesup, 106 U. S. 468; Western Bank v. Tallman, 17 Wis. 530.

A representation by an agent that subscriptions might be paid in provisions or labor will not bar a recovery in money, unless the subscriber had offered to pay in that way and been refused, and was damaged by the refusal. Walker v. Mobile, etc. R. Co., 34 Miss. 245.

8. New York Rev. Stats., ch. 18, § 2, prohibits payment by the subscriber's own note. So in Tennessee, such pay-and so generally in payment of a subscription to corporate stock, bonds may be taken,¹ and checks.²

(5) Satisfaction of Debts.—The satisfaction of debts due from the corporation is a lawful equivalent for the issue of stock.³

ment is not legal, but the subscriber will be credited with the amount collected on notes so given by him. Moses v. Oconee Bank, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 398.

Payment in Promissory Notes.—As supporting the proposition that subscriptions may be paid in promissory notes, see Goodrich v. Reynolds, 31 Ill. 490; 83 Am. Dec. 240; Hardy v. Merriweather, 14 Ind. 203; Stoddard v. Shetucket Foundry Co., 34 Conn. 542; Ogdensburg, etc., R. Co. v. Wooley, 3 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 398; Magee v. Badger, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 246; Vermont Cent. R. Co. v. Claves, 21 Vt. 30; Pacific Trust Co. v. Dorsey, 72 Cal. 55; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 539; Clark v. Farrington, 11 Wis. 306; Blunt v. Walker, 11 Wis. 349; 79 Am. Dec. 709; Cornell v. Hichens, 11 Wis. 353; Lyon v. Ewings, 17 Wis. 61; Andrews v. Hart, 17 Wis. 297; Western Bank v. Tallman, 17 Wis. 530. But compare Leighty v. Susquehanna Turnpike Co., 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 434; Farmers, etc., Bank v. Nelson, 12 Md. 35.

Where notes and mortgages have been given in payment for stock, the stock must be regarded as paid in, and the notes and mortgages given as for money loaned or invested by the company. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. v. Curtis, 35 Ohio St. 343.

A note given to a corporation in payment for stock is valid in the hands of a bona fide indorsee; Magee v. Badger, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 246; even though the statute forbids acceptance of notes in payment of installments actually required to be paid. Willmarth v. Crawford, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 341.

A corporation that has become the successor of a co-partnership, to which the corporation is indebted for the business that it purchased, may receive the notes of the co-partnership which one of its stockholders holds, in payment of his shares of the stock of the company. Stoddard v. Shetucket Foundry Co., 34 Conn. 542.

Promissory notes given as payment of first twenty per cent. of subscription to capital stock are founded on a sufficient consideration. Chetlain v. Republic L. Ins. Co., 86 Ill. 220; Mc- Dowell v. Chicago Steel Works, 124 Ill. 491; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 633.

Distribution of stock by less than the authorized number of commissioners is void; and any instrument given in payment therefor is unenforceable. Crocker v. Crane, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 211; 34 Am. Dec. 228.

In England, while payment by note is irregular it is not fraudulent, so as to entitle the debtor to repudiate it. Power v. Hoey, 19 W. R. 916.

Giving a worthless note is not payment. Bouton v. Dement, 123 Ill. 142. But confederate bonds agreed to be taken must be accepted at their face value, though they have since become worthless. Schroeder's Case, L. R., 11 Eq. 131.

1. Bonds.—As to payment in municipal bonds, see MUNICIPAL SECURITIES, vol. 15, p. 1259; Southern L. Ins., etc., Co. v. Lanier, 5 Fla. 110; 58 Am. Dec. 448; Valk v. Crandall, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 179; Leavitt v. Pell, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 322.

Where stock is not taken up, the corporation may issue certificates thereof and take in payment its own money bonds. Lohman v. New York, etc., R. Co., 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 39.

Bonds given in payment of a subscription on which the corporation embarked in business and subscribers received their certificates of stock, cannot be repudiated, even if the capital stock was not bona fide paid in. Yard v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 10 N. J. Eq. 480; 64 Am. Dec. 467.

2. Checks.—In re Staten Island Rapid Transit R. Co., 37 Hun (N. Y.) 422, where the statute required payment in cash. In Crocker v. Crane, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 211; 34 Am. Dec. 228, it is held to be a question of law whether payment by check is a compliance with the statute. Where the subscriber pays by check, he cannot be heard to object that it is not an equivalent to specie. Thorp v. Woodhull, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 411.

But payment in checks previously given by one of the stockholders to the party paying, to qualify him as a director, is not a valid payment. In re Disderi, 19 W. R. 175.

3. Satisfaction of Debts.—Lohman v.

3. Parties to the Contract—a. IN GENERAL.—The contract of subscription may be entered into by those competent to form any ordinary contract.¹ Treatment of the legal principles governing subscriptions by persons under disability should be sought under titles where the general law applicable to such parties is treated.²

b.* OTHER CORPORATIONS.³—A municipal corporation is a competent subscriber under legislative permission.⁴ State subscriptions were formerly not uncommon, and in an action thereon the state appears in court, not as a sovereign, but as a stockholder.⁵ One private corporation cannot subscribe to stock in another unless authorized by its charter,⁶ or unless from the nature of the

New York, etc., R. Co., 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 39; Reed v. Hayt, 51 N. Y. Super. Ct. 121; Carr v. Le Fevre, 27 Pa. St. 413; Woodhull's Case, 3 De G., J. & Sim. 63; Ex parte Thomas, 42 L. J. Ch. 781; Ex parte Manchester Finance Corp., 29 L. T., N. S. 441; 22 W. R. 41; Bennett's Case, 15 W. R. 1058; 16 L. T., N. S. 475; In re Baglan Hall Colliery Co., L. R., 5 Ch. 346; Jones' Case, L. R., 6 Ch. 48. But see Fothergill's Case, L. R., 8 Ch. 270. So where debts are not yet due. Appleyard's Case, 49 L. J. Ch. 290.

Liability for damages, etc., may be extinguished by issue of stock to the claimant. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Hickman, 28 Pa. St. 318.

1. See CONTRACTS, vol. 3, p. 823.

2. See INFANTS, vol. 10, p. 613; MARRIED WOMEN, vol. 14, p. 589. For principles applicable to subscriptions by agents and partners, see AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 331; PARTNERSHIP, vol. 17, p. 824.

3. For a discussion of the right of a corporation to acquire its own stock, see STOCK, vol. 23, p. 582.

4. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15, p. 949; MUNICIPAL SECURITIES, vol. 15, p. 1259.

5. State Subscriptions.—Bank of U. S. v. Planters' Bank, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 904; Curran v. Arkansas, 15 How. (U. S.) 304; Brady v. State, 26 Md. 302. But where the state becomes a stockholder in a corporation, it does not divest itself of its sovereign right as a creditor, nor does it impart to that corporation any of its privileges or prerogatives. Hence where a state subscribed to the stock of a bank and subsequently an act was passed extending the charter and providing that no calls should be made for additional installments upon the stock taken by the state, although unpaid capital stock may be a trust fund for the payment of corporate debts, yet the right to call in the unpaid state installments is taken away by the statute; the corporation, not the stockholders, is responsible for unpaid installments as a fund for creditors.

Where a dividend is guaranteed on state subscription, it is not payable in gold unless expressly so stated. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Maryland, 36 Md. 519.

6. Corporations as Subscribers.—

"There would seem to be little doubt, either upon principle or authority, and independently of express statutory prohibition of the same, that one corporation cannot become the owner of any portion of the capital stock of another corporation unless authority to become such is clearly conferred by statute." Boynton, J., in Franklin Bank v. Commercial Bank, 36 Ohio St. 350; 38 Am. Rep. 594.

In Pearson v. Concord R. Corp., 62 N. H. 537; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 102; 13 Am. St. Rep. 590, the court, by Smith, J., said: "A corporation cannot become a stockholder in another corporation unless such power is given by its charter or is necessarily implied in it (Franklin Co. v. Lewiston Sav. Bank, 68 Me. 43; 28 Am. Rep. 9; Mechanics' Sav. Bank, etc., Assoc. v. Meriden Agency Co., 24 Conn. 159; Green Bri. Ult. V. 91, and cases cited, Mor. Corp., § 229, and cases cited), especially if the purchase be for the purpose of controlling or affecting the management of the other corporation. Sumner v. Marcy, 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 105; Central R. Co. v. Collins, 40 Ga. 582; Hazlehurst v. Savannah, etc., R. Co., 43 Ga. 13; Great Northern R. Co. v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 21 L. J. Ch. 837; Booth v. Robinson, 55 Md. 439. Dealing in stocks is not expressly business conducted by the corporations the existence of such power may be implied.¹ Thus a banking corporation cannot, in general, take stock in another concern.² A manufacturing corporation cannot subscribe to the stock of a bank,³ or of a railroad,⁴ but may, in payment of a debt, take the shares of another corporation,⁵ and is not to be presumed incapable of holding them.⁶ A steamship company has been held incompetent to subscribe to the stock of a dry-dock company,⁷ but a lawful purchaser of stock in a rival line.⁸ So an insurance company cannot take stock in a bank,⁹ or even in another insurance company,¹⁰ nor can one rail-prohibited in the act of congress providing for the organization of a national bank (U. S. Rev. St., § 5136, par. 7); but such prohibition is implied from the failure to grant the power. First Nat. Bank v. National Exch. Bank, 92 U. S. 128. Corporations are creatures of the legislature, having no other powers than such as are given to them by their charters, or such as are incidental or necessary to carry into effect the purposes for which they were established. Downing v. Mt. Washington Road Co., 40 N. H. 232; South Newmarket Methodist Seminary v. Peaslee, 15 N. H. 330; Beaty v. Knowler, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 152; Perrine v. Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co., 9 How. (U. S.) 172; Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 519; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 636." See also Central R. Co. v. Collins, 40 Ga. 582; Hazlehurst v. Savannah, etc., R. Co., 43 Ga. 13; Booth v. Robinson, 55 Md. 439; Talmage v. Pell, 7 N. Y. 328; First Nat. Bank v. National Exch. Bank, 92 U. S. 122; Royal Bank of India's Case, L. R., 4 Ch. 252; Joint Stock, etc., Co. v. Brown, L. R., 8 Eq. 381; Great Northern R. Co. v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 21 L. J. Ch. 837.

But a corporation cannot be prevented by the owner of land from condemning the same, because another corporation has subscribed to its stock. In re Rochester, etc., R. Co., 110 N. Y. 119; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 552.

1. Pearson v. Concord R. Corp., 62 N. H. 537; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 102; 13 Am. St. Rep. 590; Franklin Co. v. Lewiston Sav. Bank, 68 Me. 43; 28 Am. Rep. 9; Mechanics' Sav. Bank, etc., Assoc. v. Meriden Agency Co., 24 Conn. 159. For a full exposition of this subject, see ULTRA VIRES.

2. Banks.—Franklin Co. v. Lewiston Sav. Bank, 68 Me. 43; 28 Am. Rep. 9; Talmage v. Pell, 7 N. Y. 328;

Tracy v. Talmage, 14 N. Y. 162; 67 Am. Dec. 132; Nassau Bank v. Jones, 95 N. Y. 115; 47 Am. Rep. 14; First Nat. Bank v. National Exch. Bank, 92 U. S. 122; Royal Bank of India's Case, L. R., 4 Ch. 252. And see BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 2, p. 89.

In Pearson v. Concord R. Co., 62 N. H. 537, there is a dictum to the effect that a savings bank may invest its surplus in the stock of other corporations.

3. Manufacturing Companies.—Sumner v. Marcy, 3 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 105. See Pearson v. Concord R. Corp., 62 N. H. 537; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 102; 13 Am. St. Rep. 590.

4. Valley R. Co. v. Lake Erie Iron Co., 46 Ohio St. 44.

5. Howe v. Boston Carpet Co., 16 Gray (Mass.) 493; Hodges v. New England Screw Co., 1 R. I. 312; 53 Am. Dec. 624.

6. Evans v. Bailey, 66 Cal. 112. In this case it is said: "The question of ultra vires raised by The People's Ice Co. is not tenable. It does not appear that it was not within the scope of the powers of The People's Ice Company to acquire or hold stock in the California Fruit and Meat Shipping Company, under any circumstances or for any purpose; and it does not appear under what circumstances the stock was acquired or held. (Miner's Ditch Co. v. Zellerbach, 37 Cal. 578.)"

7. New Orleans, etc., Steamship Co. v. Ocean Dry Dock Co., 28 La. Ann. 173; 26 Am. Rep. 90.

8. Booth v. Robinson, 55 Md. 419.

9. Insurance Companies.—Mechanics' Sav. Bank, etc., Assoc. v. Meriden Agency Co., 24 Conn. 159; State v. Butler, 86 Tenn. 614.

10. Berry v. Yates, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 199; Pierson v. McCurdy, 33 Hun (N. Y.) 530; In re Liquidator British Nation L. Assoc., 8 Ch. Div. 679.

But subscription by one insurance road corporation, as a rule, purchase the shares of another.¹ But a construction company engaged in building a railroad may subscribe to the stock of the railroad company.²

c. WHO MAY RECEIVE SUBSCRIPTIONS.—Statutory provisions for taking subscriptions have sometimes been held exclusive,³ and sometimes cumulative⁴ only. The power to receive subscriptions before organization is usually conferred upon special commissioners, and those received in such cases, by others, are, by the preponderance of authority, invalid,⁵ though the corporation may company to another will not be pronounced void without introduction of evidence of its charter. New York Exch. Co. v. DeWolf, 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 593.

1. Railroads.—Central R. Co. v. Collins, 40 Ga. 582; Hazlehurst v. Savannah, etc., R. Co., 43 Ga. 57; Central R. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 31 N. J. Eq. 475; Elkins v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 36 N. J. Eq. 5; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 590; Millbank v. New York, etc., Co., 64 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 20; Mackintosh v. Flint, etc., R. Co., 34 Fed. Rep. 582; Pearson v. Concord R. Corp., 62 N. H. 537; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 102; 13 Am. St. Rep. 590; Woods v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 5 R. & Corp. L. J. 372; Green's Brice's Ultra Vires, 91 (2d ed.); Maunsell v. Midland, etc., R. Co., 1 H. & M. 130; Great Northern R. Co. v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 21 L. J. Ch. 837; Great Western R. Co. v. Metropolitan R. Co., 32 L. J. Ch. 382. And see generally RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 810; ULTRA VIRES.

In Kansas, a railroad company may purchase stock in another company for purposes connected with the road or with a view to consolidation. And where both corporations are under the same control, stockholders in one can bring an action against the other corporation when funds have been misapplied. Ryan v. Leavenworth, etc., R. Co., 21 Kan. 365. See also Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Fletcher, 35 Kan. 236; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 34.

2. In re Rochester, etc., R. Co., 45 Hun (N. Y.) 126.

Non-Trading Corporations.—There is a dictum in Pearson v. Concord R. Corp., 62 N. H. 537; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 590; 13 Am. Rep. 102, to the effect that certain classes of corporations, such as religious and charitable corporations, and corporations for literary purposes, may invest their moneys in the stock of other corporations; that the power, if not expressly mentioned in their charters, is necessarily implied for the preservation of the funds with which such institutions are endowed, and to render their funds productive. See also 2 Beach Priv. Corp., § 522.

3. In Shurtz v. Schoolcraft, etc., R. Co., 9 Mich. 270, the court, per Campbell, J., said: "The statute requires a majority of the commissioners to determine when and where subscriptions are to be taken, and their duty continues until the whole amount of stock is subscribed and distributed. The subscription in question, not being made under their auspices, is not binding on them, and could not prevent other parties from taking the whole amount not subscribed by the original articles, whenever the commissioners should see fit to proceed and perform their duty." See also Parker v. Northern, etc., R. Co., 33 Mich. 23; Unity Ins. Co. v. Cram, 43 N. H. 636; Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Tibbits, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 207.

4. Crocker v. Crane, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 211; 24 Am. Dec. 228; Stuart v. Valley R. Co., 32 Gratt. (Va.) 146; Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Gifford, 87 N. Y. 294.

5. In Essex Turnpike Corp. v. Collins, 8 Mass. 292, the court said: "It is certain that to every valid contract there must be parties. Aggregate corporations cannot contract without vote, because there is no other way in which they can express their assent. Such corporations may contract by their agents; but such agents must have authority given them for that purpose. In this case no such authority was given to Mr. Foster. And, admitting that the corporation might be bound by subsequent assent, there is no evidence that any such assent was given." See also Carlisle v. Saginaw Valley, etc., R. Co., 27 Mich. 315; Shurtz v. Schoolcraft, etc., R. Co., 9 Mich. 269; Walker v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., 34 Miss. 245; Troy, etc., R. Co. v. War-

ratify them.¹ Subscriptions must be thrown open to the public,² but the commissioners themselves may subscribe.³ Failure to take a prescribed oath will not invalidate the acts of commissioners,⁴ but their powers⁵ terminate upon organization.⁶

4. Enforcement of the Contract—a. SUBSCRIBER'S LIABILITY TO PAY.—By the great weight of authority, the contract of subscription, irrespective of its language, implies a liability on the part of the subscriber to pay.⁷ There is, however, a line of earlier and, ren, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 310; Granger's Market Co. v. Vinson, 6 Oregon 174; Howard's Case, L. R., 1 Ch. 561; Taggart v. Western Md. R. Co., 24 Md. 563; 89 Am. Dec. 760; Melvin v. Hoitt, 52 N. H. 61; Mansfield, etc., R. Co. v. Brown, 26 Ohio St. 223; Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Yandal, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 294.

A subscription has been held to be valid when made to one not a commissioner, but having an interest in the company, who went about soliciting subscriptions in order to secure the charter. Northeastern R. Co. v. Rodrigues, 10 Rich. (S. Car.) 278.

1. Walker v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., 34 Miss. 245. Also Judah v. American Live Stock Ins. Co., 4 Ind. 333; Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Gifford, 87 N. Y. 294; Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Yandal, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 294.

2. Brower v. Passenger R. Co., 3 Phila. (Pa.) 161.

3. Walker v. Devereaux, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 229; Haight v. Day, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 18. Where one appointed to receive subscriptions himself subscribes, he cannot release himself by taking his name from the subscription paper before returning the same. Cheraw, etc., R. Co. v. White, 14 S. Car. 51.

4. Hollman v. Williamsport, etc., Turnpike Co., 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 462.

5. Powers of Commissioners.—Commissioners act judicially in allotting shares, but ministerially in taking subscriptions. Crocker v. Crane, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 211. Independent of statute they may fix the limit of subscriptions. Saugatuck, etc., R. Co. v. Westport, 39 Conn. 348. But the corporation may reject subscriptions by those not qualified. Union Bank v. McDonough, 5 La. 63.

6. James v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 2 Disney (Ohio) 261; Smith v. Bangs, 15 Ill. 399; Wellersburg, etc., Road Co. v. Hoffman, 9 Md. 559; Peninsular, etc., R. Co. v. Duncan, 28 Mich. 130; Hardenburgh v. Farmers', etc.,

Bank, 3 N. J. Eq. 68; Walker v. Devereaux, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 229; Crocker v. Crane, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 211; 34 Am. Dec. 228; State v. Lehre, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 234.

After organization, all subscriptions are to be regarded as received by the directors and not by the stockholders, and an agreement with the former will be considered binding on the corporation. Ridgefield, etc., R. Co. v. Brush, 43 Conn. 86.

The reception of subscriptions by the president is no more out of the line of his duty than receiving payment for any other debts. East New York, etc., R. Co. v. Lighthall, 5 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 458; 36 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 481.

7. Beene v. Cahawba, etc., R. Co., 3 Ala. 660; Mitchell v. Beckman, 64 Cal. 117; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 40; Hartford, etc., R. Co. v. Kennedy, 12 Conn. 500; Danbury, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, 22 Conn. 435; Miller v. Wild Cat, etc., Road Co., 52 Ind. 51; Waukon, etc., R. Co. v. Dwyer, 49 Iowa 121; Nulton v. Clayton, 54 Iowa 425; 37 Am. Rep. 213; Fry v. Lexington, etc., R. Co., 2 Metc. (Ky.) 314; Gill v. Kentucky, etc., Min. Co., 7 Bush (Ky.) 635; Mt. Sterling Coal-road Co. v. Little, 14 Bush (Ky.) 429; Bangor Bridge Co. v. McMahon, 10 Me. 478; Kennebec, etc., R. Co. v. Palmer, 34 Me. 366; Buckfield Branch R. Co. v. Irish, 39 Me. 44; Penobscot, etc., R. Co. v. Dunn, 39 Me. 587; Hughes v. Antietam Mfg. Co., 34 Md. 316; Dexter, etc., Co. v. Millard, 3 Mich. 91; Small v. Herkimer Mfg. Co., 2 N. Y. 330; Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Dudley, 14 N. Y. 336; Lake Ontario, etc., R. Co. v. Mason, 16 N. Y. 451; Rensselaer, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Barton, 16 N. Y. 457n.; Dayton v. Borst, 31 N. Y. 435; Mann v. Currie, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 294; Northern R. Co. v. Miller, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 268; Fort Edward, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Payne, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 567; Troy, etc., R.

it is believed, less authoritative decisions requiring an express promise, either in the subscription or the charter, in order to hold the subscriber.¹ When the contract is once formed the subscriber

Co. v. Tibbits, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 297; Ogdensburg, etc., R. Co. v. Frost, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 541; Hartford, etc., R. Co. v. Croswell, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 383; 40 Am. Dec. 354; Spear v. Crawford, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 20; 28 Am. Dec. 513; Merrimac Min. Co. v. Levy, 54 Pa. St. 227; 93 Am. Dec. 697; Huddersfield Canal Co. v. Buckley, 7 T. R. 36; Chase v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 5 Lea (Tenn.) 415; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 349; Gibbons v. Grinsel, 79 Wis. 365; Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45; Webster v. Upton, 91 U. S. 65; Hawley v. Upton, 102 U. S. 314; Connecticut, etc., R. Co. v. Bailey, 24 Vt. 465; 58 Am. Dec. 181; Ex parte Tothill, 35 L. J. Ch. 120; Levick's Case, 30 L. J. Ch. 180; Ex parte Tooth, 19 L. T., N. S. 599; Sidney's Case, L. R., 13 Eq. 228; In re London, etc., Coal Co., 5 Ch. Div. 525; Ex parte Palmer, 2 Ir. Eq. 573.

Subscribers promising to pay $25 "for each share of stock opposite each of our names" are severally liable, each for the amount opposite his own name. Price v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co., 18 Ind. 138.

A subscriber to a prospective corporation is liable for the amount of stock opposite his name, and the corporation, when organized, can enforce the liability. Ashuelot Boot, etc., Co. v. Hoit, 56 N. H. 548.

A corporation may receive subscriptions and sue thereon before being fully organized. Oregon Cent. R. Co. v. Scoggin, 3 Oregon 161.

A subscriber to a company chartered but not organized, where the charter provides for subscription before organization, is bound, unless he expressly dissents before the acceptance of the charter. Gleaves v. Brick Church Turnpike Co., 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 491.

A resolution to drop delinquent subscribers from the rolls, never enforced, will not release from liability on his subscription one who has since claimed the benefits of membership. Hayes v. Franklin County Lumber Co. (Neb. 1892), 53 N. W. Rep. 381.

A private agreement with a third party that the latter shall pay for the stock does not release the subscriber. Williams v. Benet, 34 S. Car. 112.

But in Pennsylvania, a husband is not liable upon a subscription made by him for his wife in her name. Shields v. Casey (Pa. 1893), 25 Atl. Rep. 619.

1. In Belfast, etc., R. Co. v. Moore, 60 Me. 561, it was held that a joint subscription by which the signers agreed to take the amounts set opposite their names agreeable to foregoing conditions, imposed no obligation to pay therefor; that the conditions which contained no words of promise did not change the force of the agreement in this particular, and that the latter was not affected by the condition in the charter purporting to render a subscriber liable for the unpaid balance after sale of his shares. The court, in reaching its conclusion, reviewed the authorities as follows: "It is held by many courts that a subscription to stock like the one signed by the defendant, or indeed any subscription, creates an obligation of actual payment unless such an obligation is excluded by its terms. Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Tibbits, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 297. On the other hand, by a series of decisions commencing as early as the case of Andover, etc., Turnpike Corp. v. Gould, 6 Mass. 40, when this state was a part of Massachusetts, and continuing through our own reports down to the present time, it has been uniformly held that such a subscription as the present imposes no personal obligation to pay, and that the only remedy for the collection of assessments is that provided by the charter. Many of these decisions, and sufficient for our purpose, here are referred to in the case of Kennebec, etc., R. Co. v. Kendall, 31 Me. 470. The same principle is also recognized in Penobscot, etc., R. Co. v. Dunn, 39 Me. 594; and in many other cases, both in this and other states, which it is unnecessary to cite." See also New Hampshire Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson, 30 N. H. 390; White Mountains, etc., R. Co. v. Eastman, 34 N. H. 124; Essex Bridge Co. v. Tuttle, 2 Vt. 393; Connecticut, etc., R. Co. v. Bailey, 24 Vt. 465; 58 Am. Dec. 181; Atlantic Cotton Mills v. Abbott, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 423; Katama Land Co. v. Jernegan, 126 Mass. 155; Boston, etc., R. Co. v.

cannot relieve himself from its obligations without the consent of the corporation,¹ and not then if the rights of creditors would be prejudiced.² In Pennsylvania, subscriptions may be withdrawn at any time before the articles of incorporation are filed,³ but it has elsewhere been held that there can be no withdrawal after acceptance by the company.⁴

b. CALLS AND ASSESSMENTS—(1) Definition.—The terms "calls" and "assessments" are often used indiscriminately to denote the exercise by the corporation of its right to declare due and to collect subscriptions or a part thereof.⁵ The word "calls," Wellington, 113 Mass. 79; Buckfield Branch R. Co. v. Irish, 39 Me. 44; Russell v. Bristol, 49 Conn. 251.

"It is to be noticed," says Mr. Cook in his work on Stock and Stockholders (p. 88), "that this rule was established before the announcement of that great principle of American law, that the capital stock of a corporation is a trust fund for the benefit of its creditors."

1. A subscriber cannot release himself from liability to pay unless with the consent of the corporation. The subscription is a contract, which cannot be dissolved at the option of one party. Gaff v. Flesher, 33 Ohio St. 107, citing Muskingum Valley Turnpike Co. v. Ward, 13 Ohio 120; 42 Am. Dec. 191; Graff v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 31 Pa. St. 489; Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 48.

A subscriber to the stock of a corporation in process of organization can neither withdraw nor be released by directors without consent of all the subscribers. Hughes v. Antietam Mfg. Co., 34 Md. 316.

While a subscriber may, perhaps, refuse to sign articles of association, the corporation, having come into legal existence, may collect his subscription. Johnson v. Wabash, etc., Plank Road Co., 16 Ind. 389.

2. Carter v. Union Printing Co. (Ark. 1891), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 257; Farnsworth v. Robbins, 36 Minn. 369; Putnam v. New Albany, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 365. Compare Glenn v. Hackett, 91 Ala. 316; Bates v. Great Western Tel. Co., 134 Ill. 536.

But a subscription may be modified while the corporation is solvent, according to the terms of a condition, and such modification acquiesced in for fifteen years will not be set aside. Putnam v. New Albany, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 365.

But the cancellation of a percentage upon each subscription may be valid as between company and subscriber. Glenn v. Hatchett, 91 Ala. 316.

3. Garrett v. Dillsburg, etc., R. Co., 78 Pa. St. 465; Muncy Traction Engine Co. v. De La Green (Pa. 1888), 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 328; Auburn Bolt, etc., Works v. Schultz (Pa. 1891), 22 Atl. Rep. 904; Cook v. Chittenden, 25 Fed. Rep. 544. Compare Phipps v. Jones, 20 Pa. St. 260; 59 Am. Dec. 708; Edinboro Academy v. Robinson, 37 Pa. St. 210; 78 Am. Dec. 421; Strasburg R. Co. v. Echternacht, 21 Pa. St. 220; 60 Am. Dec. 49; Shoer v. Lancaster Co. Park Assoc., 68 Pa. St. 429.

4. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Neely, 64 Tex. 344.

5. See Braddock v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 45 N. J. L. 363; Cook, Stock & Stockholders, § 104.

A call is an application to the shareholders for money. Newry, etc., R. Co. v. Edmonds, 2 Exch. 119.

A call or assessment has been defined as a rating or fixing of the proportion by the board of directors, which every subscriber is to pay of his subscription, when notified of it and when called in. Spangler v. Indiana, etc., R. Co., 21 Ill. 276.

In Re Cawley, 42 Ch. Div. 209; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 425, Fry, L. J., said: "I scarcely know what the making of a call is, except the fixing of a time at which the money is to be paid."

"A company call is but a step in the process of collection." Strong, J., Hatch v. Dana, 101 U. S. 205.

In Braddock v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 45 N. J. L. 363, a call is said to be nothing more than an official declaration that the sums subscribed are required to be paid.

A circular sent to every stockholder, stating that the directors had resolved on making a call, constitutes however, has other meanings,¹ while the term "assessments" is said to refer more properly to "amounts levied upon shareholders after their subscriptions have been fully paid."²

(2) When Calls Are Necessary.—The levy of a call or assessment is usually the first step in the enforcement of the contract of subscription, and, in the ordinary form of subscription, such a levy is a condition precedent to collection.³

But calls are unnecessary where the charter⁴ or arti-

one. Shaw v. Rowley, 16 M. & W. 810.

An order from the board of directors to the president to collect subscriptions is a call. Braddock v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 45 N. J. L. 363.

An order appointing a receiver and authorizing him to prosecute actions, does not amount to a call from which prescription will run. Glenn v. Macon, 32 Fed. Rep. 7.

1. Reg. v. Londonderry, etc., R. Co., 13 Q. B. 998; 66 E. C. L. 997. In Ambergate R. Co. v. Mitchell, 4 Exch. Rep. 542, Baron Parke, says: "The word 'call' is capable of three meanings. It may either mean the resolution or its notification, or the time when it becomes payable. It must mean either one of these three." And see CALLS, vol. 2, p. 714.

2. 2 Beach on Corporations, § 590, where the author also says: "The correct use of the word is shown by cases holding that while stock issued as 'non-assessable,' cannot be assessed beyond the full par value, yet that these words do not exempt the holder from the payment of calls until the full face value has been paid. Price's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 421; Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45; Sagory v. Dubois, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 466; Taylor on Corporations, § 522."

3. Calls Necessary.—Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. Rowley, 9 Fla. 508; North, etc., R. Co. v. Spullock, 88 Ga. 283. Banet v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 504, where the court says: "No action can be maintained against a stockholder for an installment on his subscription until the board has directed the call to be made." Spangler v. Indiana, etc., R. Co., 21 Ill. 276; Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Cramer, 23 Ind. 490; Grosse Isle Hotel Co. v. L'Anson, 42 N. J. L. 10; 43 N. J. L. 442; Braddock v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 45 N. J. L. 363; Williams v. Taylor, 120 N. Y. 244; Che-raw, etc., R. Co. v. Garland, 14 S. Car. 63; Chandler v. Siddle, 10 Nat. Bankr.

Reg. 236; Wilbur v. Stockholders, 18 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 178. In Bank of South Australia v. Abrahams, L. R., 6 P. C. 262, the court says: "The capital not paid up is, according to the usual forms of deeds of settlement (the form in this case), only sub modo the property of the company. The company has no absolute right, and the shareholder is under no absolute liability to pay. The right only arises if, and when, calls are made by the directors in the exercise of a discretion within limits both of time and amount prescribed by the deed. The due making of the call by the resolution of a board of directors is an essential condition precedent." See also Grissell's Case, L. R., 1 Ch. 535; Granite Roofing Co. v. Michael, 54 Md. 65.

The rule applies though stock is fictitiously paid up. But a call does not affect stock subsequently subscribed. Pike v. Bangor, etc., Shore Line R. Co., 68 Me. 445. The subscriber cannot be garnished for unpaid installments until after a call has been made. Teague v. Le Grand, 85 Ala. 493; 7 Am. St. Rep. 64; Parks v. Heman, 7 Mo. App. 14.

4. In Phoenix Warehousing Co. v. Badger, 67 N. Y. 294, the court, by Rapallo, J., said: "This action was properly brought upon the original subscription and it was not necessary to aver calls. By his subscription, to which no condition or stipulation as to the time of payment was attached, the defendant undertook to pay for his shares, according to the conditions of the charter. (Rensselaer, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Barton, 16 N. Y. 457, note; Lake Ontario, etc., R. Co. v. Mason, 16 N. Y. 451.) The act under which this company was incorporated, requires that the whole capital stock be paid in within two years. Without intimating that this is a limitation upon the right of the company or the receiver to require immediate payment, it may be observed that the two cles¹ make the amount payable at a time certain, or where the corporation has passed into the hands of a receiver,² even though the charter requires calls to be made by the directors.³

(3) Who May Levy Calls—(a) The Directors.—In the absence of charter provisions to the contrary, the directors have implied power to levy calls,⁴ and it has been held that such power may be delegated to them by the stockholders, even where it is vested in the latter.⁵ But the directors themselves cannot delegate their power to make calls,⁶ though they may authorize another to fix years had elapsed, and upon any theory the subscription was past due when this action was commenced."

1. Waukon, etc., R. Co. v. Dwyer, 49 Iowa 121. In this case it is said: "The object of an assessment, where one is necessary, is to fix the amount that may be called for, and the time when it may be called for. But in the case at bar both amount and time of payment were fixed by the articles of incorporation. Nothing remained to be determined but the needs of the company resulting from the expenditures. When the company notified defendant, as the petition avers, that, we think, was a sufficient determination that the expenditures required payment of the stock."

2. Hatch v. Dana, 101 U. S. 205. In Henry v. Railroad Company, 17 Ohio, 187, it was said: "'When a company becoming insolvent, as in this case, abandons all action under its charter, the original mode of making calls upon the stockholders cannot be pursued. The debt, therefore, from that time must be treated as due without further demand.' This means, of course, as between the debtor and the creditor of the corporation. After all, a company call is but a step in the process of collection, and a court of equity may pursue its own mode of collection, so that no injustice is done to the debtor." See also Curry v. Woodward, 53 Ala. 371; Glenn v. Semple, 80 Ala. 159; 60 Am. Rep. 92; Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143.

3. Sagory v. Dubois, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 466. See also Glenn v. Saxton, 68 Cal. 353; Crawford v. Rohrer, 59 Md. 599; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 81.

But in Louisiana Paper Co. v. Waples, 3 Woods (U. S.) 34, a charter of the company prescribed in what installments forty per cent. of the stock should be paid, and then declared: "The balance on each share, or any portion of such balance, shall not be called for unless with the assent of three-fourths of the stockholders, and then only to increase the business of the company." It was held, that after payment by a stockholder of forty per cent. of his stock, he was not liable to the company, or its creditors, for the residue or any part thereof, unless the same had been called for by a vote of three-fourths of the stockholders.

4. Budd v. Multnomah St. R. Co., 15 Oregon 413; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 551; 3 Am. St. Rep. 169; Ambergate R. Co. v. Mitchell, 4 Ex. 540; Gorman v. Guardian Sav. Bank, 4 Mo. App. 180.

5. Rives v. Montgomery, etc., Plank R. Co., 30 Ala. 92. In this case the charter of an incorporated plank road company authorized the stockholders to make calls for payment on subscriptions and to appoint a board of directors consisting of stockholders "to manage the business of the corporation." It was held that the stockholders might delegate to the board of directors the power to call in stock.

But, under the Massachusetts Act of 1809, the power to assess was vested in the corporation, and it was held that authority to delegate it could not be inferred from a by-law giving the directors general managing powers. Ex parte Winsor, 3 Story (U. S.) 411.

6. Power Cannot be Delegated by Directors.—In Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 554, the court, by Aldis, J., said: "The charter provides that the directors shall give notice, etc. When the charter requires the directors to do some specific act there seems to be a stronger reason why they should be held incapable of delegating such authority, than when mere general powers are conferred upon them. The charter of this, as of most corporations, authorizes the directors 'to transact the general business of the company,' and there is no doubt that as to the ordinary routine business of the amounts and times of payment,¹ and may ratify calls made by others without authority.² When the power is conferred upon the board, there must be a quorum in order to exercise it.³ By the weight of American authority, de facto directors may levy calls.⁴

the corporation they can transact it, as most companies do, through sub-committees. The duty here specified is of a class requiring some exercise of judgment and discretion, though not, perhaps, so important, or partaking so much of the judicial function as many others; but when the words thus expressly point to a particular duty to be performed by the directors, and not to general business or a class of duties, we think the fair intent of the law is that they should act as a body in regard to the particular matter, and not delegate their discretion or duty to a sub-committee." See also Banet v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 504; Monmouth Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Lowell, 59 Me. 504; Pike v. Bangor, etc., Shore Line R. Co., 68 Me. 445; Farmer's F. Mutual Ins. Co. v. Chase, 56 N. H. 341; Silver Hook Road v. Greene, 12 R. I. 164.

1. Banet v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 504. See also Hayes v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 38 Pa. St. 81.

2. Read v. Memphis, etc., Gas Co., 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 545; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536.

A call made by less than a quorum of directors is valid if subsequently ratified by the proper number. Austin's Case, 24 L. T., N. S. 932.

Payment on calls is a waiver of irregularities in number and qualifications of the directors issuing them. Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Vason, 57 Ga. 314.

3. Bottomley's Case, 16 Ch. Div. 681; Price v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co., 13 Ind. 58; Hamilton v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co., 13 Ind. 347.

A call by directors, whom an irregularly called meeting has attempted to discharge, is valid. Swansea Dock Co. v. Levien, 20 L. J. Ex. 447.

A requisition for payment is binding if made by the directors under authority of by-laws, though without assent of each individual director. Smith v. Natchez Steamboat Co., 1 How. (Miss.) 479.

But a call made by one stockholder is invalid, though he alone was present at the time and place for the meeting, and there was no rule as to a quorum. Sharpe v. Dawes, 2 Q. B. Div. 26.

4. Fairfield County Turnpike Co. v. Thorp, 13 Conn. 184. See also Banet v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 504; Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Vason, 57 Ga. 314; Johnson v. Crawfordsville R. Co., 11 Ind. 280; Steinmetz v. Versailles, etc., R. Co., 57 Ind. 457; Atherton v. Sugar Creek, etc., Turnpike Co., 67 Ind. 334; McCall v. Byram Mfg. Co., 6 Conn. 428; Vernon Society v. Hills, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 23.

But in Moses v. Tompkins, 84 Ala. 613, the fact that the directors were illegally chosen was held ground for enjoining a call.

In People's Mut. Ins. Co. v. Westcott, 11 Gray (Mass.) 442, the court, by Hoar, J., said: "It is urged on behalf of the plaintiffs that these were directors de facto, actually holding and exercising the office at the time the assessment was made, and that it is not open to the defendants to object collaterally to the legality of their election. But we think the doctrine of the validity of acts done colore officii, although well established by the authorities cited, is not applicable to this case. In Baird v. Bank of Washington, 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 411, which is the case most relied on, a director of the bank was chosen at a meeting at which less than a quorum was present; and it was held that his acts as an agent and officer of the bank were valid as between the bank and third persons. But these defendants are not to be regarded as third persons in their relation to the insurance company. They are not debtors absolutely to the corporation. By the terms of their contract, their liability can only be created by an assessment or call made by the directors, officers in whose selection they are entitled to a vote. No vote to increase the number had been passed at any meeting held for such a purpose. They were not bound to recognize as directors persons who were never lawfully chosen, and who were usurping the functions of an office already filled."

So in England it is a defense to an action to enforce a call, that it was not made by legally elected directors. Swansea Dock Co. v. Levien, 20 L. J. Ex. 447; Garden Gully, etc., Co. v. McLister, L. R., 1 App. Cas. 39; How-

(b) The Courts.—A court of equity will levy a call, where the corporate authorities fail in their duty or cannot act;¹ so the beach Coal Co. v. Teague, 5 H & N. 151.

A call cannot be enforced when made by less than a quorum of subscribers, no directors having been duly appointed Howbeach Coal Co. v. Teague, 5 H. & N. 151.

A majority of a quorum must concur in levying the call. Hamilton v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co., 13 Ind. 347; Price v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co., 13 Ind. 58; Cowley v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co., 13 Ind. 61; Pike v. Bangor, etc., Shore Line R. Co., 68 Me. 445; Silver Hook Road v. Greene, 12 R. I. 164.

1. Calls by the Court.—In Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 155, the court by Woods, J., said: "It is well settled that when stock is subscribed to be paid upon the call of the company, and the company refuses or neglects to make the call, a court of equity may itself make the call, if the interests of the creditors require it. The court will do what it is the duty of the company to do. Curry v. Woodward, 53 Ala. 371; Robinson v. Bank of Darien, etc., 18 Ga. 65; Ward v. Griswoldville Mfg. Co., 16 Conn. 593. But under such circumstances, before there is any obligation upon the stockholder to pay without an assessment and call by the company, there must be some order of a court of competent jurisdiction, or, at the very least, some authorized demand upon him for payment."

In Hatch v. Dana, 101 U. S. 205, this subject underwent discussion. Here, a bill in the nature of a creditor's bill sought to establish the liability of the stockholders of a corporation on unpaid subscriptions. By the terms of the subscriptions stockholders were to pay as called for by the company; but the court held that it was not necessary that a formal call should be made before the bill could be filed, and said that the filing of the bill was equivalent to a call. The court cited and relied upon Ogilvie v. Knox Ins. Co., 22 How. (U. S.) 380; Bartlett v. Drew, 57 N. Y. 587; Pierce v. Milwaukee Constr. Co., 38 Wis. 253; Marsh v. Burroughs, 1 Woods (U. S.) 468; Henry v. Vermillion, etc., R. Co., 17 Ohio 189; Dalton, etc., R. Co. v. McDaniel, 56 Ga. 191; and distinguished the cases of Wood v. Dummer, 3 Mason (U. S.)

308; Pollard v. Bailey, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 520; Terry v. Tubman, 92 U. S. 156. It was contended by the defendants that the bill would not lie without an account being taken of their indebtedness and without bringing in all the stockholders for contribution. It was insisted also that by the terms of the subscriptions subscribers were to pay for their shares "as called for by the said company," and that a court of equity should not enforce the contract otherwise than as contemplated in the subscription; but the court, Strong, J., delivering the opinion, declared that these decisions were not supported by the authorities, certainly not by the more modern ones, and that they were not in harmony with reason when considered with reference to the facts of the case. The opinion adverted to the practice sometimes adopted by the English courts to award a mandamus to compel directors to make necessary calls, and referred to Reg. v. Victoria Park Co., 1 Ad. & El., N. S. 288; 41 E. C. L. 544; Reg. v. Ledgard, 1 Ad. & El., N. S. 614; 41 E. C. L. 697; Rex v. St. Katharine Dock Co., 4 B. & Ad. 360; 24 E. C. L. 73; but said that the remedy in equity was more complete and well recognized, referring to Ward v. Griswoldville Mfg. Co., 16 Conn. 593. See also Curry v. Woodward, 53 Ala. 371; Glenn v. Semple, 80 Ala. 159; 60 Am. Rep. 92; Glenn v. Saxton, 68 Cal. 353; Glenn v. Dodge (D. C. 1885), 3 Cent. Rep. 283; Ward v. Griswoldville Mfg. Co., 16 Conn. 593; Great Western Tel. Co. v. Gray, 122 Ill. 630; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 260; Chandler v. Keith, 42 Iowa 99; Shockley v. Fisher, 75 Mo. 498; Glenn v. Williams, 60 Md. 93; Boeppler v. Menown, 7 Mo. App. 447; Ogilvie v. Knox Ins. Co., 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 380; Thompson v. Reno Sav. Bank, 19 Nev. 103; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 203; 3 Am. St. Rep. 797; Henry v. Vermillion, etc., R. Co., 17 Ohio 187; Franklin Sav. Bank v. Fatzinger (Pa. 1886), 4 Atl. Rep. 912; Citizens', etc., Sav. Bank v. Gillespie, 115 Pa. St. 564; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 316; Hatch v. Dana, 101 U. S. 205; Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143; Myers v. Seeley, 10 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 411; Wilber v. Stockholders, etc., 18 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 178; Marsh v. Burroughs, power to make and enforce calls may be exercised by receivers,¹ or trustees,² or assignees,³ as ministers of the courts and representatives of the directors.

The Contract of Subscription. STOCKHOLDERS. Enforcement of the Contract.

(4) How Formulated.—In the United States no particular formula is necessary in declaring a call.⁴ Even where a resolution is passed it need not be recorded;⁵ and, at most, an entry on the minute book of the meeting of the directors will suffice.⁶ In England, a formal resolution appears to be usual, if not necessary, and it must state the amount and date of maturing of the call.⁷ Such a resolution is valid, though a similar one has been rejected at the same meeting.⁸

(5) Requisites and Validity.—Calls must be impartial, must bear equally upon all stockholders,⁹ and be made as the purposes of

1 Woods (U. S.) 463; Adler v. Milwaukee Brick Mfg. Co., 13 Wis. 57; Miller's Case, 54 L. J. Ch. 141; Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 318; Glenn v. Liggett, 135 U. S. 533.

In Glenn v. Saxton, 68 Cal. 358, the court, per Ross, J., says: "The call made by the chancery court was the same in effect as if it had been made by the president and directors of the corporation, and when made, the contract of the defendant to pay became absolute, and a cause of action against him for the amount of his assessment accrued in favor of the trustee appointed by the court."

1. Hall v. U. S. Ins. Co., 5 Gill (Md.) 484; Mann v. Pentz, 3 N. Y. 415; Seymour v. Sturgess, 26 N. Y. 134; Rankine v. Elliott, 16 N. Y. 377.

Assessments by a receiver upon an ex parte order of the court are not conclusive. Cuykendall v. Corning, 88 N. Y. 129; Story v. Furman, 25 N. Y. 215; Walker v. Crain, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 128.

A receiver before making calls must show the amount of corporate indebtedness and liability of each share, where the subscription provides that the unpaid balance shall be subject to the call of the directors, as instructed by the stockholders. Chandler v. Keith, 42 Iowa 99.

2. Lewis v. Glenn, 84 Va. 947.

3. Germantown, etc., R. Co. v. Fitter, 60 Pa. St. 124; 100 Am. Dec. 546. In this case the corporation became embarrassed, and an assignment was made for the benefit of creditors. By the procurement of the assignee the brokers made a call which but for the assignment it would have been within their power to make. It was held that the call was valid.

4. Citizens' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Sortwell, 10 Allen (Mass.) 112. All that is really necessary is that there should be some act or resolution which evinces or shows a clear official intent to render due and payable a part of all the unpaid subscription. Budd v. Multnomah St. R. Co., 15 Oregon 418; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 551; 3 Am. St. Rep. 169.

5. Hayes v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 38 Pa. St. 81.

6. Fox v. Allensville, etc., Turnpike Co., 46 Ind. 31.

7. In re Cawley, 42 Ch. Div. 209; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 425.

8. Ex parte Faris, 3 Kay & J. 408; In re Cawley, 42 Ch. Div. 209; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 425. In this case it was further held that a resolution may be made the first business of a meeting in order to prevent a transfer to escape liability.

9. Calls Must be Impartial and Uniform.—Pike v. Bangor, etc., Shore Line R. Co., 68 Me. 445; Preston v. Grand Collier Dock Co., 11 Sim. 327; Cannon v. Trask, L. R., 20 Eq. 669.

An assessment of 35 per cent. upon one who had already paid 40 per cent. while some of the stockholders had paid but 20 per cent., is unequal and void, and will be so treated though made by a court of another state. Great Western Tel. Co. v. Burnham, 79 Wis. 47; 24 Am. St. Rep. 698.

Where the complainant does equity by paying installments already assessed, and costs of action at law, equity will protect him against any assessment not levied on other stockholders. Yard v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 10 N. J. Eq. 480; 64 Am. Dec. 467.

the business require.¹ The number of shares must first be fixed,² and the required amount subscribed for.³ Levy may be made before incorporation,⁴ but the terms of a conditional subscription

A by-law that any stockholder paying fifty per cent. on his shares shall be discharged from future calls, is valid, and relieves those who comply with it from liability to creditors of the company after dissolution. Slee v. Bloom, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 456; 10 Am. Dec. 273.

Collusive prepayment by the directors of an insolvent company of calls which they at once drew upon for their fees, is valid, though articles of association provide for payment in advance. Sykes' Case, L. R., 13 Eq. 255.

Prepayment after filing of a petition for dissolution, but before the making of an order, will be treated as a loan and not payment. Pennington's Case, 45 L. T. 433. But payment after admitted insolvency, though before filing a petition, is a valid payment in advance. Ramwell's Case, 50 L. J. Ch. 827.

1. Williams v. Taylor, 120 N. Y. 244.

2. Number of Shares Must be Fixed.—Somerset, etc., R. Co. v. Cushing, 45 Me. 530; Cabot, etc., Bridge Co. v. Chapin, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 50; Somerset R. Co. v. Clarke, 61 Me. 384; Worcester, etc., R. Co. v. Hinds, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 110; Stoneham Branch R. Co. v. Gould, 2 Gray (Mass.) 277; Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Newton, 8 Gray (Mass.) 506; Central Turnpike Corp. v. Valentine, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 142. And where the number of shares within certain limits is left to the directors to fix, they must do so before levying assessments. Worcester, etc., R. Co. v. Hinds, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 110; following Portland, etc., R. Co. v. Graham, 11 Met. (Mass.) 1; Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Chandler, 13 Met. (Mass.) 312; and cases infra, next note.

3. Maxwell, J., says in Hale v. Sanborn, 16 Neb. 3: "The case, therefore, is similar to that of Livesey v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 50, in which it was held that where the capital stock is fixed at a given sum, divided into shares of a certain amount each, the capital so fixed must be fully subscribed before an action will lie against a subscriber to recover assessments levied on the shares of stock, unless there is a clear provision in the contract to proceed with the accomplishment of the main design with a less subscription than the whole amount of capital specified, or there is a waiver of the condition precedent. Salem Milldam Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 23; 9 Pick. (Mass.) 195; Cabot, etc., Bridge v. Chapin, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 53; Shurtz v. Schoolcraft, etc., R. Co., 9 Mich. 269; Topeka Bridge Co. v. Cummings, 3 Kan. 76; Somerset R. Co. v. Clarke, 61 Me. 384; New Hampshire Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson, 30 N. H. 404; 64 Am. Dec. 304; Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Preston, 35 Iowa 118; Fox v. Clifton, 8 Bing. 776; Pitchford v. Davies, 5 M. & W. 2; Fry v. Lexington, etc., R. Co., 2 Metc. (Ky.) 323; Estabrook v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 76; Boehme v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 80."

Subscriptions must be taken by those apparently able to pay. Lewey's Island R. Co. v. Bolton, 48 Me. 451; 77 Am. Dec. 236; Penobscot R. Co. v. White, 41 Me. 512; 66 Am. Dec. 257; Read v. Memphis, etc., Gas Co., 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 545.

A subscription for preferred stock to draw ten per cent. interest at once cannot be reckoned as part of the capital stock subscribed. Lewey's Island R. Co. v. Bolton, 48 Me. 451; 77 Am. Dec. 236.

But where such shares are required to be taken by responsible parties, the fact that some turn out to be worthless will not invalidate subscriptions if obtained in good faith. Penobscot R. Co. v. Dummer, 40 Me. 172. And see infra, this title, Defenses.

4. Calls Before Incorporation.—Mar-seilles Land Co. v. Aldrich, 86 Ill. 504.

A company cannot enforce assessments levied before its incorporation by a joint stock association whose members afterwards incorporated. Richmond Factory Assoc. v. Clarke, 61 Me. 351.

Subscribers who sign an agreement after the act of incorporation is passed to pay all legal assessments that may be made after the corporation shall be organized, are personally liable for an assessment laid to defray preliminary expenses. Salem Mill Dam. Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 23; Central Turnpike Corp. v. Valentine, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 147.

must be performed before assessment.¹ The expediency of calls cannot be questioned by the stockholders,² and irregularities in the levy may be waived by implication.³

(6) Notice—(a) Necessity.—Where the subscription itself, or the charter, or by-laws, or a statute requires it, notice of a call is a condition precedent⁴ to suit for the collection thereof; and the notice must comply substantially with the requirements.⁵ A re-

1. Calls Where Subscription is Conditional.—Ticonic Water Power, etc., Co. v. Lang, 63 Me. 480.

But error in making a call before liability accrues may be corrected by a subsequent call after condition fulfilled and before suit brought. Philadelphia, etc. R. Co. v. Hickman, 28 Pa. St. 318. A subscription providing that not more than five dollars per share should be assessed at one time, two assessments laid at the same time, but requiring not more than five dollars at one payment, are binding. Penobscot, etc., R. Co. v. Dunn, 39 Me. 587.

Where the terms of subscription required that no more than five dollars be assessed at the same time, it was held that if no more be required to be paid at one time, other assessments might be voted at the same time. Penobscot R. Co. v. Dummer, 40 Me. 172; 63 Am. Dec. 654.

Calls payable March 1, '54, Dec. 1, '54, and March 1, '55, do not violate a provision forbidding more than two calls in twelve months. Dinkgrave v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 10 La. Ann. 514.

2. Expediency.—The question of expediency is a matter for the determination of the board of directors. Chouteau Ins. Co. v. Floyd, 74 Mo. 286. See also Budd v. Multnomah St. R. Co., 15 Oregon 413; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 551; 3 Am. St. Rep. 169; New Albany, etc., R. Co. v. Fields, 10 Ind. 187; Bailey v. Birkenhead, etc., R. Co., 12 Beav. 433; Yetts v. Norfolk R. Co., 3 De G. & Sm. 293; Ex parte Stanley, 33 L. J. Ch. 535; Judah v. American L. S. Ins. Co., 4 Ind. 333. In the case last cited it was said that if every stockholder in an insurance company like that in question (a live stock insurance company), might be allowed to dispute the necessity of every assessment upon his stock, the right of those insured to obtain a speedy reimbursement of losses would be placed too much at hazard.

A subscriber to stock in a park association who fails to attend a duly advertised meeting of subscribers, which appointed a committee to buy lands, to procure a charter and call for subscriptions, etc., such a provision being in accordance with the subscription, is liable to suit by the corporation, it being the legal trustee to receive and administer the subscription funds. Shober v. Lancaster County Park Assoc., 68 Pa. St. 429.

It is sufficient to show a lawful levy that written notice was given of the meeting, and that the latter was regularly held and the assessment made. Younglove v. Steinman, 80 Cal. 375.

3. Waiver of Informalities.—Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Vason, 57 Ga. 314; York Tramways v. Willows, 8 Q. B. Div. 685. But the acts constituting waiver must be clearly proved. Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536.

Denial of membership is a waiver of calls. Cass v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 80 Pa. St. 31. But part payment of a subscription is not. Grosse Isle Hotel Co. v. L'Anson, 43 N. J. L. 442. Nor does the vote of a city to pay a call waive its invalidity. Pike v. Bangor, etc., Shore Line R. Co., 68 Me. 445.

4. Notice—When Essential.—Hughes v. Antietam Mfg. Co., 34 Md. 316; Scarlett v. Academy of Music, 43 Md. 211; Granite Roofing Co. v. Michael, 54 Md. 65; Dexter, etc., Plankroad Co. v. Millerd, 3 Mich. 91; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536. Contra Illinois River R. Co. v. Zimmer, 20 Ill. 654.

5. Macon, etc. R. Co. v. Vason, 57 Ga. 314, where fifty-nine days' notice was held insufficient, sixty being required.

Where the subscription provides for payment in installments within twenty days after a call, a subscriber is entitled to twenty days' notice of each call, before he can be sued thereunder. Cole v. Joliet Opera House Co., 79 Ill. 96.

But notice required to be at least sixty days before call need not be during sixty consecutive days prior; it is sufficient if given once sixty days before the time of payment. Muskingum spectable number of authorities supports the rule that notice is essential even if not expressly required,¹ but the majority of the cases appears to hold that under such conditions notice is unnecessary.² Where notice is given, no further demand is necessary before suit.³

(b) Form.—The form of the notice is not material.⁴ Personal Valley Turnpike Co. v. Ward, 13 Ohio 120; 42 Am. Dec. 191.

Where subscriptions were to be called for in installments it must appear that they were called for periodically; not that assessments were all made at one time, without notice of previous ones. Spangler v. Indiana, etc., R. Co., 21 Ill. 276.

Where the amount of a call was limited to 15 per cent. per annum, and 10 per cent. had been paid, a subsequent call need not specify the amount or place of payment, the latter being fixed by notice. Andrews v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 14 Ind. 169.

1. Dexter, etc., Plankroad Co. v. Miller, 3 Mich. 91; Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. Rowley, 9 Fla. 508; Spangler v. Indiana, etc., R. Co., 21 Ill. 275; Wear v. Jacksonville, etc., R. Co., 24 Ill. 593; Granite Roofing Co. v. Michael, 54 Md. 65; Braddock v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 45 N. J. L. 363; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536; Essex Bridge Co. v. Tuttle, 2 Vt. 393; Miles v. Bough, L. R., 3 Q. B. 845.

Notice held necessary because "the times, amount of installments and manner of payment were all to be prescribed by the president and directors of the corporation, depended upon their volition and action, and consequently were more properly within their knowledge." Carlisle v. Cahawba, etc., R. Co., 4 Ala. 70.

In Hughes v. Antietam Mfg. Co., 34 Md. 316, it was said: "To say that it (notice) is unnecessary, because the subscribers, who may be living in different parts of the county, and perhaps the state, are presumed in law to know all that is done by the directors, seems to us to be raising a presumption against the truth itself."

"It is a well-established principle of law that when the facts or circumstances upon which the performance of a contract depends, lie more particularly in the knowledge of the promisee than the promisor, the former must give the latter notice. Hence it would seem that since a subscription is not due absolutely, but only on call, and the time, place and amount of the call is fixed by persons other than the subscribers, the better and more reasonable rule would be that notice of the call should be required and must be given." Cook, Stock and Stockholders, § 118.

2. Grubbs v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 50 Ala. 398; Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. Rowley, 9 Fla. 508; Wilson v. Wills Valley R. Co., 33 Ga. 466; Tomlin v. Tonica, etc., R. Co., 23 Ill. 429; Unthank v. Henry County Turnpike Co., 6 Ind. 125; Fisher v. Evansville, etc., R. Co., 7 Ind. 407; New Albany, etc., R. Co. v. McCormick, 10 Ind. 499; 71 Am. Dec. 337; Johnson v. Crawfordsville, etc., R. Co., 11 Ind. 280; Beckner v. Riverside Turnpike Co., 65 Ind. 468; Penobscot R. Co. v. Dummer, 40 Me. 172; 63 Am. Dec. 654; Lake Ontario, etc., R. Co. v. Mason, 16 N. Y. 451; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536.

These decisions rest upon the ground that the contract to pay by installments is in effect a promise to pay on demand, and the demand involved in the suit itself is alone sufficient. Smith v. Indiana, etc., R. Co., 12 Ind. 61.

Subscribers are chargeable with notice of all assessments made during their membership. Spellier Electric Time Co. v. Geiger (Pa. 1892), 23 Atl. Rep. 547.

Notice is necessary only to authorize forfeiture; not to support an action on a subscription, specifying no condition or time of payment. Lake Ontario, etc., R. Co. v. Mason, 16 N. Y. 451.

3. Penobscot R. Co. v. Dummer, 40 Me. 173; 63 Am. Dec. 654. And see also Winter v. Muscogee R. Co., 11 Ga. 438; Spangler v. Indiana, etc., R. Co., 21 Ill. 275; Goodrich v. Reynolds, 31 Ill. 491; 83 Am. Dec. 240.

One demand for several assessments is sufficient. Spangler v. Indiana, etc., R. Co., 21 Ill. 276.

4. Form of Notice.—Notice need not be in writing. Smith v. Tallahassee Plank R. Co., 30 Ala. 650. The only question is, whether the notice gives the shareholder to understand that a notice will suffice, though publication or letter is required.¹ Where notice is sent by mail, the fact of its receipt is a question for the jury,² and in case of newspaper publication it must be shown to have been brought to the stockholder's knowledge.³

(c) Proof of Notice.—Publication should be proved by introducing in evidence the printed notice,⁴ and where there have been several insertions, a copy of the first with the testimony of the publisher as to the others will suffice.⁵ But an affidavit of a newspaper clerk has been held sufficient,⁶ though a mere certificate of the secretary of the corporation is not.⁷ The person who mails a notice should be called to prove that fact.⁸ The time, and not the mere fact of sending, must be proved when notice is required to be given a specified number of days beforehand.⁹

(d) Specifications as to Payment—Time, Place, etc.—The authorities are divided on the question whether the notice must show the time

call has been made, and that he is required to pay the amount on a given day. Shackleford v. Dangerfield, L. R., 3 C. P. 407.

1. In Mississippi, etc., R. Co. v. Gaster, 20 Ark. 455, it was said: "One of the criterions by which to determine whether the requirements of a statute are imperative or merely directory, is that those acts which are of the essence of the thing required to be done are imperative, while those which are not of the essence are directory. . . . The giving of sixty days' notice is imperative and must be strictly complied with, because it is of the essence of the thing to be done; the mode of doing so is directory, because not of the essence, and may either be by publication in the manner prescribed by the charter or by actual personal notice." See also Schenectady, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Thatcher, 11 N. Y. 102. But compare Tomlin v. Tonica, etc., R. Co., 23 Ill. 374. And when no form of notice is prescribed, notice by newspaper publication is sufficient. Hall v. U. S. Ins. Co., 5 Gill (Md.) 484. In this case it was said that the substitution of newspaper notice in lieu of personal notice has so long been in universal usage, and of notoriety equal to that of newspapers themselves, that the custom of doing so has become a part of the law of the land.

Constructive notice by mail is not a personal notice, although in some cases by express statutory provision it is sufficient to bind parties. Hughes v. Antietam Mfg. Co., 34 Md. 316.

When notice is authorized to be given by mail to the shareholder's registered address, it need be only substantially followed. Liverpool Marine Ins. Co. v. Houghton, 23 W. R. 93.

2. Braddock v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 45 N. J. L. 363; Jones v. Sisson, 6 Gray (Mass.) 288; Eastern R. Co. v. Symonds, 6 Ry. Cas. 578.

3. Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. Rowley, 9 Fla. 508; Tomlin v. Tonica, etc., R. Co., 23 Ill. 429; Unthank v. Henry County Turnpike Co., 6 Ind. 125; Lake Ontario, etc., R. Co. v. Mason, 16 N. Y. 451; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536.

But it has been held that notice is sufficient if published at residence of subscriber. Dinkgrave v. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co., 10 La. Ann. 514. See generally on the subject of notice, NOTICE, vol. 16, p. 787.

4. Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 546. In this case, an action to recover unpaid subscriptions, Aldis, J., for the court, said: "The newspaper which contains the notice is clearly the best evidence of its publication and contents, the very evidence which the law and the contract provided as the proper proof to the subscriber of the calls. Its production in the first instance is required by the ordinary principles of the law of evidence."

5. Unthank v. Henry County Turnpike Co., 6 Ind. 125; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536.

6. Andrews v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 14 Ind. 169.

7. Tomlin v. Tonica, etc., R. Co., 23 Ill. 429.

8. Jones v. Sisson, 6 Gray (Mass.) 288.

9. Cole v. Joliet Opera House Co., 79 Ill. 96.

and place of payment, the amount and the person to whom it is payable. The weight of authority appears to favor the rule that such statements are not essential,¹ but there are cases which require them to be made, either in the resolution² or notice of the call;³ and at all events, notice of the time of payment must be reasonable.⁴

(7) Maturity.—A call dates from the passage of the resolution⁵ and not from the time fixed for payment,⁶ or from the time of giving the notice.⁷

(8) Interest.—Interest on calls made by directors runs from the maturity thereof.⁸ In England a provision as to interest does not

1. Fox v. Allensville, etc., Turnpike Co., 46 Ind. 31; Andrews v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 14 Ind. 169; Marsh v. Burroughs, 1 Woods (U. S.) 463; London, etc., R. Co. v. Fairclough, 2 M. & G. 674; Newry, etc., R. Co. v. Edmonds, 2 Exch. 119.

Where articles of incorporation require the notice to designate place of payment, a notice directing payment to A residing in B is sufficient. Troy Turnpike, etc., R. Co. v. M'Chesney, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 296.

A notice requiring one to pay to the corporate treasurer, implies payment at his office, and is sufficient as to place. Muskingum Valley Turnpike Co. v. Ward, 13 Ohio 120; 42 Am. Dec. 191. But see Dexter, etc., R. Co. v. Millerd, 3 Mich. 91; Danbury, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, 22 Conn. 435.

2. In re Cawley, 42 Ch. Div. 209; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 425. See the "Law Times" for 1890, p. 166, which contains an editorial discussion of the above case.

3. Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536. This case has been cited by text-book writers in support of the statement that the place of payment need not be stated. But the opinion certainly announces the opposite rule. While it is true that the charter there required specification of the place of payment, yet the decision is not based entirely on that ground, as the following will show: "We have already said we deem it material that the notice should specify the place of payment. This seems to us very plain upon consideration of the reason which doubtless led to the insertion of such a provision in the charter. The subscribers resided in various towns in the state, from Burlington to Bellows Falls. They would naturally be in doubt as to who was the proper officer to receive payments, and where he resided, and at what place they might make payment. They might judge erroneously as to where, by implication of law, they should pay their subscriptions. To remove all uncertainty the charter provided that it should not be left to implication—that the notice should express the place of payment. The provision seems to us too important to be disregarded, or held as merely directory. And when the contract itself includes by reference this provision within its terms, it must be held a substantial part of the contract, and to be construed in the plain and ordinary sense in which common minds would look at it, and that is a condition which must be performed before the subscriber can be sued."

Where the charter merely requires place of payment to be stated, it may be omitted from the resolution providing for a call, if mentioned in published notice. Great North of England Co. v. Biddulph, 7 M. & W. 243; Sheffield, etc., R. Co. v. Woodcock, 7 M. & W. 574.

4. Fairfield County Turnpike Co. v. Thorp, 13 Conn. 173; Hall v. U. S. Ins. Co., 5 Gill (Md.) 484.

5. Maturity of Call.—Reg. v. Londonderry, etc., R. Co., L. R., 13 Q. B. 998.

In Beckner v. Riverside Turnpike Co., 65 Ind. 468, where the subscription became due on the call of the company, and such call was made, Biddle, J., said: "The money thus became due according to the terms of the call, which the stockholders were bound to notice, without either publication or demand made."

6. Ex parte Dawes, 38 L. J. Ch. 512.

7. Reg. v. Londonderry, etc., R. Co., L. R., 13 Q. B. 998.

8. Interest on Calls.—Rikhoff v. Brown's Rotary, etc., Co., 68 Ind. 388; Gould v. Oneonta, 71 N. Y. 293; Barr

apply to calls by the official liquidator,¹ an officer somewhat resembling the American receiver. Calls by a court draw interest from the time of demand and notice.²

(9) Limitations.—There must be a call or an abandonment of business by the corporation before the Statute of Limitations begins to run on the call and in favor of the stockholders.³ Where shares have been assigned the statute runs from the date of the call and not the date of the assignment.⁴ The statute of the state where the corporation is organized governs.⁵ On calls by the court, the statute, according to the weight of authority, runs only from the date of the decree,⁶ but it has been adversely held that the liability accrues when the corporation ceases to do business, and that the statute begins to run from that time.⁷ Refusal to pay the first of a series of calls is not such

v. Wilcox, 22 N. Y. 551; Casey v. Galli, 94 U. S. 673; Stocken's Case, L. R., 5 Eq. 6.

Interest is not collectible on forfeited shares where articles provide that all interest in the company is extinguished by forfeiture; though they contain another provision for interest on all overdue calls. Stocken's Case, L. R., 3 Ch. 412.

In England, by statute, where the notice states that calls shall draw interest if not paid by a certain day, interest may be collected. Ex parte Barrow, L. R., 3 Ch. 784.

The following are the provisions of the English Companies Clauses Act of 1845, relative to interest: "If before or on the day appointed for payment, any shareholder does not pay the amount of any call to which he is liable, then such shareholder shall be liable to pay interest for the same at the rate allowed by law from the day appointed for the payment thereof to the time of actual payment."

In England a claim for interest need not be inserted in the pleadings. Southampton Dock Co. v. Richards, 1 M. & G. 448. But the amount claimed should cover interest. London, etc., R. Co. v. Fairclough, 2 M. & G. 674.

1. In re Welsh Flannel, etc., Co., L. R., 20 Eq. 360.

2. Hambleton v. Glenn (Md. 1890), 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 505; citing Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 155, and criticising Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 332; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 318. The case construes the Virginia statute.

3. Curry v. Woodward, 53 Ala. 371; Williams v. Taylor, 120 N. Y. 244.

4. Priest v. Glenn, 51 Fed. Rep. 400.

5. Glenn v. Liggett, 135 U. S. 548. See also Andrews v. Bacon, 38 Fed. Rep. 777; Butler v. Poole, 44 Fed. Rep. 586.

6. Glenn v. Semple, 80 Ala. 159; 60 Am. Rep. 92; Lehman v. Glenn, 87 Ala. 618; Glenn v. Howard, 81 Ga. 383; 12 Am. St. Rep. 318; Glenn v. Williams, 60 Md. 95; Vanderwerken v. Glenn, 85 Va. 9; Morgan County v. Allen, 103 U. S. 498; Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 318; Glenn v. Liggett, 135 U. S. 533.

7. In Glenn v. Dorsheimer, 23 Fed. Rep. 695, Brewer, J., says: "In 1866 this corporation (the National Express and Transportation Co.) ceased to do business. It ceased to be a going concern. It turned over its property, including its debts due from its stockholders, to the assignees, to collect its debts, dispose of its property and pay its creditors. Whenever such a cessation of business occurs, it seems to me fair to say that the liability of the stockholder becomes absolute—a fixed, unconditional obligation. And, although no call be made by the company, or by the assignees, yet these debts from the stockholders could have been reached by the creditors. That seems to be settled by the decision in Ogilvie v. Knox Ins. Co., 22 How. (U. S.) 380, where the supreme court held that the creditors who had reduced their claims to judgment against the corporation, might proceed directly by bill against one or more stockholders."

In Glenn v. Howard, 81 Ga. 383; 12 Am. St. Rep. 318, the court, in commenting on the above, said: "We are aware there is a decision to the contrary by Judge Brewer, of the United denial of liability upon the remainder as to set the statute running against them.¹

(10) Evidence.²—Where calls are necessary they must be clearly proved.³ The best evidence is the official record of the resolution or order,⁴ but an entry by the secretary in the minute book is competent.⁵ So the corporate books are admissible to prove the mode of payment as well as the call itself,⁶ and proof that a certain call is authorized is competent to show the validity of a previous one.⁷ A mere declaration to that effect in the notice, is not sufficient to prove that a call was made by the proper authority.⁸

(11) Calls After Transfer.—Where stock has been sold, but the corporate requirements as to transfer have not been complied with, the corporation may treat the seller and original subscriber as still liable to a call.⁹ But as between the parties, the transferee is under an implied obligation to reimburse the transferor for calls paid by him after he has actually parted with his ownership.¹⁰

States circuit, Glenn v. Dorsheimer, 23 Fed. Rep. 695, in which it was held that where an insolvent corporation ceases to do business and assigns all its property, including unpaid stock subscriptions, to trustees for the benefit of its creditors, the liability of its stockholders at once becomes absolute, and the Statute of Limitations begins to run in their favor and against such creditors and trustees immediately. And this is the only decision to the contrary that we have been able to find directly upon the question. Other cases have been referred to by learned counsel who argued the case, which seem to look in that direction—and I must say for myself that there is a great deal of reason in favor of the decision of Judge Brewer; but the weight of authority is unquestionably against the ruling of the court below in this case."

1. Dorsheimer v. Glenn, 51 Fed. Rep. 404.

2. See also supra, this title, Notice—Proof.

3. South Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Ayres, 56 Ga. 230; Scarlett v. Academy of Music, 43 Md. 203.

4. Guadalupe, etc., Assoc. v. West, 70 Tex. 391.

5. Fox v. Allensville, etc., Turnpike Co., 46 Ind. 31.

6. Bavington v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 34 Pa. St. 358; Comfort v. Leland, 3 Whart. (Pa.) 81.

7. Bavington v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 34 Pa. St. 358.

8. New Jersey, etc., R. Co. v. Strait, 35 N. J. L. 322.

9. Brinkley v. Hambleton, 67 Md. 169; Humble v. Langston, 7 M. & W. 517; Sayles v. Blanc, L. R., 14 Q. B. 205. See also Strock, vol. 23, p. 582, infra, this title, Liability.

But in Chouteau Spring Co. v. Harris, 20 Mo. 382, it was held that assessments could be levied on one who had transferred his stock, though the corporation was empowered by charter to regulate such transfer, and it was made without its consent.

10. Transferee Reimbursing Transferor.—Kellogg v. Stockwell, 75 Ill. 68; Cormac v. Western White Bronze Co., 77 Iowa 32; Hutzler v. Lord, 64 Md. 534; Brinkley v. Hambleton, 67 Md. 169; Brigham v. Mead, 10 Allen (Mass.) 245; Johnson v. Underhill, 52 N. Y. 203; Treadway v. Johnson, 33 Mo. App. 122; Tripp v. Apleman, 35 Fed. Rep. 19; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 544; Castellan v. Hobson, L. R., 10 Eq. Cas. 47; Kellock v. Enthoven, L. R., 9 Q. B. 241; L. R., 8 Q. B. 458; Bowring v. Shepherd, L. R., 6 Q. B. 309; Davis v. Haycock, L. R., 4 Ex. 373; Grissell v. Bristowe, L. R., 3 C. P. 112; Chapman v. Shepherd, L. R., C. P. 228; Walker v. Bartlett, 18 C. B. 845; 86 E. C. L. 845; Humble v. Langsdon, 7 M. & W. 517; Shaw v. Fisher, 5 De G. M. & G. 596. The opinion of Chief Justice Alvey, in the case of Brinkley v. Hambleton, 67 Md. 169, contains a discussion of this point: "The liabil-

This obligation is confined, according to American authority, to those who own the stock when the call is levied,¹ but there are English cases to the effect that the original transferrer may hold any one of several successive transferees.² The latter have also been held liable for calls made before, but payable after, transfer,³ though such liability depends largely upon the circumstances, statutes, and the agreement of the parties.⁴ Under proper conditions, one who has contracted to purchase stock may be compelled to indemnify the prospective transferrer for calls made since the agreement.⁵

ity to pay the calls made upon the stock after the transfer, is shifted from the outgoing to the incoming stockholder, the transfer of stock working a complete novation of the contract of membership, the transferee being substituted to the place of the transferrer, with all the rights and liabilities incident to the holding of the shares. This is well established by the decisions of this court, as it is by the decisions of other courts of the highest authority. Bend v. Susquehanna Bridge, etc., Co., 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 119; 14 Am. Dec. 261; Hall v. U. S. Ins. Co., 5 Gill (Md.) 484; Webster v. Upton, 91 U. S. 68; Cape's Case, 2 De G. M. & G. 562. . . . Also in those cases where there has been an assignment of stock, but from neglect, or omission from any cause, to have the actual transfer made on the books of the corporation to the assignee, and the assignor remains the nominal owner merely, and because of that fact, is required to pay calls upon the stock, there is an implied obligation on the part of the assignee to indemnify such nominal owner of the shares against calls made during the time that the former remains virtually and potentially the owner of the shares, though not registered on the books. This is the principle of the cases of Walker v. Bartlett, 18 C. B. 845; 86 E. C. L. 845; Johnson v. Underhill, 52 N. Y. 203, and the recent case, decided by this court, of Hutzler v. Lord, 64 Md. 534. In such cases, and, indeed, in all cases, the assignee takes the shares subject to all the burdens and liabilities attached to or growing out of the beneficial ownership of the shares, and the law implies an obligation or promise on his part that those burdens and liabilities, incumbent upon himself while he holds the stock, shall not be imposed upon the assignor. And such is the implied obligation of every assignee of stock."

One who sells shares before the issue of certificates, agreeing to give the purchaser a certificate when he receives one, is not bound, as between the purchaser and himself, to pay an assessment on such shares after the sale and before the issue of the certificate. Brigham v. Mead, 10 Allen (Mass.) 245.

Where the seller has done all in his power to convey, the purchaser is under an implied contract to indemnify him against calls. Walker v. Bartlett, 18 C. B. 845; 86 E. C. L. 845. And under a guaranty of registration, the purchaser is liable to the seller's executor, though the purchaser is a stock-jobber and has resold. Cruse v. Paine, L. R., 6 Eq. 641.

1. Brinkley v. Hambleton, 67 Md. 169.

2. Nickalls v. Eaton, 23 L. T., N. S. 699; Hawkins v. Maltby, L. R., 3 Ch. 188.

3. West Philadelphia Canal Co. v. Innes, 3 Whart. (Pa.) 188; Aylebury R. Co. v. Mount, 4 M. & G. 651; 5 Scott, N. R. 127.

4. Schenectady, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Thatcher, 11 N. Y. 113; North American, etc., Assoc. v. Bentley, 19 L. J. Q. B. 427.

5. Wynne v. Price, 3 De G. & S. 310; Cruse v. Paine, L. R., 6 Eq. 641; L. R., 4 Ch. 441; Peppercorne v. Clench, 26 L. T., N. S. 656; Evans v. Wood, L. R., 5 Eq. 9; Hodgkins v. Kelley, L. R., 6 Eq. 496; Shepherd v. Gillespie, L. R., 3 Ch. 764, affirming L. R., 5 Eq. 293; Castellan v. Hobson, L. R., 10 Eq. 47; Pender v. Fox, 20 W. R. 966; Brown v. Black, L. R., 8 Ch. App. 939; Shepherd v. Murphy, L. R., 2 Eq. 544; Paine v. Hutchinson, L. R., 3 Ch. 388; Hawkins v. Maltby, L. R., 3 Ch. 200. But the transferrer cannot claim indemnity from jobbers who have furnished the names of purchasers to whom

(12) Assessments Proper.—It has already been stated¹ that the term assessments strictly applies only to amounts levied beyond par value. The rule is now general that corporations have no implied power to make such levies,² and even when the power is expressly conferred, it will receive a strict construction.³ In California the statute provides for assessments to meet corporate expenses, and this has been construed to authorize levies after stock is paid up.⁴ But assessments of this class are most com-transfers have been executed. Coles v. Bristowe, L. R., 4 Ch. 3.

1. Supra, this title, Calls and Assessments.

2. Spense v. Iowa Valley, etc., Co., 36 Iowa 410; Cincinnati, etc., R., Co. v. Clarkson, 7 Ind. 595; Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Cramer, 23 Ind. 490; Great Falls, etc., R. Co. v. Copp, 38 N. H. 124; Beach v. Smith, 30 N. Y. 116; American Silk Works v. Solomon, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 135; Atlantic, etc., Co. v. Mason, 5 R. I. 463; Middletown, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Watson, 1 Rawle (Pa.) 330.

Assent to an illegal assessment, so as to make it valid, is not to be presumed from an assent to former illegal assessments of a less amount; nor can it be effected by the assignor of stock after assignment and notice of the same to the corporation; even when authorized it can be made at a special meeting only when notice is duly given. Atlantic, etc., Co. v. Mason, 5 R. I. 463.

A fine imposed upon a member of a corporation in his absence and without due form is without effect. State v. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, 47 Wis. 670.

In England, it seems that where directors are empowered to increase the funds, they may do so by assessing the shareholders after their stock is paid up; and the fund so raised may be treated as a loan to the company. Peninsular Co. v. Fleming, 27 L. T., N. S. 193.

3. Lewey's Island R. Co. v. Bolton, 48 Me. 451; 77 Am. Dec. 236.

Where the legislature gives power to raise a fund in addition to capital stock, by assessments on stockholders, directors cannot levy such assessments without authority from the stockholders. Marlborough Mfg. Co. v. Smith, 2 Conn. 579.

And even when conferred by statute or charter the power may be restricted by the corporate by-laws. Price's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 421.

4. California Statute.—Civil Code California, § 331, reads: "The directors of any corporation formed or existing under the laws of the state, after one-fourth of its capital stock has been subscribed, may, for the purpose of paying expenses, conducting business, or paying debts, levy and collect assessments upon the subscribed capital stock thereof, in the manner and form and to the extent provided herein."

In Santa Cruz, etc., R. Co. v. Spreckles, 65 Cal. 193; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 55; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 679, commenting on the section above quoted, Ross, J., says: "From this section these things at least are clear: (1) That no assessment for any purpose can be levied until at least one-fourth of the capital stock of the corporation has been subscribed; (2) that assessments may be levied in the manner and form and to the extent provided by the statute, for the purpose of paying the expenses, conducting the business, or paying the debts of the corporation; and (3) that the assessment authorized to be levied shall be levied only upon the subscribed capital stock;" and again: "Nor is it easy to believe that, had the legislature intended by the provisions of the code in question to authorize assessments only to the extent of the par value of the stock subscribed for—in other words, to provide only for the calling in of the sums subscribed—it would not have expressed that intention in appropriate language. It would have been an easy matter to have done so, and, as we shall presently see, when the codes were adopted there was standing upon the statute books an old act providing for that very thing. 'There are two classes of assessments,' says Potter on Corporations, vol. 1, p. 323, 'made by corporations or the directors thereof, one of which is more mon among mutual stock companies,¹ non-trading corporations, and voluntary associations.²

c. ACTIONS AND REMEDIES—(1) In General.—For compelling payment of subscriptions, the corporation usually has its choice of several methods. Assumpsit, or, under the reformed procedure, an action corresponding to it, lies to recover the amount unpaid.³ So an action for damages may be brought for the difference between the market value and the agreed price of the shares,⁴ or the stock may be levied on to satisfy a judgment obtained in a suit on the subscription.⁵

(2) Forfeiture—(a) Nature, Origin, and Authority.—The method most peculiar to the enforcement of the contract of subscription is for the corporation to declare the unpaid shares forfeited. This remedy is statutory,⁶ and the power to exercise it must be ex-properly distinguished as 'calls' made upon the subscriptions for shares within the amount of the unpaid sums upon the number of shares subscribed; the other, an assessment made upon the corporators not merely as a part of their subscriptions, but to raise a sum of money beyond the amount of subscription for the use of the corporation to sustain its existence, to carry into use its corporate powers and to enable it to exercise its corporate duties."

In Taylor v. North Star Gold Min. Co., 79 Cal. 285, an assessment was held proper when made for the purpose of repaying a loan by a stockholder to the corporation to enable it to purchase adjoining property and transfer its own property to a new corporation receiving stock therefor.

So an assessment was upheld for the purpose of repairing machinery to carry on the corporate business. Younglove v. Steinman, 80 Cal. 375.

1. See BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATIONS, vol. 2, p. 171.

2. See SOCIETIES AND CLUBS, vol. 22, p. 803.

3. In Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Dudley, 14 N. Y. 346, it was said: "As long as the contract remains in force an action to recover for the amount of stock taken may be maintained by the corporation against a subscriber. And it makes no difference whether the promise to pay is express or implied. The legal consequences of the undertaking to pay must be the same, whether it is express or such as the law implies merely. Several cases decided in other states were cited upon the argument to sustain the position that the corporation must resort to the remedy by forfeiture, in the case of an implied promise to pay for the stock subscribed, and could maintain an action only upon an express promise to pay. I am unable to perceive any solid grounds upon which such a distinction can rest. It has never obtained in this state, and I cannot see how it can be maintained upon principle. For aught I can see, the rights of the subscriber and of the corporation are precisely the same in either case. This point was fully considered in Northern R. Co. v. Miller, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 260, in the able and elaborate opinion of Mr. Justice Willard, and the distinction shown to be entirely destitute of foundation."

It is said in New Hampshire Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson, 30 N. H. 390; 64 Am. Dec. 304, "Where the subscription for shares contains a promise to pay the assessments, and the conditions of the subscription have been performed, there is no doubt that an action of assumpsit can be maintained, in the first instance, for all legal assessments. South Bay Meadow Dam Co. v. Gray, 30 Me. 547; Smith v. Natchez Steamboat Co., 1 How. (Miss.) 479; Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 23; Townsend v. Goewey, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 424; 32 Am. Dec. 514; Glover v. Tuck, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 153; Dutchess Cotton Mfg. Co. v. Davis, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 238; 7 Am. Dec. 499"

4. Rand v. White Mountains R. Co., 40 N. H. 79.

5. Chase v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 15 Lea (Tenn.) 415; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 349.

6. See the statutes of the various states. Forfeiture is authorized somepressly conferred.¹ A mere by-law will not authorize it,² nor, where the statute contemplates a by-law, is the statute operative without a by-law.³ That forfeiture is a cumulative remedy, is announced by a formidable array of authorities; even where it exists, the corporation may resort to the common-law action of assumpsit or its equivalent.⁴ Mere notice or threats of forfeiture times by charter. In re Long Island R. Co., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 37; 32 Am. Dec. 429, or by the articles of association. Wescott v. Minnesota Min. Co., 23 Mich. 163.

1. Forfeiture Not an Implied Power.—In re Long Island R. Co., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 37; 32 Am. Dec. 429, appears to be the earliest case in this country upon the subject; and Nelson, C. J., in an elaborate and exhaustive opinion, traces the doctrine back to early English authority. Hill v. Nisbet, 100 Ind. 341; Williams v. Lowe, 4 Neb. 382; Perrin v. Granger, 30 Vt. 595; Dixon v. Evans, L. R., 5 H. L. 606; Clarke v. Hart, 6 H. L. Cas. 633; Campbell's Case, L. R., 9 Ch. 1; Barton's Case, 4 De G. & J. 46.

Cooley, J., in Wescott v. Minnesota Min. Co., 23 Mich. 163, observed: "The right to forfeit shares in any joint-stock undertaking must come from the law, and can only be exercised in the manner prescribed by the law." And cites with approval In re Long Island R. Co., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 40; 32 Am. Dec. 429.

In Budd v. Multnomah St. R. Co., 15 Oregon 413; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 551; 3 Am. St. Rep. 169, Strahan, J., said: "A corporation has no inherent power to forfeit or sell the shares of stock owned by delinquent stockholders. That is not a common-law remedy, and can only be exercised when it is expressly conferred by some statute."

2. By-Law Will Not Authorize Forfeiture—Kennebec, etc., R. Co. v. Kendall, 31 Me. 470; Rosenback v. Salt Springs Nat. Bank, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 495; In re Long Island R. Co., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 37; 32 Am. Dec. 429; Kirk v. Nowill, 1 T. R. 118. But stockholders alone can object to a forfeiture as having been made by a mere by-law. Detweiler v. Breckenkamp, 83 Mo. 45. And even they cannot where they have assented thereto. Lesseps v. Architects' Co., 4 La. Ann. 316.

3. Budd v. Multnomah St. R. Co., 15 Oregon 413; 40 Am. & Eng. R.

Cas. 551; 3 Am. St. Rep. 169, where the statute authorized corporations to "make by-laws" providing for forfeiture.

4. Forfeiture a Cumulative Remedy.—Beene v. Cahawba, etc., R. Co., 3 Ala. 660; Selma, etc., R. Co. v. Tipton, 5 Ala. 787; 39 Am. Dec. 344; Hartford, etc., R. Co. v. Kennedy, 12 Conn. 500; Danbury, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, 22 Conn. 447; Hightower v. Thornton, 8 Ga. 486; Banet v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 504; Klein v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 514; Ryder v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 516; Cross v. Pinckneyville Mill Co., 17 Ill. 54; Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Elting, 17 Ill. 429; Spangler v. Indiana, etc., R. Co., 21 Ill. 276; Raymond v. Caton, 24 Ill. 123; Instone v. Frankfort Bridge Co., 2 Bibb (Ky.) 576; 5 Am. Dec. 638; Mexican Gulf R. Co. v. Viavant, 6 Rob (La.) 305; Hughes v. Antietam Mfg. Co., 34 Md. 316; Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Wellington, 113 Mass. 79; Carson v. Arctic Min. Co., 5 Mich. 288; Freeman v. Winchester, 10 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 577; Payne v. Bullard, 23 Miss. 88; 55 Am. Dec. 74; New Hampshire Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson, 30 N. H. 390; 64 Am. Dec. 300; White Mountains R. Co. v. Eastman, 34 N. H. 124; Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Dudley, 14 N. Y. 336; Rensselaer, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Barton, 16 N. Y. 457 n.; Lake Ontario, etc., R. Co. v. Mason, 16 N. Y. 451; Rensselaer, etc., Road Co. v. Wetsel, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 56; Dayton v. Borst, 31 N. Y. 435; Northern R. Co. v. Miller, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 260; Mann v. Currie, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 294; Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Kerr, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 581; Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Tibbits, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 297; Fort Edward, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Payne, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 567; Ogdensburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Frost, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 541; Eastern Plank Road Co. v. Vaughan, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 155; Goshen Turnpike Road v. Hurtin, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 217; 6 Am. Dec. 273; Troy Turnpike, etc., Co. v. McChesney, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 296; Greenville, etc., R. Co. v. Cathcart, 4 Rich. (S. Car.) 89; Greenville, etc., R.

do not constitute an exercise of that remedy ;¹ but when applied in good faith the rights acquired under it are superior to the rights of creditors.²

(b) How Exercised.—The modern decisions exact, in the exercise of the right of forfeiture, a strict compliance with charter and statutory requirements.³ Thus, forfeiture must be declared by duly appointed directors,⁴ and by the number required to conduct the business of the corporation.⁵ So where the charter requires an order of sale from the directors to the treasurer, this duty cannot be delegated to a committee,⁶ nor can the right itself be availed of by a mere subscriber.⁷ A resolution which fails to designate the stock sought to be forfeited by it is invalid,⁸ but one which declares a forfeiture of all shares remaining delinquent by a certain day, is effective.⁹ Forfeiture for non-payment of sev-

Co. v. Smith, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 91; Charlotte, etc., R. Co. v. Blakely, 3 Strobb. (S. Car.) 245; Stokes v. Lebanon, etc., Turnpike Co., 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 241; Connecticut, etc., R. Co. v. Bailey, 24 Vt. 465; 58 Am. Dec. 181; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536. And the remedy is cumulative even though the subscription expressly declares that the promise is "upon pain of forfeiting." Troy Turnpike, etc., Co. v. McChesney, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 206; and whether the stock is held by the original subscriber or his assignee. Mann v. Currie, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 204.

1. Notice Not Equivalent to Forfeiture.—Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Vason, 57 Ga. 314; Water Valley Mfg. Co. v. Seaman, 53 Miss. 655; Cockerill v. Van Dieman's Land Co., 26 L. C. P. 203; Ex parte Bigg, L. R., 1 Eq. 309; 13 L. T., N. S. 627.

But the fact that the minutes show no resolution of forfeiture or notice thereof, is not conclusive, if the secretary has entered the shares as forfeited. Knight's Case, L. R., 2 Ch. 321.

2. Mills v. Stewart, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 444.

3. Forfeiture Must be Strictly Exercised.—Portland, etc., R. Co. v. Graham, 11 Met. (Mass.) 1; Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Staples, 5 Gray (Mass.) 522; Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. Rowley, 9 Fla. 508; Wescott v. Minnesota Min. Co., 23 Mich. 163; Occidental, etc., Assoc. v. Sullivan, 62 Cal. 394; Portland, etc., R. Co. v. Graham, 11 Met. (Mass.) 1; Downing v. Potts, 23 N. J. L. 66; Eastern Plank Road Co. v. Vaughan, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 155; York, etc., R. Co. v. Ritchie, 40 Me. 425;

Lewey's Island R. Co. v. Bolton, 48 Me. 451; 77 Am. Dec. 236; Mitchell v. Vermont Copper Min. Co., 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 406; In re Long Island R. Co., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 37; 32 Am. Dec. 429; Johnson v. Albany, etc., R. Co., 40 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 193; Germantown, etc., R. Co. v. Fidler, 60 Pa. St. 124; 100 Am. Dec. 546; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536; Perrin v. Granger, 30 Vt. 595; Clarke v. Harte, 6 H. L. Cas. 633; Johnson v. Lyttle's Iron Agency, 46 L. J. Ch. 786; Knight's Case, L. R., 2 Ch. 321; Garden Gully, etc., R. Co. v. McLister, L. R., 1 App. Cas. 39; London, etc., R. Co. v. Fairclough, 2 M. & G. 674.

Where regulations by law are made essential to the exercise of the right of forfeiture, a sale is not valid if made without such regulations. Mitchell v. Vermont Copper Min. Co., 40 N. Y. Super. Co. 406.

4. Garden Gully, etc., Co. v. McLister, L. R., 1 App. Cas. 39; Moses v. Tompkins, 84 Ala. 613.

5. Bottomley's Case, 16 Ch. Div. 681. In this case one of the directors became insolvent. The articles declared that business should be conducted by not less than five. There was also a provision that insolvency should disqualify and one that directors might determine the quorum.

6. York, etc., R. Co. v. Ritchie, 40 Me. 425.

7. Klein v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 514.

8. Johnson v. Albany, etc., R. Co., 40 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 195.

9. Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536; Knight's Case, 15 L. T., N. S. 546; Woollaston's Case, 4 De G. & J. 437.

The Contract of Subscription. STOCKHOLDERS. Enforcement of the Contract.

eral calls, one of which is illegal, is void.¹ The grounds of forfeiture vary, of course, with different charter provisions, but they must be reasonable.²

(c) Notice.—Like other prescribed formalities, those regarding notice must in general be strictly followed,³ though provisions of this class have sometimes been held merely directory,⁴ and satis-

1. Stoneham Branch R. Co. v. Gould, 2 Gray (Mass.) 277. Where a maximum assessment is fixed at $100, any amount beyond that sum is void in toto and invalidates forfeiture therefor. Lewey's Island R. Co. v. Bolton, 48 Me. 451; 77 Am. Dec. 236.

2. Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536.

Where the deed of settlement (corresponding to a charter) provides in a general way for forfeiture and also for increase of stock, the failure of stockholders to send in their certificates, in order to effect the increase, may be made a ground for forfeiture. Kelk's Case, L. R., 9 Eq. 107.

But a clause in the articles authorizing forfeiture of shares of one who commences or threatens an action against the company is invalid. Hope v. International Financial Soc., 4 Ch. Div. 327.

A company was formed under an arrangement that each subscriber on engaging to render his personal services, should be entitled to another share. C became a stockholder, but did not subscribe for personal services. He, however, authorized W to act as his substitute, who was permitted to do so, but never subscribed and soon deserted. Thereupon C's interest was declared forfeited by W's desertion. It was held, that it was not forfeited, and C recovered the value of his share. Cox v. Bodfish, 35 Me. 302.

3. See also supra, this title, Calls and Assessments—Notice.

Provisions as to Notice Usually Mandatory.—Lake Ontario, etc., R. Co. v. Mason, 16 N. Y. 151; Knight's Case, L. R., 2 Ch. 321; Portland, etc., R. Co. v. Graham, 11 Met. (Mass.) 1; Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Staples, 5 Gray (Mass.) 522.

The court says, in Lewey's Island R. Co. v. Bolton, 48 Me. 451; 77 Am. Dec. 236, by Kent, J.: "The by-laws of the company require that the notices of the time and place of sale shall be posted in 'two conspicuous public places' in the city of Calais. The testimony is that they were posted in two public places in that city. It was decided in Bearce v. Fossett, 34 Me. 575, that an officer's return that he posted the notices in a public place, without saying in a public and conspicuous place, as required by the statute, is insufficient. Perhaps, if it had been shown that a notice properly signed had been given in hand to defendant, that fact, as to him, might have been sufficient, notwithstanding the defect in proof as to the posting."

Where a stockholder has gone abroad and his place of business has been closed, notice left with a third party, and never reaching the stockholder, is not a compliance with a requirement of service at his usual or last place of abode. Cockrell v. Van-Diemen's Land Co., 1 C. B., N. S. 732; 26 L. J., C. P. 203; 3 Jur. N. S. 241.

Personal notice required by the act under which the company is incorporated, is not complied with by written notice sent through the mails. Hughes v. Antietam Mfg. Co., 34 Md. 316.

4. But Sometimes Directory.—Mississippi, etc., R. Co. v. Gaster, 20 Ark. 455, where personal notice was held sufficient, though newspaper publication was required by charter.

In Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Chandler, 13 Met. (Mass.) 315, Shaw, C. J., in discussing the question, said: "It appears that a written notice, signed by the treasurer, was delivered to the defendant, or left at his dwelling house, but that no notice of such sale was sent through the post office. The court decided that the notice given was sufficient, provided the jury were satisfied, that it was in fact received by the defendant as soon as he was entitled to receive it by mail. We think this was right. The by-law intended to provide an easy, convenient, and, under ordinary circumstances, a certain mode of giving and proving notice; but it was directory to the treasurer, and not a condition precedent. The by-law contains no negative words, and neither expressly, nor by implication, declares no other notice sufficient. The mode indicated by fied by substantial compliance.¹ Notice must be given a reasonable period before the sale,² and must be fairly definite as to time³ and place.⁴

(d) Effect of Forfeiture — Deficiency.—As has been stated above, the mere existence of the remedy by forfeiture does not preclude a resort to other methods. But the question arises what are the rights of a corporation which has forfeited shares the avails of which are insufficient to extinguish the debt, and whether it may still sue at law for the deficiency. The solution of this problem has caused at least an apparent conflict in the cases. One class holds that the forfeiture of his shares relieves the subscriber from all further liability,⁵ while on the other hand, the doctrine is well supported that the company may recover a deficiency due it after the by-law would be only constructive notice, and was not, we think, intended to take away the effect of actual personal notice." See also Schenectady, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Thatcher, 11 N. Y. 102.

1. Where notice of sale of shares for nonpayment is required in by-laws, any description showing clearly what shares were intended is sufficient. York, etc., R. Co. v. Pratt, 40 Me. 454.

Forfeiture three years after default and notice has been held proper, though the deed of settlement required immediate forfeiture. Woollaston's Case, 4 De G. & J. 437.

2. Three days' notice is unreasonably short if the shareholder resides at a distance. Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Staples, 5 Gray (Mass.) 520.

Thirty days' notice was regarded as sufficient in Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536.

3. A notice that stock will be forfeited on "Monday, the 9th of Feb.," when in fact Friday is the 9th, is insufficient. Watson v. Eales, 23 Beav. 294.

As to what will constitute due notice, and at what meeting shares may be forfeited, in England, see Graham v. Van Diemen's Land Co., 1 Hurl. & N. 541; 26 L. J. Exch. 73.

4. A notice of sale of shares for nonpayment on a certain day, merely naming an auctioneer, whose place of business is, and long has been, at the place where the notice bears date, does not sufficiently designate the place of sale. Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Staples, 5 Gray (Mass.) 522.

5. Subscriber's Liability For Deficiency.—Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 552; Small v. Herkimer Mfg., etc., Co., 2 N. Y. 338. In this case, Gardner, J., delivering the opinion of the court, said: "It was contended that the remedies by action and by forfeiture were cumulative. If by this, nothing more is understood than that the plaintiffs had the right to sue, or the right to forfeit at their election; or that they might proceed to judgment upon the subscription, and then forfeit the stock for the same delinquency, I have nothing to object. But the converse of this proposition, that they might exercise the right of forfeiture and then maintain an action or enforce a judgment, is denied. It presents the distinction between different remedies for the same demand, and a double satisfaction. A remedy, if we choose to give it that name, which, when adopted, involves a satisfaction of the debt, is never concurrent. It is in its own nature exclusive. The argument that by the former law a mortgagee could sue on his bond, bring ejectment, and foreclose the mortgage, overlooked the distinction to which I have adverted. The object of all those concurrent remedies was to obtain payment of the money due from the mortgagor. When that object was attained, the right farther to prosecute either was extinguished with the demand to which it was incident. The illustration would have some application if the mortgagee, after obtaining possession by ejectment, could keep the land, as owner, and recover the debt also. A majority of the court are of the opinion, for these reasons, among others, that the forfeiture extinguished all the rights, legal and equitable, of the defendant under the subscription to the stock, or the proceeds of the stock therein mentioned; that the forfeiture was recognized by the contract; that its effect was rightfully to annul forfeiture.¹ Some of these authorities may be reconciled, however, by preserving the distinction between strict forfeiture, consisting merely in acquisition by the company, and which is gen-

the relation of vendor and vendee, established by the agreement of the parties, and to discharge the defendant from all existing liability, founded upon that relation. That consequently, no action can be maintained for the consideration agreed to be paid for the stock, or any part of it; and that the defendant is entitled to judgment upon the demurrer."

In Mechanic's, etc., Co. v. Hall, 121 Mass. 273. Gray, C. J., said: "It has long been settled law in this commonwealth, that a subscription for a certain number of shares in a corporation subjects the subscriber to those liabilities only which are imposed by the statute under which the corporation is organized; and that when the corporation is authorized by law to lay assessments upon shares, and to sell the shares for non-payment of such assessments, and a subscriber has not expressly promised to pay assessments, no such promise can be implied, so as to enable the corporation to maintain an action against him personally for the amount of an assessment or any part thereof, even if the sum received from a sale of his shares according to the statute has not satisfied the assessment due upon them." Citing, Andover, etc., Turnpike Corp. v. Gould, 6 Mass. 40; Franklin Glass Co. v. White, 14 Mass. 286; Chester Glass Co. v. Dewey, 16 Mass. 94; 8 Am. Dec. 128; Ripley v. Sampson, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 371; Cutler v. Middlesex Factory Co., 14 Pick. (Mass.) 483; Atlantic Cotton Mills v. Abbott, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 423; Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Chandler, 13 Met. (Mass.) 311; Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Newton, 1 Gray (Mass.) 544; Low v. Blanchard, 116 Mass. 272. See also Allen v. Montgomery R. Co., 11 Ala. 437; Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Vason, 57 Ga. 314; Macaulay v. Robinson, 18 La. Ann. 619; Athol, etc., R. Co. v. Prescott, 110 Mass. 213; Katauma Land Co. v. Jerneagan, 126 Mass. 155; Northern R. Co. v. Miller, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 260; Fort Miller, etc., R. Co. v. Payne, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 577; Ogdensburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Frost, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 541; Mills v. Stewart, 41 N. Y. 384; Ashton v. Burbank, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 435; King's Case, L. R., 2 Ch. 714; Knight's Case, L. R., 2 Ch.

321; Snell's Case, L. R., 5 Ch. 22; Great Northern, etc., R. Co. v. Kennedy, 4 Exch. 417; Inglis v. Great North. etc., R. Co., 1 Macq. H. L. Cas. 112; Birmingham, etc., R. Co. v. Locke, L. R., 1 Q. B. 256; Edinburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Hibblewhite, 6 M. & W. 715; London, etc., R. Co. v. Fairclough, 2 M. & G. 674.

Under the California statute there is no personal liability for assessments; they can be collected only by selling the stock. In re South Mountain Consolidated Co., 7 Sawy. (U. S.) 30.

One whose stock has been forfeited for non-payment of calls, is not liable to the creditors of the corporation under the New York General Railway Act of 1850. Mills v. Stewart, 41 N. Y. 384.

1. Carson v. Arctic Min. Co., 5 Mich. 300.

In Great Northern, etc., R. Co. v. Kennedy, 4 Exch. 417, Parke, B., says: "Until the company have finally disposed of the shares, and satisfied the debt and costs, they may continue the action; for I think they have a right to go on until they have also been paid the costs. When they have sold the shares, and converted them into money, the defendant would be entitled to credit to the extent of the amount for which the shares sold. Mr. Maynard asks, what is to be done if the forfeited shares have been converted into other shares? In that case the defendant would be entitled to the benefit, in satisfaction pro tanto; so that, on applying to the court to stay proceedings, on payment of the portion of the debt and costs beyond the value of the new shares, the court would stay the proceedings accordingly. But until actual satisfaction, there is no bar to an action for the amount of calls." And in the same case Rolfe, B. says: "It is clear from the language of the 34th and 35th sections, that the declaration of forfeiture is in the nature of a mortgage. The company are not to sell more of the shares than will be sufficient, as nearly as can be ascertained, to pay the arrears of calls, together with interest and expenses; and if there be any surplus, it is to be paid to the defaulter, who has a right to redeem at the last erally held to be its final remedy, and forfeiture with sale to others, which, by the second class of cases noticed above, does not bar an action at law.¹ This additional remedy is not infrequently provided by statute or charter,² and where it does exist, not only the original subscriber, but, after transfer, his assignees, are liable.³ So the purchaser at a forfeiture sale must pay delinquent installments in order to prevent a second forfeiture of the shares.⁴ If, instead of a deficiency, the proceeds of a sale afford a surplus, it belongs to the company.⁵

(e) Stockholder's Protective Remedies.—Impending forfeiture may be prevented by a timely tender of the sum due.⁶ So a threatened moment before sale." See also Hartford, etc., R. Co. v. Kennedy, 12 Conn. 499; Danbury, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, 22 Conn. 336; Instone v. Frankfort Bridge Co., 2 Bibb (Ky.) 576; 5 Am. Dec. 638; Carson v. Arctic Min. Co., 5 Mich. 288; Great Northern, etc., R. Co. v. Kennedy, 4 Exch. 417; Iron R. Co. v. Fink, 41 Ohio St. 321; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 20; 52 Am. Rep. 84.

1. The court says in Carson v. Arctic Min. Co., 5 Mich. 295, per Martin, J.: "If it is true that the stock was forfeited to the use of the company upon the failure to pay the assessment, there would be perhaps no difficulty in holding that the remedy by action was taken away thereby; and such is the weight of authorities (see among other cases, Small v. Herkimer Mfg., etc., Co., 2 N. Y. 330; Allen v. Montgomery R. Co., 11 Ala. 437); and when forfeiture is made an alternative and not a current remedy, such is most certainly the result. See London, etc., R. Co. v. Fairclough, 2 M. & G. 674; Edinburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Hibblewhite, 6 M. & W. 715; Giles v. Hutt, 3 Exch. 18; Great Northern, etc., R. Co. v. Kennedy, 4 Exch. 417. But by forfeiture in the sense employed in all these cases, and all others of the same class, is meant the reclamation by the corporation of the entire stock to its own use; and this result is held to follow upon the principle that such forfeiture necessarily involves a total loss of interest in the thing forfeited, by the party in default, and a resumption by the company of the entire consideration of the debtor's promise. The stock forfeited vests absolutely and beneficially in the company, and the debtor can have no benefit from it or its proceeds. We shall see, as we progress, that no such consequences attend the sale of the stock under the charter of the present defendant in error, and that consequently there is in this case no forfeiture which satisfies the call and extinguishes the company's claim therefor."

2. Allen v. Montgomery R. Co., 11 Ala. 437; Mann v. Cooke, 20 Conn. 178; Danbury, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, 22 Conn. 435; Kennebec, etc., R. Co. v. Kendall, 31 Me. 470; Athol, etc., R. Co. v. Prescott, 110 Mass. 213; Mills v. Stewart, 41 N. Y. 384; Stokes v. Lebanon, etc., Turnpike Co., 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 241; Brockenbrough v. James River, etc., Co., 1 Patt. & H. (Va.) 94.

3. Merrimac Min. Co. v. Bagley, 14 Mich. 501; Hartford, etc., R. Co. v. Kennedy, 12 Conn. 499; Mann v. Currie, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 294; Brockenbrough v. James River, etc., Co., 1 Patt. & H. (Va.) 94.

4. Sturges v. Stetson, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 251.

5. Freeman v. Harwood, 49 Me. 195; Small v. Herkimer Mfg., etc., Co., 2 N. Y. 330; Sturges v. Stetson, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 246; Great Northern, etc., R. Co. v. Kennedy, 4 Exch. 417.

Where the incorporation act required a capital stock of not less than 4,000 shares, and delinquent subscribers were made liable for the balance if shares should sell for less than assessments due with interest and costs of sale, subscribers were held liable for such balance, though 4,000 shares had not been subscribed for. York, etc., R. Co. v. Pratt, 40 Me. 447.

6. Walker v. Ogden, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 287. In Mitchell v. Vermont Copper Min. Co., 67 N. Y. 280, where a check was tendered in payment, the court said: "There was no objection to the tender at the time it was made, either as to form or amount, and all objections which might have been taken upon either ground were therefore forfeiture of paid up stock may be enjoined,¹ though, if the assessment be valid, the fact that the corporation is worthless and seeking to acquire the stock, is not a sufficient ground for injunction.² Generally, an invalid forfeiture will be annulled at the suit of a stockholder.³ Thus, if the meeting was unlawfully held outside the state,⁴ or if notice of calls was not given,⁵ or if the stockholder was dead and no administrator had been appointed,⁶ the forfeiture will be set aside. It has been held that mere laches will not deprive stockholders of this equitable right,⁷ but that undue delay⁸ or acquiescence⁹ will estop them from claiming it. And it may be said generally that relief from forfeiture will not be granted unless the right to such relief is clearly shown.¹⁰ The measure of damages for an unauthorized forfeiture is the market value of the stock at the time of the act,¹¹ but the stockholder is not entitled to a decree for a specific interest in the corporate property.¹² In England, the official liquidator, who corresponds in many respects to the American receiver, has no power to cancel a forfeiture.¹³ The action for relief waived, and the tender must be held to have been sufficient in amount and in proper form. The check of the party not objected to was, for all the purposes of a legal tender, the equivalent of money. (Duffy v. O'Donovan, 46 N. Y. 223.) A sufficient tender of the amount due for the assessment having been made before the sale, the sale was without legal authority and void."

That the tender is accompanied by a protest will not vitiate it. Sweny v. Smith, L. R., 7 Eq. 324.

1. Moore v. New Jersey Lighterage Co., 57 N. Y. Super. Ct. 1.

2. Burham v. San Francisco, etc., Mfg. Co., 76 Cal. 24.

3. Mitchell v. Vermont Copper Min. Co., 67 N. Y. 280; Sweny v. Smith, L. R., 7 Eq. 324; Stubbs v. Lister, 1 Y. & C. C. 81; Clarke's Case, 42 L. J. Ch. 277; 27 L. T., N. S. 843; Dixon's Case, L. R., 5 Ch. 79; Spackman v. Evans, L. R., 3 H. L. 171.

4. Ormsby v. Vermont Copper Min. Co., 56 N. Y. 623.

5. Catchpole v. Ambergate R. Co., 1 El. & Bl. 111; 7 Railway Cas. 221.

6. Glass v. Hope, 16 Grant (Upper Can.) Ch. 420.

7. Laches.—Garden Gully, etc., R. Co. v. McLister, L. R., 1 App. Cas. 39; Hunter v. Stewart, 4 De G., F. & J. 168.

8. Failure of subscribers for more than six years after a call for shares in a cost-book mine to respond or to assert their claim to stock, estops them from then claiming it, though the forfeiture was irregular. Rule v. Jewell, 18 Ch. Div. 660.

9. Lesseps v. Architect's Co., 4 La. Ann. 316, where the forfeiture was ultra vires. See also King's Case, L. R., 2 Ch. 714; Woollaston's Case, 4 De G. & J. 437; Webster's Case, 32 L. J. Ch. 135; Knight's Case, L. R., 2 Ch. 321; Kelk's Case, L. R., 9 Eq. 107; Austin's Case, 24 L. T., N. S. 932; Prendergast v. Turton, 1 Y. & C. 98; Lyster's Case, L. R., 4 Eq. 233; Teasdale's Case, L. R., 9 Ch. 54; Phosphate of Lime Co. v. Green, L. R., 7 C. P. 43.

10. Taylor v. North Star Gold Min. Co., 79 Cal. 285; Marshall v. Golden Fleece, Gold, etc., Min. Co., 16 Nev. 156; Small v. Herkimer Mfg., etc., Co., 2 N. Y. 330; Vatable v. New York, etc., R. Co., 96 N. Y. 49; Weeks v. Silver Islet, etc., Min. Co., 23 N. Y. Super. Ct. 1; Germantown, etc., R. Co. v. Fitler, 60 Pa. St. 124; 100 Am. Dec. 546; Clark v. Barnard, 108 U. S. 436; Sparks v. Liverpool Waterworks Co., 13 Ves. 428; Prendergast v. Turton, 1 Y. & C. 98.

11. Budd v. Multnomah St. R. Co., 15 Oregon 413; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 551; 3 Am. St. Rep. 169; Ormsby v. Vermont Copper Min. Co., 56 N. Y. 623; Stubbs v. Lister, 1 Y. & C. C. 81.

12. Smith v. Maine Boys Tunnel Co., 18 Cal. 111.

13. Dawes' Case, 37 L. J. Ch. 901.

should be brought in the state where the corporation has its domicile.¹

(3) Application of Remedies.—A few cases illustrating the application of the rules of evidence,² pleading and practice,³ in this branch of the law, will be found in the notes. Each subscription is an independent undertaking, in no wise affected by the terms of others,⁴ and separate actions must be brought against each subscriber.⁵ The right to enforce the contract is commen-

1. North State, etc., Min. Co. v. Field, 64 Md. 151. Compare Sudlow v. Dutch Rhenish R. Co., 21 Beav. 43.

2. Evidence.—In an action by a corporation to collect the amount of a subscription, evidence of the value of the stock in question, or of other stock, is inadmissible. South Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Ayres, 56 Ga. 230.

Erasure of a subscription does not prevent suit upon it; explanatory evidence is admissible. Johnson v. Wabash, etc., Plank Road Co., 16 Ind. 389.

Proof of acceptance of a subscription by the corporation may be by parol, and a liability or expense incurred by the corporation on the faith of subscription is evidence thereof. Jones v. Florence, etc., University, 46 Ala. 626.

Original certificates are admissible to prove the fact of subscription. Hughes v. Antietam Mfg. Co., 34 Md. 316.

Declarations of a deceased commissioner who was authorized to receive subscriptions, are not admissible to prove the fact of subscription. Western Maryland R. Co. v. Manro, 32 Md. 280.

An acknowledgment of signatures to subscriptions after suit brought is sufficient; proof of payment for stock standing in one's name involves proof of a previous subscription; corporate books are not of themselves evidence of subscription; a subscriber on condition that others subscribe, is bound (impliedly) by any evidence that would hold the others. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Hickman, 28 Pa. St. 318. See generally EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 42.

3. Pleading and Practice.—In an action by an assignee of subscriptions against a subscriber, upon whom the corporation has drawn an order in favor of such assignee, a declaration which fails to set out the subscription is not good in respect thereto, though good as to the order. Stockton v. Creager, 51 Ind. 262.

Where an action does not include a final installment, the complaint need not show delivery, tender, or issuance of the stock. Minneapolis Harvester Works v. Libby, 24 Minn. 327. See also South Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Ayres, 56 Ga. 230.

The company is not bound to make delivery of unpaid stock; only to tender it conditionally. Hardy v. Merriweather, 14 Ind. 205, following Gorham v. Reeves, 1 Ind. 421.

As to what constitutes tender, see Mitchell v. Vermont Copper Min. Co., 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 406.

A letter of attorney by one in whose name a subscription had been taken, authorizing the attorney to vote as his proxy at a meeting, is evidence to go to the jury. McCully v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 32 Pa. St. 25.

Silent acquiescence by the subscriber in the payment by a third party for him of a percentage required down, is ratification. Mississippi, etc., R. Co. v. Harris, 36 Miss. 17; also subsequent voting by proxy as a stockholder. Greenville, etc., R. Co. v. Choice, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 143.

Plaintiff must prove its corporate existence, and may introduce for that purpose a recorded certificate of incorporation. Hughes v. Antietam Mfg. Co., 34 Md. 316.

In an action on a stock subscription it must be shown that the company is entitled to have capital stock and to receive subscriptions. Minneapolis Harvester Works v. Libby, 24 Minn. 327. See generally PLEADING, vol. 18, p. 467.

4. Connecticut, etc., R. Co. v. Bailey, 24 Vt. 465; 58 Am. Dec. 181.

5. Erie, etc., R. Co. v. Patrick, 2 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 72; 2 Keys (N. Y.) 256, where two actions were required against a party who had subscribed once as trustee and once individually. See also Baines v. Babcock, 95 Cal. 581; Herron v. Vance, 17 Ind. 595; Price v. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co., 18 Ind. 137.

surate with, and dependent upon, the right to acquire the stock.¹ But enforcement will not be restrained in order to give time for the displacement of directors who made the call.² Where the corporation has become insolvent,³ the duty of enforcement devolves upon the official in charge. Thus, receivers,⁴ assignees for creditors,⁵ and trustees⁶ appointed by a court, are proper parties to sue for unpaid subscriptions. It is the general rule that these officers have no greater powers in enforcing subscriptions than the corporation itself had.⁷

d. DEFENSES—(1) Abandonment or Delay of Enterprise.—The fact that a corporate enterprise has failed, and the corporation become insolvent, is not generally a good defense to an action to enforce a subscription.⁸

1. James v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 2 Disney (Ohio) 261.

An assignee of a company, in enforcing the contract of subscription, must show that the company's obligation to deliver stock, as well as the defendant's agreement to pay for it, was transferred. Minneapolis Harvester Works v. Libby, 24 Minn. 327.

2. Anglo-Universal Bank v. Boragon, 45 L. T. 362.

3. In an action by an insolvent corporation no defense can be maintained grounded on defects in organization, unless the same could have been successfully pleaded in answer to a creditor's bill. Ossipee Hosiery, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Canney, 54 N. H. 295.

A defunct corporation cannot maintain an action against one of its members who has received more than his share of the corporate property or owes it; the proper remedy is a suit for an accounting. Krutz v. Paola Town Co., 20 Kan. 397.

4. Actions by Receivers.—Chandler v. Brown, 77 Ill. 333; Stark v. Burke, 9 La. Ann. 341; Stewart v. Lay, 45 Iowa 604; Frank v. Morrison, 58 Md. 423; Mann v. Pentz, 3 N. Y. 415; Dayton v. Borst, 31 N. Y. 435; Calkins v. Atkinson, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 12; Dorris v. French, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 292; Van Wagenen v. Clark, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 497; Nathan v. Whitlock, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 152; Clarke v. Thomas, 34 Ohio St. 46; Mean's Appeal, 85 Pa. St. 75.

In Phoenix Warehousing Co. v. Badger, 67 N. Y. 299, it was said: "The action, having been brought by the company before the appointment of the receiver, could be continued in the name of the original party for the benefit of the receiver. (Code, § 121.)

The right to collect the unpaid subscriptions was transferred to the receiver. (2 R. S. 463; § 36, Laws of 1852, p. 67; Laws of 1860, p. 699; 2 R. S. 469, §§ 67, 69; Rankine v. Elliott, 16 N. Y. 377; Tracy v. First Nat. Bank, 37 N. Y. 523.)"

In New York and Maryland, the right to sue is conferred by statute. Dayton v. Borst, 31 N. Y. 435; Stillman v. Dougherty, 44 Md. 380.

In England, it seems, no such power exists. In re Birmingham, etc., R. Co., 18 Ch. Div. 155.

5. Assignees.—Chamberlain v. Bromberg, 83 Ala. 576; Tobey v. Russell, 9 R. I. 58; Hatch v. Dana, 101 U. S. 205.

6. Trustees.—Howard v. Glenn, 85 Ga. 238; 21 Am. St. Rep. 156; Lewis v. Glenn, 84 Va. 947.

7. Republic L. Ins. Co. v. Swigert (Ill. 1890), 32 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 555; Billings v. Robinson, 94 N. Y. 415; Cutting v. Damerel, 88 N. Y. 410; Winters v. Armstrong, 37 Fed. Rep. 508; Cleveland v. Burnham, 55 Wis. 598.

Fraud in inducing a subscription cannot be set up against an action by a trustee appointed by the court to enforce liability for unpaid subscriptions. Howard v. Glenn, 85 Ga. 238; 21 Am. St. Rep. 156.

A trustee appointed by a court may sue non-resident stockholders who have no personal notice of a suit by the creditor; and such subscribers are bound by assessments by order of such court. Howard v. Glenn, 85 Ga. 238; 21 Am. St. Rep. 156.

8. Failure Not a Defense.—Hardy v. Merriweather, 14 Ind. 205; Morgan County v. Thomas, 76 Ill. 140; Henry v. Vermillion, etc., R. Co., 17 Ohio 187; Miers v. Zanesville, etc., Turnpike Co.

So the partial¹ or temporary² abandonment of the undertaking will not release subscribers. But where in reliance upon the fact of abandonment otherwise confirmed, subscribers had changed their circumstances,³ and where no effort towards collection had been made within the period of limitation,⁴ and when other subscriptions had been refunded and all prosecution of the corporate design had ceased,⁵ or where the charter had lapsed for non-compliance with its terms,⁶ the courts have refused to enforce the contracts. Delay in the progress of the enterprise is rarely available as a defense.⁷

(2) Charter Changes, etc.—A mere change in the corporate name after subscriptions are made, will not preclude recovery.⁸

11 Ohio 273; 1 Redfield on Railways (2d ed.) 170.

A stockholder in a corporation formed for the purpose of developing wild oil land cannot maintain an action to recover back his subscription on the ground of the failure of the company to acquire all of the land mentioned in its prospectus; he must show fraud or misrepresentation, or such an entire failure in the business of the company as amounts to virtual dissolution. Kelsey v. Northern Light Oil Co., 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 111.

Where subscribers to a railroad company gave notes for the amount of their subscriptions, payable on completion of the road, but were subsequently induced to give in place of these, new ones payable in four years, in order to enable the company to carry out its contract, upon the confident but honest expression of opinion by its officers that the road would be completed in less than four years, they were held liable upon the new notes, though the contract was afterwards abandoned and the road left uncompleted. Four Mile Valley R. Co. v. Bailey, 18 Ohio St. 208. See also Bish v. Bradford, 17 Ind. 490; Smith v. Gower, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 17; Phoenix Warehousing Co. v. Badger, 67 N. Y. 294.

1. Partial Abandonment.—Dorman v. Jacksonville, etc., R. Co., 7 Fla. 265; Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Gifford, 87 N. Y. 294.

Abandonment of part of a railway is no defense. In re Jennings, 1 Ir. Ch. 236.

2. McMillan v. Maysville, etc., R. Co., 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 218; 41 Am. Dec. 181; Red Wing Hotel Co. v. Friedrich, 26 Minn. 112.

3. Fountain Ferry Turnpike Co. v. Jewell, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 147.

4. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Byers, 32 Pa. St. 22. In this case it was held that a subscriber thus discharged was not again rendered liable by giving an incomplete letter of attorney to vote on question of accepting a supplement to the charter.

5. McCully v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 32 Pa. St. 25.

6. Sodus Bay, etc., R. Co. v. Lapham, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 314.

In Delaware River, etc., R. Co. v. Rowland (Pa. 1887), 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 524, there being some evidence of the fact of abandonment, it was held proper to submit the question to the jury.

7. Delay.—Pickering v. Templeton, 2 Mo. App. 424; Union Hotel Co. v. Hersee, 79 N. Y. 454; 35 Am. Rep. 536; First National Bank v. Hurford, 29 Iowa 579.

In Miller v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 40 Pa. St. 237; 80 Am. Dec. 570, the work was delayed two years and a half, but the court said: "Until it can be shown how railroads can be built without money, no such defense as is here set up can prevail."

But in Boyle's Case, 54 L. J. Ch. 550, it was said obiter, that an unreasonable delay would authorize one to withdraw his subscription.

8. Change of Name.—Mahan v. Wood, 44 Cal. 462; Howard v. Glenn, 85 Ga. 238; 21 Am. St. Rep. 156; Bucksport, etc., R. Co. v. Buck, 68 Me. 81; Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Dudley, 14 N. Y. 336; Schenectady, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Thatcher, 11 N. Y. 102; North Whitehall Tp. v. South Whitehall Tp., 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 117; Scarborough v. Butler, 2 Lev. 238; Colchester v. Seaber, 3 Burr. 1866; Mellor v. Spateman, 1 Saund. 344, n. 1.

In Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Dudley, 14 N. Y. 354, Selden, J., says: "The

The company may sue in its new name,¹ though it assumes the burden of proving its identity with the same organization as it was formerly named.² A material change in the corporate design as represented to the subscriber, at least places the burden upon the company of showing that the change was not fraudulent.³ The materiality of a change is a question of law,⁴ but in determining what will constitute a material change, the decisions are not entirely harmonious.⁵ On the one hand it has been held that point made by the defendant upon the alteration of the plaintiff's charter, changing the name of the corporation and authorizing the extension of its road from Attica to Buffalo, must, I think, be considered as sufficiently answered by the decision of this court in the case of Schenectady, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Thatcher, 11 N. Y. 102. The power reserved to the legislature in the original act of incorporation to alter or repeal the act is as broad in this case as in that. It is, indeed, entirely unlimited. Under the rule established in that case, no mere addition to or alteration of the charter, however great, would operate to discharge a stockholder from his obligation to the corporation. To work such a discharge the charter must be repealed, or the legislation must be such as virtually to subvert the corporation itself, or, at least, to destroy its identity. A mere change of name has repeatedly been held not to have that effect. (Scarborough v. Butler, 3 Lev. 238; Colchester v. Seeber, 3 Burr. 1806; Mellor v. Spateman, 1 Saund. 344, note 1; North Whitehall Tp. v. South Whitehall Tp., 3 S. & R. (Pa.) 117.) In other respects the change in this case is not materially greater than in that of Schenectady, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Thatcher, 11 N. Y. 102. It does not become necessary, therefore, to take into consideration the soundness of the principles advanced in the case of Hartford, etc., R. Co. v. Croswell, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 383; 4 Am. Dec. 354. That case is in direct conflict with several English cases, as well as with some decided in this country; and a portion of its reasoning would, I think, require to be examined with some care before it is finally adopted. Midland R. Co. v. Gordon, 16 M. & W. 803; Stevens v. South Devon R. Co., 13 Beav. 48; Ffooks v. London, etc., R. Co., 19 E. L. & Eq. 7; Irvine v. Turnpike Co., 2 P. & W. (Pa.) 466; Gray v. Monon- gahela Nav. Co., 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 156; 37 Am. Dec. 500."

A misnomer of the corporation in a notice to pay installments is not fatal. Gray v. Monongahela Nav. Co., 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 156; 37 Am. Dec. 500.

Where a corporation is organized under a general law, and reorganized under a special charter, subscribers to the former are also subscribers to the latter, if they ratify the change; a receipt of dividends from the new corporation would be evidence of an unequivocal character of their holding the stock in such corporation. Hammond v. Straus, 53 Md. 1.

1. Greenville, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 332; Bucksport, etc., R. Co. v. Buck, 68 Me. 81. And see cases cited in last note.

2. Semple v. Glenn, 91 Ala. 245; 24 Am. St. Rep. 894, holding that the minutes of the stockholders' meeting are admissible to prove such identity.

3. Bery v. Marietta, etc., R. Co., 26 Ohio St. 673; Burrows v. Smith, 10 N. Y. 550. Compare Norwich Lock Mfg. Co. v. Hockaday (Va. 1893), 16 S. E. Rep. 877; Plank's Tavern Co. v. Burkhard, 87 Mich. 182.

4. Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Sullivan, 57 Ga. 240, holding also that if its evident purpose is to legalize previous illegal proceedings, a finding that a change is material will not be disturbed.

5. Treat, C. J., in Banet v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 504, thus discusses the subject of the text and reviews the authorities then current: "The rule in relation to contracts of this character must be general in its operation. What will discharge one stockholder from the payment of his subscription must be held to have the same effect as to others. If the defendant is to be relieved from the performance of his obligations because of the change in the route of the road, so must any other subscriber, although it should clearly subscribers were released by an unauthorized alteration in the route of a turnpike,¹ by the location of a manufacturing plant in a different borough than that named,² a change in the terminus of a railroad,³ division of a proposed continuous railway line, mak-

appear that his interests would be promoted by the alteration. The matter of injury to one, or of benefit to the other, cannot affect their respective liabilities. The true question, then, is not whether the defendant was deprived of any incidental benefit by the change in the location of the road, but whether the amendment of the charter worked such a change in the company as releases subscribers from their engagements, at least such of them as have not assented to the alteration. A reference to the authorities bearing on this subject will not be inappropriate. In Middlesex Turnpike Corp. v. Locke, 8 Mass. 268; 10 Mass. 384, it was decided that a subscription to build a turnpike in a specified direction could not be recovered to construct a road in a different direction, although the change was authorized by the legislature and assented to by the directors of the corporation. In Union Locks & Canals v. Towne, 1 N. H. 44; 8 Am. Dec. 32, a subscriber was held to be excused from the payment of his subscription on the ground that the corporation had obtained an amendment of the charter that materially changed the objects and character of the company. Hartford, etc., R. Co. v. Crosswell, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 383; 40 Am. Dec. 354, is a leading case on this subject. In that case, in 1833, the legislature of Connecticut incorporated a company to construct a railroad from Hartford to New Haven, and Crosswell subscribed for ten shares of the capital stock. In 1839, the legislature authorized the company to procure and run a line of steamboats in connection with their road, and, for that purpose, to increase their capital stock to an amount not exceeding two hundred thousand dollars. The amendment was accepted by the board of directors, and ratified by a majority of the stockholders. The corporation then brought an action against Crosswell to recover the amount of his subscription. The court held that the subscription could not be recovered, on the ground that the amendment to the charter effected an essential change in the company, the addition of a new and different enterprise. In Clark v. Monongahela Nav. Co., 10 Watts (Pa.) 364, and Gray v. Monongahela Nav. Co., 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 156; 37 Am. Dec. 500, it was held that an alteration in the charter of an incorporation, by which additional privileges were granted to the company, was not such an invasion of the contracts of subscription as would relieve the subscribers from their liability to pay; although the additional privileges might extend the liabilities of the company, and thereby affect the stockholders. In Pennsylvania, etc., Canal Co. v. Webb, 9 Ohio 136, the court say: "It is not every minute change which will absolve a subscriber from his engagements. In work of this kind, some power of regulation is retained by the legislature; some discretion is confided to the agents who execute the details. Where a subscription is general, unincumbered with conditions, perhaps the stockholder has no reason to complain of any line of transit which starts from the same point of business, accommodates the same travel and transportation, and substantially subserves the same general interests." The cases of Wain v. Turnpike Co., before cited, London, etc., R. v. Wilson, 6 Bing. N. Cas. 135, and Midland R. Co. v. Gordon, 16 M. & W. 804, recognize the same principles."

1. Material Changes. — Middlesex Turnpike Corp. v. Locke, 8 Mass. 268. Even where the subscriber has held corporate offices, and, as a director, has petitioned the legislature for such alteration. Middlesex Turnpike Corp. v. Swan, 10 Mass. 384; 6 Am. Dec. 139.

2. Auburn Bolt, etc., Works v. Schultz (Pa. 1891), 22 Atl. Rep. 904; Norwich Lock Mfg. Co. v. Hockaday (Va. 1893), 16 S. E. Rep. 877.

3. Thompson v. Guion, 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 113, giving as a reason that the subscriber had no power to go into a court of equity to enforce the original charter against the authority of the legislature. See also Marietta, etc., R. Co. v. Elliott, 10 Ohio St. 57, where by legislative enactment there was a change of terminus, and an extension of the corporate powers

ing it three separate enterprises,¹ sale of the road,² or extension of limits upon holding property and collecting tolls by it.³

On the other hand, it is said that immaterial changes such as the law would imply,⁴ will not constitute a good defense, and that the subscription must be presumed to have been executed authorizing the company to run a line of steamers beyond the terminus.

If the company procure an act of the assembly altering termini, subscribers are no longer bound. Manheim, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Arndt, 31 Pa. St. 317. See also Cross v. Peach Bottom R. Co., 90 Pa. St. 392; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 366.

1. Fulton County v. Mississippi, etc., R. Co., 21 Ill. 338.

2. South Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Ayers, 56 Ga. 230.

3. In Union Locks & Canals v. Towne, 1 N. H. 44; 8 Am. Dec. 32, the court, by Woodbury, J., said: "But the money for which this action is brought was assessed for some other objects and under some other circumstances; for purchasing one hundred instead of six acres of land, and under a right to be repaid by an indefinite toll for an indefinite time instead of one limited in its amount and continuance. It is impossible to state the case without perceiving a variation from the contract originally made, and a variation, too, which reaches the gravamen or essence of the contract. Many a cautious man would be willing to hazard the assessments which might be made on a share under the restrictions of the first act, who would never risk those which his more wealthy or more adventurous associates might make under the indulgences of the second one."

4. Union Agricultural, etc., Assoc. v. Neill, 31 Iowa 95. The case is thus stated by the court: "After the defendant had subscribed, the articles were copied, and on the 28th day of October the copied articles were signed and acknowledged. Before the acknowledgment, the following changes were made, to wit: In article ten it was provided that the company should continue for the term of twenty years from this date (the date of the acknowledgment, subject to renewal by vote of three-fourths of the stockholders. It is claimed that, in consequence of this change, the organization to which defendant subscribed is not the one which is attempting to enforce the subscription, and that the defendant, consequently, is not liable to the plaintiff. It may be admitted that a material and radical change in the objects of the association would release the defendant from his liability upon his subscription. Hartford, etc., R. Co. v. Croswell, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 388; 40 Am. Dec. 354. But the changes here made are not of such character. The first simply provides, that the organization shall continue twenty years from the 28th day of October, 1867, instead of twenty years from the 1st day of January, 1868. This amendment simply incorporates into the articles of association a condition, which, if not inserted, the law would imply. By section 1158 of the Revision, the duration of this corporation cannot exceed twenty years. After the lapse of that time after its organization, it must expire by limitation of law, although the articles of incorporation provide for a longer duration; and the same is true of the change providing for renewal upon the vote of three-fourths instead of two-thirds of the stockholders. Under said section such renewal can be had only upon such three-fourths' vote. If the change had not been made, the provision requiring a two-thirds' vote would have been simply inoperative. If the articles had remained as originally drawn, or if they had been entirely silent with regard to duration and mode of renewal of the corporation, the law would have attached to them the same consequences as now. In either case the corporation would endure twenty years from the date of its organization, with a right of renewal by a vote of three-fourths of the stockholders. It follows that the changes are entirely immaterial. The defendant could not possibly be prejudicially affected by them. They do not precipitate a call for installments on his subscription. The original articles provide that the company should commence business when the subscription reached $10,000. The amended articles contain the same provision. Under both, the same contingency renders defendant liable to a under contemplation of possible charter changes.¹ Accordingly, as illustrating its position, this group of courts has held that a departure from a proposed route,² especially if the subscriber has failed to express his preference,³ or if the change is consistent with the original design,⁴ or an improvement thereon,⁵ an extension of the line of road,⁶ or an amendment authorizing the construction of branch lines,⁷ will not discharge those who have subscribed to the stock of railway enterprises. So, in general, this class of authorities holds that charter amendments merely enlarging original powers,⁸ granting additional priv-call for payment. In fact $10,000 had been pledged before the defendant subscribed, so that his liability to a demand for payment was created at the time of his subscription. The change being immaterial, does not exonerate defendant from his obligations. Hartford, etc., R. Co. v. Croswell, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 388; 40 Am. Dec. 354."

1. Mowry v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 4 Biss. (U. S.) 78.

A material alteration in the charter without the consent of a subscriber, and made after his stock was forfeited, will not release him from payment of a note given for the subscription. Mitchell v. Rome R. Co., 17 Ga. 574.

2. Change of Route.—Central Plank Road Co. v. Clemens, 16 Mo. 359; Fry v. Lexington, etc., R. Co., 2 Metc. (Ky.) 314; Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Dudley, 14 N. Y. 336.

One who is active in effecting a change of route cannot afterward repudiate the subscription on the ground of indefiniteness of object as expressed in the articles of incorporation. Owen-ton, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Smith (Ky. 1890), 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 312 n.

The failure to fix the limit of the first section of a road in relocation does not discharge one who had subscribed for stock in the first section before such relocation. Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Wellington, 113 Mass. 79.

3. Greenville, etc., R. Co. v. Coleman, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 118.

4. Wilson v. Wills Valley R. Co., 33 Ga. 466. In Banet v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 513, it was said: "The alteration in the present case is not of such a radical character as to exonerate the stockholders from the payment of their subscriptions. The general features and objects of the corporation continue unchanged. The termini of the road remain the same; the only change consisting in a deviation from an intermediate point. The work is still designed to accommodate the same line of travel and transportation, and promote the same general interests. The length of the road is reduced, and the cost of construction is diminished. The change will be useful to the public, as the legislature has determined, and beneficial to the company, as the board of directors has decided; and the facts of the case clearly sustain both of these conclusions. The only injury that can accrue to any of the subscribers will be the loss of some incidental benefit to their company; and that, as we have already seen, cannot be taken into consideration. If the charter had been so amended as to authorize the construction of a road from Alton to Vandalia or Shelbyville, or from Springfield to Beardstown or Peoria, instead of the one originally designated, the company would be committed to a new and difficult enterprise; and the stockholders might with much force and justice say, this is not the undertaking in which we are engaged, and not the stock in which we agreed to invest our funds."

5. Gibbons v. Grinsel, 79 Wis. 365.

6. Extension of Road.—Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536; Cross v. Peach Bottom R. Co., 90 Pa. St. 392; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 366; Gray v. Monongahela Nav. Co., 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 156; 37 Am. Dec. 500; Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Dudley, 14 N. Y. 336.

7. Greenville, etc., R. Co. v. Coleman, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 118; Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Preston, 35 Iowa 125; See also Banet v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 504; Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Elting, 17 Ill. 429; Sprague v. Illinois River R. Co., 19 Ill. 174; Illinois R. Co. v. Zimmer, 20 Ill. 654.

8. Auxiliary Amendments.—Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Elting, 17 Ill. 429; Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Preston, 35 Iowa 115; Pacific R. Co. v. Hughes, ileges,¹ effecting changes in matters collateral to the contract of subscription² auxiliary to corporate objects, though fundamental,³ are not available to the subscriber as defenses.

(3) Conditions Not Performed—(a) Conditional Subscriptions in General.—A conditional subscription has been defined as “a continuing offer which is final and absolute when accepted.”⁴ When the conditions are valid, the fact of their non-performance is a complete defense to an action on the subscription.⁵ But, in general, a substantial performance only is required,⁶ and when the question of performance is left to the directors, their decision as to the fact of performance cannot be attacked except on the ground of 22 Mo. 303; Pacific R. Co. v. Renshaw, 18 Mo. 210.

A discharge is not effected by a change made in pursuance of the charter, where the defendant has become a stockholder. Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. White, 5 Iowa 409. So where the charter may be altered or repealed by the legislature, a subscriber is not discharged by such amendment. Union Hotel Co. v. Hersee, 79 N. Y. 454; 35 Am. Rep. 536.

The issue of more shares than was at first contemplated is not a good defense. Gibbons v. Grinsell, 79 Wis. 365.

1. An alteration in a charter of incorporation by which additional privileges are given to it, is not such an invasion of the contract of subscription as will relieve the subscriber to its stock from liability to pay. Gray v. Monongahela Nav. Co., 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 156; 37 Am. Dec. 500. See also Cross v. Peach Bottom R. Co., 90 Pa. St. 392; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 366.

2. Cravens v. Eagle Cotton Mills Co., 120 Ind. 6; 16 Am. St. Rep. 298.

3. Banet v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 504; Sprague v. Illinois River R. Co., 19 Ill. 174; Illinois River R. Co. v. Zimmer, 20 Ill. 654.

4. Definition.—Taggart v. Western Md. R. Co., 24 Md. 563; 89 Am. Dec. 760. Says White, J. in Ashtabula, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 15 Ohio St. 335: “The subscription was designed as, and was in fact, a standing or continuing proposition, upon which the plaintiff was not expected to act until the time arrived for the final location of the road. Having been delivered for this purpose and acted on by the plaintiff, after the condition had been complied with, it became an absolute subscription.” See also Lowe v. Edgefield, etc., R. Co., 1 Head (Tenn.) 659.

As to the distinction generally, between conditions precedent and subsequent, see CONDITION, vol. 3, p. 422.

5. Performance Essential.—Banet v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 504; Frankfort, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Churchill, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 427; 17 Am. Dec. 159; Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Shearer, 10 Ind. 244; Central Turnpike Corp. v. Valentine, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 142; Porter v. Raymond, 53 N. H. 519; Monadnock R. Co. v. Felt, 52 N. H. 379; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Hickman, 28 Pa. St. 318; Burrows v. Smith, 10 N. Y. 550; Ashtabula, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 15 Ohio St. 328; Edwards v. Grand Junction R. Co., 7 Sim. 337; 1 M. & C. 650; Ex parte Mainwaring, 2 De G., M. & G. 66; Preston's Case, 15 W. R. 209; Pellat's Case, L. R., 2 Ch. 527; Ex parte Bartlett, 19 L. T., N. S. 628; Ex parte Simpson, L. R., 4 Ch. 184; Ex parte Harwood, 20 L. T., N. S. 736; Rankin v. Hop, etc., Co., 20 L. T., N. S. 207; Simpson v. Heaton's Steel, etc., Co., 19 W. R. 614.

If the condition is afterwards discovered to be ultra vires the subscription is not enforceable. Barnett's Case, 22 W. R. 891; L. R., 18 Eq. 507. See also Des Moines Valley R. Co. v. Graff, 27 Iowa 99; 1 Am. Rep. 256.

6. Substantial Performance Sufficient.—O'Neal v. King, 3 Jones (N. Car.) 517; Cornell's Appeal, 114 Pa. St. 153. See also People v. Holden, 82 Ill. 93; Paris, etc., R. Co. v. Henderson, 89 Ill. 86; Des Moines Valley R. Co. v. Graff, 27 Iowa 99; 1 Am. Rep. 256; Springfield St. R. Co. v. Sleeper, 121 Mass. 29; Virginia, etc., R. Co. v. Henry, 8 Nev. 68.

There is however some authority for the rule that strict compliance is necessary. Martin v. Pensacola, etc., R. Co., 8 Fla. 390; 73 Am. Dec. 713; Brown v. Dibble, 65 Mich. 520; Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Hinsdale, 45 Ohio St. 556; 39 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 239.

fraud.¹ Performance is excused if prevented by the fault of the subscriber,² but not if unforeseen difficulties, such as floods, interfere.³ The fact of performance is usually a question for the jury,⁴ and the burden of proving it is upon the corporation asserting it.⁵

(b) Validity of Conditions.—Subscriptions before incorporation must be absolute.⁶ Parol conditions intended to vary the terms of the written contract of subscription are void, and evidence thereof is inadmissible,⁷ except where fraud or mistake is alleged. So, all

1. Cass v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 80 Pa. St. 31.

2. Upton v. Hansbrough, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 423.

3. Jewett v. Lawrenceburgh, etc., R. Co., 10 Ind. 539.

4. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Eakins, 30 Iowa 279; Jewett v. Lawrenceburgh, etc., R. Co., 10 Ind. 539; Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson, 49 Mich. 148. See also Brand v. Lawrenceville, etc., R. Co., 77 Ga. 506.

5. Santa Cruz R. Co. v. Schwartz, 53 Cal. 106; Ridgefield, etc., R. Co. v. Reynolds, 46 Conn. 375; Chase v. Sycamore, etc., R. Co., 38 Ill. 215; People v. Holden, 82 Ill. 93; Bucksport, etc., R. Co. v. Buck, 65 Me. 536; Union Hotel Co. v. Hersee, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 371; Monadnock R. Co. v. Felt, 52 N. H. 379; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Hickman, 28 Pa. St. 318.

6. Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Tibbits, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 297; Chamberlain v. Painesville, etc., R. Co., 15 Ohio St. 225; Bedford R. Co. v. Bowser, 48 Pa. St. 34; Caley v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 80 Pa. St. 363; Boyd v. Peach Bottom R. Co., 90 Pa. St. 169; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 631.

A subscription, before organization to a railroad company, under the Pennsylvania act of 1849, conditioned on the location of road over a certain route, is deemed an absolute subscription without reference to the condition; it is not the subscription, but the condition, that is illegal. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Biggar, 34 Pa. St. 455.

A subscription to a university in contemplation of, but prior to its incorporation, has been held valid. Johnston v. Ewing Female University, 35 Ill. 518.

An agreement designed to give the company credit before the public to "redeem" a subscriber's stock at par and give him ten per cent. interest, cannot be enforced after insolvency as against bona fide shareholders and creditors. Eisenlord v. Oriental Ins. Co., 29 N. J. Eq. 437.

A nominal holder who allows his name to be used by the company under a written guaranty that it will protect him against loss, is properly included on the list of contributories. Davidson's Case, 3 De G. & S. 21; 18 L. J., N. S. Ch. 254. See also Chapman's Case, L. R., 3 Eq. 361. And so is one who subscribes in order to make the requisite amount of stock. Ex parte Cox, 4 De G., J. & S. 53; 33 L. J. Ch. 145.

In Canada, one who merely signs a subscription list but receives no allotment of shares, cannot be held as a contributory. In re Zoological, etc., Soc., 16 Ont. App. 543, where the court says: "Nothing was done by which the company could have been forced to receive the subscriber. It is therefore impossible to treat him as a shareholder, and the appeal must be allowed. I refer to the recent cases in this court of In re Speight Mfg. Co., 16 Ont. App. 519; In re London P. Co., 16 Ont. App. 508; Ang. & Ames on Corporations (11th ed.), §§ 526, 527; Selma, etc., R. Co. v. Tipton, 5 Ala. 787; 39 Am. Dec. 344, which appears to be a very well considered case. Such cases as Union F. Ins. Co. v. Lyman, 46 Up. Can. 453; Union F. Ins. Co. v. O'Gara, 4 Ont. R. 359, have no application, turning as they do upon the terms of the special act of incorporation, by which the shares subscribed for at the instance of the company are declared to be vested in the subscriber. See also In re Standard F. Ins. Co., 12 Ont. App. 486."

7. Parol Conditions Void.—Mississippi, etc., R. Co. v. Cross, 20 Ark. 443; Ridgefield, etc., R. Co. v. Brush, 43 Conn. 86; Johnson v. Pensacola, etc., R. Co., 9 Fla. 299; Dill v. Wabash Valley R. Co., 21 Ill. 91; Corwith v. Culver, 69 Ill. 502; Thornburgh v. Newcastle, etc., R. Co., 14 Ind. 499; collusive agreements between the corporation and a subscriber to the effect that the latter shall not be bound, or shall be allowed any undue advantage over his fellows, are invalid.¹ Conditions inserted into the contract must, of course, conform to the charter,² and must not be contrary to public policy.³ Abstracts of Brownlee v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 18 Ind. 68; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Pearce, 28 Ind. 502; Gelpcke v. Blake, 15 Iowa 387; 83 Am. Dec. 418; Jack v. Naber, 15 Iowa 450; Kennebec, etc., R. Co. v. Waters, 34 Me. 369; Scarlett v. Academy of Music, 46 Md. 132; Piscataqua Ferry Co. v. Jones, 39 N. H. 491; Minneapolis Threshing Mach. Co. v. Davis, 40 Minn. 110; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 61; Phoenix Warehousing Co. v. Badger, 6 Hun (N. Y.) 293, affirmed 67 N. Y. 294; Whitehall, etc., R. Co. v. Myers, 16 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 34; Nippenose Mfg. Co. v. Staddon, 68 Pa. St. 256; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Gammon, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 567; Cunningham v. Edgefield, etc., R. Co., 2 Head (Tenn.) 23; Connecticut, etc., R. Co. v. Bailey, 24 Vt. 465; 58 Am. Dec. 181. See also Jack v. Naber, 15 Iowa 450; Ridgefield, etc., R. Co. v. Brush, 43 Conn. 86.

Parol evidence to show the letting of a grading contract, and the location of a certain town in compliance with conditions, is not excluded by the rule requiring the best evidence. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Eakins, 30 Iowa 279.

1. Collusive Agreements Void.—White Mountains R. Co. v. Eastman, 34 N. H. 124.

Andrews, J., in Meyer v. Blair, 109 N. Y. 605; 4 Am. St. Rep. 500, observed: "The doctrine that an agreement between one subscriber to the stock of a corporation and the company, made concurrently with the making of the subscription, which purports to annul its obligation, or materially limit or change the liability of the subscriber, to the detriment of the company, is invalid and void, is founded upon the construction that a subscription to the stock of a corporation, whose stock is open for general subscription, is not only an undertaking between each subscriber and the company, but between him and all other subscribers to the common enterprise; and that each subscriber has the right to suppose that the subscription of every other subscriber is a bona fide undertaking according to its terms." Citing White Mountains R. Co. v.

Eastman, 34 N. H. 124; White v. Kuntz, 107 N. Y. 518; 1 Am. St. Rep. 886; Graff v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 31 Pa. St. 489; Miller v. Hanover, etc., R. Co., 87 Pa. St. 95; 30 Am. Rep. 349; Melvin v. Lamar Ins. Co., 80 Ill. 446.

In Melvin v. Lamar Ins. Co., 80 Ill. 456; 22 Am. Rep. 199, it is said: "All subscriptions are presumably upon the same basis, and all shares entitled to the same benefits and subject to the same burdens. In the subscription of each person every other subscriber has a direct interest. There purported here to have been a large amount of stock taken, whereas, in fact, there was really no stock taken, the issue of the shares to Cushman and Hardin being coupled with the right on their part to surrender them and take back their money. Such a private arrangement with an individual subscriber, although it may not be intended, is, in law, a fraud upon the other subscribers; and such agreement will be disregarded, and the party be held bound to all the responsibilities of a bona fide subscriber. This is the doctrine, as we regard, abundantly established by judicial decisions," the court cited, Blodgett v. Morrill, 20 Vt. 509; White Mountains R. Co. v. Eastman, 34 N. H. 124; Robinson v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 32 Pa. St. 334; 72 Am. Dec. 792; Graff v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 31 Pa. St. 489; Stanhope's Case, L. R., 1 Ch. 161; Mangies v. Grand Collier Dock Co., 10 Sim. 519; Preston v. Grand Collier Dock Co., 11 Sim. 327. See also Phoenix Warehousing Co. v. Badger, 6 Hun (N. Y.) 293; affirmed 67 N. Y. 294; Downie v. White, 12 Wis. 176; 78 Am. Dec. 731; Crawford County v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 32 Pa. St. 141. Also Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Sullivan, 57 Ga. 240; Ex parte Davidson, 4 K. & J. 688.

2. Thippen v. Mississippi Cent. R. Co., 32 Miss. 347.

3. Public Policy.—Morrow v. Nashville Iron, etc., Co., 87 Tenn. 262; 10 Am. St. Rep. 667; Paducah, etc., R. Co. v. Parks, 2 Pick. (Tenn.) 560; Lake Ontario Shore R. Co. v. Curtis, particular cases will also be found in the notes where conditions were held unavailing.¹ But aside from the important exceptions above noted, conditions will generally be upheld by 80 N. Y. 219; Ft. Edward, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Payne, 15 N. Y. 583; Macedon, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Snediker, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 317; Butternuts, etc., Turnpike Co. v. North, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 518; Dix v. Shaver, 14 Hun (N. Y.) 392.

1. Invalid Conditions—Instances.—Subscriptions to the capital stock of a plank road company, where the act of incorporation authorizes absolute subscriptions only, conditioned on a particular extension or location of a road, are void. Fort Edward, etc., Plank R. Co. v. Payne, 15 N. Y. 583; Butternuts, etc., Turnpike Co. v. North, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 518. So, if made preparatory to the procurement of the charter. Bedford R. Co. v. Bowser, 48 Pa. St. 34.

Matters collateral to the contract, such as failure to effect a proposed agreement with another corporation in the manner expected, will not exonerate a subscriber. Cravens v. Eagle Cotton Mills Co., 120 Ind. 6; 16 Am. St. Rep. 298.

Where a subscription to a railroad company was conditioned on the commencement of work at a certain point, which was falsely represented to have been commenced, the note given was held void. Taylor v. Fletcher, 15 Ind. 80. So where the location was made a condition. Parker v. Thomas, 19 Ind. 213; 81 Am. Dec. 385.

A subscription to a telegraph line, with a condition annexed naming a committee to see that stipulations were complied with before subscriptions were payable, was held not a condition precedent to recovery of the subscription. Shaffner v. Jeffries, 18 Mo. 512.

Conditions annexed to subscriptions providing for a dividend by way of interest on completion of the road, or one imposing unauthorized limitations on the power to call in stock, are void as against public policy. Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Tibbits, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 297.

The word "non-assessable" upon a certificate does not relieve from the obligation to pay the amount due upon the shares represented thereby; at most, it is only a stipulation against liability after the entire subscription has been paid. Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45.

Subscribers authorized by charter to have the privilege of taking grading contracts, etc., cannot claim such rights after lettings have been publicly advertised to take place and the subscribers have not bid. Johnson v. Crawfordsville, etc., R. Co., 11 Ind. 280.

A subscription conditioned upon being paid by conveying a specific tract of land, is a mere proposition; to be binding, it must be accepted by the directors, or, perhaps, an authorized agent; but not by members of a board of directors acting separately, and not shown to constitute a quorum. Junction R. Co. v. Reeve, 15 Ind. 236.

The incident of partial payment provided by a charter contemplating that the subscription should be absolute is lost when the subscription becomes conditional, and such payment is not necessary to enable the company to recover. Hanover Junction, etc., R. Co. v. Haldeman, 82 Pa. St. 36.

Where a subscription to a university building is conditioned upon its erection within a given time, it need not be completed within that time; if walls, etc., are up, roof and floors need not be in. Johnston v. Ewing Female University, 35 Ill. 518.

A subscription conditioned on a road "passing through" a given locality does not require its construction, but only its permanent location. Ash-tabula, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 15 Ohio St. 328. And a further provision that a freight house shall be built is not a condition precedent to recovery. Chamberlain v. Painesville, etc., R. Co., 15 Ohio St. 225.

Where a subscription was conditioned upon the particular location of a railroad, and notes were given in payment, it was held that performance of the condition was not intended to precede payment; that the subscriber having failed to pay the notes, could not set up a failure of performance; and that a mere intention to defraud could not be pleaded in bar of the action. Keller v. Johnson, 11 Ind. 337; 71 Am. Dec. 355.

A conditional subscriber may, with the assent of the company, change the terms of his agreement; and a note payable absolutely in lieu of such conditional obligation is presumed to be based on a sufficient consideration.

The Contract of Subscription. STOCKHOLDERS. Enforcement of the Contract.

the courts, and failure in performance will prevent the enforcement of the contract.¹

(e) Common and Important Conditions—(1) CAPITAL STOCK TO BE FIXED.—By one class of authorities there is held to be an implied condition, irrespective of charter provisions, that the exact amount of capital stock shall be fixed before subscriptions can be collected.² But there appears to be an almost equal number of cases to the Henderson, etc., R. Co. v. Moss, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 242.

1. Conditions Generally Enforceable.—See New Albany, etc., R. Co. v. McCormick, 10 Ind. 499; 71 Am. Dec. 337; Burrows v. Smith, 10 N. Y. 550; Union Hotel Co. v. Hersee, 79 N. Y. 454; 35 Am. Rep. 536; Morris Canal, etc., Co. v. Nathan, 2 Hall (N. Y.) 239; Chamberlain v. Painesville, etc., R. Co., 15 Ohio St. 225; Ashtabula, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 15 Ohio St. 328; McMillan v. Maysville, etc., R. Co., 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 218; 41 Am. Dec. 181; Dayton, etc., R. Co. v. Hatch, 1 Disney (Ohio) 84; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Stewart, 41 Pa. St. 54; Caley v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 80 Pa. St. 363; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Hickman, 28 Pa. St. 318; Hanover Junction, etc., R. Co. v. Haldeman, 82 Pa. St. 36; Pellatt's Case, L. R., 2 Ch. 527.

Conditional subscriptions are valid if not against public policy; an impossible condition will be deemed never to have really existed. Racine County Bank v. Ayers, 12 Wis. 512.

Conditional subscriptions cannot be withdrawn unless unreasonable delay occurs in performing the condition. Cravens v. Eagle Cotton Mills Co., 120 Ind. 6; 16 Am. St. Rep. 298.

Where the location of the railroad was made a condition precedent, and also the order of the board of directors accepting the subscription on such terms, the actual construction of the road is the best evidence of such order having been made. Moore v. New Albany, etc., R. Co. 15 Ind. 78.

A condition requiring the expenditure of the amount of the subscription on a particular part of the enterprise is valid. Hanover Junction, etc., R. Co. v. Haldeman, 82 Pa. St. 26.

In Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Hickman, 28 Pa. St. 318, subscriptions conditioned on a certain amount of stock being taken were held valid.

Subscriptions are valid if made after the act of incorporation is passed, though before letters patent are issued, if the company afterwards fulfill the conditions necessary to their issuance. Hanover Junction, etc., R. Co. v. Haldeman, 82 Pa. St. 36.

The incorporation of a company with a larger capital stock than that stated in the prospectus releases the subscriber from being held as a contributory. Stevens v. London Steel Works, 15 Ont. (Can.) 75; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 255.

A promise by commissioners of subscription to advance money to subscribers to pay off prior incumbrances on land upon which bonds and mortgages have been given for subscriptions, must be carried out before subscriptions can be enforced. Burrows v. Smith, 10 N. Y. 550.

Acceptance by the company of five per cent. on subscriptions made on other conditions than those named in the articles of association, shows concurrence in those new conditions and creates mutuality. Nichols v. Burlington Plank Road Co., 4 Greene, Iowa 42.

A subscriber to the stock of a company formed for the purpose of erecting a hotel is released if the building is inferior to the proposed plan. Planks Tavern Co. v. Burkhard, 87 Mich. 182.

2. Implied Conditions of Fixed Capital Stock.—See also supra, this title. In Worcester, etc., R. Co. v. Hinds, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 111, the court, by Fletcher, J., said: "Subscribers for shares only undertook to pay their proportion of a capital stock fixed by the directors; it being, of course, assumed, that the directors in the discharge of their duty would fix such an amount as would carry into effect the objects and purposes of the enterprise. But if a subscriber was compelled to pay his subscription before any capital stock was fixed, he might be compelled to pay before any sum was subscribed sufficient to carry on the work, and without any assurance that any such sum would ever be subscribed. By the terms of the subscription paper it is agreed, that such assessments shall be contrary,¹ and, at most, the rule requires no formal action by the company. A resolution to issue a definite amount of stock,² in addition to that subscribed, to fix a date when no more subscriptions will be received,³ or to close the corporate books on a day certain,⁴ will be sufficient to fix the capital stock.

The Contract of Subscription. STOCKHOLDERS. Enforcement of the Contract.

(2) CAPITAL STOCK TO BE FULLY SUBSCRIBED—(a) Rule Generally Imperative—Exceptions.—That all subscriptions are made upon the implied, if not expressed, condition that the specified number of shares must first be taken, is now settled by the great preponderance of American authority.⁵ But there are cases holding the contrary paid by the defendant, as may be required under the provisions of law. The provisions of law require that the directors shall determine the number of shares of which the capital stock shall consist. The directors in the present case not having determined the number of shares so as thus to form a capital stock, there was, according to the principles of law, no capital stock, the defendant's shares or proportions of which were legally liable to assessment, nor can the defendant be legally held to pay any such assessments. Portland, etc., R. Co. v. Graham, 11 Met. (Mass.) 1; Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 23; Central Turnpike Corp. v. Valentine, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 143; Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Chandler, 13 Met. (Mass.) 312."

In Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Newton, 8 Gray (Mass.) 598, Dewey, J., says: "The present case does not in strictness fall within the cases where the amount of capital stock was fixed by the charter, as in Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 23, and Stoneham Branch R. Co. v. Gould, 2 Gray (Mass.) 277; or those where the capital was fixed by the terms of the subscription books, as in Cabot, etc., Bridge v. Chapin, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 50, and Atlantic Cotton Mills v. Abbott, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 423. It is a case of a charter, making provisions as to the capital stock or number of shares, fixing the maximum of the capital stock to which the company may be entitled, but beyond that leaving the precise number of shares from time to time to be determined by the directors of the company. In the provisions in the charter as to the maximum of the stock, and as to the determination of the number of shares from time to time by the directors, the present case resembles the cases of Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Chandler, 13 Met. (Mass.) 311, and Worcester, etc., R. Co. v. Hinds, 8

Cush. (Mass.) 110. It differs from them both, as they do also from each other, in other circumstances. From these cases, however, the principle may be derived, as applicable to charters of this character, that it is the duty of the directors in such case to fix and determine the number of shares from time to time. This number may be enlarged; but for the time being there must be a fixed number. This is strictly so held in respect to assessments upon shareholders, who are such by force of ordinary subscriptions to the stock." See also Somerset R. Co. v. Clarke, 61 Me. 384; Pike v. Bangor, etc., Shore Line R. Co., 68 Me. 445.

1. Ward v. Griswoldville Mfg. Co., 16 Conn. 593; Kirksey v. Florida, etc., R. Co., 7 Fla. 23; 68 Am. Dec. 426; White Mountains R. Co. v. Eastman, 34 N. H. 124 (where the charter authorized calls before the full limit of the stock was fixed); Warwick R. Co. v. Cady, 11 R. I. 131.

Even in Massachusetts, the rule is modified so as to allow a "requisition" upon those who have made a contract for payment of certain amounts when the corporation should require them before fixing the capital stock. Proprietors City Hotel v. Dickinson, 6 Gray (Mass.) 586. The ground of distinction, however, between this and other Massachusetts cases cited above is not clear. See also Penobscot, etc., R. Co. v. Dunn, 39 Me. 587; Penobscot R. Co. v. Dummer, 40 Me. 172; 63 Am. Dec. 654; Penobscot, etc., R. Co. v. Bartlett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 244; 71 Am. Dec. 753.

2. Penobscot, etc., R. Co. v. Bartlett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 244; 71 Am. Dec. 753.

3. Bucksport, etc., R. Co. v. Buck, 65 Me. 536.

4. Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Chandler, 13 Met. (Mass.) 311.

5. Full Capital Stock Must Be Subscribed.—Salem Mill Dam Corp. v.

The Contract of Subscription. STOCKHOLDERS. Enforcement of the Contract.

Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 23; 9 Pick. (Mass.) 195; 19 Am. Dec. 363, is the fountain head of authority upon this principle of American corporation law. Livesey v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 50, is another case in support of this doctrine. The articles of incorporation fixed the amount of the capital stock at two hundred thousand dollars, while the subscription paper stated the cost of the enterprise at not less than one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The petition in an action to enforce subscriptions alleged that the total amount of subscription was one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, and the court held that a cause of action was not stated; citing Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 23; 9 Pick. (Mass.) 195; 19 Am. Dec. 363; Cabot, etc., v. Chapin, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 53; Shurtz v. Schoolcraft, etc., R. Co., 9 Mich. 269; Topeka Bridge Co. v. Cummings, 3 Kan. 76; Somerset R. Co. v. Clarke, 61 Me. 384; New Hampshire Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson, 30 N. H. 404; 64 Am. Dec. 300; Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Preston, 35 Iowa 118; Fox v. Clifton, 6 Bing. 776; Pitchford v. Davies, 5 M. & W. 2; 4 M. & M. 151.

In Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Preston, 35 Iowa 119, Day, J., observes: "This whole question underwent an exhaustive discussion in Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 23, decided in 1827. We despair of being able to add anything to the reasons there assigned. See also Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 187; 19 Am. Dec. 363. This case was followed in Massachusetts, by Central Turnpike Co. v. Valentine, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 142; by Cabot, etc., v. Chapin, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 50; by Worcester, etc., R. Co. v. Hinds, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 110; by Stoneham Branch R. Co. v. Gould, 2 Gray (Mass.) 277; in New Hampshire, in New Hampshire Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson, 30 N. H. 390; 64 Am. Dec. 300, decided in 1855; in Maine, in Penobscot R. Co. v. Dummer, 40 Me. 172; 63 Am. Dec. 654, and in Oldtown, etc., R. Co. v. Veazie, 39 Me. 571, both decided in 1855. See also Littleton Mfg. Co. v. Parker, 14 N. H. 543, and Contoocook Valley R. Co. v. Barker, 32 N. H. 363." And in Stoneham Branch R. Co. v. Gould, 2 Gray (Mass.) 278, Shaw, C. J., says: "It is a rule of law too well settled to be now questioned, that when the capital stock and number of shares are fixed by the act of incorporation, or by any vote or by-law passed conformably to the act of incorporation, no assessment can be lawfully made on the share of any subscriber until the whole number of shares has been taken. Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 23; 9 Pick. (Mass.) 187; 19 Am. Dec. 363; Cabot, etc., v. Chapin, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 50; Worcester, etc., R. Co. v. Hinds, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 110. This is no arbitrary rule; it is founded on a plain dictate of justice and the strict principles regulating the obligation of contracts. When a man subscribes a share to a stock, to consist of one thousand shares, in order to carry on some designated enterprise, he binds himself to pay a thousandth part of the cost of such enterprise. If only five hundred are subscribed for, and he can have no assurance which he is bound to accept that the remainder will be taken, he would be held, if liable to assessment, to pay a five hundredth part of the cost of the enterprise, besides incurring the risk of an entire failure of the enterprise itself, and the loss of the amount advanced towards it."

In Anvil Min. Co. v. Sherman, 74 Wis. 226, Orton, J., says: "It would appear unjust as well as a violation of the contract of subscription to assess the stock of one subscriber for the expenses of the general business of the corporation before it is authorized to do such business, and capable of making a fair and equal assessment upon all of its capital stock, and neither condition is complied with until all of its capital stock has been subscribed. It is to be observed that the contracts of subscription in all of the cases are materially alike. The cases which have followed the above ruling are too numerous to be cited here. Among them are Newburyport Bridge v. Story, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 45; Cabot, etc., v. Chapin, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 50; Eaton v. Pacific Nat. Bank, 144 Mass. 260; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 293; Warwick R. Co. v. Cady, 11 R. I. 131; Haskell v. Worthington, 94 Mo. 560; Banty v. Buckles, 68 Ind. 49; Allman v. Havana, etc., R. Co., 88 Ill. 521; Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Preston, 35 Iowa 115; Rockland, etc., Steamboat Co. v. Sewall, 78 Me. 167; 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 85. This doctrine is laid down in the text-books as being sustained by an almost unbroken line doctrine.¹ So where the statute or charter fixes a lower limit than the full capital stock, subscriptions to that limit are essential.²

of authorities. Cook, Stocks, §§ 104, 176; Thomp. Liab., Stockh., § 120; Green's Brice's, Ultra Vires 153."

The following authorities from other states support this doctrine: Santa Cruz R. Co. v. Schwartz, 53 Cal. 106; Ridgefield, etc., R. Co. v. Brush, 43 Conn. 86; South Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Ayers, 56 Ga. 230; Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Sullivan, 57 Ga. 240; Temple v. Lemons, 112 Ill. 51; Hoagland v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 18 Ind. 452; Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Preston, 35 Iowa 115; Wight v. Shelby R. Co., 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 14; 63 Am. Dec. 522; Lail v. Mt. Sterling, etc., Coalroad Co., 13 Bush (Ky.) 32; Exposition R. Co. v. Canal St. R. Co., 42 La. Ann. 370; Topeka Bridge Co. v. Cummings, 3 Kan. 55; Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 23; 9 Pick. (Mass.) 187; 19 Am. Dec. 363; Penobscot, etc., R. Co. v. Bartlett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 244; 71 Am. Dec. 753; Boston R. Co. v. Wellington, 113 Mass. 79; Oldtown R. Co. v. Veazie, 39 Me. 571; Penobscot R. Co. v. Dummer, 40 Me. 172; 63 Am. Dec. 654; Belfast, etc., R. Co. v. Cottrell, 66 Me. 185; Lewey's Island R. Co. v. Bolton, 48 Me. 451; 77 Am. Dec. 236; Hughes v. Antietam Mfg. Co., 34 Md. 318; Shurtz v. Schoolcraft, etc., R. Co., 9 Mich. 269; Swartwout v. Michigan Air Line R. Co., 24 Mich. 390; Monroe v. Ft. Wayne, etc., R. Co., 28 Mich. 272; International Fair Assoc. v. Walker (Mich. 1891), 36 Am. & Eng. R. Corp. Cas. 233; Curry Hotel Co. v. Mullins (Mich. 1892), 53 N. W. Rep. 360; Selma, etc., R. Co. v. Anderson, 51 Miss. 829; Somerset R. Co. v. Clarke, 61 Me. 379; Livesey v. Omaha Hotel Co., 5 Neb. 50; Anderson v. Middle, etc., R. Co. (Tenn. 1891), 17 S. W. Rep. 803; Hale v. Sanborn, 16 Neb. 1; Contoocook Valley R. Co. v. Barker, 32 N. H. 363; Hards v. Platte Valley Imp. Co. (Neb. 1892), 53 N. W. Rep. 73; Littleton Mfg. Co. v. Parker, 14 N. H. 543; Bray v. Farwell, 81 N. Y. 600; Erie, etc., R. Co. v. Owen, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 616; Jewett v. Valley R. Co., 34 Ohio St. 601; Garrett v. Dillsburg, etc., R. Co., 78 Pa. St. 465; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536; Orynski v. Lousaunan (Tex. 1890), 15 S. W. Rep. 674; Winters v. Armstrong, 37 Fed. Rep. 508.

But the securing of the required amount is an effectual acceptance of all conditional subscriptions. Cravens v. Eagle Cotton Mills Co., 120 Ind. 6; 16 Am. St. Rep. 298.

And a subscriber waives the prerequisite of full capital stock by acting as an officer and taking part in corporate meetings. Masonic Temple Assoc. v. Channell, 43 Minn. 353.

A premature contract, before the required capital stock has been paid in, for the construction of necessary works, will not release a subscriber. Naugatuck Water Co. v. Nichols, 58 Conn. 403; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 306.

1. Exceptions to Rule.—See New Castle, etc., R. Co. v. Bell, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 584; York, etc., R. Co. v. Pratt, 40 Me. 447; Skowegan, etc., R. Co. v. Kinsman, 77 Me. 370; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 13; Cheraw, etc., R. Co. v. White, 14 S. Car. 51; Chubb v. Upton, 95 U. S. 665. Also Belton Compress Co. v. Saunders, 70 Tex. 609.

Where the act of incorporation fixes the minimum capital, provides for an increase, and clothes the company with the full powers of a corporation on a ten per cent. subscription, and payment of one dollar per share, the full minimum capital need not be subscribed before a recovery can be had upon a subscription. Hanover Junction, etc., R. Co. v. Haldeman, 82 Pa. St. 36.

Especially in Oregon the general rule is abrogated by statute and judicial construction. Oregon Cent. R. Co. v. Scoggin, 3 Oregon 161; Willamette, etc., Freighting Co. v. Stannus, 4 Oregon 261; Astoria, etc., R. Co. v. Hill, 20 Oregon 177.

2. New Haven, etc., R. Co. v. Chapman, 38 Conn. 65; Hoagland v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 18 Ind. 452; Illinois River R. Co. v. Zimmer, 20 Ill. 654; Hunt v. Kansas, etc., R. Co., 11 Kan. 412; Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Wellington, 113 Mass. 79; Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Chandler, 13 Met. (Mass.) 311; Penobscot, etc., R. Co. v. Bartlett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 244; 71 Am. Dec. 753; Sedalia, etc., R. Co. v. Abell, 17 Mo. App. 645; Schenectady, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Thatcher, 11 N. Y. 102; Rensselaer, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Wetsel, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 56; Hamil-

But it seems that the rule is not available against the claims of corporate creditors,¹ or if an intention to commence business beforehand is shown.² If the corporation is organized with a definite capital stock, the subscribers are liable for preliminary expenses.³ In England, the principle above stated is generally acknowledged to be the common-law rule,⁴ but it has been greatly modified by judicial departure and by statute.⁵

(b) How Performance Is Determined.—In determining whether the full amount of stock has been subscribed, it is generally permissible ton, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Rice, 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 166; Perkins v. Saunders, 56 Miss. 733; Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 46; Jewett v. Valley R. Co., 34 Ohio St. 601; Hanover Junction, etc., R. Co. v. Haldeman, 82 Pa. St. 36; Norwich Lock Mfg. Co. v. Hockaday (Va. 1893), 16 S. E. Rep. 877. But see Galveston Hotel Co. v. Bolton, 46 Tex. 633.

1. Stewart v. Minnesota, etc., R. Co., 36 Minn. 369.

2. Arkadelphia Cotton Mills v. Trimble (Ark. 1891), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 253.

3. Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 23; Central Turnpike Corp. v. Valentine, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 142.

4. English Doctrine.—Galvanized Iron Co. v. Westoby, 8 Exch. 17; Fox v. Clifton, 6 Bing. 776; 19 E. C. L. 233; Wontner v. Sharp, 4 C. B. 404; Pitchford v. Davies, 5 M. & W. 2; Norwich, etc., Co. v. Theobald, 1 M. & M. 151. But see Lyon's Case, 35 Beav. 646.

5. "The English courts seem to have no clearly defined rule in this matter, but allow each case to turn largely on its own facts; releasing the subscriber if the discrepancy in the subscriptions is very large, and holding him liable if it is small, or if he has in any way aided the company in beginning business." Cook, Stock & Stockholders, § 179.

Under 19 & 20 Vict., ch. 97, that the capital stock is deficient is not a good defense. Ornamental, etc., Co. v. Brown, 2 H. & C. 63.

But where the act of incorporation requires full subscription before any of its provisions "shall be put in force," an action on a call is not maintainable until all subscriptions are complete. Norwich, etc., Nav. Co. v. Theobald, 1 M. & M. 151. And semble, if but a small fraction of the proposed shares are taken, a few subscribers cannot insist on carrying on the enterprise and making calls. Howbeach Coal Co. v. Teague, 5 H. & N. 151.

In the absence of fraud it is not necessary that the entire stock be subscribed before the corporate powers are exercisable. Macdougall v. Jersey, etc., Hotel Co., 34 L. J. Ch. 28. In which case two-thirds of the stock was subscribed. See also In re English, etc., Rolling Stock Co., 12 Jur. N. S. 738. But the fact that less than 1,000 out of 25,000 shares have been subscribed is a good defense. Elder v. London Land Imp. Co., 30 L. T., N. S. 285. But see Lyon's Case, 35 Beav. 646.

And where the amount of stock is fixed, the directors have no right to employ assistants until such sum is subscribed. Peirce v. Jersey Waterworks Co., L. R., 5 Ex. 209.

A provision that "so soon as 1,500,000l. shall have been subscribed, it shall be lawful for the company to put in force all the powers of the act," does not make a full subscription a condition precedent to the exercise of the power to make calls, but only to the exercise of extraordinary powers, eminent domain, etc., as provided by the act. Waterford R. Co. v. Dalbiac, 6 Railway Cas. 753.

But where a clause empowers directors to continue, by formal resolution, the organization of registered members, even though the full stock is not subscribed, such resolution or the full subscription is a condition precedent to the power to make calls. North Stafford Steel, etc., Co. v. Ward, L. R., 3 Exch. 172. See also Watts v. Salter, 10 C. B. 477; 70 E. C. L. 477; Lyon's Case, 35 Beav. 646; Johnson v. Goslett, 3 C. B., N. S. 569; 91 E. C. L. 569; London, etc., Assur. Co. v. Redgrave, 4 C. B., N. S. 524; 93 E. C. L. 524; Macdougall v. Jersey, etc., Hotel Co., 10 Jur., N. S. 1043; Elder v. New Zealand Land Imp. Co., 30 L. T., N. S. 285; Howbeach Coal Co. v. Teague, 5 H. & N. 151.

The Contract of Subscription. STOCKHOLDERS. Enforcement of the Contract.

to count all subscriptions made in good faith,¹ though they are taken merely to complete the amount required for incorporation,² and though some of them prove to be worthless.³ But conditional⁴ or invalid⁵ subscriptions, those given by insolvents,⁶ by parties non compos mentis,⁷ or by other corporations ultra vires,⁸ may not be counted; nor may a subscription payable in other stock at par, but whose actual value is depreciated.⁹ As to whether subscriptions payable in material or labor should be included the authorities are not harmonious.¹⁰

1. Penobscot R. Co. v. Dummer, 40 Me. 172; 63 Am. Dec. 654; Penobscot R. Co. v. White, 41 Me. 512; 66 Am. Dec. 259.

2. Mangles v. Grand Collier Dock Co., 2 R. Cas. (Eng.) 359.

3. Penobscot R. Co. v. Dummer, 40 Me. 172; 63 Am. Dec. 654; Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 187; 19 Am. Dec. 363.

4. California Southern Hotel Co. v. Russell, 88 Cal. 277; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Hunt, 39 Conn. 75; Brand v. Lawrenceville, etc., R. Co., 77 Ga. 506; Oskaloosa Agr. Works v. Parkhurst, 54 Iowa 357; Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Newton, 8 Gray (Mass.) 596. But a subscription conditioned upon the payment of interest has been included. Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Thrall, 35 Vt. 536.

5. Belfast, etc., R. Co. v. Cottrell, 66 Me. 185; Swartwout v. Michigan Air Line R. Co., 24 Mich. 389.

6. Lewey's Island R. Co. v. Bolton, 48 Me. 451; 77 Am. Dec. 237; Belfast, etc., R. Co. v. Brooks, 60 Me. 568.

7. Phillips v. Covington, etc., Bridge Co., 2 Metc. (Ky.) 219; Hahn's Appeal (Pa. 1886), 7 Atl. Rep. 482.

8. Berry v. Yates, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 199.

9. Ticonic Water Power, etc., Co. v. Lang, 63 Me. 480.

The charter of a railroad company provided that no installments of subscriptions to its capital stock, after the first, should be called for until at least $500,000 of the capital stock should be subscribed. After such subscriptions to the amount of $200,000 had been made, a contractor agreed with the company to construct its road, and to accept in part payment, on the completion of the road, $300,000 in its capital stock. The contractor afterward became insolvent, and failed to fulfill his contract. It was held that such agreement was not a subscription to stock within the meaning of the proviso in the charter. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Hunt, 39 Conn. 75.

10. Subscriptions not Payable in Cash.

—In Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Newton, 8 Gray (Mass.) 596, a subscription, by a firm of contractors, for building a railroad, of a certain number of shares, "being a portion of the twenty-five per cent. named in our contract for graduation," was held not to be equivalent to a cash subscription. The court said: "The receipt of the stock by them depended entirely upon a contingency, as the contractors might fail to do the work, and so no stock be earned."

On the other hand, in Phillips v. Covington, etc., R. Co., 2 Metc. (Ky.) 219, the court said: "Stock had been subscribed by the contractors, which some of them were to pay in services, and others in materials to be used in the construction of the bridge. This stock was objected to on the ground that its payment depended upon the continuation of the work, and was, therefore, conditional in its nature, and also on the ground that it was not payable in money. It appeared in proof that the materials were to be furnished in payment of this stock, at as cheap a rate as they could have been purchased with money; and that the compensation agreed to be allowed for the services, part of which was to be paid in stock, did not exceed that which was reasonable, and which the company would have had to pay therefor, if the payment had been made altogether in money. Under these circumstances, we do not perceive any good reason why such stock should not be regarded as valid. It suited the purposes of the company as well as stock that was payable in money. It operated to save for the company money to the amount thereof, which it would have been compelled to expend had the stock not been taken.

The Contract of Subscription. STOCKHOLDERS. Enforcement of the Contract.

(3) PERCENTAGE REQUIRED DOWN.—A common provision in statutes and charters and sometimes in by-laws, is one requiring the payment of a stated portion of the amount at the time of subscription. Whether in such case a failure to make payment may be pleaded as a defense by the subscriber himself is a question which has been the source of litigation and want of judicial harmony. On the principle that one may not profit by his own wrong, the weight of authority supports the rule that a subscriber cannot thus escape his obligations.¹ By cases of this class also,

The result was precisely the same that it would have been if the stock had been payable in money, and the money, when paid, had been expended for the payment of these services and materials. The arrangement is not prejudicial to the other stockholders, nor does it give any advantage to the stockholders who have the privilege to pay their stock in this manner, inasmuch as they only receive the cash value of their services and materials, and as these services and materials are all indispensably necessary to enable the company to construct the bridge, the construction of which is the sole object of its incorporation."

In Ridgefield, etc., R. Co. v. Brush, 43 Conn. 99, A subscribed in the usual form, but under a private agreement with the directors to build the road and pay for the stock, half in cash and half in work and materials. A was not able to pay in cash and failed to build the road. It was held that another subscriber could not defeat an action on his subscription by setting up the invalidity of A's subscription. From this conclusion, however, two judges dissented. See also Cabot, etc., Bridge v. Chapin, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 50; Oldtown, etc., R. Co. v. Veazie, 39 Me. 571.

1. Failure to Pay.—Cases Holding that Subscriber cannot Plead it.—Minnesota, etc., R. Co. v. Bassett 20 Minn. 535; Haywood, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Bryan, 6 Jones (N. Car.) 82; McRea v. Russell, 12 Ired. (N. Car.) 224.

Caton, C. J., says, in Illinois River R. Co. v. Zimmer, 20 Ill. 657: "If the commissioners, at the time the subscriptions were made, saw fit to give time upon the part which should have been paid down, they could not, for that reason, be permitted to refuse to the defendants the stock, when they should pay it in obedience to the call of the company for it. If the company violated its strict duty in giving them time on the first payment, they could not be allowed to take advantage of that wrong and refuse the subscribers the benefit of the stock, when they should offer to pay for it. So, on the other hand, the defendants cannot be allowed to take advantage of the indulgence extended to them when they made their subscriptions for the purpose of repudiating them. This indulgence is a most ungracious defense, which should not be allowed, unless it is strictly required by some inflexible rule of law. Good faith to other subscribers, who may have been induced to take stock on the strength of these very subscriptions, requires that the defendants shall go on with them in the execution of the enterprise. Good faith to the creditors of the company, who had a right to look to the list of subscribers to determine whether the company was worthy of credit, imperiously demands that those, who by their subscriptions induced the credit, shall be compelled to contribute to the fund from which they are to receive their pay. Wight v. Shelby R. Co., 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 5; 63 Am. Dec. 522; Vermont Cent. R. Co. v. Claves, 21 Vt. 30." See also Smith v. Tallahassee Plank Road Co., 30 Ala. 650; Selma, etc., R. Co. v. Rountree, 7 Ala. 670; Litchfield Bank v. Church, 29 Conn. 137 (where payment was made by an agent); Southern L. Ins., etc., Co. v. Lanier, 5 Fla. 110; 58 Am. Dec. 448; Napier v. Poe, 12 Ga. 170; Mitchell v. Rome R. Co., 17 Ga. 574; Ryder v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 516; Klein v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 514; Water Valley Mfg. Co. v. Seaman, 53 Miss. 655; Barrington v. Mississippi, etc., R. Co., 32 Miss. 372; Fiser v. Mississippi, etc., R. Co., 32 Miss. 359; Oler v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 583; Henry v. Vermillion, etc., R. Co., 17 Ohio 191; Ashtabula, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 15 Ohio St. 328; Penobscot R. Co. v. White, 41 Me. 512; 66 Am. Dec. 257;

even where payment was required to be in cash down, the acceptance of checks,¹ or promissory notes² has been approved. There is, on the other hand, a very respectable list of decisions, which hold that such conditions as to payment are imperative, and that their non-performance relieves the subscriber from liability.³

(4) Consolidation.—See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 272 i; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 775.

(5) Fraudulent Representations.—See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, pp. 255, 259; FALSE PRETENSES, vol. 7, p. 699; FRAUD, vol. 8, p. 635; OFFICERS (PRIVATE CORPORATIONS), vol. 17, p. 115.

(6) Increase of Capital Stock.—See STOCK, vol. 23, p. 582.

(7) Irregular Organization.—See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 197.

(8) Mismanagement—(See also ULTRA VIRES).—The fact that the corporation is mismanaged is not available to a subscriber as Hayne v. Buchanan, 32 Miss. 159; Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. v. McKean, 12 La. Ann. 638; Chamberlain v. Painesville, etc., R. Co., 15 Ohio St. 225; Spartanburg, etc., R. Co. v. Ezell, 14 S. Car. 281; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 605; Stuart v. Valley R. Co., 32 Gratt. (Va.) 146; Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Applegate, 21 W. Va. 172; Greenville, etc., R. Co. v. Woodside, 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 145.

This rule has been held even where a by-law provision makes a subscription void for non-payment. Piscataqua Ferry Co. v. Jones, 39 N. H. 491.

After a subscriber has paid a judgment for one call, he is estopped to set up non-performance of the conditions as to other installments. Hall v. Selma, etc., R. Co., 6 Ala. 741.

Where the charter required payment of $5 down upon each share, but allowed the corporation to commence the construction of its works as soon as $3,000 should be subscribed, it was held that the $5 per share was not a condition precedent to organization or to commencing construction. Mitchell v. Rome R. Co., 17 Ga. 574.

1. People v. Stockton, etc., R. Co., 45 Cal. 306.

2. Hayne v. Beauchamp, 13 Miss. 515; Home Stock Ins. Co. v. Sherwood, 72 Mo. 461; Pine River Bank v. Hadsdon, 46 N. H. 114; McRea v. Russell, 12 Ired. (N. Car.) 224; Vermont Cent. R. Co. v. Claves, 21 Vt. 30.

3. Cases Holding that Such Defense Is Available.—Jenkins v. Union Turnpike Co., 1 Cal. Cas. (N. Y.) 86; Excelsior Grain, etc., Co. v. Stayner, 25

Hun (N. Y.) 91; Syracuse, etc., R. Co. v. Gere, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 392; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Van Horn, 57 N. Y. 473.

Under the New York act of 1850, ten per cent. need not be paid on each subscription at incorporation; it is sufficient if all cash payments amount to ten per cent. Lake Ontario, etc., R. Co. v. Mason, 16 N. Y. 451; People v. Chambers, 42 Cal. 201; Wood v. Coosa, etc., R. Co., 32 Ga. 273; Farmers, etc., Bank v. Nelson, 12 Md. 35; Taggart v. Western Md. R. Co., 24 Md. 588; 89 Am. Dec. 760; Charlotte, etc., R. Co. v. Blakely, 3 Strobb. (S. Car.) 245; State Ins. Co. v. Redmond, 1 McCrary (U. S.) 308; Hibernia Turnpike Co. v. Henderson, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 219; 11 Am. Dec. 593; Leighty Susquehanna, etc., Turnpike Co., 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 434; Bucher v. Dillsburg, etc., R. Co., 76 Pa. St. 306 (under statute of 1868); Boyd v. Peach Bottom R. Co., 90 Pa. St. 169; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 631.

This rule has been somewhat modified in Pennsylvania, by other decisions. See Clark v. Monongahela Nav. Co., 10 Watts (Pa.) 364; Everhart v. West Chester, etc., R. Co., 28 Pa. St. 339; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Hickman, 28 Pa. St. 318, where the provision was held inoperative after organization.

Failure of a subscriber to pay the ten per cent. required down is no defense, where he permits his name to remain on the articles until after organization. Garrett v. Dillsburg, etc., R. Co., 78 Pa. St. 465.

A statute passed during pendency of a defense to the enforcement of his contract.¹ That evil must be corrected by other means.² Thus, the purchase of property at an exorbitant figure,³ a fraudulent contract with another company,⁴ expending funds in building a dam, when the corporation was created to maintain a flouring mill,⁵ or acts resulting in the depreciation of the stock,⁶ will not release a subscriber.

(9) Mistake or Ignorance.—See MISTAKE, vol. 15, p. 625.

(10) Reduction of Capital Stock.—See STOCK, vol. 23, p. 582.

(11) Release.—Where the corporate enterprise has been abandoned, a release by the directors on that account is a good defense,⁷ but a plea of release without the averment of a consideration, and that the corporation is free from debt, is bad.⁸ A release of a portion only of the subscribers is a good defense to an action against others not consenting thereto,⁹ unless their liability a suit for a subscription without such required payment, declaring that the corporation should have the same remedies as if former statutes had not required such payment, was held not to affect the existing action. Ogle v. Somerset, etc., Turnpike R. Co., 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 256.

1. Chetlain v. Republic L. Ins. Co., 86 Ill. 220; People v. Barnett, 91 Ill. 422.

In Merrill v. Reaver, 50 Iowa 404, Beck, C. J., for the court, said: "The defendant asked the court to direct the jury that the issue of bonds by the railroad company, in excess of the amount authorized by the articles of incorporation, which impaired the value of the stock by casting a cloud over the corporate property, would be a good defense against this action. The instruction was properly refused. The bonds, if illegally issued in excess of the amount authorized, are, therefore, void, and the stock of defendant could not be affected thereby. If they are legal, defendant cannot complain. By becoming a debtor to the corporation he is not clothed with the power to control its acts. A corporation may be legally yet so unwisely managed as to impair the value of its stock. Surely this would not relieve the stockholder of liability to pay his subscription to the corporation made for his stock. Men that become stockholders must assume a certain degree of risk that the affairs of the corporation will not always be wisely or even lawfully managed. When contracts are made by the officers of the corporation, which are void, the stockholder's remedy is to be pursued by resistance to the enforcement of such contracts. He cannot withdraw from the corporation. Defendant's rights are the same."

2. See infra, this title, Rights, Powers and Prerogatives.

3. Chetlain v. Republic L. Ins. Co., 86 Ill. 220; Hornaday v. Indiana, etc., R. Co., 9 Ind. 263; Dorris v. French, 4 Hun (N. Y.) 292.

4. People v. Logan County, 63 Ill. 387.

5. Ginrich v. Patron's Mill Co., 21 Kan. 59.

6. People v. Barnett, 91 Ill. 422.

7. Nettles v. Marco, 33 S. Car. 47.

8. Zirkel v. Joliet Opera House, 79 Ill. 334.

9. Release of Other Subscribers.—Memphis R. Co. v. Sullivan, 57 Ga. 240; Rutz v. Esler, etc., Mfg. Co., 3 Ill. App. 83; Crawford County v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 32 Pa. St. 141; New York Exch. Co. v. DeWolf, 31 N. Y. 273; 2 Den. (N. Y.) 403.

A municipal subscription to the stock of a company which previously released its private subscribers, is invalid. Crawford County v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 32 Pa. St. 141.

An arrangement between officers and certain subscribers, that if the town in which the latter reside voted a certain amount of municipal aid, they should be released from the operation of their subscriptions, is void. Swartwout v. Michigan Air Line R. Co., 24 Mich. 389.

But the fact that a trustee of an insolvent corporation appointed by the court to collect unpaid subscriptions has compromised with other delinquent stockholders, who made payments within a given time, is not a defense. Hambleton v. Glenn (Md. 1890), 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 505.

is several.¹ Stockholders may claim the benefits of a release of the corporation.²

(12) Set-Off and Counterclaim.³—Where the corporation is a "going concern" and seeks to collect unpaid subscriptions for its own benefit exclusively, the subscriber may set off debts due from it to him,⁴ and such a set-off allowed by the company cannot be afterwards questioned except for fraud.⁵ Even as against the claims of corporate creditors, where the liability which they seek to enforce is one in addition to that for unpaid subscriptions, is immediate and several, and actionable by any creditor against any stockholder, set-off is generally available.⁶ But where, in case of such additional liability, the statute providing for it creates a joint fund for the payment of creditors, and the corporation is insolvent, the stockholder must pay his proportion thereof and look to the corporate assets for the satisfaction of his claim.⁷ So, as against the enforcement by creditors of the stockholder's ordinary liability for unpaid subscriptions, a set-off cannot be pleaded.⁸ A stockholder cannot, by purchasing claims

1. Stilphen v. Ware, 45 Cal. 110; Brown v. Eastern Slate Co., 134 Mass. 590; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 120; Mohr v. Minnesota Elevator Co., 40 Minn. 343; Hanson v. Donkersley, 37 Mich. 184; Grand Rapids Sav. Bank v. Warren, 52 Mich. 557; Parrott v. Colby, 6 Hun (N. Y.) 55; affirmed, 71 N. Y. 597; Jagger Iron Co. v. Walker, 76 N. Y. 521; Sutherland v. Olcott, 95 N. Y. 93; Jones v. Barlow, 62 N. Y. 202; Aultman's Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 505; Bank of Fort Madison v. Alden, 129 U. S. 372.

2. Bank of Poughkeepsie v. Ibbotson, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 461; Herries v. Platt, 21 Hun (N. Y.) 132; Jagger Iron Co. v. Walker, 76 N. Y. 521.

3. See generally SET-OFF, RECOVERY AND COUNTERCLAIM, vol. 22, p. 209.

4. Barnett's Case, L. R., 19 Eq. 449. An agreement between the corporation and a subscriber, who held its note, that assessments on his shares should be regarded as payments on the note, is valid, and the note will be held to have been paid by sufficient assessments as against both the payee, and an indorsee after maturity. Paine v. Central Vt. R. Co., 118 U. S. 152; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 37.

5. Goodwin v. McGehee, 15 Ala. 232; Thompson v. Meisser, 108 Ill. 359.

6. Belcher v. Wilcox, 40 Ga. 391; Boyd v. Hall, 56 Ga. 563; Thompson v. Meisser, 108 Ill. 359; Buchanan v. Meisser, 105 Ill. 638; Garrison v.

Howe, 17 N. Y. 458; Jerman v. Benton, 79 Mo. 148; Mathez v. Neidig, 72 N. Y. 100; Agate v. Sands, 73 N. Y. 620; Wheeler v. Millar, 90 N. Y. 353; Richards v. Crocker, 19 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 73; Remington v. King, 11 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 278; Christensen v. Colby, 43 Hun (N. Y.) 362; Tallmadge v. Fishkill Iron Co., 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 382; Briggs v. Penniman, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 387; 18 Am. Dec. 454; Welles v. Stout, 38 Fed. Rep. 807.

7. Thebus v. Smiley, 110 Ill. 316; Buchanan v. Meisser, 105 Ill. 638; Weber v. Fickey, 47 Md. 196; Emmert v. Smith, 40 Md. 123; Matthews v. Albert, 24 Md. 527; In re Empire City Bank, 18 N. Y. 199; Lawrence v. Nelson, 21 N. Y. 158; Clapp v. Wright, 21 Hun (N. Y.) 240; Briggs v. Cornwell, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 436; Millier v. Alleghany Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Pa. St. 470; 45 Am. Dec. 656; Terry v. Bank of Cape Fear, 20 Fed. Rep. 777; Witters v. Sowles, 32 Fed. Rep. 130; Hobart v. Gould, 8 Fed. Rep. 57.

A contributory of an insolvent company, who is also a creditor, cannot set off the debt due to him by the company against calls made in the course of winding up proceedings in respect of a double liability imposed by statute. Maritime Bank v. Troop, 16 Can. Sup. Ct. 456; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 410.

8. In Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 152, Woods, J., said: "It is a general rule that a holder of claims against against the corporation, extinguish his liability to an amount greater than that actually paid by him.¹

(13) Statute of Limitations.—See supra, this title, Calls and Assessments—Limitations; also LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 721.

(14) Ultra Vires Acts.—See ULTRA VIRES.

(15) Miscellaneous Defenses.—In the notes will be found instances of defenses which have been raised and passed on by the courts, but which hardly fall under any one of the preceding heads.²

an insolvent corporation cannot set them off against his liability for an assessment on his stock in the corporation in a suit by an assignee in bankruptcy. Sawyer v. Hoag, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 610; Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 56; Scammon v. Kimball, 92 U. S. 362; Morgan County v. Allen, 103 U. S. 498."

"The debt which the appellant owed for his stock was a trust fund devoted to the payment of all the creditors of the company. As soon as the company became insolvent, and this fact became known to the appellant, the right of set-off for an ordinary debt to its full amount ceased. It became a fund belonging equally in equity to all the creditors, and could not be appropriated by the debtor to the exclusive payment of his own claim." Sawyer v. Hoag, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 622.

In support of the text, see Quick v. Lemon, 105 Ill. 578; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 620; Singer v. Given, 61 Iowa 93; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 87; Thompson v. Reno Sav. Bank, 19 Nev. 103; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 203; 3 Am. St. Rep. 797; In re Empire City Bank, 18 N. Y. 199; Shickle v. Watts, 94 Mo. 410; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 561; Mathis v. Pridham (Tex. App. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 1015; Mudford's Case, 14 Ch. Div. 634; Black's Case, L. R., 8 Ch. 254; Griswell's Case, L. R., 1 Ch. 528; Bissit v. Kentucky, etc., Nav. Co., 15 Fed. Rep. 363. See also Boulton Carbon Co. v. Mills, 78 Iowa 460; Tama Water Power Co. v. Hopkins, 79 Iowa 653; Lawrence v. Nelson, 21 N. Y. 158; Scammon v. Kimball, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 431; Matthews v. Albert, 24 Md. 527; Hillier v. Allegheny Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Pa. St. 470; 45 Am. Dec. 656; Long v. Penn Ins. Co., 6 Pa. St. 421; Osgood v. Ogden, 4 Keyes (N. Y.) 70; Gill's Case, 12 Ch. Div. 755; Calisher's Case, L. R., 5 Eq. 214; Barnett's Case, L. R., 19 Eq. 449; In re Whitehouse & Co., L. R., 9 Ch. Div. 595; Garnett, etc., Min. Co. v. Sutton, 3 B. & S. 321; 113 E. C. L. 320.

1. Settling Off Purchased Claims.—Thompson v. Meisser, 108 Ill. 359; 3 Am. St. Rep. 797; Gauch v. Harrison, 12 Ill. App. 457; Bulkley v. Whitcomb, 49 Hun (N. Y.) 290; Sawyer v. Hoag, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 610; Goodwin v. McGehee, 15 Ala. 232; Peters v. Fort Madison Const. Co., 72 Iowa 405; Briggs v. Cornwell, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 436; Hardy v. Norfolk Mfg. Co., 80 Va. 404; Manville v. Karst, 16 Fed. Rep. 173.

2. Where there is no fraud, a failure of consideration will not invalidate certificates issued and delivered. Protection L. Ins. Co. v. Osgood, 93 Ill. 69.

Refusal to issue to a subscriber scrip for his shares is not a failure of consideration, where it appears that officers would thus render themselves liable for the amount to the company's creditors. Battershall v. Davis, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 323.

Failure to incorporate, held not sufficient to relieve a subscriber; the equitable right in the capital of the proposed company being sufficient. Smith v. Gillen, 52 Ark. 442.

One who has received what he subscribed for, cannot complain of an issue of stock to those who could not have compelled it, whose names were not on the books, or who had not actually paid in the amount required down. Swartwout v. Michigan Air Line R. Co., 24 Mich. 389.

Subscription to an excess of the unauthorized stock cannot be enforced, but is not a defense to other subscriptions if the corporation is prepared to issue a sufficient amount of authorized stock. Oler v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 583; Litchfield Bank v. Church, 29 Conn. 137; Smith v. North American Min. Co., 1 Nev. 430.

(16) Waiver of Defenses—(See also ESTOPPEL, vol. 7, p. 1; WAIVER).—Certain acts and declarations of subscribers have been treated by the courts as an implied waiver¹ of defenses otherwise valid. Thus, serving the corporation in some official capacity,² such as president,³ director,⁴ or judge of a corporate

It is a good defense to an action on a subscription that the subscriber had the option of paying $500 or giving the right of way, and that he had chosen the latter. Such a defense is also good on the ground that it is a power not coupled with an interest and could be revoked before execution by the corporation. Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Wright, 38 Ind. 64.

Ultra vires acts of the directors in allowing certain stockholders to pay up their subscriptions in depreciated confederate currency are no defense to an action against other stockholders for amounts due on proper calls. Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Vason, 57 Ga. 314.

Where both subscriber and corporation agree that another shall take the shares, and the transfer is effected with that understanding, the original subscriber is discharged. In re Towns Drainage, etc., Co., L. R., 16 Eq. 104. That the certificate has not been tendered is not a defense. New Albany, etc., R. Co. v. McCormick, 10 Ind. 499; 71 Am. Dec. 337; Fulgum v. Macon, etc., R. Co., 44 Ga. 597; South Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Ayers, 56 Ga. 230; Vawter v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 14 Ind. 174; Columbia Electric Co. v. Dixon, 46 Minn. 463; Astoria, etc., R. Co. v. Hill, 20 Oregon 177; Paducah, etc., R. Co. v. Parks, 86 Tenn. 554; Hawley v. Upton, 102 U. S. 314.

In England, undue delay in registration will relieve the transferrer. Ex parte Nation, L. R., 3 Eq. 77; Ex parte Read, 36 L. J. Ch. 472; Lowe's Case, L. R., 9 Eq. 589. But not if the transferrer himself has been negligent. Walker's Case, L. R., 6 Eq. 30. And the transferee must be a responsible person. Shipman's Case, L. R., 5 Eq. 219.

The making of a premature contract by the company before the full capital stock is paid in will not release a subscriber. Naugatuck Water Co. v. Nichols, 58 Conn. 403; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 306.

The fact that a subscriber offered, during the solvency of the corporation, to pay for his stock, and the issue of it to him was refused, or the fact that an attempt was made to prefer a director in making an assignment, will not afford a good defense to an action by the assignee of the corporation. Potts v. Wallace, 146 U. S. 689.

1. Implied Waiver.—Hanover Junction, etc., R. Co. v. Haldeman, 82 Pa. St. 36.

A subscriber to a turnpike company who consents to a change in the route, cannot subsequently repudiate his subscription on the ground of indefiniteness in the articles as to corporate objects. Owenton, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Smith (Ky. 1890), 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 312, n.

Evidence tending to show a waiver of the implied condition of full subscription should be submitted to the jury. Hards v. Platte Valley Imp. Co. (Neb. 1892), 53 N. W. Rep. 23.

2. Mere election without serving, is not a waiver. Ridgefield, etc., R. Co. v. Reynolds, 46 Conn. 375.

3. Dayton, etc., R. Co. v. Hatch. 1 Disney (Ohio) 84.

4. Lane v. Brainerd, 30 Conn. 565; Danbury, etc., R. Co. v. Wilson, 22 Conn. 435; Masonic Temple Assoc. v. Channell, 43 Minn. 353; Ruggles v. Brock, 6 Hun (N. Y.) 164; West Cornwall R. Co. v. Mowatt, L. R., 15 Q. B. 521; Ex parte Mowatt, 1 Drew 247; Sharpley v. Louth, etc., R. Co., 2 Ch. Div. 665.

But in Middlesex Turnpike Corp. v. Swan, 10 Mass. 389; 6 Am. Dec. 139, where the subscriber had acted in several offices of the corporation, the court said: "The probable result of the defendant's engagement as a corporator is—and in this he may be subject in all respects to the corporate remedy provided by the statute—that all variations of the road originally built, expenses lawfully incurred connected with the original design or growing out of it, which the corporation, acting in their artificial capacity, have concurred in and authorized, are within his subscription for shares, his consent to become a proprietor, subject to the by-laws, rules, votes and undertakings of the corporation, so far as these are within the scope of the original design, and so far as the legislature may permit; that being the ultimate authority to which each incorporator submits himself. And this would be an answer to the supposed case of money paid on the original subscription. The promise, however, connected with this consent to become a corporator, is not to have the same latitude of interpretation. In that promise he is not a corporator, but an individual contracting with the corporation; and he undertakes in that extraordinary manner, referring himself to what the legislature had done, not to any probable subsequent grant. And it is not competent to one of the parties to change the terms of this collateral contract; and as there is no express, so there is no implied, consent, to be deduced from the circumstances proved in the case at bar, where the defendant may have been controlled by the will of the majority, or, if he concurred in the votes and proceedings of the corporation, it was as a corporator, not carrying with his concurrence any renewal of his supposed collateral promise."

election,¹ participating in the affairs of the company,² payment

1. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Proudfit, 2 Pittsb. (Pa.) 85.

2. Participating in Corporate Affairs.—Cole v. Dyer, 29 Ga. 434; Stillman v. Dougherty, 44 Md. 380; Garling v. Baechtel, 41 Md. 305; Hager v. Cleveland, 36 Md. 476; Central Plank Road Co. v. Clemens, 16 Mo. 359; Erie, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Brown, 25 Pa. St. 156; Deposit, etc., Assurance Co. v. Ayscough, 6 El. & Bl. 761.

Participation as a director in the business of the corporation before the full amount of stock is taken, is a waiver of such requirement. Masonic Temple Assoc. v. Channell, 43 Minn. 353.

Where a company begins business with less than the required capital, a subscriber waives that defense by writing to the directors and urging them to call a special meeting. Tredwen v. Bourne, 6 M. & W. 461. And by failure to refuse to take his stock under the rules where the company begins business on one-third of the capital. Ex parte Hawkins, 2 K. & J. 253.

But one who merely subscribes his name to the prospectus of a proposed company, and attends meetings of the subscribers, but pays no subscription, is not chargeable for goods furnished the company when formed. Bourne v. Freeth, 9 B. & C. 632; 4 M. & R. 512.

One who subscribed with knowledge of a misrecital in the act of incorporation, and acts as a stockholder, is estopped to set up such misrecital as a defense. Cromford, etc., R. Co. v. Lacey, 3 Y. & J. 80.

Irregularities in the subscription, and a condition precedent therein, are waived by the subscriber acting as a director. Lane v. Brainerd, 30 Conn. 565. But see Middlesex Turnpike Corp. v. Swan, 10 Mass. 389; 6 Am. Dec. 139.

A clause in the subscription providing that the full amount should be expended in certain places, was held, in view of the fact that the subscriber accepted the directorship and must have intended to at once become a stockholder, to be directory merely, and not a condition precedent. Lane v. Brainerd, 30 Conn. 565.

Giving note for balance of subscription, and taking receipt stipulating that the amount of the note should, when paid, be applied thereon, is prima facie a waiver of conditions precedent. Chamberlain v. Painesville, etc., R. Co., 15 Ohio St. 225.

Among other conditions was one that the academy being organized, should be leased to D; there was a waiver by him, and the subscriber was notified of such waiver, and declined to pay only on the ground that he had not the money. He was held liable for his proportion of money expended by the trustees, though other subscribers had since obtained an act of incorporation and chosen the same trustees. Mirick v. French, 2 Gray (Mass.) 420.

A railroad corporation voted to issue six hundred additional shares, and to allow each stockholder to take one new share for every two shares already held by him, provided he should by a certain day subscribe therefor, and pay a part of the price, and give notes for the remainder. Held, that there was no implied condition, that the whole number of six hundred new shares should be issued; and that the failure of the corporation to issue that number was no ground for maintaining an action by a stockholder, to recover back money so paid by him, nor for defeating an action on notes so of the subscription, in whole,¹ or in part,² or giving an absolute promissory note,³ have been held to constitute a waiver. But mere silence will not generally have that effect.⁴

The Contract of Subscription. STOCKHOLDERS. Enforcement of the Contract.

given by him. Nutter v. Lexington, etc., R. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 85.

Mere payment of assessments to pave the route of a railroad surveyed has been held not sufficient to show acquiescence in deficient capital stock, or material amendment of charter. Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Sullivan, 57 Ga. 240.

A subscriber is not estopped to defend where the assessment is made before the requirements of the charter are met, although he exhibited himself as a stockholder. Oldtown, etc., R. Co. v. Veazie, 39 Me. 571. Requirements of charter as to number of shares to be taken cannot be waived. Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Sullivan, 57 Ga. 240. But see Central Turnpike Corp. v. Valentine, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 146.

A subscriber who votes at the organization, and for directors, is not relieved from liability on his subscription by the passage of an act reducing the amount prescribed by a former act, to be raised before corporate authority shall be granted. Bedford R. Co. v. Bowser, 48 Pa. St. 29.

There is no mutuality in an agreement by which parties subscribe under a general assurance from a corporation creditor that he will take the stock off their hands if they require. They cannot go on acting as stockholders until the concern proves disastrous and then force the agreement. Slee v. Bloom, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 456; 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 669; 10 Am. Dec. 273.

One who represents himself as a stockholder may be estopped to claim that his subscription was irregular. Cheltenham, etc., R. Co. v. Daniel, L. R., 2 Q. B. 281; Birmingham, etc., R. Co. v. Locke, L. R., 12 Q. B. 256.

A stockholder who assists in framing a by-law, in accordance with which an assessment is levied, is estopped to question the legality thereof. Willamette Freighting Co. v. Stannus, 4 Oregon 261.

But one who subscribed to the capital stock of a corporation, while the charter prescribed a minimum number of shares, of which the capital stock should consist, which number was subsequently reduced by an amendment to the charter, was held not to be estopped to set up the original condition of his subscription, though he has acted publicly as a stockholder, and held office in the corporation, and contributed towards the payment of its expenses. Oldtown, etc., R. Co. v. Veazie, 39 Me. 571.

1. Payment. — Parks v. Evansville, etc., R. Co., 23 Ind. 567; Ossipee Hosiery, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Canney, 54 N. H. 295; Littleton Mfg. Co. v. Parker, 14 N. H. 543; New Hampshire Cent. R. Co. v. Johnson, 30 N. H. 390; 64 Am. Dec. 300; Contoocook Valley R. Co. v. Barker, 32 N. H. 363.

A condition precedent in a subscription to be paid for in land is waived, if the subscriber delivers an absolute deed to the company and receives his stock therefor. Parks v. Evansville, etc., R. Co., 23 Ind. 567; citing Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Dunn, 17 Ind. 603. Contra, Garling v. Baechtel, 41 Md. 305. And payment is not a waiver if made upon the false assurance of a corporate officer that an essential condition has been performed. Ridgefield, etc., R. Co. v. Brush, 43 Conn. 86; Jewett v. Lawrenceburgh, etc., R. Co., 10 Ind. 539; Somerset, etc., R. Co. v. Cushing, 45 Me. 524; Oldtown, etc., R. Co. v. Veazie, 39 Me. 571; Grosse Isle Hotel Co. v. L'Anson, 43 N. J. L. 442; Morris Canal, etc., Co. v. Nathan, 2 Hall (N. Y.) 239; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Stewart, 41 Pa. St. 54.

2. A subscriber who pays a required installment before the books are closed, though not at time of taking the stock, as required, is concluded from objecting to payment of the residue. Klein v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 514. See also Hamilton v. Grangers' L. & H. Ins. Co., 67 Ga. 145; Inter-Mountain Pub. Co. v. Jack, 5 Mont. 568; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 478; Mississippi, etc., R. Co. v. Harris, 36 Miss. 17.

3. Keller v. Johnson, 11 Ind. 337; 71 Am. Dec. 355; O'Donald v. Evansville, etc., R. Co., 14 Ind. 259; Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Dunn, 17 Ind. 603; Slipher v. Earhart, 83 Ind. 173; Chamberlain v. Painesville, etc., R. Co., 15 Ohio St. 225.

4. Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Boestler, 15 Iowa 555; Bucksport, etc., R. Co. v. Brewer, 67 Me. 295; Hanover Junction, etc., R. Co. v. Haldeman, 82 Pa. St. 36.

III. RIGHTS, POWERS, AND PREROGATIVES—(See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 184; OFFICERS (PRIVATE CORPORATIONS), vol. 17, p. 39) —1. In General.—The powers exercised by a corporation and its members, in the performance of their ordinary functions, have been classified as legislative, electoral, and administrative.¹ There are some ordinary rights of stockholders, however, which this classification would hardly include.² There are also certain extraordinary powers, such as those relative to consolidation,³ and to the increase and reduction of stock.⁴ Direct participation in the management of corporate affairs is not a right which stockholders as such can claim:⁵ that right belongs to the ministerial officers of the corporation, and, during their terms, their plans will not be interfered with, even by the courts, merely to suit different views

A subscriber is not estopped to deny his obligation to pay in installments by reason of the fact that other subscribers were led to pay theirs by his acts. Ridgefield, etc., R. Co. v. Brush, 43 Conn. 86. But see Gibbons v. Ellis (Wis. 1893), 53 N. W. Rep. 701.

1. Com. v. Cullen, 13 Pa. St. 133; 53 Am. Dec. 450. In this case it is said: "Corporate powers are usually distinguished into legislative, electoral and administrative; in private corporations aggregate, though sometimes all the members act immediately in the administration of its affairs, usually, for the sake of convenience, the direct management is intrusted by charter to certain officers, or a board of managers, elected by the members at large, though deriving their ordinary powers from the act of incorporation. These officers exercise the legislative and administrative functions; the former, in the institution of by-laws for the general government of the company, the latter, in the superintendence and execution of its general business."

2. In Forbes v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 2 Woods (U. S.) 331. Bradley, J., for the court, observed: "A commercial, or other business corporation, is constituted for the specific purpose of suing and being sued, granting and receiving, buying and selling, and doing other business in a corporate name and capacity totally distinct from that of any or all of its members considered as individuals. A corporation is a person. Its property is not the property of its stockholders. Its rights are not their rights. They have only an indirect interest therein. The rights of a stockholder are, to meet at stockholders' meetings, to participate in the profits of the business, and to require that the corporate property and funds shall not be diverted from their original purpose. If the company become insolvent, it is the right of the stockholders to have the property applied to the payment of its debts. I do not know of any other rights, except incidental ones, subsidiary or auxiliary to these. Of course, a stockholder has ordinarily a right to a certificate for his stock, to transfer it on the company's books, and to inspect these books. For the invasion of these rights by the officers of the company, he may sue at law, or in equity, according to the nature of the case."

There are also some rights belonging to corporations without capital stock, and not properly treated here, such as the delectus personarum, or right to admit new members.

3. See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 272.

4. See STOCK, vol. 23, p. 582.

5. "The individual members of the corporation, whether they should all join or act severally, have no right or power to intermeddle with the property or concerns of the bank, or call any officer, agent or servant to account, or discharge them from any liability. Should all the stockholders join in a power of attorney to any one, he could not take possession of any personal or real estate, any security or chose in action; could not collect a debt or discharge a claim, or release damage arising from any default, simply because they are not the legal owners of the property, and damage done to such property is not an injury to them. Their rights and their powers are limited and well defined. They are members of an organized body, and exercise such powers as the of the stockholders as to corporate policy.¹ But the latter are entitled to have the corporate property applied solely to the promotion of charter purposes.² A stockholder may contract with the corporation and acquire the same rights thereby as any individual.³

2. Legislative Rights.—See BY-LAWS, vol. 2, p. 705; CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 211.

3. Electoral Rights.—The subject of qualifications for, and exercise of the right to vote at corporate meetings, is treated, in the main, elsewhere.⁴ In addition, it may be stated that the right to vote belongs to preferred stockholders.⁵ The right, as between pledgor and pledgee, is treated elsewhere.⁶ The right to vote is personal to the stockholder and cannot be taken from him by resolution or by law.⁷ Stockholders are not disqualified to vote on a question before a corporate meeting because of a pecuniary interest in the settlement thereof.⁸ Where one corporation is authorized to organization of the institution gives them." Shaw, C. J., in Smith v. Hurd, 12 Met. (Mass.) 385; 46 Am. Dec. 690. See also Humphreys v. McKissock, 140 U. S. 312.

1. State v. Bank of Louisiana, 6 La. Ann. 746; Salem Bank v. Gloucester Bank, 17 Mass. 29; 9 Am. Dec. 111; Despatch Line of Packets v. Bellamy Mfg. Co., 12 N. H. 205; 37 Am. Dec. 203; Union Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Keyser, 32 N. H. 313; 64 Am. Dec. 375; Conro v. Pt. Henry Iron Co., 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 27; McCullough v. Moss, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 567; Hoyt v. Thompson, 19 N. Y. 207; Dayton, etc., R. Co. v. Hatch, 1 Disney (Ohio) 84; Com. v. St. Mary's Church, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 508; Dana v. Bank of United States, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 223.

2. Rabe v. Dunlap (N. J. 1893), 25 Atl. Rep. 959.

3. Merrick v. Peru Coal Co., 61 Ill. 472; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Frear Stone Mfg. Co., 97 Ill. 537.

A stockholder may purchase corporate property at sheriff's sale, and in the absence of fraud he is not accountable to other stockholders, though he bids it in much below its value. Mickles v. Rochester City Bank, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 118; 42 Am. Dec. 103.

4. See CUMULATIVE VOTING, vol. 4, p. 954; OFFICERS (PRIVATE CORPORATIONS), vol. 17, p. 41.

5. St. John v. Erie R. Co., 22 Wall. (U. S.) 136.

6. See PLEDGE AND COLLATERAL SECURITY, vol. 18, p. 703.

7. Tomlin v. Farmers, etc., Bank (Kansas City Ct. of App. Mch. 1893).

8. Interest Does Not Disqualify.—In Gamble v. Queens County Water Co., 123 N. Y. 91; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 313, a stockholder had voted in favor of a resolution to purchase from himself certain property and to pay therefor in stock and bonds, and the court said: "In so doing, he committed no legal wrong. A shareholder has a legal right at a meeting of the shareholders to vote upon a measure, even though he has a personal interest therein, separate from other shareholders. In such a meeting each shareholder represents himself and his own interests solely, and he in no sense acts as a trustee or representative of others. The law of self-interest has at such time very great and proper sway. There can be little doubt, too, that at such meetings those who do vote upon their own stock vote upon it in the light solely of their own interest, or at least in what they conceive to be their own interest. Their action resulting from such votes must not be so detrimental to the interests of the corporation itself as to lead to the necessary inference that the interests of the majority of the shareholders lie wholly outside of and in opposition to the interests of the corporation and of the minority of the shareholders, and that their action is a wanton or a fraudulent destruction of the rights of such minority. In such case it may be stated that the action of the majority of the shareholders may be subjected to the scrutiny of a court of equity at the suit of the minority shareholders."

In the very similar case of Bjorn- hold stock in another, it may vote by virtue thereof,¹ and stock may be placed in the hands of a depository to be voted by him in accordance with instructions from a committee of the owners;² and general pledgees may be entitled to vote, though the charter confers the privilege only upon those pledgees who reserve it.³

4. Right to Share in Distribution of New Stock. — Those who are shareholders when an increase of the capital stock is effected, enjoy the right to subscribe to the new stock in proportion to their shares, and before subscriptions may be received from outsiders.⁴ This ard v. Goodhue County Bank (Minn. 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 48, Chief Justice Gilfillan says: "While stockholders in a corporation owe the duty of good faith to each other in the management of the affairs of the corporation, they do not stand to each other in a fiduciary relation within the rule we have stated. They are not trustees nor agents for each other in the matter of voting upon any proposition that may come before a meeting of the stockholders. In voting, each must be guided by his own judgment as to what is for the best interest of the corporation. The fact that he may have a personal interest, separate from the others or from that of the corporation in the matter to be voted upon, does not affect his right to vote. It is not to be understood that the majority stockholders may use their power of voting for the purpose of defrauding the minority."

Northwestern Transp. Co. v. Beatty, L. R., 12 App. Cas. 589, is in point. At a meeting of the directors of the company, one Beatty, a director, secured the passage of a resolution for the purchase of a steamboat by the company from himself. At a general meeting of the shareholders the action of the directors was ratified, Beatty personally casting a majority of the votes therefor. But for the votes of B. the resolution would have failed of adoption. The defeated minority appealed to the courts, the case coming finally before the privy council, and it was adjudged that the vendor was entitled to exercise his voting power as a shareholder in the general meeting to ratify the action of the directors' meeting; that his doing so could not be deemed oppressive by reason of his individually possessing a majority of the votes acquired in the manner authorized by the constitution of the company.

1. Davis v. U. S., etc., Co. (Md. 1893), 25 Atl. Rep. 982.

2. Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Hamilton County (Ohio 1892), 32 N. E. Rep. 933.

3. Com. v. Dalzell (Pa. 1893), 25 Atl. Rep. 535.

4. A leading case on this point is Gray v. Portland Bank, 3 Mass. 364; 3 Am. Dec. 156, where the court, by Sewall, J., says: "Viewing a corporation of this kind as a copartnership, a power of increasing their stock, reserved in their original agreement, is a beneficial interest vested in each partner, to which no stranger can be made a party but by the consent of each subsisting partner; and it is a power which the subsisting partners must exercise proportionally and according to their interest in the original stock. Or, considering an incorporation for a bank, as I think it may be more correctly stated, to be a trust created with certain limitations and authorities, in which the corporation is the trustee for the management of the property, and each stockholder a cestui que trust according to his interest and shares, then a limitation of the capital to be employed in the trust, that it shall not be less than one sum, and not exceeding a certain greater sum, is not a power granted to the trustee to create another interest for the benefit of other persons than those concerned in the original trust, or for their benefit in any other proportions than those determined by their subsisting shares. It is clear that a power of that kind might be given, but not by the limitation supposed, which plainly relates to one and the same stock. Whether the least or the greatest, or any intermediate sum be employed in it, the trust is the same, and for the use and benefit of the same persons. A share in the stock or trust, when only the least sum has been paid in, is a share in the power of increasing it, when the trustee determines, or rather when the cestuis que trustent agree upon employing a greater sum, right is generally absolute, and a bonus cannot be exacted as a condition of its exercise,¹ but it may be curtailed by charter provisions², and limited as to the time within which it is to be exercised;³ and it belongs only to actual stockholders,⁴ and does not apply to reissues.⁵ Where the new stock simply complements the authorized capital, it is held that old stockholders have no priority in its distribution over those who own no shares.⁶ The right to share in the increase may be enforced in equity, and an within the limits provided in the purposes of the trust." This doctrine has been affirmed in Eidman v. Bowman, 58 Ill. 444; 11 Am. Rep. 90; Peabody v. Flint, 6 Allen (Mass.) 52; Atkins v. Albree, 12 Allen (Mass.) 359; Mason v. Davol Mills, 132 Mass. 76; Jones v. Morrison, 31 Minn. 140; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 313; Humboldt Driving Park Assoc. v. Stevens, 34 Neb. 528; Miller v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 312; Jones v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 57 N. Y. 196; Taylor v. Miami Exporting Co., 5 Ohio 162; 22 Am. Dec. 785; State v. Franklin Bank, 10 Ohio 91; Bank of Montgomery v. Reese, 26 Pa. St. 143; Wilson v. Bank of Montgomery County, 29 Pa. St. 537; Reese v. Bank of Montgomery Co., 31 Pa. St. 78; 72 Am. Dec. 726; Curry v. Scott, 54 Pa. St. 270; Biddle's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 278; Dousman v. Wisconsin, etc., Min. Co., 40 Wis. 418. In the recent case of Humboldt Driving Park Assoc. v. Stevens, 34 Neb. 528, the court gave the following reason for the rule: "A number of persons relying upon the integrity of each other might be willing to become members of a corporation, while they would not become such members if the stockholders were unknown. This is particularly applicable in case of small corporations, like that of a driving park."

A vendor under an option to deliver within a year, though a quasi trustee for the purchaser, is not bound to advance his own money to preserve the purchaser's right to the shares issued by the corporation. And if the purchaser makes distinct demands, one for the stock with accrued dividends, and one for the new shares, he may recover on the former, though not entitled to the latter. Currie v. White, 45 N. Y. 822.

A grant of land by the state of Florida to a corporation having power to make contracts to accomplish corporate purposes, is not a grant to the original incorporators in the proportion in which they have subscribed, nor does it authorize an allotment of the land to them. Brown v. Florida, etc., R. Co., 19 Fla. 472; 16 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 463.

1. Cunningham's Appeal, 108 Pa. St. 546; Dawson v. North American Ins. Co., 5 Rv. & Corp. Law J. 154.

2. In Ohio Ins. Co. v. Nunnemacher, 15 Ind. 294, the charter provided that the directors "shall have power to increase the stock . . . on such terms and conditions, and in such manner as to them shall seem best." And the court held that this provision was sufficient to remove a stockholder's prior right to the increase, saying: "Now, this provision of the charter is utterly inconsistent with the proposition that the existing stockholders had the exclusive right to take the increased stock, in amounts proportionate to the quantities they then held of the original stock. How could the directors of the company, on the one hand, possess the power to increase the stock in such manner as to them seemed best, and at the same time, the stockholders, on the other hand, possess the power to compel an increase of it in but one single manner: viz., by giving it to them?"

3. Hart v. St. Charles, etc., R. Co., 30 La. Ann. 758; Sewall v. Eastern R. Co., 9 Cush. (Mass.) 5. The right must be exercised with reasonable promptness. Terry v. Eagle Lock Co., 47 Conn. 141.

4. Thus, a mere executory purchaser does not possess the right to share in the increase; Miller v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 312; nor is the holder of notes convertible into shares at a certain date entitled to share in an independent increase of stock made prior to that date. Pratt v. American Bell Telephone Co., 141 Mass. 225; 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 110; 55 Am. Rep. 465.

5. State v. Smith, 48 Vt. 266; Hartridge v. Rockwell, R. M. Charlt. (Ga.) 260.

6. Curry v. Scott, 54 Pa. St. 270, where the court says, in distinguishing action at law for damages will also lie.¹ The measure of damages is the highest market price which the stock afterwards attains, although pending the suit the corporation becomes insolvent.² But the plaintiff must prove a demand and offer to subscribe.³ The liability of the corporation is several only, and each member must sue in his own right.⁴

5. Right to Dividends.—See DIVIDENDS, vol. 5, p. 725.

6. Right to Inspect Corporate Books—See PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS, vol. 19, p. 227.

7. Right of Action.—For actions by stockholders, see CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 280; actions against officers, see OFFICERS (PRIVATE CORPORATIONS), vol. 17, p. 172; actions to compel issue of certificate, see STOCK, vol. 23, p. 582. See also ULTRA VIRES.

8. Rights Upon Dissolution.—See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 306.

IV. LIABILITY—1. Nature and Extent—a. EQUITABLE OR SUBSCRIPTION LIABILITY—(1) The "Trust-Fund Doctrine"—(a) In General.—The liability of members of a corporation is founded on statute.⁵ But in the modern stock corporation, where membership is usually acquired by entering into the contract of subscription, each member may be said to assume the obligation to pay the case from prior adjudications: "The cases upon which the plaintiff relies are inapplicable to the case now in hand. In Gray v. Portland Bank, 3 Mass. 364; 3 Am. Dec. 156, it was held that when a banking company had been incorporated with a capital not less than one sum, and not greater than another, and had commenced business with the smaller capital, and afterwards voted to increase to the largest, those who held the stock in the capital first raised had a prior right to subscribe to the new stock. The case was really decided by two judges of a court consisting of five; but assuming its ruling to be sound law, it is unlike the case we have. Here is no increase of capital, but a filling up of one both authorized and required. This is a substantial difference. So the case of Reese v. Bank of Montgomery County, 31 Pa. St. 78; 72 Am. Dec. 726, decides nothing more than that untaken stock is held by the corporation in trust for the corporators, and must be disposed of for the benefit of all; that it cannot be disposed of unequally to the corporators, and that if so disposed of, each corporator injured may have his action against the corporation. Neither of these cases decides that a stockholder has any greater right than a stranger to subscribe to original stock untaken."

1. Dousman v. Wisconsin, etc., Min. Co., 40 Wis. 418; Reading Trust Co.

v. Reading Iron Works, 137 Pa. St. 282. But see Sewall v. Eastern R.Co., 9 Cush. (Mass.) 5.

2. Reading Trust Co. v. Reading Iron Works, 137 Pa. St. 282.

3. Wilson v. Bank of Montgomery County, 29 Pa. St. 537.

4. Dousman v. Wisconsin, etc., Min. Co., 40 Wis. 418.

5. In Gray v. Coffin, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 199, Shaw, C. J., said: "To create any individual liability of members for the debt of a corporation, a body politic, created by law, and regarded as a legal being, distinct from that of all the members composing it, and capable of contracting and being contracted with as a person, is a wide departure from established rules of law, founded in consideration of public policy, and depending solely upon provisions of positive law. It is, therefore, to be construed strictly, and not extended beyond the limits to which it is plainly carried by such provisions of statute." See also 1 Lindley on Partnership, p. 13x. Shaw v. Boylan, 16 Ind. 384; Andover Free Schools v. Flint, 13 Met. (Mass.) 539; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 511; 71 Am. Dec. 559; French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 540; Norton v. Hodges, 100 Mass. 241; Oliver v. Liverpool, etc., Ins. Co., 100 Mass. 531; Myers v. Irwin, 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 371; Harger v. McCullough, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 119; Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 95; Smith v. Hucka- to the company the full amount named in his contract; ¹ i. e., he agrees to pay the corporation only, and the satisfaction of its claims, in any manner acceptable to it, discharges him from further liability.² But the American courts of equity have evolved the doctrine that by the act of subscription one becomes liable for the full amount thereof to corporate creditors as well as to the corporation; that all who deal with the latter have a right to rely upon the total amount subscribed as a security for their claims—in a word, and in the language of the courts themselves, that unpaid subscriptions are a “trust fund” for the payment of creditors.³ While in its origin this doctrine is distinctively Ameri-bee, 53 Ala. 193; Slee v. Bloom, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 456; 10 Am. Dec. 273.

1. Smith v. Huckabee, 53 Ala. 191; Jones v. Jarman, 34 Ark. 323; French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 518; Green v. Beckman, 59 Cal. 545; Ward v. Griswoldville Mfg. Co., 16 Conn. 593; Shaw v. Boylan, 16 Ind. 384; Hampson v. Weare, 4 Iowa 413; 66 Am. Dec. 116; Adams v. Wiscasset Bank, 1 Me. 361; 10 Am. Dec. 88; Vose v. Grant, 15 Mass. 505; Spear v. Grant, 16 Mass. 9; Andover Free Schools v. Flint, 13 Met. (Mass.) 539; Gray v. Coffin, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 192; Erickson v. Nesmith, 4 Allen (Mass.) 433; Essex Co. v. Lawrence Mach. Shop, 10 Allen (Mass.) 352; Norton v. Hodges, 100 Mass. 241; Salt Lake City Nat. Bank v. Hendrickson, 40 N. J. L. 52; Freeland v. McCullough, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 414; 43 Am. Dec. 685; Seymour v. Sturgess, 26 N. Y. 134; Atwood v. Rhode Island Agr. Bank, 1 R. I. 376; Woods v. Wicks, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 40; South Carolina Mfg. Co. v. Bank of South Carolina, 6 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 227; Bird v. Calvert, 22 S. Car. 292; Nimick v. Mingo Iron Works Co., 25 W. Va. 184; Walker v. Lewis, 49 Tex. 123; Dauchy v. Brown, 24 Vt. 197; Terry v. Little, 101 U. S. 216; U. S. v. Knox, 102 U. S. 422; Knower v. Haines, 31 Fed. Rep. 513. See also Reinhold v. Ludeling, 29 La. Ann. 552; Schricker v. Ridings, 65 Mo. 208; Matthewes v. Stanford, 17 Ga. 543.

2. Morawetz, Corporations, § 818; Cooper v. Frederick, 9 Ala. 739; Jones v. Jarman, 34 Ark. 323; Spear v. Grant, 16 Mass. 9; Brown v. Fisk, 23 Fed. Rep. 228; Patterson v. Lynde, 106 U. S. 519; 112 Ill. 204; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 195.

3. Evolution of the Trust-Fund Doctrine.—This doctrine appears to date from 1824, when it was formulated by Judge Story in Wood v. Dummer, 3 Mason (U. S.) 308. While he speaks there of banking corporations, the principle announced was doubtless intended by him, and certainly has become, a general one. It is stated thus: “The capital stock of banks is to be deemed a pledge or trust fund for the payment of the debts contracted by the bank. The public, as well as the legislature, have always supposed this to be a fund appropriated for such purpose. The individual stockholders are not liable for the debts of the bank in their private capacities. The charter relieves them from personal responsibility, and substitutes the capital stock in its stead. Credit is universally given to this fund by the public as the only means of repayment. During the existence of the corporation, it is the sole property of the corporation, and can be applied only according to its charter, that is, as a fund for the payment of its debts, upon the security of which it may discount and circulate notes. Why, otherwise, is any capital stock required by our charters? If the stock may, the next day after it is paid in, be withdrawn by the stockholders without payment of the debts of the corporation, why is its amount so studiously provided for, and its payment by the stockholders so diligently required? To me, this point appears so plain, upon principles of law, as well as common sense, that I cannot be brought into any doubt that the charters of our banks make the capital stock a trust fund for the payment of all the debts of the corporation. The billholders and other creditors have the first claim upon it, and the stockholders have no rights until all the other creditors are satisfied.”

In Sawyer v. Hoag, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 610, it was said: “The debt which the appellant owed for his stock was a trust fund devoted to the payment of all the creditors of the company. As soon as can, and does not obtain in England,¹ yet by statute, a limited

the company became insolvent, and this fact became known to the appellant, the right of set-off for an ordinary debt to its full amount ceased. It became a fund belonging equally in equity to all the creditors, and could not be appropriated by the debtor to the exclusive payment of his own claim." And in Handley v. Stutz, 139 U. S. 427, Brown, J., observed: "Ever since the case of Sawyer v. Hoag, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 731, it has been the settled doctrine of this court that the capital stock of an insolvent corporation is a trust fund for the payment of its debts; that the law implies a promise by the original subscribers of stock who did not pay for it in money or other property to pay for the same when called upon by creditors; and that a contract between themselves and the corporation, that the stock shall be treated as fully paid and non-assessable, or otherwise limiting their liability therefor, is void as against creditors. The decisions of this court upon this subject have been frequent and uniform, and no relaxation of the general principle has been admitted. Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45; Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 56; Webster v. Upton, 91 U. S. 65; Chubb v. Upton, 95 U. S. 665; Pullman v. Upton, 96 U. S. 328; Morgan County v. Allen, 103 U. S. 498; Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 318; Graham v. La Crosse, etc., R. Co., 102 U. S. 148; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 416; Richardson v. Green, 130 U. S. 104."

The doctrine has been confirmed by a long list of American authorities. In addition to those cited above, see Winans v. McKean R., etc., Co., 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 216; Union Nat. Bank v. Douglass, 1 McCrary (U. S.) 86; Holmes v. Sherwood, 3 McCrary (U. S.) 405; 16 Fed. Rep. 725; Marsh v. Burroughs, 1 Woods (U. S.) 463; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Howard, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 392; Scammon v. Kimball, 92 U. S. 362; Hatch v. Dana, 101 U. S. 205; Allen v. Montgomery R. Co., 11 Ala. 437; Goodwin v. McGehee, 15 Ala. 232; Smith v. Huckabee, 53 Ala. 191; Glenn v. Semple, 80 Ala. 159; 60 Am. Rep. 92; Jones v. Arkansas, etc., Co., 38 Ark. 17; Baines v. Babcock, 95 Cal. 981; Crandall v. Lincoln, 52 Conn. 73; 52 Am. Rep. 560; Hightower v. Thornton, 8 Ga. 486; Coffin v. Peterson, 104 Ill. 26; Coffin v. Ransdell, 110 Ind. 417; 16 Am. & Eng.

Corp. Cas. 432; Osgood v. King, 42 Iowa 478; Robertson v. Conrey, 5 La. Ann. 297; Rider v. Morrison, 54 Md. 429; Appleton v. Turnbull, 84 Me. 72; Farnsworth v. Robbins, 36 Minn. 369; Payne v. Bullard, 23 Miss. 88; 55 Am. Dec. 74; Haskell v. Sells, 14 Mo. App. 91; National Trust Co. v. Miller, 33 N. J. Eq. 155; Wetherbee v. Baker, 35 N. J. Eq. 501; Slee v. Bloom, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 456; 10 Am. Dec. 273; Briggs v. Penniman, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 387; 18 Am. Dec. 454; Mann v. Pentz, 3 N. Y. 415; Dayton v. Borst, 31 N. Y. 435; Bartlett v. Drew, 57 N. Y. 587; Nathan v. Whitlock, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 215; Hastings v. Drew, 76 N. Y. 9; Gilmore v. Bank of Cincinnati, 8 Ohio 62; Bank of Virginia v. Adams, 1 Pars. Sel. Cas. (Pa.) 534; Lane's Appeal, 105 Pa. St. 49; 51 Am. Rep. 166; Ohio L. Ins., etc., Co. v. Merchants' Ins. & T. Co., 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 1; 53 Am. Dec. 742; Adler v. Milwaukee Brick Mfg. Co., 13 Wis. 60; Fowler v. Robinson, 31 Me. 189; Ward v. Griswoldville Mfg. Co., 16 Conn. 598. See also Melvin v. Lamar Ins. Co., 80 Ill. 446; 22 Am. Rep. 199; Van Cott v. Van Brunt, 2 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 283; State Sav. Assoc. v. Kellogg, 63 Mo. 540; In re Bachman, 12 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 223; Tuckerman v. Brown, 33 N. Y. 297; 88 Am. Dec. 386; Ogilvie v. Knox Ins. Co., 22 How. (U. S.) 380; Osgood v. Laytin, 3 Keyes (N. Y.) 521; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Frear Stone Mfg. Co., 97 Ill. 537; Bassett v. St. Albans Hotel Co., 47 Vt. 313; Walker v. Lewis, 49 Tex. 123; Matthews v. Albert, 24 Md. 527; Norris v. Johnson, 34 Md. 485; Norris v. Wrenschall, 34 Md. 492; Booth v. Campbell, 37 Md. 522; Emmert v. Smith, 40 Md. 123; Cochran v. Ocean Dry Dock Co., 30 La. Ann. 1365; Ryan v. Leavenworth, etc., R. Co., 21 Kan. 365.

Where the corporation is insolvent and has been placed in the hands of a receiver, a statute authorizing a judgment creditor to have execution against the stockholders does not apply. Showalter v. Laredo Imp. Co., 83 Tex. 162.

In the absence of fraud the stockholders cannot be held liable upon original shares not disposed of by the company, and to which they did not subscribe. Sweeney v. Talcott (Iowa, 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 106.

1. "I have not found a similar statement of doctrine in any English books application of similar principles is there allowed.¹ The more recent applications of the doctrine have been subjected to considerable criticism in this country.²

(b) Applications of the Doctrine—(1) STOCK ISSUED FOR AN OVERVALUED CONSIDERATION.—It is elsewhere stated that payment for stock may be made in property or services.³ But suppose that these are accepted at an overvaluation; under the trust fund doctrine, can corporate creditors compel such stockholders to make good the difference between the actual and accepted value of their payments? The decisions are not harmonious on this point, and may be divided into three groups: First, those which hold that in the absence of an affirmative showing of fraud aliunde, mere overvaluation will not render the stockholder liable for the difference;⁴ Second, those holding that overvaluation itself, especially of reports." Thompson, Liability of Stockholders, § 10, n. 2. See also Beach Priv. Corp., § 123.

1. "Now, what are the rights of creditors? To make every present and past member of the company liable to the debts and liabilities of the company, and the expenses of winding up subject to limitations in the 38th section of the Companies Act, 1862. The rights of the creditors are only against members, or persons who have been members, within twelve months; and who are members depends on the memorandum, the articles and the general law." Cotton, L. J., in Re Dronfield Silkstone Coal Co., 17 Ch. Div. 93. And in the same case James, L. J., observed: "I am of opinion that the creditor qua creditor has no right except according to the statute, and within the limits prescribed by the statute. He has a right to proceed against every present member, and against every past member who was a member within twelve months before the commencement of the winding up. That is the extent of his right. Creditors know, or have the means of knowing, who are the shareholders in a company, and the limit of twelve months was fixed because a creditor may be presumed to go on trusting a company on the faith of the persons who were shareholders when his debt was contracted, until he has means of knowing that a change of shareholders has taken place."

2. The case of Handley v. Stutz, 139 U. S. 417, affords the text for a criticism of the doctrine in an article by R. C. McMurtrie, Esq., in 25 Am. Law. Rev. 749. See also Hospes v. North Western, etc., Mfg. Co. (Minn. 1892). 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 206, where the court speaks of the phrase as "misleading, if not inaccurate."

3. See supra, this title, Consideration and Payment.

4. Cases Holding that There Is No Liability for Mere Overvaluation.—Schenck v. Andrews, 57 N. Y. 147; Lake Superior Iron Co. v. Drexel, 90 N. Y. 94.

Van Cott v. Van Brunt, 82 N. Y. 535, was an action by a receiver of a railroad company, against V, the president, and a director thereof, who had entered into a contract in behalf of the company, with one C, to build and equip a portion of the road, and to receive therefor a certain amount of stock and bonds. C immediately assigned the contract to V, who performed it at a cost to himself of less than the par value of the stock and bonds received, but more than their actual value. The court, without deciding the question whether, had the defendant realized a profit beyond the amount actually expended in construction, all benefits would inure to the company, held as follows: "In view of the facts presented, no sufficient reason appears why the stock held by V and not subscribed for by him should not be treated and regarded as full paid-up stock. It was evidently intended by the parties that it should, and such was manifestly the agreement by which the stock was transferred in payment of the building of a portion of the road. If the rule be once established that no agreement can be made to build railroads by the transfer of stocks or bonds to the contractor, without rendering him liable for the par value thereof, it would seriously interfere with the construction of enterprises of this description, and would prevent the building of many railroads. We are unable to discover any reason why stock and bonds may not be transferred to a contractor to pay for the building of a railroad, where the contract is made in good faith and with no fraudulent intent, although such stock or bonds should prove to be worth even more than the amount allowed for the same."

In Coit v. North Carolina Gold Amalgamating Co., 119 U. S. 343; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 610, the plaintiff, a judgment creditor of an insolvent corporation, filed a bill in equity against the stockholders, who had paid for their shares in mining property, accepted at their own estimates. The court, by Field, J., said: "The plaintiff contends, and it is the principal basis of his suit, that the valuation thus put upon the property was illegally and fraudulently made at an amount far above its actual value, averring that the property consisted only of a machine for crushing ores, the right to use a patent called the Crosby process, and the charter of the proposed organization; that the articles had no market or actual value, and therefore, that the capital stock issued thereon was not fully paid, or paid to any substantial extent, and that the holders thereof were still liable to the corporation and its creditors for the unpaid subscription."

. . . But the allegation of intentional and fraudulent undervaluation of the property is not sustained by the evidence. The patent and the machinery had been used by the corporators in their business, which was continued under the charter. They were immediately serviceable, and, therefore, had to the company a present value. The corporators may have placed too high an estimate upon the property, but the court below finds that its valuation was honestly and fairly made."

Phelan v. Hazard, 5 Dill. (U. S.) 45, is a case often cited under this group, but the precise question now under discussion was not there involved. The following statement obiter and the cases cited in support of it, will probably account for the frequent citation of Phelan v. Hazard, 5 Dill. (U. S.) 45, in this connection: "The cases are numerous in which such transactions as that which was entered into in this instance between the owners of the mining property and the corporation which they formed have come before the courts, and, in the absence of fraud, have been sustained. Pell's Case, L. R., 5 Ch. 11; In re Baglan Hall Colliery Co., L. R., 5 Ch. 346; Maynard's Case, L. R., 9 Ch. 60; Schroeder's Case, L. R., 11 Eq. 131; Cleland's Case, L. R., 14 Eq. 387; Sichell's Case, L. R., 3 Ch. 119; Jones' Case, L. R., 6 Ch. 48; Forbes & Judd's Case, L. R., 5 Ch. 270; Pritchard's Case, L. R., 8 Ch. 956; Ferrao's Case, L. R., 9 Ch. 355; Bush's Case, L. R., 9 Ch. 554; Dent's Case, L. R., 8 Ch. 768; Carling's Case, 1 Ch. Div. 115; Savage v. Ball, 17 N. J. Eq. 142; Smith v. North American Min. Co., 1 Nev. 423; Goodrich v. Reynolds, 31 Ill. 490; 83 Am. Dec. 240; Spence v. Iowa Valley, etc., Co., 36 Iowa 411."

But in speaking of the practice of citing English cases on this question, Walker, J., in Elyton Land Co. v. Birmingham, etc., Co., 92 Ala. 407; 35 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 597, says: "The absence of the recognition of English cases of this trust feature of a subscription to stock renders them unsafe guides in American courts when dealing with questions relating to the liability of stockholders in reference to the debts of the corporation."

In Du Pont v. Tilden, 42 Fed. Rep. 87; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 129, it was held that where a corporation is authorized by its charter to purchase real estate and pay for the same in stock, the bona fide purchaser of stock which has been issued in payment of land to an amount greatly in excess of the value of the land, is not liable to creditors of the corporation as for unpaid stock, when there was no fraud in the issue of the stock and the corporation has taken no steps to rescind the transaction.

And in Bickley v. Schlag, 46 N. J. Eq. 533, Beasley, C. J., said: "In view of the proof in the case it was not and could not be disputed that the stock in question, as between these stockholders and the corporation, had been paid for in full; for they had transferred to the company, in satisfaction for it, certain steamboats and other property, each share so purchased being marked with the words, 'issued for property purchased.' Consequently, so long as this contract of sale subsisted, an indisputable title to the stock existed in the stockholders, and it was also thereby conclusively established that they were in no wise indebted to the company by reason of their purchase. The inquiry, therefore, in the court below should have been whether the agreement in if gross, constitutes, or at least raises a strong presumption of fraud;¹ Third, those which apparently ignore the element of actual and technical fraud, and hold that purchasers of stock should be credited only with the true value of that which they give in payment, and that creditors may look to them for the difference between such value and that of the stock as issued,² except where such creditors are also stockholders and have notice question was fraudulent or not; for, if the transaction was an honest one, the difference in value between the property constituting the consideration of the sale and the stock had no legal significance. The charter of this company authorizes the corporation to exchange its capital stock for property, and, under that condition of things, a court of equity cannot set aside a transaction of that kind simply on the ground that the bargain on the side of the corporation is a disadvantageous one. In such affairs the company and the purchaser stand on the common footing of buyer and seller." See also, as further illustrating this doctrine, Davis v. Montgomery Furnace, etc., Co. (Ala. 1890), 8 So. Rep. 496; Peck v. Coalfield Coal Co., 11 Ill. App. 88; Coffin v. Ransdell, 110 Ind. 417; 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 432; Medler v. Albuquerque Hotel, etc., Co. (N. Mex. 1892), 28 Pac. Rep. 551; Whitehill v. Jacobs, 75 Wis. 476; Bank of Fort Madison v. Alden, 129 U. S. 372; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71; Holly Mfg. Co. v. New Chester Water Co., 48 Fed. Rep. 879. Compare Brant v. Ehlen, 59 Md. 1; Carr v. LeFevre, 27 Pa. St. 413.

1. Overvaluation as a Badge of Fraud.—Douglass v. Ireland, 73 N. Y. 104; Boynton v. Hatch, 47 N. Y. 232.

In Boynton v. Andrews, 63 N. Y. 96, it was said: "It cannot be questioned that where property, the value of which is well known and understood, or capable of being easily ascertained, is taken at a most exorbitant estimate, far beyond any intrinsic and real value, it raises a strong presumption that the valuation is not in good faith and was made for a fraudulent purpose. This presumption will be conclusive unless it is rebutted by evidence which fully explains the apparent bad faith. In the case at bar the whole amount of capital for which the stock was issued was $100,000. It is proved by the trustee from whom it was purchased that it was worth not to exceed $50,000, and it is thus established beyond any controversy that it was taken for double its real value. The articles taken were not of a class where the value was not apparent or depended upon circumstances, but such as any one familiar with that species of property could readily ascertain and estimate. In fact the trustee from whom they were purchased knew all about them, as he had been the owner of the property, and the valuation he placed upon them is a conceded fact. There could be no mistake or error of judgment in fixing a value upon this particular property by its owner, and under the circumstances it is manifest that there was a plain case of gross overvaluation with full knowledge of the facts. Such a transaction was fraudulent in law, on its face." See also Blake v. Griswold, 103 N. Y. 429; Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Cotton Exch., etc., Co., 46 Fed. Rep. 22.

2. Stockholders Credited Only With Actual Value.—Joseph v. Davis (Ala. 1892), 10 So. Rep. 830; Fitzpatrick v. Dispatch Publishing Co., 83 Ala. 604; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 423; Williams v. Evans, 87 Ala. 725; Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Thompson, 103 Ill. 187; 7 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 101; Osgood v. King, 42 Iowa 478; Jackson v. Traer, 64 Iowa 469; 52 Am. Rep. 449; Chisholm v. Forney, 65 Iowa 333; Halderman v. Ainslie, 82 Ky. 395; Libby v. Tobey, 82 Me. 397; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 526; McAvity v. Lincoln Pulp, etc., Co., 82 Me. 504; Wetherbee v. Baker, 35 N. J. Eq. 501; Gamble v. Queens County Water Co., 123 N. Y. 91; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 313; Clayton v. Ore Knob Copper Co. (N. Car. 1891), 14 S. E. Rep. 36; National Tube Works Co. v. Gilfillan, 124 N. Y. 302; Bailey v. Pittsburgh, etc., Coal Co., 69 Pa. St. 334; Gogebic Investment Co. v. Iron Chief Min. Co., 78 Wis. 427; 23 Am. St. Rep. 417; Thorold v. Neelon, 18 Ont. App. Rep. 658; Memphis, etc., Co. v. Dow, 120 U. S. 287.

In Shickle v. Watts, 94 Mo. 410, the of the agreement to issue the shares for less than face value.¹ Many decisions of the third group were rendered under statutes which prohibit the issue of stock for property, except at its par value. There is a substantial agreement in all the cases that where fraud is actually shown, the stockholders are liable.² In estimating the value of the property or services given, a fair profit should be allowed to the purchaser.³

(2) DISCOUNTING SHARES AND RELEASING SUBSCRIBERS.—Under the trust fund doctrine, creditors may enforce the payment of subscriptions at par, even though the corporation has agreed to ac-court said: "Where an agreement is entered into between a contractor and a corporation, whereby the former is to perform work for or furnish material to, the latter, and take unpaid stock in part or in full payment, such contractor, whether for labor or material, can only charge therefor the reasonable market value for such labor or material thus given in exchange, and all agreements by the corporation to pay more than such reasonable compensation will be disregarded and held for naught by the courts, where the rights of creditors intervene; and this is the case even though no fraud be proven."

A strong authority under this group is Elyton Land Co. v. Birmingham Warehouse, etc., Co., 92 Ala. 407; 35 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 597. It will be found to contain almost a complete resumé of the cases pro and con on the question raised in the text, and, in summing up its conclusions, the court says: "Our examination satisfies us that the weight of American authority does not support the statement made by Mr. Cook, in section 47 of his work on Stocks and Stockholders, to the effect that the attempts which have been made in cases where stock was issued for property taken at an overvaluation, to hold the party receiving such stock liable for its full par value, less the actual value of the property received from him, have been unsuccessful; and that, if there has been an overvaluation, which is shown to have been fraudulent, then the contract is to be treated like other fraudulent contracts, and is to be adopted in toto or rescinded in toto and set aside. We have found no authority at all asserting the exemption of the stockholder from such liability where it appeared that the stock subscription was governed by a statutory regulation at all similar to section 1805 of the Code of 1876, or section 1662 of the Code of 1886. On the other hand, the New York, New Jersey, Maryland, and Pennsylvania decisions which have been cited show that the courts in those states, in giving effect to statutory requirements, certainly no more stringent than ours, as to the mode in which stock subscriptions shall be made payable, do not allow attempted payments in property worth greatly less than the amount of the stock issued therefor to foreclose the just demand of corporate creditors to require that the stock subscription be made good in money, or in money's worth, as contemplated by the statutes. Those courts recognize in such provisions safeguards intended for the protection of persons dealing with corporations as well as for the corporations themselves and the persons associated together therein."

But shares representing the difference between the face value of a certain issue and the actual consideration, are not "fictitious" within the meaning of a constitutional inhibition. Mathis v. Pridham (Tex. App. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 1015.

1. Mathis v. Pridham (Tex. App. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 1015.

2. Crawford v. Rohrer, 59 Md. 599; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 81; and see generally cases cited in foot notes immediately preceding this.

3. In Gamble v. Queens County Water Co., 123 N. Y. 91; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 313, Peckham, J., for the court, observed: "When viewing the completed work, and endeavoring to place some value upon it, we are not to be confined to the mere cost of materials, and the value of the labor contained in and expended upon it. A fair profit to the contractor is to be included, and the inquiry should be what, under all the circumstances, is the fair value of the property to the company concept a less amount,¹ or even where its officers have falsely represidering its proposed use by it, and the general purpose for which the company is organized. This seems to be the rule derived from the cases of Schenck v. Andrews, 57 N. Y. 142; Boynnton v. Andrews, 63 N. Y. 94; Lake Superior Iron Co. v. Drexel, 90 N. Y. 87, in which suits were brought by creditors of the corporations." Reversing, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 166.

1. Sagorv v. Dubois, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 466, is the leading authority on this point. In this case the directors of the New York Banking Company, on the same day upon which it suspended business, passed a resolution that no more installments beyond the fifty per cent. then paid, should be required of subscribers. But the court of chancery held that the receiver of the corporation could proceed in equity, irrespective of the resolution, to compel the payment of the balance due on shares. While the trust-fund doctrine is not referred to in words, the opinion by the assistant vice-chancellor shows a substantial recognition thereof. See also in support of the doctrine, Northrop v. Bushnell, 38 Conn. 498; Hickling v. Wilson, 104 Ill. 54; Great Western Tel. Co. v. Gray, 122 Ill. 630; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 26; Fisher v. Seligman, 7 Mo. App. 383; Eyerman v. Krickhaus, 7 Mo. App. 455; Strainka v. Allen, 7 Mo. App. 434; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Frear Stone Mfg. Co., 97 Ill. 537; 37 Am. Rep. 135; Mann v. Cooke, 20 Conn. 178; Pickering v. Templeton, 2 Mo. App. 424; Christensen v. Eno, 106 N. Y. 97; Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 56; Webster v. Upton, 91 U. S. 65; Chubb v. Upton, 95 U. S. 666; Pullman v. Upton, 96 U. S. 328; Upton v. Hansbrough, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 417; Upton v. Burnham, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 431; In re Glen Iron Works, 17 Fed. Rep. 324; Myers v. Seeley, 10 Nat. Bank. Reg. 411. Also Brant v. Ehlen, 59 Md. 1; Crawford v. Rohrer, 59 Md. 599; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 81; Kehlor v. Lademann, 11 Mo. App. 550; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Stewart, 41 Pa. St. 54; Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143; Hatch v. Dana, 101 U. S. 205; Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45; Sturges v. Stetson, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 246. See also the following periodicals: 15 Am. Law Reg. N. S. 638, note by Henry Budd, Jr.; 19 Cent. Law Jour. 465, "Liability of Holders of Nominally Paid-up Stock," article by B. F. Rex; 2 Leg. Int. 189, "Personal Liability for Subscriptions."

In Hawley v. Upton, 102 U. S. 316, Waite, C. J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "It cannot be doubted that one who has become bound as a subscriber to the capital stock of a corporation, must pay his subscription if required to meet the obligations of the corporation. A certificate in his favor for the stock is not necessary to make him a subscriber. All that need be done, so far as creditors are concerned, is that the subscriber shall have bound himself to become a contributor to the fund which the stock of the corporation represents. If such an obligation exists, the courts can enforce the contribution when required. After having bound himself to contribute, he cannot be discharged from the obligation he has assumed until the contribution has actually been made, or the obligation in some lawful way extinguished."

In Flinn v. Bagley, 7 Fed. Rep. 785, the defendants subscribed and agreed to pay certain sums of money towards the increased capital stock of a corporation, with the understanding that they were to receive stock therefor, at sixty-six and two-thirds cents on the dollar. This arrangement was carried out, and certificates for the stock delivered to them, and it was held that the assignee in bankruptcy of the corporation might still collect the remaining one-third of the par value of the stock for the benefit of its creditors. And the court observes: "This case is certainly a hard one upon the defendants. Finding the company embarrassed for the want of funds, they agreed to subscribe a certain sum and take in payment stock at what it was really worth. It is clear that no fraud was intended, and that they must be held liable upon an implied agreement to pay more for the benefit of the creditors than they had expressly agreed to pay for the benefit of the corporation. It is a hardship, however, from which I see no way of relieving them consistent with the views of the supreme court in Hawley v. Upton, and a decree must therefore be entered for the complainant."

For statutory and constitutional provisions as to issue of fictitiously paid up stock, see Stock, vol. 23, p. 582.

sented the shares as paid up.¹ Nor can the company release a subscriber from liability to creditors by accepting a surrender and effecting a cancellation of his stock.² But a creditor who has become such, long after the surrender of shares by a subscriber, cannot enforce payment against the latter,³ and one who continues to deal with a corporation, knowing that it has limited the liability of its subscribers to make full payment for stock, waives the right to compel such payment.⁴ It is said moreover, that the general rule above stated, will not be applied so as to work a hardship on creditors whom it was intended to protect,⁵ and most

1. Briggs v. Cornwell, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 436.

2. Surrender and Cancellation as Bearing on Release of Liability.—Farnsworth v. Robbins, 36 Minn. 369; Chouteau Ins. Co. v. Floyd, 74 Mo. 286; Gill v. Balis, 72 Mo. 424; Burke v. Smith, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 390; New Albany v. Burke, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 96; Zirkel v. Joliet Opera House Co., 79 Ill. 334. See also Vick v. LaRochelle, 57 Miss. 602; Miller's Appeal, 1 Penny (Pa.) 120; and, generally, cases cited in preceding notes.

3. Erskine v. Peck, 83 Mo. 465, affirming 13 Mo. App. 280. In this case the plaintiff's claim against the corporation arose about a year after the surrender in question, and his judgment was three years later than the same event. See also Hollingshead v. Woodward, 35 Hun (N. Y.) 410; Johnson v. Lullman, 15 Mo. App. 55; Sanderson v. Aetna Ins. Co. (Ohio, 1879). 8 Cent. L. J. 266.

4. In the opinion of Champlin, J., in Young v. Erie Iron Co., 65 Mich. 127; 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 626, this exception to the general principle is thus stated: "Although it is a well-established doctrine founded upon just principles, that the capital stock of a corporation, and especially its unpaid capital in the hands of subscribers or purchasers from the corporation, is a trust fund for the satisfaction of the debts of an insolvent corporation, yet it is equally well settled that persons dealing with corporations may consent to existing arrangements, and by contracting with them, with notice or knowledge of arrangements which limit the liability of subscribers to pay the full amount of the capital stock, may expressly or impliedly waive the right to compel the stockholders to contribute the full amount of their subscriptions in discharge of corporate obligations. Robinson v. Bidwell, 22 Cal. 379; Coit

v. North Carolina, etc., Amalgamating Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 12; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 610; Mor. Corp., § 829. There is no allegation in the bill that the creditors represented by complainant did not know and fully understand that the capital stock was paid up by property transferred to the corporation, or that the stock issued or sold by it was issued as full paid stock, and not liable to further assessment. On the contrary, the complainant's assignors held shares of a stock, representing upon the face of it to be full paid, as collateral security for money loaned to the corporation. An exception to the principle that the capital of a corporation is a trust fund to which creditors can resort for payment is recognized in some states in favor of mining corporations, based upon the universal knowledge of the custom of such corporations to have a very large nominal capital, and to issue such capital to its full amount as paid up, but to dispose of it at what it will bring in the market. The capital of such corporations, from the nature of the venture, is of an extremely fluctuating and uncertain character, and is invested in property acquired for the sole purpose of being exhausted and distributed among shareholders in the form of dividends, and not kept as a permanent fund with which to carry on business. In re South Mountain Consolidated Min. Co., 7 Sawy. (U. S.) 30; 5 Fed. Rep. 403; 8 Sawy. (U. S.) 366; 14 Fed. Rep. 347."

5. Clark v. Bever, 31 Fed. Rep. 676; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 165. In this case a railway corporation was insolvent and its stock worthless. The corporation was indebted to one G, and in good faith transferred to him in payment of the debt, the unissued stock at twenty cents on the dollar. A statute of the state prohibited the transfer of corporate stock with attempted ex-of the cases hold that a creditor who accepts depreciated stock to an amount in excess of his claim is not liable to other creditors for the par value.¹ As between corporation and subscriber, an agreement to accept less than the par value of stock, is valid.² Where shares are issued gratuitously, decisions are not harmonious as to whether the recipients may be held liable by creditors.³ At least they cannot be held by those who became creditors before the issue of such shares.⁴

(3) EFFECT OF INCREASING STOCK.—Where an authorized increase of stock is effected, subscribers thereto cannot defeat the claims of creditors by mere technical objections to the regularity of the increase.⁵ Thus, subscribers to the increased stock have been held liable for the par value of their shares to creditors, though notice of the meeting to effect the increase did not conform to the statute,⁶ though the full number of days did not elapse between passing and confirming a resolution for increase,⁷ and even where the full amount of the increase was not subemptions from full payment thereof. It was held that the statute was enacted for the protection of creditors, and where a strict construction thereof would work a positive injury to the creditors, a liberal construction, in accordance with its spirit, should be given. G was accordingly held not liable to the creditors for the remaining eighty cents.

1. Clark v. Bever, 31 Fed. Rep. 676; 139 U. S. 96; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 165; Kehlor v. Lademann, 11 Mo. App. 550. But there must be somewhere near a fair equivalent. Fogg v. Blair, 139 U. S. 118. Contra, Jackson v. Traer, 64 Iowa 469; 52 Am. Rep. 449.

2. Harrison v. Arkansas Valley R. Co., 4 McCrary (U. S.) 264; Christensen v. Eno, 106 N. Y. 99.

3. Gratuitous Shares.—In Christensen v. Eno, 106 N. Y. 97, it was held that one to whom unissued shares of corporate stock have been transferred gratuitously by the corporation, does not become a debtor to the corporation or make himself liable to the creditors thereof, as on a subscription. See also Seymour v. Sturges, 26 N. Y. 134; In re Western Canada Oil Co., L. R., 1 Ch. Div. 115; Waterhouse v. Jamieson, L. R., 2 H. L. Sc. 29.

But in Hickling v. Wilson, 104 Ill. 54, it was held that subscribers who paid nothing for their stock, and some of which had been sold, were liable to creditors. See also Preston v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 36 Fed. Rep. 54.

4. Hospes v. Northwestern, etc., Mfg.

Co. (Minn. 1892), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 206.

5. Increase — Technical Objections Unavailable as Against Creditors.—In Chubb v. Upton, 95 U. S. 668, Hunt, J., for the court, said: "It is idle to deny that this was the case of an organization which claimed to have taken, and apparently supposed that it had taken, the measures required by law to complete its increase of capital. It acted as such, and the defendant, by receiving his certificate of stock, entered into engagements with it as such. If it be conceded that its increased stock was but de facto, and that it could have been annulled or suppressed by the action of the attorney-general as acting under an irregular organization, the defendant derives no aid from the admission. The cases cited are clear to the point that he cannot make the objection, but must perform the engagements he has made." See also Kansas City Hotel Co. v. Hunt, 57 Mo. 126.

6. Veeder v. Mudgett, 95 N. Y. 295; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 485; Upton v. Jackson, 1 Fltpp. (U. S.) 413; Kansas City Hotel Co. v. Hunt, 57 Mo. 126; Sewell's Case, L. R., 3 Ch. 131.

But a required notice cannot be entirely omitted, even by unanimous consent of the stockholders. State v. McGrath, 86 Mo. 239; and even irregularity in the notice has been held fatal. In re Wheeler, 2 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 361.

7. In re Miller's Dale, etc., Co., 31 Ch. Div. 211. See also Kansas City

scribed for.¹ Such objections may be raised by the state alone, through its attorney-general;² a subscriber waives them by accepting the results of the increase.³ So, by the trust-fund principle, subscribers who accept increased shares without paying the par value may be compelled to do so by creditors, though their certificates contain recitals that the stock is paid up,⁴ and though the shares are issued as a bonus.⁵ But where the increase consists of spurious or overissued stock, its holders are not liable to creditors;⁶ nor can a creditor who was cognizant of the transac-

Hotel Co. v. Harris, 51 Mo. 464; McCarthy v. Lavasche, 89 Ill. 270; 31 Am. Rep. 83.

1. Delano v. Butler, 118 U. S. 634; Clarke v. Thomas, 34 Ohio St. 46; Nutter v. Lexington, etc., R. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 85; Belton Compress Co. v. Saunders, 70 Tex. 699. But see Eaton v. Pacific Nat. Bank, 144 Mass. 260; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 293.

2. Pullman v. Upton, 96 U. S. 329. See also Byers v. Rollins, 13 Colo. 22; In re Reciprocity Bank, 22 N. Y. 9; Peckham v. Smith, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 436.

3. Poole v. West Point, etc., Assoc., 30 Fed. Rep. 513; Pullman v. Upton, 96 U. S. 329; Chubb v. Upton, 95 U. S. 665; Veeder v. Mudgett, 95 N. Y. 295; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 485; Sheldon Hat, etc., Co. v. Eickemyer Hat, etc., Co., 90 N. Y. 607; Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 159; Aspinwall v. Sacchi, 57 N. Y. 331; Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Cary, 26 N. Y. 75; Eaton v. Aspinwall, 19 N. Y. 119.

4. Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 47; Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 64; Webster v. Upton, 91 U. S. 67; Chubb v. Upton, 95 U. S. 666; Hawley v. Upton, 102 U. S. 316; Stutz v. Handley, 41 Fed. Rep. 544. In this case Jackson, J., delivering the opinion of the court, said: "The untrue statement in the certificate that the shares are paid up cannot discharge the shareholder, who has not paid for the same, from liability thereon. It has no greater effect than the unauthorized delivery of an untrue receipt to a person indebted to the corporation. The debtor of the company, obtaining such a receipt without actual payment, would certainly not be discharged, even as to the corporation. Neither can the original holder of unpaid shares avoid liability therefor, by reason of the false recital in the certificate issued to him that the stock was fully paid up."

The fact that the word "non-assessable" is stamped upon the certificate will not relieve a subscriber from liability to pay therefor. Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 47.

5. Stutz v. Handley, 41 Fed. Rep. 531; Morrow v. Nashville Iron, etc., Co., 87 Tenn. 262.

6. Holders of Spurious Stock Are Not Liable.—In Scovill v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 149, Woods, J., delivering the opinion of the court, said: "In this case the attempt to increase the stock of the company beyond the limits fixed by its charter was ultra vires. The increased stock itself was, therefore, void. It conferred on the holders no rights and subjected them to no liabilities. If the stock of the first and second issues had been held by one set of holders, and the stock of the third and fourth by another, in a contest between them, the latter would have been excluded from all participation in the management of the company or in its profits. To hold that the holders of stock issued ultra vires have the same rights as the holders of authorized stock, is to ignore and override the limitations and prohibitions of the charter. We think it follows that if the holder of such spurious stock has none of the rights, he can be subjected to none of the liabilities of a holder of genuine stock. His contract to pay for spurious stock is without consideration and cannot be enforced. . . . We think that he is not estopped to set up the nullity of the unauthorized stock. It is true that it has been held by this court that a stockholder cannot set up informalities in the issue of stock which the corporation had the power to create. Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45; Chubb v. Upton, 95 U. S. 665; Pullman v. Upton, 96 U. S. 328. But those were cases where the increase of the stock was authorized by law. The increase itself was legal and within the power of the corporation, but there were simply informalities in the steps taken to effect the increase. These, it was held, were cured by the acts and acquiescence of the defendant. But

tion and acquiesced in it, hold a stockholder individually liable on account of the increase.¹

(4) EFFECT OF REDUCTION.—The general principles just stated as governing the increase of stock, and its effect on liability, apply also to reductions.² Those who were corporate creditors at the time may ignore the reduction and hold the subscribers liable for the value of the shares as they originally stood;³ but those who subsequently give credit are confined to the value of the reduced stock for their security.⁴

(5) THE RULE IN ENGLAND.—In cases where the trust fund doctrine would be applied in the United States, a less stringent rule prevails in England. There, aside from statutory provisions, creditors have, in general, no greater rights against subscribers than the company itself,⁵ and release of subscriptions is largely discretionary with the directors.⁶

here, the corporation being absolutely without power to increase its stock above a certain limit, the acquiescence of the stockholder can neither give it validity nor bind him or the corporation." See also Clark v. Turner, 73 Ga. 1; Page v. Austin, 10 Can. Sup. Ct. 132.

1. Coit v. North Carolina, etc., Amalgamating Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 12; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 610.

2. See generally supra, this title, Effect of Increasing Stock.

3. Reduction Cannot Affect Existing Creditors.—In re State Ins. Co., 11 Biss. (U. S.) 301; 14 Fed. Rep. 28; Dane v. Young, 61 Me. 160; Bedford R. Co. v. Bowser, 48 Pa. St. 29.

Where stockholders were liable for an amount of unpaid balance on stock, the par of which was originally $50, and an amendatory act was passed reducing it to $25 per share, it was held that a stockholder was not liable on his original subscription for a judgment obtained after reduction for the other $25, though he had given his note for it. Woodhouse v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 54 Pa. St. 307.

4. Cooper v. Frederick, 9 Ala. 738; Hepburn v. Exchange Banking Co., 4 La. Ann. 87; Palfrey v. Paulding, 7 La. Ann. 363.

5. In re Dronfield, etc., Coal Co., 17 Ch. Div. 76; In re Ambrose, etc., Min. Co., 14 Ch. Div. 390; In re Ince Hall, etc., Co., 30 W. R. 945; Waterhouse v. Jamieson, L. R., 2 H. L. Sc. 37.

6. Release — English Rule.—Bath's Case, 8 Ch. Div. 334; Barrett's Case, L. R., 13 Eq. 507; Stanhope's Case, L. R., 1 Ch. App. 161; Spackman v. Evans, L. R., 3 H. L. 171. Surrender and cancellation are proper, when expressly authorized. Cockburn's Case, 4 De G. & Sm. 177; Snell's Case, L. R., 5 Ch. 22; Ex parte Fenn, 22 L. J. Ch. 692; In re Bodmin United Mines Co., 23 Beav. 370; Ex parte Wright, 37 L. J., Ch. 529; Ex parte Bellhaven, 3 De G. J. & S. 41; Dixon v. Evans, L. R., 5 H. L. 606; Thomas' Case, L. R., 13 Eq. 437; Colville's Case, 48 L. J. Ch. 633. And a release cannot be set aside after undue delay, even when not authorized. Meux's Executor's Case, 2 De G. M. & G. 522. The company may confer the power upon itself by special resolution. Teasdale's Case, L. R., 9 Ch. 54; Taylor v. Pilsen Joel, etc., Light Co., 27 Ch. Div. 268. But where the power is not conferred, a surrender and cancellation of shares is void. Walter's Second Case, 3 De G. & Sm. 244; Munt's Case, 22 Beav. 55; Jones' Case, 27 L. J. Ch. 666; Daniell's Case, 26 L. J. Ch. 563; Ex parte Preece, 15 Jur. 528; Richmond's Case, 4 Kay & J. 305. And lapse of time will not render it binding on the remaining stockholders unless they are shown to have had actual knowledge. Ex parte Stanhope, L. R., 1 Ch. 161; Ex parte Spackman, 34 L. J. Ch. 321; affirmed L. R., 3 H. L. 171. But see Evans v. Smallcombe, L. R., 3 H. L. 249.

Listing Contributories.—Cases in which owners of fully paid-up stock were not held as contributories: Ex parte Leifchild, 11 Jur. N. S. 941; 14 W. R. 22; 13 L. T., N. S. 267; In re Marlborough Club Co., L. R., 5 Eq. 565; Ex parte Thomas, 42 L. J. Ch. 781; 21 W. R. 782; Ex parte Fell, L. R., 5 Ch. 11; Kirby's Case, 46 L. T. 682.

b. ADDITIONAL OR STATUTORY LIABILITY—(1) In General.—Generally, in the United States, constitutions, statutes, or charters deal with the liability of stockholders.¹ The liability thus imposed is usually termed “statutory liability,” and may be grouped or classified according to degree as ordinary, proportional, double, or unlimited.

(2) Degrees—(a) Ordinary.—The lowest degree of liability imposed may be said to be that which by statute is declaratory of the equitable liability for unpaid subscriptions.²

(b) Proportional.—This degree of liability exists where the statute provides that the proportion of the stockholder's liability to the corporate indebtedness shall be the same as the proportion of his shares to the whole number of shares. In such case the payment by him of his part relieves him from further liability.³ So up to this limit a creditor of the corporation may enforce his whole claim against a single stockholder.⁴

(c) Double.—This form of liability is sometimes imposed by ambiguous phrases which occasion controversy and require judicial interpretation.

Thus, a liability “to the amount of their stock”⁵ or “to an

Cases in which owners of fully paid-up stock were held as contributories: In re Anglesea Colliery Co., L. R., 1 Ch. 555; In re Hollyford Min. Co., 1 Ir. Eq. 39; Ex parte Migotti, L. R., 4 Eq. 238; Dent's Case, L. R., 15 Eq. 407; Fraser's Case, 42 L. J. Ch. 358; Crickmer's Case, L. R., 10 Ch. 614; Aspinall's Case, 36 L. T., N. S. 362.

1. See the statutes of the various states.

2. See various state statutes.

3. Adkins v. Thornton, 19 Ga. 325; Belcher v. Wilcox, 40 Ga. 391; Jones v. Wiltberger, 42 Ga. 575; Branch v. Baker, 53 Ga. 502; Crease v. Babcock, 10 Met. (Mass.) 524; U. S. v. Knox, 102 U. S. 422.

4. Larrabee v. Baldwin, 35 Cal. 155; Lane v. Morris, 8 Ga. 468; Lane v. Harris, 16 Ga. 217; Branch v. Baker, 53 Ga. 502; Bank of Poughkeepsie v. Ibbotson, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 473; Hatch v. Burroughs, 1 Woods (U. S.) 439. See also Young v. Rosenbaum, 39 Cal. 646; San Jose Sav. Bank v. Pharis, 58 Cal. 380; Morrow v. San Francisco Superior Court, 64 Cal. 383, where this species of liability is further construed.

5. Double Liability.—In Root v. Sincock, 120 Ill. 350; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 317; 60 Am. Rep. 559, the bank's charter contained this proviso: “Provided also that the stockholders in this corporation shall be individually liable to the amount of their stock for all debts of the corporation, and such liability shall continue for three months after the transfer of any stock on the books of the corporation.” It was held that the stockholders were each individually liable to pay to the creditors of the bank, not merely the balance unpaid upon subscriptions for stock, but to the extent of the nominal or face value of the stock held by them for debts of the bank. And Scholfield, J., for the court, observed: “The contention of appellant is, that the liability imposed by the seventh section of the charter of the Union Bank of Quincy, upon the stockholders, is simply to pay creditors of the bank the balance unpaid upon subscriptions for stock. The language of the seventh section, affecting this question, is: ‘Provided also that the stockholders of this corporation shall be individually liable to the amount of their stock, for all debts of the corporation; and such liability shall continue for three months after the transfer of any stock on the books of the corporation.’ The plain and obvious meaning of this language is, to our minds, the stockholders are liable to creditors for their debts, to an extent measured by the amount of their stock. Omitting the clause expressing the extent of liability, and we have this: ‘The stockholders of this corporation shall be individually liable for all debts of the corporation.’ If this were all, their amount equal to their stock,"¹ is generally held to render stockholders liable for a sum equal to their full subscription, after the latter has been paid, and is equivalent to the phrase "to double the amount of the stock held by them," which creates a liability for twice the amount of the subscription.² But a provision for liability "to an amount equal to the amount unpaid on the stock" imposes no obligation to pay beyond par value.³

(d) Unlimited.—In some instances each stockholder is made liable for all debts of the corporation.⁴ This is in effect a partnership liability, and will be discussed later.⁵

(3) Statutes Imposing—(a) Constitutionality.—Under the Federal Constitution, and the authorities construing it, the liability of stockholders as fixed at incorporation, cannot be affected by subsequent statutes, unless the right so to legislate has been reserved by the state.⁶ Thus, a statute attempting to increase the liability of stockholders for debts already incurred is void.⁷ So a liability would be unlimited—they would be absolutely liable for all debts of the corporation. The intention, however, is to limit that liability; but to what extent? The answer is: "To the amount of their stock"—not to the amounts unpaid on their stock. The language makes the liability because of the fact of being stockholders, and not because of the fact of being debtors of the corporation. If the liability intended was simply to pay the creditor the amount due the corporation, what would have been more natural and easy than to have used just that language?" Under a statute making stockholders liable for debts existing against the corporation at the time of the dissolution "to the extent of their respective shares of stock," their liability extends not merely to the loss of the amount of the stock, but to a further sum equal to such amount, if necessary to pay the debts. Briggs v. Penniman, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 387; 18 Am. Dec. 454. See also McDonnell v. Alabama Gold L. Ins. Co., 85 Ala. 401; Pettibone v. McGraw, 6 Mich. 441; Sacketts Harbor Bank v. Blake, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 225. But the contrary rule is held in Lewis v. St. Charles County, 13 Mo. App. 48. See also Schricker v. Ridings, 65 Mo. 208; Gausen v. Buck, 68 Mo. 545.

1. Wheeler v. Miller, 90 N. Y. 359; In re Empire City Bank, 18 N. Y. 199; Ohio L. Ins., etc., Co. v. Merchants' Ins., etc., Co., 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 1; 53 Am. Dec. 742; Lewis v. St. Charles County, 5 Mo. App. 225; Briggs v. Penniman, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 387; 18

Am. Dec. 454; Bank of Poughkeepsie v. Ibbotson, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 473.

2. Parish's Appeal (Pa. 1890), 19 Atl. Rep. 569; Perry v. Turner, 55 Mo. 418; Matthews v. Albert, 24 Md. 527; Norris v. Johnson, 34 Md. 485; Booth v. Campbell, 37 Md. 522; Schricker v. Ridings, 65 Mo. 208; Gay v. Keys, 30 Ill. 413.

3. Patterson v. Lynde, 106 U. S. 519; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 195; Stephens v. Fox, 83 N. Y. 313; Mills v. Stewart, 41 N. Y. 384; Brundage v. Monumental, etc., Min. Co., 12 Oregon 322; Ladd v. Cartwright, 7 Oregon 329.

4. Patterson v. Wyomissing Mfg. Co., 40 Pa. St. 117; Marsh v. Burroughs, 1 Woods (U. S.) 463.

5. See infra, this title, Partnership or Individual Liability.

6. Statutes Cannot Affect Vested Rights.—Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 518; Steady v. Little Rock, etc., R. Co., 5 Dill. (U. S.) 348; Nichols v. Somerset, etc., R. Co., 43 Me. 356; Wales v. Stetson, 2 Mass. 146; Nichols v. Bertram, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 342.

7. Com. v. Cochituate Bank, 3 Allen (Mass.) 42; Owen v. Purdy, 12 Ohio St. 73; Bailey v. Hollister, 26 N. Y. 112; Gardner v. Hamilton Ins. Co., 33 N. Y. 421; Wheeler v. Frontier Bank, 23 Me. 308; Steady v. Little Rock, etc., R. Co., 5 Dill. (U. S.) 348; Fry v. Lexington, etc., R. Co., 2 Metc. (Ky.) 314; Thompson v. Guion, 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 113; Mowrey v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 4 Biss. (U. S.) 78; Lauman v. Lebanon Valley R. Co., 30 Pa. St.

repeal of existing provisions and a reduction of liability are invalid as against corporate creditors.¹ It is held in *Ohio*² that the stockholder's liability cannot be increased even for future corporate debts, but the contrary appears to be the prevailing doctrine.³ Where the right to modify charters is reserved by the state, the liability may be increased.⁴ A statute which affects merely the creditors' remedy is not unconstitutional;⁵ hence a provision authorizing a proceeding by creditors against a single stockholder for his unpaid subscription is valid.⁶

(b) Construction.—Three distinct theories are in vogue relative to the construction of statutes imposing a merely contractual liability. According to one theory, such provisions, being in derogation of the common law, should be strictly construed;⁷ the second holds that such legislation, being remedial, should be liberally

42; 72 Am. Dec. 685; Hamilton Mut. Ins. Co. v. Hobart, 2 Gray (Mass.) 543.

1. Hathorne v. Calef, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 23; In re State Ins. Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 28; Conant v. Van Schaick, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 87; Norris v. Wrenschall, 34 Md. 492; Provident Sav. Inst. v. Jackson Place Skating, etc., Rink Co., 52 Mo. 552; St. Louis Ry. Supplies Mfg. Co. v. Harbine, 2 Mo. App. 134; Central Agr. Assoc. v. Alabama Gold L. Ins. Co., 70 Ala. 120; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 78; Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. (U. S.) 190. But compare Ochiltree v. Iowa R. R. Contracting Co., 21 Wall. (U. S.) 249.

2. In Ireland v. Palestine, etc., Turnpike Co., 19 Ohio St. 369, it was held that the Ohio Act of May 3d, 1852, in relation to plankroad and turnpike companies, in so far as it undertakes to impose upon stockholders without their assent individual liabilities not imposed by their charters, or by the laws under which they had been organized, is a law impairing the validity of the stockholder's contract with the company, and therefore unconstitutional.

3. Gray v. Coffin, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 192. See also Stanley v. Stanley, 26 Me. 191; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507; 71 Am. Dec. 559; Shufeldt v. Carver, 8 Ill. App. 545; Fogg v. Sidwell, 8 Ill. App. 551; Child v. Coffin, 17 Mass. 64; Hathorn v. Calef, 53 Me. 471; Weidenger v. Spruance, 101 Ill. 278.

4. Weidenger v. Spruance, 101 Ill. 278; In re Empire City Bank, 18 N. Y. 119; Bailey v. Hollister, 26 N. Y. 112. See also In re Lee's Bank, 21 N. Y. 9; Sleeper v. Goodwin, 67 Wis. 577; Sherman v. Smith, 1 Black (U. S.) 587; South Bay Meadow Dam Co. v. Gray, 30 Me. 547; Gardner v. Hope Ins. Co., 9 R. I. 194; 11 Am. Rep. 238; Gulliver v. Roelle, 100 Ill. 141; Black v. Womer, 100 Ill. 328; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Oldtown, etc., R. Co. v. Veazie, 39 Me. 571; In re Elevated R. Co., 70 N. Y. 327.

5. Statutes Affecting The Remedy.—Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Hill, 86 Mo. 466, affirming 12 Mo. App. 148; Cummings v. Maxwell, 45 Me. 190; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507; 71 Am. Dec. 559; Story v. Furman, 25 N. Y. 214; Penniman, Petitioner, 11 R. I. 333. Compare Walker v. Crain, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 119.

6. Hill v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co., 134 U. S. 515.

7. Statutes Strictly Construed.—Chase v. Lord, 77 N. Y. 1; Grose v. Hilt, 36 Me. 22; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 511; 71 Am. Dec. 559; Potter v. Stevens Machine Co., 127 Mass. 592; 34 Am. Rep. 428; Chamberlain v. Huguenot Mfg. Co., 118 Mass. 532; Gray v. Coffin, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 192; Dane v. Dane Mfg. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 488; Lowry v. Inman, 46 N. Y. 119; Diven v. Lee, 36 N. Y. 302; Moyer v. Pennsylvania Slate Co., 71 Pa. St. 293; Youghiogheny Shaft Co. v. Evans, 72 Pa. St. 331; O'Reilly v. Bard, 105 Pa. St. 569; Mean's Appeal, 85 Pa. St. 75; Nimick v. Mingo Iron Works Co., 25 W. Va. 184; Windham Prov. Sav. Inst. v. Sprague, 43 Vt. 502; Dauchy v. Brown, 24 Vt. 197. Also Libby v. Tobey, 82 Me. 397; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 526.

One must be plainly a stockholder within the purview of the law to be subjected to liability. The meaning of the act cannot be extended so as to include cases not expressly within its provisions. Steel v. Dunne, 65 Ill. 298.

construed;¹ by the third, such enactments are to be interpreted as the court deems them to have been intended,² and it is held that they are in the nature of contracts,³ and are to receive a natural and reasonable construction. Where the liability imposed is penal, the statute will be strictly construed.⁴

(6) Constitutional Provisions.—Provisions of constitutions which simply provide for an additional liability without defining its extent,⁵ or which leave the remedy to be fixed by statute,⁶ are not self-enforcing, and must, in order to be operative, be supplemented by further legislation. But a constitutional clause which imposes liability "to the amount of stock held" is self-executing.⁷

(4) Kinds—(a) Contractual—(1) NATURE—The usual liability imposed by statute, viz., an absolute obligation to pay, and not a contingent one, such as accrues from the non-performance of certain prescribed duties, is generally held to be contractual.⁸ There is a

One who seeks to hold members to a joint and several liability under a particular statute must comply strictly therewith. Harrod v. Hamer, 32 Wis. 162.

1. Liberal Construction.—Freeland v. McCullough, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 413; 43 Am. Dec. 685; Marion Tp., etc., Co. v. Norris, 37 Ind. 424; Gauch v. Harrison, 12 Ill. App. 457; Carver v. Braintree Mfg. Co., 2 Story (U. S.) 433.

In the recent case of Rider v. Fritchey (Ohio, 1892), 30 N. E. Rep. 692, the following constitutional provision was before the court: "Dues from corporations shall be secured by such individual liability of the stockholders and other means as may be prescribed by law; but in all cases each stockholder shall be liable over and above the stock by him or her owned, and any amount unpaid thereon to a further sum, at least equal in amount to such stock." It was decided that the term "dues" included a claim for unliquidated damages arising from tort.

2. Rational Construction.—Bohn v. Brown, 33 Mich. 261; Hicks v. Burns, 38 N. H. 141; Davidson v. Rankin, 34 Cal. 503; Mokelumne Hill Canal, etc., Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 265; 73 Am. Dec. 658; Priest v. Essex Hat Mfg. Co., 115 Mass. 380; Ripley v. Sampson, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 371; Knowlton v. Ackley, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 93; Bassett v. St. Alban's Hotel Co., 47 Vt. 313. See also Lane v. Morris, 8 Ga. 475; Ingalls v. Cole, 47 Me. 540; Weigley v. Coal Oil Co., 5 Phila. (Pa.) 67; Dewey v. St. Alban's Trust Co., 57 Vt. 332; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 212; 48 Am. Dec. 803.

"In construing a statutory provision imposing individual liability upon the members of a corporation, it is the duty of the courts to ascertain and carry out the intention of the legislature. To lay down any arbitrary rule for the construction of a particular class of statutes is manifestly contrary to reason, and can only lead to error and perversion of justice." Morawetz, Private Corporations, § 880.

3. Hicks v. Burns, 38 N. H. 141.

4. Cable v. McCune, 26 Mo. 371; 72 Am. Dec. 214; Cady v. Smith, 12 Neb. 628; Garrison v. Howe, 17 N. Y. 458; Esmond v. Bullard, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 65.

5. French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 518.

6. Diversey v. Smith, 103 Ill. 378; 42 Am. Rep. 14; Weidenger v. Spruance, 101 Ill. 278; Shufeldt v. Carver, 8 Ill. App. 545; Hampson v. Weare, 4 Iowa 13; 66 Am. Dec. 116; Larrabee v. Baldwin, 35 Cal. 155; French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 518; Milroy v. Spur Mountain, etc., Min. Co., 43 Mich. 231; Peck v. Miller, 39 Mich. 594.

Statutes designed to carry into effect the double liability clause of a constitution may limit the time for enforcing such liability. Perry v. Turner, 55 Mo. 418.

7. Willis v. St. Paul Sanitation Co. (Minn. 1892), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 222.

8. Usual Liability Is Contractual.—Lowry v. Inman, 46 N. Y. 126; Paine v. Stewart, 33 Conn. 516; Bond v. Appleton, 8 Mass. 472; 5 Am. Dec. 111; Hutchins v. New England Coal Min. Co., 4 Allen (Mass.) 580; Grand Rapids Sav. Bank v. Warren, 52 Mich. 537; Hodgson v. Cheever, 8 Mo. App. 321; Manville v. Edgar, 8 Mo. App.

line of cases, however, by which this usual liability is treated as statutory merely and not contractual.¹ But by the weight of authority this species of liability is entitled to be credited with the incidents of a contract; and accordingly falls within the provisions of a statute fixing the limitation for actions on contracts,² is enforceable only in a court of law,³ and generally survives against the personal representatives of a decedent.⁴ Where the liability is construed as contractual, statutes imposing it cannot be repealed to the detriment of existing creditors.⁵

(2) WHAT INCLUDED—(a) Whether Damages Arising from Torts.—There is a conflict in the authorities as to whether the usual liability for 324; Corning v. McCullough, 1 N. Y. 47; 49 Am. Dec. 287; Freeland v. McCullough, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 414; 43 Am. Dec. 685; McDonough v. Phelps, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 372; Aultman's Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 505; Sacketts Harbor Bank v. Blake, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 225; Woods v. Wicks, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 40. See also Provident Sav. Inst. v. Jackson Place Skating, etc., Rink, 52 Mo. 552; St. Louis Ry. Supplies Mfg. Co. v. Harbine, 2 Mo. App. 134; Blakeman v. Benton, 9 Mo. App. 107; Bagley v. Tyler, 43 Mo. App. 195; Hathorn v. Calef, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 10; Conant v. Van Schaick, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 87; Flash v. Conn, 16 Fla. 428; 26 Am. Rep. 721; Keyser v. Hitz, 133 U. S. 138.

"The nature and extent of the special individual liability of the shareholders of a corporation necessarily depend upon the particular provisions of the charter or general law under which the parties have created it. It has been pointed out, that this liability is, in reality, the result of an agreement or contractual relation formed between the shareholders and the creditors of the corporation. Whether this agreement be called a contract or not, is merely a matter of definition. It may not be a contract according to the technical rules of the common law; but it contains every essential element of a contract, and it is legally binding by virtue of statutory enactment." Morawetz, Private Corp., § 872.

1. Erickson v. Nesmith, 4 Allen (Mass.) 326; Halsey v. McLean, 12 Allen (Mass.) 438; 90 Am. Dec. 157; New Haven Nail Co. v. Linden Spring Co., 142 Mass. 349; 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71; Rice v. Merrimack Hosiery Co., 56 N. H. 114.

2. Limitation the Same as in Actions on Contracts.—Howell v. Roberts, 29 Neb. 483; Coy v. Jones, 30 Neb. 789;

Corning v. McCullough, 1 N. Y. 47; 49 Am. Dec. 287. Also Gridley v. Barnes, 103 Ill. 211; Hawkins v. Iron Valley Furnace Co., 40 Ohio St. 507; Lawler v. Burt, 7 Ohio St. 340; Atwood v. Rhode Island Agr. Bank, 1 R. I. 376; Terry v. Calnan, 13 S. Car. 220; Bullard v. Bell, 1 Mason (U. S.) 243; Carrol v. Green, 92 U. S. 509.

3. Queenan v. Palmer, 117 Ill. 619.

4. Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27; 17 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71; Irons v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 21 Fed. Rep. 197; Chase v. Lord, 77 N. Y. 1; Manville v. Edgar, 8 Mo. App. 324. But see Child v. Coffin, 17 Mass. 64; Ripley v. Sampson, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 371; Dane v. Dane Mfg. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 488; Cummings v. Wright, 11 Mo. App. 348; Donnelly v. Hodgson, 13 Mo. App. 15.

5. Contractual Statutes Not Repealable.—Hawthorne v. Calef, 2 Wall. 10; Central, etc., Mechanical Association v. Alabama, etc., Insurance Co., 70 Ala. 120; Norris v. Wenschall, 34 Md. 492; Providence Savings Institution v. Jackson Place, etc., Co., 52 Mo. 552; St. Louis R. R., etc., Co. v. Harbine, 2 Mo. App. 134; Conant v. Van Schaick, 24 Barb. 87; Wodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 190. Compare Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700; Re State Insurance Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 28; 11 Biss. 301; Cooper v. Fredrick, 9 Ala. 472; Palfre v. Paulding, 7 La. Ann. 363; Coffin v. Rich, 45 Me. 507; Jerman's Admr. v. Benton, 79 Mo. 148; Story v. Furman, 25 N. Y. 214; Rochester v. Barnes, 26 Barb. 657; Woodhouse v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 54 Pa. St. 307. And see further as tending generally to illustrate the text propositions, the following English cases: Re Telegraph Construction Co., L. R., 10 Eq. 384; In re Credit Foncier of England, L. R., 11 Eq. 356.

"debts" of the corporation includes a claim against it for damages sounding in tort,¹ or costs in an action for the same.² But it has been held that "debts" will include a judgment for waste,³ and that "dues" will cover a demand for unliquidated damages arising from a tort.⁴

(b) Debts Due Laborers, etc.—A common form of statutory liability is that for debts due to servants, laborers, apprentices, and employés. Statutes imposing such liability are designed primarily to protect wage earners only,⁵ and the courts generally have not extended their provisions to those not within that class. Accordingly it has been held that the benefits of such a provision cannot be claimed by general managers,⁶ superintendents,⁷ overseers,⁸ or foremen,⁹ even though they perform incidental labor, nor by secretaries though they do the work of book-keepers,¹⁰ nor by foreign agents,¹¹ traveling salesmen,¹² civil engineers,¹³ consulting

1. Damages from Torts.—The affirmative of this is asserted in the following cases: Carver v. Braintree Mfg. Co., 2 Story (U. S.) 432; Mill Dam Foundry v. Hovey, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 417; Gray v. Bennett, 3 Met. (Mass.) 522; Wyman v. American Powder Co., 8 Cush. (Mass.) 182; Dryden v. Kellogg, 2 Mo. App. 87; Smith v. Omans, 17 Wis. 395; White v. Hunt, 6 N. J. L. 418; Chase v. Curtis, 113 U. S. 452; Bohn v. Brown, 33 Mich. 257; Cable v. McCune, 26 Mo. 371; 72 Am. Dec. 214; Doolittle v. Marsh, 11 Neb. 243; Heacock v. Sherman, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 59; Archer v. Rose, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 264; Child v. Boston, etc., Iron Works, 137 Mass. 516; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 316; Nason v. Jacob, 93 Mo. 331; 3 Am. St. Rep. 531; Evans v. Lewis, 30 Ohio St. 14; Crouch v. Gridley, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 250; Kellogg v. Schuyler, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 73; Zimmer v. Schleeauf, 115 Mass. 52; In re Boston, etc., Iron Works, 23 Fed. Rep. 880; Losee v. Bullard, 79 N. Y. 404, affirming 16 Hun (N. Y.) 65.

2. Costs.—That they may be recovered: Lane v. Baker, 2 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 424. Compare Veeder v. Mudgett, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 519; contra, Schouton v. Kilmer, 8 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 527; Lathrop v. Singer, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 396.

3. Powell v. Oregonian R. Co., 36 Fed. Rep. 756.

4. Rider v. Fritchey (Ohio, 1892), 30 N. E. Rep. 692.

5. Statutes Generally Construed with Strictness.—Dean v. DeWolf, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 186; affirmed 82 N. Y. 626; Adams v. Goodrich, 55 Ga. 233; Williamson v. Wadsworth, 49 Barb. (N. Y.)

294; Heebner v. Chave, 5 Pa. St. 115; Harrod v. Hamer, 32 Wis. 162; Wakefield v. Fargo, 90 N. Y. 217. In this last case Danforth, J., for the court, said: "It is plain, we think, that the services referred to are menial or manual services; that he who performs them is of a class whose members usually look to the reward of a day's labor or services for immediate or present support from whom the company does not expect credit, and to whom its future ability to pay is of no consequence; one who is responsible for no independent action, but who does a day's work or a stated job under the direction of a superior." See also Gordon v. Jennings, 9 Q. B. Div. 45.

6. Wakefield v. Fargo, 90 N. Y. 217.

7. Kincaid v. Dwinelle, 59 N. Y. 548; Gordon v. Great Western R. Co., 8 Q. B. Div. 45; Gurney v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 58 N. Y. 358.

8. Hughes v. Whitaker, 84 N. Car. 340; but see contra Hovey v. Ten Broeck, 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 316.

9. Ericsson v. Brown, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 390; Krauser v. Ruckel, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 463. But see contra Sleeper v. Goodwin, 67 Wis. 577; Short v. Medberry, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 39.

10. Coffin v. Reynolds, 37 N. Y. 640; overruling Richardson v. Abendroth, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 163.

11. Hill v. Spencer, 61 N. Y. 274; Dean v. DeWolf, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 186; Krauser v. Ruckel, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 463.

12. Jones v. Avery, 50 Mich. 326; but see Williamson v. Wadsworth, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 294.

13. Pennsylvania, etc., R. Co. v. Lueffer, 84 Pa. St. 168. But see contra Conant v. Van Schaick, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 87.

engineers,¹ assistant chief engineers,² contractors,³ or a corporation aggregate.⁴ On the other hand, there are cases by which the provisions of such a statute have been extended to an engineer and fireman sometimes acting as a superintendent,⁵ to a book-keeper,⁶ and to a newspaper reporter.⁷ The obligation imposed by these statutes is cumulative to the subscription liability,⁸ attaches not only to individuals, but to municipal corporations which hold stock,⁹ and is enforceable without proving a judgment against the corporation,¹⁰ and the right of action is assignable.¹¹ But a mere subscriber is not subject to the provisions of a statute imposing such liability upon stockholders.¹²

(b) Penal—See also MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS, vol. 14, p. 284; OFFICERS (PRIVATE CORPORATIONS) vol. 17, p. 109).—The liability imposed by statute for the failure of the corporation or its officers to perform specific statutory duties is generally construed as penal, unenforceable beyond the state, and governed by Statutes of Limitations applying to penalties. Thus, statutes prescribing liability for neglect to make reports of assessments voted,¹³ or of corporate indebtedness,¹⁴ have been held to

1. Ericsson v. Brown, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 390.

2. Brockaway v. Innes, 39 Mich. 47; 33 Am. Rep. 348. Compare Peck v. Miller, 39 Mich. 594.

3. Aikin v. Wasson, 24 N. Y. 482; Balch v. New York, etc., R. Co., 46 N. Y. 521; Atcherson v. Troy, etc., R. Co., 6 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 329; Boutwell v. Townsend, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 205; Kent v. New York Cent. R. Co., 12 N. Y. 628; McCluskey v. Cromwell, 11 N. Y. 593; Taylor v. Manwaring, 48 Mich. 171.

4. Dukes v. Love, 97 Ind. 341.

5. Vincent v. Bamford, 33 N. Y. Super. Ct. 506; 12 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 252.

6. Chapman v. Chumar, 54 Hun (N. Y.) 636; Hovey v. Ten Broeck, 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 316.

7. Harris v. Norvell, 1 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 127.

8. Lane's Appeal, 105 Pa. St. 49; 51 Am. Rep. 166; Milroy v. Spur Mountain, etc., Min. Co., 43 Mich. 231.

9. Shipley v. Terre Haute, 74 Ind. 297.

10. Sleeper v. Goodwin, 67 Wis. 579.

11. Krauser v. Ruckel, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 463.

12. Wheeler v. Thayer, 121 Ind. 64.

13. Penal Liability.—Sayles v. Brown, 40 Fed. Rep. 8.

14. Chase v. Curtis, 113 U. S. 452; Stokes v. Stickney, 96 N. Y. 323; Pier v. Hanmore, 86 N. Y. 95; Pier v. George, 86 N. Y. 613; Veeder v. Baker, 83 N. Y. 156; Knox v. Baldwin, 80 N. Y. 610; Easterly v. Barber, 65 N. Y. 252; Wiles v. Suydam, 64 N. Y. 173; Merchants' Bank v. Bliss, 35 N. Y. 412; Western Transp., etc., Co. v. Kilderhouse, 87 N. Y. 430; Lemon v. People, 20 N. Y. 562; Boughton v. Otis, 21 N. Y. 261; Losee v. Bullard, 79 N. Y. 404.

In Derrickson v. Smith, 27 N. J. L. 166, Green, C. J., construing section 12 of the New York Manufacturing Companies Act, which requires such a report, says: "It is not claimed that the defendant, by the act of incorporation, is individually liable as a corporator, for the debts of the body corporate, or that his liability attached as a necessary result of the contract made by the company. His liability results from the failure of the trustees to comply with the requirements of the statute. It is, in fact, a penalty inflicted upon the trustees for a failure to perform the duty enjoined by the statute. It is immaterial whether that penalty be a specified sum or the payment of the debts of the corporation. In either case it is a penalty imposed by the statute; nor is it perceived how the liability of the individual trustee to pay the debts of the corporation can be said in any proper way to be founded on contract. It certainly did not result from the contract made by the corporation, nor from the defendant becoming a stockholder, nor from his

be penal. But it has been held that a statute imposing a liability for a failure to publish notice of indebtedness is "quasi-penal" only, and governed by that section of the Statute of Limitations which pertains to contractual actions.¹ There is a conflict of authority as to whether a liability imposed for contracting indebtedness in excess of the capital is penal,² and it has been held that an action to enforce liability for doing business before capital is paid in, is a contractual one.³

The liability arises at the moment when the contract of indebtedness with the corporation is complete,⁴ but attaches only for debts contracted during the default.⁵ Where the statute imposing liability is held to be penal and subject to a strict construction, it is said that the burden of proving non-compliance therewith is upon the party seeking to charge the stockholders;⁶ but since it is a negative averment, the subject-matter of which lies peculiarly within the knowledge of the stockholders, and is a special and imposed statutory duty, the above rule would, upon accepting the office of trustee, but solely from the omission to comply with the statute. Now the acceptance of the charter, or the defendant becoming a stockholder, is doubtless an assent to the terms of the charter, but it is in no appropriate sense an engagement to pay the debts of the company imposed as a penalty for violations of the charter. Such liability is clearly the creature of the statute."

Where the statute requires the filing of the certificate of indebtedness, the stockholders are liable if the certificate is false. Congdon v. Winsor, 17 R. I. 236; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 199.

And a statute requiring verification of the certificate of indebtedness is not complied with by mere acknowledgment. Hardman v. Sage, 124 N. Y. 25.

1. Howell v. Roberts, 29 Neb. 483; Coy v. Jones, 30 Neb. 798.

2. Holding that it is: First Nat. Bank v. Price, 33 Md. 487; 3 Am. Rep. 204; Halsey v. McLean, 12 Allen (Mass.) 438; 90 Am. Dec. 157; Bird v. Hayden, 1 Robt. (N. Y.) 383; Union Iron Co. v. Pierce, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 327. Contra, Windham Prov. Sav. Inst. v. Sprague, 43 Vt. 502; Field v. Haines, 28 Fed. Rep. 919. In the latter case, Wheeler, J., says: "The liability is not imposed because of anything done or omitted, apart from the making of the contract constituting the debt, but on account of the part taken by the directors in making that contract. By assenting to the act which makes the debt, they make themselves liable for the part of the debt that exceeds the capital. This part of the debt is prohibited, but not so, nor claimed to be so, but that it is binding upon the corporation. The contract creating the debt is not so illegal as to be void, and the assent of the directors is not. Their liability appears to be founded on their assent, which is in its nature a contract."

In Iowa stockholders are not liable for a failure to comply with the code in keeping books, or because indebtedness exceeding two-thirds of the capital stock was incurred, in violation of the code. Langan v. Iowa, etc., Constr. Co., 49 Iowa 317.

3. Cochran v. Wiechers, 53 Hun (N. Y.) 636.

4. Conklin v. Firman, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 484.

5. Porter v. Sherman County Banking Co. (Neb. 1893), 54 N. W. Rep. 424; Smith v. Steele, 8 Neb. 115; citing Boughton v. Otis, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 196; Garrison v. Howe, 17 N. Y. 458.

6. In Chase v. Lord, 77 N. Y. 6, it is said: "In the first place, it is clear that there was no common-law liability on the part of the testator; and the legal presumption is that all statutory conditions have been complied with. This presumption continues until the contrary is shown. No duty rested upon the stockholder to do this; and it is incumbent upon the plaintiff to establish a non-compliance with the provisions of the statute, before he can charge the defendant." See also Bruce v. Driggs, 25 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 71.

general principles, hardly seem to apply in those jurisdictions where the statute is not strictly construed.¹

c. PARTNERSHIP OR INDIVIDUAL LIABILITY.—Aside from their obligation to pay the par value of their subscriptions, and from the additional liability imposed by the legislature, stockholders may, in certain instances, be held liable as though they were merely members of a trading copartnership.

(1) Ante-Corporate Debts—(See also OFFICERS (PRIVATE CORPORATIONS), vol. 17, p. 171).—Preliminary expenses attending corporate organization are chargeable individually upon those engaged in promoting the enterprise,² even where the capital stock has not been fully subscribed, and though this is ordinarily a condition precedent to the enforcement of the subscriber's liability.³ So also those who contract debts in behalf of a proposed corporation are personally liable,⁴ even where the company is organized but collapses,⁵ or where the charter makes the company alone liable,⁶ unless the creditor has agreed to look only to the company.⁷

(2) Abortive Corporations—(a) Defective Incorporation.—Immunity from personal and unlimited liability on the part of those engaged in associated business enterprises, is viewed by the courts generally as an exceptional privilege.⁸ Accordingly by a sort of legal atavism, there is a constant tendency on the part of attempted corporations to lapse into de jure partnerships. There is a strong array of decisions to the effect that members of a concern which has not been legally or properly incorporated, are liable as partners.⁹ Thus, where incorporation is provided for under a general law, and there has been a failure to comply with certain of the prescribed formalities, such as filing the certificate or articles

1. See 1 Greenl. Ev., § 79; 1 Whart. Ev., § 367; Blann v. Beal, 5 Ala. 357; Toole v. State, 88 Ala. 158; Van Etten v. Eaton, 19 Mich. 186; Huggins v. Ward, 21 W. R. 914.

2. Braithwaite v. Skofield, 9 B. & C. 401; 17 E. C. L. 404; Nockells v. Crosby, 3 B. & C. 823; Walstab v. Spottiswoode, 15 M. & W. 501.

One who permits himself to be announced as an officer of a company which was never formed is liable individually for preliminary expenses. Luke v. Duke of Argyll, L. R., 6 Q. B. 477; Collingwood v. Berkeley, 15 C. B., N. S. 145; 109 E. C. L. 145; Maddick v. Marshall, 17 C. B., N. S. 829; 112 E. C. L. 828. And see Wood v. Duke of Argyll, 6 M. & G. 928; 46 E. C. L. 928.

3. Salem Mill Dam Corp. v. Ropes, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 23.

4. Hurt v. Salisbury, 55 Mo. 310; Landman v. Entwistle, 7 Exch. 632;

Rennie v. Clarke, 5 Exch. 292; Higgins v. Hopkins, 3 Exch. 163; Hopcroft v. Parker, 16 L. T., N. S. 561. See also Scott v. Ebury, 36 L. J., C. P. 161.

5. Kelner v. Baxter, L. R., 2 C. P. 174.

6. Witmer v. Schlatter, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 359.

7. Whitwell v. Warner, 20 Vt. 425; Landman v. Entwistle, 7 Exch. 632; Rennie v. Clarke, 5 Exch. 292.

8. See an article in 23 Sol. Journal & Rep. "Unlimited Company a Legal Anomaly."

9. Partnership Liability in Case of Defective Incorporation.—Kaiser v. Lawrence Sav. Bank, 56 Iowa 104; 41 Am. Rep. 85, containing a review of the cases. See also Mokelumne Hill Canal, etc., Min. Co. v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 424; 73 Am. Dec. 658; Hurt v. Salisbury, 55 Mo. 310; Bigelow v. Gregory, 73 Ill. 197; Abbott v. Omaha Smelting Co., 4 Neb. 416; Harris v.

of incorporation,¹ properly publishing and signing the same,² definitely describing the principal place of business,³ or fixing the maximum of indebtedness,⁴ the would-be corporators have been held individually liable. According to this group of authorities also, the rule that regularity of incorporation may be questioned only in a direct proceeding by the state's legal adviser, does not apply.⁵ Nevertheless there are cases almost equal in number, which take the position that one who has contracted with a de facto corporation, organized under color of law, and exercising corporate functions, cannot afterwards be allowed to charge its stockholders individually.⁶ Moreover, certain minor McGregor, 29 Cal. 125; Coleman v. Coleman, 78 Ind. 344; and see next note.

1. The receiver of a defectively organized incorporated apartment association cannot hold liable as partners members of a building company which subscribed for stock in the association, though one of the company's members realized a large sum by foreclosing mortgages against the association. Fox v. McComb, 63 Hun (N. Y.) 630. Bigelow v. Gregory, 73 Ill. 197; Garnett v. Richardson, 35 Ark. 144; Coleman v. Coleman, 78 Ind. 344; Eisfield v. Kenworth, 50 Iowa 389; Marshal v. Harris, 55 Iowa 182; Kaiser v. Lawrence Sav. Bank, 56 Iowa 104; 41 Am. Rep. 85; Field v. Cooks, 16 La. Ann. 153; Ferris v. Thaw, 72 Mo. 446; Martin v. Fewell, 79 Mo. 401; Smith v. Warden, 86 Mo. 382; Abbott v. Omaha Smelting Co., 4 Neb. 416; Cross v. Jackson, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 478; Wells v. Gates, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 554; Ridenour v. Mayo, 40 Ohio St. 9; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 247. Compare Indianapolis, etc., Min. Co. v. Herkimer, 46 Ind. 142; Heinig v. Adams, etc., Mig. Co., 81 Ky. 300; Hurt v. Salisbury, 55 Mo. 310; Childs v. Hurd, 32 W. Va. 66; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 3 Fed. Rep. 721.

And the certificate when filed must show, as required on its face, that a majority of the stockholders were present at the meeting to organize. People v. Selfridge, 52 Cal. 331.

2. Kaiser v. Lawrence Sav. Bank, 56 Iowa 104; 41 Am. Rep. 85; Clegg v. Hamilton, etc., Grange Co., 61 Iowa 121; Unity Ins. Co. v. Cram, 43 N. H. 636. Contra, Holmes v. Gilliland, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 568.

3. Harris v. McGregor, 29 Cal. 124. But naming a city as "the place of business" will suffice. In re Spring Valley Water Works, 17 Cal. 132.

4. Heuer v. Carmichael, 82 Iowa 288.

5. Glen v. Breard, 35 La. Ann. 875; Vredenburg v. Behan, 33 La. Ann. 627; Medill v. Collier, 16 Ohio St. 599; First Nat. Bank v. Davies, 43 Iowa 424; Langan v. Iowa, etc., Constr. Co., 49 Iowa 317.

6. Estoppel to Claim Partnership Liability.—Snider's Sons Co. v. Troy, 91 Ala. 224; 24 Am. St. Rep. 887, is a recent and valuable authority under this head. It was there sought to charge as a partner a member of a concern, which, according to the plea and as admitted by the demurrer, had complied substantially with the incorporating act "except the residences of the persons," had organized and was doing business as a corporation. The court, by Clopton, J., took the view that: "The doctrine that a creditor who has dealt with a de facto corporation in its corporate capacity, cannot charge the stockholders as partners with the corporate debt, there being no fraudulent intent alleged and proved, seems to us to be sustained by the weight of authority, maintained by stronger reasoning, consistent with well-settled principles, and in harmony with the policy of the state." The opinion contains the following valuable review of the authorities pro and con: "Whether the shareholders in a corporation de facto are individually liable for the corporate debts, in the absence of fraud or a statute, is a question as to which the authorities are in direct antagonism. In Cook, Stock, etc., § 233, the doctrine asserted is: 'A corporate creditor, seeking to enforce the payment of his debt, may ignore the existence of the corporation, and may proceed against the supposed stockholders as partners, by proving that the prescribed method of becoming incorporated was not complied with by the company in question.' The leading cases supporting this doc-omissions, such as failure to give notice of the preliminary meeting,¹ slight defects in a certificate or acknowledgment,² delay in commencing business,³ misstatement as to the principal place of business,⁴ even commencing business without a paid-up capital, and failing to procure a certificate from the state auditor as required,⁵ have been held insufficient to impose a partnership liability. So where a creditor sues a concern as a corporation, he is estopped to set up the subsequent claim that its members are merely partners.⁶ Even where defective incorporation is fatal to limited liability, it may be cured by a statute recognizing the concern as a corporation.⁷ At most, those only may be held liable for a particular debt who were members when it was contracted,⁸ and it is even held that membership acquired trine are: Bigelow v. Gregory, 73 Ill. 197; Abbott v. Omaha Smelting Co., 4 Neb. 416; Garnett v. Richardson, 35 Ark. 144; Ferris v. Thaw, 72 Mo. 446; Ridenour v. Mayo, 40 Ohio St. 9; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 247; Coleman v. Coleman, 78 Ind. 344. We have omitted reference to a few cases, sometimes cited, for the reason that either the question of liability as partners was not before the court, as in Blanchard v. Kaull, 44 Cal. 440; or the debt was contracted before any steps were taken, other than the mere filing of a certificate, toward organization, as in Bergen v. Porpoise Fishing Co., 41 N. J. Eq. 238; or it was contracted after the expiration of the charter by its own limitation without reorganization, as in National Union Bank v. Landon, 45 N. Y. 410. In the case last cited, the shareholders entered into a special agreement, which by its terms created a partnership as to third persons. In 2 Mor. Priv. Corp., § 748, the doctrine is stated as follows: 'If an association assumes to enter into a contract in a corporate capacity, and the party dealing with the association contracts with it as if it were a corporation, the individual members cannot be charged as partners to the contract, either severally or jointly, or as partners.' The following cases maintain the doctrine that the members of a corporation de facto cannot be held liable as partners for the corporate debts: Fay v. Noble, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 188; First Nat. Bank v. Almy, 117 Mass. 476; Stout v. Zulick, 48 N. J. L. 599; Planters', etc., Bank v. Padgett, 69 Ga. 164; Merchants', etc., Bank v. Stone, 38 Mich. 779; Humphreys v. Mooney, 5 Colo. 282; Central City Sav. Bank v. Walker, 66 N. Y. 424; Gartside Coal Co. v.

Maxwell, 22 Fed. Rep. 197; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 359; Whitney v. Wyman, 101 U. S. 392.⁹ See also Cory v. Lee, 93 Ala. 468; Eaton v. Walker, 76 Mich. 579.

A partnership or a joint-stock company is not necessarily the result of an abortive attempt to organize a corporation. Blanchard v. Kaull, 44 Cal. 451. See also Larnett v. Beal, 65 N. H. 184; Sewall's Falls Bridge v. Fisk, 23 N. H. 171; Ossipee Hosiery, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Canney, 54 N. H. 295; Saunders v. Farmer, 62 N. H. 572; Jewell v. Gilbert, 64 N. H. 13; 10 Am. St. Rep. 357; Case v. Kelley, 133 U. S. 21; Mor. Priv. Corp., §§ 744-755.¹⁰

1. McClinch v. Sturgis, 72 Me. 288.

2. Stout v. Zulick, 48 N. J. L. 599.

3. Trowbridge v. Scudder, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 83.

4. Booth v. Wonderly, 36 N. J. L. 250.

5. Stokes v. Findlay, 4 McCrary (U. S.) 205. But compare Heuer v. Carmichael, 82 Iowa 288.

6. Pocheln v. Kemper, 14 La. Ann. 308; 74 Am. Dec. 433; Cresswell v. Oberly, 17 Ill. App. 281.

7. Curative Acts.—Central Agr. Assoc. v. Alabama Gold L. Ins. Co., 70 Ala. 120; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 78; State v. Steel, 37 Minn. 428; Richmond St. R. Co. v. Reed, 83 Ind. 9; In re Reformed Episcopal Church, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 516; In re West Park Ave., etc., Church, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 518; Independent Order of Mut. Aid v. Paine, 122 Ill. 625; 22 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 682; McCord, etc., Mercantile Co. v. Glenn, 6 Utah 139.

8. Fuller v. Rowe, 57 N. Y. 23; De Witt v. Hastings, 69 N. Y. 518.

In Fuller v. Rowe, 57 N. Y. 23, a party holding himself out as president of a corporation duly organized, which, after an abortive attempt at incorporation, by those who take no part in company affairs, will not render them liable as partners,¹ especially where they become stockholders in the belief that the company was legally organized.² So where but one of several would-be incorporators conducts business in the proposed corporate name, he alone is liable for the debts contracted therein.³

(b) Unauthorized Incorporation.—Where incorporation is attempted for the transaction of business not specified in the incorporation act, the provisions of which are sought to be availed of,⁴ or where the act itself is unconstitutional,⁵ those engaged in the enterprise may subject themselves to a partnership liability.

(3) Corporate Migration.—(See also FOREIGN CORPORATIONS, vol. 8, p. 329).—The transaction of business by a foreign corporation as such is not a right,⁶ though it is usually authorized upon the principle of interstate comity.⁷ Stockholders in a migratory corporation may therefore be subjected to a partnership liability by foreign states. Thus, in New Jersey, a foreign corporation must reorganize under the laws of that state in order to secure immunity to its members.⁸ And it seems to be the general rule that a concern expressly authorized to do business anywhere but in the state of its domicile, will not be recognized and protected as a corporation by other states.⁹ So, one who forms a sham orin fact had not been, employed the plaintiff to act as its superintendent. Defendant, supposing the company to have been incorporated, took stock therein, was elected president, and notified plaintiff to report to him, which was done, plaintiff drawing drafts on defendant as president, which were accepted and paid by the acting treasurer. The business proved a failure, and was abandoned, and in an action to recover plaintiff's salary, it was held that the defendant was not liable.

1. Stafford Bank v. Palmer, 47 Conn. 443. Compare Richardson v. Pitts, 71 Mo. 128.

2. American Salt Co. v. Heidenheimer, 80 Tex. 344.

3. Rutherford v. Hill, 22 Oregon 218; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 687.

4. Unauthorized Incorporation.—Vredenburg v. Behan, 33 La. Ann. 627; Glen v. Breard, 35 La. Ann. 875; Mohr v. Minnesota Elevator Co., 40 Minn. 343; Press Printing Co. v. Board of Assessors, 51 N. J. L. 75; Bank of California v. Collins, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 336; People v. Nelson, 46 N. Y. 477; People v. Gunn, 96 N. Y. 317; McGrew v. City Produce Exch., 85 Tenn. 572.

5. Eaton v. Walker, 76 Mich. 579; Chenango Bridge Co. v. Paige, 83 N. Y. 178; 38 Am. Rep. 407; Williams v.

Bank of Michigan, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 540; State v. How, 1 Mich. 512.

6. Rights of Foreign Corporations—Interstate Comity.—Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 519; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 168.

7. Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 519; Runyan v. Coster, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 129; Blair v. Perpetual Ins. Co., 10 Mo. 559; 47 Am. Dec. 129; Williams v. Creswell, 51 Miss. 817; Miller v. Ewer, 27 Me. 509; 46 Am. Dec. 619; Merrick v. Van Santvoord, 34 N. Y. 221; Wright v. Bundy, 11 Ind. 404; Hanna v. International Petroleum Co., 23 Ohio St. 622; Newburg Petroleum Co. v. Weare, 27 Ohio St. 343; Wood Hydraulic Hose M. Co. v. King, 45 Ga. 35; Second Nat. Bank v. Hall, 35 Ohio St. 158; Bagley v. Tyler, 43 Mo. App. 195; Empire Mills v. Alston Grocery Co. (Tex. App. 1891), 33 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 15.

8. Hill v. Beach, 12 N. J. Eq. 31.

9. Land Grant R. & T. Co. v. Coffey County, 6 Kan. 245. In this case it was said that no rule of comity will allow one state to spawn corporations and send them forth into other states to be nurtured and do business there, when said first-mentioned state will not allow them to do business within its own boundaries. See also Kruse v.

ganization to enable him to carry on his private affairs, but doing and intending to do no business in the state where it is incorporated, is liable individually.¹ But it is also held in Massachusetts that a corporation of that state may in fact do all of its business outside,² and in Ohio that corporations may do business there, though organized under the more liberal laws of Kentucky, and thereby escape liability.³ The laws of Texas do not authorize corporations for mercantile business, and stockholders in a company transacting such business in Texas, but organized in Iowa, are liable as partners even to one who dealt with them as a corporation.⁴

(4) Fraud—(See also OFFICERS (PRIVATE CORPORATIONS), vol. 17, p. 115).—Stockholders may sometimes incur partnership liability by fraudulent acts and representations.⁵ Thus, using the corporation as a cloak for the prosecution of illegal business,⁶ fraudulent representations as to the solvency of the concern,⁷ and in some jurisdictions, holding or allowing the members to be held out as partners,⁸ will render them liable as such. So, a false advertisement as to the amount of capital stock will sometimes,⁹ though not always,¹⁰ have that effect; but in Georgia it is held that creditors must have been induced to become such by acts or statements of the stockholders, in order to charge the latter.¹¹

Dusenbury, 19 N. Y. Wkly. Dig. 201, where a corporation was organized under the law of New Jersey, but had no place of business in that state, and transacted all its business in New York. The court said: "It was not an existing corporation within the meaning of the statute of New Jersey, under which it purports to have been incorporated."

It was a fraud upon the laws of New Jersey, and cannot screen defendants and its organizers from personal responsibility as partners for contracts made in New York under the assumed name." See also to the same effect the opinion of Attorney-General of Texas, 2 Ry. & Corp. Law J. 433, as to a corporation organized in Scotland to purchase lands anywhere but in that country.

1. Montgomery v. Forbes, 148 Mass. 249.

2. Saltmarsh v. Spaulding, 147 Mass. 224; 20 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 514.

3. Second Nat. Bank v. Hall, 35 Ohio St. 158; Second Nat. Bank v. Lovell, 2 Cin. (Ohio) 397.

4. Empire Mills v. Alston Grocery Co. (Tex. App. 1891), 33 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 15.

5. Chandler v. Bacon, 30 Fed. Rep. 538; Emery v. Parrott, 107 Mass. 95.

6. McGrew v. City Produce Exchange, 85 Tenn. 572.

7. Searlight v. Payne, 2 Tenn. Ch. 175. But not statements made in good faith. Jackson v. Turquand, L. R., 4 H. L. 305.

8. Collingwood v. Berkeley, 15 C. B., N. S. 145; 109 E. C. L. 145; Mad-dick v. Marshall, 17 C. B., N. S. 829; 11 E. C. L. 828; Wood v. Argyll, 6 M. & G. 928; Lake v. Argyll, 6 Q. B. 477; 51 E. C. L. 477.

The fact that stockholders might have represented that they were individually liable when the charter did not make them so, will not bind them as stockholders. Reid v. Eatonton Mfg. Co., 40 Ga. 98.

9. In Illinois, by statute. See also Haslett v. Wotherspoon, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 229.

Stockholders commit a legal fraud by doing business on less than the minimum capital, and must make good the capital, with interest; and cannot retain amounts drawn from the corporate assets as pretended salaries; no profits appearing from which to pay salaries. Burns v. Beck, etc., Hardware Co., 83 Ga. 471.

10. Wakeman v. Dalley, 51 N. Y. 27; 10 Am. Dec. 551; First Nat. Bank v. Almy, 117 Mass. 476; Evans v. Coventry, 25 L. J. Ch. 489; Crease v. Babcock, 10 Met. (Mass.) 525.

11. Sisson v. Matthews, 20 Ga. 848.

(5) Miscellaneous Instances.—The status of stockholders is not affected by corporate dissolution,¹ nor is partnership liability incurred by them for acts of corporate agents,² unless continuance of the business is authorized by the stockholders.³ Parties may become individually liable, however, by continuing the business of a corporation whose property and franchises they have purchased,⁴ as such a transfer does not per se invest them with corporate powers.⁵

2. Effect of Transfer—a. UPON SUBSCRIPTION LIABILITY.—It is the general common-law rule that a transfer, if regular and bona fide, relieves the transferrer from liability for unpaid subscriptions.⁶

1. Dissolution.—Rowland v. Meader Furniture Co., 38 Ohio St. 269; Portland, etc., Ins. Co. v. Portland, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 77; Polar Star Lodge v. Polar Star Lodge, 16 La. Ann. 53.

2. Central City Sav. Bank v. Walker, 66 N. Y. 424.

3. National Union Bank v. Landon, 45 N. Y. 410.

4. Chaffe v. Ludeling, 27 La. Ann. 607.

5. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Delaware, 114 U. S. 501; Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Berry, 112 U. S. 609; Flitsam v. Hay, 122 Ill. 293; 22 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 559; 3 Am. St. Rep. 492; Archer v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 102 Ill. 492; Black v. Delaware, etc., Canal Co., 24 N. J. Eq. 455; Chaffe v. Ludeling, 27 La. Ann. 607.

6. Transfer Relieves from Subscription Liability.—Huddersfield Canal Co. v. Buckley, 7 T. R. 36; Gilmore v. Bank of Cincinnati, 8 Ohio 62; Cole v. Ryan, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 168; Billings v. Robinson, 94 N. Y. 415; Wakefield v. Fargo, 90 N. Y. 213; Cowles v. Cromwell, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 413; Isham v. Buckingham, 49 N. Y. 216; Stewart v. Walla Walla Print., etc., Co., 1 Wash. 521; Chouteau Spring Co. v. Harris, 20 Mo. 382; Miller v. Great Republic Ins. Co., 50 Mo. 55; Allen v. Montgomery R. Co., 11 Ala. 437; Hayne v. Palmer, 13 La. Ann. 240; Weston's Case, L. R., 4 Ch. 20; McKenzie v. Kittridge, 24 U. C., C. P. 1; Provincial Ins. Co. v. Shaw, 19 U. C., Q. B. 533; In re European Bank, 41 L. J. Ch. 501; Burke v. Smith, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 390; Brigham v. Mead, 10 Allen (Mass.) 245; First Nat. Bank v. Gifford, 47 Iowa 575. But see contra, Messersmith v. Sharon Sav. Bank, 96 Pa. St. 440; Ladd v. Cartwright, 7 Oregon 329; Watson v. Eales, 23 Beav. 294; McCready v. Rumsey, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 574; In re Bachman, 12 Nat. Bank Reg. 223.

In England, while the cases do not seem entirely harmonious, in principle, it is held that a transfer, if real and substantial, and without reservation, will be upheld though made with the intention to escape liability. DePass's Case, 4 De G. & J. 544; Ex parte Costello, 2 De G. F. & J. 302; Ex parte Jessop, 27 L. J. Ch. 757; Harrison's Case, L. R., 6 Ch. 286; Colquhoun v. Courtenay, 43 L. J. Ch. 338; 29 L. T., N. S. 877; Chynoweth's Case, 15 Ch. Div. 13; Weston's Case, L. R., 4 Ch. 20. See also Master's Case, L. R., 7 Ch. 292; Hakim's Case, L. R., 7 Ch. 296, n.; Bishop's Case, L. R., 7 Ch. 296, n.; Williams' Case, 1 Ch. Div. 576; King's Case, L. R., 6 Ch. 196; In re Taurine Co., 25 Ch. Div. 118; Moore v. McLaren, 11 U. C., C. P. 534; Battie's Case, 39 L. J. Ch. 391; Bunn's Case, 2 De G. F. & J. 275. Even though it is a gift. Master's Case, L. R., 7 Ch. 292; 41 L. J. Ch. 501, reversing 25 L. T., N. S. 582. And a transfer in trust, where there are no circumstances of fraud, has been held to relieve the beneficial owner from liability, though articles of association provided that the company should not notice trusts. Ex parte Bugg, 2 Dr. & Sm. 452.

A fictitious transfer was sustained, though the circumstances were suspicious, where the parties deposed that no trust was reserved. Battie's Case, 39 L. J. Ch. 391; 18 W. R. 620. See also Sluter's Case, 35 Beav. 391; 35 L. J. Ch. 304. Where the secretary of a company purchased shares and had them transferred to a "dummy," a person of small means, in order to conceal the fact that he (the secretary) was trafficking in shares, the transaction was bona fide. King's Case, L. R., 6 Ch. 196.

Knowledge that the company is on the eve of dissolution will not always prevent the release of the transferrer. In re Taurine Co., 25 Ch. Div. 118.

This species of liability is said to "follow the stock,"¹ and to pass from the transferor to the transferee.² But a bona fide transferee without notice cannot generally be held liable by corporate creditors for the par value of shares originally issued for an overvalued consideration,³ nor is one to whom shares are issued without his knowledge liable, unless he performs some act of ratification.⁴ By

A transfer to escape liability is not always upheld. See Payne's Case, L. R., 9 Eq. 223.

A transfer otherwise bona fide cannot be set aside because the purchaser was paid money to take the stock, or because the certificate contains false representations as to consideration. And the seller cannot refuse to sign the deed because it states a fictitious consideration. Case v. McClellan, 25 L. T., N. S. 753; In re Hafod Lead Mining Co., 35 L. J. Ch. 304. The transferor may be released if the transferee is accepted by the corporation, though the transfer was irregular. Murray v. Bush, L. R., 6 H. L. 37. But not if it has entered a memorial of transfer. Aylesbury R. Co. v. Mount, 4 M. & G. 651; 5 Scott, N. R. 127.

An action lies against a transferor after call, but before it is payable. North Am., etc., Assoc. v. Bentley, 19 L. J., Q. B. 427.

1. Nebraska Constitution, Art. 13, § 4.
2. Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45; Webster v. Upton, 91 U. S. 65; Pullman v. Upton, 96 U. S. 328; Upton v. Hansbrough, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 417; Libby v. Tobey, 82 Me. 397; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 526; Hall v. U. S. Ins. Co., 5 Gill (Md.) 484; Bend v. Susquehanna Bridge, etc., Co., 6 Harr. & J. (Md.) 128; 14 Am. Dec. 261; Merrimac Min. Co. v. Bagley, 14 Mich. 501; Brigham v. Mead, 10 Allen (Mass.) 245; Hartford, etc., R. Co. v. Boorman, 12 Conn. 530; Moore v. Jones, 3 Woods (U. S.) 53; Merrimac Min. Co. v. Levy, 54 Pa. St. 227; 93 Am. Dec. 697; Huddersfield Canal Co. v. Buckley, 7 T. R. 36; Mann v. Currie, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 294; Brown v. Hitchcock, 36 Ohio St. 667; Ladd v. Cartwright, 7 Oregon 329. See also DePass' Case, 4 De G. & J. 544; Cape's Case, 2 De G. M. & G. 562; Briggs v. Waldron, 83 N. Y. 582; Chesley v. Pierce, 32 N. H. 388; Thebus v. Smiley, 110 Ill. 316.

In England, liability passes and attaches to the transferee, though the transferor had not, at the time of transfer, any stock in his name. Weikersheim's Case, L. R., 8 Ch. 831.

A proposed transferee who has acted as the owner of stock will, in equity, be liable, though he has neither executed nor registered the transfer. Shepherd v. Gillespie, 17 L. T., N. S. 280.

The trustee, and not the beneficiary of stock transferred in trust, is liable after transfer. Williams' Case, 1 Ch. Div. 576. But if there is no bona fide trusteeship the beneficiary does not escape liability. Ex parte Cox, 4 De G. J. & S. 53; 33 L. J. Ch. 145. Nor are the trustees liable if transfer was made under the express provision that they should not, except by their own direction, be registered. Gray's Case, 1 Ch. Div. 664. The trustee may compel his beneficiary to indemnify him against calls. Hemming v. Maddick, L. R., 7 Ch. 395.

In Pennsylvania, it has been held that a transferee of stock, subject to future calls, is not personally liable for such unpaid installments if act of incorporation does not require it. Palmer v. Ridge Min. Co., 34 Pa. St. 288.

3. Young v. Erie Iron Co., 65 Mich. 111; 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 626; Erskine v. Loewenstein, 82 Mo. 301; West Nashville, etc., Co. v. Nashville Sav. Bank, 86 Tenn. 252; Stacey v. Little Rock, etc., R. Co., 5 Dill. (U. S.) 348; Brant v. Ehlen, 59 Md. 1; Wintringham v. Rosenthal, 25 Hun (N. Y.) 580; Waterhouse v. Jamieson, L. R., 2 H. L. Sc. 29; Burkinshaw v. Nicholls, L. R., 3 App. Cas. 1004; Douglass v. Ireland, 73 N. Y. 100; Boynton v. Andrews, 63 N. Y. 93; Boynton v. Hatch, 47 N. Y. 225; Schenck v. Andrews, 57 N. Y. 134; Phelan v. Hazard, 5 Dill. (U. S.) 45; Smith v. North American Min. Co., 1 Nev. 423; Goodrich v. Reynolds, 31 Ill. 490; 83 Am. Dec. 240; Spense v. Iowa Valley, etc., Co., 36 Iowa 407. Contra, Cover v. Manaway, 115 Pa. St. 348; 2 Am. St. Rep. 552.

4. Keyser v. Hitz, 133 U. S. 138, holding also that an indorsement by the payee of a check purporting to be drawn in payment of a dividend due the payee as a stockholder, estops him from denying knowledge and ownership.

many authorities it is held that pledgees or holders of stock as collateral are liable to creditors;¹ but in Maryland,² Missouri,³ and New York,⁴ such holders are exempt, and by other cases they are held liable only when their certificates fail to establish their character as pledgees.⁵ The liability of parties to a transfer is frequently regulated by statute.⁶ But while a transfer in good faith may thus relieve a stockholder, an irregular transfer, or one made for the express purpose of escaping liability, will not always have that effect.⁷ Accordingly, transfers without the required registra-

1. Germania Nat. Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628; Pullman v. Upton, 96 U. S. 328; Sleeper v. Goodwin, 67 Wis. 579; Moore v. Jones, 3 Woods (U. S.) 53; Adderly v. Storm, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 624; Crease v. Babcock, 10 Met. (Mass.) 525; Holyoke Bank v. Burnham, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 183; Johnson v. Somerville Dyeing, etc., Co., 15 Gray (Mass.) 216; Melvin v. Lamar Ins. Co., 80 Ill. 446; 22 Am. Rep. 199; Rosevelt v. Brown, 11 N. Y. 148; In re Empire City Bank, 18 N. Y. 199; Grew v. Breed, 10 Met. (Mass.) 569; Aultman's Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 505; Hayne v. Palmer, 13 La. Ann. 240; Magruder v. Colston, 44 Md. 349; 3 Am. Rep. 177; Wheelock v. Kost, 77 Ill. 296; Hale v. Walker, 31 Iowa 344; 7 Am. Rep. 137; Barre First Nat. Bank v. Hingham Mfg. Co., 127 Mass. 563; Dickinson v. Central Nat. Bank, 129 Mass. 279; 37 Am. Rep. 351; Richardson v. Abendroth, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 162; Koons v. First Nat. Bank, 89 Ind. 178; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 176; Price & Brown's Case, L. R., 5 Ch. 294; Royal Bank of India's Case, L. R., 7 Eq. 91; L. R., 4 Ch. 252; Weikersheim's Case, L. R., 8 Ch. 831.

But a transfer by the pledgee terminates his liability, though made for that very purpose. Holyoke Bank v. Burnham, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 183.

2. Matthews v. Albert, 24 Md. 527.

3. Union Sav. Assoc. v. Seligman, 92 Mo. 635; 1 Am. St. Rep. 776; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20.

4. McMahon v. Macy, 51 N. Y. 155; Stover v. Flack, 30 N. Y. 64; 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 162; In re Reciprocity Bank, 22 N. Y. 17; Guest v. Worcester, etc., R. Co., L. R., 4 C. P. 9.

5. Davis v. Essex Baptist Soc., 44 Conn. 582; Barre First Nat. Bank v. Hingham Mfg. Co., 127 Mass. 563.

6. See the statutory provisions of the various states.

7. In England it is held, though seemingly in conflict with the English cases cited above, that a transfer will not be supported where facts indicate that it was colorable and made with reservation and to escape liability. Ex parte Lund, 27 Beav. 465; 28 L. J. Ch. 628; Hyam's Case, 1 De G. F. & J. 75; 29 L. J. Ch. 243; Ex parte Costello, 2 De G. F. & J. 302; 30 L. J. Ch. 113; Ex parte Alexander, 9 W. R. 410; 3 L. T., N. S. 883. And transfer to one without means has been held not in good faith. Ex parte Hatton, 31 L. J. Ch. 340; 10 W. R. 313; Ex parte Budd, 3 De G. F. & J. 297; 30 Beav. 143.

A registered transfer to a trustee to escape liability is void, though the deed of settlement makes the registered owner the beneficial one. Chinnock's Case, 1 Johns. 714; 8 W. R. 255.

Where the deed of transfer was never sent to the transferee, though lodged with the company four days before suspension, and it was the practice of the company to require execution by the transferee, the transferrer was held as a contributory. Marino's Case, L. R., 2 Ch. 596; Ex parte Musgrave, L. R., 5 Eq. 193. So failure to register a transfer, leaves the transferrer still liable. Head's Case, L. R., 3 Eq. 84; Evans v. Woods, L. R., 5 Eq. 9. But not if due to default of company. Ex parte Fyfe, L. R., 4 Ch. 768; In re Manchester & Oldham Bank, 54 L. J. Ch. 926.

A transfer, when calls are unpaid, if subsequently canceled, is invalid, though passed by the board of directors. Anderson's Case, L. R., 8 Eq. 509. And the transferrer will be liable if the transfer was made after the day when the call should properly have been issued, though it was postponed by the directors. Gilbert's Case, L. R., 5 Ch. 559.

Where a mortgagee of stock directs a transfer to his servant to escape liability, but is at the time subject to none, the servant holds the stock in trust. Colquhoun v. Courtenay, 43 L. J. Ch. 338. Neglect of formalities is held to vitiate tion,¹ or to irresponsible parties, and those incompetent to hold stock, have been held to leave the transferrer in statu quo.² The rule regarding registration, however, is sometimes relaxed,³ as in case of omission through the failure of the company,⁴ where the transferee has done all in his power to complete the transfer,⁵ or where registration is not required.⁶ In England, a transfer to the company will not relieve the stockholder,⁷ and in the United ate transfer. Cape's Case, 3 De G. M. & G. 272; Ex parte Walker, L. R., 2 Eq. 554; Heritage's Case, L. R., 9 Eq. 5.

1. Unregistered Transfer Will Not Release.—Shellington v. Howland, 53 N. Y. 376; Worrall v. Judson, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 210; Louisiana Ins. Co. v. Gordon, 8 La. 174; Dane v. Young, 61 Me. 160; Fowler v. Ludwig, 34 Me. 455; Davis v. Essex Baptist Soc., 44 Conn. 582; Kellogg v. Stockwell, 75 Ill. 68; Brown's N. B. Cas. 147; London, etc., R. Co. v. Fairclough, 2 M. & G. 674; McEwen v. West London Wharves, etc., Co., L. R., 6 Ch. 655; Midland, etc., Co. v. Gordon, 16 M. & W. 804; Sayles v. Blanc, 19 L. J., Q. B. 19; 6 Eng. Ry. Cas. 79. See also Cutting v. Damerel, 23 Hun (N. Y.) 339.

2. Transfers to Irresponsible Parties.—Bowden v. Johnson, 107 U. S. 251; Bowden v. Santos, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 158; Provident Sav. Inst. v. Jackson Place Skating, etc., Rink, 52 Mo. 557; McClaren v. Franciscus, 43 Mo. 452; Rider v. Morrison, 54 Md. 429; Central Agr., etc., Assoc. v. Alabama Gold L. Ins. Co., 70 Ala. 120; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 78; Mandion v. Fireman's Ins. Co., 11 Rob. (La.) 177; Nathan v. Whitlock, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 152; Paine v. Stewart, 33 Conn. 517; Castleman v. Holmes, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 1; Everhart v. Westchester, etc., R. Co., 28 Pa. St. 339; Veiller v. Brown, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 571; Aultman's Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 505; Arthur v. Midland R. Co., 3 Kay & J. 204; Ex parte Cox, 4 De G. J. & S. 53; Pugh & Sharman's Case, L. R., 13 Eq. 566. In Dauchy v. Brown, 24 Vt. 210, Isham, J., said: "The suggestion which has been made against this construction of the act, that a stockholder may fraudulently dispose of his stock to avoid liability, can have no controlling influence, for it has been too frequently decided to be considered as an open question, that such transfers as against creditors are absolutely void, that, as to them, they are to be considered still as members, and that an execution can be levied upon their personal and real estate, as if no transfer had been made. Such was the decision in Marcy v. Clark, 17 Mass. 330; Middletown Bank v. McGill, 5 Conn. 70; and in Roman v. Fry, 5 J. J. Marsh (Ky.) 634."

The assignment to a fictitious person is a mere nullity. It transfers no right, simply because there is no real person to receive it on its passing from the original proprietor. Muskingum Valley Turnpike Co. v. Ward, 13 Ohio 127; 42 Am. Dec. 191.

3. Wehrman v. Reakert, 1 Cin. (Ohio) 230.

4. Isham v. Buckingham, 49 N. Y. 216; Cutting v. Damerel, 88 N. Y. 410; Chambersburg Ins. Co. v. Smith, 11 Pa. St. 120; Murray v. Bush, L. R., 6 H. L. 37; Upton v. Burnham, 3 Biss. (U. S.) 431; Fyfe's Case, L. R., 4 Ch. 768; Lowe's Case, L. R., 9 Eq. 589; Nation's Case, L. R., 3 Eq. 77.

5. Whitney v. Butler, 118 U. S. 655; Ex parte Henderson, 19 Beav. 107; Shortridge v. Bosanquet, 16 Beav. 84, overruling Bosanquet v. Shortridge, 4 Exch. 699; White's Case, L. R., 3 Eq. 86. But see contra, In re Bachman, 12 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 223; Johnson v. Lafin, 5 Dill. (U. S.) 65; Cartmell's Case, L. R., 9 Ch. 691; Heritage's Case, L. R., 9 Eq. 5; Midland, etc., R. Co. v. Gordon, 16 M. & W. 804; Ex parte Hall, 5 Railw. Cas. 624; In re Anglo Indian, etc., Inst., Smith's Case, 7 Ry. & Corp. Law J. 57.

In England, failure of directors to assent will prevent the liability from divesting, though the stockholder has used every effort to transfer. Chartre's Case, 1 De G. & Sm. 581.

The transferee cannot claim exemption by reason of the company's act. Ex parte Holmes, 15 W. R. 188; nor by raising technical objections. Royal Bank of India's Case, L. R., 7 Eq. 91; Burnes v. Pennell, 2 H. L. Cas. 497.

6. Sayles v. Bates, 15 R. I. 342. See also Stock—Registration, vol. 23, p. 582.

7. Transfer to Corporation.—Ex parte Morgan, 1 Macn. & G. 225; Lawe's Case, 1 De G. M. & G. 421; 21 L. J., N. S. Ch. 688; Bennett's Case, 5 De G. M.

States, while bona fide transfers to the corporation are generally sustained, they will not be if the concern is insolvent and the effect will be to imperil the security of corporate creditors.¹

b. UPON STATUTORY LIABILITY.—Three distinct views have been adopted by the courts as to the time of the accrual of statutory liability and the effect of transfer thereon. Allowance must, of course, be made for the variation in form and language of the statutes imposing the liability, in accounting for the divergence of judicial interpretation. According to one view, those only are liable who were stockholders when the debt was contracted,² and while transfer will release them from debts subsequently incurred,³ it will not have that effect upon those contracted during their membership;⁴ again, the doctrine is announced that those who

& G. 284; Ex parte Eyre, 31 Beav. 177; Ex parte Benham, 12 L. T., N. S. 224; Walker's Case, L. R., 6 Eq. 30; Ex parte Grady, 1 De G. J. & S. 488; Ex parte Cross, 38 L. J. Ch. 583. But semble, if the transferrer is not aware that the purchase is for the company, he is not liable. Hollway's Case, 1 De G. & Sm. 777; nor where the company is empowered to deal in its own shares. Ex parte Lane, 1 De G. J. & S. 504. But such power cannot be delegated. Cartmell's Case, L. R., 9 Ch. 691. A transfer to a director is valid, though obtained by a threat of applying for a winding-up order. Ex parte Reeve, 7 L. T., N. S. 267.

One who transferred to the company shares which he held as security was held as a contributory. Addison's Case, L. R., 5 Ch. 294.

1. Crandall v. Lincoln, 52 Conn. 73; 52 Am. Rep. 560; Gillet v. Moody, 3 N. Y. 479; Fraser v. Ritchie, 8 Ill. App. 554; Currier v. Lebanon Slate Co., 56 N. H. 262; Bell's Appeal, 115 Pa. St. 88; 2 Am. St. Rep. 532; Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27; 17 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71; Borland v. Haven, 37 Fed. Rep. 394. Compare Abeles v. Cochran, 22 Kan. 405; 31 Am. Rep. 194; Nathan v. Whitlock, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 152. But see Morgan v. Lewis, 46 Ohio St. 1.

A receiver cannot sue a stockholder for unpaid subscriptions to stock surrendered in pursuance of a valid agreement with the corporation. Republic L. Ins. Co. v. Swigert (Ill. 1890), 32 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 555. See Stock—Reduction, vol. 23, p. 582.

2. Cases Holding Stockholders Liable Only for Debts Incurred During Their Membership.—Moss v. Oakley, 2 Hill (N. Y.) 269; Judson v. Rossie Ga- lena Co., 9 Paige (N. Y.) 598; 38 Am. Dec. 569; Harger v. McCullough, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 119; Tracy v. Yates, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 152; Phillips v. Therasson, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 141; Williams v. Hanna, 40 Ind. 535; Chesley v. Pierce, 32 N. H. 388; Larabee v. Baldwin, 35 Cal. 155; Norris v. Johnson, 34 Md. 485; Norris v. Wrenschall, 34 Md. 492; Fleeson v. Savage, Silver Min. Co., 3 Nev. 157; Windham Prov. Sav. Inst. v. Sprague, 43 Vt. 502; Freeland v. McCullough, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 412; 43 Am. Dec. 685; McCullough v. Moss, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 567; Sayles v. Bates, 15 R. I. 342; Root v. Sinnock, 120 Ill. 350; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 317; 60 Am. Rep. 558. See also Story v. Furman, 25 N. Y. 215; Shalor, etc., Quarry Co. v. Bliss, 27 N. Y. 298; Davis v. Weed, 44 Conn. 569; Weber v. Fickey, 47 Md. 196; Devoss v. Gray, 22 Ohio St. 159; Young v. New York, etc., Steamship Co., 10 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 229; 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 69; Chaffin v. Cummings; 37 Me. 76; Libby v. Tobey, 82 Me. 397; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 526; Bordman v. Osborn, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 295; Handrahan v. Cheshire Iron Works, 4 Allen (Mass.) 396; Mason v. Cheshire Iron Works, 4 Allen (Mass.) 398; Milliken v. Whitehouse, 49 Me. 527; Wheeler v. Faurot, 37 Ohio St. 26.

In Holyoke Bank v. Burnham, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 183, it was held that a stockholder was liable for debts contracted before, but payable after his membership ceased.

3. Matthews v. Albert, 24 Md. 527; Tucker v. Gilman, 121 N. Y. 189. Compare cases in preceding note.

4. Wehrman v. Reakirt, 1 Cin. (Ohio) 230. Compare Brown v. Hitchcock, 36 Ohio St. 667.

are stockholders when the action to enforce liability is commenced, are alone subject thereto;¹ while by another class of cases, usually construing provisions imposing liability upon "all stockholders," parties are held liable who owned stock either when the debt was contracted or when the action was commenced.² But even by this theory, stockholders cannot be held for debts contracted before they acquired membership,³ though subsequent transfer will not relieve them.⁴ Where registration is required, liability may not be removed by transfer until the transfer has been registered,⁵ whichever of the preceding theories of liability is adopted.

3. Enforcement—a. JUDGMENT AGAINST CORPORATION.—It is the general rule, in enforcing the stockholders' liability, whether ordinary or statutory, that the creditor must have obtained a

1. Stockholders at Commencement of Action Held Liable.—Middletown Bank v. Magill, 5 Conn. 28; Deming v. Bull, 10 Conn. 409; Cleveland v. Burnham, 55 Wis. 598; Child v. Coffin, 17 Mass. 64; Ripley v. Sampson, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 371; Marcy v. Clark, 17 Mass. 330; McClaren v. Franciscus, 43 Mo. 452; Skrainka v. Allen, 76 Mo. 384; Longley v. Little, 26 Me. 162.

This is the view favored by Mr. Morawetz, in his work on Corporations, where he says, § 888: "The right given by law to transfer shares in a corporation is held to include, by implication, a right to effect a complete novation of the contract of the holder with the other shareholders. The transferee is discharged from all liability to contribute to the company's capital, either for the benefit of the corporation, or for the benefit of creditors, and the transferee is rendered liable in his place. There is no reason why the right of transfer should not likewise be held to include a right to effect a novation of a special individual liability imposed upon the stockholders for the security of creditors alone. If it were held that each creditor of a corporation may pursue those particular persons who happened to be shareholders when the indebtedness arose, whether he has continued to be a shareholder or not, it would often become a matter of extreme difficulty, amounting to a practical impossibility, to adjust the rights of the past and present shareholders; and there would be no object to be gained by such a rule. The substantial rights of creditors are protected by the rule which invalidates a transfer as to creditors, unless a solvent transferee is substituted in place of the transferrer; moreover, it cannot fairly be claimed that a person dealing with a corporation organized on the usual plan in the United States deals on the faith of the security offered by the individuals who happen to be shareholders at the time."

2. "All Stockholders."—Curtis v. Harlow, 12 Met. (Mass.) 3; Holyoke Bank v. Burnham, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 183; Johnson v. Somerville Dyeing, etc., Co., 15 Gray (Mass.) 216; Brown v. Hitchcock, 36 Ohio St. 667; Wheeler v. Faurot, 37 Ohio St. 26; Bonewitz v. Van Wert County Bank, 41 Ohio St. 78; 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 75; Mason v. Alexander, 44 Ohio St. 318; Reeder v. Maranda, 66 Ind. 485; Sayles v. Bates, 15 R. I. 342; Freeland v. McCullough, 1 Den. (N.Y.) 414; 43 Am. Dec. 685; Root v. Sinnock, 120 Ill. 350; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 317; 60 Am. Rep. 558.

3. Holyoke Bank v. Burnham, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 183; Sayles v. Bates, 15 R. I. 342; note to Prince v. Lynch, 38 Cal. 528; 99 Am. Dec. 434.

4. Brown v. Hitchcock, 36 Ohio St. 667; Mason v. Alexander, 44 Ohio St. 318; Wehrman v. Reakirt, 1 Cin. (Ohio) 237.

5. Brown v. Hitchcock, 36 Ohio St. 667; Harpold v. Stobart, 46 Ohio St. 397; 15 Am. St. Rep. 618; Irons v. Manufacturer's Nat. Bank, 27 Fed. Rep. 591; Reynell v. Lewis, 15 M. & W. 517; Landman v. Entwistle, 7 Exch. 632; Forrester v. Bell, 10 I. R., C. L., 555; Higgins v. Hopkins, 3 Ex. 163; Bailey v. Macauley, 13 Q. B. 814; 66 E. C. L. 814; Newton v. Belcher, 12 Q. B. 921; 64 E. C. L. 919; Carrick's Case, 1 Sim. N. S. 505; Ex parte Cottle, 2 Macn. & G. 185; Roberts' Case, 2 judgment against the corporation with a return of nulla bona before he may sue the stockholder.¹ In *New Hampshire*² and *Florida*³ this rule is abrogated by statute, and the same was formerly true in California.⁴ In Wisconsin the statute has been construed as not requiring judgment against the corporation,⁵ and the same has been held of ditch companies in Indiana.⁶ In South Carolina, a judgment against the corporation has been held unnecessary to enforce a charter liability of five per cent. on each share.⁷ In Nebraska, actions directly against the stockholders have been sanctioned by usage, though the question has not yet been squarely decided.⁸ So, generally, the rule first stated does.

Mac. & G. 192; Wood v. Argyll, 6 M. & G. 928; Burnside v. Dayrell, 3 Exch. 224; Norris v. Cottle, 2 H. L. Cas. 647.

1. Remedy Against Corporation Must be First Exhausted.—Dauchy v. Brown, 24 Vt. 209; Harper v. Union Mfg. Co., 100 Ill. 225; First Nat. Bank v. Greene, 64 Iowa 445; Wright v. McCormack, 17 Ohio St. 86; Stewart v. Lay, 45 Iowa 604; Hoyt v. Bunker (Kan. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 126; Toucey v. Bowen, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 81; Lane v. Harris, 16 Ga. 217; Drinkwater v. Portland Marine R. Co., 18 Me. 35; Cambridge Waterworks v. Somerville Dyeing, etc., Co., 4 Allen (Mass.) 239; Patterson v. Wyomissing Mfg. Co., 40 Pa. St. 117; Hatch v. Burroughs, 1 Woods (U. S.) 439; Means' Appeal, 85 Pa. St. 75; Bayliss v. Swift, 40 Iowa 648; McClaren v. Franciscus, 43 Mo. 452; Wehrman v. Reakirt, 1 Cin. (Ohio) 230; Jackson v. Meek, 87 Tenn. 69; 10 Am. St. Rep. 620; Nimick v. Mingo Iron Works Co., 25 W. Va. 184; Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 636; Walser v. Seligman, 21 Blatchf. (U. S.) 130; Handy v. Draper, 89 N. Y. 334; Shellington v. Howland, 53 N. Y. 371; Freeland v. McCullough, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 414; 43 Am. Dec. 685; Andrew v. Vanderbilt, 37 Hun (N. Y.) 468; Lindsley v. Simonds, 2 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 69; New England Com. Bank v. Newport Steam Factory, 6 R. I. 154; 75 Am. Dec. 688; Wetherbee v. Baker, 35 N. J. Eq. 501; Munger v. Jacobson, 99 Ill. 349; Cutright v. Stanford, 81 Ill. 240; Lane v. Harris, 16 Ga. 217; Thornton v. Lane, 11 Ga. 459; Blake v. Hinkle, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 218; Remington v. Samana Bay Co., 140 Mass. 494; 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 97; Priest v. Essex Hat Mfg. Co., 115 Mass. 380; Perkins v. Church, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 84; Baxter v. Moses, 77 Me. 465; 52 Am. Rep. 783; Cleveland v. Burnham, 55 Wis. 598; Bank of U. S. v. Dallam, 4 Dana (Ky.) 574; Bartlett v. Pentland, 1 B. & Ad. 704; 20 E. C. L. 475; Clowes v. Brettell, 10 M. & W. 506; Winfield v. Barton, 2 Dowl. N. S. 355; Wingfield v. Peel, 12 L. J. Q. B. 102. See also Stone v. Wiggins, 5 Met. (Mass.) 316; Stedman v. Eveleth, 6 Met. (Mass.) 114; Leland v. Marsh, 16 Mass. 389; Marcy v. Clark, 17 Mass. 330. See also Bayliss v. Swift, 40 Iowa 648; Head v. Daniels, 38 Kan. 1; Peckham v. Van Wagenen, 83 N. Y. 40; 38 Am. Rep. 392. Compare Hospes v. Northwestern, etc., Mfg. Co. (Minn. 1892), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 206.

But a return of nulla bona is unnecessary in any other county than that where the principal office of the corporation is located, though it may have property in other counties. Ripley v. Evans, 87 Mich. 217.

2. Connecticut River Sav. Bank v. Fiske, 60 N. H. 363.

3. Gibbs v. Davis, 27 Fla. 531.

4. Morrow v. San Francisco Superior Court, 64 Cal. 383. Compare Davidson v. Rankin, 34 Cal. 503; Young v. Rosenbaum, 39 Cal. 646.

5. Sleeper v. Goodwin, 67 Wis. 579; Coleman v. White, 14 Wis. 700; 80 Am. Dec. 797.

6. Marion Tp., etc., Co. v. Norris, 37 Ind. 424; Shafer v. Moriarty, 46 Ind. 9.

7. Bird v. Calvert, 22 S. Car. 292, where the court says: "The obligation in one sense may possibly be termed collateral, but we cannot see that in any sense it is secondary and enforceable only after judgment and a return of nulla bona against the corporation."

8. In the following cases, Abbott v. Omaha Smelting Co., 4 Neb. 416; White v. Blum, 4 Neb. 555; Smith v. Steele, 8 Neb. 115; Howell v. Roberts, 29 Neb. 483.

not apply to a bankrupt, dissolved, or extinct corporation.¹ The return of nulla bona should be made in the state of the corporation's domicile.² When obtained, the judgment against the corporation is generally,³ though not always,⁴ conclusive evidence of the indebtedness, in a subsequent action against the stockholder. Under the Minnesota statute the liability of stockholders for corporate debts may be enforced upon the application of any creditor

1. Corporation Insolvent or Extinct.—Chamberlin v. Bromberg, 83 Ala. 576; McDonnell v. Alabama Gold L. Ins. Co., 85 Ala. 401; Paine v. Stewart, 33 Conn. 516; Gibbs v. Davis, 27 Fla. 531; Kimbro v. Bank of Fulton, 49 Ga. 419; Patterson v. Lynde, 112 Ill. 196; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 195; First Nat. Bank v. Greene, 64 Iowa 445; Stark v. Burke, 9 La. Ann. 341; Knight v. Frost, 14 Mo. App. 331; Dryden v. Kellogg, 2 Mo. App. 87; State Sav. Assoc. v. Kellogg, 52 Mo. 583; Remington v. Samana Bay Co., 140 Mass. 494; 12 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 97; Chamberlain v. Huguenot Mfg. Co., 118 Mass. 532; Shellington v. Howland, 53 N. Y. 371; Ansonia Brass, etc., Co. v. New Lamp Chimney Co., 53 N. Y. 123; 13 Am. Rep. 476; Kincaid v. Dwinelle, 59 N. Y. 548; Walton v. Coe, 110 N. Y. 109; Hardman v. Sage, 124 N. Y. 25; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 145; Camden v. Doremus, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 515; Lovett v. Cornwell, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 369; People v. Bartlett, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 570; Loomis v. Tift, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 541; Walser v. Seligman, 21 Blatchf. (U. S.) 130; Hollingshead v. Woodward, 35 Hun (N. Y.) 410; Penniman v. Briggs, 1 Hopk. (N. Y.) 300; Slee v. Bloom, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 456; 10 Am. Dec. 273; Bank of Poughkeepsie v. Ibbotson, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 479; Richards v. Beach, 5 N. Y. Supp. 574; Young v. Brice, 18 N. Y. St. Rep. 945; Hodges v. Silver Hill Min. Co., 9 Oregon 200; Morgan v. Lewis, 46 Ohio St. 1; Barrick v. Gifford, 47 Ohio St. 180; 21 Am. St. Rep. 798; Bronson v. Schneider (Ohio 1892), 33 N. E. Rep. 233; Moses v. Oconee Bank, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 398; Terry v. Tubman, 92 U. S. 156; Flash v. Conn., 109 U. S. 371; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 28; Reynolds v. Douglass, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 497; Toucey v. Bowen, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 81; Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628. See also Cuykendall v. Douglas, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 577.

But the mere fact that corporate property is insufficient to meet liabilities will not take a case out of the rule. Younglove v. Kelly Island Lime Co. (Ohio, 1892), 33 N. E. Rep. 234.

2. Rocky Mt. Nat. Bank v. Bliss, 89 N. Y. 338; Dean v. Mace, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 391; Brice v. Munro, 5 Can. L. T. 130; Young v. Farewell (Ill. 1891), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 158; Patterson v. Lynde, 112 Ill. 196; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 195; Shickle v. Watts, 94 Mo. 410. Compare Jessup v. Carnegie, 80 N. Y. 441; 36 Am. Rep. 643.

3. Patterson v. Lynde, 112 Ill. 196; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 195; Steere v. Hoagland, 39 Ill. 264; McLure v. Benceni, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 513. See also Conklin v. Furman, 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 484; 8 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 161; Miller v. White, 59 Barb. (N. Y.) 434; 10 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 385; Stephens v. Fox, 83 N. Y. 313. A judgment against a corporation does not extinguish, suspend, or merge the liability of the stockholders; such liability is primary, and not conditional or contingent, and is unaffected by the suspension of the remedy against the corporation. Young v. Rosenbaum, 39 Cal. 646.

Judgment may be entered against defendants individually who are described as a certain company under a complaint, though they are not members of it, if the jury finds they are liable individually. Comanche Min. Co. v. Rumley, 1 Mont. 201.

4. Crandall v. Lincoln, 52 Conn. 73; 52 Am. Rep. 560; Johnson v. Lafin, 5 Dill. (U. S.) 65; Daniell's Case, 22 Beav. 43; Munt's Case, 22 Beav. 55; Bennett's Case, 5 De G. M. & G. 284; In re Vale of North & South Wales Brewery Co., 3 De G. & Sm. 244; Richmond's Case, 3 De G. & S. 96; Lawe's Case, 1 De G. M. & G. 421; In re Royal British Bank, 3 De G. & J. 387.

A stockholder has all the rights as to plea and amendments, and all defenses to the merits, which he would have in an ordinary action on a contract; and is not concluded by a judgment against the corporation upon any issue material to his defense. Heard v. Sibby, 52 Ga. 310.

who is a party to an action against the corporation, though the judgment creditor who instituted such action did not demand that relief.¹ The liability may, after the death of a stockholder, be enforced against his estate.²

b. STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS — (1) When It Begins to Run—

(a) Where Execution Against the Company Must be Returned Unsatisfied.—In some states it is provided by statute that a return of nulla bona against the corporation must be made before proceedings against the stockholders will lie. In others the same requirement exists by virtue of judicial construction. In these jurisdictions it is obvious that the cause of action does not normally arise, and, hence, that the statute does not begin to run until such a return of the execution.³ Nevertheless, where such preliminary proceedings would regularly be required, but are rendered unnecessary by the insolvency of the corporation, that condition marks the accrual of the cause of action against the stockholder, and from that time the statute begins to run.⁴ But insolvency such as will set the statute running must be more than mere inability of the corporation to pay its debts; some legal proceeding is necessary by which corporate property has been applied to such payment.⁵

(b.) Where Stockholders May be Sued Immediately and Primarily.—In those states where the return of an execution is not required before suing a stockholder, the right of action, of course, accrues upon the maturity of a corporate debt. In California stockholders are

1. Arthur v. Willius, 44 Minn. 409.

2. Nolan v. Hazen, 44 Minn. 478.

3. In Younglove v. Kelly Island Lime Co. (Ohio, 1892), 33 N. E. Rep. 234, the court said: "As a general rule the creditor's right of action against the stockholders of a corporation is not complete, so as to set the Statute of Limitations running, until judgment has been recovered against the corporation, and execution has been returned without satisfaction. The reason is, the corporate property is the primary fund for the payment of the debts of the corporation, and the statutory liability of the stockholders a security which can be resorted to only after the creditor's remedy against the corporation has been exhausted."

In Handy v. Draper, 89 N. Y. 336, Andrews, C. J., said: "The claim that the last clause of the section applies only to actions against persons who have ceased to be stockholders, makes the provision in the first part of the section which exempts an existing stockholder from liability, unless a suit 'for the collection of the debt shall be brought against such company within one year after the debt shall become due,' unnecessary and useless. No reason can be perceived for the requirement that a suit shall be first brought against the company as a condition of bringing an action against a stockholder, unless it was also intended that the remedy against the company, by the issuing of a return of an execution should be first exhausted." See also Kincaid v. Dwinelle, 59 N. Y. 548; Pringle v. Woolworth, 90 N. Y. 511; Lindsley v. Simonds, 2 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 69; Dean v. Mace, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 391; Merritt v. Reid, 13 N. Y. Wkly. Dig. 453; Longley v. Little, 26 Me. 162; State v. Board of R. Com'rs, 41 N. J. L. 249; Barrick v. Gifford, 47 Ohio St. 180; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 484; 21 Am. St. Rep. 798.

4. Bronson v. Schneider (Ohio, 1892), 33 N. E. Rep. 233; Younglove v. Kelly Island Lime Co. (Ohio, 1892), 33 N. E. Rep. 234; Barrick v. Gifford, 47 Ohio St. 180; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 484; 21 Am. St. Rep. 798; Morgan v. Lewis, 46 Ohio St. 1.

5. Bronson v. Schneider (Ohio, 1892), 33 N. E. Rep. 233; Younglove v. Kelly Island Lime Co. (Ohio, 1892), 33 N. E. Rep. 234.

liable as principals, not as sureties,¹ and the liability accrues both against them and the corporation simultaneously.² The liability of stockholders is not affected by suspension of the remedy against the corporation,³ and judgment against the latter does not extend the time for bringing suit against the stockholder, nor create a new liability.⁴

(2) Period of the Limitation.—Statutes imposing a personal liability upon stockholders occasionally provide a limit within which actions may be brought to enforce such liability.⁵ More frequently, however, they are silent on this point and the question then arises, What section of the general Statute of Limitations will govern the action? Where the liability imposed is contractual in its nature, it is the general rule that actions to enforce it are barred only in the same time as other suits grounded upon contracts.⁶ In Nebraska it is held that an action to enforce a stockholder's liability for failure to publish annual notice of corporate debts, is governed by that section of the Statute of Limitations which applies to the enforcement of contracts not in writing.⁷ Where, however, the liability imposed is penal, that shorter period of the statute pertaining to penalties will govern.⁸ The Federal courts, in suits to enforce a stockholder's statutory liability, apply the Statute of Limitations of the state which creates the corporation and imposes the liability.⁹ So an action by the receiver of a national bank for assessments is governed by the Statute of Limitations of the state where the bank is located.¹⁰ Whether the liability is sought to be enforced at law or in equity, the same section of the Statute of Limitations is usually held to govern.¹¹

1. Hyman v. Coleman, 82 Cal. 650.
2. Davidson v. Rankin, 34 Cal. 503; Mitchell v. Beckman, 64 Cal. 117; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 40.
3. Young v. Rosenbaum, 39 Cal. 646.
4. Larrabee v. Baldwin, 35 Cal. 168; Stilphen v. Ware, 45 Cal. 110.
5. Baker v. Backus, 32 Ill. 79; Shellington v. Howland, 53 N. Y. 371, construing the New York Manufacturing Corporation Act of 1848; Handy v. Draper, 89 N. Y. 334; Hollingshead v. Woodward, 107 N. Y. 96; King v. Duncan, 38 Hun (N. Y.) 461; Paine v. Stewart, 33 Conn. 516.
6. Green v. Beckman, 59 Cal. 545; Moore v. Boyd, 74 Cal. 167; Baker v. Atlas Bank, 9 Met. (Mass.) 982; Com. v. Cochituate Bank, 3 Allen (Mass.) 42; Corning v. McCullough, 1 N. Y. 47; 49 Am. Dec. 287; Freeland v. McCulloch, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 422; 43 Am. Dec. 685; Wiles v. Suydam, 64 N. Y. 173; Knox v. Baldwin, 80 N. Y. 610; Mappier v. Mortimer, 11 Abb. Pr. (N. S. (N. Y.)) 455; Lewis v. Ryder, 13

Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 1; Lindsley v. Simmonds, 2 Abb. Pr., N. S. (N. Y.) 69; Merchants, etc., Co. v. Bliss, 21 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 366; Cuykendall v. Douglas, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 577; Hawkins v. Iron Valley Furnace Co., 40 Ohio St. 507; Carrol v. Green, 92 U. S. 509; Terry v. McLure, 103 U. S. 442.

7. Howell v. Roberts, 29 Neb. 483; Coy v. Jones, 30 Neb. 798.

8. Gridley v. Barnes, 103 Ill. 211; Diversy v. Smith, 103 Ill. 378; Cable v. McCune, 26 Mo. 380; 72 Am. Dec. 214. Compare Duckworth v. Roach, 81 N. Y. 49; Lawler v. Burt, 7 Ohio St. 341.

9. Andrews v. Bacon, 38 Fed. Rep. 777; following Fourth Nat. Bank v. Francklyn, 120 U. S. 747; 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 615; Price v. Yates, 7 W. N. C. (Pa.) 51. Compare Glenn v. Liggett, 135 U. S. 548.

10. Butler v. Poole, 44 Fed. Rep. 586.

11. Baker v. Atlas Bank, 9 Met. (Mass.) 182; Com. v. Cochituate Bank, 3 Allen (Mass.) 42; Bank of Pough-

c. ENFORCEMENT OF STATUTORY LIABILITY IN FOREIGN JURISDICTIONS—(1) In General.—The statutory liability of stockholders is governed entirely by the lex domicilii of the corporation.¹ But the statutes of a state do not operate extra-territorially proprio vigore,² and the service of process outside a state will not confer jurisdiction on its courts to enforce a liability imposed by its statutes.³ Moreover, it is said that the enforcement of such statutes in another jurisdiction must depend on several considerations: As whether any wrong or injury will be done to the citizens of the state in which they are sought to be enforced, whether the policy of its own laws will be contravened or impaired, and whether its courts are capable of doing complete justice to those liable to be affected by their decrees.⁴ Probably a more important consideration than any of those above enumerated, is whether the liability imposed by the statute is penal or contractual. The distinction between these two species of liability is elsewhere discussed,⁵ but it is of special importance in this connection because it is the rule that a statute imposing a merely penal liability has no extra-territorial force.⁶ With regard to the keepsie v. Ibbotson, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 473; Lindsay v. Hyatt, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 104; Van Hook v. Whitlock, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 409; Carrol v. Green, 92 U. S. 509; Terry v. McLure, 103 U. S. 442.

1. In First Nat. Bank v. Gustin, etc., Min. Co., 42 Minn. 327; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 122, the court, by Mitchell, J., said: "It is elementary law that, where a person becomes a stockholder in a corporation organized under the laws of a foreign state, he must be held to contract with reference to all the laws of the state under which the corporation is organized and which enter into its constitution; and the extent of his individual liability as a shareholder to the creditors of the company must be determined by the laws of that state, not because such laws are in force in this state, but because he has voluntarily agreed to the terms of the company's constitution."

In Payson v. Withers, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 278, it is said: "It will not do when a citizen of a state subscribes to the capital stock of a foreign corporation, to say he was ignorant of the terms of the act which created that corporation. He is presumed to know what those terms are. They are created by the law of another state, and he, for the purpose of assuming his obligation, in a certain sense, goes into another state and casts off for the time the vesture which his own state throws around him, and puts on that of the other state, and is bound by the obligations which the legislature of that state has imposed upon the corporation, and the privileges which it has granted, and the conditions and terms of the grant." See also Second Nat. Bank v. Hall, 35 Ohio St. 159; Seymour v. Sturgess, 26 N. Y. 134; Merrick v. Van Sanvoord, 34 N. Y. 208; Jessup v. Carnegie, 80 N. Y. 441; 36 Am. Rep. 643; McDonough v. Phelps, 15 How. Fr. (N. Y.) 372; Ex parte Van Riper, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 614; Hill v. Beach, 12 N. J. Eq. 31; Bateman v. Service, L. R., 6 App. Cas. 386; Drinkwater v. Portland Marine R. Co., 18 Me. 35; Aultman's Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 505.

2. New Haven Nail Co. v. Linden Spring Co., 142 Mass. 349; 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71.

3. Wilson v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. (Mo. 1891), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 290; Wilson v. Seligman, 36 Fed. Rep. 154.

4. By Devens, J., in New Haven Nail Co. v. Linden Spring Co., 142 Mass. 349; 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71.

5. See supra, this title, Additional or Statutory Liability.

6. Providence Steam Engine Co. v. Hubbard, 101 U. S. 188. In this case a statute of Connecticut imposed upon corporate officers a liability for failure to file with the town clerk a certificate showing the financial condition of the company. The court in construing this said: "Repeated instances have other species of liability—the contractual—there is a diversity of opinion among the courts of last resort in the United States as to whether a statute imposing it operates outside the state where it has been enacted.

(2) Jurisdictions Where Liability Imposed by a Foreign Statute Will be Enforced.—The Federal courts hold that such a statute may be enforced in other states.¹ In Minnesota, the rule is announced that the "liability may be enforced by creditors wherever they can obtain jurisdiction of the necessary occurred where suit was brought in one state to enforce the statute liability for the debts of a corporation created by the legislature of another state, in all which it is held that the statute is penal, and that it can only be enforced in the state where the statute was passed. Halsey v. McLean, 12 Allen (Mass.) 438; 90 Am. Dec. 157; Derrickson v. Smith, 27 N. J. L. 166; Sturges v. Burton, 8 Ohio St. 215; 12 Am. Dec. 582; First Nat. Bank v. Price, 33 Md. 387; 3 Am. Rep. 204; Irvine v. McKeon, 23 Cal. 472. Corresponding decisions have been made in other courts, and to such an extent as to justify the remark that the rule is universal. Bird v. Hayden, 1 Robt. (N. Y.) 383; Moies v. Sprague, 9 R. I. 541."

In Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 28, the court, by Woods, J., said: "It is well settled, and is not denied by plaintiff's counsel, that the penal laws of one state can have no operation in another. They are strictly local and affect nothing more than they can reach. The Antelope, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 66; Scoville v. Canfield, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 338; Western Transp., etc., Co. v. Kilderhouse, 87 N. Y. 430; Lemmon v. People, 20 N. Y. 562; Henry v. Sargeant, 13 N. H. 321; 40 Am. Dec. 146; Story, Conflict of Laws, § 621, 8th ed." Commenting on the above, Lowell, J., in Cuykendall v. Miles, 10 Fed. Rep. 342, said: "There is a dictum of Mr. Justice Clifford that all such statutes are penal, and can only be enforced in the state which passed them. Providence Steam Engine Co v. Hubbard, 101 U. S. 188. I agree with the plaintiff's argument that the authorities which the learned judge cites decide that point only in respect to officers of corporations made liable for a neglect of duty. Halsey v. McLean, 12 Allen (Mass.) 438; 90 Am. Dec. 157; Derrickson v. Smith, 27 N. J. L. 166; Sturges v. Burton, 8 Ohio St. 215; 72 Am. Dec. 582." See also Sayles

v. Brown, 40 Fed. Rep. 8; Lowry v. Inman, 46 N. Y. 127.

1. Tinker v. Van Dyke, 1 Flipp. (U. S.) 532; Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 28. In the last named case, the defendant, Conn., was a citizen of Florida, and was a stockholder in a corporation organized under the New York act of 1848, which imposed upon stockholders a double liability "until the whole amount of capital stock fixed and limited by such company shall have been paid in and a certificate thereof shall have been made and recorded." To enforce this liability the action was brought in Florida in the first instance and without the recovery of a judgment in New York. The supreme court held that the liability was not penal, and, after citing the New York decisions, said: "We think this is a case where the construction of the state court is entitled to great, if not conclusive, weight with us. It is the settled construction of a law of the state upon which the rights and liabilities of a large number of its citizens must depend. If the liability of a stockholder under section 10, arises upon contract, the six years' limitation applies to it; if the liability is in the nature of a penalty, the three years' limitation applies. It is clear that confusion and uncertainty would result should the state and Federal courts place different constructions on the section. Such a result ought, if possible, to be avoided. . . . If this were a case arising in the State of New York we should, therefore, follow the construction put upon the statutes by the court of that state. The circumstance that the case comes here from the State of Florida should not leave the statute open to a different construction. It would be an anomaly for this court to put one interpretation upon the statute in a case arising in New York, and a different interpretation in a case arising in Florida. Our conclusion, there-parties,"¹ and a similar doctrine prevails in Kansas.² In New York, it is said that an absolute liability imposed by statute upon stockholders "is like other obligations, assumed in the form prescribed by the laws of the place where made, and being valid there, is enforceable everywhere."³ But it must appear definitely that the liability sought to be enforced is not penal, nor imposed after the debt was contracted.⁴ Moreover, if the courts of last resort of the state where the statute was enacted construe it as imposing no liability, the New York courts will not review the ruling or entertain jurisdiction to enforce a liability flowing from the statute.⁵ In Connecticut,⁶ Missouri,⁷ and Pennsylvania,⁸ the courts have entertained jurisdiction to enforce a liability imposed upon stockholders by the laws of other states. In Georgia, it is held that a trustee appointed by a court of competent jurisdiction may bring suits for unpaid subscriptions against non-resident creditors in their own states, though they have not been personally served with notice of the suit against the corporation.⁹

(3) Jurisdictions Where Liability Imposed by a Foreign Statute Will Not be Enforced.—Massachusetts decisions have been most fore, is that this action was not brought to enforce a liability in the nature of a penalty."

1. Minnesota.—First Nat. Bank v. Gustin, etc., Min. Co., 42 Minn. 327; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 122; following Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Bailey Mfg. Co., 34 Minn. 323; 16 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 441.

2. Kansas.—In Howell v. Mangelsdorf, 33 Kan. 199, the court, by Johnston, J., said: "While the liability is statutory, it is one which arises upon the contract of subscription to the capital stock of the corporation, and an action to enforce the same is transitory, and may be brought in any court of general jurisdiction in the state where personal service can be made upon the stockholder. Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 28; Dennick v. Central R. Co., 103 U. S. 11; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 309; McDonough v. Phelps, 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 372; Seymour v. Sturgess, 26 N. Y. 134."

3. New York.—Lowry v. Inman, 46 N. Y. 120. Compare Ex parte Van Riper, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 614.

4. In Pattison v. Baker, 34 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 180, a mere allegation that defendant "under and by virtue of a law or laws" of another state is "liable" as a stockholder, etc., was held insufficient.

5. Jessup v. Carnegie, 80 N. Y. 441; 36 Am. Rep. 643. In this case an action was brought in New York against stockholders in an Iowa corporation upon a note executed by it. Defendants were sought to be charged for failure to file the articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The supreme court of Iowa held, in a decision rendered after the commencement of the action, and by a divided court, that no personal liability resulted from such failure. It was contended on behalf of the creditor that earlier Iowa decisions placed a different construction upon the statute, but the court said: "We are not called upon in this case to determine whether the court of Iowa was right in the construction given to the various provisions of the statute relating to the subject, and it is too late to renew a discussion of that question in the case now presented. The decision must therefore be accepted as a correct determination of the question involved, and as an exposition of the law as it existed in that state at the time it was made. Its authority is binding and conclusive, and, as we have seen, we cannot disregard it or hold that it is not in point, without overruling principles which have long been settled and acquiesced in."

6. Paine v. Stewart, 33 Conn. 516.

7. Hodgson v. Cheever, 8 Mo. App. 318.

8. Aultman's Appeal, 98 Pa. St. 505.

9. Howard v. Glenn, 85 Ga. 238; 21 Am. St. Rep. 156.

frequent and emphatic on this side of the controversy. It is said in a recent adjudication from that state that "the question can hardly be considered an open one in this commonwealth. This court has often declined to exercise jurisdiction to enforce a liability imposed upon stockholders in corporations established in other states under statutes of these states."¹ This doctrine is based, not upon the view that such an action is penal, or opposed to the policy of the Massachusetts laws, but that "it is a suit against a foreign corporation which involves the relation between its stockholders, and in which complete justice can only be done by the courts of the jurisdiction where the corporation was created."² It is even held that such a suit will not lie, even though the foreign corporation appear by its attorney.³ So the Massachusetts court will not entertain jurisdiction of a suit by a non-resident against an insurance company of still another state, though doing business and having an agent in Massachusetts.⁴ And the members of a foreign joint-stock company may be sued directly as partners, though its charter provides for a judgment first against its officers.⁵ Nevertheless, a bill of discovery will lie in Massachusetts against the officers of a foreign corporation to compel a disclosure of the names and interests of its stockholders, and ancillary to a suit in the state of its domicile to enforce the liability there enforced.⁶

In Illinois, a liability imposed upon stockholders by the laws of another state will not be enforced until judgment has been first rendered in the domestic forum.⁷ The jurisdiction of courts in Maine to enforce such statutes has been doubted.⁸ In New Hampshire it is held that the principle of interstate comity does not require effect to be given the statutes of another state imposing liability, where there is no showing as to what process it is enforced by where it is imposed, and none of the stockholders reside in New Hampshire.⁹ A bill in equity cannot be maintained

1. Massachusetts.—Bank of North America v. Rindge, 154 Mass. 203; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 154. See also New Haven Nail Co. v. Linden Spring Co., 142 Mass. 349; 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 17; Halsey v. McLean, 12 Allen (Mass.) 438; 90 Am. Dec. 157; Smith v. Mutual L. Ins. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.) 336; Kansas, etc., Constr. Co. v. Topeka, etc., R. Co., 135 Mass. 34; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 495; 46 Am. Rep. 439; Hutchins v. New England Coal Min. Co., 4 Allen (Mass.) 580; Jones v. Sisson, 6 Gray (Mass.) 288; Penobscot, etc., R. Co. v. Bartlett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 244; 71 Am. Dec. 753; Blackstone Mfg. Co. v. Blackstone, 13 Gray (Mass.) 488; Post v. Toledo, etc., R. Co., 144 Mass. 341; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 355; 59 Am. Rep. 86; Erickson v. Nesmith, 4 Allen (Mass.) 233.

2. Post v. Toledo, etc., R. Co., 144 Mass. 341; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 355; 59 Am. Rep. 86.

3. New Haven Nail Co. v. Linden Spring Co., 142 Mass. 349; 13 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71.

4. Smith v. Mutual L. Ins. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.) 336.

5. Taft v. Ward, 106 Mass. 518.

6. Post v. Toledo, etc., R. Co., 144 Mass. 341; 19 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 355; 59 Am. Rep. 86.

7. Patterson v. Lynde, 112 Ill. 196; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 195; Young v. Farewell (Ill. 1891), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 158.

8. Drinkwater v. Portland Marine R. Co., 18 Me. 35.

9. So held in a recent case in that state—Rice v. Merrimack Hosiery Co., 56 N. H. 114.

in West Virginia to determine the extent of the liability of stockholders in a foreign corporation.¹ In Wisconsin it has been decided recently that its courts have no jurisdiction over actions against stockholders in a corporation organized under the statutes of another state which provide that the individual liability may be enforced by assumpsit.²

(4) Remedies Are Strictly Local.—But while the courts are thus divided upon the question of enforcing a right conferred by a foreign statute, there is an agreement among them that the remedy prescribed thereby is confined in its operation to the limits of the sovereignty creating the corporation, and is without extra-territorial force.³ Accordingly, a provision that the liability shall be enforced by bill in equity,⁴ or by the common-law action of assumpsit,⁵ has no binding obligation beyond the state of its enactment.

d. REMEDIES.—A suit in equity is the most usual,⁶ and in

1. Nimick v. Mingo Iron Works Co., 25 W. Va. 184.

2. In May v. Black, 77 Wis. 101, the court, by Orton, J., said: "The courts of this state have no jurisdiction in such a case, and it is confined to the courts of the state of Michigan, under whose laws the corporation was created, and by which it is governed. There are two reasons in the act itself why this is so: (1) No jurisdiction can be obtained to render a personal judgment against the corporation anywhere else; (2) actions are limited to a particular place in that state. But it is a principle of law that does not appear to be questioned, that where a special remedy against stockholders is presented by the statute under which the corporation is formed, it must be enforced in the courts of that state exclusively."

3. Lowry v. Inman, 46 N. Y. 126. The same doctrine is announced in Brown v. Eastern State Co., 134 Mass. 590; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 120; Bank of North America v. Rindge, 154 Mass. 203; 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 154; Christensen v. Eno, 106 N. Y. 97; Nimick v. Mingo Iron Works Co., 25 W. Va. 184; May v. Black, 77 Wis. 101.

4. Erickson v. Nesmith, 4 Allen (Mass.) 233; Erickson v. Nesmith, 15 Gray (Mass.) 221; Nimick v. Mingo Iron Works Co., 25 W. Va. 184.

5. May v. Black, 77 Wis. 101.

6. The Remedy in Chancery.—Curry v. Woodward, 53 Ala. 371; Allen v. Montgomery, R. Co., 11 Ala. 437; Harmon v. Page, 62 Cal. 448; Ward v. Griswoldville Mfg. Co., 16 Conn. 593;

Hightower v. Thornton, 8 Ga. 486; Hightower v. Mustian, 8 Ga. 506; Winncock v. Turpin, 96 Ill. 135; Hickling v. Wilson, 104 Ill. 54; Crawford v. Rohrer, 59 Md. 599; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 81; Shickle v. Watts, 94 Mo. 410; 21 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 561; Mathez v. Neidig, 72 N. Y. 100; Dayton v. Borst, 31 N. Y. 435; Mann v. Pentz, 3 N. Y. 415; Stephens v. Fox, 83 N. Y. 313; Griffith v. Mangam, 73 N. Y. 611; Christensen v. Eno, 106 N. Y. 97; Judson v. Rossie Galena Co., 9 Paige (N. Y.) 598; 38 Am. Dec. 569; Van Pelt v. U. S. Metallic, etc., Co., 13 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 331; Sherwood v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 12 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 137; Hammond v. Hudson Riv., etc., Co., 11 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 33; Ogilvie v. Knox Ins. Co., 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 380; Henry v. Vermillion, etc., Turnpike Co., 17 Ohio 187; Miers v. Zanesville, etc., Turnpike Co., 11 Ohio 273; Germantown, etc., R. Co. v. Fittler, 60 Pa. St. 124; 100 Am. Dec. 546; Johnston v. Markle Paper Co. (Pa. 1893), 25 Atl. Rep. 560; Adler v. Milwaukee Brick Mfg. Co., 13 Wis. 57; Marsh v. Burroughs, 1 Woods (U. S.) 463; Louisiana Paper Co. v. Waples, 3 Woods (U. S.) 34; Holmes v. Sherwood, 3 McCrary (U. S.) 405; Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 56; Hatch v. Dana, 101 U. S. 205; Patterson v. Lynde, 106 U. S. 519; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 195; Brown v. Fisk, 23 Fed. Rep. 228. See also Emmert v. Smith, 40 Md. 123.

In Pfohl v. Simpson, 74 N. Y. 143, it was said: "A suit in equity laying hold of all the stockholders in like category, and promoted for the benefit of all cred-some instances the exclusive,¹ remedy for the purpose of enforcing the subscription liability and also the statutory liability.² But the right to insist upon the choice of equity as the forum may be waived.³ In other jurisdictions an action at law by the creditor lies to collect unpaid subscriptions,⁴ and even to enforce a statutory liability.⁵ Unpaid subscriptions are also subject to garnishment⁶ and attachment,⁷ if calls have been made.⁸ Mandamus is sometimes employed in *England*⁹ to enforce liability, but is of itors having like interest, is peculiarly adapted to work out exactly just and equitable results. . . . The object and effect is to bring to one forum the determination of rights, which must, if prosecuted separately, more or less conflict to mutual harm. Before that one forum, in one suit, the respective rights and respective liabilities can be ascertained and determined, and each get his own, and be subjected to his own, and not another's. And the equities between the respective stockholders can also be adjusted and settled."

1. Jones v. Jarman, 34 Ark. 323; Smith v. Huckabee, 53 Ala. 191; Friend v. Powers, 93 Ala. 114; Harris v. First Parish, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 112; Knowlton v. Ackley, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 93; Erickson v. Nesmith, 15 Gray (Mass.) 221; Spear v. Grant, 16 Mass. 9; Hodges v. Silver Hill Min. Co., 9 Oregon 200; Umsted v. Buskirk, 17 Ohio St. 113; Pollard v. Bailey, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 520; Terry v. Little, 101 U. S. 216; Andrews v. Bacon, 38 Fed. Rep. 777. See also Griffith v. Mangam, 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 369; Mann v. Pentz, 3 N. Y. 416; Burch v. Taylor, 1 Wash. 245; Andrews v. Bacon, 38 Fed. Rep. 777.

In New Jersey, a creditor must file a general creditor's bill, and cannot proceed for himself alone. Bickley v. Schlag, 46 N. J. Eq. 533; 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 523.

2. Smith v. Huckabee, 53 Ala. 191; Harris v. First Parish, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 112; Coleman v. White, 14 Wis. 700; 80 Am. Dec. 797; Patterson v. Lynde, 106 U. S. 519; 10 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 195. See also Ladd v. Cartwright, 7 Oregon 329; Terry v. Little, 101 U. S. 216.

3. Buffington v. Bardon, 80 Wis. 635.

4. Actions at Law.—Allen v. Montgomery R. Co., 11 Ala. 437; McCarthy v. Lavasche, 89 Ill. 270; 31 Am. Rep. 83; White v. Blum, 4 Neb. 555; Freeman v. Winchester, 18 Miss. 577; Persch v. Simmons, 3 N. Y. Supp. 383; Faull v. Alaska Gold, etc., Min. Co., 8 Sawy.

(U. S.) 420; Bank of U. S. v. Dallam, 4 Dana (Ky.) 574.

5. Flour City Nat. Bank v. Wechselberg, 45 Fed. Rep. 547; Abbott v. Aspinwall, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 202; Wiles v. Suydam, 64 N. Y. 173; Shellington v. Howland, 53 N. Y. 371; Handy v. Draper, 89 N. Y. 334; Rocky Mt. Nat. Bank v. Bliss, 89 N. Y. 338; Mathez v. Neidig, 72 N. Y. 100; Weeks v. Love, 50 N. Y. 568; Bank of Poughkeepsie v. Ibbotson, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 473; Van Hook v. Whitlock, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 409; Strong v. Wheaton, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 616.

Under the Maryland Code, liability may be enforced in an action at law by one creditor, even where there are others. Norris v. Johnson, 34 Md. 485. And such liability is not in the nature of a penalty, but is in so far an obligation ex contractu as to be within the spirit and intent of a statute authorizing summary proceedings in actions ex contractu. Norris v. Wrenschall, 34 Md. 492.

6. Garnishment.—Curry v. Woodward, 53 Ala. 371; Bingham v. Rushing, 5 Ala. 403; Meints v. East St. Louis, etc., Co., 89 Ill. 48; Brown v. Union Ins. Co., 3 La. Ann. 177; Hannah v. Moberly Bank, 67 Mo. 678; Simpson v. Reynolds, 71 Mo. 594; Rand v. White Mountains R. Co., 40 N. H. 79; Hays v. Lycoming F. Ins. Co., 99 Pa. St. 621.

7. In re Queensland, etc., Co., 58 L. T. Rep. 878.

8. Bingham v. Rushing, 5 Ala. 403; Coalsfield Coal Co. v. Peck, 98 Ill. 139; Meints v. East St. Louis, etc., Co., 89 Ill. 48; Langford v. Ottumwa Water-power Co., 59 Iowa 283; Brown v. Union Ins. Co., 3 La. Ann. 177; Bunn's Appeal, 105 Pa. St. 49; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 1; Peterson v. Sinclair, 83 Pa. St. 250; Chandler v. Siddle, 10 Nat. Bankr. Rep. 236.

9. Mandamus.—Queen v. Victoria Park Co., 1 Ad. & El., N. S. 288; Queen v. Ledgard, 1 Ad. & El., N. S. 616; King v. St. Katherine Dock Co., 4 B. & Ad. 360.

doubtful propriety in the United States.¹ A prescribed statutory form of remedy is held to be exclusive and not cumulative.²

e. JOINDER OF PARTIES.—(See also PARTIES TO ACTIONS, vol. 17, p. 470).—Where stockholders are made "jointly and severally liable" by statute,³ or where the liability is for a sum certain,⁴ a separate action may be maintained against each one. So, where the liability is limited and unequal,⁵ or is exclusively at law and has not been enlarged by statute,⁶ the stockholders cannot be jointly sued. But to enforce a partnership liability, all must be sued,⁷ and a provision making stockholders "personally holden," has been held to impose a joint liability.⁸ Where the stockholders are "equally and ratably liable to the extent of their respective shares," a judgment by default cannot be taken against a single stockholder for the full amount of the debt.⁹ In Alabama all stockholders must be joined as defendants.¹⁰ In Wisconsin the corporation though a proper, is not a necessary party.¹¹

f. DEATH OF PARTIES.—The liability of a stockholder, at least

1. Allen v. Montgomery R. Co., 11 Ala. 437; Dalton, etc., R. Co. v. McDaniel, 56 Ga. 191; Cucullu v. Union Ins. Co., 2 Rob. (La.) 571; Hatch v. Dana, 101 U. S. 205.

2. Statutory Form Exclusive.—Knowlton v. Ackley, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 93; Erickson v. Nesmith, 15 Gray (Mass.) 221; Allen v. Walsh, 25 Minn. 543; Lowry v. Inman, 46 N. Y. 119; Brinham v. Wellersburg Coal Co., 47 Pa. St. 43; Hoard v. Wilcox, 47 Pa. St. 51; Youghiogheny Shaft Co. v. Evans, 72 Pa. St. 331; Windham Prov. Sav. Inst. v. Sprague, 43 Vt. 502; Dauchy v. Brown, 24 Vt. 197; Bassett v. St. Alban's Hotel Co., 47 Vt. 313; Morley v. Thayer, 3 Fed. Rep. 737; Haskins v. Harding, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 99; Pollard v. Bailey, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 520. See also Grose v. Hilt, 36 Me. 22; Potter v. Stevens Machine Co., 127 Mass. 592; 34 Am. Rep. 428; Andrews v. Calender, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 484; Diven v. Lee, 36 N. Y. 302; Wehrman v. Reakirt, 1 Cin. (Ohio) 230.

3. Grund v. Tucker, 5 Kan. 70; Norris v. Johnson, 34 Md. 485; Matthews v. Albert, 24 Md. 527; Bond v. Appleton, 8 Mass. 472; 5 Am. Dec. 111. See also Culver v. Third Nat. Bank, 64 Ill. 528; Bullard v. Bell, 1 Mason (U. S.) 243; Borland v. Haven, 37 Fed. Rep. 394.

4. Paine v. Stewart, 33 Conn. 516; Boyd v. Hall, 56 Ga. 563; Culver v. Third Nat. Bank, 64 Ill. 528; Perry v. Turner, 55 Mo. 418; Garrison v. Howe, 17 N. Y. 458; Bank of Poughkeepsie v. Ibbotson, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 473; Ab- bott v. Aspinwall, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 202; Terry v. Little, 101 U. S. 216.

5. In Abbey v. Grimes Dry Goods Co. (Kan. 1890), 31 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 538, the court said: "The rule that stockholders of a corporation cannot be joined as defendants necessarily rests upon the ground that the liability is for different sums, and each stockholder might have a distinct and separate defense. Where the liability of stockholders is confined to the extent or amount of their stock, or is in proportion to their stock, the liability, being unequal and limited, is several. Shafer v. Moriarty, 46 Ind. 9; Bank of Poughkeepsie v. Ibbotson, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 473; Ohio L. Ins., etc., Co. v. Merchants' Ins., etc., Co., 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 1; Crease v. Babcock, 10 Met. (Mass.) 525; Pettibone v. McGraw, 6 Mich. 441; Lane v. Harris, 16 Ga. 217; Adkins v. Thornton, 19 Ga. 325; Mor. Priv. Corp., § 901; Pom. Rem., § 317."

6. Paine v. Stewart, 33 Conn. 516; Perry v. Turner, 55 Mo. 418; In re Hollister Bank, 27 N. Y. 393; Abbot v. Aspinwall, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 202; Bank of Poughkeepsie v. Ibbotson, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 473.

7. Allen v. Sewall, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 327.

8. Windham Prov. Sav. Inst. v. Sprague, 43 Vt. 502.

9. Buenz v. Cook, 15 Colo. 38; Reynolds v. Feliciana Steamboat Co., 17 La. 397.

10. Friend v. Powers, 93 Ala. 114.

11. Flour City Nat. Bank v. Wechselberg, 45 Fed. Rep. 547.

where it is contractual,¹ generally survives him, and his estate succeeds not only to the rights, but also to the obligations which flow from the ownership of his shares.² The personal representative may relieve himself only by transfer,³ and the liability may be continued by an authorized extension of the charter, though the latter would otherwise have expired after the stockholder's death.⁴ Where the liability attaches before letters testamentary are granted, it is impressed upon all the assets of the estate and follows them into the hands of devisees and legatees.⁵ But where an executor distributes the assets before any liability has accrued, the beneficiaries of the estate who have thus received them cannot be subsequently held.⁶ In prosecuting in the probate court a claim against the stockholder arising out of liability, it is not necessary to make the corporation a party where execution against it has already been returned unsatisfied.⁷

Upon the death of one of two joint creditors of a corporation, the entire right of action against the stockholders vests in the survivor, and the fact that the decedent himself was a stockholder and that his estate is liable, is no defense to such an action.⁸ In Massachusetts, there appears to be an exception to the general

1. Cochran v. Weichers, 119 N. Y. 399.

2. In Bailey v. Hollister, 26 N. Y. 116, Gould, J., says: "Of necessity, it must take that title and those rights subject to any liability then existing upon them; and so long as the estate is, by operation of law, the holder of such stock, the estate must become responsible for any obligations accruing during that time which the law may impose upon any holder of the stock as such. Such liability proceeds not from any new contract made by or on behalf of the estate, but is inherent in the property itself. To avoid it the estate must part from the property; must cease to be the holder of the stock. Or, calling it a contract liability, it arises out of a contract made by the stockholder, and binding his personal representatives, as it bound him, as long as the relation of stockholder existed." See to the same effect, Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27; 17 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 71; Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371; 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 28; Witters v. Sowles, 32 Fed. Rep. 130; Davis v. Weed, 44 Conn. 569; Nolan v. Hazen, 44 Minn. 478; Cochran v. Weichers, 119 N. Y. 399; Chase v. Lord, 77 N. Y. 1. Compare Miller v. New York, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 479; Pennsylvania College Cases, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 216.

3. Bailey v. Hollister, 26 N. Y. 112.

4. Bailey v. Hollister, 26 N. Y. 112.

Compare Davis v. Weed, 44 Conn. 581; Miller v. New York, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 497.

5. Davis v. Weed, 44 Conn. 369; Witters v. Sowles, 32 Fed. Rep. 130.

6. Witters v. Sowles, 32 Fed. Rep. 136.

7. In Nolan v. Hazen, 44 Minn. 478, the court said: "There is no conceivable necessity for or use of making the corporation a party to the second action, for its liability has been determined in the former action, and this would be conclusive, at least as against it, even if it were made a party to the subsequent action against the stockholder; and so far as exhausting the remedy against the corporation, that has been already done. Hence we are of opinion that, were Sleeper living, an action would in this case lie against him without joining the corporation as a party. And if this is so, it is not, and cannot be, questioned but that the claim is provable in probate court against his estate."

8. In Newberry v. Robinson, 41 Fed. Rep. 458, the court said: "In the plaintiff's brief, and in argument, he and McMillan are mentioned as having been partners in the transaction; but in the bill they are set up as merely joint creditors. In either case upon his death the debt against the corporation survived to McMillan. 1 Chit. Pl. 11; 2 Redf. Wills 172; Wood, Colldoctrine above set forth. It is there held that the death of a stockholder who was summoned in an action against the corporation abates the proceeding against him.¹

g. PRIORITY AMONG CREDITORS—(1) Where Actions by Individual Creditors Are Authorized.—The law generally favors the vigilant creditor,² and where an action at law is provided to enforce the statutory liability, it may be prosecuted separately by each creditor.³ Under such a provision the claim of the one first suing generally takes priority as regards that particular defendant, over the claims of other creditors.⁴ It has been held in Maine, that where another creditor obtains by a different remedy an earlier judgment, it is junior to that of the first suitor,⁵ but a doctrine almost exactly opposite appears to obtain in Missouri.⁶ In Illinois also it has been held that one who failed to obtain a senior judgment only because his action was enjoined at the instance of fellow creditors has no prior lien.⁷

(2) Where Suits Are in Behalf of All Creditors.—But priority among corporate creditors is repugnant to the notion of one remedy for all creditors and that in equity. Under the trust fund doctrine all creditors are entitled to share alike the unpaid subscriptions,⁸ and where the statute makes the liability a common fund for the payment of certain debts, individual creditors may be enjoined from prosecuting actions which would result in giving yer, Partn. 952. This survivorship so completely vested this debt in the survivor that it could be joined in a suit with his own individual debts, and his individual liability could be set off against it. Slipper v. Stidstone, 5 T. R. 493; French v. Andrade, 6 T. R. 582; Wood, Colly. Partn. 1105."

1. In Dane v. Dane Mfg. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 488, Dewey, J., said: "The object of the summons to the stockholder, required by the statute, was to secure the property of individuals from being taken on execution without their having been notified of the claim against them as such. This provision, of course, was for a living stockholder. No right existed to levy such execution against a corporation upon the estate of a deceased stockholder. The executor of such deceased stockholder is not to be summoned in the action against the corporation by reason of any liability that might have attached to his testator while living, with the purpose of authorizing an execution to be levied upon the executor or any estate in his hands. No legitimate purpose therefore exists for summoning the executor to take upon himself the defense of the suit as against his testator. All further proceedings as against Joel Bowker are abated by his death, and a judgment against the corporation will not authorize a levy upon the estate of the deceased in the hands of his executor. This peculiar form of liability does not survive." See also Child v. Coffin, 17 Mass. 64; Ripley v. Sampson, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 371; Gray v. Coffin, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 199. Compare Cummings v. Wright, 11 Mo. App. 348; Donnelly v. Hodgson, 13 Mo. App. 15.

2. Miers v. Zanesville, etc., Turnpike Co., 11 Ohio 273.

3. Weeks v. Love, 50 N. Y. 568. Compare Garrison v. Howe, 17 N. Y. 458.

4. Wells v. Robb, 43 Kan. 201; Hoyt v. Bunker (Kan. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 126; Jones v. Wiltberger, 42 Ga. 575; Lowry v. Parsons, 52 Ga. 356; Thebus v. Smiley, 110 Ill. 316; Cole v. Butler, 43 Me. 401; Ingalls v. Cole, 47 Me. 541; Marsh v. Burroughs, 1 Woods (U. S.) 463.

5. Cole v. Butler, 43 Me. 401.

6. State Saving Assoc. v. Kellogg, 63 Mo. 540; Marks v. Mulhall, 13 Mo. App. 590; Bittner v. Lee, 25 Mo. App. 559.

7. Chicago v. Hall, 103 Ill. 342.

8. Wetherbee v. Baker, 35 N. J. Eq. 501. Compare Mathis v. Pridham (Tex. App. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 1015.

them a disproportionate share in the security.¹ Where the liability is enforced in equity alone, its enforcement is for the benefit of all with no distinction between judgment and general creditors.² So where a statute imposes a liability upon stockholders "for the purpose of securing the creditors" and proceedings are instituted by a part for all, no one creditor can acquire priority, even by a separate action.³ Neither can such priority be attained upon the motion of an individual creditor while a general suit against a stockholder is pending.⁴

h. CONTRIBUTION BETWEEN STOCKHOLDERS.—See CONTRIBUTION, vol. 4, p. 7; MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS, vol. 14, p. 306.

V. TERMINATION OF MEMBERSHIP.—See DISFRANCHISEMENT, vol. 5, p. 684.

STOCK IN TRADE—(See also EFFECTS, vol. 6, p. 194).—See note 5.

1. In Eames v. Doris, 102 Ill. 350, the court said: "The liability under section nine is created for all losses and deficiencies as to the trust funds and saving funds deposited, that is, as to the depositors of trust funds and savings funds. The liability constitutes a fund for the benefit of all of these two classes of creditors, and they are entitled to share in it in proportion to the amount of their debts. The debts here largely exceed the assets and this liability combined, so that the fund will be insufficient to discharge all of the claims upon it. If individuals of these two classes of savings and trust depositors be allowed to prosecute their separate suits, they may recover payment of their demands in full, while others of the classes, having claims equally equitable, may be enabled to obtain no payment whatever, or but a partial one. Hence the propriety, in the case of such a deficiency in a common fund for the common benefit of creditors, of a proceeding in equity by one or more in behalf of all the creditors, in order that the equitable principle that equity is equity, may be applied; that single creditors, by individual suits, may be prevented from an appropriation to themselves of the entire or unequal benefit of the security, to the exclusion of others equally entitled, and that there may be a collection and pro rata distribution of the whole fund among all the creditors."

2. McDonnell v. Alabama Gold L. Ins. Co., 85 Ala. 401.

3. Wright v. McCormack, 17 Ohio St. 87.

4. Donnelly v. Mulhall, 12 Mo. App. 139; Marks v. Hardy, 86 Mo. 232.

5. An Indiana statute required the president, or other accounting officer, of every railroad company in the State to furnish the auditor of the county in which the principal office of the road was situated, a list of "stock for taxation." It was held that the word "stock" as here used did not mean the subscriptions of stock, but the actual, tangible property of such company. The court, by Perkins, J., said: "The word stock is used both in common parlance and statutory enactments in a variety of senses, some broader, some more limited. Its use may open a wide field for the work of interpretation, and require a close consideration of the whole subject-matter in relation to which it is applied. We speak of the goods of a merchant, as his stock; of the lumber and materials of the manufacturer, as his stock of raw materials; of the cattle, hogs, etc., of the farmer, as his stock; of the cars, locomotives, etc., of the railroad companies, as their stock of these articles respectively; and we speak of the subscriptions and shares in these companies as stock, though these are more properly, it would seem, denominated the capital stock of such corporations." State v. Hamilton, 5 Ind. 313. See also Floyd Co. v. New Albany, etc., R. Co., 11 Ind. 570; Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Porter, 17 Ind. 380.

A testator by his will gave his plantation and tannery with "all the stock of every kind." It was held that the term "stock" included leather in the STOCK YARDS—(See also CARRIERS OF LIVE STOCK, vol. 3, p. 1.)I. Definition, 900.*II. Rights, Duties, and Liabilities, 900.

I. DEFINITION.—A stock yard is an inclosure connected with a railroad, slaughterhouse, or market, for the distribution, assorting, sale, or temporary keeping of live stock.¹

II. RIGHTS, DUTIES, AND LIABILITIES.—The business of a stock yard company, except in the character of the property which is the subject of bailment, is similar to that of a warehouseman, and it may not be compelled in the absence of contract to receive stock of any person or corporation.²

vats. Cameron v. Commissioners, 1 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 437.

A Mississippi statute fixed a privilege tax upon each store in proportion to the "stock" carried therein. It was held, that "stock," as here used, comprised only the goods, etc., kept by the merchant for sale in the course of business, and did not include cotton taken by the merchant in payment of debts. Harness v. Williams, 64 Miss. 600.

Stock in Trade.—As to what a policy on the "stock in trade" of a merchant or mechanic will cover, see FIRE INSURANCE, vol. 7, p. 1006.

Upon a dissolution of partnership and division of the "stock in trade," property, etc., it was held, that the goodwill was not within the phrase "stock in trade." Chapman v. Hayman, 1 Times Rep. 397.

A testator was a barge-builder, and, according to the custom of that trade, would sometimes on the sale of a new barge accept an old one in part payment, which he would repair and let out on hire. At the time of his death he had five such barges, and it was held, that these barges passed under a bequest of his "stock in trade as a barge-builder." In re Richardson, 50 L. J. Ch. 488.

Where one carried on the business of selling United States internal revenue stamps, it was held that the revenue stamps which he had on hand were not subject to taxation under Massachusetts Gen. St., ch. 11, § 12, as "stock in trade." Polfrey v. Boston, 101 Mass. 329.

For the scope of the term as used in exemption laws, see EXECUTIONS, vol. 7, p. 135n.; ATTACHMENT, vol. 1, p. 917. See also In re Jones, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 343; Hillyer v. Remore, 42 Minn.

254; Martin v. Bond, 14 Colo. 466; Bequillard v. Bartlett, 19 Kan. 382.

Stock on Hand.—(See also HAND, vol. 9, p. 262).—A chattel mortgage on the "stock on hand" of a baker does not sufficiently describe the property. Rocheleau v. Boyle (Mont.), 28 Pac. Rep. 872.

"Stock of Ladies' Notions."—A mortgage described the goods as "the general stock of millinery, stock of ladies' notions, consisting of hats," etc., "and all other goods now on hand or to be purchased and used in the business of a general millinery store." It was held that by the phrase, "stock of ladies' notions," only such property was conveyed as is described immediately following such phrase, and that by the last clause was meant only such millinery as might be on hand for sale, or might be purchased for sale, or might be made up for sale. Chapin v. Garretson (Iowa), 52 N. W. Rep. 104.

1. Century Dictionary.

2. In Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co., 43 N. J. Eq. 74; 31 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 82, the complainants were refused an injunction to compel defendants to receive at their yards from the complainants live stock carried over their road and consigned for delivery at defendants' yard, because the question whether the defendants were subject to any duty to the complainants was, as a matter of law, unsettled, and also because the injunction asked for was mandatory in its character, and such writs are never granted until a final hearing. In the opinion, it was said that "the defendants stand, in respect to their legal duties, in a position very similar to that which a common carrier occupies—bound to serve all, who have a right to demand their service, to the best of

The fact that the business of buying and selling live stock at a certain market, established and maintained by a stock yard company, itself a private corporation, and not engaged in buying and selling live stock, is of such a magnitude as to have an influence upon the commerce of the country, will not justify the courts in declaring it a public market, and applying to it any rules of public policy peculiar to public markets.¹

In the operation of a railroad which a stock yard is authorized to construct to connect with other railroads, it is subject to the same responsibilities as railroad companies, and is liable for the negligence of another corporation using it by permission.²

An injunction will issue in favor of a stock yard company to prevent unjust railroad discrimination;³ and in one instance an injunction was granted to restrain the withdrawal of railway connections with an old established stock yard, the withdrawal being attempted to aid in the erection of a monopoly at another point.⁴

their ability, and on equal terms as to compensation."

But in Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Central Stock Yard Co., 46 N. J. Eq. 280; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 607, Van Fleet, V. C., referring to his language quoted above, said: "This opinion . . . was based on an assumption that there was a strong and close similitude between a railroad or canal company, in their character as a common carrier, and the defendants, both in respect to the powers which each might exercise, and the duties which each were bound to perform for the public. But it is now entirely clear that such is not the fact. Between the defendants and a railroad or canal company there is not the slightest analogy. . . . The business of the defendant has no exact counterpart or model in any of the established instruments of commerce or agencies used by the public in the transaction of business." The denial of the injunction was put upon the ground of the analogy between the defendants' business and that of a warehouseman; and, further, the presence in the defendants' charter of a provision authorizing them to make contracts with the several railroad companies having a terminus in Hudson county, for the transportation and delivery of live stock at their yards, in the opinion of the court, showed clearly that the legislature did not intend that the defendants should be subject to any duty to railroad companies in that respect, except such as they should voluntarily assume by contract.

Where, however, the yards are maintained by the railroad company itself, and the cattle have been placed in them by the direction of the carrier's agent for immediate shipment, and part of them have been actually placed in the cars, the cattle are to be considered as having been received by the carrier for shipment and held by him as a common carrier and not as a warehouseman. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Trawick, 80 Tex. 270, 15 S. W. Rep. 568.

1. American Live Stock Commission Co. v. Chicago L. S. Exchange (Ill. 1892), 32 N. E. Rep. 274.

2. Pennsylvania Co. v. Ellett, 132 Ill. 654; 42 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 64.

3. In M'Coy v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 13 Fed. Rep. 3, it was held that a railroad company may not bind itself to deliver to a particular stock yard all live stock coming over its line to a certain point, but is bound to transport over its road and deliver to all stock yards at such point, reached by its tracks or connections, all live stock consigned, or which shippers desire to consign, to them, upon the same terms and in the same manner as under like conditions it transports and delivers to their competitors, and the performance of this duty may be enforced by injunction at the instance of the proprietor of the yards discriminated against.

4. Coe v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 3 Fed. Rep. 775.

Breach of Contract—Evidence as to Measure of Damages.—Where a person agrees to construct stock yards, and a railroad company agrees to send all stock to those yards, unless otherwise ordered by the shippers, if the com-

A stock yard company may be prevented by injunction from conducting its business in such a manner as materially to affect the health or property of persons living in the vicinity.¹

Stock left in the custody of the company may be sold when no owner can be found, and when, from the perishable nature of the property, a necessity for sale arises.²

When a railroad company holds itself out as a carrier of live stock, it is obliged to provide suitable facilities, such as yards or pens, for receiving and discharging the stock, and for these, it may not, in addition to the customary and legitimate charges for transportation, make a special charge.³ And it may not absolve itself from its statutory duty to provide suitable facilities, by showing that the yards or pens were so badly constructed as to make it contributory negligence on the part of the shipper to use them.⁴

STONE.—See note 5.

pany takes stock to other yards not specially ordered there, it violates its contract, and is responsible in damages, and evidence as to the number of car loads taken to other yards is admissible in fixing the measure thereof. Terre Haute, etc., R. R. Co. v. Struble, 109 U. S. 381; 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 597.

1. Babcock v. New Jersey Stock Yard Co., 20 N. J. Eq. 296.

But in London, etc., R. R. Co. v. Truman, 11 App. Cas. 45; 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 116, the court refused to enjoin a railroad company from maintaining cattle yards near the plaintiff's residence, on the ground that the same was a nuisance, it appearing that the yards were maintained on land acquired by the company under a statute for such purposes.

2. Mill Creek v. Brighton Stock Yard Co., 27 Ohio St. 435.

3. Covington Stock yard Co. v. Keith, 139 U. S. 128; 49 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 149. In this case Harlan, J., for the court, said: "A carrier of live stock has no more right to make a special charge for merely receiving or merely delivering such stock, in and through stock yards provided by itself, in order that it may properly receive and load or unload and deliver such stock, than a carrier of passengers may make a special charge for the use of its passenger depot by passengers when proceeding to or coming from its trains, or than a carrier may charge the shippers for the use of its general freight depot in merely delivering his goods for shipment, or the consignee of such goods for its use in merely receiving them there within a reasonable time after they are unloaded from the cars."

4. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Trawick, 80 Tex. 270. In this case a statute in the following terms was construed as making it incumbent upon a railroad to provide pens or yards for the shipment of cattle: "Each and every railroad company is hereby required to erect at each and every depot, station, or place established by such company for the reception and delivery of freight, suitable buildings or inclosures to protect produce, goods, wares and merchandise, and freight of every description from damage by exposure to the weather or otherwise." Texas Rev. Stat., art. 4236.

Damages to Stock from Exposure—Liability of Carrier.—In Feinberg v. Delaware, L., etc., R. Co., 20 Atl. Rep. 33, the plaintiff's live stock was accepted, freight paid, and receipt given, for transportation, without express contract for limitation of liability; being delayed by a snowstorm, they were removed from the cars to the defendant's stock yards, where some died, and others were injured by cold and exposure due to insufficient shelter. The defendant was held liable for damages as a common carrier. And it was further held that the mere fact of giving a free pass to a servant of the shipper in order that he might accompany the stock would not relieve the company of responsibility.

5. A statute imposed a toll upon "goods, wares, and merchandise," and a lower toll upon "stone." It was held that blocks of stone squared and reduced to certain dimensions was

STOPPAGE.—In the old books set-off is sometimes called stoppage, because the amount sought to be set off was stopped or deducted from the cross demand.¹

STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU.—(See also BILL OF LADING, vol. 2, p. 223; CARRIERS OF GOODS, vol. 2, p. 770; EXPRESS COMPANIES, vol. 7, p. 539; SALES, vol. 21, p. 444.)

- I. Definition, 903.
 - II. Who May Exercise the Right, 904.
 - III. Under What Circumstances Right May be Exercised, 905.
 1. Goods Must be Unpaid for, 906.
 - a. Effect of Part Payment, 906.
 - b. Payment by Note or Bill, 906.
 2. Goods Must be in Transit, 907.
 - a. When Transit Begins, 908.
 - b. When Transit Ends, 908.
 - (1) In General, 908.
 - (2) Delivery at Destination, 909.
 - (a) When Destination Is Reached, 909.
 - (b) Mere Arrival at Destination Not Sufficient, 911.
 - (c) Consignee Must Consent to Receive, 912.
 - (d) Delivery to Agent of Consignee, 913.
 - (e) Effect of Carrier Refusing to Deliver, 915. [916.
 - (f) Delivery of Part,
 - (g) Payment of Freight Charges, 916.
 - (h) Delivery to Warehouse man or Wharfinger, 916.
 - (i) Delivery to Sub-Purchaser, 918.
 - (j) Entry of Goods at Custom-House, 918.
 - (k) Delivery to Local Carrier, 919.
 - (3) Delivery at Point Short of Original Destination, 919.
 - (a) Delivery to Buyer, 919.
 - (b) Delivery to Buyer's Agent, 921.
 - (4) Delivery on Board Buyer's Vessel, 922.
 3. Buyer Must be Insolvent, 923.
- IV. How Right Exercised, 924.
 1. Giving Notice, 924.
 2. To Whom Notice Given, 925.
 3. Effect of Carrier's Refusal to Redeliver, 926.
- V. Loss of Right, 926.
 1. How Right Is Lost, 926.
 2. When Right Is Not Lost, 930.
- VI. Effect, 932.
 1. On Rights of Parties, 932.
 2. On Rights of Carrier, 933.

I. DEFINITION.—Stoppage in transitu is a resumption by the seller of the possession of goods not paid for, while on their way to the vendee and before he has acquired actual possession of them.² The right of stoppage in transitu is the right which the vendor, when he sells goods on credit to another, has of resuming the possession of the goods, while they are in the hands of a carrier or middleman, in their transit to the consignee or vendee, and before they arrive into his actual possession, or at the destination which he has appointed for them, on his becoming bankrupt or insolvent.³ This is a right which arises solely upon the insolvency

"stone" within the statute, and not merchandise, and therefore subject to the lower toll. Fisher v. Lee, 12 A. & E. 622; 40 E. C. L. 136.

1. Byles on Bills 349; Jeffs v. Wood,

2 P. Wms. 128. See also SET-OFF, vol. 22, p. 209.

2. Bouv. L. Dict., citing Newhall v. Vargas, 15 Me. 314.

3. 2 Kent's Com. 540.

of the buyer, and is based on the plain reason of justice and equity that one man's goods shall not be applied to the payment of another man's debts.¹

II. WHO MAY EXERCISE THE RIGHT.—The right may be exercised by the seller, or by any one standing in that relation to the goods, as, for example, a factor or purchasing agent, who buys for his principal upon his own credit;² and may be exercised as well

1. Benj. on Sales, § 828, citing D'Aquila v. Lambert, 2 Eden 77.

The history of the law of stoppage in transitu is given by Lord Abinger in Gibson v. Carruthers, 8 M. & W. 337. The right was recognized in Wiseman v. Vandeputt, 2 Vern. 202, in 1690; and again in Snee v. Prescott, 1 Atk. 245. It was recognized by a common-law court in Burghall v. Howard, 1 H. Bl. 366, n., in 1755 by Lord Mansfield.

The right has been defined by Shaw, C. J., in Rawley v. Bigelow, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 313; 23 Am. Dec. 607, to be "an extension of the right of lien which, by the common law, a vendor has upon the goods for the price, originally allowed in equity, and subsequently adopted as a rule of law." See also Grout v. Hill, 4 Gray (Mass.) 366; Potts v. New York, etc., R. Co., 131 Mass. 457; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 424; 41 Am. Rep. 247; Atkins v. Colby, 20 N. H. 154; 33 Am. Dec. 617; Jordan v. James, 5 Ohio 99; Patten's Appeal, 45 Pa. St. 158; 84 Am. Dec. 479; Bloxam v. Sanders, 4 B. & C. 948; 10 E. C. L. 477; Edwards v. Brewer, 2 M. & W. 375; Hodgson v. Loy, 7 T. R. 440; Tucker v. Humphrey, 1 M. & P. 392. But Lord Abinger said, in Gibson v. Carruthers, 8 M. & W. 338, that "although the question of stoppage in transitu has been as frequently raised as any other mercantile question within the last hundred years, it must be owned that the principle on which it depends has never been either settled or stated in a satisfactory manner. In courts of equity it has been a received opinion that it was founded upon some principle of common law; in courts of law, it has been just as much the practice to call it a principle of equity, which the common law has adopted."

2. Snee v. Prescott, 1 Atk. 245; D'Aquila v. Lambert, Ambler 399; Inglis v. Usherwood, 1 East 515.

A foreign factor or commission merchant, who, for a commission only to himself, purchases upon his own credit, and ships upon the credit which he gives to his employer, is a consignor or seller entitled to the benefit of this rule. Isley v. Stubbs, 9 Mass. 71; 6 Am. Dec. 29; Seymour v. Newton, 105 Mass. 275; Newhall v. Vargas, 13 Me. 103; 29 Am. Dec. 489; Feise v. Wray, 3 East 93; Imperial Bank v. London, etc., Dock Co., 5 Ch. Div. 195; and the right may be exercised by one who pays the price of goods for the buyer and takes from him an assignment of the bill of lading as security for his advancement. Gossler v. Schepeler, 5 Daly (N. Y.) 476.

In Feise v. Wray, 3 East 93, it was claimed that the factor was but an agent with a lien, but Lord Ellenborough held that he might be considered as a vendor who had first bought the goods and then sold them to his correspondent at cost, plus his commission. And this principle has been recognized in Patten v. Thompson, 5 N. & S. 350; Ogle v. Atkinson, 5 Taunt. 759; Oakford v. Drake, 2 F. & F. 493; Tucker v. Humphrey, 4 Bing. 516; 15 E. C. L. 63; Turner v. Liverpool Dock, 6 Exch. 543; 20 L. J. Exch. 393; Ellershaw v. Magniac, 6 Exch. 570; Ireland v. Livingston, L. R., 5 H. L. 395; The Tigress, 32 L. J. Adm. 97; Ex parte Banner, 2 Ch. Div. 278, c. a.; Cassaboglou v. Gibb, 11 Q. B. D. 797, c. a.; Ex parte Miles, 15 Q. B. D. 39, c. a.; Phelps v. Comber, 29 Ch. D. 826, c. a.; Ex parte Francis, 35 L. T. 577.

An agent who purchases goods in his own name is in the position of a seller, and has the right to stop in transitu. Hawkes v. Dunn, 1 Tyr. 413. But the agent must pay for the goods and not leave any liability for payment on the part of the principal; otherwise he is not entitled to stop in transitu. Oakford v. Drake, 2 F. & F. 493. And where one sells goods through an agent to another, and they are shipped to the purchaser, the agent has no right to stop the goods because his principal owes him on account of money advanced in their purchase. Gwyn v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 85 N. Car.

through an agent or any one properly authorized by the seller, as by the seller in person.¹

III. UNDER WHAT CIRCUMSTANCES RIGHT MAY BE EXERCISED.—To enable the seller to exercise the right of stoppage in transitu, the 427; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 452; 39 Am. Rep. 708.

But the seller can only exercise the right against his own buyer; thus, F., a merchant at Dardanelle, ordered goods of W. B. & Co., merchants at St. Louis. They sent the order to L. A. & Co., merchants at New Orleans, with directions to ship the goods to F. at Dardanelle, and send them the bill and bill of lading. L. A. & Co. filled the order, shipped the goods to F. and sent the bill and bill of lading to W. B. & Co., and charged the goods to them, and they charged them to F. During the transit W. B. & Co. failed, and L. A. & Co., claiming the right of stoppage in transitu, demanded the goods of the M. & L. R. R. Co., who were transporting them to F., and the company delivered them up to them. F. then sued the company for the value of the goods. It was held that L. A. & Co. were not the vendors of F.; there was no privity between him and them, and they had no right to stop the goods, and the defendant was liable to F. for their value. Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Freed, 38 Ark. 614; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 212.

A principal consigning goods to his factor may stop them in transitu on the factor becoming insolvent, and that notwithstanding he may be indebted to the factor for advances on the consignment. Kinloch v. Craig, 3 T. R. 119; Wright v. Campbell, 4 Burr. 2047; or that the factor has a joint interest with him therein. Newsom v. Thornton, 6 East 17.

It was held that a mere surety for the purchase price of the goods cannot exercise the right, even though he may be entitled to a commission on the amount, for there exists no primary liability for the price; Siffken v. Wray, 6 East 371; but by 19 and 20 Victoria, the right is now given in England to this surety. And the right cannot be exercised by one having only a lien upon the goods without any property in them. Sweet v. Pym, 1 East 4; Lena-hart v. Cooper, 3 Bing. N. Cas. 99; 32 E. C. L. 55; Molloy v. Hay, 3 M. & R. 396; Freeman v. Burch, 3 Q. B. 492, n.; 43 E. C. L. 835.

A party to whom the bill of lading has been transferred bona fide, may stop the goods. Morison v. Gray, 2 Bing. 260; 9 E. C. L. 405; 9 Moore 484 (but see Waring v. Cox, 1 Camp. 369); and so also may a person who has only an interest in and a right to receive a certain portion of the goods, though not holding a bill of lading. Jenkyns v. Usborne, 8 Scott N. R. 505; 7 M. & G. 678; 49 E. C. L. 678.

Where goods are furnished to the agent of a bankrupt, on the agent's credit, he may, to protect himself, stop them in transitu, and give them a new direction adversely to his principal; but if he gives them a fresh destination in furtherance of the usual course of business of the principal, they pass to the assignees as in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Hawkes v. Dunn, 1 Tyr. 413; 1 C. & J. 519.

1. Exercise of Right by Agent.—Any agent, who has the power to act for the consignor, either generally or for the purposes of the consignment in question, may stop goods in transit without any authority specially directed to that end, or empowering him to adopt that particular measure. Reynolds v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 43 N. H. 589; Seymour v. Newton, 105 Mass. 275; Bell v. Moss, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 189; Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 2; 60 Am. Dec. 180; Newhall v. Vargas, 13 Me. 93; 29 Am. Dec. 489; Whitehead v. Anderson, 9 M. & W. 518; Hutchings v. Nunes, 1 Moore P. C., N. S. 243; and even where one acts without authority in making the stoppage, it will be good, if subsequently ratified by the seller before the buyer or his assignee obtains possession of, or makes any demand for, the goods. Durgy Cement, etc., Co. v. O'Brien, 123 Mass. 12; distinguishing Bird v. Brown, 4 Exch. 786; Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 2; 60 Am. Dec. 188.

But the ratification, to avail the seller, must be made before the buyer demands the goods. Bird v. Brown, 4 Exch. 786; Davis v. McWhirter, 40 U. C. Q. B. 598; or obtains possession of them. Reynolds v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 43 N. H. 589.

And it has been held a sufficient ratification, where a letter, giving authority to the agent, had been mailed several days before he assumed to act, though goods must be unpaid for, must be in transit or in the hands of a third person, and the buyer must be insolvent.¹

1. Goods Must be Unpaid For—a. EFFECT OF PART PAYMENT.—Part payment by the buyer has only the effect of diminishing the claim pro tanto on the goods detained, and does not affect the seller's right of stoppage for the protection of the price remaining unpaid;² nor is he, in order to exercise this right, bound to refund what he may have received in part payment.³

b. PAYMENT BY NOTE OR BILL.—The seller does not lose his right of stoppage by accepting bills or notes for the purchase price, unless it has been agreed that it should be regarded as absolute payment,⁴ and this notwithstanding he may have negoti-it did not reach him until several days thereafter. Hutchings v. Nunes, 1 Moore P. C., N. S. 243.

1. More v. Lott, 13 Nev. 379; Walsh v. Blakeley, 6 Mont. 194; Schuster v. Carson, 28 Neb. 612; Wood v. Roach, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 180; 1 Am. Dec. 276; Walley v. Montgomery, 3 East 585; Wilmshurst v. Bowker, 7 M. & G. 882; 49 E. C. L. 882; Story on Sales (4th ed.), § 327; Tiedeman on Sales, § 127.

2. Newhall v. Vargas, 13 Me. 108; 29 Am. Dec. 489; Hodgson v. Loy, 7 T. R. 440; Feise v. Wray, 3 East 93; Edwards v. Brewer, 2 M. & W. 375; Van Casteel v. Booker, 2 Exch. 702.

But where the contract is apportionable, the seller can only claim the right of stoppage over that portion of the goods which remains unpaid for. Merchant Banking Co. v. Phoenix Bessemer Steel Co., 5 Ch. Div. 205.

3. Newhall v. Vargas, 13 Me. 108; 29 Am. Dec. 489.

4. In Newhall v. Vargas, 13 Me. 103; 29 Am. Dec. 489, the goods for a return cargo were paid for by bills drawn by the master of the vessel on the owner, payable to the seller, and the court held that they were not equivalent to payment, but mere evidence of the debt due the seller, and did not deprive him of any remedy authorized by law where the buyer became insolvent; and although by the form of the bills the master made himself personally liable, there was no reason to suppose that his security was relied on by the seller, or that by accepting the bills he waived other remedies.

In Donath v. Broomhead, 7 Pa. St. 301, where goods arrived at their port of destination and the buyer paid the freight and gave his note for the price, but the goods, in consequence of the loss of the invoice, were stored in the custom-house and remained there until the dishonor of the note, the right of stoppage was held to remain.

In Bell v. Moss, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 189, the seller shipped the goods from Leghorn to the buyer in Philadelphia and drew on the buyer's agent in London, who, in a letter to the seller had recognized the credit, for the purchase price. The buyer failed and the London agent declined to accept the bill, and it was held that the seller might stop the goods in transit, Gibson, C. J., in delivering the opinion of the court, saying: "As nothing but an extinguishment of the debt is satisfaction between the buyer and seller, I would say that a power to check for a deposit in bank would not be payment to suspend the right of stoppage, unless it were so agreed, and the deposit were actually placed to the drawer's account—certainly it would not produce that consequence if the deposit might be withdrawn or the consignor's check might be refused. On the principle of substituting the London house as the debtor, the bills, drawn as they were by the consignors, would have exonerated the consignees from all responsibility whatever; but it has not been said that an action would not have been maintainable against them on the contract of sale, and why might they not proceed as well by an enforcement of their lien? If the drawing of a bill had the effect of merging every previous responsibility, the right of stoppage, which is incident to the consignee's liability on the contract of sale, would be extinguished by it in every case; but that it is followed by no such consequence is shown, among other instances, by Feise v. Wray, 3 East 94, in which the right was sustained, though an indorsed bill, drawn by the consignor and accepted by the consignee, ated the bills so that they are outstanding in the hands of third parties;¹ nor need the notes be tendered back before stopping the goods.²

2. Goods Must be in Transit.—The goods must be in transit, for, if the transit has not begun, the seller's right of retention, if such right exists, is based on some other right than that of stoppage in transitu.³

had still a month to run. This would prove, were an authority wanted for so plain a principle, that liability on the original contract is not supplanted by a security given for the price; as is instanced also by the giving of the buyer's own note or bill, which, though it operates as an extension of the credit, extinguishes not the original contract; as well as by payment in the bills of a third person, which is not absolute satisfaction unless it were declared so by the terms of the bargain."

In the recent case of Ainis v. Ayres, 62 Hun (N. Y.) 376, the facts were almost identical with Bell v. Moss, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 189, the buyer's London agent having accepted the draft and, on the failure of his principal, refused to pay it, and the seller was allowed to stop the goods, the court saying: "It is perfectly well settled that the vendor's right of stoppage in transitu is not lost by his having received the acceptances of the vendee, even though he may have negotiated the bills so that they are outstanding in third hands unmaturing."

In Clapp v. Sohmer, 55 Iowa 273, it is said that "A promissory note cannot be regarded as a payment unless it has been expressly received as such." And see Arnold v. Delano, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 33; 50 Am. Dec. 754; Lewis v. Mason, 36 Up. Can. Q. B. 590; Dixon v. Yates, 5 B. & Ad. 345; 27 E. C. L. 86; Feise v. Wray, 3 East 93; Edwards v. Brewer, 2 M. & W. 375; Miles v. Gorton, 2 C. & M. 504; Jenkyns v. Usborne, 7 M. & G. 678; 8 Scott 505.

See also, as to the effect of payment by note, bill, or check, PAYMENT, vol. 18, p. 167, et seq., where the cases are very fully collated and discussed.

But where the seller accepts an order, note, or accepted bill of a third party in payment for the goods, without the indorsement or guaranty of the purchaser, he has no right of stoppage. Eaton v. Cook, 32 Vt. 58; Cowasjee v. Thompson, 5 Moore's P. C. 165. This is on the principle that if a man has a bill payable to him, or bearer, and delivers it over for money received, without indorsement, it is a plain sale of the bill, and he who sells it does not become a new security. Bank of England v. Newman, 1 Ld. Raym. 442; 12 Mod. 241; Whitbeck v. Van Ness, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 409; 6 Am. Dec. 383. "If a vendor of goods receive from the purchaser the note of a third person, at the time of the sale (such note not being forged, and there being no fraud or misrepresentation on the part of the purchaser as to the solvency of the maker), it is deemed to have been accepted by the vendor in payment and satisfaction unless the contrary be expressly proved." Breed v. Cook, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 241.

1. Newhall v. Vargas, 13 Me. 103; 29 Am. Dec. 489; Bell v. Moss, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 189; Lewis v. Mason, 36 U. C. Q. B. 590; Feise v. Wray, 3 East 93; Patten v. Thompson, 5 M. & S. 350; Edwards v. Brewer, 2 M. & W. 375; Miles v. Gorton, 2 C. & M. 504; Holbrook v. Vose, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 76; Story on Sales, § 327. But see Arnold v. Delano, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 33; 50 Am. Dec. 754, where it is said "that a promissory note, even if in form negotiable, whilst it remains in the hands of the vendor and not negotiated, but ready to be delivered up on the discharge of the lien, is regarded as the evidence in writing of a promise to pay for the goods purchased, and does not vary the rights of the parties."

2. Hays v. Mouille, 14 Pa. St. 54; Bell v. Moss, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 189; Edwards v. Brewer, 2 M. & W. 375; Story on Sales, § 327.

3. Tiedeman on Sales, §§ 129, 122. Shaw, C. J., in Arnold v. Delano, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 39; 1 Am. Dec. 754, seems to think that the seller might retain possession by virtue of his right of lien, and says that "The law, in holding that a vendor who has thus given credit for goods waives his lien for the price, does so on one implied condition, which is, that the vendee shall keep his credit good. If, therefore, before payment the vendee becomes bankrupt or insol-

a. WHEN TRANSIT BEGINS.—Whenever the goods have passed out of the control of the seller, for the purpose of transportation to the buyer, the transit may be said to have begun.¹

b. WHEN TRANSIT ENDS—(1) In General.—The transit continues until the goods come into the actual or constructive possession of the buyer, or of some person acting for him.²

vent, and the vendor still retains the custody of the goods, or any part of them, his lien is restored, and he may hold the goods as security for the price." And in this he is supported by Thompson v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 28 Md. 406.

In Story on Sales, § 319, it is said: "It will be perceived that these two rights of lien and stoppage in transitu, although they are very similar, are not identical. The right of lien can only be exercised upon goods which are in the actual or constructive possession of the vendor, and in respect to which no delivery has taken place; but the right of stoppage in transitu is properly exercised only upon the goods which are in passage, and are in the hands of some intermediate person between the vendor and vendee in process and for the purpose of delivery. In the one case there is an incipient delivery, or at least a resignation of possession, and in the other there is not. The criterion, therefore, whether the vendor retains the right of stoppage, is not to be found in the question whether he has lost possession, but whether the vendee has acquired possession. When possession is surrendered by the vendor his lien is gone, but his right of stoppage remains until the vendee has acquired possession. In a word, the right in the one case is to retain possession, the right in the other is to regain possession."

Stoppage After Transit Ended.—Where the transit has ended, if the seller attempts to stop the goods, he is a wrongdoer, and will be liable for any damage resulting, and can obtain no lien upon the goods for any expenses incurred by himself. In Guilford v. Smith, 30 Vt. 74, the seller of goods, after they had reached their destination and were in the possession of a warehouseman, took them from him, paying the freight and giving a bond for indemnity to secure the payment of the import duties. It was held that he acquired no lien on the property for the expenditures, or the indemnity incurred by his bond.

1. Benj. on Sales (6th Am. ed.), § 839.

And this though they be only in the hands of a middleman as a packer; Atkins v. Colby, 20 N. H. 155; Ellis v. Hunt, 3 T. R. 467; or a warehouseman or forwarding agent; Atkins v. Colby, 20 N. H. 155; Nicholls v. Le Teuvre, 2 Bing. N. Cas. 81; 29 E. C. L. 262; as well as in the actual possession of a carrier. If in the possession of a carrier for the purpose of transportation it is immaterial that the goods are still in his warehouse and not yet loaded into the car or vessel; they are nevertheless in transit. Berndtson v. Strang, L. R., 4 Eq. 481; Hodgson v. Loy, 7 T. R. 440; Ex parte Rosevear China Clay Co. 11 Ch. Div. 560; Northey v. Field, 2 Esp. 613; Holst v. Pownall, 1 Esp. 240; Tiedeman on Sales, § 129.

2. There will be found an apparent conflict in the cases, some holding that there must be an actual delivery to the vendee or his agent in order to prevent the vendor's right of stoppage from attaching. Calahan v. Babcock, 21 Ohio St. 281; 8 Am. Rep. 63; Symns v. Schotten, 35 Kan. 310; U. S. Engine Co. v. Oliver, 16 Neb. 614; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Painter, 15 Neb. 394; Walsh v. Blakelee, 6 Mont. 194; Reynolds v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 43 N. H. 580; Mohr v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 106 Mass. 70; Stubbs v. Lund, 7 Mass. 453; 5 Am. Dec. 63; Stanton v. Eager, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 467; Arnold v. Delano, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 33; 1 Am. Dec. 754; Grout v. Hill, 4 Gray (Mass.) 361; while others hold that the delivery may be constructive as well as actual. Insee v. Lane, 57 N. H. 454; Hall v. Dimond, 63 N. H. 565; Greve v. Dunham, 60 Iowa 108; O'Neil v. Garrett, 6 Iowa 484; McFetridge v. Piper, 40 Iowa 627; Rucker v. Donovan, 13 Kan. 255; 19 Am. Rep. 84; Fraschieris v. Henriques, 6 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 254; Buckley v. Furniss, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 145; Covell v. Hitchcock, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 63; Nottam v. Heyer, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 629; Hoover v. Tibbits, 13 Wis. 79; Jones v. Earl, 37 Cal. 632; 99 Am. Dec. 338; Blackman v. Pierce, 23 Cal. 509; Moore v. Lott, 13 Nev. 383; Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 12; 60 Am. Dec. 188;

(2) Delivery at Destination — (a) When Destination Is Reached. — When the goods have arrived at the place for which they were intended under the directions given by the seller, and require new orders from the buyer to put them again in motion, they have reached their destination, and delivery there ends the transit.¹

Halff v. Allyn, 60 Tex. 278; Sawyer v. Joslin, 20 Vt. 172; 49 Am. Dec. 768; Hayes v. Mouille, 14 Pa. St. 51; Cabben v. Campbell, 30 Pa. St. 259; The Natchez, 31 Fed. Rep. 615. But upon an examination and comparison of these cases it will be seen that this apparent conflict may be readily reconciled, each class having in mind a different constructive delivery. Those decisions which hold constructive delivery insufficient have in mind the delivery to the carrier at the beginning of the transit, which is such a constructive delivery to the buyer as will place the goods at his risk and cause the seller to lose his right of lien, but not his right of stoppage. Those decisions which hold constructive delivery sufficient to defeat the right of stoppage have in mind the delivery by the carrier to the buyer (Kendal v. Marshall, 11 Q. B. Div. 364); which may be done constructively, as where the carrier enters into an agreement with the buyer to hold the goods as his agent or warehouseman, or, as where the buyer's agent demanded and marked the goods at the inn where they arrived at their destination, it was considered a constructive delivery defeating the right of stoppage. Inslee v. Lane, 57 N. H. 459; Ellis v. Hunt, 3 T. R. 466. The first class of cases consider that in a case of this kind the buyer has actual possession by his authorized agent, and that it is an actual and not a constructive delivery. See Alsberg v. Latta, 30 Iowa 442; Warner v. Johnson, 65 Iowa 128. The distinction will be the more readily seen from an examination of the case of Buckley v. Furniss, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 145, where it was said that the goods must come into the actual possession of the purchaser, or be placed under circumstances equivalent to actual possession. Bronson, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, saying: "It may be conceded that the title to the goods passed to the vendee when they were forwarded pursuant to his order; that the delivery to the carrier was for the most purposes a delivery to the purchaser, and the loss of the property, had it been sunk or destroyed, would have fallen on him. Still, it was only a constructive, not an actual delivery to the vendee; and such interest as he had in them was subject to be defeated, in case of his insolvency, by the exercise of the vendor's right to stop the goods before they came into the actual possession of the purchaser."

Parke, B., in Whitehead v. Anderson, 9 M. & W. 534, says that "A case of constructive possession is where the carrier enters expressly or by implication into a new agreement distinct from the original contract for carriage, to hold the goods for the consignee as his agent, not for the purpose of expediting them to the place of original destination pursuant to that contract, but in a new character for the purpose of custody on his account, and subject to some new and further order to be given to him." And see Abott on Shipping, 624. 625. See also Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 2; 60 Am. Dec. 188.

1. Bethell v. Clark, 19 Q. B. Div. 553; 20 Q. B. Div. 615. And see Walt v. Scott, 6 Grant (Ont.) 154, and Treadwell v. Aydlett, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 388; Biggs v. Barry, 2 Curtis (U. S.) 259.

In Dixon v. Baldwin, 5 East 185, the goods were sold on credit by a cotton-spinner at Manchester to B. & Son, merchants of London, but they were directed to be sent to M. & Co., of Hull, for the purpose of being shipped to the correspondents of B. & Son at Hamburg, and by these correspondents sent to the persons for whom they were intended. They were reclaimed by the sellers while in the hands of Metcalf & Co. waiting orders from B. & Son, who had failed. The court held that the transit was at an end, Lord Ellenborough, C. J., remarking that, "The goods had so far gotten to the end of their journey that they waited for new orders from the purchaser to put them again in motion, to communicate to them another substantive destination, and that without such order they would continue stationary."

In Becker v. Hallgarten, 86 N. Y. 167, the buyers, living in Berlin, ordered their seller, also of Berlin, to ship the goods to their agent at Bremen, subject to their disposal, which was done; the seller informing the Bremen agent that the goods were sent "at the request of and for account of" the buyer, and requesting him to "carry out the further instructions of said parties concerning the same." It was held that the goods had reached the place for which they were intended by the seller and had come under the actual control of the buyers. In this case the buyers had also transferred the goods to a third party to secure a loan of money, and the court said that, had the detention at Bremen been originally intended only to give the buyers an opportunity to determine by which of the several routes, or at what time, as in Harris v. Pratt, 17 N. Y. 249, the goods would go on, the circumstance of the transfer to a third party who took actual possession and control of the goods would have defeated the right.

But where a firm, carrying on business in New York and in Nottingham, Eng., under different firm names, one partner residing in each place, purchased, in the name of the Nottingham firm, goods which they informed the manufacturer were for the New York market and which they directed to be forwarded for shipment to a shipping-agent at Liverpool, there to await further instructions, it was held that delivery to the shipping agent appointed by the vendee was not a termination of the transit, the court, per Denio, J., saying: "We regard what was done by the firm of Nottingham, in giving directions to the shipping agents, to have been in aid of the general purpose of sending the goods to New York. The partner at Nottingham, though in law one of the purchasers, acted in regard to these goods as an agent of the house at New York in facilitating the transportation to that city. During the short time the goods remained in the hands of these agents, before directions came from Nottingham, they could not be said to be 'awaiting new orders from the purchaser to put them again in motion, and to communicate to them another substantive destination,' in the sense in which that language was used by Lord Ellenborough in Dixon v. Baldwin, 5 East 185. New York was the destination contemplated from the beginning. It was the one named to the vendor, and there was no thought of diverting the goods from that point at any time, or by any person. They were awaiting a new impulse only in the sense in which that may be predicated of freight in transitu, which is permanently at rest while arrangements are making to send it forward on the journey on which it was originally embarked." Harris v. Pratt, 17 N. Y. 249.

But in Ex parte Miles, 15 Q. B. Div. 39, a commission agent in London was employed by merchants at Kingston, Jamaica, to buy goods for them in England. The commission agent ordered the goods of the manufacturers "for this mark," there being in the margin of the letter which gave the order a mark consisting of two letters with "Kingston, Jamaica," added. The manufacturers knew from previous dealings that this mark had been used by the Jamaica firm. The goods were to be paid for by six months' bills drawn by the manufacturers on the commission agent and accepted by him. The commission agent afterwards wrote the manufacturers, telling them to pack the goods and mark them with the mark previously mentioned, and to forward them to specified shipping agents at Southampton, for shipment by a particular ship, "advising them with particulars for clearance." The manufacturers sent the invoice of the goods to the commission agent, telling him that they had that day forwarded the goods by railway to the shipping agents "with the usual particulars for clearance." The same day the manufacturers wrote to the shipping agents, sending them the particulars of the goods, and adding, "which please forward as directed." The particulars described the goods as marked with the letters originally given by the commission agent, and the words "Kingston, Jamaica," and numbered with specified numbers; but the columns for "consignee" and "destination" were left in blank. The cost of the carriage to Southampton was paid by the manufacturers. The commission agent sent the shipping agents particulars of the goods, giving the name of the Jamaica firm as consignees, and stating the destination of the goods to be Kingston, Jamaica. The goods were shipped on board the vessel, the bills of lading describing the commission agent as consignor, and the Jamaica firm as consignees. After the ship had sailed, but before her arrival at Jamaica, the commission agent stopped payment, and the manufacturers, who had not been paid for the goods, gave notice to the shipowners to stop them in transitu. It was held that, as between the commission agent and the manufacturers, the commission agent was a purchaser and the transit was at end when the goods arrived at Southampton, and that the notice to stop was given too late. In this case the learned judge said: "What is meant by sending goods to their destination?" It seems to me that it means sending them to a particular place, to a particular person who is to receive them there, and not sending them to a particular place without saying to whom."

(b) Mere Arrival at Destination Not Sufficient.—The mere arrival of the goods at their destination, however, and unloading and placing them in the warehouse of the railroad company, does not of itself terminate the transit nor put an end to the right of stoppage. As long as they remain in the possession of the carrier, as such, the right continues. There may be cases where the carrier becomes the agent of the vendee and holds the goods as a warehouseman for him, but such agency will not be implied from his original employment, and until some agreement or understanding to that effect is affirmatively shown, he will be presumed to retain them in his original capacity of carrier.¹

1. Symns v. Schotten, 35 Kan. 310; Calahan v. Babcock, 21 Ohio St. 293; 8 Am. Rep. 63; Hays v. Mouille, 14 Pa. St. 51; Bender v. Bowman, 2 Pearson (Pa.) 517; Greve v. Dunham, 60 Iowa 108; Clapp v. Peck, 55 Iowa 270; O'Neil v. Garrett, 6 Iowa 480; McFetridge v. Piper, 40 Iowa 628; Alsberg v. Latta, 30 Iowa 442; Reynolds v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 43 N. H. 580; Inslee v. Lane, 57 N. H. 454; Atkins v. Colby, 20 N. H. 155; Guilford v. Smith, 30 Vt. 65; Half v. Allyn, 60 Tex. 278; Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 1; 60 Am. Dec. 188; Seymour v. Newton, 105 Mass. 275; Naylor v. Dennie, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 198; Powell v. McKechnie, 3 Dakota 319; Parker v. McIver, 1 Desaus. Eq. (S. Car.) 281; Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Meador, 65 Ga. 705; Mottram v. Heyer, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 629; Covell v. Hitchcock, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 611; Harris v. Hart, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 606; Coventry v. Gladstone, L. R., 6 Eq. 44; Kendal v. Marshall, 11 Q. B. Div. 366; McLean v. Breithaupt, 12 Ont. App. 383; Foster v. Frampton, 6 B. & C. 107; 13 E. C. L. 111; Bolton v. Lancashire, etc., R. Co., L. R., 1 C. P. 431; Whitehead v. Anderson, 9 M. & W. 535; Bartram v. Farebrother, 1 M. & P. 526; Jackson v. Nichol, 5 Bing. N. Cas. 508; 35 E. C. L. 202; Kemp v. Falk, L. R., 7 App. Cas. 584; Ex parte

Barrow, 6 Ch. Div. 783; Ex parte Cooper, 11 Ch. Div. 68; Blackburn on Sales, p. 370.

In Clapp v. Peck, 55 Iowa 270, the purchaser claimed that an arrangement had been made by him with the railroad agent by which the goods were to be stored and kept for him. The agent testified that no such arrangement had been made, but that the goods were stored simply because they were not taken away by the purchaser. Decision was rendered in favor of the seller, and upon an appeal the court declined to disturb the judgment, the evidence being conflicting.

And where, on the arrival of a vessel containing a load of lumber, the consignee went on board and told the captain that he had come to take possession and went down into the cabin, into which the ends of the timbers projected, and saw and touched them with his fingers, and the captain made no reply at the time, but afterwards told him, at the same interview, that he would deliver the cargo when satisfied about his freight charges, it was held that the captain had not contracted to hold as agent of the consignee and the transit was not at an end. Whitehead v. Anderson, 9 M. & W. 518. And in this case Parke, B., said: "It appears to us very doubtful whether an act of marking or taking samples or the like, without any removal from the possession of the carrier, though done with the intention to take possession, would amount to a constructive possession unless accompanied by such circumstances as to denote that the carrier was intended to keep, and consented to keep, the goods in the nature of an agent for custody." And see Foster v. Frampton, 6 B. & C. 107; 13 E. C. L. 111.

Four or five weeks after the arrival of goods at their destination, the consignee, who owed arrearages of charges upon other goods, verbally pledged the goods to the railroad company as security therefor. The goods at that time were in the company's warehouse, and under a stipulation of the bill of lading the company had a lien thereon for the arrearages. There was no change of possession, nor was there any new consideration for the agreement. Held, that no delivery had taken place which would defeat the seller's right of stoppage. Farrell v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 102 N. Car. 390; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 704. And where, by statute, actual receipt of the goods was necessary to put an end to the right of stoppage, it was held that, although goods had reached their destination and, by agreement between the railroad company and the consignee, had been set apart in the company's depot to be sold for the payment of arrearages of freight due the carrier, no delivery was effected by this agreement, and the right of stoppage still continued. Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Meador, 65 Ga. 705.

(c) Consignee Must Consent to Receive.—The consignee must consent to receive the goods as well as the carrier to deliver them, for the carrier can no more constitute himself the consignee's agent to hold, without his consent, than can the consignee make the carrier his agent without the carrier's consent.¹

In McLean v. Breithaupt, 12 Ont. App. 383, goods were shipped to the buyer on a shipping bill containing the following conditions: "In all cases . . . the delivery of the goods will be considered complete and the responsibilities of the company shall terminate when the goods are placed in the company's shed or warehouse, . . . when they shall have arrived at the place to be reached upon the railway of the company. The warehousing of them will be at the owner's risk, . . . storage to be charged on all freight remaining in the depot over forty-eight hours." On the arrival of the goods at their destination the buyer requested that they be kept for him by the company until he could find time to remove them, and that no storage be charged, but the railroad agent did not promise. This was held to be no delivery, and the seller allowed to exercise the right of stoppage.

1. In McLean v. Breithaupt, 12 Ont. App. 388, Burton, J., said: "The carrier cannot of his own will convert himself into a warehouseman for the purchaser so as to terminate the transitus." Nor, a fortiori, can the carrier appoint someone to receive and hold the goods as agent of the consignee upon the latter's failure or refusal to accept them. He can, it is true, place them in the hands of a warehouseman or wharfinger for safekeeping, but there is no delivery unless it is to one having a general or special authority from the consignee. James v. Griffin, 2 M. & W. 623, is a strong case in point. Here the purchaser, knowing himself to be insolvent, determined not to receive a cargo of lead which he had not paid for, but on its arrival at the wharf where he had been in the habit of leaving the lead with the wharfingers as his agents, it became necessary to unload it in order to set the vessel free. He, therefore, told the captain to put it on the wharf, but did not tell the wharfingers of his intention not to receive it, and they probably deemed themselves his agents to hold possession. After this the goods were stopped, and it was held that the buyer's intention not to receive being proved, the wharfingers could not receive as his agents without his assent, and therefore the transit was not ended. And in Bolton v. Lancashire, etc., R. Co., L. R., 1 C. P. 431, Willes, J., said: "The arrival, which is to divest the vendor's right of stoppage in transitu, must be such that the buyer has taken actual or constructive possession of the goods, and that cannot be as long as he repudiates them." See also, Alsberg v. Latta, 30 Iowa 442; Greve v. Dunham, 60 Iowa 108; Grout v. Hill, 4 Gray (Mass.) 361; Lane v. Jackson, 5 Mass. 162; Scholfeld v. Bell, 14 Mass. 40; Naylor v. Dennie, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 198; 19 Am. Dec. 319; Inslee v. Lane, 57 N. H. 454; Ex parte Barrow 6 Ch. Div. 783; Benjamin on Sales, §§ 849, 851.

In Kloes v. Wurmser, 34 Mo. App. 453, the insolvent buyer wrote to the vendor rescinding the sale while the goods were yet in transit, which was consented to by the seller, and it was held that title was re-vested in the seller even as against an innocent purchaser without notice from the buyer.

(a) Delivery to Agent of Consignee.—When delivery is made to an agent of the consignee, the question is whether the goods in his hands require new orders to put them again in motion and give them another substantive destination. If, without such new orders, they must continue stationary, then the delivery is complete, and the seller's right of stoppage lost; but if the agent is one merely to receive and expedite the goods on the way to their original destination, his possession is considered the same as that of a carrier, and the right of stoppage continues.¹

Delivery to the sheriff or to the mortgagees of the buyer, who are in possession of his store, is not such a delivery as will defeat the right of stoppage, and this notwithstanding a clause in the mortgage conveying after-acquired property. Kingman v. Denison, 84 Mich. 608; Harris v. Tenney (Tex.), 20 S. W. Rep. 82. But the bankruptcy of the buyer, not being in law a rescission of the contract, and the assignees being vested with all his rights, the delivery of the goods into the buyer's warehouse after his bankruptcy, or an actual possession of them taken by his trustee, will put an end to the transit. Ellis v. Hunt, 3 T. R. 467; Tooke v. Hollingworth, 5 T. R. 226; Scott v. Pettit, 3 B. & P. 469; Inglis v. Usherwood, 1 East 515.

In Lane v. Robinson, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 623, the carrier, a teamster, on his arrival at the place of destination, found that the consignee of the goods had absconded and appointed no one to receive them; so he told one Redman that he had better pay for the hauling and keep the goods for the consignee, which Redman did. The court decided that this was a delivery, putting an end to the transit, and therefore to the right of stoppage in transitu. The decision was based upon the ground that the delivery to Redman was a delivery to keep for the consignee, as his agent, the court seeming to lose sight of the fact that no one can become agent save by authority of the principal, and while the consignee might have afterwards ratified Redman's agency in receiving the goods, yet it must have been before the seller gave notice of his intention to claim the right of stoppage. See White v. Mitchell, 38 Mich. 390; O'Neil v. Garrett, 6 Iowa 480; Hoover v. Tibbits, 13 Wis. 79; Ex parte Barrow, 6 Ch. Div. 783.

1. Cabeen v. Campbell, 30 Pa. St. 259; Markwald v. Creditors, 7 Cal. 213; Harris v. Pratt, 17 N. Y. 263; Hol- brook v. Vose, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 76; Lyons v. Hoffnung, L. R., 15 App. Cas. 391; Dixon v. Baldwin, 5 East 175; Valpy v. Gibson, 4 C. B. 837; 56 E. C. L. 837; Pottinges v. Hecksher, 2 Grant (Ont.) 309; 2 Kent's Comm. 545. Hence it is immaterial that the carrier has been appointed by the buyer himself. It does not make him such an agent of the vendee as will defeat the vendor's right of stoppage. Hays v. Mouille, 14 Pa. St. 51; 2 Kent's Comm. 545; Lickbarrow v. Mason, 1 Smith's Lead. Cas. (7th Am. ed.) 818; Holst v. Pownall, 1 Esp. 240; Jackson v. Nichol, 5 Bing. N. Cas. 508; 35 E. C. L. 202. But it has been held that if the seller takes bills of lading stating that the goods are shipped on account of the buyer, the delivery is complete, and the seller cannot afterwards stop the goods in transit. Meletopulo v. Ranking, 6 Jur. 1095.

It is immaterial whether the orders to the agent were given before or after the order to the sellers. The case depends upon what was the transit, and when the goods have arrived at the end of the journey upon which they had been sent by the seller's orders, and have been received by the buyer's agent in his behalf, the right of stoppage is gone. Kendal v. Marshall, 11 Q. B. Div. 365. In this case the purchaser ordered the goods sent to M. & Co., owners of a line of vessels, whom he ordered to forward them to Rouen; and, on its being argued that M. & Co. were only carrying agents, Brett, L. J., said: "The truth is, they were to act as agents for the vendee and keep the goods until the ship should be ready to sail; but I do not think it a material matter that they were to keep the goods. The point is that M. & Co. received their instructions from the vendee and not from the vendor."

And where a manufacturer's agent bought wool for his factory, to be paid for by the paper of the manufacturing company on delivery at the factory, which wool was delivered to the agent upon an order from the seller to the storekeeper having possession of the same, and by him forwarded to his factory, it was held, on the failure of the manufacturing company before the arrival of the wool, that it might be stopped in transit; that the transit was not terminated either by the order of the seller upon the storekeeper, or the acts of the agent in taking possession. The court said that the delivery was not to the agent as owner, nor as agent of the owners, to dispose of in any other way than to transship to the buyer's place of business. He was the agent of the buyers to make the purchase of the wool to be transmitted to the factory, and that was the extent of his agency. He stood, therefore, rather in the position of a mere forwarding agent than in that of an agent to receive the goods for the buyer's use. Aguirre v. Parmelee, 22 Conn. 473.

In Leeds v. Wright, 3 B. & P. 320, the goods were purchased of the plaintiff at Manchester by one Moisseron, in the name of Le Grand & Co., of Paris, for whom he was general agent in London. The seller, by Moisseron's directions, sent them to the house of the defendant, a packer in London, where some of them were unpacked and sent away and the remainder repacked. Moisseron had authority to send the goods to Paris, Holland or Germany, or any other market as he should think most beneficial. While the balance of the goods were at the packer's, Le Grand & Co. failed, upon which the plaintiff demanded the goods. It was held that the transit had ended. Lord Alvanley said: "These goods were not sent to the defendant, the packer, to be delivered by him to the house of Le Grand & Co., at Paris, but they were sent to Moisseron, the agent of that house in London, and were there to await his disposal, he being invested with authority to send them to such market as he should think most advisable. Indeed, Moisseron might, if he had so pleased, have made London the place of their ultimate destination and have disposed of the goods there."

In Guilford v. Smith, 30 Vt. 49, P. & Co., at Burlington, purchased flour of G. H. & Co., of Toronto, which they ordered shipped to F. & H., their agents at Ogdensburg, who were in the habit of receiving their flour and forwarding it as directed by them. In the bills of lading the flour was consigned to F. &

H., "to be forwarded to P. & Co., Burlington." On the arrival of the flour at Ogdensburg, it was stored in a bonded warehouse connected with the railroad, awaiting the payment of charges and duties, the warehouseman agreeing to hold it subject to the orders of F. & H. On G. H. & Co.'s attempt to stop the flour in transit, it was held that the transit was ended by its arrival at Ogdensburg, and the exercise of control over it by F. & H., the court saying, that even had Burlington been the ulterior destination, the fact that the flour had reached a point on its transit where it would await a fresh direction to be given to it by P. & Co., or their agents, the transit nevertheless would be at an end.

Delivery of Logs to a Booming Company.—A contract for logs provided that the seller should drive them to the main stream to be taken in charge by a booming company when its drive went down, and if too late should follow and overtake the drive. The seller engaged another person, who was taking a large quantity of other logs to meet the drive, to take these logs with them, but he missed the drive, and as he could not separate the logs and had engaged to take the other logs farther, he took these also, the seller apparently acquiescing. When he reached his destination the main drive had not been overtaken, and as he was going no farther, the buyer, without objection from the seller, engaged the booming company to go back and collect the logs and run them to a designated place, and this was held to have amounted to a delivery which cut off any lien the seller might have had on the logs, and his right to stop them in transit. Muskegon Booming Co. v. Underhill, 43 Mich. 629.

Delivery at a Specified Place.—But where the contract of purchase provides that the goods shall be delivered at a specified place, the transitus is ended when they are delivered there, although it is not the place of ultimate destination, and the goods are re-shipped from there to the vendee. Thus, in Brooke Iron Co. v. O'Brien, 135 Mass. 446, iron was purchased by a firm in Boston from the Brooke Iron Co. in Pennsylvania, to be delivered at Elizabethport, N. J., and, on its arrival at Elizabethport, was received by the vendee's agent and forwarded to him at Boston. On the vendor attempting to stop the iron at Boston it was held that the transit ended on the delivery to the vendee's agent at Elizabethport, the court, per Holmes, J., saying: "The contract between the seller and the buyers expressly provided that the goods should be delivered at Elizabethport; the identification of the buyers as of Boston does not affect the place of delivery or cut down the plain words 'deliverable at Elizabethport.'" And see Dodson v. Wentworth, 4 M. & G. 1080; 43 E. C. L. 555; Ex parte Rosevear China Clay Co., 11 Ch. Div. 569, per Brett, L. J., and Ex parte Watson, 5 Ch. Div. 35.

(e) Effect of Carrier Refusing to Deliver.—The rights of the buyer cannot be affected by the wrongful refusal of the carrier to deliver the goods, and when the destination is reached, if the carrier, upon tender of his charges, wrongfully refuses to make delivery, the transit will be considered ended and the right of stoppage cease to exist.¹

Delivery "Free on Board."—But an agreement to deliver "free on board," at a certain place, has no such effect. That expression only means that the purchaser will not have to pay drayage from the place of business of the vendor to the carriage, but that the vendor will bear that expense and deliver the goods "free on board" the vessel or car. Ex parte Rosevear China Clay Co., 11 Ch. Div. 565.

1. Where the goods have reached their destination and the party having the right to their possession has demanded them of the carrier, he has no right to refuse, and if he does, the transit will be considered at an end at the time the consignee demands the goods and tenders the freight, for the wrongful refusal of a carrier to make delivery cannot affect the rights of the consignee. Bird v. Brown, 4 Ex. 786; 19 L. J. Ex. 154; Walley v. Montgomery, 3 East 585; Bohtlingk v. Inglis, 3 East 381; Reynolds v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 43 N. H. 591.

In Blackburn on Sale 375, written before the decision of Bird v. Brown, 4 Ex. 786, the learned author says: "And possibly an unequivocal demand of possession made upon the middleman and refused by him, may have the same effect upon the transitus that an actual taking of possession against the assent of the middleman would have had. That is, it would terminate the transitus if the refusal were so tortious as to render the middleman liable in trover, just as the actual taking of possession would terminate the transitus if it was justifiable against the middleman."

In Anderson v. Fish, 16 Ont. (Q. B. Div.) 476, affirmed in 17 Ont. App. 28, on the arrival of goods at their destination, the carrier's agent sent an "advice note" to the buyer, who refused to receive them. Shortly afterwards the buyer made an assignment, for the benefit of his creditors, to the plaintiff, who demanded the goods and offered to pay the freight, but produced no "advice note." The agent did not refuse to make delivery, but stated that, by the rules of the company, when goods were claimed by an assignee for the benefit of creditors, his duty was to telegraph the company's solicitor for instructions. He did so telegraph, but before a reply was received, and on the same day, he was notified by the sellers not to deliver the goods, as they claimed the right of stoppage. It was held that the delay of the agent until he received instructions from the solicitor was not wrongful, and that the transit was not at an end when the sellers intervened and stopped the goods. Street, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, saying: "I think that under the circumstances, the goods being claimed by a third person, who produced no advice or shipping note, the railway company's agent was entitled to a reasonable time to obtain instructions from the company's solicitor; that this was acquiesced in at the time by the plaintiff, and that trover could not have been maintained against the company by the plaintiff until a reasonable time had elapsed. There was no attempt on the part of the railway company to set up against the plaintiff any right in themselves or any third person."

But see Allen v. Mercier, 1 Allen (Pa.) 103, a case determined in the fifth judicial district of Pennsylvania. Here goods were shipped by packet from Philadelphia to the buyer in Delaware, and on the arrival of the packet at the landing were demanded by the buyer and delivery refused unless a balance

(f) Delivery of Part.—A delivery of part, or even of the bulk of the goods, is not, prima facie, a delivery of the whole, and those relying upon the partial delivery are bound to show that it took place under such circumstances as to make it a constructive delivery of the whole.¹

(g) Payment of Freight Charges.—A constructive delivery will not be implied from the payment of the freight charges alone. The carrier can only become the agent or warehouseman of the consignee by virtue of some contract or course of dealing between the parties.²

(h) Delivery to Warehouseman or Wharfinger.—A delivery to a warehouseman or wharfinger at the place of ultimate destination of the goods, who does not receive them as the mere agent of the buyer, but in the ordinary course of his business as a middleman, is not such a constructive delivery to the buyer as will put an end due for former freights was paid, which the buyer not doing, the goods were brought again to Philadelphia. The buyer becoming insolvent, the carrier attached the goods for his balance as the property of the buyer, and afterwards the seller tendered the amount of freight due upon them and demanded them of the captain, and upon his refusal to deliver, brought replevin, and it was held that he was not deprived of his right to stop the goods in transitu, the court basing its decision mainly upon the ground that the carrier could not be allowed to take advantage of his tortious act in refusing to deliver to the buyer, the question of the rights of the buyer not being considered.

1. Buckley v. Furniss, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 504; Secomb v. Nutt, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 261; Cabeen v. Campbell, 30 Pa. St. 258; White v. Welsh, 38 Pa. St. 396; Ex parte Cooper, 11 Ch. Div. 73; Ex parte Falk, 14 Ch. Div. 455; Kemp v. Falk, L. R., 7 App. Cas. 579; Dixon v. Yates, 5 B. & Ad. 313; 27 E. C. L. 86; Tanner v. Scovell, 14 M. & W. 28.

In Ex parte Cooper, 11 Ch. Div. 73, part of the freight charges had been paid and part of the goods delivered, but the court held that, while the carrier would be compelled to deliver up to the extent of the freight which had been paid, unless ordered to the contrary, yet it could not be supposed that he intended to abandon his lien for the unpaid freight, and therefore a delivery of part did not operate as a constructive delivery of the whole.

In Slubey v. Heyward, 2 H. Bl. 504, and Hammond v. Anderson, 1 N. R. 69, sometimes cited in support of the contrary doctrine, there had been an actual delivery in each case by the carrier consenting to hold the goods for the consignees, and the decisions did not turn upon the question of a partial delivery being constructive delivery of the whole. And in Hall v. Dimond, 63 N. H. 565, which, at first glance, also seems to decide that the delivery of the whole will be implied from the delivery of a part, the decision was based, not upon the ground of the partial delivery, but upon the ground that, by the previous dealing between the parties, the railroad agent had agreed to become warehouseman for the buyer and to hold the goods as his agent. And see further Betts v. Gibbins, 2 A. & E. 73; Hammond v. Anderson, 1 B. & P., N. R. 69; Bunney v. Poyntz, 4 B. & Ad. 568; Simmons v. Swift, 5 B. & C. 857; Miles v. Gorton, 2 Cr. & M. 504; Jones v. Jones, 8 M. & W. 431; Wentworth v. Outhwaite, 10 M. & W. 436; Ex parte Gibbes, 1 Ch. Div. 101.

2. In Reynolds v. Boston, etc., R.Co., 43 N. H. 590, the court held that paying the freight charges merely, without an express agreement with the carrier to hold the goods as agent and warehouseman for the consignee, was not such a constructive delivery as would defeat the seller's right of stoppage in transitu. Bell, C. J., delivering the opinion of the court, saying: "It was long held that the right of stoppage in transitu could be terminated only by an actual delivery of the goods to the consignee or his agent. The later cases furnish some exceptions to this rule, as where the consignee calls for the goods, and the carrier agrees or consents that he will hold them for him, thus making himself his agent to keep the goods, Richardson v. Goss, 3 B. & P. 127; Scott v. Pettit, 3 B. & P. 469; Molloy v. Hay, 3 M. & R. 396; Rowe v. Pickford, 1 Moore 526; Allen v. Gripper, 2 C. & J. 218; or where the consignee has been in the habit of using the warehouse of the carrier or wharfinger as his own, Tucker v. Humphrey, 4 Bing. 521; 15 E. C. L. 63; Foster v. Frampton, 6 B. & C. 109; 13 E. C. L. 111; or where the consignee claims the goods and the carrier wrongfully refuses to deliver them, so that he makes himself liable for the goods in trover, Walley v. Montgomery, 3 East 585. But where the goods remain in the actual possession of the carrier without fraud on his part, Crawshay v. Eades, 1 B. & C. 181; 8 E. C. L. 78; Tucker v. Humphrey, 4 Bing. 516; 15 E. C. L. 63; Holst v. Pownall, 1 Esp. 240; Lackington v. Atherton, 8 Scott. N. R. 38; or in the hands of a depository, or in a custom-house till the duties are paid, Mottram v. Heyer, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 629; Newhall v. Vargas, 13 Me. 109; 29 Am. Dec. 489; Northey v. Field, 2 Esp. 613; or until necessary papers are produced, Donath v. Broomhead, 7 Pa. St. 301; or while the vessel is lying in quarantine, Stoveld v. Hughes, 14 East 308; there is no delivery, either actual or constructive. There is no constructive possession on the part of the vendee, unless the relation in which the carrier stood before, as a mere instrument of conveyance to an appointed place of destination, has been altered by a contract between the vendee and the carrier, that the latter should hold or keep the goods as the agent of the vendee. Foster v. Frampton, 6 B. & C. 107; 13 E. C. L. 111; Whitehead v. Anderson, 9 M. & W. 508." In this case the consignee paid the freight, but was unable to get possession of the goods because there was other freight in the way of delivery.

And where a consignee who, on the arrival of the vessel containing his goods, paid the freight charges and obtained an order for their delivery, was told, on sending a barge for them with the delivery order, that they could not be got at, but would be delivered as soon as they could be got at, it was held that the mere promise to deliver as soon as the goods could be got at was not a constructive delivery, and that the character of the carrier, as carrier, was not changed into that of agent of the consignee, and that the goods were still liable to stoppage in transitu. Covenry v. Gladstone, L. R., 6 Eq. 44.

In Donath v. Broomhead, 7 Pa. St. 301, the consignee had paid the freight charges, but owing to the loss of the invoice could not get possession, so the goods were stored in the custom-house, and there remained until his failure, when the seller was allowed to assert his right of stoppage in transitu and regain possession. But in this case, Rogers, J., in rendering the decision of the court, said: "It is not necessary to deny that, were there nothing in the case but the payment of freight, a contract or agreement might be implied that the master held the custody of the goods as agent of the vendee; that his character was changed;" but this was only dicta.

But when the freight on the goods has been paid by the consignee and the goods receipted for, but left in the depot to be called for, the transit is at an end and they are no longer subject to the seller's right of stoppage. Langstaff v. Stix, 64 Miss. 171; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 85.

Payment of Freight Charges Not Necessary.—It is not necessary that the freight charges should be paid before the carrier can agree to hold the goods as agent for the consignee. Mr. Benjamin, in his work on Sales, says: "The carrier's change of character into that of an agent to keep the goods for the buyer is not at all inconsistent with his right to retain the goods in his custody till his lien upon them for carriage or freight charges is satisfied. Nothing prevents an agreement by the master of a vessel or other carrier to hold the goods, after arrival at destination, as agent of the buyer, though he may at the same time say, 'I shall not let you take them until my freight is paid.'" Benjamin on Sales (4th Am. ed.), § 853; Hall v. Diamond, 63 N. H. 569; Allen v. Gripper, 2 C. & J. 218.

But the existence of the carrier's lien for unpaid freight raises a strong presumption that the carrier continues to hold the goods as carrier, and in order to rebut this presumption there must be proof of an agreement between the buyer and carrier whereby the latter agrees to retain possession as agent of the buyer, while at the same time retaining his lien for the freight charges. Ex parte Barrow, 6 Ch. Div. 783; Lx to the right of stoppage in transitu,¹ though if the goods are, by the direction of the buyer, forwarded to a particular warehouseman, who in receiving them acts as his agent, the transit is at an end.² But where the warehouse is at a place short of the ultimate destination of the goods, even though it be at the end of the transportation line, a delivery to a warehouseman who receives the goods to hold until the buyer can send for them, does not end the transit, and this notwithstanding the warehouseman be selected by the buyer.³

(i) Delivery to Sub-Purchaser.—Where the goods have been sold by the buyer and delivered by the carrier to the sub-purchaser, it puts an end to the transit as effectually as a delivery to the buyer himself, and thus terminates the seller's right of stoppage.⁴

(j) Entry of Goods at Custom-House.—When the goods are entered at the custom-house and regularly bonded and warehoused under the present warehousing system, the transit is at an end, and the right parte Cooper, 11 Ch. Div. 68; Ex parte Falk, 14 Ch. Div. 446.

1. O'Neil v. Garrett, 6 Iowa 484; White v. Mitchell, 38 Mich. 390; Atkins v. Colby, 20 N. H. 156; Edwards v. Brewer, 3 M. & W. 375; Bartram v. Farebrother, 1 M. & P. 526; Jackson v. Nichol, 5 Bing. N. Cas. 508; 35 E. C. L. 202; and if the warehouseman refuses to obey a delivery order, the transit continues. Lockington v. Ather-ton, 8 Scott, N. R. 38.

2. Hoover v. Tibbits, 13 Wis. 79; Atkins v. Colby, 20 N. H. 156; Walsh v. Blakely, 6 Mont. 194; Dixon v. Baldwin, 5 East 184; Hammond v. Anderson, 2 Camp. 243; Lucas v. Dorian, 7 Taunt. 279; 2 E. C. L. 278.

Unless his warehouse is at a place short of their original destination and he receives them only to forward to the purchaser at the first opportunity, in which case the seller's right of stoppage continues until the goods have reached the possession of the buyer. Blackman v. Pierce, 23 Cal. 508; Ins-lee v. Lane, 57 N. H. 459; Atkins v. Colby, 20 N. H. 154; In re Foot, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 530; Mills v. Ball, 2 B. & P. 457; Ellis v. Hunt, 3 T. R. 466.

Where, by the previous dealings between the parties, the carrier had been in the habit of depositing the goods of the buyer with a certain warehouseman, who was in the habit of receiving and holding them at the buyer's risk, without charging warehouse rent, until taken away by him or delivered to other persons by his orders, the warehouseman was considered the agent of the buyer, and the transit ended on the delivery of the goods to him. Dodson v. Wentworth, 4 M. & G. 1080; 43 E. C. L. 555. And see Richardson v. Goss, 3 B. & P. 119; Wentworth v. Outhwaite, 10 M. & W. 436; Rowe v. Pickford, 8 Taunt. 83; 4 E. C. L. 27.

The warehouseman has a lien on the goods for his charges prior to the seller's right of stoppage or any other claim, but where he states to the seller's agent at the time demand is made upon him for the goods that he has no charges, he waives his lien. Blackman v. Pierce, 23 Cal. 509.

3. In Covell v. Hitchcock, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 610, the court decided that the right of stoppage continues while the goods remain in a public warehouse, if at a place short of their original destination, although there was no public carrier between the place where the goods were warehoused and the place of final destination, and the purchaser had to send after them with his own team.

And in Blackman v. Pierce, 23 Cal. 508, the buyer had selected his warehouseman and had the goods shipped in his care, and, when notified of their arrival, wrote that he would send a team after them, and yet the court decided that there had been no delivery and the transitus was not at an end, as the goods had not reached the place of ultimate destination as intended when purchased. To the same effect, see Buckley v. Furniss, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 137; Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 2; 60 Am. Dec. 188.

4. U. S. Engine Co. v. Oliver, 16 of stoppage in transitu ceases; but a mere formal entry, not followed up by proper bonding or payment of the duties, does not terminate the transit, and the right continues.¹

(k) Delivery to Local Carrier.—Goods are still in transit while in the hands of a dray line for local delivery at the place of destination.²

(3) Delivery at Point Short of Original Destination—(a) Delivery to Buyer.—The buyer may anticipate the natural end of the transit by intercepting and taking possession of the goods, and if the carrier turns them over to him before the destination is reached, the delivery is complete and the right of stoppage is at an end.³

Neb. 612; Klein v. Fischer, 30 Mo. App. 568.

1. Frasier v. Henriques, 6 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 261; Cartwright v. Wilmerding, 24 N. Y. 521; Harris v. Pratt, 17 N. Y. 249; Mottram v. Heyer, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 629; Holbrook v. Vose, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 78; Guilford v. Smith, 30 Vt. 72; Parker v. Byrnes, 1 Low. (U. S.) 539; Haig v. Wallace, 2 Huds. & Bur. 671; Orr v. Murdock, 2 Ir. C. L. R. 9; Croker v. Lawder, 9 Ir. L. R. 21; In re Bearns, 18 Bankr. Reg. 500; Strachan v. Knox, cited in Brown on Sales, 536; Wiley v. Smith, 1 Ont. App. 179; affirmed 2 Duval (Super. Ct. of Can.) 1; in which Howell v. Alport, 12 U. C. C. P. 375, was said not to be good law; Graham v. Smith, 27 U. C. C. P. 1; Burr v. Wilson, 13 U. C. Q. B. 478. And see Lewis v. Mason, 36 U. C. Q. B. 590, and Wilds v. Smith, 2 Ont. App. 8, modifying and reversing the same case in 41 U. C. Q. B. 136.

Where goods have reached their destination and left the hands of the carrier, and the buyer has sold them to one who gives bond for the payment of the customs duties, and deposits them in a bonded warehouse in his own name, the seller's right of stoppage is gone. Sheppard v. Newhall (Cir. Ct. App.), 54 Fed. Rep. 306.

The entry must be complete, and where the goods are removed to a government warehouse under general orders, in default of an entry, the right of stoppage in transitu is not terminated. Frasier v. Henriques, 6 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 261. Thus in Donath v. Broomhead, 6 Pa. St. 201, the goods were removed to the custom-house directly from the vessel by the officers, and were not entered at the custom-house by the consignee on account of loss of the invoice; and clearly the buyer, though he had paid the freight, had not entitled himself to actual possession, or to have constructive possession.

And in Northey v. Field, 2 Esp. 613, the goods remained on board the vessel until after the buyers became bankrupt, and the duties not having been paid within the twenty days allowed by the excise law, during which time they were to remain on board, they were taken from the ship to the King's warehouse in consequence of the non-payment of the duties; and in both cases it was held that there had been no delivery, and that the seller could exercise his right of stoppage.

2. White v. Mitchell, 38 Mich. 390; Harris v. Tenney (Tex.), 20 S. W. Rep. 82. The right of stoppage is not lost by the delivery of the goods by the carrier to a local transfer company for delivery to the buyer, if they were received by the transfer company for conveyance only, and not for safe custody or disposal on the part of the buyer. Scott v. William B. Grimes Dry Goods Co., 48 Mo. App. 521. In this case the goods were received by the transfer company under a previous general order from the buyer, and the transit was held not at an end, and the right of stoppage held to exist.

3. Wood v. Yeatman, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 280; Secomb v. Nutt, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 264; Jordan v. James, 5 Ohio 102; Walsh v. Blakely, 6 Mont. 194; Mohr v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 106 Mass. 72; Poole v. Houston, etc., R. Co., 58 Tex. 134; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 197; Harris v. Pratt, 17 N. Y. 264; Stevens v. Wheeler, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 658; 2 Kent's Com. 547; Story on Sales, § 342a; Tiedeman on Sales, § 131; Benj. on Sales, § 854; Mills v. Ball, 2 B. & P. 461; Oppenheim v. Russell, 3 B. & P. 54; Whitehead v. Anderson, 9 M. & W. 518; London, etc., R. Co. v. Bartlett, 7 H. & N. 400; Wright v. Lawes, 4 Esp. 82; Mix v. Oliver, cited in Abbott on Shipping 424.

The contract for delivery is made between the carrier and the consignee,

The intermediate delivery may be constructive as well as actual,¹ but a mere demand by the buyer before the destination is reached, without any delivery, has been held not to deprive the seller of his right of stoppage.²

the consignor being the agent of the consignee to make it, and it entitles the consignee to take delivery either at the place indicated at the time of the departure of the goods or any other place at which he afterwards prefers to receive them. Cork Distilleries Co. v. Great Southern R. Co., L. R., 7 H. L. 269; and Bramwell, B., in London, etc., R. Co. v. Bartlett, 7 H. & N. 400; 31 L. J. Exch. 92, said: "The goods are intended to reach the consignee, and provided he receives them it is immaterial at what place they are delivered. The contract is to deliver the goods to the consignee at the place named by the consignor, unless the consignee directs them to be delivered at a different place."

Where goods were sent from Manchester to be shipped at Liverpool for Valparaiso, and, after having been put on board the ship, were relanded by order of the buyer and returned to the warehouse of the seller to be repacked, it was held that the purchaser had exercised such an act of ownership over them as would put an end to the seller's right of stoppage. Valpy v. Gibson, 4 C. B. 837; 56 E. C. L. 837.

Forcible Interception of Goods by Buyer.—Whether, if the carrier should refuse to deliver the goods at an intermediate point and the buyer should take forcible possession of them, the transit would be considered ended, has never been definitely decided, but Lord Blackburn is of the opinion that at least where the carrier has a right to refuse to make an intermediate delivery, the buyer cannot improve his position by tortiously taking actual possession against his will. In Whitehead v. Anderson, 9 M. & W. 518, Parke, B., says: "If the vendee take them out of the possession of the carrier into his own, with or without the consent of the carrier, there seems to be no doubt that the transit would be at an end, though in case of the absence of the carrier's consent it may be a wrong to him for which he will have a right of action;" and Lord Blackburn in his work on Sales, p. 375, says, in commenting on this case, that, "Notwithstanding the expressions of the Exchequer in Whitehead v. Anderson, it is submitted that it is doubtful whether, when the carrier has a right to refuse to allow the vendee to take even constructive possession, the vendee can improve his position by tortiously taking actual possession against the will of the carrier. The law, in general, discountenances violence, and it would seem not consistent with its general policy to give a man a benefit in consequence of his forcible or fraudulent wrong against third parties." This opinion seems to be borne out by the decision in Bird v. Brown, 4 Ex. 786; 19 L. J. Ex. 154, which is just the converse of Lord Blackburn's proposition, for in that case it was decided that the wrongful refusal of the carrier to make delivery to the buyer when the goods had arrived at their destination did not affect the latter's rights, and that the transit was ended and the right of stoppage gone. See supra, this title, Effect of Carrier's Refusing to Deliver.

1. Constructive Intermediate Delivery.—It would seem that the buyer need not take actual possession of the goods, but that if he enters into an agreement with the carrier to hold them as his agent in a new capacity, the transit is ended. In Foster v. Frampton, 6 B. & C. 107; 13 E. C. L. 111, Bayley, J., uses this language: "If the consignee, before the goods reach their ultimate destination, postpones the delivery, or does any act which is equivalent to taking actual possession, the transitus is at an end;" and Parke, B., in Whitehead v. Anderson, 9 M. & W. 518, says: "The vendor has a right to retake the goods before they have arrived at the destination originally contemplated by the purchaser, unless, in the meantime, they come into the actual or constructive possession of the vendee." And see Secomb v. Nutt, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 264; Stevens v. Wheeler, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 662; Jordan v. James, 5 Ohio 104; Blackburn on Sales 374; Story on Sales, § 342a.

2. Jackson v. Nichol. 5 Bing. N. Cas. 508; 35 E. C. L. 202. Tindall, C. J., in delivering the opinion of the court in this case, said: "It was urged on the part of the defendants, on the authority of the dictum of Lawrence, J., in Bohtlingk v. Inglis (3 East. 394), that the tortious act of a third person should not prejudice the rights of the parties; and consequently that the demand made by the buyer, and the unlawful refusal to deliver, was tantamount to a delivery. But it is to be recollected . . . that here the goods had not actually reached the terminus of their delivery when the demand of the vendee took place; and although it might be conceded to be the better opinion that if the vendee actually receives the possession of his goods on their passage to him, and before the voyage has completely terminated, that the delivery is complete and the right of stoppage gone, yet no authority has been cited for the position; and the principle seems the other way, that a mere demand by the vendee, without any delivery, before the voyage has completely terminated, deprives the consignor of his right of stoppage."

(b) Delivery to Buyer's Agent.—The goods may be intercepted by the buyer's agent under instructions to ship to some point other than that of original destination, or to hold subject to further orders; but if the agent takes possession under instructions to ship to the buyer at the place of original destination, the seller's right of stoppage is not defeated.¹

1. Secomb v. Nutt, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 264; Cabeen v. Campbell, 30 Pa. St. 254; Hays v. Mouille, 14 Pa. St. 51; Markwald v. Creditors, 7 Cal. 213; Guilford v. Smith, 30 Vt. 65; Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 2; 60 Am. Dec. 188; Harris v. Hart, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 606; followed in Harris v. Pratt, 17 N. Y. 264; Kendal v. Marshall, 11 Q. B. Div. 364. And see supra, this title, Delivery to Agent of Consignee, for the principle governing delivery to an agent is in both cases the same.

Mr. Tiedeman, in his work on Sales, § 131, says: "The delivery at the intermediate point is required to be a bona fide delivery, in order to terminate the transit and destroy the vendor's right of stoppage. And delivery at an intermediate point, with the intention of having the goods reshipped to the original place of destination, is evidently done for the purpose of defeating the vendor's rights, and, therefore, not a bona fide delivery."

And where the consignees of goods made a fraudulent assignment of the bill of lading to their attorney, at the same time giving him a written order for delivery on the station agent at a place short of the original destination, and the attorney intercepted the shipment and obtained possession of the same, and, after effacing from the boxes the name of the original consignees, inserted that of a bogus firm, and re-shipped them by the same line to the place of original destination, it was held not to terminate the transit. Poole v. Houston, etc., R. Co., 58 Tex. 134; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 197.

In Half v. Allyn, 60 Tex. 278, the buyer lived at B, some eighteen miles from C, the railroad station, and had the goods shipped to him at B, care of the railroad agent at C. On the arrival of the goods at C, they were taken out by F and stored in the back room of his store, and on the day after were attached by the creditors of the purchaser. On the seller claiming the right of stoppage in transitu, it was held that if F took possession of the goods as agent of the buyer for the purpose of forwarding them to their original destination, the transit was not ended, and the right of stoppage attached.

Where goods were shipped to a purchaser by a canal-boat, but on the canal-boat being stopped by the ice, were landed by the master and placed in a warehouse, it was held that an order from the buyer to the warehouseman to sell for a specified price did not end the transit as to such as remained unsold, the order being conditional only, and the general purpose being to forward to the purchaser. In re Foot, 11 Blatchf. (U. S.) 530.

And where an agent of the buyer intercepted a shipment of goods and sold a portion, but being unable to dispose of the balance, forwarded them to their original destination, it was held that the sale of part did not affect the right of the seller to stop such as were not sold. Secomb v. Nutt, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 264. In this case the court said that where an agent intercepts a transit and holds the goods for further orders, and afterwards, under new directions from the buyer, forwards them to the place of original destination, it is a new transit just as certainly as would be a change of destination; and Walsh v. Blakely, 6 Mont. 194, would seem to support this view. In that case one Potter ordered goods of a merchant in St. Joseph, Mo., to be shipped to him at Poney, Mont., but before the arrival of the goods, went to a firm in Bozeman, where they were to arrive by rail, and made arrangements with them to pay the freight charges and take the goods to hold for him until he should order them sent to him. On the vendor's attempting to stop the goods in the agent's hands, it was held that the transit was ended, as the goods were held subject to further orders from the purchaser.

(4) Delivery on Board Buyer's Vessel.—When goods are delivered on board a vessel owned or chartered by the buyer, the question is whether he contemplates a fuller and more complete possession. If not, the transit is terminated by the delivery to the vessel; if he does, they are still in transit, and the right of stoppage continues.¹

1. Stubbs v. Lund, 7 Mass. 457; 5 Am. Dec. 63; Rowley v. Bigelow, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 307; 23 Am. Dec. 607; Newhall v. Vargas, 13 Me. 105; 29 Am. Dec. 489; Isley v. Stubbs, 9 Mass. 65; 6 Am. Dec. 29; Cross v. O'Donnell, 44 N. Y. 666; 4 Am. Rep. 721. But see Bolin v. Huffnagle, 1 Rawle (Pa.) 9, and Pequeno v. Taylor, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 375.

In Stubbs v. Lund, 7 Mass. 457; 5 Am. Dec. 63, the court, by Parsons, C. J., said: "In our opinion, the true distinction is, whether any actual possession of the consignee or his assigns, after the termination of the voyage, be or be not provided for in the bills of lading. When such actual possession, after the termination of the voyage, is so provided for, then the right of stopping in transitu remains after the shipment. Thus, if goods are consigned on credit, and delivered on board a ship chartered by the consignee, to be imported by him, the right of stopping in transitu continues after the shipment (3 East 381); but if the goods are not to be imported by the consignee but to be transported from the place of shipment to a foreign market, the right of stopping in transitu ceases on the shipment, the transit being then completed; because no other actual possession of the goods by the consignee is provided for in the bills of lading, which express the terms of the shipment (7 D. & E. 442)."

But the English cases make a distinction between a vessel owned by the buyer and one chartered by him, holding that a delivery on board a vessel owned by the buyer ends the transit, whether a more complete possession is contemplated or not. Ex parte Rosevear China Clay Co., 11 Ch. Div. 571; Van Casteel v. Booker, 2 Exch. 691; Schotsmans v. Lancashire, etc., R. Co., L. R., 2 Ch. 332; Blakey v. Dinsdale, Cowp. 664; Ogle v. Atkinson, 5 Taunt. 759; and in Schotsmans v. Lancashire, etc., R. Co., L. R., 2 Ch. 336, it was held immaterial whether the goods were shipped on a vessel sent out expressly to receive them or on one of a regular line owned by the buyer and shipped without any previous arrangement for that purpose. But where the seller is ignorant of the fact that the vessel in which he ships his goods belongs to the buyer, a question might arise whether the delivery could properly be held complete. Lord Chelmsford, L. C., in touching upon this point in the above case, said: "It would seem to be scarcely just to a person who has delivered goods to be carried to a consignee, under the belief that he could exercise the ordinary right of an unpaid vendor over them, to deprive him of that right because he had ignorantly placed the goods on board the consignee's own vessel, and therefore must be taken to have made an absolute delivery of them."

Where the vessel is chartered by the buyer, the English cases make a distinction not recognized in the United States, resulting from their doctrine that delivery on board the buyer's own ship ends the transit, and hold that where the charterer becomes owner of the vessel for the voyage, that is, where the ship has been demised to him, and he has employed the captain, so that the captain is his servant, then delivery on board such chartered ship is delivery to the buyer; but where the owner of the vessel has his own captain and men on board, so that the captain is the

3. Buyer Must be Insolvent.—The third requisite to the exercise of the right of stoppage in transitu is the insolvency of the buyer, unknown to the seller at the time of the sale, or arising afterwards;¹ and if, through excess of caution, he stops the goods while the buyer is yet solvent, he does so at his peril.² By the servant of the owner, and the effect of the charter is only to secure to the charterer the exclusive use and employment of the vessel, then a delivery of goods on board is not a delivery to the buyer, but to an agent for carriage. Blackburn on Sale 352; Benj. on Sales, § 843; Abbott on Shipping, part 4, ch. 1; Inglis v. Usherwood, 1 East 515; Bohtlingk v. Inglis, 3 East 381; Fowler v. McTaggart, cited 7 T.R. 442, and 10 East 522; Brindley v. Cilwin Slate Co., 55 L. J. Q. B. 67; Berndtson v. Strang, L.R., 3 Ch. App. 588; Ex parte Rosevear China Clay Co., 11 Ch. Div. 571; Noble v. Adams, 7 Taunt. 59; 2 E.C.L. 59. And see, for a further discussion of the subject, Sandeman v. Scurr, L.R., 2 Q. B. 86; 36 L. J. Q. B. 58; Omoa Coal & Iron Co. v. Huntley, 2 C. P. Div. 464. As to what amounts to a demise of a ship, see Meiklereld v. West, 1 Q. B. Div. 428.

A New York case has held that delivery on board a vessel chartered by the buyer places the goods entirely in his dominion, and ends the transit as much as if placed in the buyer's warehouse. But in this case the goods were to be sent to a foreign port, and no fuller possession was contemplated by the purchaser. Pequeno v. Taylor, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 388.

If the seller desires to protect himself, he may restrain the effect of such delivery and preserve his right of stoppage by taking bills of lading making the goods deliverable to his order or assigns. Schotsmans v. Lancashire, etc., R. Co., L.R., 2 Ch. 336; Turner v. Liverpool Docks, 20 L. J. Exch. 393; Brown v. North, 8 Exch. 1; Jenkyns v. Brown, 14 Q. B. 496; Walley v. Montgomery, 3 East 589; but in such a case the right of stoppage continues only until the bill of lading, indorsed by the seller, comes to the possession of the buyer. Van Casteel v. Booker, 18 L. J. Exch. 9.

1. Blum v. Marks, 21 La. Ann. 268; 99 Am. Dec. 725; Schwabacher v. Kane, 13 Mo. App. 126; Stevens v. Wheeler, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 663; Bender v. Bowman, 2 Pearson (Pa.) 517; Farrell v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 102 N.

Car. 390; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 704; Loeb v. Peters, 63 Ala. 243; 35 Am. Rep. 17; Gustine v. Phillips, 38 Mich. 675; Fenkhausen v. Fellows, 20 Nev. 312; White v. Mitchell, 38 Mich. 390; Kingman v. Denison, 84 Mich. 612; More v. Lott, 13 Nev. 380; Reynolds v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 43 N. H. 580. The Constantia, 6 C. Rob. 326. And if, at the time of the sale, the seller knew the vendee to be insolvent, the right does not attach. Buckley v. Furniss, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 137; O'Brien v. Norris, 16 Md. 122; 77 Am. Dec. 284.

It was held in Rogers v. Thomas, 20 Conn. 53, that the insolvency must intervene between the time of the sale and the exercise of the right of stoppage. But this doctrine cannot be sustained either on principle or authority. Benedict v. Schaettle, 12 Ohio St. 525; Buckley v. Furniss, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 137.

2. "If from misinformation or excess of caution, the seller has exercised this privilege prematurely, he has assumed a right that did not belong to him, and the consignee will be entitled to the delivery of the goods with an indemnification for the expenses that have been incurred." Per Lord Stowell in The Constantia, 6 Rob. Adm. 327; Benedict v. Schaettle, 12 Ohio St. 518; More v. Lott, 13 Nev. 383; Walsh v. Blakely, 6 Mont. 194.

Though no evidence of insolvency should precede the stoppage, still if the fact of insolvency existed, it will avail to protect the seller, and the buyer cannot complain. Benedict v. Schaettle, 12 Ohio St. 520; Blum v. Marks, 21 La. Ann. 268; 99 Am. Dec. 725; The Constantia, 6 Rob. Adm. 327. In Naylor v. Dennie, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 204; 19 Am. Dec. 319, Parker, C. J., said: "It is objected also to the exercise of this right by the plaintiffs, that the consignee did not become insolvent until after the arrival of the goods; by which is supposed to be meant that his insolvency was not known or declared. But we do not see how this can affect the question. We do not find that the right of stoppage in transitu depends upon a de-term insolvency, as here used, is meant a general inability on the part of the buyer to pay his debts in the ordinary course of business.¹

IV. HOW RIGHT EXERCISED—1. Giving Notice.—The usual mode of exercising the right of stoppage in transitu is by a simple notice to the carrier, or party in possession of the goods, in which the clared insolvency or open bankruptcy before the arrival of the goods. It is enough that the affairs of the consignee are so involved that he is unable to pay for the goods, if he was to pay on delivery, or that he has become actually insolvent before he shall have taken possession."

1. It is not necessary that he should have been adjudged a bankrupt or insolvent debtor. Durgy Cement, etc., Co. v. O'Brien, 123 Mass. 13; Lee v. Kilburn, 3 Gray (Mass.) 600; Thompson v. Thompson, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 134; Herrick v. Borst, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 650; Benedict v. Schaettle, 12 Ohio St. 515; Bloomington v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 6 Lea (Tenn.) 616; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 371; Gibson v. Carruthers, 8 M. & W. 329; Mills v. Ball, 2 B. & P. 457; Bayley v. Shofield, 1 M. & S. 338; Shone v. Lucas, 3 D. & R. 218; Edwards v. Brewer, 2 M. & W. 375; James v. Griffin, 2 M. & W. 622; Parker v. Gossage, 2 C. M. & R. 617; Biddlecombe v. Bond, 4 A. & E. 322, 696; and see Billson v. Crofts, 15 Eq. 314. In Hays v. Mouille, 14 Pa. St. 48, it is said: "It is not necessary, to prove insolvency, that the vendee should have been declared a bankrupt or insolvent by a judicial tribunal, nor that he should have made an assignment of his property. If the fact exists, no matter how proved, if sufficiently and satisfactorily proved, the law requires no more." And see Naylor v. Denie, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 205; Reynolds v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 43 N. H. 580.

In Rogers v. Thomas, 20 Conn. 53, it was held that, in order to authorize the stoppage, there must be some open notorious act on the part of the buyer calculated to affect his credit. But it is unsustained by authority, and we believe the better rule to be as stated above.

Evidence of Insolvency.—Stopping payment is sufficient evidence of insolvency. Inslee v. Lane, 57 N. H. 458; O'Brien v. Norris, 16 Md. 122; 77 Am. Dec. 284; Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 2; 60 Am. Dec. 188; Vertue v. Jewell, 4 Camp. 31; Newsom v. Thornton, 6

East 17; Dixon v. Yates, 5 B. & Ad. 313; Bird v. Brown, 4 Ex. 736; and also the admissions of the buyer. Secomb v. Nutt, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 261; and it is said that failure to pay one just and admitted debt will probably be sufficient. Benj. on Sales, § 837; Smith's Merch. Law 550. At any rate a well-founded information of an embarrassment or failure on the part of the buyer to meet the demands of his creditors, is sufficient to warrant the seller stopping the goods sold. More v. Lott, 13 Nev. 383; Secomb v. Nutt, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 261. But the mere issue of an attachment against the buyer is not. Gustine v. Phillips, 38 Mich. 674. And see a discussion by Willes, J., as to the meaning of "insolvency," in The Queen v. The Saddlers' Co., 10 H. L. C. 425.

In Walsh v. Blakely, 6 Mont. 194, W., the seller, testified that he "did have information as to P.'s (the buyer's) solvency, and to the effect that he was solvent; but learned of his insolvency through C., who was authorized to collect the bill from said P.;" and the court held that this testimony did not authorize or justify a finding of the court below, "that plaintiff learned of the insolvency of P., and this fact of insolvency appeared and was proved," Wade, C. J., saying: "How did the fact of insolvency appear? By the merest hearsay. C. had told W. that P. was insolvent, and W. simply testified to what C. had told him. When W. obtained this information it does not appear. If C. had information of this kind so essential to the respondent's right to retake the goods, why was he not called to testify as to what he knew and as to what information he gave to W.? There is no explanation. Why, if P. was insolvent at the time W. seized the goods, was not this fact proven? If the insolvency had been a fact, or if W. had any such information upon which he had the right to act, such facts might have been readily established. The insolvency of the buyer must be based upon well-founded information. There is no seller states his claim and notifies him not to deliver them to the consignee, or requests him to hold them subject to his orders.¹ No particular form of notice is necessary,² nor need an express demand be made for the goods, it being sufficient if the carrier is clearly informed that it is the desire and intention of the seller to retake them;³ but the notice must give a sufficient description of the goods to enable the carrier to identify them.⁴

How Right Exercised. STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU. To Whom Notice Given.

2. To Whom Notice Given.—The notice must be given to the person in possession of the goods, or, if to his employer, then at proof that C.'s information to W. had the least foundation in fact, and, for all that appears, P. was solvent at the time the goods were seized by W." Where a member of a firm (the sellers) testified that they believed the buyer to be solvent when they sold him the goods, and did not learn of his insolvency until the goods were attached, and one of their traveling agents testified that he made the sale, and that both he and the sellers knew the buyer was insolvent when the goods were sold, but trusted to his honor and not to his solvency, believing that he would pay as he had always done, it was held that the evidence warranted a finding that the sellers knew of the consignee's insolvency at the time of shipping the goods. Fenkhausen v. Fellows, 20 Nev. 312.

By Whom Defense of Solvency Must be Made.—The objection that the purchaser was not insolvent at the time of the stoppage can only be taken by the purchaser and not by the carrier, except that he may show as a matter of defense that the debt could have been made by due diligence. Bloomington v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 6 Lea (Tenn.) 616; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 371.

1. Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 2; 60 Am. Dec. 188; Bell v. Moss, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 189; Newhall v. Vargas, 13 Me. 93; 29 Am. Dec. 489; Bierce v. Red Bluff Hotel Co., 31 Cal. 160; Ascher v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 36 U. C. Q. B. 609; Bohtlingk v. Inglis, 3 East 381; Syeds v. Hay, 4 T. R. 260; Snee v. Prescott, 1 Atk. 250; Litt v. Cowley, 7 Taunt. 169; 2 E. C. L. 168; Whitehead v. Anderson, 9 M. & W. 518. In Reynolds v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 43 N. H. 580, the agent of the seller gave a verbal notice to the carrier to hold the goods until he could hear from his principal; and in Seymour v. Newton, 105 Mass. 272, the agent of the seller informed the railroad agent that the buyer had allowed a draft for the purchase price of the goods to go to protest, and notified him not to let him have them, and requested the agent to let him know when they arrived.

The notice need contain no statement of the nature or basis of the claim, but if the consignor unreasonably refuses subsequently to furnish the carrier with any evidence of the validity of his claim, such refusal may be considered as a waiver of his right. Allen v. Maine Cent. R. Co., 79 Me. 327; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 122.

It has been held that a direction by the seller to hold the proceeds of the goods subject to his order, did not express an intention to retake possession of the goods, and was not an effectual stoppage. Phelps v. Comber, 29 Ch. Div. 813.

It is not necessary that the seller take actual possession of the goods. Atkins v. Colby, 20 N. H. 156; Mills v. Ball, 2 B. & P. 457; and the filing by the sellers of a claim, in an attachment case, to the fund in court, being the proceeds of goods sold under the court's order, is a sufficient exercise of the right of stoppage. O'Brien v. Norris, 16 Md. 130; 77 Am. Dec. 284; as is also entry of the goods by the seller at the custom-house. Walker v. Woodbridge, cited in Cook's Bankrupt Law 494.

2. Rucker v. Donovan, 13 Kan. 255; 19 Am. Rep. 84; Mottram v. Heyer, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 629.

3. Jones v. Earl, 37 Cal. 630; 99 Am. Dec. 338; Bloomington v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 6 Lea (Tenn.) 616; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 371; Reynolds v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 43 N. H. 580.

4. Clementson v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 42 U. C. Q. B. 263. In this case the plaintiffs telegraphed the defendants at Hamilton: "Do not deliver earthenware from our English house to W. B. Palmer & Co. Hold to our order." Palmer & Co. had then about 400 pieces of goods in defendants ware-such time and under such circumstances that he may, by using reasonable diligence, send the necessary orders to the servant to prevent the delivery.¹

3. Effect of Carrier's Refusal to Redeliver.—If upon demand by the seller a carrier declines to redeliver the goods, or delivers them to the buyer, he will be liable to the seller,² for whom various remedies exist; thus, trover lies,³ as does also trespass on the case,⁴ or replevin.⁵

V. LOSS OF RIGHT—1. How Right Is Lost.—The right of stop-

house at Hamilton, and the plaintiffs' names were not on any of the papers in defendants' possession, nor were the packages so marked that they could be identified, and the notice was held insufficient.

1. Mottram v. Heyer, 5 Den. (N.Y.) 629; Newhall v. Vargas, 13 Me. 109; 29 Am. Dec. 489; Kemp v. Falk, L. R., 7 App. Cas. 585; Mills v. Ball, 2 B. & P. 457; Litt v. Cowley, 7 Taunt. 169; Whitehead v. Anderson, 9 M. & W. 518; The Tigress, 32 L. J. Adm. 97. But see Bell v. Moss, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 206.

Hence, a demand of the property from the buyer made before its actual delivery to him, and while it is still in the custody of the custom-house officers, is not sufficient. Mottram v. Heyer, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 629.

In Poole v. Houston, etc., R. Co., 58 Tex. 138; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 197, notice was given to the station agent having charge of the freights of the railroad at the place of ultimate destination of the goods, and in the absence of evidence showing that the railroad had a general freight agent at the point in question, such notice was held sufficient, and that the railroad company, by delivering the goods to the consignee at an intermediate point, became liable. But this was by a divided court.

2. Bloomington v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 6 Lea (Tenn.) 616; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 371; Jones v. Earl, 37 Cal. 632; 99 Am. Dec. 338; Allen v. Maine Cent. R. Co., 79 Me. 327; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 122; Howatt v. Davis, 5 Munf. (Va.) 34; Ascher v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 36 U. C. Q. B. 609; The Tigress, 32 L. J. Adm. 97.

The bringing suit upon the debt, when due, and recovery of judgment, does not estop the seller from suing the carrier for wrongful delivery. Bloomington v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 6 Lea (Tenn.) 616; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 371.

Seizure under legal process, like the act of God, will excuse the common carrier from delivering goods intrusted to his care for shipment. Mac Veagh v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 3 N. Mex. 205; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 651; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Davis (Pa.), 12 Atl. Rep. 335; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 563; French v. Star Union Transportation Co., 134 Mass. 288.

3. Inslee v. Lane, 57 N. H. 454; Morison v. Gray, 2 Bing. 260; 9 E. C. L. 405; Bohtlingk v. Inglis, 3 East 381. In Litt v. Cowley, 7 Taunt. 169; 2 E. C. L. 168; 2 Marsh. 457, Gibbs, C. J., delivering the opinion of the court, said: "As soon as the notice is given, the property returns to the vendor, and he is entitled to maintain trover, not only against the carriers, but against the assignees of the bankrupt, or any other person." But in Childs v. Northern R. Co., 25 U. C. Q. B. 165, it was held that trover cannot be maintained against a carrier who wrongfully refuses to hold goods after notice from the vendor, Draper, C. J., saying: "But this right of the vendor to withhold the goods from his vendee, who, by paying, would have an immediate right to the possession as being already the owner by sale and delivery to the carrier, is a very different thing from the right of property and of possession which is asserted in the action of trover, which, in my humble judgment, will not lie upon the facts in evidence. We must not be understood as giving any support to the notion that the defendants were right in delivering these goods to the vendee. If he, when tendering the freight, had demanded the goods and threatened a suit, we have no doubt the defendants might have got an interpleader issue."

4. Calahan v. Babcock, 21 Ohio St. 281; 8 Am. Rep. 63; Pottinger v. Hecksher, 2 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 309.

5. Benedict v. Schaettle, 12 Ohio St. 515.

page in transitu is lost by the buyer obtaining delivery of the goods,¹ or by his indorsement of the bill of lading to a bona fide purchaser for value and without notice;² but if the indorsement

1. Supra, this title, Under What Circumstances Right May be Exercised.

2. See BILL OF LADING, vol. 2, p. 244; Becker v. Hallgarten, 86 N.Y. 167; Dows v. Perrin, 16 N. Y. 325; Stevens v. Wheeler, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 661; Haggerty v. Palmer, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 437; Brooke Iron Co. v. O'Brien, 135 Mass. 442; Stubbs v. Lund, 7 Mass. 457; 5 Am. Dec. 63; Rowley v. Bigelow, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 307; 23 Am. Dec. 607; Stanton v. Eager, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 467; Schumacher v. Eby, 24 Pa. St. 521; Loeb v. Peters, 63 Ala. 248; 35 Am. Rep. 17; Winslow v. Norton, 29 Me. 421; 1 Am. Dec. 601; Lee v. Kimball, 45 Me. 172; Newhall v. Central Pac. R. Co., 51 Cal. 345; 21 Am. Rep. 713; Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 2; 60 Am. Dec. 188; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Hiedenheimer, 82 Tex. 195; Walter v. Ross, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 283; Conard v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 445; Lickbarrow v. Mason, 2 T. R. 63; 1 Smith's Lead Cas. 388; Kemp v. Canavan, 15 Ir. C. L. 216; Walley v. Montgomery, 3 East 585; Boyd v. Mosely, 2 Swan 661; Cuming v. Brown, 9 East 506; Haille v. Smith, 1 B. & P. 570; Leask v. Scott, 2 Q. B. Div. 376; Evans v. Marlett, 1 Ld. Raym. 271; Newsom v. Thornton, 6 East 22; Clementson v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 42 U. C. Q. B. 273. And see Blossom v. Champion, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 217; 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 554.

This is upon the principle that whenever one of two innocent persons must suffer by the act of a third, he who has enabled the third person to do or occasion the injury must suffer the loss. Dows v. Greene, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 490; affirmed in 24 N. Y. 638.

There must be a purchaser for value, without fraud, to defeat the right, for it will not be lost by an apparent sale, fraudulently made, without consideration, for the purpose of defeating the right. Rosenthal v. Dessau, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 49; and where the sub-purchaser accepts the transfer of the bill of lading, knowing his transferor to be insolvent, it is strong evidence tending to show that he did not purchase in good faith, and is admissible for that purpose in a contest with the original vendor. Loeb v. Peters, 63 Ala. 243; 35 Am. Rep. 17; Rosenthal v. Dessau, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 49.

Purchaser "Without Notice."—By purchaser "without notice" is not meant one without notice that the goods have not been paid for, because a man may be perfectly honest in dealing for goods which he knows have not been paid for, but it is meant one without notice of such circumstances as render the bill of lading not fairly and honestly assignable. Cuming v. Brown, 9 East 506; Salomons v. Nissen, 2 T. R. 681; Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 2; 60 Am. Dec. 188.

Assignment of Bill of Lading.—But the mere fact that the purchaser of goods has resold them, and that the bill of lading has been made out in the name of the sub-purchaser, but not delivered to him, does not put an end to the transit or destroy the right of the original seller to stop the goods. Ex parte Golding Davis & Co., 13 Ch. Div. 628. Here the goods had been loaded on the vessel and a bill of lading taken in the name of the sub-purchaser as consignor, but before it had been mailed to him or the vessel had left her dock the original buyer stopped payment, and upon the original seller giving notice he was allowed to stop the goods. And see Spalding v. Ruding, 6 Beav. 376; Ex parte Falk, 14 Ch. Div. 446.

Under the Code of Georgia nothing defeats the right of stoppage but actual possession of the goods by the buyer, or a bona fide assignment of the bill of lading; and where the freight and wharfage bills had been paid and receipted, and delivered, together with an order on the carrier for the goods, to a bona fide purchaser for value to whom the bill of lading was exhibited but not assigned, it was held that the right of stoppage was not defeated, although the goods were upon the wharf and had been partially delivered in pursuance of the order, and the portion remaining undelivered was allowed to be stopped. Ocean S. S. Co. v. Ehrlich (Ga. 1892), 14 S. E. Rep. 707. And see Bergeman v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 104 Mo. 77.

Transfer of Undorsed Bill of Lading.—In Sheppard v. Newhall (Cir. Ct. App. 1893), 54 Fed. Rep. 306, an ocean bill of lading was drawn to "E. H. or assigns." The drawee was a railroad agent at New York, who attended to the transshipment of goods, and he shipped them to San Francisco, and transmitted the bill of lading to the buyer without indorsement, who indorsed the bills and delivered them as security for advances. Before the arrival of the goods the buyer became insolvent, and the shipper gave notice of stoppage in transitu, and it was held, reversing Sheppard v. Newhall (U. S. Cir. Ct.), 47 Fed. Rep. 468, and distinguishing St. Paul Roller Mill Co. v. Great Western Despatch Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 434, that the shipper's right to retake possession of the goods was unaffected by the buyer's indorsement and transfer of the bill of lading, as, "E. H.," having failed to indorse them, no title to the goods passed. In St. Paul Roller Mill Co. v. Great Western Despatch Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 434, it was held that a bill of lading, running to the order of the shipper, being delivered unindorsed to the buyer by the shipper's agent, with intent to pass the title, transfers the title to the property as absolutely as a bill of sale, and Ross, Dist. J., in delivering the opinion of the court in Sheppard v. Newhall, 54 Fed. Rep. 306, said: "There are many cases which hold that the delivery of a negotiable or quasi negotiable instrument, like a bill of lading drawn to order, will vest title without indorsement, as against the person who made delivery without such indorsement; for he is justly held estopped from setting up his own mistake, omission or fraud to defeat the effect of his own action. The case of St. Paul Roller Mill Co. v. Great Western Despatch Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 434, referred to in the opinion of the court below, was a case of that character. There the bill of lading was drawn to the order of the shipper, which drew its draft at 15 days' sight, against the flour mentioned in the bill of lading, upon one W., of Boston, and forwarded the draft, with the bill of lading attached, unindorsed, to the Tremont National Bank of Boston, for acceptance and collection. Upon W.'s acceptance of the draft, the bank delivered to him the bill of lading, without indorsement, and he afterwards indorsed and transferred it to the National Bank of Redemption for an antecedent debt due from him to that bank. Afterwards, and before the flour arrived in Boston, the shipper, being informed of the insolvency of W., notified the carrier not to deliver the flour to him or his assigns; but upon its arrival it was delivered to W.'s assignee, and the shipper thereupon sued the carrier for its conversion. It was urged for the plaintiff that the bill of lading, running to the order of the shipper, and delivered to W., without indorsement, carried on its face notice that he held it subject to equities between prior parties; but the court said that it was of no importance that it was delivered unindorsed; that it was the intention of the shipper that its agent (the Tremont Bank) should deliver the bill of lading on acceptance of the draft. It would have been manifestly unjust to have permitted the shipper to take advantage of his own failure to indorse the bill of lading which he delivered, with the intention of carrying the right to the property covered by it. But that is by no means the present case. Here the bill of lading was not drawn to the order of the shipper, the plaintiff in error, but, in effect, to the order of E. H., by whom it was delivered without indorsement, and the omission of which the plaintiff seeks to avail itself, in protection of his lien for the unpaid purchase price of the goods, is not his own omission, but that of H."

Transfer of Duplicate Bill of Lading.—

It has been held that the transfer of a duplicate bill of lading for value does not necessarily carry with it the title to the goods. Thus, D. sold goods to T. and sent him a duplicate bill of lading, the original being attached to a sixty-days' draft drawn on him and sent through a bank for acceptance. On receipt of the duplicate T. indorsed it to C., to whom he sold the goods and received payment, and when the original bill of lading and draft were presented, refused to accept the draft, which was returned to D. T. failed, and D. ordered the goods stopped, and it was held that C. had notice before he paid for the goods, which should have put him upon inquiry as to what disposition had been made of the original bill of lading, and therefore did not acquire a legal title that would defeat the right of the consignor to stop them. Castanola v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 267; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 75. But this case was disapproved in Mo. Pac. R. Co. v. Heidenheimer, 82 Tex. 195, in which case the seller had retained the bill of lading marked "original" and forwarded the "duplicate" to the buyer, is merely as a pledge or security for advances, the seller's right is only destroyed to the extent of the amount advanced.¹ The who transferred it for value, and the right of stoppage was held to be lost, the "duplicate" bill of lading being considered as, in effect, an original.

1. Indorsement of Bill of Lading by Way of Pledge to Secure Advancements.

—The right of stoppage is not discharged absolutely by an indorsement of the bill of lading by way of security or pledge, but it remains, in equity at all events, as it was before, subject to a charge in favor of the indorsee, which must be paid off, and which being paid off the person entitled to and exercising the right stands in exactly the same position as to everybody else as if there had been no security, and no pledge, and no indorsement. Kemp v. Falk, L. R., 7 App. Cas. 576; In re Westzinthus, 5 B. & Ad. 817; 27 E. C. L. 201; Spalding v. Ruding, 6 Beav. 370; 12 L. J., N. S. Ch. 503; Burdick v. Sewell, 10 App. Cas. 74; 13 Q. B. Div. 159; 10 Q. B. Div. 363; Covenstry v. Gladstone, L. R., 6 Eq. 44; Ex parte Golding Davis, L. R., 13 Ch. Div. 628; Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 2; 6 Am. Dec. 188; Mo. Pac. R. Co. v. Heidenheimer, 82 Tex. 195. This right of the unpaid seller covers the whole surplus in the pledgee's hands, and cannot be defeated beyond the advance by reason of there being other unpaid debts due the pledgee; Spalding v. Ruding, 6 Beav. 376; and in such cases the seller has also the further equitable right against the pledgee of insisting upon the marshaling of assets. Thus, in the case of In re Westzinthus, 5 B. & Ad. 817; 27 E. C. L. 201, the pledgee had previously advanced money on other goods (the property of the buyer) deposited with him, the value of which was sufficient to satisfy all his claims, including the last advance for the security of which the bill of lading had been assigned, and it was held that the seller had a clear equity to oblige the pledgee to have recourse against the buyer's own goods deposited with him to pay his debt in case of the surety, and was entitled to have the proceeds of his goods turned over to him. And see Spalding v. Ruding, 6 Beav. 376; Kemp v. Falk, 7 App. Cas. 575.

If the bill of lading is transferred back on the repayment of the advances, the rights of the original con-signor or seller return to him, and he is remitted to all his remedies under the original contract. Short v. Simpson, L. R., 1 C. P. 248; 35 L. J. C. P. 147.

Consideration—Antecedent Indebtedness.—There is some difference of opinion as to whether a prior indebtedness is such a consideration for the transfer of a bill of lading as will protect the pledgee against the claim of the consignor, but the United States courts, and the courts of England, Canada and some of the states, hold such a consideration valuable; St. Paul Roller Mill Co. v. Great Western Despatch Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 434; Leask v. Scott, 2 Q. B. Div. 376; Clementson v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co., 42 U. C. Q. B. 273; Davis v. Russell, 52 Cal. 611; Peters v. Elliott, 78 Ill. 321; while other states hold that without a new consideration it does not constitute the assignee a purchaser for value, and would permit the seller to stop the goods. Loeb v. Peters, 63 Ala. 243; Barnard v. Campbell, 58 N. Y. 73.

And see Lesassier v. The Southwestern, 2 Woods (U. S.) 35, where Bradley. C. J., says: "The transfer of a bill of lading as a mere collateral to previous obligations without anything advanced, given up or lost, on the part of the transferee, does not constitute such an assignment as will preclude the vendor of the goods from exercising the right of stoppage in transitu." In Lee v. Kimball, 45 Me. 172, it was held that where the consignee sells the goods before their arrival and assigns the bill of lading to the buyer, the right of the consignor to stop the goods in transitu is thereby divested, notwithstanding the consideration of the sale was the payment of an antecedent debt, but the court seemed to be of the opinion that had the bill of lading been assigned as a collateral security for an antecedent debt, the consignor's right of stoppage would not have been divested.

The reason given by the states which follow the rule as laid down in Alabama appears to be that since nothing is surrendered by the transferee upon the receipt of the bill of lading merely as collateral security for an antecedent indebtedness, he is not deprived of any right or advantage enjoyed at the time of the transfer. He subjects himself seller, however, may secure himself against the transfer of the bill of lading by retaining the title to the goods in himself until they are paid for.¹

2. When Right Is Not Lost.—An assignment by the buyer for the benefit of his creditors does not defeat the right of stoppage in transitu,² nor can a creditor of the buyer defeat the right by attaching the goods before delivery,³ nor does the seller lose his right by mere delay to exercise it, provided the possession be re-to no additional inconvenience, and takes upon himself no additional burdens, and, therefore, there is no reason why the goods of the consignor should be taken to pay the debts of another. The fallacy of this reasoning is exposed in the opinion of Judge Redfield in Atkinson v. Brooks, 26 Vermont 569, in the course of which he says: "He certainly does forego the pursuit of his own debt, and thus certainly puts himself, for the time, in a different, and in law, a worse situation. And this must be regarded as prima facie a foregoing of some advantage by the indorsee, and also an accommodation to the indorser, who may fairly be presumed to prefer this mode of meeting his debt. The transaction, therefore, possesses both the cardinal ingredients which constitute the textbook definition of a valuable consideration—it is a detriment to the promisee, and an advantage to the promisor—and it is no satisfactory answer to the case to say the party who takes such bill or note, which proves unproductive, is in the same condition he was before. This is by no means certain. He has, for the time, foregone the collection of his debt, and in such matters time is the essence of the transaction. And the debtor thereby gains time—it may be more or less—but of necessity, some time is thereby gained; and in such matters this is always accounted an advantage, and is often of the most vital consequence to the debtor."

1. Pattison v. Culton, 33 Ind. 240; 5 Am. Rep. 199; Seymour v. Newton, 105 Mass. 272.

2. An assignee for the benefit of creditors stands in the same position as his assignor, and, therefore, is not entitled to protection as a bona fide purchaser. Harris v. Hart, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 606; Buckley v. Furniss, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 504; Stanton v. Eager, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 467; Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 2; 60 Am. Dec. 188; Tufts

v. Sylvester, 79 Me. 213; Bell v. Moss, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 205; Arnold v. Delano, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 33.

But see Millard v. Webster, 54 Conn. 415. Here the buyer, finding that he was insolvent, ordered a carrier to return the goods, which were then in his warehouse awaiting delivery, to the seller; but while they were being loaded into a car for that purpose, they were taken possession of by the sheriff under insolvency proceedings, as the property of the buyer. The seller wrote to the carrier, ordering the goods returned, but the letter was never received. It was held that there was no effectual exercise of the right of stoppage, and that the notice to the carrier, to be effectual, must have been given before the sheriff took possession after the assignment.

3. Naylor v. Dennie, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 198; 19 Am. Dec. 319; Seymour v. Newton, 105 Mass. 272; Durgy Cement, etc., Co. v. O'Brien, 123 Mass. 12; Cabeen v. Campbell, 30 Pa. St. 258; Eastern Lumber Co. v. Gill, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 630; Hays v. Mouille, 14 Pa. St. 48; Newhall v. Vargas, 15 Me. 314; 33 Am. Dec. 617; Sherman v. Rugee, 55 Wis. 346; Estey v. Truxel, 25 Mo. App. 238; Kitchen v. Spear, 30 Vt. 545; Clark v. Lynch, 4 Daly (N. Y.) 83; Buckley v. Furniss, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 137; 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 504; Covell v. Hitchcock, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 611; Symns v. Schotten, 35 Kan. 310; Rucker v. Donovan, 13 Kan. 251; 19 Am. Rep. 84; Schuster v. Carson, 28 Neb. 612; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Painter, 15 Neb. 394; Calahan v. Babcock, 21 Ohio St. 281; Benedict v. Schaettle, 12 Ohio St. 515; Aguirre v. Parmelee, 22 Conn. 473; Woodruff v. Noyes, 15 Conn. 335; Wood v. Yeatman, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 270; Hause v. Judson, 4 Dana (Ky.) 13; 29 Am. Dec. 377; O'Neil v. Garrett, 6 Iowa 480; Cox v. Burns, 1 Iowa 64; Greve v. Dunham, 60 Iowa 108; Mason v. Wil-son, 43 Ark. 172; Mississippi Mills v.

sumed before the transit is at an end.¹ Though the right may

Bank, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 314; Blackman v. Pierce, 23 Cal. 509; Atkins v. Colby, 20 N. H. 154; Inslee v. Lane, 57 N. H. 454; Morris v. Shryock, 50 Miss. 590; Dickman v. Williams, 50 Miss. 500; More v. Lott, 13 Nev. 376; Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 2; 60 Am. Dec. 188; O'Brien v. Norris, 16 Md. 122; 77 Am. Dec. 284; Blum v. Marks, 21 La. Ann. 268; 99 Am. Dec. 725; Smith v. Goss, 1 Camp. 282; McLean v. Breithaupt, 12 Ont. App. 383.

And as delivery cannot be made without the assent of the consignee, it follows that where he absconds or refuses to receive the goods, his creditor cannot constitute himself his agent to accept the same, pay the freight charges, and then levy an attachment on them. Greve v. Dunham, 60 Iowa 108. And see Heinz v. Railroad Transfer Co., 82 Mo. 233. But compare Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Davis (Pa.), 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 563. If the attaching creditor has paid the freight, the seller must repay the same before he will be entitled to retake the goods. Rucker v. Donovan, 13 Kan. 251; 19 Am. Rep. 84; Greve v. Dunham, 60 Iowa 108. See also Langstaff v. Stix, 64 Miss. 171; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 85.

It is immaterial to the enforcement of the right of stoppage that the goods sought to be stopped shall be found, and the seller may exercise the right though the goods have been attached by a creditor of the buyer and taken possession of by a third person, who claimed to have purchased them, on his giving a bond to produce them if the issue is decided against him. Dreyfus v. Mayer, 69 Miss. 282.

A sale of goods attached by order of court will not defeat the right. The effect of such sale is merely to convert the goods into money, which remains in the hands of the sheriff pending the determination of the attachment, and subject to any claims that might have been asserted against the goods themselves. O'Brien v. Norris, 16 Md. 122; 77 Am. Dec. 284.

It is immaterial that the attachment was levied by the carrier for arrearages of freight due by the consignee. Farrell v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 102 N. Car. 390; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 704.

It was held in Sproule v. McNulty, 7 Mo. 62, that where A consigned goods to B to be sold and the proceeds applied to the payment of a debt due from A to B, an attachment in transitu, as the property of A, was good against B.

Duty of Carrier in Case of Attachment.—It is not the duty of a common carrier to remove goods committed to him, in order to prevent their being subjected to an attachment levy. If property in the hands of a common carrier is seized under legal process, and the owner has timely knowledge thereof, the carrier has a right to presume that such owner will take the proper steps in the premises without formal notice from him. In such a case the negligence and laches of the owner, if it does not occasion the loss, so far contributes towards it that he must bear the burden of it, and he cannot be heard to attribute the fault to another. MacVeagh v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 3 N. Mex. 205; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 651; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Davis (Pa.), 12 Atl. Rep. 335; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 563. Nor is it the carrier's duty, upon receiving notice to stop the goods, to give such notice to the attaching officer and request him not to deliver to the buyer, and he is not, therefore, liable to the seller for neglect to give such notice. French v. Star Union Transportation Co., 134 Mass. 288.

Attachment by Seller.—If the seller levies an attachment on the goods while they are in transit he waives his right of stoppage. Woodruff v. Noyes, 15 Conn. 335. But where the attachment was made under an erroneous impression that the right of stoppage was gone, it seems there would be no waiver of the right, especially if the attachment is withdrawn as soon as the error is discovered and the right of stoppage is exercised before the goods arrive at their destination. Fox v. Willis, 60 Tex. 373.

Parties to a Suit Against Attaching Creditor.—A buyer has no interest in a suit brought by the seller against an attaching creditor for the recovery of the property under the seller's right of stoppage in transitu, and is not, therefore, a necessary party. Harris v. Tenney (Tex. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 82.

1. Buckley v. Furniss, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 137. Bronson, J., in delivering the opinion of the court in this case, said: "It was urged, on the argument, that be lost by waiver, such is not the result where the attorney of the seller, under the impression that the transit was ended, began suit for the price of the goods, but on finding that delivery had not been made, promptly asserted the right and did not press the suit.¹

VI. EFFECT—1. On Rights of Parties.—The stoppage of goods in transitu does not rescind the sale, but only places the parties in the same position, as nearly as may be, in which they would have been had the seller not parted with the possession.²

nearly forty days had elapsed between the sale and the stoppage of the goods. But I am not aware that it has ever been held that the mere lapse of time was a circumstance of any importance in determining the right of the vendor to resume possession of the goods, provided the right be exercised before the transitus is at an end. As between the vendor and vendee, no reason is perceived why this consideration should be permitted to affect the question. Mere delay on the part of the seller would neither deprive him of his right nor confer a superior equity upon the purchaser."

1. Calahan v. Babcock, 21 Ohio St. 294. Though the right of stoppage in transitu on the part of the consignor is adverse to that of the consignee, and cannot be exercised under a title derived from him (Lane v. Jackson, 5 Mass. 162), yet the consignor's right of stoppage is not defeated by his obtaining from the consignee a writing, in which the consignee declares that he revokes the order for the consignment and declines to receive the goods, and requests the master of the ship, or any other person having the goods in his custody, to deliver them to the consignor. Naylor v. Dennie, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 198; 19 Am. Dec. 319.

2. Rowley v. Bigelow, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 313; 23 Am. Dec. 607; Stanton v. Eager, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 475; Rogers v. Thomas, 20 Conn. 58; Rucker v. Donovan, 13 Kan. 251; Chandler v. Fulton, 10 Tex. 2; 60 Am. Dec. 188; Penn. R. Co. v. American Oil Works, 126 Pa. St. 485; Newhall v. Vargas, 15 Me. 314; 33 Am. Dec. 617; Cross v. O'Donnell, 44 N. Y. 665; Babcock v. Bunnell, 80 N. Y. 251; Jordan v. James, 5 Ohio 98; Phelps v. Comber, 29 Ch. Div. 821, per Cotton, L. J.; Hodgson v. Loy, 7 T. R. 445; Lickbarrow v. Mason, 6 East 27; Clay v. Harrison, 10 B. & C. 99; 21 E. C. L. 31; Dixon v. Yates, 5 B. & Ad. 339; 27 E. C. L.

86; James v. Griffin, 2 M. & W. 632; Edwards v. Brewer, 2 M. & W. 379; Bloxam v. Sanders, 4 B. & C. 948; 10 E. C. L. 477; Sweet v. Pym, 1 East 4; Stephens v. Wilkinson, 2 B. & Ad. 323; 22 E. C. L. 86; Ex parte Gwynne, 12 Ves. 379; Wait v. Scott, 6 Grant (Ont.) 154; Wentworth v. Outhwaite, 10 M. & W. 436; Martindale v. Smith, 1 Q. B. 389.

The seller takes possession of the goods, not as his own, but as the purchaser's, on which he has a lien for his unpaid purchase money; and hence the buyer cannot recover a partial payment made on the goods, and if he refuses to pay the balance, the seller may, after reasonable notice, sell them, and after applying the proceeds to the payment of his bill, recover any balance remaining still unpaid; Newhall v. Vargas, 15 Me. 314; 33 Am. Dec. 617; Jordan v. James, 5 Ohio 99; Kymer v. Suwercroft, 1 Camp. 109; Lickbarrow v. Mason, 6 East 27; Langford v. Tyler, 6 Mod. 162; or, if they bring more than the purchase price, the balance belongs to the buyer. People v. Haynes, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 565; 28 Am. Dec. 530.

In Patten's Appeal, 45 Pa. St. 151, the purchaser of a quantity of sugar, having made an assignment, the sellers stopped it in transitu to secure payment of certain notes given for the purchase price, and when the notes fell due and were not paid, sold the sugar and applied the proceeds to their payment. The vendors of the sugar claimed that, in the settlement of the estate, a dividend should be allowed them on the full amount of the notes, amounting to $23,239.65 less $20,845.53, net, received from the sale of the sugar; but on the other hand, it was argued that the retention of the sugar and stoppage in transitu was a rescission of the contract, and that having sold some of the notes the sellers were not entitled to a dividend until the full amount received from the sale of the sugar was brought into a common fund with the rest of the assigned estate, and that, under all the circumstances, they were only entitled to a dividend on the balance due and not on the full amount of the notes; and it was held that the contract of sale was not rescinded, and that the vendors were entitled to pro rata distribution out of the assigned estate and to a dividend upon the whole amount of their claim at the date of the assignment.

2. On Rights of Carrier.—The lien of the carrier for his transportation charges is paramount to the seller's right of stoppage in transitu, and he may insist upon retaining possession until his charges are paid;¹ and where a carrier stops goods and holds them in obedience to orders from the consignor, the contract of carriage terminates and his liability henceforth is that of a warehouseman.²

Vendor Not Entitled to Insurance Money.—As the property in the goods continues in the buyer, it follows that the seller has no claim to money paid under an insurance policy for damage incurred by them during the transit. In Berndtson v. Strang, L. R., 3 Ch. 591, Cairns, L. C., in considering this point, said: "It appears to me that this is a claim wholly untenable, and, I might say, altogether unexampled in my experience. The right to stop in transitu is a right to stop the goods in whatever state they arrive. If they arrive injured and damaged in bulk or quality the right to stop in transitu is so far impaired; there is no contract or agreement which entitles the vendor to go beyond those goods in the state in which they arrive, and to claim some moneys which have been paid by the underwriters to the purchasers of the goods in respect of their loss by the non-arrival of their property."

1. Rucker v. Donovan, 13 Kan. 251; 19 Am. Rep. 84; Potts v. New York, etc., R. Co., 131 Mass. 455; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 424; 41 Am. Rep. 247; Benj. on Sales, § 836.

But this only applies to the carriage of the specific articles in question, and not to any lien for a general balance which the carrier may claim. Potts v. New York, etc., R. Co., 131 Mass. 457; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 424; 41 Am. Rep. 247; Penn. R. Co. v. American Oil Works, 126 Pa. St. 485; Oppenheim v. Russell, 3 B. & P. 42; Jackson v. Nichol, 5 Bing. N. Cas. 518; 35 E. C. L. 202.

The carrier may stipulate in the bill of lading that he "shall have a lien upon the goods shipped for all arrearages of freight and charges due by the said owners or consignees on other goods," but it will not affect the seller's right of stoppage, such a stipulation being subordinate thereto. Farrell v. Richmond & Danville R. Co., 102 N. Car. 390; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 704.

Where the seller of goods replevied them from a constable who had taken them under an order of attachment, as the property of the buyer while on their transit, it was held not necessary that the charge or lien of the carriers for freight be paid before the writ of replevin was issued, but that it was sufficient if it was paid before the goods were taken from their possession. Hays v. Mouille, 14 Pa. St. 48.

An officer holding process against the buyer may lawfully advance the charges to the carrier on taking possession of the goods, and having so advanced them, is substituted to all his rights of possession as security therefor. Rucker v. Donovan, 13 Kan. 251; 19 Am. Rep. 84.

In The Mercantile, etc., Bank v. Gladstone, L. R., 3 Exch. 233, it was held that the seller's right of stoppage was paramount to the carrier's lien for freight under the following circumstances: The goods were ordered by F. & Co. of Liverpool from the defendants in Calcutta, and were shipped on board F. & Co.'s own vessel, the master signing the bills of lading, "freight for the said goods free on the owner's account." The bill of lading was such as the master had authority from the owners to sign, but before it was signed in Calcutta the owners in Liverpool had transferred the vessel with "all the profits and all the losses, as the case might be," though the transfer was unknown to the consignors or to the captain when the bills of lading were signed. It was held that the consignor's right of stoppage, "free of freight," could not be affected by the sale in England which was unknown to him.

2. And he does not become party to a new contract of carriage by the subsequent order of the owner to ship the

STOPPING PLACE.—See STATIONS; USUAL.STORE.—(See also SHOP, vol. 22, p. 778; WAREHOUSEMAN).—

1. v. To keep goods and merchandise for safe custody, to be delivered in the same condition substantially as when received. The term only applies when the safe keeping is the principal object of the deposit.¹

2. n. A store is any place where goods are sold either by wholesale or retail.² It is used in this country as nearly synonymous with "shop."³ goods to another person and place, and if he fails to forward them in pursuance of such order the right of action against him is as a warehouseman for failing to forward, and not as a common carrier. MacVeagh v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 3 N. Mex. 205; 18 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 651.

1. New York Equitable Ins. Co. v. Langdon, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 628; O'Neil v. Buffalo F. Ins. Co., 3 N. Y. 127; Hynds v. Schenectady Co. Mut. Ins. Co., 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 119. See also WAREHOUSEMAN.

2. Webster's Dict. followed in Martin v. Portland, 81 Me. 293; Com. v. Whalen, 131 Mass. 419.

3. Barth v. State, 18 Conn. 439. And in that case the court, by Storrs, J., said: "By a reference to the lexicographers of this country and England, it appears that the word shop is used in the same sense in both; but that the word store as applied to a building is used in a more extensive sense in this country than in that. There it is never applied to a place where goods are sold, but only to one where they are merely deposited, but here it is used to denote both." See also Richards v. Washington F. & M. Ins. Co., 60 Mich. 425; Com. v. Annis, 15 Gray (Mass.) 197; Com. v. Riggs, 14 Gray (Mass.) 376; 77 Am. Dec. 333. But compare Sparrenberger v. State, 53 Ala. 481; 25 Am. Rep. 643.

"In the United States, shops for the sale of goods of any kind, by wholesale or retail, are often called stores; that is, we use the word store for storehouse; the word which properly means the quantity of a thing accumulated or deposited, as a designation of the place of deposit. 'Shop' is defined by Richardson to be a 'place for the purpose of containing merchandise for sale, protected from the weather.' Webster defines it as 'a building in which goods, wares, drugs, etc., are sold by retail;' also as 'a building in which mechanics work.' In conversation we speak of a store as a place where goods are exposed for sale, thus giving it the same meaning as shop. Still, we recognize a difference between the meanings of these two words. Thus, we do not call the place where any mechanic art is carried on a store, but we give it the name of shop, as a tailor's shop, a blacksmith shop, a shoemaker's shop. We usually understand by the word store, a place where goods are exhibited for sale, but we do not always mean a store when we use the word shop." State v. Canney, 19 N. H. 137. See also Boston Loan Co. v. Boston, 137 Mass. 336.

A Store is not Necessarily a Building.—In Com. v. M'Monagle, 1 Mass. 517 (see also Folkes v. State, 63 Miss. 83), it was held that an indictment for breaking a "store" cannot be supported under a statute making it a felony to break up any dwelling-house, shop, mill, etc., or other "building" whatsoever, with criminal intent, unless it be averred in the indictment that the store is a building. But in that case Sewell, J., doubted whether it was necessary to aver it "because the word has in this state a settled, known meaning and is not used otherwise than as and for the name of a building." And it has been held several times that a "shop" must necessarily be a structure of some sort. See SHOP, vol. 22, p. 778.

An Ice house, in which a dealer in ice had stored his stock, was held not to be a "store" within a Massachusetts tax statute. The court, by Colburn, J., said: "We are of opinion that the natural import and common use in this country of the word 'store,' when applied to a building, is to designate a place where traffic is carried on in goods, wares, or merchandise, and not to designate a storehouse." Hittinger v. Westford, 135 Mass. 259.

Desk-room is not a "Store."—A STORE ORDER ACTS.—The term Store Order Acts (or Truck Acts, as this legislation is called in Great Britain), is applied to statutes having for their object the prevention of the payment of workmen by orders redeemable by the master in goods or truck. These statutes provide for the payment of wages in lawful money only.¹

In the states of the Union where these statutes have been enacted they are of comparatively recent date. They have been enacted in West Virginia, Illinois, Missouri, Pennsylvania, and Maine statute provided that all personal property employed in trade should be taxed in the town in which it was so employed, provided the owner had his store or shop in such town. It was held that a stockbroker who merely had desk-room in a city did not occupy a store or shop within the statute. Martin v. Portland, 81 Me. 293.

Bakery a Store.—An insurance policy stated that the building insured was used as a store and residence; it was held that a bakery was a "store." Richards v. Washington F. & M. Ins. Co., 60 Mich. 425.

A Saloon and Restaurant was held a "store" in Com. v. Whalen, 131 Mass. 419; and see BURGLARY, vol. 2, p. 677, where that case is set out at some length.

Storehouse—(See HOUSE, vol. 9, p. 780).—A room occupied as a news depot in which papers, pamphlets, and the like are kept for sale, and communicating by a door-way with another room used as an outer hall or entrance to the building, is a storehouse within the meaning of the Ohio Burglary Act. Bauer v. State, 25 Ohio St. 70. See also BURGLARY, vol. 2, p. 677.

The terms "storehouse" and "warehouse," as used in Kentucky Gen. Sts., ch. 29, art. 6, § 4, mean any house not an office or a shop, or any room in a steam or other boat, in which goods, wares and merchandise, are usually deposited for safe keeping or for sale. Ray v. Com., 12 Bush (Ky.) 397.

Ship Stores.—See PROVISIONS, vol. 19, p. 299; SHIPS AND SHIPPING, vol. 22, p. 710. And see U. S. v. Twenty-Four Coils of Cordage, 1 Baldw. (U. S.) 502, for a restricted use of the term in an old United States Revenue law.

Store Fixtures.—What included under the term in a policy of insurance. See INSURANCE, vol. 11, p. 290.

1. English Statutes and Decisions.—In England, statutes have been passed at various times aiming at the abolition of the "Truck System" of giving orders payable in goods or truck in lieu of cash wages. In 1837 the "Truck act" of 1 & 2 Wm. IV, ch. 37, was enacted. This act consolidated previous acts on the subject, and prohibited manufacturers of iron and certain other things, and miners of coal, salt, etc., from paying the wages of their laborers in anything other than the lawful money of the realm. The application of that act was extended by 50 & 51 Vict., ch. 46. The purpose of this legislation was to prevent fraud and to prohibit employers from compelling their employes to accept goods of inferior quality at a high price. Sweet's L. Dict.; Black's L. Dict. See also McCullogh, Commercial Dict., Truck System.

There are a few English cases involving the construction of these acts. It was held in Riley v. Warden, 2 Exch. 59, that the statute 1 and 2 Wm. IV, ch. 37, applied only to persons contracting as laborers—that is, to those contracting to use their personal services and to receive payment for such services in wages.

Sharman v. Sanders, 13 C. B. 166; Chawner v. Cummings, 8 Q. B. 311; Bowers v. Lovekin, 3 El. & Bl. 584; Ingram v. Barnes, 7 El. & Bl. 115; Sleeman v. Barrett, 2 H. & C. 934; Morehouse v. Lee, 4 F. & F. 455; Pillar v. Llybni Coal & Iron Co., 4 L. R., C. P. 752, involve questions of who are artificers within the act.

It was held in Floyd v. Weaver, 16 Jur. 289; 21 L. J. Q. B. 151, that the act applied only to agreements for personal services, and not to agreements for the performance of a certain quantity of work which the contractor could not perform except by making use of the labor of others.

It was held in Archer v. James, 2 B. & S. 61, that deductions or stoppages made from the wages of an artificer in Indiana, and perhaps in other states. In certain instances they have been declared unconstitutional, but it would seem that the statutes thus adjudged unconstitutional were declared to be soon the ground that they applied to miners and manufacturers, and, therefore, attempted to discriminate between classes of employers, instead of being general in their application to all employers. It would seem that legislation general in its nature, and not objectionable as class legislation, was within the legitimate exercise of the police power, as defined in the various cases where its limits have undergone judicial discussion.¹

the hosiery trade in respect of frame rent, machine rent, standing of frames or machines, winding the material, fines for illegal attendance, gas for lighting the factory, and fire in waiting-room amounting to a little over three shillings a week, fixed charges, were not illegal.

It was held in Wilson v. Cookson, 13 C. B. N. S. 496, that to constitute an offense within the statute it was not necessary that the payment of wages in goods instead of money should be the result of any contract or understanding between the employer and the workman—that the mere payment was enough; and that the offense was not purged by a subsequent payment in money, whether made voluntarily or compulsorily under an order of justices.

In Smith v. Walton, 3 C. P. D. 109, it appeared that an artificer in a trade within the Truck act had damaged a piece of cloth through negligent workmanship, and that his employer had delivered the damaged cloth to him instead of such wages earned as were equivalent to the value which, according to the assessment of the employer, the cloth would have had if undamaged. It was held that the employer had paid wages otherwise than in current coin, and was, therefore, liable to the penalty fixed by the act.

In Pillar v. Llynbi Coal & Iron Co., 4 L. R. C. P. 752, it appeared that an employer had stopped part of the wages of an artificer as a contribution to funds established by the employer to provide medicine and medical attendance for the artificers employed, and schools for their children, but without any written agreement with the artificer. It was held that the latter was entitled to recover the deduction specified by the act. See also Cutts v. Ward, 2 Q. B. 357.

1. West Virginia act 1891, ch. 76, is as follows in its application to the subject under discussion, and affords an example of this legislation: "It shall be unlawful for any corporation, company, firm, or person engaged in any trade or business, either directly or indirectly, to issue, sell, give, or deliver, to any person employed by such corporation, company, firm, or person, in payment of wages due such laborer, or as advances for labor not due, any scrip, token, draft, check, or other evidence of indebtedness, payable or redeemable otherwise than in lawful money; and, if any such scrip, token, draft, check, or other evidence of indebtedness, be so issued, sold, given, or delivered to such laborer, it shall be construed, taken and held in all courts and places to be a promise to pay the sum specified therein in lawful money by the corporation, company, firm or person issuing, selling, giving or delivering the same to the person named therein, or to the holder thereof." The foregoing provision was declared to be constitutional in Peel Splint Coal Co. v. State (W. Va. 1892), 15 S. E. Rep. 1000. From the opinion in this case two of the judges dissented, however.

An earlier West Virginia act was adjudged unconstitutional in State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, on the ground that it applied in terms to mine-owners and manufacturers, and thus constituted class legislation.

Illinois.—Sections 1 and 2 of Illinois act, May 28, 1891, declared it unlawful for any person, company, corporation, or association engaged in mining or manufacturing, to be engaged or interested in keeping a truck store, or controlling any store or scheme for the furnishing of supplies, tools, clothing, provisions, or groceries to employes. This legislation was declared unconstitutional in Frorer v. People (Ill. 1892), 31 N. E. Rep. 395.

Missouri.—In State v. Loomis, 22 S. W. Rep. 350; 48 Alb. L. J. 46, a case decided in the spring of 1893, the Missouri statute was held unconstitutional as class legislation. This case was before a division of the court in 1892, and the decision was the other way. State v. Loomis (Mo.), 20 S. W. Rep. 332. The Missouri statute attacked in this case applied in its terms to corporations, persons or firms, engaged in "manufacturing or mining," being in this respect similar to the Illinois statute referred to above.

STORM.—See note 1.

Pennsylvania.—In Godcharles v. Wigeman, 113 Pa. St. 431; 6 Atl. Rep. 354, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania adjudged §§ 1, 2, 3 and 4 of the act of June 29, 1881, providing that the wages of laborers in and about iron mills, etc., should be paid at regular intervals and in lawful money of the United States, to be unconstitutional. Mr. Justice Gordon, in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "The first, second, third and fourth sections of the act of June 29, 1881, are utterly unconstitutional and void, inasmuch as by them an attempt has been made by the legislature to do what, in this country, cannot be done; that is, prevent persons sui juris from making their own contracts. The act is an infringement alike of the right of the employer and the employé; more than this, it is an insulting attempt to put the laborer under a legislative tutelage, which is not only degrading to his manhood, but subversive of his rights as a citizen of the United States."

The West Virginia court, in Peel Splint Coal Co. v. State (W. Va. 1892), 15 S. E. Rep. 1000, in commenting upon Godcharles v. Wigeman, 113 Pa. St. 431, said: "The decision rested upon a peculiar provision of their constitution, as follows: 'The general assembly shall not pass any local or special law . . . regulating labor, trade, mining or manufacturing, . . . granting to any corporation, association or individual any special or exclusive privilege or immunity.' Section 7, art. 3, Const. Pa. In our state we have no such constitutional provision; if we had, the defendant and other mining companies could not have been clothed with the 'special and exclusive privilege' of watering stock, holding 10,000 acres of land, and laying out towns and cities. After the above decision was rendered, the legislature of Pennsylvania effected its remedial legislation by prohibiting altogether mining or manufacturing companies from carrying on 'company stores,' or 'general supply stores,' where any goods or merchandise are sold, other than those mined or manufactured by themselves. Laws Pa. 1891, p. 256."

In Indiana, an act of the legislature requiring the owners of mines to pay for mining coal every two weeks in lawful money of the United States, and forbidding the execution of contracts waiving the right to payment in money, was held to be constitutional. In Hancock v. Yaden, 121 Ind. 366; 16 Am. St. Rep. 396, Judge Elliott, delivering the opinion of the court, said: "It cannot be denied, without repudiating all authority, that the legislature does possess some power over the right to contract, and if it does, then nothing can be clearer than that this power extends far enough to uphold a statute providing that payment of wages shall be made in money where there is no agreement to the contrary made after the services have been rendered. . . . The provision of the statute to which our decision is directed operates upon all members of the classes it enumerates. It neither confers special privileges nor makes unjust discrimination. All who are members of the classes named are entitled to its benefits or subjected to its burdens. It is open to every citizen to become a member of any of the classes designated, and the privileges conferred belong on equal terms to all."

In Maryland, in Shaffer v. Union Min. Co., 55 Md. 74, the court, without otherwise discussing questions of constitutionality, said: "It being conceded that the legislature, when it incorporated the Union Mining Company, reserved the right to alter or amend its charter at pleasure, there can be no doubt that the legislature could enact a law prohibiting the corporation from paying its employes otherwise than in money, and that it could forbid the corporation from making contracts with them for payment in anything but money."

1. A policy of insurance insured against loss by "fire or storm;" a freshet, occasioned by the melting of the snow and prevailing south winds and rain, carried away the property.

STORY.—See note 1.

STOWAGE.—See SHIPS AND SHIPPING, vol. 22, p. 710.

STRADDLE.—See GAMBLING CONTRACTS, vol. 8, p. 1004.

STRANDING.—(See also MARINE INSURANCE, vol. 14, p. 376).
—A stranding is when a ship takes ground, not in the ordinary course of navigation, but by accident or the force of the wind or sea, and remains stationary for some time. The vessel must ground from an accident happening out of the ordinary and usual course of navigation.²

The loss was held not to be covered by the policy. Stover v. Insurance Co., 3 Phila. (Pa.) 38.

1. In a statement, filed in order to obtain a mechanic's lien, the building intended to be covered by the lien was described as being of three stories. The court, by Knowlton, J., said: "The description of the house was not inaccurate nor misleading. If the lower part of it was properly called a basement, it was, according to the definitions of lexicographers and the common understanding of the word, a story of the building." Cleverly v. Moseley, 148 Mass. 284.

2. Wells v. Hopwood, 3 B. & Ad. 20; 23 E. C. L. 18; 3 Kent's Com. 323; Lake v. Columbus Ins. Co., 13 Ohio 66; 42 Am. Dec. 188.

It may be said, in general terms, that in order to constitute a stranding the ship must be in the course of prosecuting her voyage when the loss occurs; there must be a settling down on the obstructing object, and the vessel must take the ground by reason of extraordinary casualty, and not from one of the ordinary incidents of a voyage. Arn. Ins., §§ 297, 318; Bouv. L. Dict.

"Stranding is understood to be the striking of a vessel upon a rock, bank, reef, or the like." Strong v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 31 N. Y. 106; 88 Am. Dec. 242.

To constitute a stranding the vessel must be stationary for some time. Thus, if the ship merely touches or strikes and gets off again, howsoever much she may be injured, she is not stranded. McDougle v. Royal Exch. Assurance Co., 1 Stark. 130; 4 M. & S. 503; Harmon v. Vaux, 3 Camp. 429; Lake v. Columbus Ins. Co., 13 Ohio 48; 42 Am. Dec. 188.

In the following cases the vessel was held to have stranded: A resting for fifteen or twenty minutes has been held to be a stranding, whether it be upon a bank or rock. Baker v. Towry, 1 Stark. 436. Where a ship was improperly fastened to a pier in a basin so that she took ground and when the tide left her she fell over and was bilged, this was held to be a stranding. Carruthers v. Sydebotham, 4 M. & S. 77. See also Bishop v. Pentland, 7 B. & C. 219; 14 E. C. L. 33. Where the water was drawn off from an inland navigable water for purposes of repair, and a vessel settled accidentally upon some spiles which were not known to be there, it was held that the vessel had stranded. Rayner v. Godmond, 5 B. & A. 225. A ship under stress of weather made a tidal harbor, but it being low water she grounded there. Held, a stranding. Corcoran v. Gurney, 1 E. & B. 456; 72 E. C. L. 455. See also De Mattos v. Saunders, L. R., 7 C. P. 570; Letchford v. Oldham, 5 Q. B. Div. 538; Wells v. Hopwood, 3 B. & Ad. 20; 23 E. C. L. 18.

Not a Stranding.—Where a vessel takes ground in the ordinary and usual course of navigation and management in a tidal river or harbor upon the ebbing of the tide, or from a natural deficiency of water, so that she may float again upon the flow of the tide or increase of the water, this is not a stranding. Magnus v. Buttemer, 11 C. B. 876; 73 E. C. L. 875; Hearn v. Edmunds, 1 B. & B. 388. Compare Corcoran v. Gurney, 1 E. & B. 456; 72 E. C. L. 455. A vessel took the ground in a tidal harbor where it was intended she should do so at the time she was moored, and was injured by striking against some hard substance. This was considered not to be a stranding. Kingsford v. Marshall, 8 Bing. 458; 21 E. C. L. 344. See also Potter v. Suffolk Ins. Co., 2 Sumn.

STRANGER—(Compare PRIVILEGE, vol. 19, p. 156).—One who is not a party or privy to an act or contract.¹

STRATEGY.—See note 2.

STRAW BAIL—(See also BAIL, vol. 2, p. 1; SPECIAL BAIL, vol. 22, p. 892).—Common bail. One or more fictitious sureties formally entered in the proper office of the court, in contradistinction from special bail who are real and substantial bondsmen.³

Worthless bail, as being given by an irresponsible person.⁴

STRAY—(See also ESTRAY, vol. 7, p. 34; IMPOUNDING, vol. 10, p. 186).—"Stray," in its common-law sense, denotes a wandering beast whose owner is unknown.⁵

STREAM—(See also SURFACE WATERS; WATERS AND WATER-COURSES).—A stream is a river, brook, or rivulet.⁶

(U. S.) 197. Where the loss was occasioned by the vessel striking upon a rock and bilging without remaining stationary, held, not a stranding. Lake v. Columbus Ins. Co., 13 Ohio 48; 42 Am. Dec. 18.

Voluntary Stranding.—See GENERAL AVERAGE, vol. 8, p. 1300.

1. Burrill's L. Dict.

"In its general legal signification, 'stranger' is opposed to the word 'privy.'" O'Donnell v. McIntyre, 118 N. Y. 156.

A stranger to a cause is one who has no direct interest in the subject-matter of the suit, and who has no right to make defense, control proceedings, examine and cross-examine witnesses, or appeal from the judgment. Robbins v. Chicago, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 657. See also PARTIES TO ACTION, vol. 17, p. 470.

2. A jury found that the vendor used "strategy" in bringing about a contract for the sale of land. It was held that, in connection with other findings, the term "strategy" must be interpreted to mean that "the contract was brought about by acts and perhaps representations not in themselves unlawful, but such as are common to persons entering into contract relations, each endeavoring to make the best terms for himself in the transaction, and not as if it was intended to convey a meaning incompatible with fair dealing and approximating to that conveyed in the word 'stratagem,' which implies artifice, trickery, deception, and, perhaps, even positive fraud." Fortune v. Watkins, 94 N. Car. 304.

3. Anderson's L. Dict.; Bouv. L. Dict.

4. Webster's Dict.; Century Dict.

5. Robert v. Barnes, 27 Wis. 422. See also Walters v. Glatz, 29 Iowa 437.

A stray beast is one which has left an inclosure and wandered at large without its owner and beyond his control. Sturges v. Raymond, 27 Conn. 474.

Hogs left in a stock yard by some person unknown, are not strays. Mill Creek Tp. v. Brighton Stock Yards Co., 27 Ohio St. 433.

6. French v. Carhart, 1 N. Y. 107.

Stream implies a continuous current in one direction. Murdock v. Stickney, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 117.

A watercourse is a stream of water usually flowing in a particular direction with well defined channels and banks, although the channel may sometimes be dry. Simmons v. Winters (Oregon, 1891), 27 Pac. Rep. 7.

"Stream" Distinguished from "Pond" or "Lake."—A small natural body of water bounded by mountains and low swamps, fed by two sluggish streams and shaped like a bowl or spoon and having no thread or current, is a "pond" or "lake" and not a "stream" or "river." Gouverneur v. National Ice Co., 57 Hun (N. Y.) 474. See also LAKES AND PONDS, vol. 12, p. 611.

For streams as boundaries, see BOUNDARIES, vol. 2, p. 504.

Natural Stream.—See NATURAL, vol. 16, p. 220.

Stream and Ravine.—See RAVINE, vol. 19, p. 970.

STREET RAILWAYS.—See also RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 775.

- I. Definition, 941.
- II. Legal Status, 943.
- III. The Corporation—Its Creation, Organization, etc., 944.
- IV. The Charter as a Contract, 945.
- V. Right to Use Streets, 946.
 1. Generally, 946.
 2. Authority of Municipality to Grant, 948.
 - a. In General, 948.
 - b. Exclusive Privileges, 951.
 3. Authority of Legislature, 953.
 4. Right of Abutters to Compensation, 954.
 5. Unauthorized Use of Streets, 958.
- VI. Construction of Franchises and Licenses, 960. [964.]
- VII. Conditions Annexed to Grants, 964.
 1. Generally, 964.
 2. Consent of Local Authorities, 965.
 3. Consent of Abutters, 968.
 4. Construction of Road Within Specified Time, 972.
- VIII. Loss of Rights and Franchises, 975. [978.]
- IX. Construction; Road-Bed, etc., 978.
- X. Use of Streets—Operation of Road, 983.
 1. Repair of Streets, 983.
 2. Right to Exclusive Use of Tracks, 990.
 3. Use of Tracks of Another Company, 992.
 4. Motive Power, 995.
- XI. Municipal Regulation and Control, 998.
 1. Generally, 998.
 2. Right to Require Conductor and Driver on Each Car, 1001. [1001.]
 3. Exaction of License Fees, 1003.
 4. Alteration of Tracks, 1003.
 5. Operation on Sunday (See SUNDAY), 1004. [1004.]
- XII. Liability for Negligent Injury, 1004.
 1. Injuries to Passengers, 1004.
 - a. General View of the Company's Duty, 1006.
 - b. Negligence, 1011.
 - c. Contributory Negligence of Passengers, 1011.
 2. Expulsion of Passengers, 1016.
 3. Injuries to Persons On or Near the Track, 1019.
 - a. Duty of the Company, 1019.
 - b. Contributory Negligence—Children, etc., 1024.
 4. Collision With Vehicles, 1028.
 5. Frightening Horses, 1031.
 6. Snow and Ice on Tracks, 1032.
 7. Liability of Lessor and Lessee, 1032.
- XIII. Electric Railways, 1034.
- XIV. Underground Street Railways (See UNDERGROUND RAILWAYS), 1035.
- XV. Elevated Railroads, 1035.
 1. Under General Railroad Law, 1035. [1037.]
 2. Under Rapid-transit Acts,
 - a. Constitutionality, 1037.
 - b. Rapid-transit Commission, 1037.
 - c. Consent of Property Owners and Local Authorities, 1039.
 - d. Supreme Court Commissioners, 1040.
 - e. Right to Acquire Real Estate, 1041. [1042.]
 - f. Location and Construction, 1042.
 3. Recovery of Damages by Owners of Abutting Property, 1042.
 - a. Right to Recover, 1042.
 - b. Form of Action—Permanent or Temporary Damages, 1046.
 - (1) Eminent Domain Proceedings, 1046.
 - (2) Common-law Action, 1048.
 - (3) Proceeding for an Injunction, 1052.
 - c. Who May Recover, 1056.
 - (1) Personal Representatives, 1056. [1058.]
 - (2) Subsequent Purchasers, 1056. [1058.]
 - (3) Landlord and Tenant, 1060.
 - (4) Other Parties, 1060.
 - d. Evidence, 1062.
 - (1) Opinion of Witnesses, 1062.
 - (2) Other Evidence, 1065.
 - e. Measure of Damages, 1069.
 - (1) Generally, 1069.
 - (2) Damages from Smoke, Cinders, etc., 1074.
 - (3) Consequential Damages—Noise, Vibration, etc., 1075.
 - (4) Depreciation of Rental Value of Premises, 1077. [1078.]
 - (5) Exemplary Damages, 1078.

- (6) Deduction on Account of Benefits Derived from the Existence of the Road, 1078.
- (7) Where Plaintiff's Property Fronts on Two Streets, 1082.
- f. Statute of Limitations—Adverse Possession—Implied Acquiescence, 1083.
- g. Right to Trial by Jury in Injunction Proceedings, 1085.
- 4. Liability for Personal Injuries and Other Torts, 1086.
- XVI. Ordinary Railroads in Streets and Highways, 1092.
- 1. Right to Occupy Streets and Highways, 1094.
- a. Power of Legislature to Grant, 1094.
- b. Power of Municipal Corporations, 1095.
- c. When Company Has Such Right, 1098.
- 2. Right of Owners of Abutting Property to Compensation, 1100.
- a. In General, 1100.
- b. Distinction Dependent Upon Ownership of Fee and Character of Highway, 1103. [1103.]
- (1) General Doctrine, 1110.
- (2) Doctrine in New York, 1110.
- (3) In Other Jurisdictions, 1113.
- c. Statutory Provisions Giving Right to Recover, 1120.
- d. Where the Grade of the Street Is Changed, 1121.
- e. Measure of Damages, 1123.
- (1) Deduction of Benefits, 1125.
- f. Special and Consequential Damages, 1126.
- g. Remedies, Character of Action, etc., 1131.

I. DEFINITION.—The designation "street railway" is applied to a railway passenger carrier whose road lies along and upon the streets of a city, town, or village. But this definition cannot be applied invariably, since it is not uncommon for street railways to be operated upon suburban roads. The motive power may be supplied by either horses, locomotives, electricity, or cable.¹ A

1. The definition given in Elliott on Roads and Streets, p. 557, is: "A street railway is a railway laid down upon roads and streets for the purpose of carrying passengers." It is there further said: "The term 'street railway' is neither as definite nor as extensive as is desirable, but seems to be the best and most appropriate at command. It will not do to designate a street railway as a 'horse railway,' as is often done, for the power by which the cars are drawn along the tracks is frequently mechanical; nor will it do to designate a street railway as a 'tramway,' for . . . a 'tramway' possesses essential features that street railways do not. (See Omaha Horse R. Co. v. Cable Tramway Co., 30 Fed. Rep. 324.) The term 'street' is too restrictive, for street railways may be operated upon suburban roads. But with all its shortcomings and imperfections the term 'street railways' seems best to express the meaning we desire to convey." The designation "street railways" is to be confined to passenger carriers exclusively. Carli v. Stillwater St. R., etc., Co., 28 Minn. 373; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 226; 41 Am. Rep. 290.

Classed with Owners of Omnibuses and Similar Vehicles.—In Allerton v. Chicago, 9 Biss. (U. S.) 552, it appeared that a municipal corporation had by its charter authority to license hackmen, omnibus drivers, "and others pursuing like occupations." It was held that under this the municipality had the right to impose a tax upon the owners of street cars. So in the case of Frankford, etc., R. Co. v. Philadelphia, 58 Pa. St. 124; 98 Am. Dec. 242, where the city was authorized to license omnibuses and "vehicles in the nature thereof," it was held that the authority included the licensing of street railways. Johnson v. Philadelphia, 60 Pa. St. 445. Compare Mayor, etc., of N. Y. v. Second Ave. R. Co., 32 N. Y. 261; Whitaker v. Eighth Ave. R. Co., 51 N. Y. 295 (street railway not a "public highway").

Not a Carriage.—The word "carriage" used in a bill of lading, has been considered not to include a street railway car. Cream City R. Co. v. Chicago, street railway differs widely in its essential characteristics from an ordinary railroad, but in the construction of statutes the question has sometimes arisen as to whether the term "railroad" includes street railways. Whether it does so or not is to be determined in each case from the intent and purpose of the statute.¹

etc., R. Co., 63 Wis. 93; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 70; 53 Am. Rep. 267. See CARRIAGE, vol. 2, p. 735, where the case is set out at length.

So also a statute fixing bridge tolls for every "carriage, wagon, or other wheeled vehicle," has been held not to apply to street cars. Monongahela Bridge Co. v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 114 Pa. St. 478; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 30. Nor does a statute fixing the liability of drivers of "stage coaches . . . and every other carriage or vehicle used for the transportation of passengers or goods" apply to street cars. Isaacs v. Third Ave. R. Co., 47 N. Y. 122; 7 Am. Rep. 418.

Street "Car."—A franchise was granted on condition of the payment of an "annual license fee for each car now allowed by law." At that time license fees were required by an old ordinance for each "accommodation coach" or "stage coach." It was held that the word "car" in the resolution, and the word "coach" in the ordinance, both referred to a conveyance for public use, and that the city was entitled to the same license fee from each. Mayor, etc. of N. Y. v. Third Ave. R. Co., 117 N. Y. 404; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 278.

1. Distinguished from Railroads.—The distinction between street railways and the ordinary railroads in the matter of using streets in which to lay their tracks is adverted to in various parts of this article. See generally RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 778.

The Alabama Code contains a provision that all trains shall stop within 100 feet of where two "railroads" cross each other. Under this it is held that it was clearly the intention of the legislature to include within the term "railroad" a dummy line operated between Birmingham and Ensley City. Birmingham Mineral R. Co. v. Jacobs, 92 Ala. 200. The same view is held in Tennessee. Katzenberger v. Lawo, 90 Tenn. 235.

A statute in Pennsylvania authorizing the consolidation of "railroads," was held to include street railways. Hestonville, etc., R. Co. v. Philadelphia, 89 Pa. St. 210; and an act making the real estate of "any railroad company" subject to certain taxes, was held to include a street railway. Citizen's Pass. R. Co. v. Pittsburgh, 104 Pa. St. 522; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 438. But in other cases, art. 17, § 4 of the Pennsylvania Const., providing that "no railroad, canal or other corporation . . . shall consolidate . . . with, or lease, or purchase the works or franchise of, or in any way control any other railroad, canal, or corporation owning a parallel or competing line," was held not to apply to street railway companies. Gyger v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 136 Pa. St. 96; Shipley v. Continental R. Co., 13 Phila. (Pa.) 128. See also Millvale v. Evergreen R. Co., 131 Pa. St. 1. But the New York act of 1875, ch. 108, authorizing the consolidation of railroads, has been held to include street railways, and this notwithstanding a previous act which expressly excluded street railways from the operation of the consolidation statute. In re Washington St., etc., R. Co., 115 N. Y. 442; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 588.

The words "any railroad corporation" in the Iowa Right-of-way act, are considered to apply as well to railways operated by animal power as to those operated by steam. Clinton v. Clinton, etc., Horse R. Co., 37 Iowa 61.

So also the New York act of 1850, relating to the liability of railroad companies for injuries to passengers while on the platform, etc., does not apply to street railroad companies. Lax v. Forty-second St., etc., R. Co., 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. 448. Contra as to a similar statute in Kentucky. Johnson v. Louisville City R. Co., 10 Bush (Ky.) 231.

In Williams v. City Electric St. R. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 556; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 215, it is laid down that the difference between street railways and railroads for general traffic consists in their use and not in their motive power; and that a railroad, the rails of which are laid so as to conform to the grade of the street, and which is otherwise so constructed that the public is not excluded from the use of any part of the street as a public highway, which

II. LEGAL STATUS.—Like an ordinary railroad, a street railway is of a quasi public nature, and its use is a public use.¹ Like all runs at a moderate rate of speed, which carries no freight but only passengers from one part of a thickly populated district to another in a town or city and its suburbs, and for that purpose runs its cars at short intervals, stopping at every street crossing to receive and discharge passengers, is a street railway, no matter whether the cars are propelled by animal or mechanical power.

It was held in Re New York District R. Co., 107 N. Y. 42; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 202, that the New York General Railroad act of 1850 does not apply to street railways; also that a railroad confined within the limits of the city and proposed to be built under the surface of the streets thereof is a street railway within the meaning of the provision of the state constitution that no law shall authorize the construction of a street railroad except upon the condition of the consent of the owners of one-half in value of the abutting property. New York Cable Co. v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 104 N. Y. 1; People v. Newton, 112 N. Y. 396; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 391.

In Central Nat. Bank v. Worcester Horse R. Co., 13 Allen (Mass.) 105, there was a statute providing that any corporations created by the state "except railroad and banking corporations" might institute proceedings in insolvency. It was held that the exception embraced street railway corporations. The court, by Gray, J., after reviewing the chief characteristics of railroad corporations, said: "A 'horse railroad company,' or, as it is more frequently and more appropriately called in recent statutes, a 'street railway corporation,' has all these attributes, and is none the less a 'railroad corporation,' less public in its character, or more fit to have its franchise and property transferred to assignees under proceedings in insolvency, because it more generally uses horses instead of steam power to draw its cars, and lays its rails over land already devoted to the public use for a street or highway, and is therefore made by statute peculiarly subject in the location and use of its tracks to the regulations of municipal authorities."

New York Laws 1869, ch. 917, authorizing the consolidation "of certain railroad companies" expressly excluded street railroads. Laws of 1875, ch. 108, provided for the consolidation "of railroad companies organized under the general laws of this state." Laws of 1883, ch. 387 amended Laws of 1875, so as to omit the word general in referring to the laws of the state. It was held that the acts of 1875 and 1883 authorized the consolidation of street railroad companies. In re Washington St., etc., R. Co., 52 Hun (N. Y.) 311, affirmed 115 N. Y. 442; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 588.

In Thompson-Houston Electric Co. v. Simon, 20 Oregon 60; 47 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 51, it was held that the provision of the statute concerning the condemnation of land for a right of way for railroads did not apply to street railways. The court quoted from the opinion of Robertson, J., in Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Louisville City R. Co., 2 Duv. (Ky.) 178, where it is said: "A railroad is for the use of the universal public in the transportation of all persons, baggage and other freight; a street railway is dedicated to the more limited use of the local public for the more transient transportation of persons only and within the limits of the city. In its technical sense, therefore, a street railway is not a railroad."

Under Mechanic's Lien Laws.—In Front St. Cable R. Co. v. Johnson (Wash.), 47 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 287, it is held that a statute giving a laborer's lien upon a "railroad," or "any other structure," does not apply to street railways. The court, by Stiles, J., quotes from the opinion of the court in Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Louisville City R. Co., 2 Duv. (Ky.) 175: "A 'railroad' and a 'street railroad' or 'way,' are in both their technical and popular import as distinct and different things as a road and a street, or as a 'bridge' and a 'railroad bridge.' . . . A street railway is not, either in the popular or legislative sense, a railroad." The Kentucky case is cited with approval in 2 Rorer on Railroads, p. 1422; Elliot on Roads and Streets, p. 558. A contrary view, however, was taken in St. Louis Bolt, etc., Co. v. Donahoe, 3 Mo. App. 559. See Fleming v. St. Paul City R. Co., 47 Minn. 124; 47 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 290.

1. Therefore the right of eminent do-other private property, however, it is subject to the state's right of eminent domain, and may be condemned for the use of another railway, or for any other public purpose.¹

The franchise to own and operate a street railway may belong to an individual as well as to a corporation,² though as a matter of fact nearly all street railways are owned by corporations.

Street railways are always common carriers of passengers, but they are not carriers of goods except under special circumstances.³

III. THE CORPORATION—ITS CREATION, ORGANIZATION, ETC.—Street railway corporations are, as a general rule, organized under the same general laws, and by the same methods of procedure as ordinary railroad corporations.⁴ In many states constitutional provisions exist which forbid the creation or formation of any corporation except under general laws.⁵

main may be exercised in order to secure for it a right of way. Union Depot R. Co. v. Southern R. Co., 105 Mo. 562; St. Louis R. Co. v. Southern R. Co., 105 Mo. 577; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 1; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Rosedale St. R. Co., 64 Tex. 80; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 160; 53 Am. Rep. 739; In re Petition of Kerr, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 119. EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 555; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 780. Compare Thompson-Houston Electric Co. v. Simon, 20 Oregon 60; 47 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 51. See also State v. Atlantic City, 34 N. J. L. 99.

Where a railroad track is laid down in a street, by authority of the city council, to connect a private manufacturing establishment with other railroad tracks, it becomes a public highway, and the city council has a right to devote a portion of the street to that use; the remedy of a person sustaining injuries thereby is at law, and chancery cannot control the manner in which the right shall be exercised. Parlin v. Mills, 11 Ill. App. 396.

1. Metropolitan City R. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 87 Ill. 317. In such a case it is not the franchise which is condemned, but the company's qualified right of property in the street. See also infra, this title, Use of Tracks of Another Company.

2. Henderson v. Ogden City R. Co. (Utah), 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 95; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Forty-second St. R. Co., 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 309. See also Budd v. Multnomah St. R. Co., 15 Oregon 404; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 551; 3 Am. St. Rep. 169. RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 783.

3. Thompson-Houston Electric Co.

v. Simon, 20 Oregon 60; 47 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 51.

In an action to recover damages of a street-railway company for the loss of merchandise delivered to one of its conductors for transportation on the platform of a car, for which money was paid by the owner to the conductor, the testimony of two other persons that they had paid money at other times to the defendant's conductors for the like transportation of merchandise with the knowledge of the superintendent of the road, is competent evidence to show, and, in the absence of anything to control or contradict it, sufficient evidence to warrant a jury in finding, that the defendants have assumed the business of common carriers of merchandise on their cars. Levi v. Lynn, etc., R. Co., 11 Allen (Mass.) 300; 87 Am. Dec. 713.

4. See RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 785; CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 185.

The New York Rapid-transit act (Laws New York, 1875, ch. 606) gives to the commissioners, therein directed to be appointed by the mayor, exclusive authority to make the articles of incorporation, and deliver the certificate of incorporation to the directors. And New York Laws of 1870, ch. 135, authorizing the directors of any corporation organized under the general act to file an amended certificate of incorporation cannot apply to such companies. In re New York Cable R. Co., 109 N. Y. 32, aff'd 45 Hun (N. Y.) 53; New York Laws, 1891, chap. 4, provides for the sale of rapid-transit franchises at public auction. See infra, this title, Elevated Railroads.

5. Grand Cent. R. Co. v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 63 Tex. 529; 26 Am. & Eng. R.

The right to exist as a corporation is one which may be granted only by the legislature; power to grant such a right is an attribute of sovereignty which may not be delegated.¹ Any irregularities in the formation of the corporation may be and are cured by subsequent legislative recognition.²

IV. THE CHARTER AS A CONTRACT.—The charter of a street railway corporation granting the franchise to construct and operate the railroad, and other franchises necessarily incidental, is, like charters of other corporations, a contract, the obligation of which may not be impaired by subsequent legislation;³ and this rule

Cas. 142; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Denver City R. Co., 2 Colo. 673. The California Const., art. 4, § 31, prohibiting the formation of a corporation, except under general laws, cannot be construed to prohibit an organized corporation from receiving by assignment from its lawful owners, a franchise to construct and operate a street railway. People v. Stanford, 77 Cal. 360.

And the grant of additional powers to a corporation already existing, as, for example, authority to construct its road on such streets as the city council should prescribe, does not violate such a constitutional provision. Hodges v. Baltimore Union Pass. R. Co., 58 Md. 603; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 270.

1. Fanning v. Osborne, 102 N. Y. 441; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 252.

Where a corporation, by virtue of a legislative grant, has authority to construct and operate its road in certain streets, an ordinance giving it authority to extend its tracks to other streets is not an attempt to confer corporate powers, and, therefore, does not contravene a constitutional provision against ordinances conferring corporate powers. Sims v. Street R. Co., 37 Ohio St. 556; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 132. See infra, this title, Authority of Municipality to Grant; Authority of Legislature.

2. See RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 789.

Article 3, section 159 of the Maryland Code provides that the certificate of incorporation shall specify the termini of the road and the counties or cities through which it shall pass. Where the certificate of a street-railway company specifies that the entire road is to be located in a certain city, and the termini are to be therein, and the legislature afterwards recognizes the company as a valid existing corporation by authorizing its consolidation with another company, the effect of such legislation is to dispense with a more specific mention of the termini. Koch v. North Ave. R. Co. (Md.), 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 401. See also in this connection, St. Louis R. Co. v. Northwestern St. Louis R. Co., 2 Mo. App. 69; In re New York Cable R. Co., 109 N. Y. 32, aff'd, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 153.

3. Springfield R. Co. v. Springfield, 58 Mo. 674; Asheville St. R. Co. v. Asheville (N. Car.), 14 S. E. Rep. 316; Brooklyn Cent. R. Co. v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 358; Hays v. Com., 82 Pa. St. 517; Wyandot v. Corrigan, 35 Kan. 21. See also CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 207; FRANCHISES, vol. 8, p. 620.

In Nash v. Lowry, 37 Minn. 261, the common council of St. Paul, by an ordinance, granted a street railway franchise, and subsequently the legislature "confirmed and validated" the ordinance. It was held that this ordinance constituted a contract which the council could not thereafter rescind or revoke, and that it was immaterial to the validity of the grant whether the grantees constituted a corporation or only a partnership. See also West Philadelphia Pass. R. Co. v. Dougherty, 3 W. N. C. (Pa.) 62.

Where an ordinance of a city, granting a railway company the right to construct and operate a track along a portion of a street, upon certain conditions, has been accepted, so that the ordinance as accepted constitutes a contract, the rights of the contracting parties will be governed by the ordinance, and the city may not impose new and further conditions and burdens upon the company without its consent, such as the construction and operation of an extended line of its road, these not having been required under the original ordinance. People v. Chicago Western R. Co., 118 Ill. 113, aff'd, 18 Ill. App. 125. See also Electric R. Co. v. Grand Rapids, 84 Mich. 257; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 26.

may be invoked where a change in the mode of taxation is attempted which would be violative of charter rights.¹ This question arises most frequently in determining the right to require the company to improve or repair the streets occupied by its tracks, and is treated in a subsequent part of this article.² The charter may be, however, and usually is, granted with the express condition that it shall be subject to amendment or repeal.³

V. RIGHT TO USE STREETS—1. Generally.—The right of any com-

Although the existing franchise of a street railway company is not affected by the adoption of a new charter by the city, yet the grant of a franchise for an extension after such adoption will be subject to the restrictions of the new charter. St. Louis v. Missouri R. Co., 13 Mo. App. 524.

A street railroad company incorporated in 1863, with nothing in its charter making the consent of the city a prerequisite to the exercise of its powers in the extension of its road, prior to 1874 had constructed its road in but a few of the streets which its charter authorized it to occupy. In 1887, being about to extend its tracks to unoccupied streets, the city filed a bill for an injunction, on the ground that its consent had not been obtained. It appeared that the constitutional amendment of 1857 provided power in the legislature to alter, revoke, or annul any charter thereafter conferred, and that an article of the new constitution of 1874 provided that no street railway should be constructed within the limits of any city without the consent of the local authorities. It was held that the injunction would not lie; that the amendment of 1857 gave no arbitrary power to repeal charters at will; that even where a moving cause was made to appear, such alteration or revocation must be so made that no injustice should be done to the corporators; and that the right of the company to lay its tracks in the streets authorized by its charter was not repealed by the constitutional amendment of 1874. Williamsport Pass. R. Co. v. Williamsport, 120 Pa. St. 1; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 125.

After a street railway company has availed itself of a city's permission to lay a double track in the streets, the city cannot, by amendment, restrict the company to a single track, no injury being shown to be wrought. Burlington v. Burlington St. R. Co., 49 Iowa 144; 31 Am. Rep. 145.

Supplement to Charter.—In Philadelphia, etc., Pass. R. Co.'s Appeal, 102 Pa. St. 123; 20 Am. Eng. R. Cas. 1, it is held that a supplement to a charter of a street railway which merely confers upon it a new right, or enlarges an old one, without imposing a new or additional burden upon it, is a mere license or promise by the state and may be revoked at pleasure; it is without consideration to support it and is not binding on a subsequent legislature. In this case, however, the original charter and the supplement were passed at the same session, with only a few days intervening, and the organization of the company took place after the passage of the supplement. There being other questions controlling the decision of the case, the court declined to pass upon the legal effect of the said supplement.

1. Douglas v. Orange, etc., Horse Car Co., 34 N. J. L. 485. See also Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co., 76 Mich. 421; 39 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 538.

But in New York v. Twenty-third St. R. Co., 113 N. Y. 311; 41 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 640, affirming s. c. 48 Hun (N. Y.) 552, it was held that a statute which requires a street railroad company to pay to the city annually, a percentage of its gross earnings in lieu of a fee for each car used by it as required by its charter, is to be deemed an amendment of the charter in that respect, and is valid under constitutional and statutory provisions reserving the right to alter, suspend, or repeal the charter.

It was held in New York v. Second Ave. R. Co., 32 N. Y. 261, that an ordinance of a city imposing an annual license fee of $50 for each car of a street car company is void.

2. See infra, this title, Repair of Streets.

3. Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co., 105 U. S. 13; 9 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 526; Henderson v. Central Pass. R. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 358; 20 Am. &

pany to use the streets of a city for its track is possessed by virtue of its franchise granted by the legislature, or of a license from the city; this right is, therefore, subject to the limitations of the grant of the franchise or license, and to the inherent right of the city to control and regulate its streets so far as may be necessary to preserve to the public their free use.¹ The city may, therefore, when necessary in making improvements, obstruct or remove the track temporarily, although a serious interruption in the use of the railway may follow. The company, like all others using the highway, must submit to temporary inconveniences for the sake of permanent public advantage.²

Where two or more companies each have the right to lay tracks in a street, which can only be occupied by one, the company which first, in good faith, prosecutes the construction of its road there acquires a right of occupancy superior to that of others coming later.³

A bridge spanning a stream and connecting streets on either side, constitutes a part of the street, and if a company has authority to operate its road over the bridge, this right is not affected by the destruction of the bridge and the erection of a new one in its stead.⁴

Eng. R. Cas. 542; New York v. Twenty-third St. R. Co., 113 N. Y. 311; 41 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 640. See also CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 207; FRANCHISES, vol. 8, p. 620.

Under Massachusetts Stats. of 1864, ch. 229, § 15, the selectmen of a town may revoke the location in the town of the track of a street railway company which is chartered to extend beyond the limits of the town. Medford, etc., R. Co., v. Somerville, etc., R. Co., 111 Mass. 232.

1. Middlesex R. Co. v. Wakefield, 103 Mass. 262. See infra, this title, Conditions Annexed to Grants.

2. Middlesex R. Co. v. Wakefield, 103 Mass. 262. Compare West Philadelphia Pass. R. Co. v. Philadelphia, 10 Phila. (Pa.) 70, holding that the construction of another street railway is not such a "public work" as will justify the tearing up of a railway already laid.

And wherever authority to extend the time is sought on the ground that such an extension is a necessary incident to the original grant, the burden rests on the company to show that the extension is such a necessary incident. People v. Third Ave. R. Co., 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 63.

3. Conflicting Rights of Occupancy.—Indianapolis Cable St. R. Co. v. Citizens' St. R. Co., 127 Ind. 369; 43 Am.

& Eng. R. Cas. 234, quoting and approving Elliott on Roads and Streets, p. 570; Hamilton St. R., etc., Co. v. Hamilton, etc., Co., 5 Ohio C. Ct. 319; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 420, note. But a company authorized to build a cable road only, acquires no right by commencing the construction of a horse or electric road, and if another company in good faith afterward begins the construction of a road authorized by its charter, such latter company is entitled to an injunction against the first one. Indianapolis Cable St. R. Co. v. Citizens' St. R. Co., 127 Ind. 369; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 234.

In Brooklyn City R. Co. v. Coney Island, etc., R. Co., 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 364, it was held that as the construction of the road in the street can give no exclusive right, one company cannot prevent another one from first laying its track in the street in question. If the acts of either amount to a public nuisance or obstruction of the way, it is for the public, and not for the other company, to complain.

4. Bridge Part of the Street.—In Floyd v. Rome St. R. Co., 77 Ga. 614, a bridge was constructed by F county within the city limits and placed under the city's control, it agreeing to keep it in repair but not to rebuild. Under its charter and with the consent of both

2. Authority of Municipality to Grant—a. IN GENERAL.—It is a fundamental principle in this connection that the powers of a municipal corporation in respect to the control of its streets are held in trust for the public benefit, and cannot, unless clearly authorized by a valid legislative enactment, be surrendered or delegated by contract to private persons, or other corporations.¹ This principle has been successfully invoked to have an ordinance declared void which granted to a company the right to construct and operate a street railway for an unlimited period of time, and without reserving any power of revocation.² Such an ordinance would be a contract, and would be void as a delegation of powers which are a public trust and, in the absence of express authority, inalienable. It would differ from a mere license which is in its nature revocable and subject to the regulation and control of the municipal government.³

city and county the railway company laid its tracks on the bridge. The bridge having been destroyed a new one was placed in its stead by the county. The county then sought to restrain the company from laying its tracks on the new bridge without making compensation. It was held that the injunction would not lie; the statute having made the bridge a part of the street the company's license to lay its track thereon could not be revoked except by legislative act; moreover such use of the bridge did not constitute an additional burden. See in this general connection, Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Point Bridge Co., 22 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. (Pa.) 367.

1. This is the language of 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 716 (567). See it quoted and approved in Des Moines St. R. Co. v. Des Moines Broad-Gauge St. R. Co., 73 Iowa 513; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 209. See also People's Pass. R. Co. v. Memphis City R. Co., 10 Wall. (U. S.) 38; Covington St. R. Co. v. Covington, 9 Bush (Ky.) 127.

2. Davis v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 14 N. Y. 506; 67 Am. Dec. 186; rev'g 3 Duer (N. Y.) 119; Milhau v. Sharp, 27 N. Y. 611; 84 Am. Dec. 314, affirming 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 228; Coleman v. Second Ave. R. Co., 38 N. Y. 201, affirming 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 371; People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 78; Eichels v. Evansville St. R. Co., 78 Ind. 263; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 274; 41 Am. Rep. 562; 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 716 (567); Birmingham, etc., R. Co. v. Birmingham R. Co., 78 Ala. 465. See also Stange v. Hill, etc., R. Co., 54 Iowa

669; Stanley v. Davenport, 54 Iowa 463; 37 Am. Rep. 216; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Denver City R. Co., 2 Colo. 673 (city of D. had no such authority under territorial government); State v. Bell, 34 Ohio St. 194 (held that municipality could not delegate to a board the right to grant such privileges); Reg. v. Train, 2 B. & S. 640; 110 E. C. L. 640; Reg. v. Charlesworth, 16 Q. B. 1012; Reg. v. Longton Gas. Co., 2 E. & El. 651; Chicago v. Rumpff, 45 Ill. 90; Logan v. Pyne, 43 Iowa 524.

3. The distinction is to be made in this connection between the grant of a license and that of a franchise. A franchise is a contract; it must emanate from the sovereign power of the state and can never be granted by a municipality unless the power to do so has clearly and specifically been granted to it. This distinction is adverted to clearly and at length in several leading cases, and a grant like that mentioned in the text was held void as being an attempt on the part of the municipality to grant a franchise. Milhau v. Sharp, 27 N. Y. 619; 84 Am. Dec. 314, aff'g 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 228, and following Davis v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 14 N. Y. 623; 67 Am. Dec. 186; Great Cent. R. Co. v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 63 Tex. 529; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 114 (consent of city is not a grant but a license); Chicago City R. Co. v. People, 73 Ill. 546; Beekman v. Saratoga, etc., R. Co., 3 Paige (N. Y.) 75; 22 Am. Rep. 679; Coleman v. Second Ave. R. Co., 38 N. Y. 201; Fanning v. Osborne, 102 N. Y. 441; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 252; FRANCHISES, vol. 8, p. 585. In the first of these cases the court, by Selden, J., speaking of the resolution of the city council, said: "If that resolution should be sustained, no power would remain in the municipality to remove the railway after its construction, if it should prove to be a nuisance, or to reduce the rate of fare, if it should be found to be unreasonably high, or to compel the introduction of any improved method of conveyance, if at any future time such method should be invented, without the consent of the railway company; and the powers of the municipality over the street in many other respects would be abridged. Those powers were given to the municipality as a trust to be held and exercised for the public benefit, from time to time as occasion might require, and they could neither be delegated to others, nor effectually abridged by any act of the municipal authorities. People v. Kerr, 27 N. Y. 188." See Atchison St. R. Co. v. Nave, 38 Kan. 744; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 29.

Whether or not the right to authorize the use of its streets exists in the municipality in particular cases, is a question of the construction of charters and of legislative provisions; but the powers usually conferred upon municipal corporations are generally sufficient to authorize the implication that such right exists.¹ But even where a municipal corporation has such an authority it must be confined to a reasonable exercise thereof, and such au-

1. In 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 724 (575), it is said: "The usual powers of a general nature in municipal corporations over streets are not sufficient to confer upon them the right to authorize the appropriation of streets by ordinary railroads which connect different towns, whose tracks are constructed in the usual manner, and whose trains are propelled by steam. But it is otherwise as respects horse railways; these are for local travel, and the ordinary powers of municipal corporations are often ample enough, in the absence of express or other legislation on the subject indicating a different intent, to authorize them to permit or refuse to permit the use of streets within their limits for such purposes." Quoted with approval in State v. Corrigan, etc., St. R. Co., 85 Mo. 275; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 596; 55 Am. Rep. 366; Atchison St. R. Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 31 Kan. 668; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 444. See also Brown v. Duplessis, 14 La. Ann. 854; Faust v. Pass. R. Co., 3 Phila. (Pa.) 164; Milhau v. Sharp, 15 Barb.

(N. Y.) 193; Milhau v. Sharp, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 435; New York, etc., R. Co. v. New York, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 562; State v. Mayor, etc., of Hoboken, 30 N. J. L. 225; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Rosedale St. R. Co., 64 Tex. 80; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 160; 53 Am. Rep. 739; Mayor, etc., of Houston v. Houston City St. R. Co. (Tex.), 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 280 (legislature had given city council exclusive control and regulation of all streets and of everything concerning street railways). A different view is taken in Eichels v. Evansville St. R. Co., 78 Ind. 263; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 274; 41 Am. Rep. 562. The court by Elliott, C. J., said: "There is no provision in the original charter, nor in any of the various acts amending it, conferring power to grant to either steam or horse railway companies the right to use the streets of the city. The ordinary and incidental powers of a municipal corporation are not broad enough to include the power to grant to a railway company the right to lay tracks and conduct the business of transporting passengers upon and over the streets of the municipality. Such a power is an extraordinary one, and one which cannot be implied from a charter of a municipal corporation, which confers only the usual powers ordinarily bestowed upon such corporations."

In Stange v. Hill, etc., R. Co., 54 Iowa 669, an ordinance granting to a street railway company the right to construct and operate a street railway, using either horse or steam power, was held void, as being beyond the power of the municipality; it had no authority to authorize the use of the street by a steam railway without compensation to the owners of abutting property. Stanley v. Davenport, 54 Iowa 463; 37 Am. Rep. 216. Afterwards the legislature attempted to validate the ordinance by granting power to pass it; but it was held that the constitutional provision against special legislation forbade the passage of such a statute. Stange v. Dubuque, 62 Iowa 303; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 107.

thority cannot be extended to authorize a grant to an individual of a right to construct a private railroad across or along a street for his own particular benefit;¹ nor can it authorize grants to so many companies that the street will be virtually closed to public travel.²

If a municipal ordinance, specially authorizing a particular street railway company by name to occupy certain streets, is invalid on constitutional grounds, it is absolutely void, and may not be given a general effect so as to inure to the benefit of another company having a prior charter for the streets named.³

Where, however, a municipality merely exceeds its powers in granting the use of its streets to a railway company, the legislature may confirm its action and render valid the privilege granted;⁴ but if the curative act is in contravention of the constitution, it will, of course, be of no efficacy.⁵

1. Heath v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 61 Iowa 11; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 313; Macon v. Harris, 75 Ga. 761. See also In re Split Rock Cable Road Co., 128 N. Y. 408; 51 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 514; State v. Trenton, 36 N. J. L. 79. In this case the court, by Van Syckel, J., said: "Streets and highways are intended for the common and equal use of all citizens, to which end they must be regulated. An appropriation of them to private individual uses, from which the public derive no convenience, benefit, or accommodation, is not a regulation, but a perversion of them from their lawful purposes, and cannot be regarded as an execution of the trust imposed in the city authorities." Mikesell v. Durkee, 34 Kan. 509; 36 Kan. 97 (abutting lotowner may enjoin use of such road); Memphis City R. Co. v. Memphis, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 406; Carli v. Stillwater St. R., etc., Co., 28 Minn. 373; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 226; 41 Am. Rep. 290.

The city of St. Louis has authority under its charter to regulate the use of its streets; but it was held that this authority extended only to the public use of such streets, and that the city was not authorized to grant permission to a party to build a street railway for his own private use. Glaessner v. Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co. 100 Mo. 508.

In Fanning v. Osborne, 102 N. Y. 441, where a portion of the street railroad was given up by the corporation for the private use of a private party, which authority was not given under the charter, it was held that this was an attempt by the railroad company to transfer to an individual rights which could only be exercised for the benefit of the public and was unauthorized and void. Compare Billard v. Erhart, 35 Kan. 611; Clarke v. Blackmar, 47 N. Y. 150. And in Chicago Dock, etc., Co. v. Garity, 115 Ill. 155, it was held that railway tracks leading to private warehouses might be a public use in such a sense as to justify their being laid on the city streets.

2. Street R. Co. v. West Side St. R. Co., 48 Mich. 433; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 95.

3. Larimer, etc., St. R. Co. v. Larimer St. R. Co., 137 Pa. St. 533.

4. McCartney v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 112 Ill. 611; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 326; People v. Los Angeles Electric R. Co., 91 Cal. 338; Nash v. Lowry, 37 Minn. 261. In this case, the common council of the City of St. Paul, by ordinance, granted a franchise for the construction of a street railway, which was in excess of its authority. Subsequently the ordinance was confirmed and validated by the legislature, and it was held that thereafter the common council could not rescind or revoke the right so granted.

5. The City of Dubuque, acting under a special charter, enacted an ordinance conferring upon a street railway company authority to construct upon certain streets in the city a railway, and to operate the same with either steam or horse power. The city had no power to pass this ordinance (see Stange v. Hill, etc., R. Co., 54 Iowa 669; Stanley v. Davenport, 54 Iowa 463). The legislature of the state thereafter passed an act in the following terms, viz.: "The ordinance of the

It has been held that when parks, squares, or grounds are dedicated to the public for the purposes of beauty, adornment, health, or recreation, neither the legislature nor the municipality can authorize their occupation by street railways;¹ but it seems to be otherwise when the property is vested in the municipality without restriction as to its use.²

b. EXCLUSIVE PRIVILEGES.—In view of the fact that the policy of the law is always to discourage monopolies, authority to grant exclusive privileges to any street railway company as to the occupation of a street does not exist in a municipal corporation, unless the power has been conferred by the legislature in direct and express terms. It can never exist by mere implication or construction.³ Indeed, the question has more than once arisen as to city council of the City of Dubuque . . . granting to the Hill & West Dubuque Street Railway Company the right of way for its railroad on certain streets of said city mentioned in said ordinance, be, and the same is hereby, validated and made as effective in law as if said council had full power and authority to pass the same at the time said ordinance was passed." It was held that as the legislature could not by special act have authorized the city to pass the ordinance in question, it followed that it could not, after the passage of the ordinance, legalize it by special act, as it could not accomplish by indirection what it was inhibited from doing directly. Stange v. Dubuque, 62 Iowa 303; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 107.

And in Ohio, where there is a general statutory provision requiring the franchise to be granted to the best bidder, it was held that a validating act could have no effect where its operation would enable the municipal officers to avoid the statute. Knorr v. Miller, 5 Ohio C. C. 609.

1. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. New Orleans, 26 La. Ann. 478; Jacksonville v. Jacksonville R. Co., 67 Ill. 540. In this latter case a railway company was by act of the legislature authorized to construct and operate a railway in a city "in, over and across and along any and all the avenues, streets, public grounds, squares, and alleys" of the city. Under this grant the company claimed the right to construct and operate its road across a public square which had been duly dedicated to the city. It appeared that city lots had been sold with reference to such square and around it, which had been improved, the value of which was enhanced on account of the square, and that the city had beautified and adorned the same. The city filed a bill in chancery to prevent the company from appropriating the square for railroad purposes, and it was held that the railway company should be perpetually enjoined from all attempts to lay down the track of its road through or across the public square. And it was said that where a public square is vested in a municipal corporation, the cestuis que use acquire a vested estate in the same, and neither the municipality nor the legislature can divert it to railroad or other private use. The power of the legislature is not unlimited, and cannot be exercised to interfere with trust estates and vested rights. If either the legislature or the municipality should attempt such an exercise of power, a court of equity would interfere and enforce the execution of the trust either upon the application of the owners of lots abutting upon the square, or, upon the application of the city, the trustee. See also Pratt v. Buffalo City R. Co., 19 Hun (N.Y.) 30; In re New York, etc., R. Co., 20 Hun (N. Y.) 201; PARKS AND PUBLIC SQUARES, vol. 17, p. 418. Compare Green v. New York Central, etc., R. Co., 65 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 154.

2. 2 Dill. Mun. Corp., §§ 650, 651; PARKS AND PUBLIC SQUARES, vol. 17, p. 418; People v. Park, etc., R. Co., 76 Cal. 156, where it was held that a road so constructed and operated as not to obstruct the free and comfortable use in the customary manner of the park by the public was not a nuisance. See also Mathers v. Kerper, 3 W. L. Bull. 551.

3. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15, pp. 1055-6, and numerous cases cited; Cincinnati St. R. Co. v. Smith, 29 Ohio St. 291; New Orleans City R. Co. v. Crescent City R. Co., 12 Fed.

the authority of the legislature to delegate such a power to a municipality. Such a question, however, can only arise in the construction of a constitutional provision against the creation of monopolies by the legislature.¹ By some authorities the right of the city to grant exclusive privileges is regarded as being dependent upon the length of time through which such privilege is to extend, so that if the length of time is not unreasonable the privilege may be granted.²

Rep. 308; Canal, etc., St. R. Co. v. Crescent City R. Co., 41 La. Ann. 561; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 329; Milhau v. Sharp, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 435; 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 228, affirmed 27 N. Y. 611; 84 Am. Dec. 314; Davis v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 14 N. Y. 506; 67 Am. Dec. 186; Henderson v. Ogden City R. Co. (Utah), 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 95; Memphis City R. Co. v. Memphis, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 406; People's Pass. R. Co. v. Memphis (Tenn. 1875), 16 S. W. Rep. 973; 10 Wall. (U. S.) 38; Jackson County Horse R. Co. v. Interstate Rapid Transit Co., 24 Fed. Rep. 306; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 216, n. In this last case the reason is stated by Brewer, J., that "the city may to-day determine that one street railroad will answer all the wants of the public, and so give the privilege of occupying the streets to a single company. Ten years hence its judgment may be that two railroads are needed. . . . When the legislature deems that the public interests require that cities shall be invested with power to grant exclusive privileges, it will say so in unmistakable terms, as it already has in some instances; till then, the courts must deny the possession of such a power."

In Cooley's Const. Lim. (4th ed.) 207*, it is said: "A corporation having power under its charter to establish and regulate streets cannot under this authority, without explicit legislative consent, permit individuals to lay down a railway in one of its streets, and confer privileges exclusive in their character and designed to be perpetual in duration." Quoting from and approving Milhau v. Sharp, 27 N. Y. 611; 84 Am. Dec. 314. See also Stein v. Bienville Water Supply Co., 34 Fed. Rep. 145.

1. The question was raised in Des Moines St. R. Co. v. Des Moines Broad Gauge St. R. Co., 73 Iowa 513; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 209, in construing art. 4, § 12, of Iowa constitution; but it was decided in favor of the power of the legislature. Also in Indianapolis Cable St. R. Co. v. Citizens' St. R. Co., 127 Ind. 369; 43 Am. and Eng. R. Cas. 234, where a clause of the constitution was invoked which forbade the granting of "privileges or immunities which upon the same terms shall not equally belong to all the citizens." See Norwich Gas Light Co. v. Norwich City Gas Co., 25 Conn. 19.

The provision of the Illinois Const. (1870, art. 4, § 22) against the grant of any special or exclusive privilege, immunity, or franchise, is a limitation upon the power of the general assembly, and cannot be construed as a limitation upon the power of a municipal corporation to designate certain streets and fix the conditions upon which a railway company, organized under a special charter previously granted, may build and operate its road. Chicago City R. Co. v. People, 73 Ill. 541.

2. In Des Moines St. R. Co. v. Des Moines Broad Gauge St. R. Co., 73 Iowa 513; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 209, the court, by Adams, J., said: "It may be conceded that the future growth and wants of a city cannot be foreseen. The most that can be said is that they may ordinarily be predicted with reasonable approximation for a limited time. From this we are inclined to think it follows that an ordinance providing for an exclusive right in perpetuity, however necessary it might be to contract for the service involved in the exercise of the right, would be unreasonable and might be declared void." (Quoting and approving 2 Dillon Mun. Corp., § 715.) "In the case at bar the time limited was thirty years, which does not seem to be unreasonable, especially in view of the fact that the lines were operated at a loss for fourteen years. Possibly thirty years, or any shorter time, should be deemed too long in any case, if the contract were such that the street railroad company could not be required to meet the public wants as the same should arise." In this case section 464

A company may acquire an exclusive right by contract with private parties over private property, and such a right will be recognized, even though afterwards a highway be laid out over the land occupied.¹

3. Authority of Legislature.—In the absence of particular constitutional provisions, there is no question as to the authority of the legislature to grant to an individual or to a corporation a franchise to construct and operate a street railway within any city, town, or village in the state.² Complete control of all highways rests ultimately in the legislature, and its right in this regard is in no wise impaired by the fact that it had previously delegated to a municipality the right to control and regulate streets within its limits.³ And, since a street railway is not considered to constitute an additional burden upon the street, a legislative act granting a franchise may be valid, though there is no provision made as to compensation to, or obtaining the consent of, owners of abutting property.⁴

of the Iowa code, giving the city "power to authorize or forbid the location and laying down of tracks for railways and street railways," was considered to authorize the city to grant a street railway corporation an exclusive privilege in certain streets for thirty years. See also Indianapolis Cable St. R. Co. v. Citizens' St. R. Co., 127 Ind. 389; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 234; New Orleans, etc., Co. v. Louisiana, etc., Co., 115 U. S. 650.

1. Fort Worth St. R. Co. v. Queen City R. Co., 71 Tex. 165. In this case a horse railway company, for a valuable consideration, obtained a right to build its road over the line of a railroad company to the depot of such railroad, to the exclusion of other horse railroads. The contract having been recorded, it was held that it was not against public policy, and that equity would recognize it and grant an injunction against the interference of another company with the right secured by the contract.

2. The constitutionality of the Rapid-transit act of New York, which authorized the construction of elevated roads in cities, has been sustained. In re New York El. R. Co., 70 N. Y. 327.

The rule of the text is recognized in other cases. See Hiss v. Baltimore, etc., Pass. R. Co., 52 Md. 242; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 201; 36 Am. Rep. 371; Eichels v. Evansville St. R. Co., 78 Ind. 261; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 274; 41 Am. Rep. 561; People's Pass. R. Co. v. Memphis City R. Co., 10 Wall. (U. S.) 38; Paterson, etc., R. Co. v. Mayor, etc., of Paterson, 24 N. J. Eq. 158; Mayor, etc., of Jersey City v. Jersey City, etc., R. Co., 20 N. J. Eq. 360; State, etc., Land Imp. Co. v. Hoboken, 35 N. J. L. 208; Domestic Tel. Co. v. Newark, 49 N. J. L. 344; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Newton, 36 Iowa 299; Atchison St. R. Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 31 Kan. 660; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 439; Harrisburg v. Harrisburg R. Co., 1 Pearson (Pa.) 298.

3. State v. Hilbert, 72 Wis. 184; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 118; Harrisburg City Pass. R. Co. v. Harrisburg (Pa. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 56; 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 656, 683. See also Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Denver City R. Co., 2 Colo. 673.

This rule results as a necessity from the power of the legislature to amend, alter, or repeal the charter of a municipal corporation at pleasure. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15, pp. 971, 976.

There are cases, however, in which the legislature cannot grant the right to use streets, except upon the consent of the city, as where the constitution requires that such consent shall always be secured. Great Cent., etc., R. Co. v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 63 Tex. 529; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 114.

4. The consent of abutting owners is not essential in such a case. Paterson, etc., Horse R. Co. v. Mayor, etc., of Paterson, 24 N. J. Eq. 158; 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 725 (576); Hodges v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 58 Md. 603; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 270.

In some of the states there exist constitutional provisions that a franchise to construct and operate a street railway may be granted only upon condition that the railway company shall obtain the consent of the city whose streets are to be occupied, or of the owners of abutting property, or of both. In such cases the consent required is absolutely essential. See this subject treated in a subsequent section.¹

4. Right of Abutters to Compensation.—The general doctrine is that the laying of a street railway in the streets of a city or village, and the running of cars thereon for the transportation of passengers, do not constitute an additional burden on the land, but are the uses contemplated when the street was laid out; and, that, therefore, an owner of abutting land can maintain no action for damages to his property resulting as a necessary consequence from the construction and operation of such railway, even though he owns the fee of the street, unless he can show that he has suffered some special and material injury.² This doctrine, however,

1. Right Granted Conditionally.—People's Pass. R. Co. v. Memphis City R. Co., 10 Wall. (U. S.) 38; Mayor, etc., of Jersey City v. Jersey City, etc., R. Co., 20 N. J. Eq. 360; Paterson, etc., Horse R. Co. v. Mayor, etc., of Paterson, 24 N. J. Eq. 158 (consent of both city and abutting owners required); infra, this title, Conditions Annexed to Grants.

Notice to Property Owners.—The legislature may require that notice of an application for the right to occupy certain streets shall be given to property owners. As to the validity of a particular notice, see Taggart v. Newport St. R. Co., 16 R. I. 668; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 208.

Under a statute prohibiting municipal corporations from giving consent to construct and operate a horse railroad until ten days' public notice of the time and place of presenting the petition shall have been given, the publication of the report of a committee recommending that leave be granted ten days before the adoption of an ordinance authorizing such construction, is not a compliance with the statute. Metropolitan City R. Co. v. Chicago, 96 Ill. 620; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 291.

2. The General Doctrine.—See STREETS, and the numerous cases there cited; Elliott on Roads & Streets, p. 558; Cooley's Const. Lim. (4th ed.) § 556; 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 722 (573); Lewis on Em. Domain, § 124; Mills on Em. Domain (2d ed.), § 205; Finch v. Riverside, etc., R. Co., 87 Cal. 597; Elliott v. Fair Haven, etc.,

R. Co., 32 Conn. 579; Randall v. Jacksonville St. R. Co., 19 Fla. 409; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 84; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Mayor, etc., 45 Ga. 602; Campbell v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 82 Ga. 320; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 90, n.; Eichels v. Evansville St. R. Co., 78 Ind. 261; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 274; 41 Am. Rep. 561; Covington St. R. Co. v. Covington, etc., C. R. Co., 19 Am. L. Reg. 765; Louisville Mfg. Co. v. Central Pass. R. Co. (Louisville (Ky.) L. and Eq. Ct. 1890); Brown v. Duplessis, 14 La. Ann. 854; Briggs v. Lewiston, etc., Horse R. Co., 79 Me. 363; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 167 (motor no criterion); Hiss v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 52 Md. 242; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 201; 36 Am. Rep. 371; Hodges v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 58 Md. 603; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 270; Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich. 62; 31 Am. Rep. 306; Nichols v. Ann Arbor, etc., St. R. Co., 87 Mich. 361; Atty. Gen'l v. Metropolitan R. Co., 125 Mass. 515; 28 Am. Rep. 264; Newell v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 35 Minn. 112; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 298; 59 Am. Rep. 303 (even though railway runs 18 miles out of town and is used much like an ordinary railroad); Ransom v. Citizens' R. Co., 104 Mo. 375; Hinchman v. Paterson Horse R. Co., 17 N. J. Eq. 75; Hogencamp v. Paterson Horse R. Co., 17 N. J. Eq. 83; Citizens' Coach Co. v. Camden Horse R. Co., 33 N. J. Eq. 267; 36 Am. Rep. 542; West Jersey R. Co. v. Cape May, etc., R. Co., 34 N. J. Eq. 164; Van Horne v. Newark Pass. R.

is denied in New York, in cases where the owner of abutting property owns also the fee of the street;¹ but where the fee of the Co., 48 N. J. Eq. 332; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 235; McQuaid v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 18 Oregon 237; Van Bokelen v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 379; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Rose-dale St. R. Co., 64 Tex. 80; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 160; 53 Am. Rep. 739; Hobart v. Milwaukee City R. Co., 27 Wis. 194; 9 Am. Rep. 461; Keasbey on Electric Wires, p. 106 et seq. Compare Stange v. Dubuque, 63 Iowa 303; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 107, holding that where steam motors are to be used compensation must be made to property owners.

In 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 725 (576), it is said: "As to street railroads constructed in the usual manner and operated under municipal regulation so as not to exclude the free passage of ordinary vehicles, the almost general, and in the author's judgment, the sound judicial view is, that they do not create a new burden upon the land, and hence the legislature, no matter whether the fee is in the abutter or in the public, is not bound to, although it may, provide for compensation to the adjoining proprietor."

In his work on Const. Lim. (4th ed.) *556, Mr. Cooley says: "Perhaps the true distinction in these cases is not to be found in the motive power of the railway, or in the question whether the fee simple or a mere easement was taken in the original appropriation, but depends upon the question whether the railway constitutes a thoroughfare, or, on the other hand, is a mere local convenience. When land is taken or dedicated for a town street, it is unquestionably appropriated for all the ordinary purposes of a town street; not merely the purposes to which such streets were formerly applied, but those demanded by new improvements and new wants. Among these purposes is the use for carriages which run upon a grooved track; and the preparation of important streets in large cities for their use is not only a frequent necessity, which must be supposed to have been contemplated, but it is almost as much a matter of course as the grading and paving." Quoted and approved in Eichels v. Evansville St. R. Co., 78 Ind. 267; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 274; 41 Am. Rep. 566.

As to Cable Roads.—See the rule of the text applied to cable roads, in Lorie v. North Chicago City R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 270; Harrison v. Mt. Auburn Cable R. Co. (Ohio, 1891), 17 Wkly. L. Bull. 265; Clement v. Cincinnati, 16 Wkly. L. Bull. 355. See also Keasbey on Electric Wires, pp. 103-4; People v. Newton, 112 N. Y. 396; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 391; 3 L. R. A. 174; Rafferty v. Central Traction Co., 22 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 15.

1. Doctrine in New York.—Craig v. Rochester City, etc., R. Co., 39 N. Y. 404; aff'd 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 494, was an action for an injunction against the laying of a horse railway track in a street in Rochester. The judgment was rendered for the plaintiff in the lower court, and on appeal the decision was upheld. The court, by Miller, J., after reviewing and distinguishing many cases, said: "The use of a railroad, no matter how it is operated, whether by horse or steam power, necessarily includes to a certain extent an exclusive occupation of a certain portion of the highway for the track of the road, and the running of its cars by the company and a permanent occupation of the soil. It requires that all other parties shall stand aside and make way for its progress. This is clearly inconsistent with the legal object and design of a highway, which is entirely open and free to all for purposes of locomotive travel and transportation. The enjoyment of the easement in a highway never confers an exclusive right upon any one who may have occasion to use it, while the laying down of rails and the employment of cars is to the detriment and exclusion of all others at the time when the cars are running, and is a restraint upon a free, undisturbed, and general public use. It is an assertion of a right to the possession of the highway by the corporation, and an appropriation of it to private occupation, which by lapse of time might ripen into a right and vest a title in the company." In Story v. New York El. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 122; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 596; 43 Am. Rep. 146, the same doctrine was upheld and applied to the case of elevated railroads in New York city. See infra, this title, Elevated Railroads; Ordinary Railroads in Streets and Highways.

In People v. Kerr, 27 N. Y. 188, aff'd street is owned by the city, the general rule above stated is applied.¹ And the general doctrine cannot be applied so rigidly as to exclude all right to claim damages; wherever the lot-owner can show that he has suffered some special and material injury in the matter of access to his property, he is entitled to recover compensation.² In some instances, statutory provision

37 Barb. (N. Y.) 357, the action was brought by the city to recover compensation, but it was held that the appropriation of the streets by legislative authority for the use of a street railroad was not a taking of private property which would require compensation to the city, though it owned the fee of the streets.

1. In Kellinger v. Forty-second St., etc., R. Co., 50 N. Y. 206, it was held that the owners of property abutting upon a street in the city of New York, laid out under the statute of 1813, had no cause of action for the mere inconvenience of access to their lands occasioned by the lawful use of the street by a horse-railroad company. The case was distinguished from that of Craig v. Rochester City, etc., R. Co., 39 N. Y. 404. In the latter case the fee of the street was in the landowner, while in the case in hand the fee as well as the easement was vested in the public.

In Kane v. New York El. R. Co., 125 N. Y. 186; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137, the court, by Andrews, J., while upholding the right of an abutting owner to recover damages for the infringement of his easement of light, air, and access by the elevated railroad company, observed: "It is also the law of this state that the use of a city street for an ordinary horse or steam railway, unless it practically closes the street, is a street use which may be permitted, and that abutting owners whose lots are bounded by the side of the street have no legal redress in the absence of negligence in the construction or operation of the railroad, although it interferes with the enjoyment of their premises or seriously impairs their value. Forbes v. Rome, etc., R. Co., 121 N. Y. 505; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137." See also Reining v. New York, etc., R. Co., 128 N. Y. 157; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 205; Kellinger v. Forty-second St., etc., R. Co., 50 N. Y. 206; Brooklyn City, etc., R. Co. v. Coney Island, etc., R. Co., 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 364; Mahady v. Bushwick R. Co., 91 N. Y. 148; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 142; 43 Am. Dec. 661; Ottenot v. New York, etc., R. Co., 119 N. Y. 603; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 129; 41 Alb. L. J. 194. As to elevated railroads, see infra, this title, Elevated Railroads.

2. In Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Cumminsville, 14 Ohio St. 550, it was found as a fact, that the proposed construction of the railway track "will be an obstruction to the convenient access to the houses and other improvements" of the lotowners; "and more of an obstruction thereto than it would be if laid in the center of the highway." It was added that, taking into consideration the interests of the company and of the general traveling public as well as those of the lotowners, the location was "as little injurious as it would be in any other part of the highway." The lotowner was allowed to recover damages. The court, by Ranney, J., commenting on the above state of facts, said: "This is the common case when private property is taken for public uses. Reduced into plain English, it simply amounts to this, that the company and the public will gain as much as the lotowners lose."

In case of special injury the remedy is by an action at law for special damage, and not by application for an injunction. Lorie v. North Chicago City R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 270; Stetson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 75 Ill. 74, and cases cited. Compare the remedy granted in the elevated railway cases in New York where an injunction and alternative damages are awarded. See Story v. New York El. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 122; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 596; 43 Am. Rep. 146; infra, this title, Elevated Railroads—New York.

Doctrine Confined in its Application.—The doctrine under discussion, which maintains that a street railway is not an additional burden, is rather to be confined than extended. Thus, it cannot be invoked to authorize a company to lay a horse railway in a street, solely as a freight transfer track between two steam railroads running into the city, without compensation to abutting owners. Carli v. Stillwater St. R., etc., Co., 28 Minn. 373; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas.

has been made requiring compensation to be made to abutting lotowners.¹ It has been contended that an electric street railway operated by what is known as the trolley system, with its poles and wires and its peculiar track, constituted a new servitude upon the land in the street; but the contention has not been sustained, and electric railways are considered to be not different from other street railways in this regard. The question whether an additional burden is imposed or not cannot be determined from the motive power employed.²

226; 41 Am. Rep. 290. And the rule that the railway is not an additional burden holds only so long as it does not impair the usefulness of the street for travel. If embankments are raised, cuts made, or the grade of the street otherwise changed, it becomes an additional burden and must make compensation to abutting landowners where easements of access over the street to their property are impaired. Forbes v. Rome, etc., R. Co., 121 N. Y. 521; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137; Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 634; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 608; Lorie v. North Chicago City R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 270; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Finley, 86 Ky. 294; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 170, note. Thus in Elliott on Roads and Streets, p. 558, it is said: "Where the road is so constructed as materially to impair the rights of the abutter, it seems to us that it should be treated as an additional burden entitling the owner to compensation; but this is true only where the alteration is made in the street solely for the use and accommodation of the railway company."

1. Statutes Providing for Compensation.—See Taylor v. Bay City St. R. Co., 80 Mich. 77; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 335, where a series of statutes and amendments thereto were considered as requiring compensation to property owners. In Onset St. R. Co. v. Plymouth Co., 154 Mass. 395, property owners were allowed to recover damages under Massachusetts Pub. St., ch. 49, § 34, though they did not own the fee of the streets.

In Vose v. Newport St. R. Co. (R. I.), 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 91, the railway company's charter provided that "whenever any estate abutting upon a street or highway upon or over which the rails of said corporation shall be laid shall be injured thereby, the said corporation shall be liable to pay the owner thereof the damages thereby occasioned to said estate." It was held that the owner of abutting property was entitled to recover damages only for injuries resulting from the laying of the rails as distinguished from those resulting from the use of them as laid.

2. Electric Railways.—Halsey v. Rapid Transit St. R. Co., 47 N. J. Eq. 380; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 76; Koch v. North Ave. R. Co. (Md.), 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 401; District Atty. v. West Chester, 9 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 546; Lockhart v. Craig St. R. Co., 139 Pa. St. 419; 47 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 57, 64, note (injunction denied); Williams v. City Electric St. R. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 556; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 215; Taggart v. Newport St. R. Co., 16 R. I. 668; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 208; Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 634; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 608; Ogden City R. Co. v. Ogden, 7 Utah 207; Tracy v. Troy, etc., R. Co., 54 Hun (N. Y.) 550; Potter v. Saginaw, etc., St. R. Co., 83 Mich. 295; Mt. Adams, etc., R. Co. v. Winslow, 3 Ohio C. Ct. 425; Pelton v. East Cleveland R. Co., 22 Wkly. L. Bull. 67.

Where the owner of a corner lot owns the fee to the center of the street, and the electric railway company has its track wholly on the opposite side of the center of the street, he is entitled to no relief other than an order perpetually enjoining the company from thereafter erecting in front of his premises any poles or wires without his consent. Barber v. Saginaw St. R. Co., 83 Mich. 299.

Electric Railway Wires Distinguished from Telegraph Wires.—In Taggart v. Newport St. R. Co., 16 R. I. 668; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 208; 7 L. R. A. 205, the court took pains to distinguish the case in hand from those relating to telegraph and telephone wires. Durfee, J., said: "Assuming telegraph and telephone poles and wires do create a new servitude, we do not think it follows that the poles and wires erected and used for the service of the street railway likewise create a new servitude. Telegraph and telephone wires are not used to facilitate the use of the streets where they are erected

In the case of ordinary steam railroads the rule is different. They constitute an additional burden on the land, and may not be constructed or operated in a street unless compensation has been made to the owners of abutting property.¹ It has been attempted to apply this last rule of law to lines operated with dummy engines, but, with a few exceptions, the application has been refused.² The distinction between the rule governing ordinary railroads and that applied to street railways is to be found not in the motive power employed, but in the character of the use. A street railway is directly ancillary to the uses of the street; it is a mode of travel closely allied to those in common use on the highway, and, as a matter of fact and common knowledge, is very much less of an obstruction than an ordinary railroad.³

5. Unauthorized Use of Streets.—The unauthorized use of a public highway by a street railway company in the construction or operation of its road is a nuisance per se, being an invasion of the public easement.⁴ The company making such unauthorized use for travel and transportation, or if so, very indirectly so; whereas the poles and wires here in question are directly ancillary to the uses of the streets, as such, in that they communicate the power by which the street cars are propelled." Commenting on this case Judge Dillon observes: "The distinction mentioned is so fine as to be almost impalpable, and it suggests serious doubts whether both conclusions are sound and reconcilable. The general subject awaits further development and settlement." 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.) § 734c. The same distinction is made in Halsey v. Rapid Transit St. R. Co., 47 N. J. Eq. 380; 46 Am. and Eng. R. Cas. 76.

1. Ordinary Railroads.—See this subject treated infra, this title, Ordinary Railroads in Streets and Highways. Theobald v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 66 Miss. 279; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 462; 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 704a.

2. Newell v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 35 Minn. 112; 24 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 298; 59 Am. Rep. 303; Briggs v. Lewiston, etc., Horse R. Co., 79 Me. 363; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 167; Williams v. City Electric R. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 556; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 215. Compare Stanley v. Davenport, 54 Iowa 463; 37 Am. Rep. 216; East End St. R. Co. v. Doyle, 88 Tenn. 747; 17 Am. St. Rep. 935.

If the railroad company abuses its right and so operates its road that it becomes a nuisance, the adjacent landowners have an appropriate remedy by injunction, or by an action for damages. Williams v. City Electric R. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 556; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 215. See also Hussner v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 114 N. Y. 433; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 219; East End R. Co. v. Doyle, 88 Tenn. 747; 17 Am. St. Rep. 933.

3. Thus in Briggs v. Lewiston, etc., Horse R. Co., 79 Me. 367; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 167, the court by Emery, J., said: "We do not think the motor is the criterion; it is rather the use of the street. If the railroad company exclusively occupy the land—shut off the street from it, deprive it of its character of bearing the easement of a street—use it, not for street traffic but for what is known as railway traffic, the company may perhaps be said to make a new and different use of the land. . . . But the defendant company is using the land as a street. Its railroad is a street railroad. Its cars are used by those who wish to pass from place to place on the street. A change in the motor is not a change in the use." Similar language was used in Williams v. City Electric R. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 557; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 217.

4. Van Horne v. Newark, etc., Pass. R. Co., 48 N. J. Eq. 332; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 235; Larimer, etc. St. R. Co. v. Larimer St. R. Co., 137 Pa. St. 533; Atty. Gen'l v. Lombard, etc., R. Co., 10 Phila. (Pa.) 352; Davis v. New York, 14 N. Y. 506; Brooklyn City R. Co. v. Furey, 4 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 364; Metropolitan City R. Co. v. Chicago, 96 Ill. 620; 2 Am. & Eng.

of the streets may be indicted for maintaining a public nuisance,¹ or it may be enjoined by the public authorities,² or by private citizens making out a case of special damage.³ And it is held to be no objection to the granting of an injunction against the wrongful laying of the track that the municipality would have the right to remove it by force when laid, upon the principle that when a party has a remedy by his own act, involving the use of force, it does not constitute that adequate remedy at law which excludes equitable relief.⁴

R. Cas. 291; Easton, etc., Pass. R. Co. v. Easton, 133 Pa. St. 505; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 253; 19 Am. St. Rep. 658; Nichols v. Ann Arbor, etc., R. Co., 87 Mich. 361. Compare Hamilton v. New York, etc., R. Co., 9 Paige (N. Y.) 171.

Thus, where the road was constructed in a manner unauthorized by the statute under which the corporation was organized, the grade not conforming to the grade of the street, it was adjudged to be a public nuisance. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Denver City R. Co., 2 Colo. 673.

The company is to be confined strictly to the streets which it is authorized to occupy, and a road in every street where the company has no authority to place one is a nuisance which may be enjoined. Stamford v. Stamford Horse R. Co., 56 Conn. 381; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 140; Com. v. Erie, etc., R. Co., 27 Pa. St. 339. Compare Zabriskie v. Jersey City, etc., R. Co., 13 N. J. Eq. 314.

So the use by a street railway company of tracks for private purposes constitutes a nuisance. Fanning v. Osborne, 102 N. Y. 441; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 252.

1. Com. v. Old Colony, etc., R. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 93; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Com., 101 Pa. St. 192; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 321; 2 Dill. Munic. Corp., § 708. See also NUISANCES, vol. 16, p. 961.

2. Coast Line R. Co. v. Cohen, 50 Ga. 451; Stamford v. Stamford Horse R. Co., 56 Conn. 381; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 140; People v. Third Ave. R. Co., 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 63; McCartney v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 112 Ill. 611; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas., 326; Hunt v. Chicago Horse, etc., R. Co., 121 Ill. 638.

3. Although the unauthorized occupation of public streets by a railway company may be regarded as a nuisance per se which will be enjoined, an injunction will not be granted at the suit of a private citizen or a corporation, unless the plaintiff can make out a case of special damage. Larimer, etc., R. Co. v. Larimer St. R. Co., 137 Pa. St. 533. In such a case the nuisance, being purely a public one, can only be restrained by the public authorities. Coast Line R. Co. v. Cohen, 50 Ga. 451. See also Peterson v. R. Co., 5 Phila. (Pa.) 199; Sparhawk v. Union Pass. R. Co., 54 Pa. St. 401; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Denver City R. Co., 2 Colo. 673; Hinchman v. Paterson Horse R. Co., 17 N. J. Eq. 75; Hogenkamp v. Paterson Horse R. Co., 17 N. J. Eq. 83; Gloessner v. Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co., 100 Mo. 509; Osborne v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 366; Davis v. New York, 14 N. Y. 506; Fanning v. Osborne, 102 N. Y. 441; Milhau v. Sharp, 27 N. Y. 611; Nichols v. Ann Arbor, etc., R. Co., 87 Mich. 361. Compare Musser v. Fairmont, etc., St. R. Co., 7 Am. L. Reg. 284.

In Roberts v. Easton, 19 Ohio St. 78, it was held that where a city council grants permission to construct a street railroad without the consent of the owners of property on the street being obtained, as required by the statute, the construction of the railroad may be enjoined at the suit of the owners of property on the street in which it is about to be constructed.

4. Stamford v. Stamford Horse R. Co., 56 Conn. 381; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 140. See also Spokane St. R. Co. v. Spokane Falls R. Co., 46 Fed. Rep. 322, where a court of equity refused to enjoin a city from tearing up the tracks of a railroad company illegally laid.

In Easton, etc., Pass. R. Co. v. Easton, 133 Pa. St. 505; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 253; 19 Am. St. Rep. 658, it was held that the city could not tear up the tracks unless they amounted to a public nuisance dangerous to the safety of the citizens. See also Asheville St. R. Co. v. Asheville, 109 N. Car. 688.

VI. CONSTRUCTION OF FRANCHISES AND LICENSES.—It is a settled rule that charters of incorporation are to be construed favorably to the public and strictly against the corporators. By this, however, is not meant that the grant is to be construed technically and narrowly so as to defeat the very purposes for which it is made, but that, giving the language its ordinary meaning, nothing will be included unless obviously within the scope of such meaning.¹ Thus, the grant of an exclusive right to construct and operate horse railways, does not include authority to construct and operate a cable road, notwithstanding, at the time of the grant, the former was the only street railway in practical use

But a railway track laid upon a city street in good faith under a corporate charter granted for the purpose, but not endangering the health or safety of the inhabitants, cannot be classed among the nuisances which the city authorities may abate summarily without resort to the processes of the law, even though by reason of the manner of its construction it may obstruct the street to such a degree as to amount to a nuisance. Easton, etc., Pass. R. Co. v. Easton, 133 Pa. St. 505; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 253; 19 Am. St. Rep. 658.

1. See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 213; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 804; STATUTES, vol. 23, p. 140; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 544; St. Louis v. Missouri R. Co., 13 Mo. App. 524.

Words and phrases in a statute conferring upon a corporation its franchise and special privileges, which are ambiguous or admit of different meanings, must receive that construction which is most favorable to the public. People v. Broadway R. Co., 126 N. Y. 29; 48 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 692.

In Cooley's Const. Lim., p. 394, the author observes: "Grants of the franchise to be a corporation which confer upon a few persons what cannot be shared by the many, and which, though supposed to be made on public grounds, are nevertheless of great value to the corporators, and are therefore sought with avidity, are never to be extended by construction beyond the plain terms in which they are conferred. No rule is better settled than that charters of incorporation are to be strictly construed against the corporators. The just presumption in every such case is that the state has granted in express terms all that it designed to grant at all."

In Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Canal Com'rs, 21 Pa. St. 22, Black, C. J., for the court, used the following language: "When a state means to clothe a corporate body with a portion of its own sovereignty, and to disarm itself to that extent of the power that belongs to it, it is so easy to say so that we will never believe it to be meant when it is not said. In the construction of a charter to be in doubt is to be resolved, and every resolution which springs from doubt is against the corporation." And the Supreme Court of the United States, in terms equally emphatic, has said: "Every reasonable doubt is to be resolved adversely to the corporation. Nothing is to be taken as conceded but what is given in unmistakable terms, or by an implication equally clear. The affirmative must be shown. Silence is negation; a doubt is fatal to the claim. This doctrine is vital to the public welfare; it is axiomatic in the jurisprudence of this court." Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 666.

And in Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Philadelphia Belt Line R. Co., 49 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 5, Gordon, J., said: "If language means anything, and if almost wearying reiteration in unnumbered cases can be regarded as establishing a principle, then one doctrine must be taken as accepted—that is, that the corporate grant against a public right is to be strictly construed in favor of the public." See also Halsey v. Rapid Transit St. R. Co., 47 N. J. Eq. 380; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 76, holding that where a corporation is authorized by a general grant to exercise a franchise or to carry on a business, and the grant contains no words either defining or limiting the powers which the corporation may exercise, it will take by implication all such powers as are reasonably necessary to enable it to accomplish the purpose for which it was formed. See infra, this title, Motive Power.

and the latter was practically unknown.¹ So a grant of power relating to connections with other roads has reference to such roads only as exist at the time of the grant.² And, under a power to construct a road "on, over, and along" certain alleys, there is no power to construct the tracks "by the side" of the alleys mentioned.³ But the right to construct and operate the

1. Omaha Horse R. Co. v. Cable Tramway R. Co., 30 Fed. Rep. 324; 32 Fed. Rep. 727. The contention in this case was that at the time of the grant cable roads were practically unknown, as the only known form of street railways was the horse railway; that the terms street railroad and horse railroad were, in common parlance, used to describe the same thing; that in construing the grant the court should carry itself back to the time at which it was made, and that these terms horse railroad and street railroad, being then used interchangeably, it must be presumed that the legislature meant by the use of one term all that it would have meant by the use of the other, and that, therefore, all that would today be included within either term was within the scope of the grant. But the court negated this contention, holding itself bound by the well-established rule of construction that legislative grants are to be construed against the grantee and in favor of the public, and nothing shall pass unless it is obvious that the intent was that it should pass. Bridge Proprietors v. Hoboken, 1 Wall. (U.S.) 116, is an analogous case. Here the legislature gave the plaintiff the right to build a toll bridge with the provision that no other bridge should be built within certain limits for a period of ninety-nine years. Subsequently the defendant, within the time limited, proceeded to construct a railroad bridge within the prescribed limits, and its construction was sought to be enjoined by the plaintiffs as an invasion of their franchise. The Court of Errors and Appeals of New Jersey denied the injunction, and on appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States its ruling was affirmed. The court, in Omaha Horse R. Co. v. Cable Tramway R. Co., 30 Fed. Rep. 324, speaking with reference to this case, said: "In other words, as the railroad bridge was unknown at the time of the grant, the supreme court held that it was not included within the exclusive franchise. It was something not thought of by the legislature, and was, therefore, not within the limits of the exclusive grant. That case is even stronger than this, for a railroad bridge is certainly one form of a bridge, and therefore, within the very letter of the grant; but a cable road is not one form of a horse railroad and not within the strict words of the grant." To the same effect is People v. Newton, 112 N. Y. 396, affirming 1 N. Y. Supp. 197; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 391.

And the exclusive right to construct and operate a horse railway in a city is not infringed by the construction in the same city of a road to be operated by steam. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Denver City R. Co., 2 Colo. 673.

Authority to build either a horse railroad or a steam railroad within a city confers a continuing option to use either steam or animal power or both upon its road, or any part of it, which may be exercised from time to time. Under it, the use of either motive power may be changed, and the other substituted as the company may see fit. McCartney v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 112 Ill. 612; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 326.

But under a municipal ordinance authorizing the construction of a railway on certain streets "to be operated by electricity or such other power as will not necessarily obstruct the use of said streets by the public," the absolute right to operate its cars by steam is not conferred; the question as to whether the use of steam would "necessarily obstruct the use of said streets" being one of fact for the jury. Houston v. Houston, etc., R. Co., 84 Tex. 581; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 380.

2. People's Pass. R. Co. v. Marshall, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 273.

3. Heath v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 61 Iowa 11; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 313. See also Trenton Horse R. Co. v. Trenton, 11 L. R. A. 410.

In Burns v. Multnomah R. Co., 15 Fed. Rep. 177; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 289, the company was authorized to lay its tracks on certain streets, "beginning at the ferry landing at the foot of M street." It appearing that the ferry landing and the foot of M street were differ-road carries with it authority to construct such switches and turnouts as may be necessary for the successful operation of the road.¹ In South Carolina, it is held that under a charter authorizing the construction of the road "from" a city there is no authority to enter the city, but that the boundary of the city is the terminus a quo;² but in other jurisdictions the words "to" and "from" a place are held to mean to or from a point within the place, to or from which the construction is authorized;³ and this would seem to be the better view. Upon the principle stated above, street railway franchises are never construed as exclusive, unless such construction is unavoidable.⁴

ent and not contiguous places, it was, therefore, held that the ambiguity must be resolved against the corporation, and the agreement construed so as to read simply, "at the foot of M street."

In Stamford v. Stamford Horse R. Co., 56 Conn. 381; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 140, the charter specified four terminal points between which tracks might be laid, and the streets through which they were to run, omitting one which was named in the company's petition for a charter, and adding two that were not named; the section closing "and over and across any highway between any of the points of commencing or termination aforesaid." It was held that the company had no right to occupy any streets not specified, and that the borough might have an injunction against the laying of tracks in any such streets. See also In re South Beach R. Co., 119 N. Y. 141.

But where the charter authorized the company to construct its tracks "upon and over such streets" in the city "except in certain streets therein mentioned," it was held that this could not be construed to prevent the company from laying its tracks "across" one of the excepted streets. State v. Newport St. R. Co., 16 R. I. 533. See also Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Dunbar, 100 Ill. 137; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 253.

The charter of the defendants contained this clause: The president and directors of said company are hereby authorized and invested with all the rights and powers necessary and expedient to survey, lay out, and construct a railroad from some suitable point in the township of O., in the county of E., to some suitable point in O. street or some street north of said street or south of M. street, in the city of Newark. It was held that this clause had reference not to the route but to the termination of the road, and that thereby the road of the company was not excluded from being located in or through M. street. McFarland v. Orange, etc., Horse Car R. Co., 13 N. J. Eq. 17; aff'd 13 N. J. Eq. 561.

1. Houston v. Houston, etc., R. Co., 84 Tex. 581; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 380. See also LATERAL OR BRANCH RAILROADS, vol. 12, p. 940.

A charter of a horse railroad provided that "said railroad shall be laid out by the mayor and aldermen in like manner as highways are laid out." A single-track road was laid out by the mayor and aldermen without any turnouts, but with a provision in the record of laying out that "said horse railroad company may construct such suitable turnouts on either side of said center line as they may find necessary in the transaction of the business to be done by said railroad." It was held that the company had no authority to construct a turnout, although necessary for its business, and required by the public convenience, without a laying out by the mayor and aldermen. Concord v. Concord Horse R. Co., 65 N. H. 30; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 425.

2. North Eastern R. Co. v. Payne, 8 Rich. (S. Car.) 177.

3. Mason v. Brooklyn City, etc., R. Co., 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 373; Farmers' Turnpike R. Co. v. Coventry, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 389; Western Pennsylvania R. Co.'s Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 155. Thus, authority to construct and operate a railway from the city of Chicago to any point in the town of Evanston, authorizes the location and operation of the road from any point within the city of Chicago. McCartney v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 112 Ill. 611; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 326.

4. Gulf City R. Co. v. Galveston City R. Co., 65 Tex. 502; Fort Worth St. R. Co. v. Rosedale St. R. Co., 68 Tex. 169; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 283; Jer- sey City, etc., R. Co. v. Jersey City, etc., Horse R. Co., 20 N. J. Eq. 61; 21 N. J. Eq. 550; New York Cable R. Co. v. Chambers St., etc., R. Co., 40 Hun (N. Y.) 29; Brooklyn City, etc., R. Co. v. Coney Island, etc., R. Co., 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 364; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Forty Second St., etc., R. Co., 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 285; Oakland R. Co. v. Oakland, etc., R. Co., 45 Cal. 365; 13 Am. Rep. 181; Louisville City R. Co. v. Central Pass. R. Co., 87 Ky. 223; 21 Fed. Rep. 358; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 463; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 542; Kinsman St. R. Co. v. Broadway, etc., R. Co., 36 Ohio St. 239; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 327; Brooklyn Cent., etc., R. Co. v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 358; Brooklyn Cent., etc., R. Co. v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 420.

In Mayor, etc., of Houston v. Houston City St. R. Co. (Tex.), 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 280, it was held that the grant to a company of the right to occupy the city streets did not confer an exclusive privilege, since the terms of the grant did not absolutely prohibit the city from extending similar privileges to other companies.

A grant made under legislative sanction by a city to a street railway company of the right, not in express terms exclusive, to construct and operate a railway upon its streets, confers upon the company no exclusive privilege. Over that portion of any street upon which its track switches, or turnouts do not lie, a railway company has no authority, but the city's dominion over it remains unchanged and unimpaired and is as full and complete for all purposes as it was over the entire street before the privilege of constructing a road thereupon was granted. Accordingly, if a city should choose to grant to another company the privilege of laying a track upon the same street, the company already operating a road thereon would have no right to object so long as the free and unobstructed use of its own track is not interfered with; and the new grant may, with the consent of the legislature, be made. Gulf City R. Co. v. Galveston City R. Co., 65 Tex. 502; Fort Worth St. R. Co. v. Rosedale R. Co., 68 Tex. 169; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 283; Jersey City, etc., R. Co. v. Jersey City, etc., Horse R. Co., 20 N. J. Eq. 61; 2 Dill. Munic. Corp. (4th ed.), § 727.

By the second section of the Georgia act of February 23, 1866, incorporating the Atlanta Street Railway Company it is declared that such company shall have exclusive power and authority to survey, lay out, construct and occupy, use and employ street railways in the city of Atlanta, subject to the approval of the city council thereof for each route selected first obtained before the work thereon shall be commenced. It was held that there were no words in this charter which grant to the company the unconditional exclusive power and authority to construct and use street railroads in all of the streets of the city of Atlanta, but on the contrary that the grant is limited and restricted, to each route that may be selected by the company in the streets of the city of Atlanta which shall be approved by the city council. West End, etc., R. Co. v. Atlanta St. R. Co., 49 Ga. 151.

The charter of a street railway company provided that, "the city is authorized to contract with said railway company as to the construction, maintenance, and operation of said railway upon such terms as it may agree upon with said company, any laws now existing to the contrary notwithstanding." It was held that this would not override a subsequent general law under which another corporation claimed to use the tracks of the first-named company, although under that charter an exclusive right was granted by the city. New Bedford, etc., St. R. Co. v. Acushnet St. R. Co., 143 Mass. 200.

A municipal ordinance granting a corporation the exclusive right for a term of years to use its streets for the construction and operation of a street railway, to be operated by animal power only, and providing that the city should not, until after the expiration of the term, grant to or confer upon any person or corporation any privileges which would impair or destroy the rights and privileges granted to such corporation, does not deprive the city of the power to confer upon another company, before the expiration of the term, authority to build railways on its streets to be operated by power other than animal power. Teachout v. Des Moines Broad Gauge St. R. Co., 75 Iowa 722.

And where a city, "for the purpose of providing street railways," granted, for a term of years, to a company the exclusive privilege of using its streets, it was held that such privilege attached only when the actual use, or its equivalent, began, and that the municipality was not precluded from permitting an-

VII. CONDITIONS ANNEXED TO GRANTS—1. Generally.—The fact that the constitution prescribes certain conditions upon which street railways may be constructed and maintained does not preclude the legislature from imposing others not inconsistent therewith.¹ Likewise when the consent of the municipal authorities is necessary, they are not limited to a mere granting or denial thereof, but may, in their discretion, prescribe conditions on which they will give it, provided they are not repugnant to the grant by the legislature, or to constitutional or statutory provisions on the same general subject.² The mere fact that the performance of the stipulated conditions by the company will subject it to great inconvenience and involve a large expenditure of money is not a sufficient excuse for non-performance.³ The most usual conditions are that the consent of the municipality or of the abutting owners, or of both, shall be obtained, or that the road shall be constructed within a specified time.⁴ Other conditions, however, other company to use streets on which the first company declined to build, and on which it was under no obligation to build. Citizens' St. R. Co. v. Jones, 34 Fed. Rep. 579.

1. In re Thirty-fourth St. R. Co., 102 N. Y. 343.

Absolute Grant—Impairment of Obligation.—When the council of the city, in the exercise of power conferred by the legislature, makes an absolute grant to a railway company of the right to build its road on certain streets, and the company accepts the grant and builds a part of the road at great expense, the legislature may not by a subsequent amendment of the city charter make the right of the company to build the residue of the road dependent on the consent of a majority of the property owners of the street. Hovelman v. Kansas City R. Co., 79 Mo. 632; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 17. See supra, this title, The Charter as a Contract; and infra, this title, Consent of Local Authorities.

2. 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 706 (559).

In Re Kings County El. R. Co., 105 N. Y. 97, among the conditions imposed by the city council was one that the company should consent that the city assessors might arbitrate all damages occasioned to property owners by the building of the road; and another fixing the times within which different parts of the road should be constructed, different from that prescribed by the commissioners appointed and acting in pursuance of statutory authority. It was held that these conditions related to matters over which the legislature and the commissioners had entire control, and were repugnant to the legislative requirements in the one case, and to the condition prescribed by the commissioners in the other, and their action could neither be superseded nor affected by that of any other body. See infra, this title, Consent of Local Authorities.

3. St. Joseph County v. South Bend, etc., R. Co., 118 Ind. 68. See also People v. Broadway R. Co., 126 N. Y. 29; 48 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 692.

An ordinance authorizing a railway company to extend its track from its then terminus to the corporate limits, required the track to be extended to a certain park, being a point short of the city limits, by a given time, and from that point on to the city limits, so soon as the same could be constructed, operated and kept in repair without actual loss, and the company to accept the ordinance within ten days after its approval by the mayor. The ordinance was accepted and the road was built and operated to the park. On mandamus to compel the construction and operation of the track to the city limits, the answer showed that it could not be constructed, operated, and kept in repair without actual loss, which was admitted by demurrer to the answer. It was held that the answer showed a good reason for not compelling the company to build and operate such part of the road. People v. Chicago West Div. R. Co., 118 Ill. 113.

4. See subordinate sections under this division of the article.

have been imposed and enforced; for example, that the company shall obtain the consent of another company already occupying the street before it may construct its road therein;¹ or that it shall purchase the omnibuses, horses, etc., of an omnibus line operated upon the streets covered by the franchise, or upon parallel streets.²

2. Consent of Local Authorities.—The complete and ultimate control of all streets and highways rests in the legislature, and it is therefore competent for that body, in the absence of constitutional provisions to the contrary, to authorize the occupation of the streets of a city by a street railway company, without the city's consent.³ In some of the states, however, are found constitutional provisions requiring the consent of the municipal authorities, and in others there are statutes to the same effect.⁴

1. Art. 3, § 18, of the New York Const. does not prohibit the imposition of such a condition. In re Thirty-fourth St. R. Co., 102 N. Y. 343, rev'g 37 Hun (N. Y.) 443. And in a statute prohibiting any company from laying a track in that portion of the street in which another company has laid its track without the consent of such other company, the words "that portion of" a street must be construed to mean the whole width of the street. Forty-second St., etc., R. Co. v. Thirty-fourth St. R. Co., 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. 252. See also New York, etc., R. Co. v. Forty-second St., etc., R. Co., 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 309.

2. Cooper v. Passenger R. Co., 3 Phila. (Pa.) 252; Green, etc., St. R. Co. v. Moore, 64 Pa. St. 79.

3. Brooklyn City, etc., R. Co. v. Coney Island, etc., R. Co., 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 364; Harrisburg City Pass. R. Co. v. Harrisburg (Pa. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 56; Paterson, etc., Horse R. Co. v. Paterson, 24 N. J. Eq. 158; Jersey City v. Jersey City, etc., R. Co., 20 N. J. Eq. 360; Milwaukee v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 7 Wis. 85; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Newton, 36 Iowa 299.

4. Const. of New York, art. 3, § 18, par. 14; Const. of Missouri, art. 12, § 20; Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. St. Louis, 3 Mo. App. 322 (case of an ordinary railroad); In re Rochester Electric R. Co., 57 Hun (N. Y.) 56; Houston v. Houston St. R. Co., 84 Tex. 581; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 380. See also Williamsport Pass. R. Co. v. Williamsport, 120 Pa. St. 1; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 125.

A railway wholly within the limits of a city, and proposed to be constructed exclusively under the surface of the street, is a street railroad within the meaning of art. 3, § 18, New York Constitution. Accordingly, as applicable to such a railway, the provision of the New York act of 1880 (ch. 582, Laws 1880), that the determination of commissioners "may be taken in lieu of the consent of said authorities," is unconstitutional and void. In re New York District R. Co., 107 N. Y. 42, affirming 42 Hun (N. Y.) 621.

But this provision of the constitution is not violated by a statute authorizing an existing railway company to substitute cable power for horse power without requiring the consent of the local authorities. Such a statute confers no substantial franchise, but is merely a regulating act. In re Third Avenue R. Co., 121 N. Y. 536; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 222, reversing 56 Hun (N. Y.) 537. And it seems that the consent of the local authorities is not necessary as a condition precedent to an application for commissioners to determine the expediency of constructing the road. In re People's R. Co., 112 N. Y. 578; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 404.

Under the Ohio act of April, 1861, § 5, a village incorporated for the special purpose of being a road district, is not one of the municipal corporations, whose consent to the construction of a street railway is required. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Cumminsville, 14 Ohio St. 523.

Consent of Commissioner of City Works—Location of Power House of Cable Road.—See Brooklyn Heights R. Co. v. Brooklyn, 18 N. Y. Supp. 876. In this case the charter of the company authorized it to construct a cable road from C street through M street to W street ferry, and to erect necessary power and car-houses in streets "adjacent to M street west of the mill," the

Where such requirement exists, the obtainment of the consent is a condition precedent to the right to use the city streets, and if it is never secured the whole grant fails.¹ So that where an exclusive franchise is granted conditioned upon the consent of location to be approved by the commissioner of city works. The commissioner having approved the location of the power-house in a neighboring parallel street, it was held that a subsequent ordinance of the council could not operate to withdraw such consent and render another consent necessary.

New York—Who Are "the Local Authorities" Whose Consent Is Necessary.—Under the Street Surface Railway act, ch. 252, § 3, New York Laws of 1884, authorizing companies organized thereunder to acquire a right of way through streets or highways, provided that "the consent of the local authorities having control of that portion of a street or highway upon which it is proposed to construct and operate such railroad . . . be first obtained," where the railroad is proposed to be constructed upon a highway in a town, "the local authorities," whose consent is required, are the officers whose duties and powers concern the supervision, maintenance and care of the highway—that is, the highway commissioners of the town. In re Rochester Electric R. Co., 123 N. Y. 351; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 157.

1. People's Pass. R. Co. v. Memphis (Tenn. 1875), 16 S. W. Rep. 973; 10 Wall. (U.S.) 38; In re Rochester Electric R. Co., 123 N. Y. 351; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 157. See also Smith v. East End St. R. Co., 87 Tenn. 626; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 470; Paterson, etc., R. Co. v. Mayor, etc., of Paterson, 24 N. J. Eq. 158.

In Musser v. Fairmount, etc., R. Co. (Pa. 1859), 7 Am. Law Reg. O. S. 284, an act was passed granting a right to construct a street railway, provided the consent of the city should be obtained. The city council by ordinance declared their disapproval of the act, and declined to allow the streets to be so used. It was held that the power designated by the legislature was exhausted, and that no subsequent ordinance of the city council consenting to the use of the streets could revive the privilege nullified by the ordinance of disapproval. The court, by Thompson, J., said: "The only power that can revive those privileges is the legislature, and to that the company must appeal. If the council could disapprove and afterwards, without regard to time, approve, where would be the end and limit of their right of choice or election? The rights and privileges of the company under such circumstances might with truth be said to be vagrant; indeed, sometimes in abeyance, sometimes active, and again in abeyance, as the changes and opinions of a changing majority might happen to be."

In Larimer, etc., St. R. Co. v. Larimer St. R. Co., 137 Pa. St. 533, it was held that under the Pennsylvania statute the consent of the city to the construction of a street railroad upon its highway was a condition precedent thereto, and without it a company incorporated under the act had no right, present or prospective, to occupy streets for that purpose. And, therefore, such a company not having obtained such consent has no standing by a bill for an injunction to question the right of another company subsequently incorporated to occupy for its railroad streets covered by the prior charter.

In Re Rochester Electric R. Co., 123 N. Y. 351; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 757, a turnpike company, which was maintaining a highway as a turnpike road, had acquired from adjoining landowners the right to a strip of land on each side of the highway for a bridle-path, and had given consent to a company organized under the act mentioned above to use a portion of said bridle-path for its railroad. It was held that this was not the consent required by the act; that it had no effect save as it regarded the rights and interests of the turnpike company; that the highway had not ceased to be such because used as a turnpike, and the administrative duties of the highway commissioners of the town remained unimpaired, so far as its exercise was required for the preservation of the rights and interests of the public, and that their consent was requisite.

In Massachusetts, it is held that the construction of a track for a horse railroad over a turnpike road, under a valid agreement with the turnpike company, by a corporation, whose charter contains a restriction making it "void so the city and such consent is never secured, the legislature is guilty of no violation of the charter contract in granting the same privileges to another company.¹

The city may make its consent conditional upon the company's far as relates to the right to construct said road in any town until the act has been accepted by the selectmen," will not be restrained by injunction as a nuisance in a town traversed by the turnpike road, merely because the selectmen of the town have not accepted the charter. District Attorney v. Lynn, etc., R. Co., 16 Gray (Mass.) 242.

And in Cincinnati v. Columbia, etc., St. R. Co., 17 Wkly. L. Bull. 192, it was held that where a village was incorporated twenty-one years after the consent to the construction and operation of a street railway was obtained from a turnpike company, the consent of the municipality was not necessary.

The charter of a street railway company empowered it to lay rails in the streets of the city upon first obtaining the consent of the city council. By a supplement, it was positively authorized to construct several tracks specified in the supplement without any condition or reference to the consent of the council. It was held that, as to such tracks, the consent of the council was not necessary. Jersey City v. Jersey City, etc., R. Co., 20 N. J. Eq. 360.

But where the charter of a railway company required the consent of the city authorities, and a supplement was silent as to consent, and a second supplement was made subject to the restrictions, and carrying with it all the privileges of the original charter, it was held that the company must obtain the consent of the city authorities before it could extend its track. Philadelphia v. Citizens' Pass. R. Co., 48 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 220.

Where a charter was granted to a company for the purpose of building and using a passenger railway in certain streets, subject "to all the ordinances of the council of the said city," the company, by accepting their charter in the terms in which it was granted, agreed to obtain the consent of the council to their work, agreeably to the ordinance of the city. Philadelphia v. Lombard, etc., R. Co., 3 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 403.

Nebraska—Vote of Electors.—In Nebraska, consent to the construction and operation of a street railway may be obtained by a majority vote of the electors of the municipality. Comp. Laws of Nebraska, 1881, § 622; State v. Bechel, 22 Neb. 158. In this case, the question of giving consent to a company to construct and maintain a street railroad upon the streets of the city of Omaha was submitted to the electors of said city on the day of the general city election, and the ballot upon that proposition was taken at the same place, by the same election officers, and but one poll list made, and the votes were canvassed and returned in some of the precincts and wards upon the same tally-sheet and return, but in all of the wards a separate ballot-box was prepared into which the vote upon the proposition was deposited, but without other formality to separate the vote from the vote of the general election. The registry of voters for the city election showed that there were over ten thousand names registered. There were over eight thousand votes cast at the general election. The number of votes cast upon the question of consent to construct and operate the street railway was sixteen hundred and fifty, of which fourteen hundred and seventy were in the affirmative, and one hundred and eighty in the negative. It was contended on the part of the plaintiff that the proposition submitted received the consent of the majority of the electors, for the reason that a majority of the votes cast upon this particular question were in the affirmative, and that the vote deposited in the ballot-box prepared for the reception of ballots cast upon the proposition should, for the purpose of the canvass, be taken as the full vote of the city. But the court held that there were not two elections—namely, the general city election and the election upon the proposition submitted; on the contrary, they constituted but one election, and such being the case a majority of the votes cast at such election was not in favor of the construction and operation of the proposed street railroad, as required by the law of the state, and, therefore, the consent of a majority of the electors was not given.

1. People's Pass. R. Co. v. Memphis (Tenn. 1875), 16 S. W. Rep. 973; 10 Wall. (U. S.) 38.

The same is true in case of a breach making an agreement to observe, and be subject to, all ordinances of the city then in force, or thereafter to be passed, provided they are not unreasonable;¹ or it may require that the character of the road-bed, and of the poles, wires, track, etc., shall be first approved by the city council.² And in general it may impose any condition which in the exercise of its discretion it may deem proper as the terms upon which its consent shall be given;³ except that it may not annex conditions which are repugnant to the grant of the franchise by the legislature, or to constitutional or statutory provisions upon the same general subject.⁴

3. Consent of Abutters.—As a street railway does not constitute an additional burden upon the land, the consent of owners of abutting property to its construction and operation is not essential, unless required by the constitution or by statute.⁵ In many of any other condition; as, for example, to construct the road within a given time. Oakland R. Co. v. Oakland, etc., R. Co., 45 Cal. 365; 13 Am. Rep. 181. See infra, this title, Construction of Road Within Specified Time.

1. The City's Consent May be Conditional.—See Philadelphia v. Ridge Ave. Pass. R. Co., 143 Pa. St. 444; Providence v. Union R. Co., 12 R. I. 473.

It may require as a condition to its consent that the company shall engage to carry passengers for one fare to points beyond its line, the statutes having provided means by which the company may acquire a right to use the tracks of other companies which extend to such points. People v. Barnard, 110 N. Y. 548; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 70; reversing 48 Hun (N. Y.) 57.

Or it may require that the company shall keep the streets occupied by it cleaned and in good repair. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Birmingham, 51 Pa. St. 41; infra, this title, Repair of Streets. Or that the company shall pay an annual bonus for the use of the streets. Covington St. R. Co. v. Covington, 9 Bush (Ky.) 127; Providence v. Union R. Co., 12 R. I. 473.

2. Electric R. Co. v. Grand Rapids, 84 Mich. 257; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co., 37 Mich. 558.

3. Under the New York constitutional and statutory provisions the city authorities have absolute power to grant or withhold their consent. People v. Barnard, 110 N. Y. 548; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 70, rev'g 48 Hun (N. Y.) 57. See also Providence v. Union R. Co., 12 R. I. 473.

4. In re Kings County El. R. Co., 105 N. Y. 97; Harrisburg City Pass. R.

Co. v. Harrisburg (Pa. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 56.

In Electric R. Co. v. Grand Rapids, 84 Mich. 257; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 26, where the ordinance granting the right to construct an electric railway provided that the poles should be approved by the city council, the council approved iron poles for the territory within the fire limits and wooden ones for that without. Afterwards the council attached a condition that in consideration of the approval of wooden poles, the company should provide transfer tickets without extra cost. It was held that this condition was void as being in conflict with section 14 of the incorporation act providing that a city shall not revoke its consent once given, nor deprive the company of the rights and privileges conferred. The council having made an approval could not be compelled by mandamus to do so again merely because of the void condition attached.

In People v. Barnard, 48 Hun (N. Y.) 57; 110 N. Y. 548; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 70, the city comptroller, after awarding the franchise to the highest bidder at the sale, required a bond containing conditions not required by the statute, nor by the resolution of the common council, and refused to accept a bond containing all the prescribed conditions. It was held that the comptroller had no right to require the bond he insisted on, and that mandamus would lie to compel his acceptance and approval of the bond offered.

5. Smith v. East End St. R. Co., 87 Tenn. 626; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 470; State v. Bell, 34 Ohio St. 194; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis Union R.

of the states, however, there are constitutional or statutory provisions to the effect that no street railway shall be constructed or operated without the consent of a majority in interest of the owners of land abutting on the street to be occupied.¹

Co., 107 Ill. 450; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 9; Hodges v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 58 Md. 603; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 270; Hinchman v. Paterson Horse R. Co., 17 N. J. Eq. 75; Paterson, etc., Horse R. Co. v. Paterson, 24 N. J. Eq. 158. See supra, this title, Legal Status; infra, this title, Right of Abutters to Compensation.

In Smith v. East End St. R. Co., 87 Tenn. 626; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 470, the charter provided that no street should be occupied until the consent of the city expressed by ordinance should be obtained; there was also a provision (Tenn. Code, § 1925) that the powers granted were "in no manner to interfere with the rights of private citizens or private property." It was held that this did not require the consent of owners of abutting property; that § 1925 was merely a saving of all rights of action for any unlawful use or obstruction of the public highways, or other wrongs or abuses.

1. See Const. of New York, art. 3 § 18; Hunt v. Chicago Horse, etc., R. Co., 121 Ill. 638, reversing 20 Ill. App. 283 (construing act of 1872, art. 1, § 5, par. 19); Roberts v. Easton, 19 Ohio St. 78.

In Illinois a requirement of this character is held not to be applicable to a regular steam railroad, though it is operated only in the streets of a city. Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis Union R. Co., 107 Ill. 450; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 9.

Statute Requiring Consent and also that the Privilege be Awarded to the Best Bidder.—Under a statute requiring the consent of abutting owners before a valid grant of the use of the street may be made and also that the right to build the road shall be awarded to the corporation or individual who offers the best terms to the public, it has been held that the consent need not in terms be given to the person who is the lowest bidder, for the contract can be awarded to him alone, and the consents, no matter by whom obtained or to whom given, are, in substance, assents to the construction and operation of the railway in the designated streets, and therefore must inure to the benefit of the best bidder. State v. Bell, 34 Ohio St. 194.

Owners.—The term "owners," as used in statutes requiring the consent of abutting property owners has been held to mean one who has at least a freehold estate. Under these statutes it has been held that abutting property may be represented by life tenants and tenants by the curtesy or dower, but that a father cannot consent for his daughter, the husband for his wife, tenants in common for each other, guardians for their wards, an administrator or an executor, with power to sell, for the estate, or a president of a private corporation without the authority of the board of directors, and a doubt has been expressed as to whether or not a city council may act in the matter for a municipal corporation. Booth on St. R., citing Rapp v. City, etc., R. Co., 12 Wkly. L. Bull. 119; Bullock v. West Chicago Rapid Transit R. Co., 23 Chic. L. N. 149.

New York.—In New York there is a constitutional requirement that no street railway shall be constructed except upon the consent of the owners of one-half in value of the property bounded on the street. But in case the consent of such property owners cannot be obtained, the supreme court is authorized to appoint commissioners who may, after hearing all the parties interested, determine whether such railway ought to be built, and their determination when confirmed by the court may be taken in lieu of the consent of the property owners. Constitution of New York (1883), art. 3, § 18. This provision has been construed in many cases:

The consent of the property owners need not be under seal, though it is required by statute to be in writing. In re Cortland, etc., Horse R. Co., 31 Hun (N. Y.) 72.

The report of the commissioners is inoperative until confirmed by the court. And the exercise of the discretion of the supreme court is not reviewable by the court of appeals. In re Kings County El. R. Co., 82 N. Y. 95; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 431. In this case an application under the act of 1875 (similar to the constitutional provision above quoted) was signed by ten more than the requisite number of property holders and verified by one of them, who made oath that he knew each and saw them sign. The verification was held sufficient, it not being necessary that the application should be verified by each subscriber. See generally In re Saratoga Electric R. Co., 58 Hun (N. Y.) 287; In re Thirty-fourth St. R. Co., 102 N. Y. 343; In re Lockport, etc., R. Co., 77 N. Y. 557; In re New York Cable R. Co., 40 Hun (N. Y.) 1; In re Rochester Electric R. Co., 123 N. Y. 351; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 157.

Where the refusal of the consent of abutting owners is based upon a submission to them of improper plans by the commissioners, such refusal does not authorize the commissioners to decide on amended plans, nor can the supreme court confirm the same if the amended plans have never been submitted to the property owners. In re New York Cable R. Co., 109 N. Y. 32, affirming 45 Hun (N. Y.) 153.

Where the commissioners appointed under New York Laws 1884, ch. 252, to determine the question whether or not a surface street railroad shall be constructed in the streets of the city, have reported, as required by section 6 of the above act, to the general term by which they were appointed, that the road should not be constructed, the general term may not, in the absence of proof of fraud or manifest irregularity, send the case back for a further hearing, or appoint other commissioners to rehear the matter. But if it appears that the commissioners have refused to hear the parties or to take any evidence, or that the report is such as to show fraud or irregularity, the general term may send back the matter to the commissioners for a further hearing. An erroneous ruling, however, by the commissioners, in excluding testimony or in admitting immaterial or even incompetent or hearsay evidence, will not warrant it in so doing. In re Nassau Cable Co., 36 Hun (N. Y.) 272.

Where a surface railroad company has been unable to obtain the consent of property owners to the construction of its line, as required by ch. 252. New York act of 1884, it may apply to the general term of the supreme court for the appointment of three commissioners to determine whether or not the railroad shall be constructed and operated, without first obtaining the consent of the municipal authorities. Such consent is in all cases an absolute prerequisite to the acquisition of the right to construct any surface street railroad under the act, but it may be obtained either after or before that of the property owners, or after or before the application to the court. And it is sufficient to sustain such an application that the affidavits show that the consent of the property owners "cannot be obtained;" the reasons for the refusal need not be given. The fifth section of the act requires notices of the application to be served upon those property owners only whose names appear upon the assessment roll; occupants or lessees whose names do not appear are not entitled to notice. In re Broadway Surface R. Co., 34 Hun (N. Y.) 414.

In Benedict v. Seventh Ward R. Co., 51 Hun (N. Y.) 111, it appeared that the plaintiffs were the owners of the lot on the west side of a certain street in the city of Syracuse, on which was a dwelling in which they resided; that the defendant corporation had laid a single railroad track in the street, and the plaintiffs did not consent, pursuant to the act under which the defendant was incorporated, that the road might be constructed in the street or the track laid in the street in front of their lot. Upon the trial, the plaintiffs made no attempt to prove that the consent required by the constitution and the street railroad act had not been obtained, but sought to maintain an action by an offer to prove that the center line of the street and the plaintiffs' east line coincided, and that the west rails of defendant's track were on their land without their consent. Upon an appeal from a judgment dismissing the complaint, it was held that as the action was brought to restrain the defendant from laying or operating a track in the street "upon which the plaintiffs' lands abut," upon the ground that defendant had not obtained the consent for the construction of the road from the owners of one-half in value of the property bounded on the street, or of the general term of the supreme court, as required by section 18, art. 3, New York Const., and of the Street Surface Railroad act—but not on the ground that the plaintiffs owned the land in front of their lot and had not consented to its use by the defendant—the trial court properly held that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover upon the theory that the defendant was a trespasser upon the land, if any, which the plaintiffs owned in the public street.

In such case, the consent of the owners is absolutely essential and they may enjoin the construction of the railway unless it be obtained; the mere intention of applying for consent in the hope or expectation of obtaining it, gives no right.¹ But it seems that those not owners of abutting property, though citizens and taxpayers, have no ground of complaint.² And in an application for an injunction, the action of the city council in granting permission to construct a railway is not conclusive against property owners of the fact that a majority's consent has been obtained.³

1. Roberts v. Easton, 19 Ohio St. 78; Hunt v. Chicago Horse, etc., R. Co., 121 Ill. 638, rev'g 20 Ill. App. 283; 2 Dill. on Corp. (4th ed.), § 721 (572); In re People's R. Co., 112 N. Y. 578.

And until the requisite consent is obtained the company has no such right in the street as will entitle it to an injunction against the construction of another road therein, although its route has been located by commissioners as required by statute. New York Cable R. Co. v. Forty-second St., etc., R. Co., 13 Daly (N. Y.) 118.

Paragraph 90, § 1, art. 5, of the Illinois act for the incorporation of cities and villages prohibiting the grant of the right to lay any railroad track in any street to any steam or horse railway company, except upon a petition of the owners of the land representing more than one-half of the frontage of the street, etc., is a limitation upon the power granted by paragraphs 9, 24, 25 of the same section. Such power lies dormant and cannot be exercised until the requisite number of lotowners along the street authorize its exercise by petition. When this is done, the council is vested with power to act, and not before. Hunt v. Chicago Horse, etc., R. Co., 121 Ill. 638, rev'g 20 Ill. App. 282.

But under a charter requiring that, before a railway shall be constructed in the streets of a city, the consent of a majority of the property owners along the proposed route, and of the city, should be first obtained, the consent of a majority of the property owners is not a condition precedent to the consent of the city; the consents are independent, and it is immaterial which is first obtained. Paterson, etc., Horse R. Co. v. Paterson, 24 N. J. Eq. 158.

2. Simmons v. Toledo, 5 Ohio C. Ct. 124; Sommers v. Cincinnati, 8 Am. L.

Rec. 612; Harrison v. Mt. Auburn Cable R. Co., 17 Wkly. L. Bull. 265. Compare Knorr v. Miller, 5 Ohio C. Ct. 609.

3. Roberts v. Easton, 19 Ohio St. 78. In this case the court by Day, J., said: "If the action of the city authorities is regarded as a conclusive and unquestionable determination of the facts requisite to the legality of their action, then the disabilities imposed by statute will be removed by construction and the power sought to be restrained is practically unlimited. The power of the city authorities to act in the premises, does not depend upon something to be done or determined by them, but upon a condition required by the statute. Nor is there anything in the act that implies that they are authorized to determine by their own action that the prerequisite consent has been obtained upon which they have the power to act." See also Sommers v. Cincinnati, 8 Am. L. Rec. 612; Bullock v. West Chicago Rapid Transit Co., 23 Chic. L. N. 149; Corry v. Gaynor, 22 Ohio St. 584; Hays v. Jones, 27 Ohio St. 218. But it will not be presumed that the municipal authorities acted without such consent when their proceedings purport to be predicated upon it. Cincinnati College v. Nesmith, 2 Cinn. Super. Ct. Rep. 24.

In Ohio it is held that while the common council may not evade the statute requiring the consent of adjoining owners, by substituting one route for another, it may, however, allow the application as to a part only of the route covered by the application and petition. Simmons v. Toledo, 5 Ohio C. Ct. 124.

Acquiescence—Evidence of Consent.—The acquiescence of property owners, whose consent is necessary as a condition precedent to the construction and operation of a railway, in standing by and seeing the company construct and operate their road under a claim of right, will be regarded as evidence of

For the purpose of consent the municipality is to be regarded as the owner of an open public square dedicated to the public use forever, whether the fee be in the corporation or not, or in whomsoever it may be.¹

It has been intimated by very respectable authority that lot-owners may attach reasonable conditions to their consent.²

Where a single-track street-railway has been lawfully constructed with the requisite consent of the owners of property on the street, and it is afterwards proposed to construct another track on the same street, the consent of any of the property owners to the construction of the first track cannot be deemed an assent to the construction of the second against those who remonstrate against the added track.³ Property owners may revoke their consents before final action is taken by the municipality.⁴

4. Construction of Road Within Specified Time.—A provision in a street railway franchise requiring the road to be constructed within a specified time is a condition subsequent, failing to perform which, the rights of the company are liable to forfeiture.⁵

consent. Paterson, etc., Horse R. Co. v. Paterson, 24 N. J. Eq. 158.

And after the lapse of ten years, and the acquiescence of property holders, and the destruction of all written evidences by fire, very slight evidence will suffice to establish the fact that consent was obtained as required by the statute. Chicago City R. Co. v. People, 73 Ill. 571.

1. Paterson, etc., Horse R. Co. v. Paterson, 24 N. J. Eq. 158.

2. People v. Chicago West Div. R. Co., 118 Ill. 113. In this case, certain property owners in the city of Chicago petitioned the municipal authorities to grant permission to a street railway company to extend its line to a point named, and requested the council to pass an ordinance or to issue such order as it might legally issue, to compel the company to lay its tracks and run its cars upon the said extended line without unnecessary delay. It was held that the petition did not request the grant of the permission upon any condition whatever, although the consent to the laying of the track might have been made to depend upon conditions which the council could not have disregarded.

3. Roberts v. Easton, 19 Ohio St. 78. But where the original grant was for a double track, the city, after expenditures for construction and equipment by the company, may not limit it to a single track. Burlington v. Burlington St. R. Co., 49 Iowa 144. See supra, this title, Consent of Local Authorities.

4. Bullock v. West Chicago Rapid Transit Co., 23 Chic. L. N. 147; Hays v. Jones, 27 Ohio St. 218.

5. Hovelman v. Kansas City Horse R. Co., 79 Mo. 632; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 17; People v. Los Angeles Electric R. Co., 91 Cal. 338; People v. Broadway R. Co., 126 N. Y. 29; 48 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 692; reversing 56 Hun (N. Y.) 45; In re Brooklyn El. R. Co., 125 N. Y. 434; affirming 11 N. Y. Supp. 171; In re New York Cable R. Co., 40 Hun (N. Y.) 1; Atchison St. R. Co. v. Nave, 38 Kan. 744; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 29. See generally CONDITION, vol. 3, p. 422; CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 302; ESTATES, vol. 6, p. 900; infra, this title, Loss of Rights and Franchises.

Section 502, California Civ. Code, does not declare that a failure to comply with the provision requiring work to be commenced within one year shall work a forfeiture, but that a failure to comply with that and also the provision which requires the work to be completed within three years, shall have such effect. Omnibus R. Co. v. Baldwin, 57 Cal. 160.

What Amounts to Construction—Question of Fact.—To prevent a forfeiture for failure to construct a road within a specified time there must be a substantially constructed track, and what constitutes such a track is usually a question of fact for the jury; where it is such, it is error to instruct the jury that the road was sufficiently constructed "if the ties were laid, and the rails placed and spiked thereon." Houston v. Houston, etc., R. Co., 84 Tex. 581; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 380.

Several Routes.—Defendant, a street railway corporation, organized in pursuance of ch. 303, New York laws of 1868, and which had constructed and was operating its road in the city of Brooklyn, was, by an amendatory act procured by it, passed in 1860 (ch. 451, New York Laws of 1860), authorized to lay tracks for several distinct routes, some of which were beyond the corporate limits, but all of which were parts of an entire system, on certain streets, avenues and plank roads specified, which had been at that time legally opened and graded. Some of the routes were authorized to be extended and others to be laid through certain other streets whenever "they shall have been legally opened and graded." Defendant was required to complete tracks upon the said several streets and avenues or roads named on or before October 1st, 1861, "or as soon thereafter as the said streets and avenues within said city shall have been opened, graded, and paved, and upon any plank road or roads whenever the consent of the plank-road company shall have been obtained." In an action to have declared forfeited the franchise granted by the act of 1860, it appeared that on some of the routes, defendant, in that year, constructed a single line or track through some of the streets named which were not opened, graded and used as streets, and operated the same until the year 1874, when it removed the track and had not since maintained or operated a road therein; and for twelve years prior to the commencement of the action it had not maintained or operated a road upon any of the routes mentioned in said act, although most of the streets named had, at that time, been "opened, graded, and paved." The defendant contended that it was not bound to build its road on any one of the routes until all the streets upon it were opened and graded so that the road could be constructed on the whole route. It was held that under the act the defendant was required to lay its tracks within the time specified upon such of the streets named as were opened and graded, and upon the other streets so soon as they were opened, graded and paved; that defendant could not accept the franchises and leave them in abeyance; that the fact that it would not have been profitable to construct roads on the route specified, until each route was opened the entire length thereof, was no excuse for failure to comply with the requirements of the act, and that such failure was a good ground for forfeiture, and the court had power to declare the franchise forfeited. People v. Broadway R. Co., 126 N. Y. 29; 48 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 692.

Right Reserved by City to Determine When Company Shall Build Other Lines

—Sufficiency of Notice to Build.—By the ordinance authorizing the construction of a street railway on one of several designated streets in the city of Fort Worth, the municipality reserved to itself the right to determine when the demands of traffic would necessitate a road over any of the others; and if the company, on being notified on which of the streets a new railroad was desired, did not comply with the notice in twelve months, then the right to those streets was forfeited. The company accepted the ordinance and built the road on one of the streets. It was held that the passage of an ordinance thereafter, giving again to the company the right to construct a street railway over two of the streets designated in the first ordinance, and requiring their completion within ninety days, was a sufficient notice under the requirements of the first ordinance, that the city desired a new road built; and a failure to build thereafter, within the time after notice required by the first notice, operated a forfeiture of the right to build on any of the streets designated in the first ordinance. Fort Worth St. R. Co. v. Rosedale St. R. Co., 68 Tex. 163.

When Time Begins to Run Under N. Y. Rapid-transit Act.—Under "The Rapid-transit act" of New York, which required the commissioners to fix the time within which roads must be constructed, it is considered that the time is properly fixed as beginning to run from the time of obtaining the requisite consent, omitting the time unavoidably consumed in legal proceedings of condemnation or otherwise. New York Cable Co. v. New York, 104 N. Y. 1; In re Kings County El. R. Co., 105 N. Y. 97.

Extension of Time—Postponement of Right—Not Abandonment.—Where the charter authorized the company to build a single or double track road over any streets in the city as had been or should be authorized by the council, and full permission was given by ordinance to lay a track, in which a time was named for its completion, and a forfeiture pro-

But where the failure to complete the road is due to extrinsic causes, in no wise the fault of the company, for example, by injunctions,¹ or by interferences on the part of the police officers of the city acting under the direction of the mayor,² the right of the company is not lost—and in the latter case the city may be enjoined from interfering with the laying of the track after the expiration of the time. And it seems that if the municipality vided for in case of non-completion, and before the expiration of the time the ordinance was amended and the time extended for the period of ten years, it was held that this latter ordinance extended the time for ten years after the expiration of the time fixed by the previous ordinance. After this latter ordinance was adopted the company passed a resolution accepting the terms of the ordinance on condition of the repeal of certain other ordinances, and agreed to postpone the laying of the track for the time mentioned. Afterwards the council accepted the proposition contained in the resolution reciting that the company had obligated itself to postpone the laying of the track for the period of ten years and the amendatory ordinance was affirmed. It was held that this did not constitute an abandonment of the right to construct, but merely a postponement of the right. McNeill v. Chicago City R. Co., 61 Ill. 150.

Stipulation that City May Resell Privilege Upon Default—What Included.—An article of a contract entered into between the city of Jefferson and K., granting to the latter the right to build street railroads through the corporate limits of the city, stipulated that in case of failure by the contractors of either of said roads to commence or complete either of said works or any part thereof within the period therein prescribed, or in case the councilmen are dissatisfied with the manner in which the works are being executed, the council shall have the right to annul the contract without putting the contractor in default. It was further stipulated that in the event of the failure of the contractor to complete the works within the time prescribed he should forfeit all claims for work done, and the municipality shall have the right to resell the privilege and right of way at the risk of the contractor and his sureties in solido. It was held that under the authority of this article to resell, nothing but the right of way and privilege could be resold, and that if the railroad was once fairly completed, this provision, having fulfilled its coercive purpose, ceased to have further force. Young v. Magazine St. R. Co., 24 La. Ann. 53.

Sufficiency of Complaint.—It is held that where the complaint in an action to forfeit a charter does not set out when the company began the work of construction, and thereby show that the limit of time has elapsed within which the work must be done, it fails to state a cause of action. People v. Los Angeles Electric R. Co., 91 Cal. 338.

1. State v. Cockrem, 25 La. Ann. 356. In this case it was also held, that because the injunction taken in 1866 was not dissolved until 1872, it was not to be inferred that it was kept so long in force by the wish and connivance of the company, when the city was a party to the injunction suit, and having the same right to push the case, did not do so. See also Chicago v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 105 Ill. 73; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 306.

In People v. Broadway R. Co., 126 N. Y. 29; 48 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 692, rev'g 56 Hun (N. Y.) 45, it was held that the neglect of a street railway company to lay its tracks for twelve years was a cause for forfeiture on the ground of non-user; and the fact that the company was prohibited by a statute from building one of its lines was no reason for not forfeiting the franchise therefor when it appeared that when the statute was passed the company had already been in default for five years. It was held, also, that a later statute providing that "failure of any railroad company to construct its road heretofore shall not cause a forfeiture of its corporate powers," did not apply to a railroad company which had willfully and intentionally failed to construct its road, although able to do so. Compare In re Kings Co. El. R. Co., 105 N. Y. 97, rev'g 41 Hun (N. Y.) 425.

2. Chicago v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 105 Ill. 73; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 306.

the same grade does not release it from the duty to raise or lower it if subsequent changes in the street necessitate a change.¹ The rails and ties must be of such a kind, and so laid, that the public will not be prevented from making use of that part of the street for their vehicles.²

The street railway company becomes liable for all injuries resulting as a proximate consequence of failure to comply with this duty.³ Upon the principle that there can be no action for dam-with which the plaintiff was thrown out of his carriage and injured. It was held that the company was guilty of negligence, and that recovery might be had; that it was immaterial whether the projection of the spike resulted from the failure of the city to repair the street at the place of accident. See also Carpenter v. Central Park, etc., R. Co., 11 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 416.

1. Little Rock v. Citizens' St. R. Co. (Ark.), 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 456 (in this case provision was made in the charter that the company should change its grade to conform always to that of the street); Ashland St. R. Co. v. Ashland, 78 Wis. 271.

2. Spokane St. R. Co. v. Spokane Falls, 46 Fed. Rep. 322; Carpenter v. Central Park, etc., R. Co., 11 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 416; Fitts v. Cream City R. Co., 59 Wis. 323; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 462 (injury caused by defective turntable used by the street railway company); Alton, etc., R. Co. v. Deitz, 50 Ill. 210; 99 Am. Dec. 509.

Where the company has no authority to change the construction of the pavement between the rails of its track at the point where the city had left a depression for a surface drain to a grating opening into the sewer, it is not liable for an injury to a horse caused by stepping into the depression, though the statute requires such companies "to have and keep" the space between their tracks in permanent repair. Snell v. Rochester R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 19 N. Y. Supp. 496.

A company authorized to construct a railroad to be operated exclusively with horse power and for the purpose of passenger travel, has the right to lay only such rails as are suitable for the purpose of a passenger railway, and cannot subject the public to the greater inconvenience of having in the streets a heavy rail to be used for the movement of freight trains. Com. v. Central Pass. R. Co., 52 Pa. St. 519.

But a company chartered under a special act of the legislature and authorized to carry freight as well as passengers and to use steam as a motive power, although it is named in the title of the charter as a passenger railway, has the power to change its rails from the ordinary size in use by street railways to the heavier rails commonly used in the transportation of freight by steam railways, notwithstanding they are more obstructive of public travel. Millvale v. Evergreen R. Co., 131 Pa. St. 1; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 219. See Easton, etc., Pass. R. Co. v. Easton, 133 Pa. St. 505; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 253; 19 Am. St. Rep. 658, as to the power of a street railway company to change the style of its rails where the rail adopted creates no greater inconvenience in the use of the street.

3. Liability for Injuries Resulting from Negligent Construction.—In addition to the cases already cited, the general rule of the text is upheld and applied in the following cases: Galveston City R. Co. v. Nolan, 53 Tex. 139; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 387; Cline v. Crescent City R. Co., 41 La. Ann. 1031; McKenna v. Metropolitan R. Co., 112 Mass. 55; Birmingham Union R. Co. v. Alexander, 93 Ala. 133; Schild v. Central Park, etc., R. Co., 133 N. Y. 446; Eagen v. Forty-second St., etc., R. Co., 19 N. Y. St. Rep. 676.

The fact that the company in constructing its track has complied with all the requirements of an ordinance of the city prescribing the manner in which the road shall be constructed, and that the construction of the road has been examined and approved and accepted by an agent of the city, charged with the duty of such examination, is not a defense to an action by an individual for injuries received in crossing the track, from defects in its construction. Delzell v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 32 Ind. 45.

But the burden rests upon the plaintiff to show negligence on the part of the company. And where the evidence ages arising from the proper exercise of a lawful authority, street railway companies are not liable for consequential damages necessarily occasioned by the construction of the road.¹

When the municipal authorities have the power to determine on what particular streets a railway shall be constructed, the fails to show that the injury resulted from any neglect of duty on the part of the company there can be no recovery. See Nivette v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 42 La. Ann. 1153; Eugen v. Forty-second St., etc., R. Co., 19 N. Y. St. Rep. 676.

In McKenna v. Metropolitan R. Co., 112 Mass. 55, a party driving along a switch was run into by a street car improperly on the switch. The fact of the car being on the switch was owing to a defective switch connection which it was the duty of another company to keep in repair. But the company using the track was held liable; it could not escape by showing the neglect of duty by the other company.

In Fitts v. Cream City R. Co., 59 Wis. 323; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 462, a sleigh running along the street, was caught in a projecting catch of a turntable and damaged. It was held that the question of negligence in the construction of the table was for the jury.

Where the evidence establishes negligence on the part of the company in the construction of its track, the fact that it does not appear that any complaint was ever made to the company of the condition of its track, does not relieve it from liability, though it may be considered by the jury in rendering a verdict. Schild v. Central Park, etc., R. Co., 133 N. Y. 446, affirming 16 N. Y. Supp. 701.

Improper Cable Slot.—In Griveaud v. St. Louis Cable, etc., R. Co., 33 Mo. App. 458, it appeared that G. was injured while driving along the street, by the wheels of one side of his buggy dropping through the slot of a cable road. The evidence showed that G.'s buggy wheels were of the standard width, that the slot constructed by the defendant was likely to widen by the action of frost and thaw and the passage over it of heavy freight wagons, and that defendant was fully aware of these facts. It was held that if the unusual width of the slot was owing to defects in original construction and design, the defendant was liable; and that if the injuries resulted from a widening of the slot, which was liable to occur, defendant was equally liable, because the duty of inspection was commensurate with the necessity of such inspection. See also for a case of similar injury, Kettel v. St. Louis Cable, etc., R. Co., 28 Mo. App. 657, holding, also, that it is not necessary that the company should have had notice of the defect.

Electric Wire Improperly Hung.—The case of United Electric R. Co. v. Shelton, 89 Tenn. 423; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 206, was an action for damages for the death of a horse caused by its coming in contact with the trolley wire of the electric railway company. It appeared that the wire of a telephone company had become impaired where it crossed the railway wire, and was in such a condition as to arrest the notice of a prudent man engaged in the business of either company. The fall of a burning building broke the telephone pole, which caused the telephone wire to break and fall across the uninsulated railway wire. While in this condition, the horse came in contact with the telephone wire and was killed. It was held that both companies were guilty of negligence, and liable for the value of the horse.

1. See NUISANCES, vol. 16, p. 1000; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 923; Wood on Nuisances, § 753 et seq.; Briggs v. Lewiston, etc., Horse R. Co., 79 Me. 363; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 167; Randall v. Jacksonville St. R. Co., 19 Fla. 409; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 184.

In Inter-State Consolidated, etc., R. Co. v. Early, 46 Kan. 197, a city having established the grade of a street, authorized a street railway company to construct its road thereon. In bringing the street to the grade the company made a deep cut in front of plaintiff's property. Under the Kansas statute a city may establish the grade of its streets, and it is only when an established grade is changed that damages can be allowed to property owners. It was held that the company was not liable for damages resulting from the change of grade, nor for the failure of the city to bring to the grade that part of the street not occupied by the company.

A company required by ordinance to that a slight deflection may be made.¹ For a material departure from its authorized route the company may be indicted for maintaining a public nuisance, or may be enjoined from operating its road.² Where the company has been duly authorized to use a street, and there only remains some ministerial duty to be performed by the officers of the municipality before it can be put in possession, the court will, in the event of refusal by such officers, award a writ of mandamus to compel the performance of the necessary duty.³ The extension of a street railway can be authorized only by an ordinance. It was held that the company could derive no benefit from a general ordinance granting authority to construct street railways on any street in a city, where no route had been previously selected by the company and submitted to the council for approval, since the ordinance was void, not having been passed in pursuance of the requirements of the charter. West End, etc., R. Co. v. Atlanta St. R. Co., 49 Ga. 151. See also Concord v. Concord Horse R. Co., 65 N. Y. 630, for an application of this rule to turn-outs, etc., which must be located in the manner prescribed.

1. Elmira v. Maple Ave. R. Co., 4 N. Y. Supp. 943; State v. Newport St. R. Co., 16 R. I. 533; Com. v. Wilkesbarre, etc., R. Co., 127 Pa. St. 278 (the company departing slightly from the center of the street in order to reach its own property).

2. See supra, this title, Unauthorized Use of Streets, for a full discussion of this subject and of the proper remedies to be used.

3. In re Third Ave. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 536; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 222; Com. v. R. Co., 14 W. N. C. (Pa.) 402; State v. Cockrem, 25 La. Ann. 356. In this latter case, a city surveyor was compelled to furnish the levels and plans required for the building of the road, this duty being enjoined upon him by the original ordinance authorizing the construction of the road. See also Trenton v. Trenton Horse R. Co. (N. J. 1890), 19 Atl. Rep. 263.

Re-Location.—A company organized under the New York Street-railway Law of 1884, which has obtained the right to maintain a route on certain streets, is not authorized under section 23 of the General Railroad Law of the State to change its route without the consent of the local authorities, or the consent of the owners of private property upon which the new line is proposed to be laid. In re South Beach R. Co., 53 Hun (N. Y.) 131.

The charter of a railway company conferred the power of re-location. When an ordinance of a city was passed giving the company permission to construct and operate its road in and along certain streets of the city, and a bridge to be built at a certain place, such ordinance was confirmed by a vote of the legislature, which conferred the same power as the ordinance, until the same might be altered, changed or amended by the city council, with the consent of the company, and gave the company power to amend, alter or change its ordinance, with the company's consent. It was held that the company, having once located and built its track within the city, had still ample authority, with the consent of the city, to locate its track within the city, and take up its former track. McCart v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 112 Ill. 611; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 326.

A railroad company which has been authorized by the city to change the track of its railroad cannot be enjoined from so doing by an individual property holder situated on the line of the road upon the ground that such change would likely prove detrimental to the public health and would therefore constitute an irreparable injury to him. Hobbs v. New Orleans City R. Co., 23 La. Ann. 535.

Parallel Lines.—Where statutes have been enacted for the protection of existing street railway franchises, and prohibiting parallel lines to be laid in a street within certain distances, the test of what is a parallel road cannot always be determined either by the location of the termini or the general direction of the entire line, to constitute the parallelism which is within the prohibition of the statute, it is sufficient if the two roads are substantially parallel and the infringement is a substantial one. Infringement. St. Louis R. Co. v. Northwestern St. Louis R. Co., 69 Mo. 65; St. Louis R. Co. v. South St. Louis legislature, or its duly empowered agents ;¹ and where this power has been delegated by the legislature to the common council of a city, the courts will not interfere with its exercise, except in a plain case of fraud or abuse.² The grant of a franchise to extend a street railroad, though subject to the city charter then existing, will not be controlled to its destruction or material impairment by a subsequent charter adopted by the city.³

X. USE OF STREETS—OPERATION OF ROAD—1. Repair of Streets.—

Independently of charter provisions and of subsequent statutes and ordinances, the street railway company is bound so to construct and maintain its road that the free use of the whole street by the public shall not be materially impaired.⁴ And if any injury occurs by reason of failure so to construct and repair its tracks,

R. Co., 72 Mo. 67; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 624.

Street railways are not within the provisions of the constitution of Pennsylvania, art. 17, § 4, prohibiting the consolidation of parallel or competing railroads, since they are not competing within the sense of the prohibition. Gyger v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 136 Pa. St. 96.

The New York Laws of 1884, ch. 252, § 15, authorizing companies organized thereunder to lease or transfer their rights to run upon or over any portion of their railroad track, to any other street surface railroad company authorized to run upon such a route, contained a proviso that the section should not be construed to authorize any of the said companies to lease their rights to any other company owning and operating a parallel road. This proviso was held not to apply to a company owning a road which happened to be parallel for a portion of its length with another, but which also owned lines extending beyond the parallel portions, so as to prevent the companies from making traffic arrangements with each other for the use of their respective lines greatly to the benefit of the public; the intention of the legislature being to prohibit the monopoly of parallel lines and acquisition by one railroad company of the exclusive possession and control of a parallel road. People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 78; 7 Am. St. Rep. 684.

1. People v. Third Ave. R. Co., 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 63. In this case it was held that under the New York act of 1860, which made it unlawful to lay, construct, or operate, any railway in or upon the streets of the City of New York, except under the authority of the legislature, the common council of the city could not authorize an extension of a street railway, unless, perhaps, where such extension was a necessary incident to the enjoyment of the previous grant.

2. Sims v. Street R. Co., 37 Ohio St. 567.

3. The ordinance of the City of St. Louis, requiring street railway companies to keep the street between the rails, and to the extent of twelve inches outside of each rail, in perfect repair, etc., applies to an extension of a street railroad under a new charter obtained from the municipal authority. Although the original line had obtained an immunity from this burden, by accepting the provisions of previous legislation and paying a license on each car in addition to the annual tax required, it was held that this privilege could not extend to a new and additional franchise. St. Louis v. Missouri R. Co., 13 Mo. App. 524.

The Pennsylvania constitution of 1874, and the act of 1878 making the consent of the local authorities necessary before a street railway company could construct its road in any city, town, etc., does not apply to a street passenger railway company incorporated in 1863; and being permitted by the legislature to extend its line, it cannot be enjoined by the town council from building its extension on the ground that their consent has not been obtained. Williamsport Pass. R. Co. v. Williamsport, 120 Pa. St. 1; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 125.

4. Common Law Duty.—Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. State, 87 Tenn. 746; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 429; Harrisburg v. Harrisburg Pass. R. Co., 1 Pears. (Pa.) 208. See supra, this title, Construction; Road-Bed, etc.

N. Y. 572; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 546, affirming 31 Hun (N. Y.) 241.

The same provision in respect to a single track has been held to mean between the rails and one foot on either side. McMahon v. Second Ave. R. Co., 75 N. Y. 231.

A requirement in a charter that the company shall "keep the surface of the street, inside the rails and for two feet four inches outside thereof, in good repair," is construed to mean two feet four inches on each side of the track. People v. Fort St., etc., R. Co., 41 Mich. 413.

A city ordinance granting to a street railway company the right to use certain streets, made provision for payment by the company of the expense of certain street improvements. It was held that it was only future improvements with which the company was chargeable, not improvements already made. Gulf City St. R., etc., Co. v. Galveston, 69 Tex. 660; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 300.

A company was required by ordinance to keep the pavement between its rails in good repair, and it was made the duty of the city to furnish material. The company, being directed to repair, asked leave to repave with cobblestones; the city refused to furnish materials, but made no objection to cobblestone, and offered no suggestions. In an action by the company to recover the cost of the materials, it was held that it was not bound to show that the necessity for repairs did not arise from its own neglect; and that any fit material might be used, and its value recovered from the city. Fort Wayne, etc., St. R. Co. v. Detroit, 39 Mich. 543; 34 Mich. 78.

The charter and an ordinance required that the company should keep the whole street "in perpetual good order and repair from curb to curb." Under this it was held that the company was bound to keep the street cleansed from dirt and filth necessarily accumulating there. Pittsburgh, etc., Pass. R. Co. v. Birmingham, 51 Pa. St. 41.

Under a statute which provides that street railway companies shall pay a tax in lieu of repairing streets "outside of their tracks," the companies having double tracks on a street are not liable for the expense of repairing the street between the double tracks. St. Louis v. St. Louis R. Co., 50 Mo. 94.

"Macadamizing" is not paving within the meaning of an ordinance requiring street railway companies to pave certain parts of the street. Leake v. Philadelphia (Pa. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 351; State v. Ramsey County, 33 Minn. 164.

In Pittsburgh, etc., Pass. R. Co. v. Pittsburgh, 80 Pa. St. 72, it was held that a provision in the charter of a railway company requiring them to keep so much of the street "from curb to curb as may be used by them in perpetual good repair at the expense" of the corporation, required them to remove a deposit of rocks, stone, etc., eight or ten feet in depth, and one hundred feet in length, which was washed down by an extraordinary rain.

Agreement to Reconstruct the Street.

—A provision of an ordinance granting a charter to a street railway company, which requires the company to "reconstruct said street," was held not to require the company, after completing its road with the same kind of material as that used in the city, to reconstruct its portion with new and different material subsequently adopted by the city. Norristown v. Norristown Pass. R. Co. (Pa. 1892), 23 Atl. Rep. 1060. Such a provision is satisfied with but one reconstruction. Borough v. R. Co., 9 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 98.

Repaving.—In Fort Wayne, etc., R. Co. v. Detroit, 34 Mich. 78, where there was an ordinance requiring a street railway company "to keep the surface of the street inside the rails and two feet four inches outside thereof, in good order and repair; provided, however, that upon the repaving of said street the materials for repaving shall be supplied at the expense of the city," and the city directed the company to "raise and repair" that portion of the pavement which is within the rails, it was held that the city was bound to bear the expense of the materials as such repairs amounted to repaving within the meaning of the proviso. And see Fort Wayne, etc., R. Co. v. Detroit, 39 Mich. 543.

Change of Grade.—In Ashland St. R. Co. v. Ashland, 78 Wis. 271, where by the ordinance under which, and subject "to the conditions and limitations" of which, a railway company was authorized to construct its track, it was provided that "the road-bed shall at all times correspond with the actual grade of the streets," and that in case of change, by the common council, in the actual grade of any of the streets, the railway company shall relay the track of said railway to correspond to such grade at its own expense, it was held trarily fixed by the municipality, but the method appointed by the legislature must be pursued.¹

But, in the absence of authority acquired by the means just mentioned, one street railway company has no right to use the tracks of another company without its consent, and will be prevented from so doing by injunction.² A statute prohibiting street railway companies from leasing their rights or franchise:

Louisville City R. Co. v. Central Pass. R. Co., 87 Ky. 223; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 463. See also Cambridge R. Co. v. Charles River St. R. Co., 139 Mass. 454; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 62; Metropolitan R. Co. v. Quincy R. Co., 12 Allen (Mass.) 262.

1. In the absence of special statutory provisions the same proceedings must be had to determine the amount of compensation as where any other private property is condemned or taken. See EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 604; Canal, etc., R. Co. v. Crescent City, etc., St. R. Co., 41 La. Ann. 561; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 329; Canal, etc., R. Co. v. Orleans R. Co., 44 La. Ann. 54.

A municipality in granting to any company a franchise may reserve the right to authorize other companies to use its tracks, and also the right to fix the compensation; and, in such case, the company by accepting the franchise becomes bound by the stipulation and cannot claim the right to have damages assessed in the usual way. Kinsman, etc., R. Co. v. Broadway, etc., R. Co., 36 Ohio St. 239; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 227; Pacific R. Co. v. Wade, 91 Cal. 449; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 362.

In Massachusetts, the compensation to be paid is to be determined by the board of railroad commissioners, and it is within their discretion to establish rules apportioning the expenses, and regulating the mode of estimating compensation. No exception lies to their exercise of this discretion when no question of law arises. Cambridge R. Co. v. Charles River St. R. Co., 139 Mass. 454; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 62; Metropolitan R. Co. v. Highland St. R. Co., 118 Mass. 290. Formerly the compensation was determined by commissioners appointed by the court. Metropolitan R. Co. v. Broadway R. Co., 99 Mass. 238; Metropolitan R. Co. v. Quincy R. Co., 12 Allen (Mass.) 262; Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Western R. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 253.

In New York, it is provided by statute that the compensation for the joint use of a limited portion (one thousand feet) of the track of another company shall be determined by commissioners appointed by the court, or by the board of railroad commissioners, when the companies interested shall unite in request for that board to act. Re Statutes (1889), p. 815. Similar provisions will be found in the statutes of other states.

A, a street railroad company, obtained the right to construct and operate its road through certain streets upon certain express terms and conditions, and subject to such conditions as the council might thereafter prescribe. Afterwards another company, C, was organized, to which was granted the right of way along certain streets, and also upon a portion of the route already occupied by A, and upon its track, upon the payment to A of a reasonable compensation. These companies failing to agree upon the amount to be paid, the council prescribed a certain sum which was tendered to A, but refused by it. Thereupon, A brought suit against C to enjoin it from using any portion of its track, alleging, among other things, that the compensation tendered was inadequate; all of which C denied. It was held, first, that A did not acquire an exclusive right to use the route upon which its road was constructed; second, that A's property in its track was subject to be taken for a like public use in common upon compensation being first made; third, that while the amount of compensation must usually be determined otherwise, yet the council having stipulated for the right in such a case was entitled to prescribe a reasonable compensation; fourth, that without proof that the compensation so prescribed and tendered was inadequate, A was not entitled to an injunction. Kinsman St. R. Co. v. Broadway, etc., R. Co., 36 Ohio St. 239; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 327.

2. Metropolitan R. Co. v. Quincy R. Co., 12 Allen (Mass.) 262; Louisville City R. Co. v. Central Pass. R. Co., 87 Ky. 223; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 463; Jersey City, etc., R. Co. v. Jersey City, mechanical power, however, does not change the character of the railway as being not an additional burden on the street.¹

At the present time the motive power contemplated is prescribed usually by the charter.²

1. Taggart v. Newport St. R. Co., 16 R. I. 668; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 208; Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 634; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 608; Halsey v. Rapid Transit St. R. Co., 47 N. J. Eq. 380; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 76; Lorie v. North Chicago City R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 270. See also Clement v. Cincinnati, 16 Wkly. L. Bull. 355.

2. North Chicago City R. Co. v. Lake View, 105 Ill. 207; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 42; 44 Am. Rep. 788; Denver, etc., Horse R. Co. v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 2 Colo. 681; Allegheny v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 26 Pa. St. 355; Third Ave. R. Co. v. Newton, 112 N. Y. 396; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 391.

Construction of Charters—Use of Electricity.—In Indianapolis Cable St. R. Co. v. Citizens' St. R. Co., 127 Ind. 393; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 234, the court by Coffey, J., said: "As the grant of a special charter or franchise to a corporation is construed strictly against the corporation, where the right to use one motive power is prescribed, the company cannot successfully maintain its right to use another or different power." Elliott on Roads and Streets 360; People v. Newton (Supreme Ct.), 1 N. Y. Supp. 197, 112 N. Y. 396; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 391; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Denver City R. Co., 2 Colo. 681; Citizens' St. R. Co. v. Jones, 34 Fed. Rep. 579; Birmingham, etc., St. R. Co. v. Birmingham St. R. Co., 79 Ala. 465; 58 Am. Rep. 615; Mayor, etc., of Allegheny v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 26 Pa. St. 355; North Chicago City R. Co. v. Lake View, 105 Ill. 207; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 42; 44 Am. Rep. 788.

A company incorporated under Pennsylvania act of May 14, 1839, providing for the formation of a corporation for the purpose of constructing street railways for public use in the conveyance of passengers by any other power than locomotives, may construct and operate a street railway using electricity as the motive power. Lockhart v. Craig St. R. Co., 139 Pa. St. 419; 47 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 57. And a statute authorizing a turnpike company to operate a street railroad and to use "the power of horses, animals or any mechanical or other power, or the combination of them, which such company might choose to employ, except the force of steam," embraces electricity as a motive power. Hudson River Telephone Co. v. Watervliet Turnpike, etc. Co., 56 Hun (N. Y.) 67. Where a statute provides that a street railway shall be operated "with steam, horse or other power," although the word "steam" must be struck out, because steam cannot be used without compensation to abutting owners, the statute is sufficient to authorize the adoption of electricity as a motive power. Taggart v. Newport St. R. Co., 16 R. I. 668; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 208.

The use of electricity as a motive power for propelling street cars has not been shown to be so dangerous as to justify the court in enjoining it. Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 634; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 608. And in Ohio it is held that the use of wires in city streets for conducting electricity to operate street railway cars is not within the contemplation of Ohio act, March 12, 1886, forbidding the use of uninsulated wires, which relates only to wires conducting electricity for power purposes and for lighting streets and buildings. Simmons v. Toledo, 5 Ohio C. Ct. 124. But the Connecticut Gen. St. § 3595, providing that the mayor and common council of a city may permit and regulate the use of any improved motive power for drawing cars on any horse railroad, does not allow an electric company, even with the permission of the mayor and council, to propel its cars by the use of overhead wires, where the charter of the company declares only that the company may propel its cars "in any mode that does not involve" the use of such wires. Farrell v. Winchester Ave. R. Co. (Conn. 1891), 23 Atl. Rep. 757.

In State v. Trenton (N. J. 1892), 23 Atl. Rep. 281, it was held that the New Jersey statute of 1886 (Supp. Rev., p. 369, § 30), which provides "that any street railroad company in this state may use electric or chemical motors or grip cables as the propelling power of its cars instead of horses, provided it shall first obtain the consent of the municipal authorities," did not authorize the erection of poles and the stretch-

A company must bring the car to a full stop wherever a passenger desires to get on or off,¹ must furnish him safe and reasonable convenient means of entrance and exit,² and when necessary should require the conductor or driver to assist feeble or infirm closely. It is immaterial whether it results from the negligence or willfulness of the defendant's agent. Weed v. Panama R. Co., 17 N. Y. 362; 72 Am. Dec. 474. The same doctrine is supported by other high authority. Lyons v. Broadway, etc., R. Co., 32 N. Y. St. Rep. 232; Lynch v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 77; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 119; 43 Am. Rep. 141 (company liable for false imprisonment by gate-keeper in causing wrongful arrest of passenger); Koetter v. Manhattan R. Co., 59 Hun (N. Y.) 623; Winnegar v. Central Pass. R. Co., 85 Ky 547; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 462; Springer Transp. Co. v. Smith, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 498, Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Flexman, 103 Ill. 546; 8 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 354; 42 Am. Rep. 43; Nieto v. Clark, 1 Cliff. (U. S.) 145; Pendleton v. Kinsley, 3 Cliff. (U. S.) 416; Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 57 Me 202; 2 Am. Rep. 39; MASTER AND SERVANT, vol. 14, p. 819.

1 Duty to Stop Car for Passengers to Get Off and On.—The car must come to a full stop if passengers desire it, and stop long enough to give them a reasonably safe opportunity to alight. Chicago City R. Co. v. Mumford, 97 Ill. 560; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 312 (recovery allowed where car was stopped but not long enough for passenger to get completely off); North Birmingham St. R. Co. v. Calderwood, 89 Ala. 247; Crissey v. Hestonville, etc., R. Co., 75 Pa. St. 83; Poulin v. Broadway, etc., R. Co., 61 N. Y. 621 (car starting suddenly before passenger had completely alighted); Ridenhour v. Kansas City Cable R. Co., 102 Mo. 270; 44 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 422-3, note (similar case). Dale v. Brooklyn City, etc., R. Co., 1 Hun (N. Y.) 146, aff'd 60 N. Y. 638; Malhado v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 30 N. Y. 370 (no excuse afforded to company by fact that passenger being on front platform without objection preferred his request to stop to the driver instead of the conductor); Wolfklei v. Sixth Ave. R. Co., 38 N. Y. 49; Roberts v. Johnson, 58 N. Y. 613; Day v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 12 Hun (N. Y.) 435; Kelly v. New York, etc., R. Co., 39 Hun (N. Y.) 486; Maher v. Central Park, etc., R. Co., 39 N. Y.

Super. Ct. 155; Dickson v. Broadway, etc., R. Co., 41 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 15 CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS, vol. 1, p. 761.

This duty varies with the character and physical condition of the passenger. Feeble and infirm passengers are entitled to a longer time for getting on and leaving the car than are ordinary persons. Colt v. Sixth Ave. R. Co., 33 N. Y. Super. Ct. 189, aff'd 49 N. Y. 67; Bonney v. Bushwick R. Co., 1 How. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 66. Where the car is about to stop at the request of one passenger, another passenger who is alight at the same time is not negligent in failing also to prefer a request to stop. Rathbone v. Union R. Co., 13 R. J. 70; 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 58.

In Dougherty v. Missouri R. Co., 8 Mo. 325; 21 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 497 51 Am. Rep. 239, the plaintiff was injured by the sudden starting of the car just after he had gotten on. He was allowed to recover, on the ground that it was the company's duty to stop long enough for him to get into the car and seat himself, or to take hold of the strap if there was no seat; and while it may start the car before the passenger has had time to do either, it must exercise "the utmost care" in starting so as not to injure him. Birmingham Union R. Co. v. Hale, 90 Ala. 8; Birmingham Union R. Co. v. Smith, 90 Ala. 60.

After the car has been stopped and the passenger has alighted, it is still a part of the company's duty not to start the car until the passenger has had time to get a safe distance from the car. If he is injured by the car's starting before he has had time to move out of danger, the company must be responsible. Highland Ave., etc., R. Co. v. Burt, 92 Ala. 291; 48 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 56.

As to whether a passenger's boarding or leaving the car while it is moving instead of waiting until it has come to a stop, constitutes contributory negligence, see infra, this title, Contributory Negligence of Passengers.

2 In Neslie v. Second, etc., St. R. Co., 113 Pa. St. 300, 27 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 180, plaintiff, in alighting from a car with a child in her arms, slipped and fell, thereby sustaining severe injuries. A passenger was standing on the platform

The car company must employ competent and reliable servants, and provide safe machinery and appliances.¹ The driver of the a distance of two feet. The driver was giving no attention to the track in front of him, and did not see the child until the car passed over him. Rosenkranz v. Lindell R. Co. (Mo. 1892), 18 S. W. Rep. 890. Other illustrative cases are Senn v. Southern R. Co. (Mo. 1892), 18 S. W. Rep. 1007; Hyland v. Yonker R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 1 N. Y. Supp. 363; Brown v. Twenty-third St. R. Co., 56 N. Y. Super. Ct. 356; Dorman v. Broadway R. Co., 5 N. Y. Supp. 769; Levy v. Dry-Dock, etc., R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 485; Howland v. Union St. R. Co., 150 Mass. 86 (boy run over while waiting in street to procure ice from a passing cart).

Where plaintiff, a boy, stepped on an elevated railway track, in order to reach a hydrant, and walked toward an engine standing on the track, it was negligence in the engineer to start the engine without looking to see if the plaintiff had gotten out of the way and without giving him warning. Corcoran v. New York El. R. Co., 19 Hun (N. Y.) 368.

In McCann v. Kings County El. R. Co., 19 N. Y. Supp. 668, it was held that the railroad company was not liable for injuries resulting from the negligence of the servants of a contractor employed by said company to paint its structure, on the ground that the injury did not result from the performance of the work but from the manner of its performance.

Distinction Between Passengers and Pedestrians.—The distinction between the duty owing to passengers and that owing to ordinary pedestrians is plain. In the one case the relation of carrier and passenger exists with all the high and special duties which attend that relation; in the other case only the ordinary duty arising from one user of the highway to another exists. Pendleton St. R. Co. v. Shires, 18 Ohio St. 255; Goll v. Manhattan R. Co., 57 N. Y. Super. Ct. 74; NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 427.

It is not competent to ask a driver which he regarded it as his duty to look out for—passengers or persons that he might run over. Hyland v. Yonkers R. Co., 4 N. Y. Supp. 305.

Trespassers.—Where a person is a trespasser the only duty due him is to refrain from willful and deliberate injury. RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 935. Thus, where a person was putting up a telegraph wire in a street and was injured by a passing street car striking the wire, he was not allowed to recover, in the absence of evidence that the driver acted wantonly and recklessly. Banks v. Highland St. R. Co., 136 Mass. 485; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 139.

New York Cases.—See, for other cases applying these various doctrines, Dorman v. Broadway R. Co., 16 N. Y. St. Rep. 753; Weil v. Dry-Dock, etc., R. Co., 25 N. Y. St. Rep. 608; Mallard v. Ninth Ave. R. Co., 27 N. Y. St. Rep. 801; Baker v. Eighth Ave. R. Co., 62 Hun (N. Y.) 39; Giraldo v. Coney Island, etc., R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 16 N. Y. Supp. 774; Wolf v. Houston, etc., R. Co., 50 Hun (N. Y.) 603; Stone v. Dry-Dock, etc., R. Co., 46 Hun (N. Y.) 184; Block v. Harlem Bridge, etc., R. Co., 55 Hun (N. Y.) 607; Levy v. Dry-Dock, etc., R. Co., 58 Hun (N. Y.) 610; Mentz v. Second Ave. R. Co., 3 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 274; aff'g 2 Robt. (N. Y.) 356; Silberstein v. Houston, etc., R. Co., 117 N. Y. 293; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 268; rev'g 22 N. Y. St. Rep. 452; Dorman v. Broadway R. Co., 117 N. Y. 655; Manahan v. Steinway, etc., R. Co., 125 N. Y. 760; rev'g 30 N. Y. St. Rep. 562; Fenton v. Second Ave. R. Co., 126 N. Y. 625; rev'g 56 Hun (N. Y.) 99; Willson v. Brooklyn El. R. Co., 9 N. Y. Supp. 277.

1. Competent Servants and Proper Machinery Must be Provided.—Barksdull v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 23 La. Ann. 180; Fort Worth St. R. Co. v. Witten, 74 Tex. 202; Hayes v. Galveston, etc., St. R. Co., 70 Tex. 602; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 97.

In Wall v. Helena St. R. Co. (Mont. 1892), 29 Pac. Rep. 721, in an action for damages, it appeared that at the time of the injury a boy fifteen years old was the driver; had there been a competent driver in charge the injury could have been prevented. The company was held liable.

In Dintruff v. Rochester City, etc., R. Co., 57 Hun (N. Y.) 585, the evidence was that the driver would have been able to control the horses and thus prevent the accident, but for the fact that the rear brake had been mischievously interfered with by boys; car should at all times have his team or the mechanical power which propels the cars under his control, and so make use of this control as to avoid injury whenever possible.¹ For this reason that the usual way of preventing such interference, the possibility of which was a matter of common knowledge, was by tying the brake down; and that the superintendent of the railway knew that the brake of that car had been tied down at one time to prevent just such interference. It was held that this was negligence on the part of the company.

Duty to Light the Track.—An instruction to the effect that the company must provide its cars with such lights as will enable the driver, with the aid of the street lights, to see the track ahead and thus avoid injury, is erroneous. Memphis City R. Co. v. Loague, 13 Lea (Tenn.) 32; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 459; Wharton on Neg., § 639.

Willful Injuries by Driver.—In Tuller v. Voght, 13 Ill. 277, the owners of a stage line were held liable for a willful injury committed by one of their drivers in running into a private vehicle. But this holding was under a statute specially providing that such liability should exist. A similar statute in New York entitled "Of the law of the road and the regulation of public stages" was held not to apply to street railways, so that under it a street-car company is not liable for willful injury committed by its driver. Whitaker v. Eighth Ave. R. Co., 51 N. Y. 295.

1. Driver's Duty.—Schierhold v. North Beach, etc., R. Co., 40 Cal. 447; Humbird v. Union St. R. Co. (Mo. 1892), 19 S. W. Rep. 69; Pope v. Kansas City Cable R. Co., 99 Mo. 400; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 290; Winters v. Kansas City R. Co., 99 Mo. 509; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 261; 17 Am. St. Rep. 591; Silberstein v. Houston, etc., R. Co., 117 N. Y. 393; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 268; rev'd 4 N. Y. Supp. 843.

Where there is evidence that the driver of a street car, which ran over and injured plaintiff, was inside the car when the accident occurred, plaintiff is entitled to an instruction that the company would be liable unless the driver was standing on the platform, with the lines from the horses in his hands, and exercising a reasonable degree of watchfulness to prevent all injuries to persons crossing and traveling on and over the street. Brooks v. Lincoln St. R. Co., 22 Neb. 816; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 560.

In Fenton v. Second Ave. R. Co., 56

Hun (N. Y.) 100, the fact that although the deceased fell on the track twenty feet in front of the car no effort was made by the driver to stop the car until the horses were over the deceased, was considered evidence of negligence to sustain a recovery. For a similar case see Mentz v. Second Ave. R. Co., 2 Robt. (N. Y.) 356, aff'd 3 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 274; Pope v. Kansas City R. Co., 99 Mo. 400; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 290. Compare Citizens' R. Co. v. Carey, 56 Ind. 396.

Evidence as to Driver's Being Overworked.—In Gumb v. Twenty-third St. R. Co., 114 N. Y. 111; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 315, it was held that evidence that the driver of the car was overworked, was not admissible for the purpose of proving that his condition might have caused the accident, no such ground being alleged in the complaint and there being no evidence that the accident was occasioned by the fatigue or sleepiness of the driver.

And in Philadelphia City R. Co. v. Henrice, 92 Pa. St. 431; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 544; 37 Am. Rep. 699, it was held that the witness could not be asked how many hours the drivers and conductors were employed each day for the purpose of showing that the driver was physically unable to discharge his duty. The court went on to say that it might be shown that the driver of the car was asleep or intoxicated at the time of the accident, and that a presumption of negligence would properly arise from such fact. Such presumption could not arise out of a mere inference however; it must be founded upon a proven fact.

Driver's Intoxication—Evidence.—In an action for injuries sustained by being struck by a car negligently driven in consequence of the driver's negligence, evidence that the driver had, on that same trip, missed a switch at a certain street; that he had failed to respond to the conductor's signal to stop at another street; had driven rapidly, and that a person had been thrown down in attempting to get aboard, is admissible, as showing a series of acts indicative of such intoxication at the time of the accident as to incapacitate him from the proper control of the car. And the fact that the driver had had drink just before starting on the trip is admissible, as fore cause its servants who operate the cars to exercise the care which the increased danger demands;¹ it cannot set up any superior-right to the use of the streets at such points, but must recognize and respect the equal rights of all others.²

b. CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE—CHILDREN, ETC.—If the negligence of the injured party is the proximate cause of the injury he may not recover therefor.³ And whether he has been guilty of such contributory negligence is always a question of fact for the jury,⁴ unless, as in some cases, there is no dispute as to the facts, and but one conclusion can be drawn from them.⁵

One is not necessarily negligent because he walks along the track of a street railway, though he is bound to keep his eyes and ears open, and exercise ordinary care to get out of the way of an approaching car;⁶ and it has been held that one who walks on the track, it is improper to charge that the company owed him no active vigilance to guard against injuring him, as it was the duty of the company to use at least ordinary care, and incidentally whatever "active vigilance" might be implied thereby. Weiler v. Manhattan R. Co., 53 Hun (N. Y.) 372. See also Pendleton St. R. Co. v. Shires, 18 Ohio St. 255; Pendleton St. R. Co. v. Stallmann, 22 Ohio St. 1.

Statutory Provision—Texas.—Rev. Stat. of Texas, art. 2899, provides that street-car companies shall be liable for injuries to persons on the track only when the injury is caused by the "gross negligence" of the company's servants. Dallas City R. Co. v. Bee-man, 74 Tex. 291. Before the passage of this act the rule in Texas was the same as in other jurisdictions. Galveston City R. Co. v. Hewitt, 67 Tex. 473; 60 Am. Rep. 32. See also San Antonio St. R. Co. v. Cailloutte, 79 Tex. 341.

1. At Crossings.—McClain v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 116 N. Y. 459; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 254; Winters v. Kansas, etc., R. Co., 99 Mo. 509; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 261; 17 Am. St. Rep. 591; Streetzel v. St. Paul City R. Co., 47 Minn. 543.

2. McClain v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 116 N. Y. 459; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 254. Here it was held that the jury was properly instructed that the company "had no right to so occupy the street and use the same with its cars as to make it extremely dangerous to cross the street at all times."

3. See CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, p. 15 et seq.; COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE, vol. 3, p. 367; NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 386; Rose v. West Philadelphia R. Co. (Pa. 1888), 12 Atl. Rep. 78.

4. Almost every case involves perplexing and controverted facts and resort is always in such cases, to the jury. McClain v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 116 N. Y. 459; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 254; Little v. Grand Rapids St. R. Co., 78 Mich. 205; Howland v. Union St. R. Co., 150 Mass. 86; Cowan v. Third Ave. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 610.

5. Thus when a boy, nearly six years old, attempts to pass under a freight car, drawn by horses, moving along a street, he is guilty of contributory negligence, and is not entitled to recover damages for any injury he may sustain by reason of such attempt, and the court may so instruct a jury as a conclusion of law. McMahon v. Northern Cent. R. Co., 39 Md. 438; Bulger v. Albany R. Co., 42 N. Y. 459. In another case in an action by the plaintiff for injuries received by being struck by a cable car while crossing the track, she testified that she was in the habit of looking for cars at crossings, but could not say whether she did on this occasion or not. The avenue was entirely clear, and plaintiff, whose eyesight was good, could easily have seen the approaching car. An eye witness testified that plaintiff went on the track without looking on one side or the other, and with her head down. It was held error to submit the case to the jury, because the plaintiff was guilty of negligence as a matter of law. Cowan v. Third Ave. R. Co., 10 N. Y. St. Rep. 916. See also Halpin v. Third Ave. R. Co., 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 175; Buzby v. Philadelphia Traction R. Co., 126 Pa. St. 559; 42 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 144.

6. In Shea v. Potrero, etc., R. Co., 44 Cal. 414, the court said: "The company is not authorized to run its cars the track when he might, with safety and comfort, walk elsewhere, must be considered to do so at his own peril.¹

It is a frequent combination of circumstances that the plaintiff is injured by getting off a street car upon which he was a passenger, and being struck by an approaching car on a parallel track, just as he alights. In such cases if the plaintiff could have avoided the injury by looking or listening he is guilty of contributory negligence which will bar his recovery.²

A person standing on the track or crossing cannot be said, as a matter of law, to be guilty of contributory negligence when he is there in the performance of some duty, and his failure to look out recklessly, carelessly, or without reasonable prudence, and to answer the person who demands relief for injuries sustained by being run over by its car that if he had not been on the railroad track he would not have been injured—that it was contributory negligence on his part to walk on the track instead of the space by the side of the track. Such person is authorized to walk on the track, he using reasonable care and prudence to avoid injuries, but is not required to abandon the track in order to avoid possible injuries which may result from the carelessness of the company." See also Brooks v. Lincoln St. R. Co., 22 Neb. 816; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 560; Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Pointer, 9 Kan. 620; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Walker, 70 Tex. 126. See also RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 933.

1. In Johnson v. Canal, etc., R. Co., 27 La. Ann. 53, a party was not allowed to recover because it appeared that the injury occurred while he was walking along the street-car track at eleven o'clock at night, there was a convenient and safe sidewalk near, and the noise of the horses approaching from behind ought to have afforded him sufficient warning. So in Childs v. New Orleans City R. Co., 33 La. Ann. 154, recovery was denied where the injured party in spite of warnings and remonstrances insisted on walking along the narrow space between the two tracks. His conduct was considered to be such negligence as to bar his recovery, although the negligence of the car company was proven. See also Weeks v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 32 La. Ann. 615; Schwartz v. Crescent City R. Co., 30 La. Ann. 15.

And in Pennsylvania it was held that a foot-passenger, who, in order to avoid the deep snow in the rest of the street, walks along the street-car track from which the snow has been cleared, cannot recover for being run over by a car approaching from the rear, when it appears that she could have seen the car for a quarter of a mile when she got on the track, and that the bells could be heard for forty rods, but that she did not notice the car until it was nearly upon her, and then failed to step far enough aside on account of the high banks of snow, and was knocked down by the rear part of the car. Warner v. People's St. R. Co., 141 Pa. St. 615.

2. Passenger Struck by Approaching Car While Leaving Another Car.—An illustrative case is that of Creamer v. West End St. R. Co. (Mass. 1892), 31 N. E. Rep. 391. The passenger was struck and killed by an electric car coming from the opposite direction upon a parallel track just as he stepped from the open car. When he arose to leave the dashers of the two cars were opposite each other; the car which struck was going at fifteen miles an hour; its gong was sounding, and there was nothing to prevent the deceased from seeing and hearing. Moreover, before he left the car the conductor and a passenger shouted to him to stop. It was held that a verdict must be ordered for the defendant. For similar cases in which a non-suit or verdict for the defendant has been ordered, see McCann v. Sixth Ave. R. Co., 56 N. Y. Super. Ct. 282; Buzby v. Philadelphia Traction Co., 126 Pa. St. 559; 42 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 144; Dunn v. Cass Ave., etc., R. Co., 98 Mo. 652; Rose v. West Philadelphia R. Co. (Pa. 1888), 12 Atl. Rep. 78. See also Miller v. St. Paul City R. Co., 42 Minn. 454 (plaintiff negligent in standing between two parallel tracks only two feet apart, while waiting for car); Palley v. Brooklyn City R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 4 N. Y. Supp. 384.

for approaching cars is caused by his attention being diverted to the duty which he is discharging.¹

In crossing a track in front of an approaching car, a person must exercise ordinary care to protect himself from injury. He must have regard to the character of the crossing; whether easy and convenient or difficult; to the nearness of the approaching car; the speed at which it is coming; and to other circumstances. And if he pursues a course different from that which a man of ordinary prudence would have taken, he is guilty of contributory negligence and cannot recover.² This rule is varied, however, in the case of young children, who are not held to any greater degree of care than they are capable of exercising, and where the child is too young to be capable of any care the doctrine of contributory negligence is not applicable.³ In the case of children, drivers are charged with notice of their incapacity, but, as to adults, have a right to pre-

1. Persons Standing on Track in Discharge of Duty.—Thus, where the plaintiff is flagging an approaching train at a public crossing, it is error to charge, as a matter of law, that he is bound to turn round from the steam cars which he is flagging and look out for the street car which ran over him. D'Oro v. Atlantic Ave. R. Co., 13 N. Y. Supp. 789. See also Little v. Grand Rapids St. R. Co., 78 Mich. 205, where the plaintiff was at work near the car track digging a ditch, and was prevented from hearing the car by other noises, the question of contributory negligence was submitted to the jury.

This rule, however, does not protect one who, while waiting for a car, stands between the parallel tracks which are so near together that his danger is apparent on the slightest reflection. Miller v. St. Paul City R. Co., 42 Minn. 454.

2. See generally CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, p. 15 et seq.

Crossing Street in Front of Approaching Car.—This rule of the text has been applied in many cases. Fenton v. Second Ave. R. Co., 56 Hun (N. Y.) 99; Dunn v. Cass Ave. R. Co., 98 Mo. 652; Halpin v. Third Ave. R. Co., 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 175; Wells v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 58 Hun (N. Y.) 389; O'Toole v. Central Park, etc., R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 347 (plaintiff standing on sidewalk over which the cars ran on a curve); McClain v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 116 N. Y. 459; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 254; Baxter v. Second Ave. R. Co., 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 510; Cowan v. Third Ave. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 610; Meyer v. Lyndell R. Co., 6 Mo. App. 27. See also Schmidt v. McGill, 120 Pa. St. 412.

The plaintiff himself testified that, while riding on horseback, his horse fell, throwing him to the ground under the horse, some 150 feet ahead of the car, and that, while lying there, the wheel of the car ran over his arm. Four disinterested witnesses, who were riding on the car in a position to see the accident, testified that the horse fell by the side of the car. It was held however, that it was an abuse of discretion in the trial court not to grant a motion to set aside a verdict for the plaintiff, as being contrary to the evidence. McCoy v. Milwaukee St. R. Co. (Wis. 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 93.

Willful Injury.—Contributory negligence of the injured party is no defense when the injury is willfully inflicted. Therefore, where the driver discovered the peril of plaintiff in time, and by the reasonable exercise of means at hand could have prevented the injury, the law considers the failure to use such means as the immediate cause, and will permit recovery notwithstanding the injured party was negligent. Hays v. Gainesville St. R. Co., 70 Tex. 602; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 97.

3. Injuries to Children.—The subject of the contributory negligence of children is very thoroughly discussed in CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, pp. 42, 53 et seq. See Galveston City R. Co. v. Hewitt, 67 Tex. 473; 60 Am. Rep. 32; Etherington v. Prospect Park, etc., R. Co., 88 N. Y. 641; 4 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 617; Collins v. South Boston R. Co., 142 Mass. 301; 26 Am. & Eng. R.

sume them to be possessed of the usual faculties, and will take reasonable care to protect themselves.¹

As a rule the requirement that the party about to cross the track shall stop, look, and listen, is not insisted upon to the same extent as where the crossing is over an ordinary railroad.² In some jurisdictions, however, the requirement is rigidly insisted upon, and any failure to observe it will bar recovery.³

Cas. 371; 36 Am. Rep. 675; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Laver, 112 Pa. St. 414; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 376, note; Philadelphia City Pass. R. Co. v. Hassard, 75 Pa. St. 367; Farris v. Cass Ave., etc., R. Co., 8 Mo. App. 589; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 623.

An infant seventeen months old will not be charged with negligence. Chicago West Div. R. Co. v. Ryan, 131 Ill. 474; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 396. But the fact that a child may not be capable of contributory negligence, or that the negligence of his parents cannot be imputed to it does not always render the company liable upon mere proof of the fact of injury. The negligence of the company must be proven. Roller v. Sutter St. R. Co., 66 Cal. 230; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 333. Thus, injuries to a child which gets under the hindwheels of a street car, after the forewheels have passed safely, are not attributable to the negligence of the driver or of the conductor. Bulger v. Albany R. Co., 42 N. Y. 459. In another case a child two years old ran across the track of a horse-railroad company and was run over and killed by one of their cars. Bystanders shouted to the driver to stop, but his attention was turned in another direction. He was driving slowly and cautiously. Held, that no negligence was shown on the part of the driver. Boland v. Missouri R. Co., 36 Mo. 484. See also Maschek v. St. Louis R. Co., 71 Mo. 276; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 38; O'Connor v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 135 Mass. 352; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 362; Messenger v. Denie, 137 Mass. 197; 50 Am. Rep. 295; 141 Mass. 335.

1. See CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, p. 79.

In Schulte v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 44 La. Ann. 509, an elderly lady afflicted with deafness and wearing a large bonnet which obstructed her sight was not allowed to recover; the company could not be held responsible for her infirmities. See also Wheelahan v. Philadelphia Traction Co. (Pa. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 688 (person driving across having his view obstructed by the cover of his wagon); Cowan v. Third Ave. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 610.

2. Failure to Stop, Look, and Listen.— See the subject discussed in CROSSINGS, vol. 4, p. 945.

Thus, in Minnesota such failure is not regarded as being negligence per se. Shea v. St. Paul City R. Co. (Minn. 1892), 52 N. W. Rep. 902. In this case the car struck the plaintiff while he was driving over the crossing. The evidence showed that the car was running at an unusual and dangerous rate of speed; that no signals were given until the car was within fifty feet; that the plaintiff's view of the track was obstructed until he was near the track; that he looked in one direction before driving on the track; and that just as his horses stepped on the first rail he saw the car, but was unable to stop. It was held that the evidence presented a question for the jury and warranted a verdict for the plaintiff.

So in Pyne v. Broadway, etc., R. Co., 19 N. Y. Supp. 217, it is held that a person is not necessarily negligent in failing to look for approaching street cars before attempting to cross an ordinary street, but only when the situation and surrounding circumstances are such that a person of ordinary prudence would have looked. Following Moebus v. Herrmann, 108 N. Y. 349. Compare Baltimore Traction Co. v. Wallace (Md. 1893), 26 Atl. Rep. 518.

3. The Pennsylvania courts apply the general rule in all cases, whether street-car crossings or others. Ehrisman v. East Harrisburg City Pass. R. Co., 150 Pa. St. 180; Carson v. Federal St., etc., R. Co. (Pa.), 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 462. Thus, where one undertakes to cross a street-car track with a wagon having a hood over it, confining his view of the track to thirty feet, the failure to lean forward so as to see an approaching car is negligence per se which will bar recovery for injuries sustained by the collision. Wheelahan v. Philadelphia Traction Co. (Pa. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 688.

Where the street-car line crosses an ordinary railroad the relative duties of the driver and engineer are the same as in case of ordinary travelers passing over the crossing. What these duties are has been already elaborately discussed.¹

The doctrine of imputable contributory negligence, whereby it is sought to impute to children the contributory negligence of their parents or custodians, or to passengers the contributory negligence of their carrier, has received thorough treatment in a previous article.²

4. Collision With Vehicles.—As between a street car and an ordinary vehicle moving along the track, the street car has the superior right of way.³ But it has been held that at crossings neither party has any paramount right of way, and that, in cases of collision at street crossings, the rights of the parties are to be determined by the law applicable to ordinary vehicles.⁴ If either party fails to use that care which a man of ordinary prudence would have exercised under similar circumstances he be-

A child of ten years was crossing a public street on a diagonal cross walk. There were no obstructions to the view, no passing vehicles except a horse-car coming towards her and which she would have seen had she looked in that direction. It was held that a verdict in her favor could not be sustained. Sheets v. Connolly St. R. Co. (N. J. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 483.

In Carson v. Federal St. R. Co., 147 Pa. St. 219; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 462, it is said that it may not be necessary to stop on approaching a street railway crossing, but it is necessary to look before driving upon the track. See Christensen v. Union Trunk Line (Wash. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 1018. See also for other cases holding a failure to stop, look, and listen, contributory negligence, Cohen v. Dry-Dock, etc., R. Co., 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 368; Thomas v. Citizens' Pass. R. Co., 132 Pa. St. 504; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 196; Wood v. Detroit City St. R. Co., 52 Mich. 402; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 129; 50 Am. Rep. 259; Donnelly v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 109 N. Y. 16; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 103 (party non-suited where it appeared that he saw the engine approaching but only shouted and did not stop); Ehrisman v. East Harrisburg City Pass. R. Co. (Pa. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 596.

1. Line Crossing a Railroad.—See CROSSINGS, vol. 4, p. 906 et seq. For cases in which the rules there set out have been applied to street-car drivers, see Mantel v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 33 Minn. 62; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 362 (action by driver); Coddington v.

Brooklyn Crosstown R. Co., 102 N. Y. 66; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 393.

As to the right of a street railway to construct its road across the track of a railroad, see Brooklyn Cent., etc., R. Co. v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 420; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 867.

2. See CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, p. 82 et seq.

See also Anderson v. Minneapolis St. R. Co., 42 Minn. 490; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 294; Weissner v. St. Paul City R. Co., 47 Minn. 468; Stutzel v. St. Paul City R. Co., 47 Minn. 543.

3. Shea v. Potrero, etc., R. Co., 44 Cal. 414; Chicago West Div. R. Co. v. Bert, 69 Ill. 388; O'Neil v. Dry-Dock, etc., R. Co., 129 N. Y. 125; 52 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 573; Com. v. Hicks, 7 Allen (Mass.) 573. See also CROSSINGS, vol. 4, p. 951.

4. Buhrens v. Dry-Dock, etc., R. Co., 53 Hun (N. Y.) 571; affirmed 125 N. Y. 702.

In O'Neil v. Dry-Dock, etc., R. Co., 129 N. Y. 125; 52 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 573, the court said: "As the cars must run upon the tracks and cannot turn out for vehicles drawn by horses, they must have the preference, and such vehicles must, as they can in a reasonable manner, keep off from the railroad track so as to permit the free and unobstructed passage of the cars. In no other way can street railways be operated. As to such vehicles the railways have the paramount right to be exercised in a reasonable and prudent manner. But a railway crossing a street stands upon a different footing. The comes liable for an injury resulting as a proximate consequence of his want of care, unless the injured party by his negligence contributed to the injury.¹

Where the street car and vehicle are traversing the same street the car has the superior right of way over its track.² But this superior right of the car does not authorize its owner willfully or negligently to injure one who refuses to recognize it. The gen-car has the right to cross and must cross the street, and the vehicle has a right to cross and must cross the railroad track. Neither has a superior right to the other. The right of each must be exercised with due regard to the right of the other, and the right of each must be exercised in a reasonable and careful manner so as not to unreasonably abridge or interfere with the right of the other." Compare Chicago West Div. R. Co. v. Ingraham, 131 Ill. 659; 41 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 243.

1. Collisions at Crossings.—The cases arising here are nothing more than an application of this familiar rule of law. See generally COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE, vol. 3, p. 367; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE, vol. 4, p. 15; CROSSINGS, vol. 4, p. 909; NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 398, and the cases cited in the preceding note.

In Thomas v. Citizens' Pass. R. Co., 132 Pa. St. 504; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 196, the plaintiff's carriage was struck by the car while she was attempting to cross the track. She knew that a car was coming and that it was near, having heard the bells, but she could not see it until she turned her horse on the track; she thought she would have time to cross. The car was moving at the usual rate on a down grade, and her horse was moving at a slow walk. It was held that she was guilty of contributory negligence which would bar recovery.

An instruction that it is the duty of the driver of a street car to exercise the highest degree of care to avoid any collision or accident; that his first and highest duty is to secure the safety of his passengers, and that he should exercise all the care that prudence might suggest in looking about and listening, so as to assure himself that his track was clear and safe, and that this duty is greater at a street crossing than at other ordinary places—does not hold the street car company to a stricter responsibility than the law imposes. The driver did not look toward the point whence the truck was coming; had he done so the collision would have been avoided. It was held that the question of the driver's negligence was properly submitted to the jury. Heucke v. Milwaukee City R. Co., 69 Wis. 401. For other similar cases see Laughlin v. Street R. Co., 62 Mich. 220; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 377; Patton v. Philadelphia Traction R. Co., 132 Pa. St. 76; Moroney v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 9 N. Y. Supp. 546; Gumb v. Twenty-third St. R. Co., 58 N. Y. Super. Ct. 1, 559; North Side St. R. Co. v. Waut (Tex. 1890), 15 S. W. Rep. 40 (recovery denied); Carson v. Federal St., etc., R. Co. (Pa.), 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 462 (plaintiff crossed track without stopping or looking—recovery denied); Ward v. Rochester Electric R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 427 (same); Cohen v. Dry-Dock, etc., R. Co., 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 368 (plaintiff in crossing track with vehicle was obstructed by blockade of trucks and run into by the street car—recovery allowed). Mercier v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 23 La. Ann. 264.

Instructions.—Where an injury is sustained in consequence of a collision of a cable car with plaintiff's wagon, it is error to give an instruction that the company is guilty of negligence if the gripman "intentionally and carelessly" caused the collision, since the two terms are inconsistent. Bindbeuthal v. Street R. Co., 43 Mo. App. 463.

2. See supra, this title, Right to Exclusive Use of Tracks; Orange, etc., Horse R. Co. v. Ward, 47 N. J. L. 560; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 359; North Hudson Co. R. Co. v. Isley, 49 N. J. L. 468; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 94; Hogan v. Eighth Ave. R. Co., 15 N. Y. 380; Adolph v. Central Park, etc., R. Co., 76 N. Y. 530; Chicago West Div. R. Co. v. Bert, 69 Ill. 388. In one case the jury were instructed that a failure by the driver of the vehicle to observe the duty to turn out would constitute such contributory negligence as to bar a recovery for injuries resulting from the collision. Quinn v. Atlantic Ave. R. Co., 12 N. Y. Supp.

eral rules as to the duty of the company to keep a reasonably careful lookout, to provide a headlight at night, etc., apply here as in other cases.¹ If, while the car and a vehicle are moving side by side, a collision occurs, there is a presumption that the driver 223; Wilbrand v. Eighth Ave. R. Co., 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 314.

Street Car Running Backwards.—In other cases than those mentioned the rights of the parties are equal. The case of Cook v. Metropolitan R. Co., 98 Mass. 361, affords a good illustration. The horses attached to the car, after pulling it part way up a ferry drop, stopped; the driver applied the brake and held the car stationary. C., who was driving a wagon, was about ten feet behind the car when it started, and followed after it, another team following him. The defendants usually had an extra horse to help to pull the car up the drop, but on this occasion there was none. The driver not being able to stop the car, it came back upon the horses of C. and injured them, C. being unable to get out of the way. In an action against the railway company it was held that there was evidence of due care on the part of C. and of negligence on the part of defendant. Compare Fettritch v. Dickenson, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 248.

But see Spaulding v. Jarvis, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 621, as to negligence of both parties barring the recovery of the plaintiff, who left his carriage too close to the tracks of a railway, there being no evidence of willful injury, but only an error in judgment, both parties thinking there was room enough for the car to pass without striking the carriage.

1. The driver of a street car, who sees a carriage crossing the tracks in front of him on a walk, is not justified in going ahead, trusting that the carriage driver will get out of his way. The fact that the carriage driver can turn in any direction, and thus avoid the car, which is confined to its tracks, does not relieve the car driver of the duty to use ordinary care to avoid collision. Gallagher v. Coney Island, etc., R. Co., 4 N. Y. Supp. 870; Read v. Chicago West Div. R. Co., 8 Ill. App. 517; Lamb v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 33 Mo. App. 489. See also Liddy v. St. Louis R. Co., 40 Mo. 506. In Ryberg v. Portland Cable R. Co. (Oregon, 1892), 29 Pac. Rep. 614, the plaintiff turned on the track suddenly to avoid an obstacle placed in the street by the car company.

In Swain v. Fourteenth St. R. Co., 93 Cal. 179, a police officer with his patrol wagon was driving along the track carrying an injured man. He saw the car coming and hallooed to the driver and tried to turn out, but had to do so slowly on account of the sick man. The car company was held guilty of negligence in causing the collision, since, if the driver had been looking ahead at all, it would have been avoided. See also Quinn v. Atlantic Ave. R. Co., 12 N. Y. Supp. 223 (question for the jury as to negligence of both parties); Berke v. Twenty-third St. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 4 N. Y. Supp. 905; Coughtry v. Willamette St. R. Co., 21 Oregon 245; (team frightened by motor—horses "danced" on the track in front of approaching motor—recovery not allowed); Philadelphia Traction Co. v. Bernheimer, 125 Pa. St. 615; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 487 (very similar case).

In Rascher v. East Detroit, etc., R. Co. (Mich. 1892), 51 N. W. Rep. 463, the plaintiff was driving along the track at night and was run into by an electric car. The first warning of its approach which he had was the glimmer of the lights inside and then it was too late to turn out in time. Had there been a headlight he could have seen the car approaching at the distance of more than a mile. It was held that the plaintiff was not negligent in being on the track and that the other questions of negligence should be submitted to the jury. In such a case evidence is admissible that the public were in the habit of driving on the track, as bearing upon the question of defendant's negligence in running a car without lights. See generally Lyman v. Union R. Co., 114 Mass. 83, as to the duty of the driver of a horse car when checking speed upon meeting a vehicle, to calculate for the sliding of the approaching wheel in the groove of the rail upon turning out.

Failure of Approaching Vehicle to Turn to the Right.—Where a vehicle meeting a car turned to the left instead of to the right as required by the statute, it is proper to refuse to charge that, as the plaintiff was on the wrong side of the street at the time of the accident, the presumption arises that the collision of the vehicle was in fault. But even in such a case there may be ground for holding the street-car company guilty of negligence.¹

5. Frightening Horses.—The right of a company to construct and operate its road along the streets carries with it the right to do whatever is necessary for the successful operation of the road; so that the company is not liable for injuries caused by horses becoming frightened at its cars, unless it can be shown that the fright was caused by some unusual sight or sound which the company was negligent in creating.² But if the use of the particular motor, the noise of which frightens the horse, was unauthorized, the company may be liable; as, for example, where street cars was due to her fault, since a person has a right to travel on any part of the street, provided he regards the rights of others. Spurrier v. Front St. Cable R. Co. (Wash. 1892), 29 Pac. Rep. 346. Compare Suydam v. Grand St., etc., R. Co., 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 375.

Running Street Car on Wrong Track.—Where a street car was proceeding rapidly on the left hand, instead of the right hand track, and came in collision with the plaintiff's team, which was prevented by a heap of snow from avoiding a collision, the refusal of the justice to charge the jury that the car had a right to travel on the left-hand track, was held error, for which the judgment should be reversed, as the mere fact of the car running on the left-hand track was not itself a fault on the part of the defendant which would subject it to damages. Altreuter v. Hudson River R. Co., 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 151.

1. As to the presumption, see Suydam v. Grand St., etc., R. Co., 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 375; North Side St. R. Co. v. Want (Tex. 1891), 15 S. W. Rep. 40.

The driver of a cart which keeps upon the track of a street-car company, and in front of one of its cars, and will not allow the car to pass him, but turns off suddenly, and is upset by the car, is guilty of negligence, and there is no culpability on the part of the company. Adolph v. Central Park, etc., R. Co., 33 N. Y. Super. Ct. 186.

But if the wagon, whether standing still or moving, is so close to the track that it is evident that the car cannot pass it, and a collision occurs, the car company may be liable for the injury occasioned. Koch v. St. Paul City R. Co., 45 Minn. 407. See also generally Geist v. Detroit City R. Co. (Mich. 1892), 51 N. W. Rep. 1112, where it was held that the question of negligence was for the jury.

2. Thus, in Hazel v. People's Pass. R.

Co., 132 Pa. St. 96; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 400, the car had run off the track and was being put back in the usual manner and with the usual noises; a horse standing on the street twenty or thirty feet from the car became frightened, reared up and fell, and was killed. It was held that, in the absence of other evidence of negligence, a recovery could not be allowed. See also Macomber v. Nichols, 34 Mich. 212; 22 Am. Rep. 522.

The frightening of horses by an electric street railway does not make the railway a nuisance. Loneragan v. Lafayette St. R. Co., 15 N. J. Law. Jour. 233.

A team standing near the tracks of a street railway became frightened by the passing of a snow-plow which the railway company was in the habit of using to clear its track, and in their flight, one of the horses was injured and the carriage broken. It appeared that the driver was standing near the door of his carriage, without the reins in his hands, reading a newspaper, and did not see the plow until it was passing him. It was held that the negligence of the driver contributed to the injury, and precluded any recovery by the owner. Gray v. Second Ave. R. Co., 34 N. Y. Super. Ct. 519; aff'd 65 N. Y. 562.

Where a person with full knowledge of the danger, drives a young horse alongside an electric street railway for the express purpose of testing him, to see how he will act, and the horse takes fright at an approaching train and runs away and injures the driver, the driver's negligence is a bar to his recovery. Cornell v. Detroit Electric R. Co., 82 Mich. 495; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 201.

A motor-man on an electric street car is not, as matter of law, bound to stop merely because a horse that is being driven on the same street becomes frightened at the appearance and noise of the car; and the company were operated by steam under consent of the city, but the city had no authority to give such consent, the action of the car company was unlawful, and it became responsible for damages resulting therefrom.¹

6. Snow and Ice on Tracks.—If a track becomes incumbered with snow, the street-car company has the right and it is its duty to remove it.² But in the exercise of this right, due regard must be had to the rights of the public; and if, by dumping the snow from its tracks in a careless or negligent manner, it renders the street unsafe and persons using it are injured thereby, the company may be held liable.³

7. Liability of Lessor and Lessee.—A street railway company has, in the absence of specific legislative consent, no authority to trans-will not be liable for his failure to stop it, unless the circumstances were such as to show a wanton and willful disregard of the driver's safety. Chapman v. Zanesville Street R. Co. (Ohio), 27 Ohio L. J. 70. The motor-man may act upon the presumption that teams not upon or approaching the track, but standing on the side of the street, are hitched, or, if not hitched, are not liable to become frightened and run away.

Sounding the gong of an electric street car to warn persons of its approach, causing horses which were hitched in the street to become frightened and run away, does not constitute negligence rendering the company liable for injuries sustained by the team, where it is not shown that the driver knew the horses were frightened, and the sounding of the gong was not a violation of law or of any city ordinance. Philadelphia Traction Co. v. Bernheimer, 125 Pa. St. 615; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 487; North Side St. R. Co. v. Tippins (Tex. 1890), 14 S. W. Rep. 1067; Hargis v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 75 Tex. 23; Steiner v. Philadelphia Traction Co., 134 Pa. St. 199; 41 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 535. See also for other instances Piollet v. Simmers, 106 Pa. St. 95; 51 Am. Rep. 496; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Taylor, 104 Pa. St. 306; 49 Am. Rep. 580.

1. Stanley v. Davenport, 54 Iowa 463; 37 Am. Rep. 216.

2. The character and extent of this duty may be affected in particular cases by the relative obligation of the company and of the municipality in regard to the repairing and keeping in order of the part of the street covered by the tracks. See supra, this title, Repair of Streets.

The municipality may provide such rules and regulations as to the removal of snow as seem to be demanded by the public interest and convenience; and therefore may pass an ordinance forbidding the removal of snow and ice from any part of the road, although such prohibition may necessitate a temporary disuse of the tracks. Union R. Co. v. Cambridge, 11 Allen (Mass.) 287.

It cannot be charged as a matter of law that the disposition of snow cleared from the track in a public street in such a way as to raise the road above the level of the track was unlawful. Wallace v. Detroit City R. Co., 58 Mich. 231.

3. Removal of Snow.—In removing the snow from its tracks, the company is bound to use such means as not needlessly to interfere with the proper use of the street. If an extraordinary storm occurs, the company must make extraordinary efforts. Bowen v. Detroit City R. Co., 54 Mich. 496; 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 131; 52 Am. Rep. 822. See also Dixon v. Brooklyn City, etc., R. Co., 100 N. Y. 170; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 203. It must be careful not to interfere with the natural flow of water from the street, either by obstructing the gutter or otherwise; but it is not bound to haul the snow away, and is only liable where it has failed to exercise ordinary care. Short v. Baltimore City Pass. Co., 50 Md. 73; 33 Am. Rep. 298.

In Broadway, etc., R. Co. v. New York, 49 Hun (N. Y.) 126, it was decided that the Broadway and Seventh Avenue Railroad Company was not authorized by its charter, which provided that it should run as often as the convenience of passengers should require, and that the mayor and comfer its property and franchises to another company.¹ Therefore, if an injury occurs from the operation of the road by the lessee, mon council should do no act to hinder or obstruct the operation of the railroad, to throw snow from its track, for the purpose of keeping it open on the street along its lines, to such an extent as to impede or prevent public travel thereon.

Where the street is so narrow as not to admit of two teams passing each other on either side of the car track, it is negligence for the company to throw snow from its track with a snow-plow so as to cause a ridge of snow on either side of the track so high when packed down by travel as to upset a sleigh, necessarily going thereon in turning out to allow a team to pass. Somerville v. City R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 719; Laughlin v. Street R. Co., 62 Mich. 220; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 377. See also Prince v. Twenty-third St. R. Co., 1 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 71; Elliott on Roads and Streets, p. 581; Troy v. Troy, etc., R. Co., 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 270; aff'd 49 N. Y. 657.

In Mahoney v. Metropolitan R. Co., 104 Mass. 73, the plaintiff sought to recover for injuries to himself and horse, caused by the alleged negligence of the defendant in piling up snow on each side of the track. It appeared that he was driving a sled heavily loaded with lumber and drawn by two horses, and, seeing the danger in crossing the defendant's tracks, approached them in a cautious manner, using all the care possible; but when partly across, the front runners of his sled being much lower than the hind ones, owing to the bank of hard snow, the load became disengaged and fell forward on the plaintiff and his horses. The court held that the fact of his seeing the obstruction and knowing its dangerous character, was not conclusive evidence of negligence on his part, and that it was a question for the jury to determine whether he was justified in attempting to cross the tracks and whether he used due care in doing so.

So, where an injury was caused by a switch laid down by a street railway company in an improper manner and obscured from view, by reason of the company using salt on its tracks, which had caused the slush to run down and cover the switch, it was held that the general question of negligence by the railway company was properly submitted to the jury. Wooley v. Grand St., etc., R. Co., 83 N. Y. 122; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 398.

1. See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 237; FRANCHISES, vol. 8, p. 634 et seq.; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 895; Braslin v. Somerville Horse R. Co., 145 Mass. 64; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 406; Fanning v. Osborne, 102 N. Y. 441; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 252; Middlesex R. Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 115 Mass. 347.

By statute in New York, directors have an implied authority to lease the road, and the assent of stockholders is not essential. Metropolitan El. R. Co. v. Manhattan R. Co., 11 Daly (N. Y.) 373; 14 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 103; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 1, holding otherwise was overruled in Beveridge v. New York El. R. Co., 112 N. Y. 1; 39 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 199. In each case the subject of leases of elevated roads was exhaustively discussed.

One street railway corporation leased its railway to another, which covenanted to assume all the liabilities and burdens imposed on the lessor by its charter. On the refusal of the lessee to comply with an order of the town to alter the track, the town revoked part of the location and threatened to revoke the rest. It was held that the lessor could not maintain a bill in equity against the lessee to compel it to alter the track; the remedy being to alter it and sue at law. Medford, etc., R. Co. v. Middlesex R. Co., 111 Mass. 232.

In Fisher v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 34 Hun (N. Y.) 433, it is laid down that although a railroad corporation cannot without legislative consent lease its road to an individual, yet it may, under the authority conferred by New York Laws of 1839, ch. 218, lease its road to another corporation, and that a person injured while the lessee is operating the road and is in full possession of it cannot proceed against the lessor. See also Hart v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 4 La. Ann. 261. In an action against the lessee of a street railway company for injuries caused by negligence in the construction of its tracks it was held that it was wholly immaterial that the lease under which it was operating the road was contrary to the statutes, and that the lessee was liable notwithstanding. Feital v. Middlesex R. Co., 109 Mass. 398.

the injured party may recover from either the lessor or the lessee, both being equally liable.¹

XIII. ELECTRIC RAILWAYS.—Electric street railways are embraced within the rule of law that street railways do not constitute an additional burden on the street.²

Controversies have arisen from the fact that the electric current applied in the operation of the electric street railway has affected injuriously the action of neighboring telephone wires. Although this difficulty is a new one, the tendency on the part of the courts is not to recognize this difficulty as conferring a right of action or a right to an injunction in favor of the telephone.³

1. For the reasons for this rule of law see RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 897 et seq., where the subject is fully discussed. See also Railroad Co. v. Hambleton, 40 Ohio St. 496; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 126, a case involving the raising of the grade of a street; Abbott v. Johnstown, etc., Horse R. Co., 80 N. Y. 28. The rule of the text is sustained in Ricketts v. Birmingham St. R. Co., 85 Ala. 600; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 12; and it is there held that the injured passenger, having sued the original company (the lessor), need not show that the railroad was actually operated by such company at the time of the injury. The rule applies in a suit against the lessor, even though the lessee agrees to assume all liability and to defend all suits brought against the original company, and to pay all judgments entered against it. Braslin v. Somerville Horse R. Co., 145 Mass. 64; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 406.

A party was injured by being thrown from his wagon by a collision with a car owned by one company but drawn by the horses of another company and driven by the latter company's driver. In a suit against the latter company recovery was allowed. Weyant v. New York, etc., R. Co., 3 Duer (N. Y.) 360. See also Wasmer v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 80 N. Y. 212; 1 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 122 (defective track in street); Gilmore v. Utica, 121 N. Y. 561; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 225.

2. See infra, this title, Ordinary Railroads in Streets and Highways.

3. See TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES, where the law of the subject will be treated fully. See also Keasbey on Electric Wires; Thompson on Electricity. See also the following cases where this subject is touched upon with more or less fullness: Cumberland Telephone, etc., Co. v. United Electric R. Co., 42 Fed. Rep. 273; 43 Am. & Eng.

R. Cas. 194, where Brown, J., indulges in an elaborate opinion on the subject; Hudson River Telephone Co. v. Watervliet Turnpike, etc., Co., 56 Hun (N. Y.) 67; 61 Hun (N. Y.) 141; 121 N. Y. 397; Cincinnati Inclined R. Co. v. City, etc., Tel. Co., 48 Ohio St. 390; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 588; 12 L. R. A. 534; East Tennessee Telephone Co. v. Chattanooga Electric St. R. Co. (Ch. Ct. of Hamilton County, Tenn.), 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 562, n.; Nebraska Telephone Co. v. York Gas, etc., Co., 27 Neb. 284; 30 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 547.

In Railway Co. v. Telephone Assoc., 48 Ohio St. 390, the telephone company sought to enjoin the railway company from operating its cars by means of electricity, whereby the franchise of the telephone company was greatly impaired by reason of the railway company using a grounded circuit for its wires. The court held that using the earth for a return circuit did not become the peculiar and exclusive franchise of the telephone company by reason of its prior use, and that the superior easement which the public had in the streets could not be made subservient to the telephone company when admitted on the highway, without the clearest expression of legislative intent. In delivering the opinion of the court, Dickman, J., said: "As a general rule, an occupation of the streets otherwise than for travel and transportation is presumptively inferior and subservient to the dominant easement of the public for highway purposes; for, if not so, the primary object of a dedication and appropriation might be largely defeated. And the fact that permission is granted to occupy the streets or highways for a purpose other than travel, does not confer a prior and paramount right to occupy them to the exclusion of their use

The law relating to electric street railways in other respects is not peculiar, and is embraced in the treatment of the general subject.¹

XIV. UNDERGROUND STREET RAILWAYS.—See UNDERGROUND RAILWAYS.

XV. ELEVATED RAILROADS—1. Under General Railroad Law.—The first elevated railroads in the State of *New York*² were built unfor travel in a mode different from what obtained when such permission was given. The main purpose of streets or highways being to facilitate travel and transportation, new and improved agencies for effecting that purpose must be presumed to have been in contemplation in addition to those in existence when the ways were established. To this improved agency devised for the convenience and advantage of the community in general, the franchise of the telephone company to occupy the streets for carrying on its business must be secondary and subordinate."

1. Injury Caused by Electric Shock.—A passenger on an electric street railway line, in passing from one car to another, came necessarily in contact with the iron handles of the car, which had become heavily charged with electricity, by reason of defective insulation of the wires conducting the electricity for the motive power of the cars. In swinging around from the step of front car to that of the "trailer," with a hand on the handle of each car, his body formed, in this manner, a circuit for the passage of the electrical current, and he received a severe shock which rendered him insensible; and, being unable to loosen his hold, he was dragged some distance and severely injured. It was contended by counsel that the company had no knowledge of the peril to which its passengers were thus exposed in passing from one car to another; but it was held, that as the company had the means of readily ascertaining the escape of electricity from the works of the car, that the knowledge must be imputed to them, that if it escaped, the iron handles of the platform were liable to become charged therewith; and that the plaintiff was not, as a matter of law, guilty of contributory negligence in stepping from the platform of one car to the platform of another when the cars were in motion, there being no rule prohibiting passengers from doing so, nor any caution against the practice which has been frequently indulged in both by the plaintiff and other passengers; and that the question was properly submitted to the jury. Burt v. Douglass County St. R. Co., 83 Wis. 229.

Negligence; Want of Evidence.—In an action brought by an employé of an electric street railway company, for an injury caused by the alleged negligence of the company in not providing their motors with a "resistance coil," it was held that the fact that there was no evidence produced to show that at the time of the injury the device called a "resistance coil" had been discovered or invented, and none that it had been recognized as a useful improvement, justified the granting of a new trial by the court, because this question had been submitted to the jury as a ground upon which a recovery might be had. Lorimer v. St. Paul City R. Co., 48 Minn. 391.

2. There is very little elevated railroad law outside of New York. The recent adoption of the elevated system in the city of Chicago has not yet been productive of much litigation in the courts of Illinois. In Lieberman v. Chicago, etc., Rapid Transit R. Co., 141 Ill. 140, it appears that said company was incorporated in January, 1888, under the general laws of the State of Illinois, and is operating an elevated railroad in the city of Chicago. The case establishes the right of a company so organized to build and operate an elevated road, and to condemn land for that purpose.

Maryland.—Art. 23, § 186, Pub. Gen. Laws of Maryland, provides that no elevated railroad shall be constructed in the city of Baltimore except under a special charter. In Koch v. North Ave. R. Co. (Md. 1892), 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 401, it was held that a cable line elevated twenty feet above the surface of the street upon a structure similar to those in use in the city of New York, and to be so elevated for the distance of three-quarters of a mile along the street, for the purpose of avoiding danger from a steam railroad on the surface of the street, was with-der special charters and under the general railroad law of 1850 and the acts amendatory thereof.¹ But in 1875, the Rapid-transit act, for the regulation of elevated railroads, was passed;² which was supplemented by the Rapid-transit act of 1891, having reference to elevated railroads in cities of more than one million inhabitants.³ Elevated railroads may not now be constructed under the general railroad laws of the State of New York. Authority to build and operate them is to be found only in the rapid-transit in the prohibition of the act, and could not be authorized by the common council of the city of Baltimore.

Kentucky.—In Fulton v. Short Route R. Transfer Co., 85 Ky. 640, it was held that a company chartered to build a "railroad" merely, had the right to elevate its tracks whenever the character of the country made it convenient or essential.

1. In Metropolitan El. R. Co. v. Manhattan R. Co., 14 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 103; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 1, Van Brunt, J., gives, at length, the history of the elevated-railroad system in the city of New York.

2. The New York act of June 18, 1875, ch. 606, generally known as the Rapid-transit act, provides among other things, substantially the following: Upon the application of fifty reputable householders and tax-payers of any county, verified upon oath, showing the need of a steam railway, etc., the supervisors of said county shall appoint five commissioners; but if the proposed railway is wholly within a city, the mayor thereof shall appoint said commissioners, who shall organize themselves into a board with appropriate officers. Said commissioners shall determine the necessity of the proposed road; and, if the same is decided to be necessary, shall fix the route over which it shall be built, prepare the plans for its construction and appropriate articles of association for a company to build the same, and shall fix the time for the completion of the road. Such road shall not be built without the consent of the local authorities having control of the streets over which it is proposed to build it and the consent of the owners of one-half in value of the abutting property. If the consent of such owners cannot be obtained, the general term of the supreme court may, upon application, appoint three commissioners, and if they, after a due hearing of all parties concerned, determine that such road ought to be built, their report, after confirmation by the court, shall be taken in lieu of the consent of the property owners, as provided by art. 3, § 18, const. of New York. The commissioners appointed by the mayor shall also, after due notice to all parties concerned, ascertain and determine the aggregate pecuniary damages arising from the diminution in value of the abutting property, and no corporation shall begin the construction of such road before depositing with some trust company money or securities equal in value to such aggregate damages. The company organized for the construction of such road may acquire and hold such real estate as is necessary for the maintenance and operation of the road; and for the purpose of acquiring title to the same may present to the supreme court a petition, containing certain averments prescribed by the act, for the appointment of five commissioners of appraisal, who, after due investigation, shall report to the court the value of the property sought to be acquired, together with a record of their proceedings. Upon the coming in of said report, the company may, after notice to all parties, move for its confirmation by the court. After such confirmation and the payment of all damages and costs, the company may enter upon and take possession of the land.

3. The New York Rapid-transit act of 1891 makes some material changes in the law. It provides, among other things, that, in cities of more than one million inhabitants, the commissioners appointed by the mayor shall be organized as a permanent board of rapid-transit railroad commissioners in and for the city for which they are appointed; provides for their organization, and prescribes their duties; empowers them, upon their own motion, to consider and determine the necessity of building new rapid-transit railways; and provides for the sale, at public auction and for the benefit of acts provided for that purpose.¹ The rapid-transit acts are general in their operation and were enacted for the purpose of obviating the constitutional provision against the enactment of any private or local bill granting to any corporation, association, or individual the right to lay down railroad tracks.² But it has been held that private or local acts amending the charters of such elevated railroad companies as existed before the passage of the general rapid-transit acts, restricting or regulating the powers previously possessed by such companies, or waiving a forfeiture of their franchises, were not within the constitutional inhibition against special legislation.³

2. Under Rapid-transit Acts — a. CONSTITUTIONALITY. — The general rapid-transit act of the State of New York was vigorously attacked in the courts on the ground that it delegated legislative powers to the rapid-transit commission, and on the further ground that it was not a general law, and, for that reason, was unconstitutional; but the act was upheld against both objections.⁴

b. RAPID-TRANSIT COMMISSION. — The commissioners appointed by the county supervisors, or the mayor, as the case may be, must fix the route or routes of the proposed railway and decide upon a plan for the construction thereof before the owners of the abutting property may be called upon for their consent; and such consent is not withheld, within the meaning of the act, unless these conditions are complied with.⁵ The act provides that the

the city, of the privilege and franchise to construct and operate any such road.

1. Schaper v. Brooklyn, etc., Cable R. Co., 124 N. Y. 630; People's Rapid Transit Co. v. Dash, 125 N. Y. 93; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 114.

2. New York Const., art. 3, § 18, adopted Nov. 3, 1874.

3. In re New York El. R. Co., 70 N. Y. 327; 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 401, affirming 7 Hun (N. Y.) 239; In re Gilbert El. R. Co., 70 N. Y. 361; 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 434, affirming 9 Hun (N. Y.) 303.

4. In re New York El. R. Co., 70 N. Y. 327; 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 401; In re Gilbert El. R. Co., 70 N. Y. 361; 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 434. In the former of these cases, Earl, J., after enumerating the duties of the commissioners, said: "The act rests upon the legislative will, and in no way depends for its validity upon the action of the commissioners. Corporations organized under the act derive their franchises from the legislature, and in no proper sense from the commissioners; the commissioners perform no legislative acts; they enact no laws; they simply perform administrative acts in carrying the law into effect and applying it." On the second point, he said: "It may be conceded, as claimed by the learned counsel for the appellants, that the practical effect and operation of this law is and must be in every instance local, special and private. Such is the practical effect and operation of all the general laws for the formation of corporations, except such as are in their nature public. Their object is the formation of private and local corporations, and the command of the constitution is that such corporations shall be formed under general laws. Under this act railway corporations may be formed, are authorized to be formed in every county, town, village and city in the state, and fifty householders and tax-payers may, anywhere, at any time, institute proceedings for the formation of a corporation under the act. The act is not stripped of the general character thus conferred upon it by the circumstance that local commissioners are to be appointed to carry it into effect."

5. In Re New York Cable R. Co., 109 N. Y. 43, the court said: "The jurisdiction of the general term of the commissioners appointed by the mayor shall fix a time within which the road shall be completed. And where the commissioners named a time, to begin to run from the date of obtaining the requisite consent of the property owners and local authorities, or, in case of a failure to obtain such consent, from the time of the confirmation of the report of the supreme court commissioners, it was held to be a substantial compliance with the requirements of the act.¹

The commissioners appointed by the supervisors of the county or the mayor of the city, are also required to determine the plan upon which the railroad shall be constructed. Hence, under the acts, they must determine whether the railroad shall be an underground road, an elevated road, or a surface road;² and the plans supreme court to appoint commissioners, depends for its exercise upon a refusal of the property owners to consent. The act makes special provisions for obtaining the consent of the owners of one-half in value of the property bounded on the routes of the proposed railway, and for a public notice by the mayor's commissioners inviting the submission of plans for the construction and operation of such railway, and appointing a time and place for a meeting to decide upon such plans. The original plans decided upon by the commissioners were adjudged to be in violation of the statute, and not plans at all within its plain intent of requirements. Hence, the action of property owners in refusing their consent thereto can in no sense form any basis for petitioner's present application. The property owners and the local authorities, when applied to for their consent, must have offered to them as a necessary prerequisite to an intelligent judgment, plans which leave no essential or material portions to the discretion of the company's directors. The present amended articles embodying new plans for construction of petitioner's railways have not been submitted for the inspection and examination of the property owners, nor has their consent been sought for as the act requires. Consequently, the conditions for an exercise of power by the supreme court in this matter do not exist." See also In re Suburban Rapid Transit Co., 38 Hun (N.Y.) 553.

In Re Board of Rapid Transit Com'rs (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 320, it was held that it was not necessary for the commissioners to present to each property owner the maps, reports and statements adopted by them before asking his consent to the adopted plan, but that it was sufficient if public notice were given of the adoption of the plans and an opportunity afforded for the property owners to consult them.

1. In New York Cable Co. v. New York, 104 N. Y. 1, the time fixed by the commissioners for the completion of the railroad began to run at the date of obtaining the consents required, and no time was limited for obtaining such consents. It was urged that the commissioners had not complied with the requirements of the statute in fixing the time within which the road should be completed, but the court held otherwise, Rapallo, J., saying: "I have with some hesitation come to the conclusion that the commissioners substantially complied in this respect with the rapid-transit act. That it is reasonable to consider that the intent of the act was that companies formed under the act should be limited in respect only to time during which it was possible for them to prosecute the work, and that time when legal barriers existed to their so doing, should not be counted." On this point all the judges concurred. See also In re King's County El. R. Co., 105 N. Y. 97.

2. New York Cable Co. v. New York, 104 N. Y. 1, 32. In this case, the plans and specifications of the commissioners laid out several routes. Of these, the principal were to be surface roads, but several others were to be surface or elevated roads at the option of the company. The number of tracks was also left to the company, as was also the height of the elevated structure, the location of the columns, and the general plan of the structure. The power to erect stations and platforms was not defined or limited. Many must also disclose, as far as reasonably practicable, to what extent the streets are to be encroached upon, and the abutting property thereon affected, and the means of transportation to be used.¹ But it is not necessary that the plan should state with absolute precision the extent to which the street shall be encroached upon, or the exact locality of the railroad in the street. It is sufficient if the plan is a general plan, so prepared as to give property owners notice of the general character of the encroachments which are to be made on their property, and revealing the general plan of construction and the general mode of operation of the proposed railway.²

c. CONSENT OF PROPERTY OWNERS AND LOCAL AUTHORITIES.—Until the consent of the local authorities and of the property owners, or in lieu thereof, the determination of the commissioners appointed by the supreme court, is obtained, the company is not entitled to an injunction against the construction of another road in the street.³ When the consent of the local authorities of a city is duly given, the right to use the designated property of the city vests irrevocably in the company, and a subsequent purchaser from the city of abutting property holds subject to the use of the street by the railroad company.⁴ The consent of a property owner to the construction of an elevated railroad in front of his premises, is, if it be unqualified and if he does not own the soil of the street in front of his premises, not only irrevocable after it has been acted upon, but is a release and abandonment of any easements he may have in the street. After such consent, the abutter is not entitled to claim damages consequent upon, or compensation for, the erection and operation of the railroad.⁵ The local authorities of a city have no right to attach to their consent conditions subsequent relating to matters over which the legislature and commissioners have entire control, and no attempt to do so will operate to annul the consent once given.⁶ other defects of a similar nature existed, and it was held that the commissioners had not complied with the statute.

1. New York Cable Co. v. New York, 104 N. Y. 1, 33. The sufficiency of plans of rapid-transit commissioners was also passed upon in the matter of Kings Co. El. R. Co., 112 N. Y. 47, and the plans in question in that case were sustained.

2. In re Board of Rapid-Transit R. Com'rs (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 320.

3. New York Cable R. Co. v. Forty-second St., etc., R. Co., 13 Daly (N. Y.) 118.

The report of the supreme court commissioners does not operate as the consent of the property owners until it is confirmed by the court. In re

Kings County El. R. Co., 82 N. Y. 102; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 431.

4. Herzog v. New York El. R. Co., 14 N. Y. Supp. 296.

5. White v. Manhattan R. Co., 139 N. Y. 19, rev'g 18 N. Y. Supp. 396.

But, in this case, it was held if the abutting property is owned by tenants in common, who are also partners in business, and use the property for partnership purposes, one of the partners has no implied authority to bind the firm and his co-tenants by executing the consent in the firm name.

6. In Re Kings County El. R. Co., 105 N. Y. 97, it appeared that the common council of Brooklyn, in giving its consent to the building of a road imposed, among others, conditions that the city assessors might arbitrate all

d. SUPREME COURT COMMISSIONERS.—After the adoption of the plans by the rapid-transit commissioners and a failure to obtain the consent of the requisite number of property holders, the mayor's commissioners may make application to the general term of the supreme court for the appointment of three commissioners to determine the necessity for the road,¹ and under the act of 1875, notice of the application need not be given to the property owner.² It is the duty of these commissioners to determine whether or not the road planned by the mayor's commissioners ought to be built, and if they decide in the affirmative, their determination, when confirmed by the court, shall be taken in lieu of the consent of the property owners;³ they shall give public notice of the time and place of their first meeting;⁴ they shall give a full and fair hearing to all parties concerned, but the manner of conducting said hearing is largely discretionary.⁵ These commissioners have damages caused to property owners by the construction of the road, and that the time within which different portions of the road should be constructed should be different from that prescribed by the commissioners. It was held that these conditions were unreasonable and unlawful. The court said: "They relate to matters over which the legislature and commissioners have entire control. The statute determines how the damages of the landowner shall be ascertained, and confers upon the commissioners sole power and jurisdiction to determine when the various portions of the road shall be completed. Their action is as the action of the legislature and can neither be superseded nor in any way affected by that of any other body. . . . Again, it may be observed of these conditions imposed by the local authorities or accompanying their consent, as was said of the other and much more obvious terms, that they are in no sense conditions precedent to be performed before the consent takes effect and so become a component part of the scheme, but are conditions subsequent; the non-performance of which in the future shall, in the language of the resolution, 'render the consent void.' The power to recall a consent is not given by the act of 1875. Neither can it, by the operation of any cause set on foot by the local authorities, when once given, be annulled."

1. In Re Kings County El. R. Co., 18 Hun (N. Y.) 378, reversed on other grounds, 78 N. Y. 383, it was held that under the Rapid-transit act of 1875, the application might also have been made by the company. See Laws 1891, ch. 4, § 5, which provides that the board of rapid-transit commissioners may make the application in its own name; and in view of the fact that section 7 of that act provides for a sale of the franchise after obtaining the necessary consents, it would seem that no company can acquire any interest in the enterprise in cities where the act is in force until after the confirmation of the report by the general term.

2. In re New York El. R. Co., 7 Hun (N. Y.) 241; affirmed 70 N. Y. 327. But Laws of 1891, ch. 4, § 5 (applicable to cities of more than one million inhabitants), provide for two weeks' notice of such application by publication in the daily newspapers of the city.

3. Art. 3, § 18, Const. of New York; Laws 1875, ch. 606, § 4, as amended by Laws 1881, ch. 485, § 1; Laws 1891, ch. 4, § 5.

4. In Re New York El. R. Co., 7 Hun (N. Y.) 242; affirmed 70 N. Y. 327, it was held that a notice by publication in seven daily newspapers given eleven days before the meeting and posted in one hundred and fourteen conspicuous places along the line of the proposed road, was sufficient. Section 5, ch. 4, Laws of 1891, provides that the commissioners shall, within ten days after their appointment, cause public notice to be given in a manner directed by the general term of the supreme court of the time of their first meeting, and that they may adjourn from time to time until all their business is transacted.

5. In re New York El. R. Co., 7

no power to review the proceedings of the mayor's commissioners, but of several routes proposed by the latter they may select some and reject others;¹ and if, with the consent of the company, they confine the construction of the road to one of several methods proposed by the mayor's commissioners, the property owners have no right to object.² After a due hearing they shall report their determination, together with the record of the proceedings and evidence, to the general term of the supreme court for confirmation. The court will examine the whole proceeding and pass upon the sufficiency of the facts to warrant the determination. It is within the discretion of the court to confirm or set aside the report, and the court of appeals will not review the decision.³ This is a distinct judicial proceeding which is not subject to collateral attack in any subsequent proceeding.⁴

c. RIGHT TO ACQUIRE REAL ESTATE.—Elevated railroad companies have the right to acquire such real estate as is necessary for the maintenance and operation of their roads, and, when unable to agree with the owners as to the value of such land, may obtain it by condemnation proceedings, as provided by statute.⁵

Hun (N. Y.) 242; affirmed 70 N. Y. 237; 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 401. In this case it was held that it was not necessary that the witnesses appear before the commissioners for cross-examination, but that the proofs might be furnished by affidavit.

1. In re New York El. R. Co., 70 N. Y. 327; 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 401; affirming 7 Hun (N. Y.) 239.

2. In re New York El. R. Co., 70 N. Y. 327; 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 401; affirming 7 Hun (N. Y.) 239.

3. In Re Kings County El. R. Co., 18 Hun (N. Y.) 378. It was held that the determination of the two sets of commissioners was conclusive upon the court as to the necessity of constructing the road upon the route selected, and that the court was confined to an inquiry as to whether the proceedings were regular and fair and whether the determination was reasonable and just. The case was reversed on other grounds in 78 N. Y. 383, and came again before the general term of the supreme court, 20 Hun (N. Y.) 217, where it was held that it was the duty of the court to pass upon the whole case upon its merits and to confirm the report, if the scheme could be accomplished with equity and fairness, and to refuse to confirm it if this could not be done. The report was not confirmed and the company appealed from the order. The appeal was dismissed, 82 N. Y. 95, on the ground that the order was not appealable, but the court took occasion to say (page 102): "We are convinced that in view of the evil to be guarded against, and for the effectual protection of private rights so threatened as to need a specific constitutional provision for their safeguard, it was meant that the general term, in harmony with the analogies we have produced, should have the power and duty to review the whole case and to pass upon the sufficiency of the facts and circumstances to warrant the determination of the commissioners that there ought to be a street railroad in any municipality when there was not in favor of it one-half of the property owners to be affected." See also In re Atlantic Ave. El. R. Co., 58 Hun (N. Y.) 609.

4. In re Union El. R. Co., 112 N. Y. 61.

5. New York Laws 1875, ch. 606, § 17, provides for the appointment of five commissioners of appraisal upon the petition of the company to the supreme court. Said commissioners shall proceed to determine the value of the land sought to be condemned in the manner provided in section 20 of said act. Section 21 provides for the confirmation of the report of the commissioners by the court, and section 22 provides for an appeal from the order confirming or refusing to confirm said report.

Laws 1891, ch. 4, § 23, provide:

f. LOCATION AND CONSTRUCTION.—If the location of the main line be invalid for want of compliance with the law, the location of branch lines will also be invalid.¹ And a company which is authorized to construct a main line and branches may not abandon the main line and construct the branches.² If a company is given a choice of routes, an election of a certain route is binding and puts an end to its power to change the route.³

An elevated railway company has no right to project its stations or stairways into any streets except those over which it is authorized to lay its tracks, and an injunction may be had to restrain the company from extending its structures beyond the prescribed lines even in the slightest degree.⁴ And if the structure is not built in the manner and of the material provided by law, it may be abated as a public nuisance.⁵ But a court of equity will not, as a rule, interfere in details of the location and construction unless a plain case of irreparable injury can be established.⁶

3. Recovery of Damages by Owners of Abutting Property—a. RIGHT TO RECOVER.—The principal question to which the construction and operation of elevated railroads has given rise refers to the right of owners of property abutting on the streets occupied by such railroads to recover damages for injuries to their property resulting from the maintenance and operation of the road. When the question first came up in the trial court it was held, in sup-

"Every such corporation shall have the right to acquire and hold such real estate or easement or other interest therein or rights appertaining thereto as may be necessary to enable it to construct, maintain and operate the said railway or railways, and such as may be necessary for stations, depots, engine house, car houses, machine shops, and other appurtenances specified in the articles of association. And in case any such corporation cannot agree with the owner or owners of such property, it shall have the right to acquire title to the same in pursuance of the terms of and in the manner prescribed in title 1 of chapter 23 of the Code of Civil Procedure known as the condemnation law." See also, infra, this title, Eminent Domain Proceedings.

1. In re Metropolitan Transit Co., 111 N. Y. 588; affirming 48 Hun (N. Y.) 620.

2. Goelet v. Metropolitan Transit Co., 48 Hun (N. Y.) 520.

3. Negus v. Brooklyn, 10 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 180.

4. Adler v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 28 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 198; Mattlage v. New York El. R. Co., 14 Daly (N. Y.) 1; In re Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 506.

In Adler v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 28 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 198, the court awarded an injunction requiring the defendant company to remove a station projecting two feet into a side street, saying that the doctrine de minimus non curat lex did not apply to acts of wrongful trespassers.

But a private citizen may not maintain an action to abate such a nuisance unless he is specially injured thereby. Adler v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 138 N. Y. 173.

5. Porth v. Manhattan R. Co., 134 N. Y. 615, affirming 58 N. Y. Super. Ct. 366.

6. In Schmitz v. Union El. R. Co., 50 Hun (N. Y.) 407, it appeared that the elevated road if constructed as proposed would, in passing from one street to another, make a considerable curve at one corner, crossing the sidewalk in front of plaintiff's property, and within a few feet of his store building, and cutting off part of a house on the other corner. By cutting deeper into this house, the sidewalk could be saved. It was held that equity would not interfere, the radius of the curve being the same in either case; also that the fact that the house was owned by the company construct-posed conformity with the previous decisions in the state, that the landowner had no right of recovery. The court of appeals, however, took a different view, and has constantly held in all the cases which have arisen that abutting property owners, even though they do not own the fee in the street, have a right to recover from a railroad company damages for the infringement of their easements in the street of light, air, and access. The cases are reviewed at length in the note.¹

ing the road was immaterial. See also Adler v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 138 N. Y. 173.

1. The Story Case.—The first case arising in the court of appeals was that of Story v. New York El. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 122; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 596; 43 Am. Rep. 146; 11 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 236, reversing 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 478. The plaintiff, Story, held a lot on Front street ultimately, by virtue of a grant from the city. The deed contained a covenant that the streets should "forever thereafter continue and be for the free and common passage of, and as perfect streets and ways for, the inhabitants of the city and all others passing and returning through or by the same in like manner as the other streets of the city now are or lawfully ought to be." The trial court found, as a matter of fact, that the structure would to some extent obscure the light of the abutting premises; that the passing trains would also do this, and give to the light a flickering character objectionable for business purposes, and to some extent impair the general usefulness of the plaintiff's premises; that "the line of columns abridges the sidewalks and interferes with the street as a thoroughfare where such columns are located; that the fronts of the abutting buildings will be exposed to observation from passengers in the passing trains, and the privacy of those in the second or upper stories invaded." It also found that these things would be of a constant and continuous character, tending to occasion incidental damages to the plaintiff's premises and to depreciate its value. The railroad company made defense upon the ground that its acts were authorized by the legislature, and therefore that whatever injuries were occasioned to property were damnum absque injuria. The cases of People v. Kerr, 27 N. Y. 188, and Kellinger v. Forty-second St., etc., R. Co., 50 N. Y. 206 and others were relied upon. These cases held that the construction of a horse railroad along a street would afford no ground for the recovery of damages. The court of appeals, however, held that the plaintiff had a right to recover. The dedication of the street by the municipality—the covenant in the deed referring to the construction of a street and its maintenance—secured to the plaintiff the right and privilege to have it forever kept open as such. The value of the lot was enhanced by such dedication, and it must be presumed that the grantee paid and the grantor received an enlarged price by reason of this added value. It was not necessary that there should be any special or express grant; the dedication, the sale made with reference to it, and the consideration paid, were in themselves sufficient. The owner of the lot, then, acquired an easement in the street, although the fee remained in the city. The extent of this easement was to have the street kept open so that from it an access might be had to the lot, and light and air furnished across the open way. So that it having been established as a fact that the elevated structure would interfere with this arrangement, the plaintiff had a right to recover damages to the extent of the injury suffered by him. The court by Danforth, J., delivered an elaborate opinion, reviewing exhaustively the authorities on the subject. Tracy, J., delivered a concurring opinion, in the course of which he said, after stating the facts as to the character of the elevated structure: "Can the street be lawfully appropriated to such a structure, without making compensation to the plaintiff for his easement therein? This is a question of power. If the legislature has power to authorize such a structure without compensation, its exercise cannot be regulated by the courts. If one road may be authorized to be constructed upon two series of iron columns placed in the street, another may be authorized to be supported upon brick columns, or upon brick arches spanning the street. If a superstructure may be authorized which spans the entire carriageway at fifteen feet above the bed of the street one may be authorized which spans the entire street, from building to building, thus excluding light and air from the street and from the property abutting thereon. Thus an open street would be converted into a covered way, and so filled with columns or other permanent structures as to be practically impassable for vehicles. The city undertook and agreed with the plaintiff's grantors that Front street, when constructed by them, should forever thereafter continue and be kept as a public street in like manner as other streets of the same city now are or lawfully ought to be. This fixes with definiteness and precision the character of the street which the parties to the contract intended to secure." The decision was not unanimous, Earl, Miller, and Finch, JJ., dissenting, the first in a lengthy opinion. But the case must stand as authority, it having been cited and approved and its decision adhered to in many subsequent cases. The majority of the court expressed the opinion that the grants from the city to Story's grantors conveyed the fee to the middle of the street, the city merely reserving an easement—i. e., the right of the public to use the land as a street. But the decision did not rest upon this point, as the court took the view that Story had a right to recover damages, even though the fee of the street was in the city. See also Mattlage v. New York El. R. Co., 11 N. Y. Supp. 482; Taylor v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. 311.

The Lahr Case.—The next important case which arose was that of Lahr v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 269. The only difference between this and the Story case was that the street upon which Lahr's lot abutted was opened under the statute of 1813, which permitted the taking by the city of lands for streets, and the assessing of the cost of improvements upon the property benefited; there were no express covenants such as existed in the Story case. The court held, however, that the statute (of 1813), taken in connection with the trust declared therein, was equivalent to a contract or covenant by the city with the adjacent lot owners that the streets opened under the statute should forever remain open and public streets, and that the necessary consequence was that they could not be appropriated to other than street uses to the injury of abutting owners except when due compensation was made. The court reviewed the decision in the Story case, and held that although it was pronounced by a divided court, it must be considered as decisive upon all points involved therein, not only upon those which it expressly decided, but also upon such as logically come within the principles there determined. The court then went on to detail the questions determined by that case. It was held that it was not essential to the acquisition of an abutter's right in the street, that the land in the street should have been originally taken from him, as in any event he is a party to proceedings to appropriate the land for the same, and liable to be assessed for its benefits, and therefore entitled to enjoy them. See Stevens v. New York El. R. Co., 57 N. Y. Super. Ct. 416.

Kane v. Elevated R. Co.—In another case, Kane v. New York El. R. Co., 125 N. Y. 186; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137; and in Abendroth v. Manhattan R. Co., 122 N. Y. 1; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 126, still another phase of the general question was presented. Pearl street, on which the plaintiff's lot was situated, was opened prior to 1664, and passed under the control of Great Britain upon the capitulation in 1664. There was no evidence of the circumstances attending the opening of this street, or whether the land in the street at the time it was laid out was public or private property. The railroad company contended that under this state of facts, the civil law, which was the law of Holland, should govern; that under such law, the sovereign was vested with the absolute title to the soil of all streets and highways, and that no private rights or easements existed therein; so that an owner of land adjacent to a street acquired no rights by reason of his adjacency, or from the fact that he had built upon the street, in reliance upon its continued existence as a street; but that it was competent for the sovereign to close the street, or to convert it at any time to any different public use, without making compensation. The court held that, assuming the powers of the sovereign under the civil law to be as broad as the railroad contended, and that the English crown succeeded to the same powers as to the streets of

New York city open prior to 1664, as existed in the sovereignty under the civil law, it still remained to be considered whether these powers had since been modified by grant, covenant, legislation, or otherwise, so as to vest in abutting owners an easement in the street. The court then proceeded to examine the Dongan charter, granted by the colonial government to the mayor and commonalty of New York city in 1686, which vested in the city of New York title to all its streets, and contained an express legislative declaration of a trust in respect to all such streets, upon the faith of which owners of abutting property are presumed to have acted. The legislature therefore could not abrogate this trust without making compensation for the injuries sustained by abutting owners. Mortimer v. New York El. R. Co., 57 N. Y. Super. Ct. 244.

The Kane case also held that the right of the abutting owner to compensation is not affected by the fact that the title to the street is nominally in individual owners of lots on the opposite side of the street, where it appears that he has acquired a prescriptive right against such individual owners, and it does not appear that the railroad company claims under them. The cases of Story v. New York El. Co., 90 N. Y. 122; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 596; 43 Am. Rep. 146; and Lahr v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 268, were both examined and approved.

Other Cases.—The principles laid down in these four leading cases have been adopted and followed in all other cases arising on the same questions. See Drucker v. Manhattan R. Co., 106 N. Y. 157; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 418; McGean v. Manhattan R. Co., 117 N. Y. 219; Newman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 118 N. Y. 618; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 412; Tallman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 119; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 409; Williams v. Brooklyn El. R. Co., 126 N. Y. 96; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 149; Caro v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. 138; In re Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co., 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 404; Sixth Ave. R. Co. v. Gilbert El. R. Co., 43 N. Y. Super. Ct. 292. See also the cases cited throughout this section, and Fulton v. Short Route R. Transfer Co., 85 Ky. 640.

The act of the legislature of March 16, 1790, by which the Battery was dedicated to public uses, and the sale or appropriation thereof to, or for any private use thereafter prohibited, does not create a contract under which an adjoining owner may maintain an action to prevent the appropriation of any part of the Battery for elevated railway purposes. Spader v. New York El. R. Co., 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 467. Compare Patten v. New York El. R. Co., 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 306.

In American, etc., Methodist Soc. v. Brooklyn El. R. Co., 46 Hun (N. Y.) 530, the railroad company made defense that as the avenue had been opened under chapter 132 of the act of 1835, which provides that the streets opened thereunder shall be converted to the use of the public in a manner now designated and settled by law, and "in such other manner as the legislature may hereafter deem proper to enact," it must be assumed that the abutting owners received under the proceeding instituted for the opening of the street full compensation for any use which the legislature might deem proper to enact. But the court held that this claim could not be sustained, as the words of the statute did not extinguish all private right in the street; that if such general words operated at all to extend the scope of the uses to which the land thereby taken could be subjected, their only effect would be to authorize such other uses of the street as might be of the same general nature as the uses "then settled and designated by law," of which the operation of an elevated road was not one.

Where there is no evidence to show how the street in which plaintiff's premises, injured by the operation of an elevated railway, was opened, it will be presumed that adjoining proprietors own the fee of the street. Stewart v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 56 N. Y. Super. Ct. 377. See also Wager v. Troy Union R. Co., 25 N. Y. 529. And in an injunction proceeding against the railroad company, the burden of overthrowing the presumption is on the defendant. Hochhalter v. Manhattan R. Co., 31 N. Y. St. Rep. 112.

An abutting property owner who, for a valuable consideration, consented to the erection of an elevated railway in front of his premises, will be enjoined from making excavations in the street impairing the supports of the structure. Kings County El. R. Co. v. Cocks (Supreme Ct.), 22 N. Y. Supp. 1017.

b. FORM OF ACTION—PERMANENT OR TEMPORARY DAMAGES.—In regulating the method of recovery by property owners for damages resulting from the maintenance and operation of elevated roads, the procedure recognized by the New York courts has no exact counterpart in other jurisdictions. The damages may be determined in eminent-domain proceedings instituted by the railroad company, or by a common-law action, or by an action for an injunction; the last method is that generally adopted, for reasons stated below.¹

(1) Eminent Domain Proceedings.—These proceedings are instituted by the railroad company to acquire the right to occupy the streets and to interfere with the easements of abutting lotowners, so far as may be necessary for the proper construction and operation of the railroad. The easements are taken, within the meaning of the constitution, and the measure of damages is compensa-

Right to Compensation—Experimental Section.—The right of landowners to compensation was recognized in the early case of In re East River Bridge, etc., Transit Co., 26 Hun (N. Y.) 490, where it was held that the report of the commissioners would not be confirmed by the general term, until some provision had been made whereby the owners of lots and buildings abutting on the proposed route, whether they owned the fee of the street in front of their premises or not, would be compensated for the damages they might sustain by reason of the construction and operation of the road.

And the law authorizing the construction of an experimental section of the elevated road was held unconstitutional in not providing for compensation to property owners. People v. Loew, 39 Hun (N. Y.) 490.

Kentucky.—In Fulton v. Short Route R. Transfer Co., 85 Ky. 640, it was held that an elevated railroad was not an unreasonable obstruction of a street, and that the owner of abutting property was without remedy unless deprived of the reasonable use of the street.

1. See infra, this title, Proceeding for an Injunction.

Mr. Sedgwick, in his work on Damages (8th ed.), vol. 3, § 1211, criticizes adversely the New York procedure, saying: "How is it possible to define the nature of the right of action in these cases? If it is wholly equitable, how does the right to an injunction enable the court to prevent the injunction issuing if the party applying for it desires it? If the defendant instead of paying the fee damages in a given case, submitted to the injunction, or if the plaintiff insisted on having it, what would happen? The fundamental difficulty is one which may be stated in a variety of ways, but in the last resort consists in the impossibility of reconciling two wholly opposite views: one being that what the legislature authorizes cannot be a nuisance, and that its interference with private property, short of absolute divestiture of title is damnum absque injuria; the other being that whatever injuries property is pro tanto a taking of it, . . . there is no reason why, the injury being permanent and necessarily so, the damage should not be paid for once for all in a common-law action, nor why the fiction should be resorted to that the plaintiff has a right to enjoin the defendant from enjoying the powers conferred upon it by the state."

This method of procedure is not a new one, however, in New York. A similar method for the recovery of damages was adopted as far back as 1857, in the case of Williams v. New York Cent. R. Co., 16 N. Y. 97, 69 Am. Dec. 651. That case was a suit in equity brought to restrain the railroad company from using the street with their railway, and to recover damages for past use. The conclusion arrived at, as expressed in the opinion of Selden, J., was that: "The defendants in constructing their road were guilty of an unwarrantable intrusion and trespass upon plaintiff's property, and that he is entitled to relief. Although he had a remedy at law for the trespass, yet as the trespass was of a tion to the owner for the value of his easements at the time of the proceeding. The taking being lawful, consequential damages which do not constitute a "taking" of property are not to be considered. In this connection the well-settled principles of the law of eminent domain prevail. The damages are in the nature of prospective damages only.¹

While there is some conflict of authority on the subject, the correct rule undoubtedly is that damages in eminent-domain proceedings are to be assessed for the value of the land as at the time of the appropriation by legal proceeding, and not at the time of the actual occupation.² It is to be observed, however, that while the actual market value at the time of the institution of the condemnation proceedings is usually the inquiry, yet, in assessing the damages, the decreased value resulting from the existence of the trespassing railroad cannot be taken as the basis continuous nature he had a right to come into a court of equity and to invoke its restraining power to prevent a multiplicity of suits, and can, of course, recover his damages as incidental to this equitable relief." See also Lynch v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 274; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 308. Compare Stetson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 75 Ill. 74. The Illinois courts refuse to grant an injunction in such cases, and leave the landowner entirely to his remedy at law.

1. See the general subject discussed in EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 563, et seq.

Land for Stations.—Elevated stations are an essential part of the railroad, and therefore come within the term "public use" for which land may be condemned. The fact that a small portion of the stations were used for news stands, does not prove that stations of smaller size would adequately accommodate the traveling public, and does not, therefore, prevent the company from acquiring title by condemnation to the land on which the stations stand. In re Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 2 N. Y. Supp. 278.

2. Measure of Damages in Eminent-Domain Proceedings.—See the subject discussed and the authorities examined in EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 565. See also In re New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 857; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Randolph Town Site Co., 103 Mo. 451; 47 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 118, in which last case the rule of the text is clearly laid down, and the court, in construing a constitutional provision very, if not precisely, similar to that of the New York constitution, held that the taking or appropriation within the meaning of the constitution related to the effect of the condemnation proceedings, and not to the unlawful occupation before the proceedings were begun. The court cited Hampden Paint, etc., Co. v. Springfield, etc., R. Co., 124 Mass. 118, and quoted from the opinion in Blue Earth County v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 28 Minn. 503; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 209, as follows: "The universal rule is that compensation must be fixed at the time the public make the appropriation. That this means the time of taking and appropriating the property by appropriate legal proceedings, and not to the time of some previous wrongful and tortious entry, necessarily follows from the constitutional provision which requires compensation first to be made. The fact that a railroad company has, in advance of proper condemnation proceedings, committed a trespass, and wrongfully taken possession of the land, gives it no right to insist that such proceedings subsequently instituted shall relate back to the date of the trespass."

Particular Cases.—In a proceeding by a railroad company for the condemnation of a right of way in a street in which the abutting owners had a mere easement, the measure of damages is the difference in the value of the property before and after the construction of the railroad. In re Union El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 8 N. Y. Supp. 813; In re Brooklyn El. R. Co., 55 Hun (N. Y.) 165; Mortimer v. Manhattan R. Co., 57 N. Y. Super. Ct. 509.

for estimating the award. In such case the inquiry must be what would be the fair market value of the whole property at the time of the condemnation without the railroad; and the difference between that sum and the present market value of the property left with the railroad in existence, should constitute the measure of damages to which the owner should be entitled.¹

All of the elevated roads constructed under the Rapid-transit act have, either by direct grant from the legislature, or by their succession to the rights and properties of other companies to whom the right had been granted, acquired the right to institute proceedings to condemn land for the location of their railways. These proceedings may be maintained as to land which the company has already occupied with its railway, and even after the owners have instituted suits against the company and recovered damages for the unlawful occupation.²

(2) Common-law Action.—Until the railroad company acquires

Where it appears that for the two years immediately prior to the construction of the road, the property was let for $3,900, and that after the railroad went into operation, the rents were reduced to about $3,000, an award of $25,000 is excessive. Thompson v. Manhattan El. R. Co., 8 N. Y. Supp. 641.

The rule as to the measure of damages is more fully discussed under the succeeding section in connection with injunction proceedings.

Corner Lot.—Where the landowner's lot is on the corner at the intersection of two streets at right angles, in estimating the compensation to him for so much of his easement in one of the streets as has been taken by the company in the construction and operation of its elevated railway, the street supposed to have it is properly determined by a line drawn from such corner of the two streets to the corner diagonally opposite. Metropolitan R. Co. v. Levy (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 367.

1. This is the statement of the rule by Peckham, J., in delivering the opinion of the court in Pappenheim v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 436; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 260; and he further says: "This inaugurates no new rule of damages in condemnation proceedings in this state. As the entry was unlawful it is, for the purpose of arriving at the value of the property, regarded as not made, and the inquiry is, 'What is the present value of such property without the presence of the structure which is there without right?' Its existence cannot be considered for the purpose of diminishing what would otherwise be the present market value of the property." See also In re New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 857.

The rule as to damages in condemnation proceedings is stated by Peckham, J., in delivering the opinion of the court in Bohm v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 576; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 271: "Generally, in regard to the taking of land, the rule may be said to be to pay the full value of the land taken, at its market price, and no deductions can be made from that value for any purpose whatever; then as to the land remaining, the question has been to some extent mooted whether the company should pay for the injury caused to such land by the mere taking of other property, or whether in case the proposed use of the property taken would depreciate the value of that which was not taken, such proposed use could be regarded, and the depreciation arising therefrom be awarded as part of the consequential damages suffered from the taking. I think the latter rule is true. Henderson v. New York Cent. R. Co., 78 N. Y. 433; Newman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 118 N. Y. 618; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 412; In re Brooklyn El. R. Co., 55 Hun (N. Y.) 165."

2. Right To Institute Condemnation Proceedings.—In re Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 2 N. Y. Supp. 278; In re Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 503; 12 N. Y. Supp. 506; In re Kearney, 12 N. Y. Supp. 516, note; Metropolitan El. R. Co. v. Dominick (Supreme Ct.), 8

the right to interfere with the easements of abutting landowners, its occupation of them is a continuing trespass for which actions may be brought de die in diem to recover damages, as long as the unlawful trespass continues. But the law does not presume that the trespass will continue indefinitely; consequently the recovery in such actions is limited to damages which have accrued prior to the commencement of the action.¹ The Statute of Limitations

N. Y. Supp. 151; Story v. New York El. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 122; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 596; 43 Am. Rep. 146.

A company formed under the Rapid-transit act, which has two tracks crossing each other, whereby the danger of collision is made great, may acquire the corner property at such crossing for the purpose of providing the curve necessary to allow the trains on one route to turn into the street occupied by the other so as to avoid such danger. In re Union El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 4 N. Y. Supp. 85.

Miscellaneous Matters of Procedure, etc.—The court will not stay the proceedings of commissioners appointed to appraise the value of easements in process of condemnation by a railroad company. All rights can be saved by application for a stay, pending appeal, after the commissioners' report. Metropolitan El. R. Co. v. Siefke (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 224.

Notwithstanding the provision of laws of New York, 1850, ch. 140, § 18, that in condemnation proceedings "the company shall give notice" of a motion to confirm the report of the appraisal commissioners, the confirmation may be made upon motion of the property owner. In re Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 22 N. Y. Supp. 128.

An order confirming the report of commissioners to appraise damages to abutting property caused by the operation of an elevated railway company cannot be reviewed on appeal for the purpose of correcting errors in the report. The appeal must be taken from the award, in pursuance of Laws N. Y. 1850, ch. 140, § 18. In re Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 22 N. Y. Supp. 298.

No appeal to the Court of Appeals lies from the decision of the general term affirming an order which confirms the award of the commissioners of appraisal. In re Metropolitan El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 600.

Error in hearing an application by a rapid-transit company to acquire title to real estate, upon affidavits instead of oral evidence, is waived by a failure to object to the introduction of the affidavits at the hearing. In re Suburban Rapid Transit Co., 38 Hun (N. Y.) 553.

An injunction nisi against the operation of an elevated railroad in front of plaintiff's premises, will not be dissolved merely to enable defendant to acquire the title to plaintiff's property by appropriate legal proceedings, when it might have done so before the injunction was obtained. Eno v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 8 N. Y. Supp. 107. In Eno v. Metropolitan Elevated R. Co., 1 N. Y. Supp. 521, it appeared that the amount awarded to plaintiff as owner, in condemnation proceedings had been deposited by defendant in bank, and the plaintiff had procured a modification of the order directing payment to himself. It was held that the damages not having been paid, nor the order recorded as required by the general railroad act, plaintiff was entitled to recover the same by action, with interest from the date of the confirmation of the award.

Where the court fails to appoint commissioners in condemnation proceedings to acquire title to real property for elevated railway purposes and to fix the time and place of their first meeting, the omission may, on proper application and notice, be supplied by the court, under Code Civ. Proc., §§ 724 and 3368, the first of which provides that the court may supply any omission in the proceedings, and the second making such provision applicable to condemnation proceedings. Manhattan R. Co. v. Stroub, 68 Hun (N. Y.) 90.

1. Tallman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 119; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 409.

In Uline v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 101 N. Y. 109; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 9; 54 Am. Rep. 661, the court, by Earl, J., said: "The question, however, still remains, What damages? All her damage upon the assumption that the nuisance was to be permanent, or only such damages as she sustained up to the commencement of the action? We confines the recovery in such actions to damages accrued within a period of six years prior to the action.¹ As a consequence of these principles, in estimating the damages, where such an action is brought, only such injuries to property can be considered as are temporary in their nature; as, for example, the actual decrease in the rental value or the temporary injury and inconvenience suffered by the landowner.² Injuries of a permanent character such as damage to the fee value of the premises, cannot be redressed in this action.³

have here for consideration an important principle of law which has to be frequently applied and which ought to be well known and fully settled. There has never been in this state before this case the least doubt expressed in any judicial decision, so far as I can discover, that the plaintiff in such a case is entitled to recover damages only up to the commencement of the action. That such is the rule is as well settled here as any rule of law can well be by repeated and uniform decisions of all the courts; and it is the prevailing doctrine elsewhere;" citing and quoting from Hambleton v. Veere, 2 Saund. 169; Mitchell v. Darley Main Colliery Co., 14 Q. B. Div. 125; Esty v. Baker, 48 Me. 495; Cumberland, etc., Canal Co. v. Hitchings, 65 Me. 140; Bare v. Hoffman, 79 Pa. St. 71; 21 Am. Rep. 42; Anderson, etc., R. Co. v. Kernodle, 54 Ind. 314, all of which sustain the doctrine of the text. See also DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 17; Pond v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 112 N. Y. 186; Reming v. New York, etc., R. Co., 7 N. Y. Supp. 516.

1. New York Code Civ. Pro., § 382; Martin v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 238; Cornell v. Manhattan R. Co., 63 Hun (N. Y.) 350; Kearney v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 14 N. Y. St. Rep. 854. The Statute of Limitations does not run against the landowner's right to an injunction. Galway v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 132.

2. Pond v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 112 N. Y. 186; Tallman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 124; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 411. In this latter case it is said: "In such an action the plaintiff cannot recover for the permanent diminution in the value of his lots. He can only recover the damages he sustains from day to day, or from month to month, or from year to year, in the use of his lots; and the question to be determined in such an action is, how much has the usable or rental value of the lots been diminished by the construction, maintenance, and operation of the railroad? As a basis for estimating the damages, the lots must be taken as they are used during the time embraced in the action, and the plaintiff's recovery must be confined to the diminished rental or usable value of the lots just as they were." If he desires more ample indemnity he should proceed with his remedy by injunction. Quoted and approved in Hine v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 510; Martin v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 238. See also Williams v. Brooklyn El. R. Co., 126 N. Y. 96; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 149; Blesch v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 43 Wis. 183; New York El. R. Co. v. Fifth Nat. Bank, 135 U. S. 432; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 403; Taylor v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. 312; Uline v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 101 N. Y. 107; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 12; 54 Am. Rep. 661, and the numerous cases there cited.

Two species of damage arising from the same cause, as diminution in the rental value and in the selling price of property, brought about by the erection of an elevated railroad, do not give two separate causes of action. Paret v. New York El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 580; Trask v. Hartford, etc., R. Co., 2 Allen (Mass.) 331.

In an action by a life tenant for damages, it is proper to charge the jury that the change in the character of the neighborhood directly or indirectly attributable to the operation of the railroad, cannot be considered as causing damages for which the plaintiff might recover. Moore v. New York El. Co., 8 N. Y. Supp. 769.

3. Tallman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 119; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 409; Paret v. New York El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 580; Uline v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 101 N. Y. 116; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 24; 54

In Pennsylvania several cases have arisen, where ordinary steam railroads in entering a city placed the road on elevated structures, and the New York doctrine as to the right of abutting owners to recover has not been adopted.¹ And in Kentucky they may recover damages only where they suffer substantial injury.²

But an exception to the rule stated above has been allowed in some New York cases, and the owner permitted to recover damages for the permanent diminution in the value of his property, where at the outset of the trial this rule of damages was acquiesced in by the defendant.³ The effect of these exceptional cases is to

Am. Rep. 661; Pappenheim v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 436; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 260. See also DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 16 et seq.

In an action by the owners of a bank building against an elevated railway company to recover damages resulting from the erection and operation of defendants' road, evidence of damage accruing after the commencement of the action and before trial was held admissible, and that it was proper to exclude evidence that if plaintiffs' building was raised as high as the municipal ordinances would allow, plaintiffs' light would not be obstructed by the structure. It was held proper also to submit to the jury the question how much less that part of the building used for banking purposes was worth, as a bank, on account of defendants' structure. Fifth Nat. Bank v. New York El. R. Co., 28 Fed. Rep. 231.

A cause of action against an elevated railway company on a bond given by the company with sureties to pay all damages assessed because of the operation of the company's road in front of plaintiffs' premises, cannot be joined in the same complaint with a cause of action against the company for damages resulting from the construction and operation of the road. Hart v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 391.

1. In Pennsylvania—Authority to Construct.—In Philadelphia v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 7 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 390, it was held that under its statutory power to intersect or to cross an established road a railroad company may not cross city streets with an elevated railroad without the consent of the city obtained in accordance with acts of June 9, 1874, and May 31, 1887.

The Pennsylvania act of April 15, 1869, authorizing the select and common councils of Pittsburgh to vacate streets and alleys in said city, was held not to authorize the grant of permission to a steam railroad company to build a short elevated railroad from its terminus at the foot of one of the city streets on the river along the public landing, as this was not a vacation of the street, but a joint occupation with the public. McAboy's Appeal, 107 Pa. St. 548; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 314.

Right of Abutting Landowners to Recover.—In Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Marchant, 119 Pa. St. 541; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 116, it appeared that an elevated railroad was built on the south side of a street on which the plaintiff owned a building located on the north side, the street being twenty-four feet wide. It was held that the injuries sustained by the plaintiff were not the subject of compensation within the Pennsylvania constitution, art. 16, § 8, providing for compensation for property injured or destroyed. The same ruling was held in Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Lippincott, 116 Pa. St. 472; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 399. But the landowner is entitled to compensation for damages direct or consequential which he has suffered in consequence of the building and operation of the railroad. Pittsburgh Junction R. Co. v. McCutcheon (Pa. 1888), 7 Atl. Rep. 146.

See this subject treated more extensively infra, this title, Ordinary Railroads in Streets and Highways.

2. In Fulton v. Short Route R. Transfer Co., 85 Ky. 640, the court said: "Undoubtedly, if the structure shall be so located as to unreasonably obstruct the abutting lot owner's means of egress and ingress from and to his lot; or, if he suffers substantial injury by having smoke, sparks or cinders thrown into his house; or its walls be cracked by the movement of heavy trains, he would be entitled to recover for the damages directly resulting from such causes."

3. In Lahr v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 293, the court, by Ruger, establish the principle that while the general rule of damages is to permit the plaintiff in a common-law action to recover only such damages as have been sustained up to the time of the commencement of the action, still should he attempt to recover for the permanent diminution in value, the defendant by acquiescence, or by not taking a proper exception, may allow him to do so.¹

(3) Proceeding for an Injunction.—In this proceeding the courts of New York combine the effects of the common-law action and eminent domain proceedings and allow damages past, present, and prospective to be recovered in the single proceeding in which the landowner applies for an injunction to restrain the operation of the road; and the court, upon a proper showing by him, grants the injunction, but with the condition that it shall take effect at the end of a specified time unless the railroad company in the meantime shall pay to the plaintiff the damages occasioned by the interference of the railroad with his easements. This proceeding practically compels the company to make compensation for, and acquire title to, the easements impaired by its road, and the court having taken jurisdiction of the cause allows damages for past injuries by way of incidental relief.² It is the only means

J., said: "This action was brought upon the theory that the building of the defendant's railroad and its operation constituted a permanent appropriation of the street for railroad purposes inconsistent with its use for street purposes, and entitled the plaintiff to recover in a single action all of the damages occasioned to his property by such taking. The case was tried upon this theory, and the defendant admitted the permanency of the intended use and acquiesced in the rule of damages adopted by the trial court.

The rule of damages having been thus agreed upon, the case was taken out of the operation of the Uline Case (101 N. Y. 98; 54 Am. Rep. 661) recently decided by this court." Cases in which a similar exceptional rule has been adopted on the ground of the defendant's acquiescence are Porter v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 120 N. Y. 284; Newman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 118 N. Y. 618; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 412; Pond v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 112 N. Y. 186.

1. Of this exceptional rule Mr. Sedgwick remarks: "It is hardly necessary to say that this is an anomaly. We know of no other class of cases in which the plaintiff, being allowed one rule of redress for the invasion of a proper right by law, obtains a totally different one by the acquiescence of the defendant. This matter is of more than ordinary importance, for if there is any such general rule the measure of damages may be changed in any case and at the pleasure of the parties. And if a rule of damages why not in any other branch of law?" 3 Sedgw. on Dam. (8th ed.), § 1189. The author then goes on to combat the propriety of this rule. The rule has the sanction, however, of the Supreme Court of the United States. In New York El. R. Co. v. Fifth Nat. Bank, 135 U. S. 432; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 403, Gray, J., speaking for the court, says that the court is "relieved from the necessity of laying down a general rule on the subject of damages because in this case it clearly appears that the defendant procured or acquiesced in the rulings under which the trial was conducted, and thereby waived the right to object to them;" citing Lahr v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 294; Drucker v. Manhattan R. Co., 106 N. Y. 157; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 418; Hussner v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 114 N. Y. 433; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 219; Shaw v. Stone, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 243.

2. Practically all the suits brought against the elevated railroad adopt this method of procedure for obvious reasons, and the principles of the text are illustrated and applied in each of them. The Story case and those following it established the fact that the occupation of the streets by the elevated railroad though sanctioned by the legislature is unlawful; that since such unlawful occupation occasions serious injury to owners of abutting property, they have a right to an injunction to restrain its continuance, and to recover damages for past injuries in the same proceeding by way of incidental relief. See Story v. New York El. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 122; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 596; 43 Am. Rep. 146; Lahr v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 268; Drucker v. Manhattan R. Co., 106 N. Y. 157; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 418.

Alternative Damages.—But in view of the facts that railroad companies were authorized by the legislature to acquire land or other real estate necessary for a right of way; that great public benefits were expected to flow from the existence of the road; that substantial justice would be accomplished by other means, and that the railroad was built under the probable misapprehension that it had lawful authority to occupy the streets, the courts in granting the injunction refuse to make it operative until after the expiration of a reasonable time, in order that the railroad company may have an opportunity to condemn the property and thus acquire a right to occupy the street. See American Bank Note Co. v. New York El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 252; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 298; Nutting v. Kings Co. El. R. Co., 48 Hun (N. Y.) 348; Story v. New York El. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 122; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 596; 43 Am. Rep. 146; 3 Sedgwick on Dam. (8th ed.), § 1187; Lahr v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 268.

The suspension of the injunction for a reasonable time is however purely a matter of favor to the railroad and not of right. Blumenthal v. New York El. R. Co., 17 N. Y. Supp. 481. Thus in Woolsey v. New York El. R. Co. (N. Y. 1892), 30 N. E. Rep. 387, it appeared that the day after the trial of the action was begun commissioners were appointed to condemn the easements in question. After the trial the parties by stipulation requested the court to find the value of the property taken, so that an injunction could be avoided by a payment of the amount so found. It was held that under this state of facts the court did not err in awarding the injunction; the contention of the railroad company was without merit, it appearing that for ten years it had occupied the land without instituting a proceeding to condemn it. Lawrence v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 12 N. Y. Supp. 546; aff'd 126 N. Y. 483.

Effect of Injunction Proceedings—Additional Tracks.—It will be observed that upon payment of the alternative damages to avoid the injunction the railroad company merely acquires the right to impair the easements to the extent existing at the time of the proceeding. If additional tracks are built or a station erected it seems that further damages may be recovered. Thus in Suarez v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 222, it is held that where the jury find the value of the plaintiff's interest in the premises is lessened $12,000 by the taking of the easements, this finding is simply as to the present value of the easements taken, on payment of which the railroad company may avoid the operation of the injunction, and is not a commutation of future trespass.

Under the constitutional provision (Const. New York, art. 1, § 6) for the protection of the right of private property, the company will be enjoined from constructing an additional track in front of plaintiff's premises, unless it has acquired the right to impose such additional burden on the plaintiff's property by condemnation as provided by statute. Stroub v. Manhattan R. Co., 14 N. Y. Supp. 773.

Damages arising from the construction and maintenance of an elevated railway in front of plaintiff's premises and an injunction against the further operation of the road, may be obtained in one and the same action. The two causes of action are not improperly united in the same complaint. O'Sullivan v. New York El. R. Co., 7 N. Y. Supp. 51.

In Rich v. Manhattan R. Co., 19 N. Y. Supp. 543, which was an action for injunctive relief, the complaint alleged damages to the plaintiff's property as a whole. The proof showed that some parcels were injured and others benefited; and that, considering the property as a whole, there was an aggregate benefit. It was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to the relief sought.

The objection that a permanent injunction cannot issue in respect to one of several pieces of property affected by the operation of an elevated railway must appear on the record in order to be available upon appeal. Steub- by which just compensation for the property taken can be compelled.¹ The proceeding being single in its character, although ing v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 313.

The court may, by virtue of its inherent powers, extend the time within which plaintiff, in an action against an elevated railway company to restrain the operation of its road, is required to tender to the company a release of his easement in the street in order that the injunction granted him should become operative. Conklin v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 782.

The pendency of a common-law action for past damages resulting from the operation of an elevated railway, is no bar to recovery of such damages in a suit for equitable relief by injunction in which the pendency of such common-law action was not pleaded and in which plaintiffs tendered a discontinuance of such action. Golden v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 20 N. Y. Supp. 630.

The fact that the elevated railroad company had procured a condemnation of plaintiff's easement, and paid his prospective damages thereon awarded, constitutes no defense to his action for injunctive relief and for damages, since plaintiff had a right to recover his past damages in such action, which defendant could not defeat by proof of partial satisfaction of plaintiff's claim pending the action. In this case Freedman, J., said: "Under these circumstances the right of the plaintiff to recover his past damages could not be defeated by proof that during the pendency of the action the defendants had in part satisfied plaintiff's claim. The defendants had no right, in such a case, to have the question of past damages tried by a jury. Sears v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 59 N. Y. Supp. Ct. 201; Bergman v. Manhattan R. Co., 14 N. Y. Supp. 384." See also Renwick v. New York El. R. Co., 15 N. Y. Supp. 149.

In an action against an elevated railway company for damages to abutting property in which defendant deposited the sum conceived by it to be due plaintiff, the right of the latter to the fund so deposited, is not affected by the fact that he had no knowledge of the payment of the money into court after he had declined a tender thereof by defendant. Taylor v. Brooklyn El. R. Co., 7 N. Y. Supp. 625.

The lessor of an elevated railway company must be made a party to an action against the lessee to restrain the operation of the road in front of the plaintiff's premises. O'Sullivan v. New York El. R. Co., 7 N. Y. Supp. 51.

In an action against an elevated railway company to restrain the operation of its road, an allegation of $75,000 damages to plaintiff's property made simply as a basis for injunctive relief, the damages not being actually claimed, constitutes no basis on which to calculate a percentage as an extra allowance for costs in case of final judgment in favor of defendant. Gray v. Manhattan R. Co., 22 N. Y. Supp. 771.

An order granting an extra allowance on past damages recovered in an action to restrain the operation of an elevated railway and denying an allowance on the amount of the fee value of the property, cannot be reviewed by the general term as to that part only which refuses the allowance. Hamilton v. Manhattan R. Co., 57 N. Y. Supp. Ct. 491.

In Nutting v. Kings Co. El. R. Co., 48 Hun (N. Y.) 348, an injunction was sought to restrain the construction of the elevated road. The court held that in view of the fact that the railroad was of paramount importance to the city, and that great public benefits could be expected to flow from its existence, and that an action at law would afford a remedy in damages, an injunction would not be allowed. It was added that the ends of justice might be attained with more certainty and satisfaction if the damages claimed should be estimated after the operation of the road had been commenced and the results of such operation had been shown by experience. See also Watson v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 57 N. Y. Supp. Ct. 364.

1. This expression is used in several cases. See Pappenheim v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 436; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 263; Pond v. Metropolitan R. Co., 112 N. Y. 186; Tallman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 123; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 409. See also Galway v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 132.

But there are two important elements of damage which cannot be considered in estimating the prospective or fee damages, viz., the noise of pass-it involves an application for two distinct species of relief, cannot be separated into component parts. Thus, neither party can claim the right to a jury trial on the question of past damages;¹ nor can a decree of the trial court be reversed as to past damages and affirmed as to the injunction, or vice versa.²

In Kentucky, a court of equity will not interfere with the construction of an elevated railroad on the ground that the easements appurtenant to abutting property will be impaired thereby. The owners of such property must rely on their remedy at law.³

The easements for the impairment of which damages are to be awarded, are those of light, air, and access;⁴ damages for noise cannot be recovered when the occupation of the street by the company is lawful and damages are awarded as compensation for the easements condemned.⁵

ing trains and the invasion of the privacy of dwellings. American Bank Note Co. v. New York El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 252; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 292; Messenger v. Manhattan R. Co., 129 N. Y. 502.

The relief is not granted on the ground that the maintenance and operation of the road is a continuing trespass, because the interests injuriously affected are incorporeal and not subject to trespass. The theory of the law is that it is a nuisance; and something more than nominal damages must be shown before an injunction will be granted. Bernheimer v. Manhattan R. Co., 13 N. Y. Supp. 913. See also Sanders v. New York El. R. Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 388.

1. Is a Single Proceeding.—See Lynch v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 274; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 308; infra, this title, Right to Trial by Jury.

2. Gray v. Manhattan R. Co., 128 N. Y. 499.

3. Kentucky.—In Fulton v. Short Route R. Transfer Co., 85 Ky. 640, it was held that a court of equity would not interfere with the construction of an elevated railroad, because it might result in special injuries to the owners of abutting lots by reason of smoke, cinders, the cracking of walls, etc.; but that such owners might recover in a court of law for damages directly resulting from such causes.

4. Drucker v. Manhattan R. Co., 106 N. Y. 157; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 418; American Bank Note Co. v. New York El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 252; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 292; Seebach v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 208.

In Drucker v. Manhattan R. Co.,

106 N. Y. 164; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 418, the court said: "Smoke and gases, ashes and cinders affect and impair the easement of air. The structure itself and the passage of cars lessen the easement of light. The dripping of oil and water, and possibly the frequent columns, interfere with convenience of access. These are elements of damage, even though the necessary concomitants of the construction and operation of the road, are not the product of negligence, for they abridge the landowner's easement, and to that extent at least are subjects for redress in an action for damages." In this case the question of damages from noise and vibration was not properly before the court, because no exceptions had been taken on that point, but a division of the court was foreshadowed at the end of the opinion. The court, referring to this, said: "The question which might involve the difference of opinion among us is not here presented."

5. In American Bank Note Co. v. New York El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 252, the question of damages resulting from noise and vibration was directly before the court, and it was held that such damages could not be recovered, and a judgment of the lower court which allowed one thousand dollars for such damages was modified by striking out said amount. It was, however, a majority opinion only. Ruger, C. J., Peckham, and O'Brien, JJ., dissenting.

But where the occupation of the street is unlawful and past damages only are sought to be recovered in an action at law, the company is liable for the noise of its trains. Kane v. New York El. R. Co., 125 N. Y. 164; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 148.

c. WHO MAY RECOVER—(1) Personal Representatives.—The right of action for injury to the value of real property occasioned by the maintenance and operation of an elevated road is a personal asset accruing to the owner upon the happening of the injury, and upon the owner's death, therefore, passes to his personal representative and not to his devisee. All that the devisee could recover in such a case would be damages sustained to the value of the property after the death of the devisor.¹ Nor is this rule affected by the fact that the devisee is also the residuary legatee under the will, and that after the commencement of the action the executor files his account and a decree is made directing him to pay over to the devisee the residue of the personal estate; until the final settlement the executor, and not the devisee, is the proper party to maintain the action.²

(2) Subsequent Purchasers.—As the easement in the street of light, air, and access, which is appurtenant to property abutting on such street, passes by a conveyance of the land, it follows that, where the elevated railway company has acquired no right to maintain its road in the street, the right to recover for permanent damages occasioned to the property by the existence of the road belongs to the owner of the land, though he may have purchased after the construction of the road;³ in such case, however, he

1. Paret v. New York El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 580; Griswold v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 122 N. Y. 102.

In Shepard v. Manhattan R. Co., 117 N. Y. 442, it appeared that the premises were formerly owned by R and M, the plaintiffs, and by F, as tenants in common. F's widow was joined as plaintiff both as administratrix of the estate of F to recover damages which had accrued to the estate prior to F's decease, and individually with respect to her dower interest. A demurrer to the complaint on the ground of improper joinder of parties was overruled. While the administratrix might have a separate right of action at law for damages, yet as this and the equitable cause of action arose out of the same transaction, they were properly joined. New York Code of Civ. Proc., § 484, par. 9.

Right of Lessor's Heirs.—Where, at the time of the owner's death, the premises are leased for a term of years to tenants, the lease having been executed after the construction of the road, the right to damages accruing from the time of his death to the termination of the lease belongs to his heirs who succeed to his title to the land, and not to his personal representative. "As owners of the reversion they are entitled to the rents accruing from the decedent's death and if they are inadequate, and this is attributable to the wrong of the defendants, it is an injury to the reversion, and the reversioners at the time are the persons entitled to maintain the action." Kernochan v. New York El. R. Co., 130 N. Y. 651; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 317.

2. Griswold v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 122 N. Y. 102. See also generally Mitchell v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 56 Hun (N. Y.) 543.

The personal representatives and devisees of a deceased owner of premises affected by the operation of an elevated railway, cannot join in an action for damages caused thereby; since the action by the personal representative is for loss of rent accruing in the decedent's lifetime, while that by the devisee is for permanent injury to the freehold. Hart v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 391.

3. Pappenheim v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 436; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 260; Sterry v. New York El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 619; Werfelman v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 355; Johnson v. Manhattan R. Co., 11 N. Y. Supp. 68; Mitchell v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 56 Hun (N. Y.) 543; Grover v. Manhattan R. Co., 51 N. Y.

may not recover for damages to the rental value accruing prior to the purchase.¹ This right of recovery is not affected by the fact

Super. Ct. 1; American Bank Note Co. v. New York El. R. Co., 59 N. Y. Super. Ct. 175; Conkling v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 847. See also Mitchell v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 134 N. Y. 11.

Apparent Objections to the Rule.—In Werfelman v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 355, the court, by Larremore, C. J., said: "The remarks of Judge Beach in Foot v. Manhattan El. R. Co. (not reported) are impressive of the natural attitude of a judicial officer and a fair-minded man towards actions of this character: 'The case is here presented of a man who goes and buys a piece of property . . . after the elevated road was built, and pays a less price for it because the elevated road is there, and then turns around and sues the elevated road; and, in my opinion, he does not occupy a position very commendable in equity.' It does not appear, however, that the learned judge felt authorized to refuse jurisdiction."

The apparent hardship of this rule of law which gives to the subsequent purchaser the right to recover damages for all future time, while the vendor is confined to past damages which have accrued within the last six years, is thus stated by Mr. Sedgwick: "There cannot be much doubt that this" [rule of law] "has produced much practical injustice. The vendor has really suffered the whole damage, and sells the property reduced by the effect of the construction and operation of the road. The vendee, on the other hand, buying at a reduced price, gets practically the benefit of the whole claim for damages, for he has a right to the injunction, and to compel the railroad to pay him the full value of his easements. In other words, the result is that in case of a sale, the right to the lion's share of the damages is acquired without consideration by one who has suffered no injury, while the previous owner, who really suffered the wrong, loses all his rights." 3 Sedg. Dam. (8th ed.), § 1196. It seems, however, that these last objections are fully answered by the consideration that the grantor may reserve the right to recover permanent damages; and by the further considerations presented by Peckham, J., speaking for the court in Pappenheim v. Metropolitan El. R.

Co., 128 N. Y. 436; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 260, where he observes: "But the argument in favor of the vendor, who owned the property when the road was built, and who sold his land in a depreciated market, caused by the wrongful acts of the defendants, is not, to my mind, very strong. In the first place, he had his right of action to recover for all damages caused by the trespass up to the time of the commencement of his action; and the subsequent conveyance of the land would not in any way affect that right. If he desired to restrain its further continuance, or to recover for the permanent damage caused, he could, while owner, commence and maintain his action in equity. In that action he would obtain full relief. If he chose to sell, instead of using the remedies which the law gives him, that was a matter, legally speaking, of his own choice. The defendants did not compel or limit or restrain such sale. Nothing that they did could be said to amount to any compulsion by them." But when the vendee brings such an action, he must rely upon such title as he has at the commencement of the action. A conveyance subsequently executed and delivered to him is not admissible in evidence. Dean v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 119 N. Y. 540. See also Minton v. New York El. R. Co., 130 N. Y. 332.

1. In Sperb v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 61 Hun (N. Y.) 539, the referee found that all the damages which had been occasioned to the fee value of the premises had occurred prior to the plaintiff's purchase of the property, and that in the conveyance to the plaintiff there was a clause reserving to the grantor the right to recover all such damages as had accrued up to the date of the conveyance. It was held that the referee erred in finding that the plaintiff was entitled to a certain sum on account of the depreciation in the value of the premises.

In Siefke v. Manhattan R. Co., 59 N. Y. Super. Ct. 444, the grantor assigned to his purchaser all right to recover past damages. The court held that in an action by the plaintiff, the purchaser, to restrain the maintenance of the road, he could not recover for past damages, although assigned to him by the grantor. This holding was on the ground that an executor under a will, afterwards held invalid, had instituted an action and recovered damages.¹ The grantor in the conveyance may, however, reserve the right to recover all damages, both past and prospective, and in such case the purchaser, of course, cannot maintain an action.²

A proceeding for an injunction and for the recovery incidentally of all damages is regarded somewhat in the nature of an attempt to compel the railroad company to condemn the land; therefore, the company, after complying with the judgment obtained in such a proceeding, acquires the right to infringe the easements, and one who afterwards purchases the property takes with it knowledge of the rights acquired by the company, and has no right of action for damages to his alleged easement.³

(3) Landlord and Tenant.—In case of trespass upon leased property, the rule is that the right of action for damages belongs to him who suffers the injury. Where the trespass is of a casual and temporary character, therefore, the right of action is in the lessee;⁴ but where, as in the case of the elevated railroads, the nuisance is continuous in its nature, the injury is to the inheritance and causes a permanent diminution in the value of the property, and the right of action is in the owner of the premises.⁵ Where the lease is executed after the construction of the road, that the principle which permits past damages to be assessed in actions of this character was exceptional, and intended to prevent multiplicity of actions, but that it ought not to be so extended as to permit a plaintiff to purchase an outstanding claim of another person, enforceable only at law, and unite to it his own claim for equitable relief and thus deprive the defendant of his right to trial by jury. See Sommer v. New York El. R. Co., 60 Hun (N. Y.) 148.

1. An abutting owner sued for damages to the permanent value of his property caused by the railroad. He died pending the action, which was revived and continued by his executors, who recovered judgment for the full value of the loss. Afterwards the will under which the executors acted was adjudged invalid as a disposition of real estate, the premises were ordered to be sold, and the plaintiff became the purchaser. It was held that the subsequent payment by the railroad company of the judgment recovered by the executors did not affect the plaintiff's right to enjoin the operation of the road, since the executors had no right to maintain the action. Mitchell v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 56 Hun (N. Y.) 543.

2. Reservation of Right to Damages by Grantor.—Sperb v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 61 Hun (N. Y.) 539; Hoch v. Manhattan R. Co., 59 Hun (N. Y.) 541; McGean v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 14 N. Y. Supp. 761.

But the grantor cannot reserve a right to restrain an invasion of the easement occurring after the grant. Foote v. Manhattan R. Co., 58 Hun (N. Y.) 478.

3. An injunction against the operation of a road, which the railroad company may avoid by tendering a specified sum for the easement, is binding on persons to whom the plaintiff, after the trial and before judgment, conveys the land; and the refusal of such grantees to convey the easement is not a ground for setting aside or modifying the judgment, since the duty of conveying is by the decree imposed on the plaintiff, and may be made by him notwithstanding his conveyance of the land. Moss v. New York El. R. Co., 17 N. Y. Supp. 586; New York Code of Civ. Proc., § 756.

4. See TRESPASS; Bedingfield v. Onslow, 3 Lev. 209; Jesser v. Gifford, 4 Burr. 2141; Addison on Torts 139.

5. Kernochan v. New York El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 559; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 317.

the parties are presumed to have recognized the fact that the existence of the railroad would continue and to have contracted with reference to it. The lessee has no right of action, because he took the property subject to the trespass, but the lessor may recover damages for the rental value during the time it is occupied by the tenants.¹ Where, however, the lease is executed before the construction of the road, the lessee may maintain an action to recover damages to the extent of the injury done to his interest.² The measure of past damages in an action by the lessor is, as in other

Damages to the inheritance may be recovered by the owner in fee of demised premises, notwithstanding the fact that such damages accrued during the existence of the demise. Conkling v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 847.

1. Kernochan v. New York El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 559; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 317; Hine v. New York El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 571; aff'g, 13 N. Y. Supp. 510; Sterry v. New York El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 619; Johnston v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 14 N. Y. Supp. 897; Mortimer v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 2; Bischoff v. New York El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 865; Mulford v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 12 N. Y. Supp. 929; Nooney v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 111; Barrett v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 71; Sternberger v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 N. Y. Supp. 539.

Damages to the rental value may be allowed in an action, notwithstanding the fact that existing leases of the property were executed more than six years before the action. Kane v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 109; Conkling v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 846.

In an action by one who purchases property abutting on a street after the erection of the elevated railroad thereon, for damages to the property caused by the existence of the road, a recovery is properly allowed for the loss of rental value during the time covered by an unexpired lease outstanding when the plaintiff purchased the property, the lease having been made after the building of the road. Werfelman v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 355; Whitlock v. Manhattan R. Co., 11 N. Y. Supp. 955; Johnston v. Manhattan R. Co., 11 N. Y. Supp. 68; Barrett v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 71.

In Kernochan v. New York El. R.

Co., 128 N. Y. 559; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 317, the court, by Andrews, J., said: "In determining whether the lessee acquired by his lease the right to recover damages for injuries inflicted upon the property by the road during the term, the situation at the time the lease was first executed, the terms of the instrument, and the intention of the parties are to be considered. The first and most obvious consideration is that the lease was of the lot, and that when made the incorporeal and appurtenant easements in the street to the extent that they had been taken or invaded by the railroad, had been practically severed from the abutting property. The part so taken away was not enjoyed in connection with the premises leased when the lease was executed. But still more material is the fact that the rent reserved in the lease was for the use of the lot in its actual situation. This was not stated in terms, but there can be no other reasonable inference. It would be an unnatural and violent presumption that the lessor intended to exact, or that the lessee intended to pay, rent measured by the value of the use of the premises without the railroad on the supposition that it would be removed during the term."

2. Lease Executed Prior to Construction of Road.—In Kernochan v. New York El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 559; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 317, the principle in the text was not involved directly, but the court laid down the rule that, "In a case where the lease was made prior to the construction of the road different considerations would apply. Under such a lease the lessee is the party who would be entitled to maintain the action, for the same reason that we hold that the lessor is entitled in the present case—viz., that he is the one who suffers the injury."

The point was directly involved in Taylor v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. 311, and it was held cases, the difference between the rental value of the premises when free from the effect of the nuisance and that when subject to it.¹ The right of the owner of the fee to enjoin the operation of the road is not affected by the fact that his premises are at the time subject to an outstanding lease.²

(4) Other Parties.—As a general rule any party who has an interest in the abutting land and the easement appurtenant thereto, which is directly affected by the maintenance and operation of the road, has a right to maintain an action for damages.³

that the lessees might recover the depreciation in the rental value of the premises, but damages caused by a falling off of patronage (plaintiff was a physician) were held too remote.

In Kearney v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 76, it appeared that the plaintiff held certain premises as the assignee of a lease which was executed prior to the construction of the railroad; that the lease contained a renewal clause. Before the expiration of the original lease the road was constructed, and at the expiration of said lease it was renewed. The action was brought to restrain the further maintenance and operation of the road and to recover damages to the leasehold. It was held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover damages which accrued both before and after the renewal of the lease, as the new lease was but a continuation of the old one.

But in Krone v. Kings County El. R. Co., 50 Hun (N. Y.) 431, it appeared that the plaintiff had a leasehold interest in the property for a term of three years. A stairway for the ascent of passengers had been constructed in front of the house and it was claimed that the stairway obstructed the light, air, and access to plaintiff's property and thereby injured and damaged the same. She sought equitable relief by injunction and damages for injury to her leasehold. The injunction was refused. The court said: "The elevated road of the defendant has been constructed with the consent of the municipal authorities and of the fee owner of the premises in question, and stands under the full sanction of legal authority. Its construction was intended to subserve a public interest, and, in theory of law, it was for a public purpose to which private interests are always subservient; not that private interests are to be destroyed or disregarded. . . . The damages resulting to private property in such cases may be assessed in the manner provided by law, or they may be recovered in an action at law. In this case, the damages to ensue to the plaintiff are simple and can be easily found by a jury."

A lessee is not entitled to a perpetual injunction. The injunction, when granted, should continue only during the existence of the lessee's interest. Welsh v. New York El. R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 515.

Error in granting an injunction in favor of a lessee against an elevated railway company, which should be operative after the expiration of the lease, does not necessarily call for reversal, since the judgment can be modified by limiting the operation of the injunction to the period covered by the lease. Welsh v. New York El. R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 515; Odell v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 22 N. Y. Supp. 737.

1. Conkling v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 847.

2. Suarez v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 224; Macy v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 804.

3. See PARTIES TO ACTIONS, vol. 17, p. 505; EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 608; In re Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 506.

Evidence that the plaintiff is in possession of the abutting land, under a recorded deed, claiming a fee, is sufficient proof of the right to the easements to maintain such action, especially where it appears that the defendant has commenced proceedings to acquire title to such easements by condemnation. Werfelman v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 355; Johnston v. Manhattan R. Co., 11 N. Y. Supp. 68. See also Senft v. Manhattan R. Co., 57 N. Y. Super. Ct. 417, where, after joinder of issue, the plaintiff conveyed the fee of the premises to his wife, and after trial, but before final submission, he also assigned to her all his causes of action. If the incidental relief by way of past damages affects other persons than the present owners, they may properly be brought in as parties. Shepard v. Manhattan R. Co., 117 N. Y. 442.

Partners.—In an action for damages and for injunction, it appeared that although the plaintiff held the legal title to the property, another was partner with him therein. It was held that the holder of the legal title might maintain an action in his own name as the real party in interest; that his recovery would not be limited to an undivided half interest in the damages sustained; but the judgment that on payment of a certain compensation for the easements affected, the railroad company should become entitled to a conveyance thereof, should provide that plaintiff's partner should join in the conveyance. Korn v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 514.

Life-tenant, Remainderman and Reversioner.—The construction and operation of the elevated road in the street being a continuing nuisance, the owner of the reversion of abutting premises being entitled under New York Code of Civ. Proc., § 1665, to "maintain an action founded upon an injury done to the inheritance," notwithstanding the intervening estate, may recover damages accruing within the period of limitation of six years, though the railway was constructed and operated before that period. Doyle v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 506; Hine v. New York R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 510; Ottinger v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 18; Thompson v. Manhattan R. Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 438; and 16 Daly (N. Y.) 64; affirmed, 130 N. Y. 360; Macy v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 804.

In proceedings to condemn land for the purpose of the elevated road, the remainder-man, as well as the life-tenants, must be made parties. In re Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 506.

The life-tenant cannot maintain a proceeding for an injunction and for damages to her estate in the premises arising from the unlawful occupation of the street by the railroad company, without bringing in as parties those interested in the fee. This rule applies even though the instrument under which the tenant holds provides that if she marries she shall be entitled to the fee. Bach v. New York El. R. Co., 60 Hun (N. Y.) 128; Moore v. New York El. R. Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 510. See also in this connection Lazarus v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 69 Hun (N. Y.) 190; McNair v. Rochester, etc., R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 14 N. Y. Supp. 39.

The measure of damages to the remainder-man is the difference between the value of the remainder with and that without the railroad, and is to be estimated by taking the damage to the fee and apportioning it between the life-tenant and the remainder-man according to the annuity tables. Thompson v. Manhattan R. Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 438.

Trustees—Trust Property.—When the plaintiff in an action for injunctive relief against an elevated railroad is a trustee and cannot sell and convey the premises in question without the consent of third parties, it is necessary that the plaintiff's conveyance of title to the easements should be accompanied by the consent of such third parties in order that the railroad company may be compelled to pay the fee damages. Reed v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 811.

Executors who are also trustees may maintain an action for damages resulting from an interference with easements appurtenant to the trust property. Knox v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 848; Meeks v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 58 N. Y. Super. Ct. 466.

The beneficiaries of a trust cannot maintain an action to recover damages resulting from the operation of an elevated railway, unless the trustees decline to bring the action. Lindheim v. Manhattan R. Co., 68 Hun (N. Y.) 22.

The executors and trustees of the deceased owner of abutting property do not occupy the relation of purchasers from the deceased, but succeed in behalf of the beneficiaries to the rights of the abutter, and may recover damages to the rental value of the land caused by the operation of the road. Mortimer v. Manhattan R. Co., 129 N. Y. 81. And in view of the decision in the case of Papenheim v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 436; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 260, it would make no difference whether they were regarded as subsequent purchasers or not.

Mortgagor and Mortgagee.—In Porter v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 120 N. Y.

d. EVIDENCE—(1) Opinion of Witnesses.—The opinions of ordinary witnesses as to what would have been a fair value of the property if the railroad had not been built are incompetent as evidence; so also are their opinions as to the causes which produced the decrease in value and as to the amount of damages caused thereby.¹ This rule, however, is subject to various modifications; thus, some of the cases hold that the admission of such evidence 284, it appeared that the plaintiff in the case had given a mortgage upon her property, which in December was foreclosed and the premises sold. The action was commenced in the following March. It was held that the plaintiff's right of action for injuries sustained while she had the title was personal to her, and did not pass with it on the foreclosure sale, nor was she divested thereby of her right of action. The fact that the judgment in this case would be no bar to an action by the purchaser in such sale for damages accruing after the acquired title, did not affect the case. McFadden v. Johnson, 72 Pa. St. 335; 13 Am. Rep. 681; King v. New York, 102 N. Y. 172. See also Giordano v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 258; Woolsey v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 133.

Where there is a valid mortgage on the premises, the judgment against the railroad company must provide for the release from such mortgage of the rights to be conveyed by the plaintiff to the railroad company upon payment of the fee damages, and a failure to so provide upon request by the defendant is error. Woolsey v. New York El. R. Co., 134 N. Y. 323, modifying 9 N. Y. Supp. 133.

Premises Are Owned and Occupied by a Corporation.—In American Bank Note Co. v. New York El. R. Co., 59 N. Y. Super. Ct. 175, it appeared that the buildings on the premises were owned and used by a corporation for the manufacture of engravings, etc. In discussing the question of past damages the court, by Freedman, J., said: "This raises the question as to the right rule of past damages in the case of a corporation in possession. In the case of an individual owner, who himself was the occupant of the premises, the true measure of damages is the loss of the rental value, provided it appears that the premises were rendered disagreeable and uncomfortable. This rule is inapplicable to a corporation in possession, because the corporation cannot be subjected to personal inconvenience and discomfort. Such a corporation, therefore, cannot recover for the loss of rental value, but only for the additional expense incurred. Such a recovery is in lieu of and falls short of the amount recoverable by an individual only, and is sanctioned by the decisions in Seventh Ward Nat. Bank v. New York El. R. Co., 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 412; Fifth Nat. Bank v. New York El. R. Co., 28 Fed. Rep. 231; New York Nat. Exch. Bank v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 511."

Kings County.—In Kings County v. Sea View R. Co., 23 Hun (N. Y.) 180, the supervisors of the county brought suit to restrain the construction of a road over the Parkway leading to, and the road adjoining the Concourse constructed by the park commissioners of Brooklyn, under New York Laws of 1874, ch. 583, as amended by Laws of 1875, ch. 489. It was held that by these acts the fee to the street in question was not vested in Kings county, but remained in the former owners; that therefore the county could not maintain the action. Nor could it maintain the action on the ground that the railway would frighten teams and diminish the value of adjoining lots which were to be assessed to reimburse the county for moneys borrowed for the purpose of paying for improvements made under the said acts.

1. McGean v. Manhattan R. Co., 117 N. Y. 219; Korn v. New York El. R. Co., 59 Hun (N. Y.) 505. See also Thompson v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 64; Malcolm v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 13 N. Y. Supp. 283 (question allowed on cross-examination); Blumenthal v. New York El. R. Co., 17 N. Y. Supp. 481; McGay v. Manhattan El. R. Co., 16 N. Y. Supp. 155. Compare Werfelman v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 355; Ottenot v. New York, etc., R. Co., 2 N. Y. Supp. 722; Mitchell v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 130 (criticising the McGean case); Teerpenning v. Corn Exch. Ins.

is not error prejudicial to the railroad company, where it appears that similar evidence was admitted in its behalf,¹ or where it appears from the small amount awarded that no injustice was done

Co., 43 N. Y. 279; Marcy v. Shults, 29 N. Y. 346; Fremont, etc., R. Co. v. Whalen, 11 Neb. 585; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 364.

In the earlier cases, it was doubted whether there is much force in the rule excluding such evidence. In Thompson v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 64, Bookstaver, J., in commenting on the case of McGean v. Manhattan R. Co., 117 N. Y. 219, said: "The fact is, that for a long time, in nearly all of these damage cases, such testimony was admitted both as to the rental and fee value, although it must be conceded that it was very unsatisfactory and could aid the court but little in arriving at a conclusion upon the damages to any particular piece of property." And in the case of Crawford v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 120 N. Y. 624, the tenant of a room on the premises was asked "What would the room you occupy, and for which you said you paid five dollars, have been worth if the elevated railroad had not been opposite the house?" This question was objected to as being incompetent, and because the witness was not an expert. The objection was overruled, however, and the appellate court considered that the overruling was not error. The court said: "While the case of McGean v. Manhattan R. Co., 117 N. Y. 219, may be an authority for the appellant upon the admissibility of the evidence objected to, it is at the same time an adverse authority upon the sufficiency of the objections." See also 3 Sedgwick on Damages (8th ed.), § 1208.

Later cases, however, insist strenuously upon the observance of the rule. In Roberts v. New York El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 455; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 326, an expert witness was asked to testify what in his judgment "is the value of the property damaged, if at all, by the presence of the structure and the running of the trains." The admission of his answer was held to be a reversible error, since the question asked of the witness was the exact one which it was the jury's province to decide. The court went on to say that the proper method is to prove the value of the property before and after the construction of the elevated road, from which the court may ascertain the quantum of damage. The opinion of the court by Peckham, J., and the dissenting opinion of Gray, J., with whom concurred Ruger C. J., both discuss the question at great length. The case has been followed in preference to previous rulings in Wallach v. Manhattan El. R. Co., 16 N. Y. Supp. 156; Delafield v. Manhattan El. R. Co., 16 N. Y. Supp. 157.

See also Doyle v. Manhattan R. Co., 128 N. Y. 488; Gray v. Manhattan R. Co., 128 N. Y. 499; Blumenthal v. New York El. R. Co., 17 N. Y. Supp. 481; Kernochan v. New York El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 559; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 317 (question not sufficiently raised on appeal).

It was further held in Roberts v. New York El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 455; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 326, that the error in admitting such evidence was not rendered harmless by the fact that upon judgment being rendered against it the railroad might submit to an injunction, and in the meantime condemn the easements instead of taking from the plaintiff a deed in fee to them.

The admission of improper evidence is not cured by a finding of the court to the effect that such evidence is disregarded, "except where the opinion is a matter of personal experience and knowledge of the expert, as shown by prior and later testimony." The appellate court has no means of determining how much of such testimony the trial court considered. American Bank Note Co. v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 532.

In an action to recover damages arising from the operation of defendant's elevated railway in front of plaintiff's premises, the court properly permitted a witness to state what effect on plaintiff's light was produced by the railroad structure, such effect being a fact and not an inference. And evidence of the precipitation of cinders and dust from the structure to the sidewalk was properly admitted to show depreciation in the value of the premises. Stanley v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 931.

1. Thompson v. Manhattan El. R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 64.

to the company.¹ The testimony of a real estate agent that not one person in twenty would take property in the street occupied by the road, and that the reason assigned for such refusal was that it was "on account of the elevated railroad," is inadmissible as being hearsay.²

The principal contention which is made in this connection refers to the admissibility of the opinion of a person in the real estate business who is called as an expert. Many cases in the lower courts held that a real estate agent who has followed the sales and rental values of property in the neighborhood of the premises in question was competent to give his opinion as to the extent of depreciation in the value of the property on account of the elevated road;³ but the cases in the court of appeals oppose

1. When Admission of Improper Evidence May be Disregarded.—Mitchell v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 130; Kuh v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 58 N. Y. Super. Ct. 138. Thus in McGean v. Manhattan R. Co., 117 N. Y. 219, where there was abundant evidence that the actual rental value of similar property in the same street steadily decreased after the building of the road; that while it was being constructed business on the street began to fall off; that dirt, ashes, smoke, and cinders filled the air, darkened the light, and so embarrassed trade that business left the street, and the verdict was for a less amount than the damages this testimony tended to show, the error in the admission of such evidence was considered not to be a ground for reversal. Korn v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 514.

In Blumenthal v. New York El. R. Co., 17 N. Y. Supp. 481, it was held, on the ground that the payment of damages in avoidance of an injunction is a matter of favor, that, where the opinion of a witness as to the value of easements was improperly admitted and damages of a substantial character were shown, the judgment in plaintiff's favor might be so modified as to restrain the operation of the railroad unless the company took steps, within a reasonable time, to condemn the easements. See also Bolger v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 20 N. Y. Supp. 430.

2. Mooney v. New York El. R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 145.

3. Testimony of Real Estate Agent.—In Ottinger v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 912, in the general term of the supreme court of the first department, a real estate expert was asked, "What is the rental value of the property in question with the free use of all above the surface of the street of light, air, and access to and from the building?" The court held the question competent, saying by O'Brien, J.: "This precise question was passed upon in Korn v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 518, which we are informed was in December, 1891, affirmed by the court of appeals, 129 N. Y. 648 mem. The Korn case holds that the question objected to does not conflict with the rule laid down in the McGean case, 117 N. Y. 219."

And in Hine v. New York El. R. Co., 36 Hun (N. Y.) 293, a real estate broker familiar with the property in question was called by the railroad company and asked, "What has been the effect, in your opinion, of the elevated railroad upon the value of the property so far as the items of light, air, and access to the premises are concerned?" The plaintiff objected and the question was excluded. This exclusion was held error. Such evidence was also admitted in Shepard v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 175, it appearing that the witness had lived in the neighborhood for twenty-five years, owned property there, and had kept himself informed as to both the fee and the rental value.

There are other cases in which the same or similar questions have been allowed, and most of them have been reversed on appeal. Johnston v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 14 N. Y. Supp. 897; Cunningham v. Manhattan R. Co., 13 N. Y. Supp. 622; Benson v. Manhattan R. Co., 13 N. Y. Supp. 957; Livingston v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., this view, and uniformly hold that opinion evidence as to the amount or cause of the damage, must always be excluded, even when given by one who claims to be an expert.¹

To make available an exception to the admission of testimony of this character, the objection must be specifically taken that the question calls for a fact not provable by opinion.²

(2) Other Evidence.—Evidence as to damages of a speculative or contingent character is inadmissible; thus, in an action for damages it is prejudicial error to admit evidence as to possible uses which might be made of the plaintiff's property by the erec-

18 N. Y. Supp. 203 (witness allowed to testify as to the "course of rents in general"); Roosevelt v. New York El. R. Co., 57 N. Y. Super. Ct. 438 (witness who knew the premises allowed to say what would be their present value without the railroad); Jones v. New York El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 134; Jefferson v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 11 N. Y. Supp. 488; reversed 132 N. Y. 483; Werfelman v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 355; reversed 134 N. Y. 613; Johnston v. Manhattan R. Co., 11 N. Y. Supp. 68; reversed 134 N. Y. 613.

1. In McGean v. Manhattan R. Co., 117 N. Y. 219, the opinion of a witness was held incompetent, but it did not appear that the witness was an expert.

In Roberts v. New York El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 455; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 326; rev'd 12 N. Y. Supp. 957, the witness was asked: "To what extent, if at all, in your judgment, is the value of the property damaged, by the presence of the structure and the running of the trains?" It was held that such a question was not competent; that this was the exact question for the determination of the court and jury; that the proper method was to prove the value of the property before and after the construction of the road, from which the quantum of damages may be ascertained. This case is followed in Gray v. Manhattan R. Co., 128 N. Y. 499, and Jefferson v. New York El. R. Co., 132 N. Y. 483, where it is held error to permit a witness to testify as to what in his opinion "would be the value of the property were it not for the existence of the road." Such a question is not only objectionable as being an opinion, but as being in regard to a matter of speculation. Kernochan v. New York El. R. Co., 130 N. Y. 651; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 351; Suydam v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 19 N. Y. Supp. 49, and cases cited; Doyle v. Manhattan R. Co., 128 N. Y. 488; McGay v. Manhattan El. R. Co., 16 N. Y. Supp. 155; Wallach v. Manhattan El. R. Co., 16 N. Y. Supp. 156; Sillcocks v. New York El. R. Co., 19 N. Y. Supp. 476; Avery v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 121 N. Y. 31. See also Kernochan v. New York El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 559; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 317.

A real-estate expert cannot be permitted to testify that the physical effects of an elevated railway upon the property of an abutting owner, caused a depreciation of the rental value of the property. Such a fact is not the subject of expert testimony. Blum v. Manhattan R. Co., 20 N. Y. Supp. 722.

In Peyton v. New York El. R. Co., 62 Hun (N. Y.) 536, it was held that the court erred in allowing real estate agents to testify that better tenants of a property affected by the operation of an elevated railway were obtainable before the building of the road than after, and in admitting testimony that property in a neighboring avenue on which there was no elevated road commanded better rent than that abutting on avenues occupied by such roads; the testimony in either case being a mere inference from facts.

2. In Kernochan v. New York El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 559; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 317, the rule as to the exclusion of such evidence was recognized, but it was held that where an expert is asked to state, in his judgment, the amount of damage suffered, a general objection on the ground of incompetency is insufficient to raise the point that the question involved a fact not provable by opinion.

And in Carter v. New York El. R. Co., 134 N. Y. 168, the objection to the opinion of an expert witness as to the existence of the amount of damages sustained was on the ground that it was "immaterial, incompetent, and tion of expensive buildings upon it, and as to the amount of income which might be expected to be derived from these improvements.¹

Evidence as to the amount of depreciation in rental value of the property on account of the construction of the road is admissible against the railroad company, if it is not given in the form of the estimate of a witness, and is not objectionable as being an opinion on a matter which the jury is to decide;² and, in a proceeding for an injunction, evidence as to the impairment of the rental value of the premises is not rendered incompetent by the fact that the plaintiff himself was the occupant thereof.³

As a general rule, evidence as to the effect of the road on property adjacent to the plaintiff's premises and on the same street is admissible;⁴ but this is true only where the character of the plaintiff's property bears such a similarity to the other property, concerning which evidence is admitted, as to make it reasonable hypothetical, and that the difference in value was not the measure of damages." It was held that this was insufficient to raise the point that the opinion evidence was inadmissible, in view of the fact that both parties asked their expert witnesses this identical question. See also the language used in the case of McGean v. Manhattan R. Co., 117 N. Y. 219.

1. Evidence of Speculative or Contingent Damages.—Sixth Ave. R. Co. v. Metropolitan R. Co., 56 Hun (N. Y.) 182; Mundorf v. New York El. R. Co., 62 Hun (N. Y.) 465.

Thus, in an action for damages caused by the construction of an elevated road, evidence of what it would have cost to have erected dwelling houses on the lots, what they would have rented for if they had been built with the road there, and what they would have rented for had the road not been constructed, is inadmissible as being speculative and contingent. The measure of damages is the diminution in the rental and usable value of the lots computed for the time embraced in the action. Tallman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 119; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 409; rev'd 2 N. Y. Supp. 130.

But the testimony of a witness as to the rental or fee value of the premises without the railroad, based partly upon the possibility of the new building being used for offices, cannot be stricken out on motion as being based partly upon conjecture or a possibility, where the substance of the testimony is that the opinion is based upon the uses to which the building is adapted, among them its use for offices. Kernochan v. New York El. R. Co., 13 N. Y. Supp. 624; aff'd 8 N. Y. Supp. 648.

The rule of the text is opposed by Mr. Sedgwick, who says: "There seems to be no reason or principle why, in suits for the fee value, such testimony should not be received." 3 Sedg. on Dam. (8th ed.), § 1208.

2. Evidence as to Rental Value.—Moore v. New York El. R. Co., 59 N. Y. Super. Ct. 32 (particularly where the witness also states the value of the property before and after the railroad is built); Korn v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 59 Hun (N. Y.) 505; Bischoff v. New York El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 865.

Under the constitutional provision compensation must always be made before the taking of the property; therefore, in condemnation proceedings it is proper to reject evidence that the property had not depreciated in value from such taking. Jewett v. Union El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 1 N. Y. Supp. 123.

An agreed rent, and a lease showing the agreement, while not conclusive, is admissible as evidence showing the rental value of the premises affected by the railroad, provided the witness shows that the lessors had taken possession thereunder and paid the stipulated rent. Greenwood v. Manhattan R. Co., 19 N. Y. Supp. 702.

3. Woolsey v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 133.

4. Thus the testimony of owners of property in the neighborhood of the plaintiff's premises that they had difficulty in renting their flats after the to presume that the road had a like effect upon each, and it is error to admit evidence as to injuries sustained by other property on the same avenue but in no way connected with or similar to plaintiff's property.¹ Evidence of the diminution of the rental value of other buildings near to that of the plaintiff, but not on the line of the railroad, is also admissible in behalf of the railroad company.² Evidence that since the building of the railroad the trade and business of the street has fallen off and the amount of custom greatly diminished in volume and changed in character, is competent and relevant evidence on an issue as to the depreciation of the value of an abutting owner's property.³

It is error to admit in evidence an offer made to the plaintiff to purchase the premises in question for the purpose of showing their value prior to the construction of the road.⁴

road was built, is competent as showing the uniform operation of a general cause, and that the plaintiff's loss of rents was not attributable to his own neglect. Kuh v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 58 N. Y. Super. Ct. 138.

The rule of the text is sustained also in Sherwood v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 852; Myers v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 10 N. Y. Supp. 223; Benjamin v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 908 (witness owning adjacent property allowed to state why he changed his building into a hotel); Galway v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 47 (in this case a photograph of a building on a corner directly opposite to the plaintiff's was also admitted in evidence); Brush v. Manhattan R. Co., 17 N. Y. Supp. 541; Johnston v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 16 N. Y. Supp. 434 (effect of smoke and cinders on plaintiff's property proven by effect of same on adjacent property similarly situated).

Proof of the existence of posts or columns supporting part of the elevated structure which is complained against is admissible, although such columns are not in front of plaintiff's property. Galway v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 47. See also Steinmetz v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 209.

1. Sixth Ave. R. Co. v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 56 Hun (N. Y.) 182. Compare Bischoff v. New York El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 865.

Thus the testimony of a witness as to what rent he paid for premises on an adjacent street not on the line of the road is properly rejected, when it is not shown under what circumstances he occupied the premises, and why the landlord was induced to receive the rent he did. Thompson v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 64.

2. In re Union El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 7 N. Y. Supp. 853; Kane v. New York El. R. Co., 125 N. Y. 187; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137. In this latter case, however, it was held that the rejection of such evidence would not be ground for reversal, it appearing that in the early part of the trial the parties apparently assented to a rule excluding evidence of this character. See also Sherwood v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 852.

3. Drucker v. Manhattan R. Co., 106 N. Y. 157; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 418; Biggart v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 508.

But, this effect must be the result of a taking of the easements of the abutting property. A change in the character of the neighborhood, directly or indirectly attributable to the presence of the railroad, cannot be taken into consideration in estimating plaintiff's damages. Moore v. New York El. R. Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 510.

4. Offer to Purchase Property as Evidence.—Hine v. Manhattan R. Co., 132 N. Y. 477, rev'd 13 N. Y. Supp. 510; Lawrence v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 502. The court in this last case quoted with approval the language of Follett, J., in delivering the opinion in Keller v. Paine, 34 Hun (N. Y.) 177: "It has been intimated in some cases that offers are evidence of value, but it is a class of evidence which it is much safer to reject than to receive. Its value depends upon too many circum-

It will be observed that the improper admission or rejection of evidence is not ground for reversal, where it appears from all the facts in the case that such admission or rejection was harmless.¹

The rules concerning the admissibility of evidence are not to be applied strictly in proceedings before commissioners of appraisal appointed by the supreme court. As a general rule such commissioners have a wider range and a larger discretion as to the reception of evidence than the courts have, and unless their award is manifestly unjust it will not be disturbed.²

stances. If evidence of offers is to be received it will be important to know whether the offer was made in good faith by a man of good judgment acquainted with the value of the article and of sufficient ability to pay; also whether the offer was cash, or credit, or in exchange; or whether made in reference to the market value of the article, or to supply a particular need, or to gratify a fancy. Private offers can be multiplied to any extent for purposes of a cause, and the bad faith in which they were made will be difficult to prove. The reception of this class of evidence would multiply the issues upon the questions of damages to an extent not to be tolerated by courts aiming practically to administer justice between litigants." See also Seale v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 16 N. Y. Supp. 419; Whitney v. Thatcher, 117 Mass. 523.

But when the Lawrence case above mentioned came up a second time, in a proceeding for an injunction, the court regarded the admission of such evidence as inoperative to affect the validity of the judgment, on the ground that the basis of the action was the right to injunctive relief, and that recovery of past damages was merely incidental, and allowable only for purposes of complete justice. Lawrence v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 501; and in Kuh v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 58 N. Y. Super. Ct. 138, it is considered that the error in admitting such evidence was not ground for a reversal, it appearing that the award was a reasonable one. But in Hine v. Manhattan R. Co., 132 N. Y. 477, where the question of the value of the property was sharply contested, it was held reversible error to admit such evidence.

1. Harmless Errors.—Kuh v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 58 N. Y. Super. Ct. 138; Mitchell v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 130; McGean v. Manhattan R. Co., 117 N.

Y. 219; White v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 396; In re New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 909; Ottinger v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 912.

The error, if any, in permitting the plaintiff to prove that his tenant had demanded a decrease in the rent of the premises on account of the presence of the elevated railroad, the amount of decrease not being shown, is cured if the court charges the jury not to consider the abatement of the rent for any purposes. Mortimer v. New York El. R. Co., 57 N. Y. Super. Ct. 244.

2. In Proceedings Before Commissioners of Appraisal.—In re New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 8 N. Y. Supp. 707; 15 N. Y. Supp. 909; In re New York, etc., R. Co., 27 Hun (N. Y.) 122; Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Lee, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 169. In the former of these cases the court, by Van Brunt, P. J., said: "The rule is well settled that commissioners appointed in proceedings such as these are at bar (condemnation proceedings) are not to be governed in the receipt of evidence by the strict rules obtaining in a court. Indeed the statute says they shall not be. They may go and view the premises, and upon the knowledge thus acquired base their award."

The commissioners may disregard the testimony of witnesses as to the damage resulting to the property from the construction of the road, and may base their conclusion on knowledge and information obtained solely from a view of the premises. In re Kings Co. El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 516.

The ordinary rules of evidence are not applicable in a proceeding before commissioners to ascertain damages to property resulting from the erection and operation of an elevated railway, and their report cannot be rejected

Other miscellaneous cases involve the application of well-known rules as to the admissibility of evidence.¹

e. MEASURE OF DAMAGES—(1) Generally.—The recovery by the abutting owner is based upon the ground that the presence of the elevated railroad impairs his easements of light and air, and of access in the street. In actions at law to recover past damages, it is for the jury to determine, under the circumstances, the actual amount of injury sustained;² and where the landowner alleges the existence of the road as the cause of the decrease in because of the admission of testimony which would not be received in a court. Commissioners are usually laymen and not supposed to be acquainted with the technical rules of evidence. In re Sobel (Supreme Ct.), 8 N. Y. Supp. 707; In re New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 909; In re Kings County El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 516.

1. Hearsay Evidence.—See generally HEARSAY EVIDENCE, vol. 9, p. 325. Thus, declarations by tenants testified to by the janitor of the house as to the entry of dirt, smoke, etc., from the railroad into their rooms, because of which they were forced to keep their windows closed, but not assigned as a reason for giving up their rooms in the house, are mere hearsay and cannot be admitted in evidence. Saxton v. New York El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 188.

In Barrett v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 71, the landowner, the plaintiff in the case, was called as a witness in his own behalf. The railroad then called a former tenant of the plaintiff's, who testified that he had never complained to plaintiff of the dust, smoke, cinders, etc. Plaintiff being recalled related conversations of the tenant complaining of serious injury to his goods from dust and cinders. It was held that such conversations were not hearsay, but original evidence, for the purpose of impeaching the tenant.

Motive of Witness in Leaving Premises Incompetent.—In Moore v. New York El. R. Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 510, a witness was not allowed to be asked this question: "Was the reason of your going away from there (i. e., the premises in question), in any way connected with the effects produced by the operation of the road?" It was held that the exclusion of the question was not error. It called for the conclusion of a witness as the reason for doing a certain act, and was clearly incompetent, since the motive of a witness in performing an act can only be given in evidence when there is no other method of proving it. See Scott v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 21 N. Y. Supp. 630.

Evidence of Use of Premises by Owner for Illegal Purposes.—In Lawrence v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 126 N. Y. 483; aff'd 16 Daly (N. Y.) 501, evidence was given tending to show that before the construction of the road the house on the landowner's premises had been rented by the plaintiff's agent to persons who had used it as a house of prostitution. There was evidence tending to show that the agent had notice that in some cases the house was so used, and that he renewed leases after such notice; but there was no evidence showing that he in any way affirmatively aided, abetted, or countenanced such use, or that the rent was fixed with reference thereto. The counsel for the railroad requested the court to find that the purpose for which the house was used was known to the plaintiff's agent, and that for such purpose the railroad had caused no diminution in the rental value. It was held proper to refuse such requests as irrelevant; and that the particular use of the house had nothing to do with the injury suffered by the plaintiff, but was wholly independent of it. Ely v. Niagara Co., 36 N. Y. 297.

2. Province of the Jury.—The question of the amount of damages actually suffered by the landowner is, like all other questions of fact, for the jury. Williams v. Brooklyn El. R. Co., 126 N. Y. 96; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 149.

The jury's province, however, does not go further than the determination of the amount of damages upon the evidence produced at the trial; whether the elevated structure is or is not one which the legislature may lawfully authorize to be constructed in the street, without the landowner's consent, is a

the value of his property, and the company maintains that the decrease is due to other causes, it is for the jury to say to what the decrease is attributable.¹ But, as will be seen, where the proceeding is in equity for an injunction, the whole matter is for the determination of the court, including the measure of past damages; and in all cases the finding of the trial court, whether by the court, by referee, or by jury, will not be disturbed, except where there is a plain case of error.² The measure of damages is the same, whether the landowner has the fee of the street or a mere easement therein.³

In a common-law action the damages recovered are for the injury to the actual, rental, and usable value of the premises up to the time of the commencement of the action;⁴ and this rule applies in determining the measure of past damages in injunction proceedings.⁵

question of law and for the court. Williams v. Brooklyn El. R. Co., 126 N. Y. 96; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 149.

In Moore v. New York El. R. Co., 126 N. Y. 671, the court stated to the jury the amount of annual loss suffered by the plaintiff, as testified to by the defendant's witnesses, caused by the maintenance and operation of the elevated railroad, and charged them that they must find a verdict in gross for not less than that sum with interest. The charge was held error; for while in such actions the jury may in their discretion award damages incapable of liquidation by computation, they are not bound to do so. Citing for authority Walrath v. Redfield, 18 N. Y. 462; Mairs v. Manhattan Real Estate Assoc., 89 N. Y. 498.

1. The plaintiff's evidence in an action showed that shortly after the construction of the road, the rental value of the property depreciated. The evidence on the part of the railroad company showed that the falling off in the rents was due to the removal of the grocery trade which had become centered in the street in question to another locality. It was held that the cause for the difference in the rental value of the property was a question for the jury to decide. Moore v. New York El. R. Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 510.

2. That the railroad company cannot demand a trial by jury in an injunction proceeding, although the question as to past damages is involved, is settled by the case of Lynch v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 274; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 308. See infra, this title, Right to Trial by Jury.

The amount of compensation awarded on trial by the court upon a direct conflict of evidence as to the extent of the injury from the elevated structure, will not be held excessive on appeal where it is not inconsistent with the facts shown and does not transcend the fair effect of the evidence. Galway v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 47; aff'd 128 N. Y. 432. See also Barrett v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 71.

3. Measure of Damages Not Affected by Ownership of Fee.—Sobel v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 342; Story v. New York El. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 162; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 596; 43 Am. Rep. 146.

4. Uline v. New York Cent. St. R. Co., 101 N. Y. 109; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 3; 54 Am. Rep. 661. See supra, this title, Common Law Action.

It was held in American Bank Note Co. v. New York El. R. Co., 59 N. Y. Super. Ct. 175, that where the abutting owner was a corporation, and itself occupied the premises, it could not recover as for loss of rental value, but might recover for additional expense incurred caused by the construction, maintenance and operation of the road; such as in the case at bar the cost of an electric light plant and running the same, the cost of reflectors, the injury and expense in the use of the property and interest on certain items.

5. Tallman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 119; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 409.

In equitable actions for interference with easements, damages to rental value may be computed to the time of trial, and interest on the sum awarded

In a proceeding in equity for an injunction, this being in the nature of condemnation proceedings, such prospective damages are awarded as would be assessed in a proceeding to condemn the same property.¹ And the measure of damages is the injury to the fee value—i. e., the permanent depreciation in the value of the property caused by the taking of the easements of light, air, and access; it is the value of the easements at the time of the trial, which may be determined by proof of what the property would then be worth with and without the railroad.²

for fee value may be allowed until the time of payment of the award. Kane v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 109; Suarez v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 222.

It will be observed that the damages allowed by way of incidental relief include all damages up to the time of the trial and decree, and are not limited to such as accrued prior to the commencement of the action. Mortimer v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 2; Suarez v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 222.

1. Measure of Prospective Damages in Injunction Proceedings.—The doctrine most commonly followed is clearly set out in American Bank Note Co. v. New York El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 252; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 302, where the court, by Finch, J., says: "There is no doubt in this case, and I think no doubt in any case, that an injunction of the court of equity and its alternative damages are to be deemed a substitute for the ordinary proceedings for condemnation, with the practical difference only that in the one case the company is the moving party and in the other the owner; for this court does not in the least degree assent to the doctrine which has been sometimes advocated, that the alternative damages are wholly in the unlimited discretion of the court and so the elevated railroads entirely at its mercy. We had supposed that every trace of a boundless and arbitrary discretion in a court of equity had wholly disappeared. There is no difficulty in assuming that the alternative damages are awarded to the same extent and for the same elements as the compensation in a special proceeding for the condemnation of land under the law of eminent domain. The form is different, but the result is identical. It follows, therefore, that the alternative damages in equity must be such, and only such, as would be given in a proceeding for the condemnation of lands for railroad use, due regard being had to the different characteristics of the property to be taken." Compare Galway v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 432, and Sperb v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 137 N. Y. 155.

The rule first stated is also followed by Peckham, J., who, in delivering the opinion of the court in Bohm v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 576; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 275, said: "Although these suits are in equity commenced to obtain equitable relief, and to prevent the defendants from operating their road unless they pay to the plaintiffs the damages they will sustain, yet the rules upon which such damages are to be awarded are so far well settled as to enable us to say that those damages are only such as would be given in a proceeding for the condemnation of lands for a railroad use, regard being had to the different characteristics of the property to be taken in these cases. This rule was last announced by this court in the recent case of American Bank Note Co. v. New York El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 252; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 292."

2. Measure of Damages to Fee Value.—Hamilton v. Manhattan R. Co., 58 N. Y. Super. Ct. 17; Kenkele v. Manhattan R. Co., 55 Hun (N. Y.) 398. See also Ode v. Manhattan R. Co., 56 Hun (N. Y.) 199.

Damages may be recovered in an injunction proceeding for the diminished value of the fee, in view of the permanency of the elevated structure, even though there is no diminution of the rental value. Sloan v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 769.

In Willetts v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 923, in an application for an injunction, the value of the premises was fixed at thirty thousand dollars in 1872, and it appeared that it was of the same value at the time of the suit, while the value of the property in the vicinity, but not on the line of the railroad, had advanced from eighteen to twenty per cent. in that period. The court granted the injunction, assessing the damages to the fee at eight thousand dollars. It was held that the damages were excessive, but as the proof necessary to fix their actual amount was before the appellate court, judgment was affirmed on condition that the plaintiff consent to a reduction to five thousand four hundred dollars.

In an action against an elevated railway company to recover damages caused by the operation of the road in front of plaintiff's premises, the depreciation of the value of the servient property caused by the impairment of the easements taken, must be compensated as part of the consequential damages suffered from the taking. Cunard v. Manhattan R. Co., 20 N. Y. Supp. 724.

A referee in an action against an elevated railway company for damages to an abutting owner cannot be required to find the value of the plaintiff's easements in themselves apart from the property affected. Their value lies in the effect of their destruction or impairment of the property, and the measure of their value is the amount of depreciation of the property caused by their severance. Betjeman v. New York El. R. Co., 20 N. Y. Supp. 628.

A very heavy increase in the value of property in the streets adjacent to an elevated railroad, and a very slight increase in the value of premises abutting on the railroad, is sufficient to show that the railroad injuriously affects the abutting property, and to warrant an injunction against the further operation of the road. Bernheimer v. Manhattan R. Co., 13 N. Y. Supp. 913.

Excessive or Insufficient Damages.—

Where plaintiff's evidence showed that defendant's elevated railway was about eighteen feet from his premises; that engines were switched in front of the premises; that passing engines sent out steam, smoke, and cinders into his house; that a large percentage of light was cut off from the house; that the road had been so operated for four years; that there was a loss of rentals in consequence, and no peculiar benefit to the premises from the road appeared, and no evidence whatever was introduced by defendant, a verdict for plaintiff of six cents damages was held contrary to the evidence, and a new trial was granted. Jones v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 59 N. Y. Super. Ct. 437.

An award against an elevated railway company for damages to abutting property caused by the operation of defendant's road will not, in a case of conflicting evidence, be set aside on the ground that it is excessive. Sternberger v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 20 N. Y. Supp. 857; Betjeman v. New York R. Co., 20 N. Y. Supp. 628.

Proximity of Stations.—In case the company constructs in front of the plaintiff's premises a station, nearly twenty-five feet of which is directly in front of the plaintiff's property, the remainder extending beyond it along the street, the plaintiff may recover compensation, not only for the obstruction of light and air by the part of the structure in front of his land, but also for such injury by the adjacent portion of the structure. Galway v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 47; aff'd 128 N. Y. 432. The easement of light is not confined to the part of the street directly in front of the premises, and if the shadows cast by the station impair this easement, damages may be reversed though no part of the station is in front of the premises. Galway v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 608.

The likelihood of the erection by the railroad company of a station for passengers in front of the plaintiff's premises may be taken into account by the trial court in ascertaining the future damages. Stirn v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 4 N. Y. Supp. 323.

Damages Resulting from the Contemplated Building of the Road.—In Williams v. Brooklyn El. R. Co., 126 N. Y. 96; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 149, damages were claimed only for the six years prior to the commencement of the action, which was in November 1886, and the jury were expressly limited to this time. It appeared that the charter was awarded in 1879, and in that year columns were erected in front of the plaintiff's premises, but the road was not completed until 1885. The court properly refused to charge that no damages were recoverable for any depreciation of the rental value of the property resulting from the con-

The difference between the value of the property before the construction of the road and that at the time of the trial is ordinarily the best indication of the amount of damage to its fee value.¹ But in case the premises have been unfavorably affected by changes in the business character of the street not due to the existence of the elevated road, then it is error to charge the railroad with the entire decrease in value.² And, on the other hand, if the property has advanced in value, in spite of and not because of the operation of the road, the railroad is not to be credited with the rise in value, but the damage to the fee must be determined by other considerations.³

For injuries occasioned to personal property by the falling of cinders, the exclusion of light, etc., no damages can be recovered in a proceeding for an injunction. In such a proceeding the recovery is confined to the depreciation in value of the real estate caused by an infringement of the easements.⁴ templated building of the road, or from the rumors of such building. It was held also that the court properly submitted to the jury the question as to whether the obstruction of the street during the progress of the work diminished the rental value of the houses on the premises, proof having been furnished to support the plaintiff's contention on that point.

Loss of Privacy.—In Moore v. New York El. R. Co., 130 N. Y. 523, on action at law, it was held that it was error, for which the case would be reversed, for the court to direct the jury to exclude from their consideration in the estimation of damages the subject of the loss of privacy in his house by the plaintiff. It appeared that the only rooms affected were those on the second and third stories, but that passengers on the station platform, and while ascending and descending the steps, continually gazed into the windows, destroying the privacy of the rooms, and causing constant annoyance to the occupant. The court held that while it was true that the intrusion of the privacy of the rooms was not caused by the company's servants or agents, still as it had furnished the means and opportunity for its patrons to invade the privacy, it should be held responsible.

So also in Messenger v. Manhattan R. Co., 129 N. Y. 502, where the structure was an illegal one, it was held that evidence of annoyance suffered by interference with the privacy of the premises, and by noise caused by the operation of the road, has a competent bearing upon the rental value, but not upon the fee value of the premises. See also Buckleuch v. Metropolitan Board of Works, L. R., 5 H. L. 418.

1. Difference in Values.—See Hamilton v. Manhattan R. Co., 58 N. Y. Super. Ct. 17; Thompson v. Manhattan R. Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 438; Mortimer v. Manhattan R. Co., 57 N. Y. Super. Ct. 509.

2. Mooney v. New York El. R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 145.

3. Moss v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 42; Herold v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 13 N. Y. Supp. 610; infra, this title, Deduction on Account of Benefits, etc.

4. Injuries to Personal Property.—In American Bank Note Co. v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 532, an engraving company by an action for an injunction sought to recover damages for injuries to personal property consisting of plates, paper, processes, etc., arising from the exclusion of light and the precipitation of cinders. The court held that there could be no recovery for such injuries in this action. Van Brunt, P. J., said: "This action, as has already been stated, is to restrain the running of the road, unless they pay the value of the easements taken, which value is to be ascertained by determining the depreciation of the plaintiff's premises caused by reason of the erection and operation of the road. As incident to such an action past damages in the shape of diminution in the rental or usable value of the premises occasioned by this continuing trespass

The plaintiff's recovery is confined to actual damages and is not allowed to extend to damages of a speculative or contingent character, nor to such as are merely nominal or do not result naturally from the operation of the railroad.¹

(2) Damages from Smoke, Cinders, etc.—The elevated railroad company is liable for the consequences flowing from the operation of its trains in respect to the distribution in the air of smoke, dust, steam, gas, cinders, ashes, and other deleterious substances from its engines and cars.² The rule that the proper exercise of a lawful authority does not afford a ground of recovery³ cannot have been allowed, but in no case has the court gone so far as to hold that damages to personal property might be recovered in an action of this description. The action in question is one relating entirely to the realty, and has no reference to any question as to personal property; and if any damages have been sustained by personal property, which the plaintiffs can recover against the defendants, it must be by an action of a different nature."

1. Speculative or Contingent Damages.

—For example, such damages as may result from the negligent and unskillful operation of the road, as setting buildings on fire, and evidence of such probable damage is therefore inadmissible. Mundorf v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 124.

Therefore, evidence is inadmissible of what it would have cost to build dwelling houses on the premises; what they would have rented for had they been built with the road there, and what they would have rented for had the road not been constructed. Tallman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 119; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 409, rev'd 2 N. Y. Supp. 130. See also Sixth Ave. R. Co. v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 56 Hun (N. Y.) 182.

Plaintiff's Recovery Confined to Actual Damages.—Thus, the owner of a building abutting on a street occupied by an elevated railway will not be entitled to compensation for injuries to rental value during the time that the building was undergoing alterations, practically making it a new building, or while the building was being pulled down and another erected in its place. Ottinger v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 238; Martin v. Manhattan R. Co., 63 Hun (N. Y.) 350.

A property owner is not entitled to recover for the damages in value of his property, occasioned by the maintenance of a freight depot for an elevated railway in a building next but one to his premises, where such depot is not in the street, or on any property subject to his easement, and there is nothing to show that its maintenance is illegal. Leale v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 16 N. Y. Supp. 418.

Damages are not recoverable for alleged injuries to a building wholly unconnected with the main building, and having its entrance, and receiving its light and air, from another street, where defendant's structure does not exist. Mooney v. New York El. R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 145. Thus, where property abuts on a street occupied by the elevated road, and extends back to a parallel street, and has a frontage and entrance on both streets, and the basements so connect, that access to either frontage can be had from the other, the owner will be entitled to compensation only for the easements appurtenant to the frontage on the street occupied by the railway. Ottinger v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 238; Bischoff v. New York El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 865.

The plaintiff's legal expenses incurred in prosecuting his suit cannot be recovered; they are not damages that naturally result from the operation of the railroad. Mattlage v. New York El. R. Co., 17 N. Y. Supp. 536.

2. Smoke, Dust, Cinders, etc.—Lahr v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 269. Compare Sixth Ave. R. Co. v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 56 Hun (N. Y.) 182, where evidence was held inadmissible which tended to show misconduct on the part of men in the service of the railroad company, and as to other annoyances resulting from the operation of the railroad, not affecting the plaintiff's easements of light, air, and access.

3. See NUISANCES, vol. 16, p. 1000;

be invoked in this instance. The smoke, cinders, etc., in so far as they interfere with the easement of the abutting owner, are not consequential damages, but constitute a partial taking of property, which cannot occur except upon compensation being made to parties injured thereby.¹

(3) Consequential Damages — Noise, Vibration, etc. — Injuries occasioned to property from the noise and vibration of moving trains are consequential damages for which no recovery can be

RAILROADS, vol. 19, pp. 862, 923; 1 Wood's Ry. Law, p. 613; Wood on Nuisances, p. 852.

1. Stevens v. New York El. R. Co., 57 N. Y. Super. Ct. 416 (damages from smoke considered in eminent-domain proceedings).

In Lahr v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 295, the court by Ruger, C. J., said: "The structure here, and its intended use, cannot be separated and dissected, and it must be regarded in its entirety in considering the effect which it produced upon the property of the abutter. However the damage may be inflicted, provided it be effected by an unlawful use of the street, it constitutes a trespass rendering the wrongdoer liable for the consequences of his acts. The legislature, as we have seen, had no power to authorize the street to be used for an elevated steam railroad, and that want of authority extends to every incident necessary to make the road an operative elevated steam railroad, which occasions injury to the rights of abutters on the street. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Fifth Baptist Church, 108 U. S. 317; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 15." Quoted and approved in Kane v. New York El. R. Co., 125 N. Y. 186; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 148 (noise of trains); Drucker v. Manhattan R. Co., 106 N. Y. 157; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 418; Abendroth v. Manhattan R. Co., 122 N. Y. 1; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 128; followed in Duyckinck v. New York El. R. Co., 125 N. Y. 710 (damages allowed for dust, etc., though no injury to access was proven); Sloane v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 769.

In Cogswell v. New York, etc., R. Co., 103 N. Y. 10; 27 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 376, it appeared that the railroad company erected upon a lot adjoining a dwelling house occupied by the plaintiff, an engine house and coal bins for its road, and used the same in operating it. The smoke, soot, cinders, and coal dust caused by such use filled the plaintiff's house, rendering the air offensive and unwholesome and the house practically untenable. Whether the legislature could authorize the company to maintain an engine house under such circumstances was left quære. But conceding this, it was held that statutory sanction must be clear and explicit; that in the present case the use of its property by the railroad constituted a nuisance, for which the owner of adjacent land might recover damages. The court distinguished the cases of Radcliff v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 195; 53 Am. Dec. 357, and Bellinger v. New York Cent. R. Co., 23 N. Y. 42. See also Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Fifth Baptist Church, 108 U. S. 317; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 15.

In Porth v. Manhattan El. R. Co., 58 N. Y. Super. Ct. 366, the inconvenience and injury suffered by plaintiff from dirt and dust swept from defendant's station platform and stairway was considered an element of damage for which he was entitled to compensation.

Smoke, Cinders, etc., Impair the Easements of Light and Air. — The distribution in the air of gas, smoke, cinders, and other deleterious substances, interfere with and materially impair the easements of light and air which the abutting owner has in the street, and, therefore, constitute a taking of property, so that such elements are to be considered in determining the prospective damages. Thus in Peyser v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 13 Daly (N. Y.) 122, the court, by Daly, J., said: "All the evidence as to the darkening of the plaintiff's windows by the passage of trains, and the emission of smoke and steam was properly admitted. The elevated structure was built to permit the passage of these trains, and to attempt to distinguish between the obscuration of light caused by the structure exclusively is not to be justified on principle. It is also proper to had when the occupation of the street by the railroad company is lawful. A proper exercise of the lawful authority affords no ground of recovery, and consequently injuries sustained are damnum absque injuria.¹ But so long as such occupation is unlawful the railroad company is a trespasser and liable for all injuries occasioned by the operation of its road, including those resulting from the noise and vibration of moving trains.² Such damages, therefore, can only be considered in an action to determine past damages. In estimating prospective damages in a proceeding for an injunction, noise and vibration are not to be considered.³ admit evidence of the smoke and stench emitted by the engines which compelled plaintiffs' tenant to keep the windows closed. If the air from the street which the windows were intended to emit was not to be obtained except accompanied by the smell and smoke, and these latter were unbearable, there was as much a deprivation of the air as if a palpable barrier had been erected outside the window." The doctrine of this case is followed in Smith v. New York El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 132. See also Somers v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 576; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 271; Jordan v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 205; Purdy v. Manhattan El. R. Co., 22 N. Y. Supp. 943.

The only case holding a different doctrine is that of Sperb v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 61 Hun 539, and this has been several times disapproved and was reversed in 137 N. Y. 155.

It is no defense to a claim for damages against an elevated railway company for obstructing plaintiff's light, that the light was required for the display of cut glass, and that artificial light was better for that purpose than natural light. Scott v. Manhattan R. Co., 17 N. Y. Supp. 364.

The testimony of a former tenant of premises affected by the operation of an elevated railway, that he moved away on account of the smoke and obstruction of light resulting from the operation of the road, is competent and material on the question of damages to an abutting owner. Scott v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 21 N. Y. Supp. 630.

1. Noise and Vibration as Elements of Damage.—American Bank Note Co. v. New York El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 252; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 293; Peyser v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 13 Daly (N. Y.) 122; Caro v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. 138 (noisome odors); Ode v. Manhattan R. Co., 56 Hun (N. Y.) 199. Compare Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Lippincott, 116 Pa. St. 472; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 399, and note.

See the general principle stated in NUISANCES, vol. 16, p. 1000; RAILROADS, vol. 19, pp. 862, 923.

In Kane v. New York El. R. Co., 125 N. Y. 186; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137, where the noise was considered an element of damage, the court was careful to say: "If the defendant had the lawful right to operate its trains in the street, such inconvenience as might result to the plaintiff in the enjoyment of his property from the ordinary and usual operation of the defendant's road would not, in the absence of negligence on its part, furnish a ground of action." In Drucker v. Manhattan R. Co., 106 N. Y. 164; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 418, the question of damages for noise was mentioned but was left undecided. See also Sixth Ave. R. Co. v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 138 N. Y. 548.

2. Kane v. New York El. R. Co., 125 N. Y. 186; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137; Smith v. New York El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 132; Hussner v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 114 N. Y. 433; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 219.

3. American Bank Note Co. v. New York El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 252; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 292; Sperb v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 61 Hun (N. Y.) 539; Ode v. Manhattan R. Co., 56 Hun (N. Y.) 199; Klep v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 17 N. Y. Supp. 804.

The noise occasions damage to the rental value, and in estimating damages to such value it is, therefore, to be considered; but it cannot be considered in estimating the value of the fee. Messenger v. Manhattan R. Co., 129 N. Y. 502; Bischoff v. New York El. R. Co., 138 N. Y. 257.

Noise in the operation of an elevated

(4) Depreciation of Rental Value of Premises.—Evidence of a decrease in the rental value of the premises is always admissible, and where it can be shown that the construction and maintenance of the elevated road has caused the rental value to depreciate, damages may be recovered to the extent of the injury sustained.¹ And this is true whether the premises are occupied by tenants under a lease executed after the construction of the road² or by the owner himself.³ Such damages include compensation for all past injury occasioned by the interference of the road with the easements of light, air, and access.⁴

railway is an element of past damages, though not of fee damages. Pryor, J., in Golden v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 20 N. Y. Supp. 630, citing Kane v. New York El. R. Co., 125 N. Y. 165; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 148; Messenger v. Manhattan R. Co., 129 N. Y. 503; Moore v. New York El. R. Co., 130 N. Y. 523; Mitchell v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 132 N. Y. 553.

1. Tallman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 119; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 409; Drucker v. Manhattan R. Co., 106 N. Y. 157; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 418; Lawrence v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 126 N. Y. 483; Woolsey v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 133; Moore v. New York El. R. Co., 59 N. Y. Super. Ct. 32; Greenwood v. Manhattan R. Co., 19 N. Y. Supp. 702. See also Bernheimer v. Manhattan R. Co., 13 N. Y. Supp. 913, distinguishing Tallman v. Met. El. R. Co., supra. See infra, this title, Other Evidence; Landlord and Tenant.

In an injunction proceeding the incidental damages awarded were over 14 per cent. of the fee damages given. The objection was made that the award of rental damages was inconsistent, because exceeding 10 per cent., the general percentage of the value of property charged as rent in the city. Held, untenable, since it did not appear but that the fee damage was too low. Barrett v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 71.

In estimating prospective damages, the permanent injury to the fee value is the sole consideration, and loss of rent cannot be considered. Ireland v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 52 N. Y. Super. Ct. 450.

Where plaintiff purchased the premises affected by the operation of an elevated railway, subject to a lease made after construction of the railway, and his action for damages was tried before the lease expired, a finding that plaintiff had suffered a "loss in the rental value of the premises" was not inconsistent with a finding "that he had lost no rents on account of the railway previous to and including the time of trial of the action;" the true meaning of the finding being that though plaintiff had lost none of the rents under the lease, the rental value of the property had been diminished. Keller v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 15 N. Y. Supp. 88.

Evidence.—The fact that but few trains were run over the road during the day, and that from a certain hour in the night until early in the morning no trains at all were operated, is irrelevant and immaterial on the question of the amount of damages to the fee value of abutting property caused by the operation of the road. Hughes v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 21 N. Y. Supp. 693.

The elevated railway company has no right to show that plaintiff's officers own nearly all the stock of a corporation occupying a portion of plaintiff's building as tenant, on the question whether or not the rental value of the building had been depreciated by the operation of the road. Metropolitan Sav. Bank v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 21 N. Y. Supp. 286.

2. Kernochan v. New York El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 559; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 317; supra, this title, Landlord and Tenant; Kearney v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 13 N. Y. Supp. 608.

3. Woolsey v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 133; 134 N. Y. 323.

4. Damages allowed for the depreciation of the rental value include damages for all injuries to the easement of light, and it is error to allow in addition, as damages, cost of extra consumption of gas caused from the obstruction of the light. Mattlage v. New York El. R. Co., 17 N. Y. Supp. 536.

In estimating the amount of injury to the rental value, the condition of the premises during the period embraced in the action must be taken as the basis of such estimate, and the plaintiff cannot be permitted to prove or be allowed to recover damages which he might have sustained had he put his property to other uses or improved it.¹

(5) Exemplary Damages.—To justify a verdict or award for exemplary damages it is always necessary to allege and prove malice, fraud, or "gross negligence" on the part of the defendant in the action. In the absence of such proof, therefore, the jury cannot award exemplary damages in an action by a landowner for an infringement of his easement in the street in which the elevated road is constructed.²

(6) Deduction on Account of Benefits Derived from the Existence of the Road.—The Rapid-transit act and also the General Railroad act both provide that commissioners of appraisal shall not, in determining the amount of compensation to be made to parties whose property is taken for railway purposes, make any allowance or deduction on account of benefits which the landowner might derive from the existence of the road. These provisions apply simply to the land taken, and require that so much land as is taken shall be paid for at its actual market value, with no deduction whatever, even though the remainder may be greatly enhanced in value by the construction of the road.³ But in considering the damages occasioned to the remaining land, the com-

1. In Tallman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 119; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 409, it appeared that up to the commencement of the action part of the premises were used for a carpenter shop and the remainder as a lumber yard; that at one time the owner had made plans for the erection of dwelling houses thereon. It was held error for the trial court to permit him to testify as to what the depreciation in the rental of such dwelling houses would have been on account of the existence of the railroad.

2. In Powers v. Manhattan R. Co., 120 N. Y. 178, it appeared that the elevated road was constructed in 1879 and trains operated from March 1880; the statute authorizing the construction of the road had been declared constitutional, the proceedings of the commissioners approved, and the question of the right of abutting owners to damages was being litigated. It was held error, in the face of these facts, to instruct the jury that "the failure of the defendant to institute condemnation proceedings before taking possession of plaintiff's property and before the trial of this action, entitled the jury to give exemplary damages, should the jury so desire." See also EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 581 (exemplary damages for trespass); Pappenheim v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 436; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 269.

The fact that the railroad company in a prior action involving their right to maintain their structure took an appeal to the general term of the common pleas court, and then to the court of appeals, and withdrew the latter appeal when it was about to be reached, is not sufficient evidence of want of good faith to justify the jury in awarding exemplary damages against the company, in this action, for maintaining its road. Mattlage v. New York El. R. Co., 17 N. Y. Supp. 536.

3. Newman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 118 N. Y. 618; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 412; In re Brooklyn El. R. Co., 55 Hun (N. Y.) 165; Gray v. Manhattan El. R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 510; affirmed 128 N. Y. 499; EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 581; Lewis on Eminent Domain, § 471. See also Rapid Transit act, Laws of New York (1875), ch. 606, missioners must consider the effect of the road upon the whole of that remainder; its advantages and disadvantages, and if the result is beneficial there is no damage, and nothing can be awarded.¹ While the easement, which the owner of land abutting on a street has therein, is an interest in real estate and constitutes property, yet in itself it has only a nominal value and in estimating its value when taken for railroad purposes it cannot be considered as property separate and distinct from the land to which it is appurtenant, and the right of the owner to compensation is measured not by the value of the easement separate from his land, but by the damages which the land sustains because of the violation of the easement. In estimating damages, therefore, for an interference with such easement, the benefits to the land which the owner derives from the operation of the road, are to be taken into consideration in reduction of the damage caused from the interference with the easement.² So that where the increase in the value of the property resulting from the existence of the road is more

§ 20; General Railroad Law, Laws of New York (1850), ch. 140, § 16; Laws of New York (1872), ch. 885, § 3.

1. Newman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 118 N. Y. 618; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 412; Bohm v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 576; Odell v. New York El. R. Co., 130 N. Y. 690; Livingston v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 138 N. Y. 76.

2. Newman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 118 N. Y. 618; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 412. In this case the evidence showed that while the upper parts of the building on the premises had been made less desirable for the purposes for which they were used—i.e., as dwellings, by reason of the railroad, and in consequence the rents had fallen, the first floor used as a restaurant had become more desirable for business purposes and was greatly enhanced in rental value. The plaintiff had a leasehold interest in the property. It was held that the trial court erred in charging the jury that they had no right in estimating damages to take into consideration the benefit to the premises derived from the existence of the road. See also as affirming this principle, Doyle v. Manhattan R. Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 473 (prejudicial error to exclude evidence bearing on the course of trade, and the increase of business on the premises); In re Brooklyn El. R. Co., 55 Hun (N. Y.) 165; Brush v. Manhattan R. Co., 13 N. Y. Supp. 908 (injunction denied); Purdy v. Manhattan El. R. Co., 13 N. Y. Supp. 295; Herold v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 13

N. Y. Supp. 610; Gray v. Manhattan El. R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 510; Sloane v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 769 (proximity of station considered a permanent benefit); Sillcocks v. New York El. R. Co., 19 N. Y. Supp. 476; Nette v. New York El. R. Co., 20 N. Y. Supp. 627; Bohm v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 676; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 271.

But it is not error to refuse to make a finding of the abstract proposition that any benefits accruing to the property were to be set off against the damages sustained to the property. Wurfel v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 355; and where the railroad company has objected to evidence bearing on the course of values in the immediate neighborhood, it cannot afterwards introduce similar evidence in its own behalf. Mooney v. New York El. R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 145.

Where the evidence shows that the fee value of premises affected by the operation of an elevated railroad is greater than at any time before the construction of the road, and there is nothing to show that the presence of the railroad prevented a greater increase in the value of the property, the owner of the premises affected is not entitled to damages. Mattlage v. New York El. R. Co., 20 N. Y. Supp. 624; Hoffman v. Manhattan El. R. Co., 20 N. Y. Supp. 625; Bohm v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 576; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 271; Becker v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 131 N. Y. 509; Hug- than the damage caused thereby, the owner has no right to an injunction against the railroad, since an injunction can issue only upon a showing of substantial damage.¹

The general rule may be applied to a case where the plaintiff owns several lots, some of which are injured and others benefited by the existence of the road, so that the benefits may be set off against the injuries.² But the fact that the purchase of the property in question has proven a profitable business venture to its owner cannot be taken into consideration in estimating damages. There is nothing in such a fact to show that the property would not be much more valuable if the elevated structure were not in front of it.³

The evidence of increased value derived from the existence of the railroad must be confined to the property involved in the case; evidence as to the increase in the value of other lots along gins v. Manhattan R. Co., 20 N. Y. Supp. 648.

When only the actual value of easements impaired by the operation of an elevated railway is found, and not the consequential damages, the court may refuse to set off against consequential damages, benefits resulting from the proximity of a neighboring station. Wiener v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 16 N. Y. Supp. 913.

In Roosevelt Hospital v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 21 N. Y. Supp. 205, the estimates of the comparative increase in fee value of property in the Bowery and other streets were allowed to be expressed in percentages instead of dollars and cents, and the court held that this was not error; the question as to the values of adjoining property being limited to streets contiguous and adjacent to plaintiff's property.

An owner of premises affected by the erection of an elevated railway, upon seeking to recover damages therefor, cannot be asked whether he considered the presence of the road, at the time he purchased, an injury or a benefit to his property; the issue being the actual value of the property and not what he considered it to be. Steubing v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 19 N. Y. Supp. 313.

1. Gray v. Manhattan R. Co., 128 N. Y. 499; Rich v. New York El. R. Co., 14 N. Y. Supp. 167; Brush v. Manhattan R. Co., 13 N. Y. Supp. 908; Steinmetz v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 209; Bohm v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 576; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 271; Sperb v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 17 N. Y. Supp. 469 (referee's finding reversed); Brush v. Manhattan R. Co., 17 N. Y. Supp. 540.

In Rich v. New York El. R. Co., 14 N. Y. Supp. 167, the evidence showed a decrease in the value of some of the plaintiff's lots and an increase in others, so that no substantial damage was shown which would authorize an injunction. The court held, however, that the complaint would not be dismissed, but that the case would be retained to be submitted to the jury in an action at law. But when a referee is appointed to determine all the issues of the case he is not bound, in refusing an injunction, to award past damages. Steinmetz v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 209; Lynch v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 274; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 308.

Where the rental value of premises affected by the erection of an elevated railroad increased 20 per cent. after the erection of the road, and before the addition of improvements to the premises, the court properly refused to attribute to the improvements the increase of rental value after their addition. Brush v. Manhattan R. Co., 17 N. Y. Supp. 540.

2. Rich v. New York El. R. Co., 14 N. Y. Supp. 167.

3. Sherwood v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 12 N. Y. Supp. 852.

Nor in estimating the fee value of property, the rear of which adjoins other property owned by the plaintiff, are the advantages thereto from its connection with adjoining property to be considered, especially where no allowance is made for indirect damage to the same street is not available to justify a reduction of damages sustained by the premises involved.¹ And the increase in the value must be shown to have resulted from the existence of the road as there can be no deduction if it appears that the increase is due to a general rise in value of property in the vicinity.² Whether benefits have actually accrued to the property from the existence of the railroad is a question of fact, and the finding of the trial court in this regard will not be disturbed except in plain case of error.³

In a case covering the whole question, the court held that where it appears that the presence of an elevated railway has actually such adjoining property by the cutting off of light, air, etc., from the property directly in question. Kane v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 109.

1. Jefferson v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 11 N. Y. Supp. 488. So also where it is shown that the plaintiff's property has actually increased in value on account of the elevated road, the fact that it has not increased to the same extent as other adjacent property, affords no ground for recovery by the plaintiff. Steinmetz v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 209.

2. Moss v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 46.

Thus in Herold v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 13 N. Y. Supp. 610, it is said that the increased benefits must be proven to follow from the existence of the road; the fact that there has been no diminution in the rental value of the premises, but instead a steady increase, does not show that the lessening of air and light and convenience of access did not have a hurtful effect upon the rental value.

3. Proof of Benefits Derived from the Road—Proximity of Station.—In Storck v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 14 N. Y. Supp. 311; aff'd 131 N. Y. 514, the allegation by the railroad company, as to benefits to the property, was supported only by the opinion of a witness, while the plaintiff testified positively that the value of his property was not increased. It was held that the proof did not establish the existence of any benefit to the property. So where the only evidence of benefit was the unsupported opinion of experts, the referee may properly refuse to find that the premises derived any actual benefit. Jones v. New York El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 134. And, in general, a finding by the referee that no benefit accrued to the premises from the existence of the road will not be reversed, unless the evidence clearly establishes the facts the other way. Slater v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 531; Bischoff v. New York El. R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 865. Thus, in Benjamin v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 908, the referee found that the railway station brought a great number of people into the street opposite plaintiff's premises and increased the traffic there, but refused to find that those facts were of special benefit to the plaintiff. It was held that this finding was not error, since the referee is not bound to find inferences from his findings of facts.

In Sperb v. Metropolitan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 469, a referee's finding of past damage to the fee of $800 was reversed. It appeared that the value of property had increased more rapidly on the block occupied by the premises since the construction of the road than the corresponding block on the adjacent avenue, and that the operation of the road had made the street more desirable for business purposes.

In Sixth Ave. R. Co. v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 14 N. Y. Supp. 97, it was shown that property near the terminus of a surface road had increased in value, after the construction of an elevated road and the erection of its station in that vicinity, by being applied to different uses than formerly. It was held that this was not sufficient to warrant a finding that the property of a surface road at that point had also increased in value, since it could not be devoted to any other uses with profit to the owners.

The fact that the number of persons passing by stores on a street occupied by an elevated railway is largely in-caused an increase in the value of the plaintiff's property, he has no right to an injunction, or to future damages, although it may appear that other abutting owners have received greater benefit than he;¹ but this case has been distinguished from several others. Thus, to offer evidence that the value of the land on the street on which the plaintiff's property abuts has not increased in the same proportion as land on the side streets is admissible, and may be considered with other evidence as to whether the premises in question have increased in value to the same extent that they would have done but for the presence of the road.² It is also laid down in another case that the court may properly refuse to find that there has been a general rise in the value of the real estate situated upon the avenue occupied by the elevated railroad, and that this increase is largely attributable to the existence of the railroad, on the ground that such facts are immaterial where there is sufficient evidence in the case to warrant a finding that the abutting owner's property has been damaged by the construction and maintenance of the road.³

(7) Where Plaintiff's Property Fronts on Two Streets.—Several cases have arisen in which the land of the abutting owner to which the easements are appurtenant fronted on two streets, only one of which was occupied by the elevated railroad. In such cases whether the lot is to be regarded as an entirety and damages awarded accordingly is a question of fact depending upon the circreased by the presence of the railway and station, does not necessarily show that the presence of the station is an advantage to the proprietors of such stores. Betjeman v. New York El. R. Co., 20 N. Y. Supp. 628. See also Adler v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 138 N. Y. 173.

The nature and operation of elevated railroads are so notorious that courts may take judicial notice of the fact that they increase the traffic and business on the streets on which they are operated. Bookman v. New York El. R. Co., 137 N. Y. 302.

1. Bohm v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 576, 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 271. In this case Earl, J., speaking for the court, delivered an elaborate opinion discussing this feature of the subject exhaustively.

2. In Becker v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 131 N. Y. 509; affirming 14 N. Y. Supp. 312, the court distinguished the case of Bohm v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 576; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 271, saying by Peckham, J.: "In other words, we held that an owner had no ground of complaint because the road had not increased the value of his property as much in proportion as it did that of some one else; that in order to prove damage he was compelled to show that his property had either decreased in value by reason of the road, or else that its value had not increased to the same extent it would have done but for the road. We were then deciding in regard to the correctness of the rule of damages followed by the trial court, and there was no intention in what we said to hold evidence of value in the side streets to be inadmissible. We intend fully to adhere to the rule of damages as laid down in the Bohm case."

3. In Storck v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 131 N. Y. 514; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 287, affirming 14 N. Y. Supp. 311, the Bohm case was again distinguished. Gray, J., said of it: "A careful consideration of the elaborate opinion delivered in that case will show that it was not intended to deprive a complainant of his right to compensation when he could give any competent evidence of injury satisfactory to the trial tribunal, nor in the slightest degree to interfere with the jurisdiction of that tribunal to determine the amount of the injury from the evidence given."

cumstances of the case. If the lot is occupied by a single building, whose light, air, and access are derived wholly from the street occupied by the railroad, it seems that damages may be recovered for the injury to the whole lot; but it is otherwise if the lot is occupied by two separate and distinct buildings, each of which derives its light, air, and access from a different street.¹

f. STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS—ADVERSE POSSESSION—IMPLIED ACQUIESCENCE.—In common-law actions to recover past damages, the Statute of Limitations precludes recovery of all damages except those which have accrued within the six years immediately preceding the commencement of the action.² In a leading case the effect of the Statute of Limitations upon the right of equitable relief was considered, and the conclusion derived that no delay by the landowner, less than a period sufficient for the railroad company to acquire a right to the easements by adverse possession, would bar his right to such relief. The trespass by the railroad company continues, and successive causes of action arise from day to day so long as the trespass is continued, and the owner does not lose his right to relief in equity, unless his delay has been so long that the company has been enabled to acquire right by prescription.³

1. In Stevens v. New York El. R. Co., 130 N. Y. 95, aff'd 57 N. Y. Super. Ct. 416, it appeared that the plaintiff's land extended from one street to another; it was occupied by a four-story brick building, having a single roof, no transverse partition, and only one flight of stairs between the first and second stories. For seventy-six years prior to 1825 the land had consisted of two lots, one fronting on each street, and had had separate owners; but since that time it had been owned, used, described, and conveyed as a single lot fronting on both streets. In the action against the elevated road, which occupied one of the streets, it was described as one lot, and plaintiff claimed damages for injuries done to it as an entirety. It was held that the judgment of the trial court in favor of the plaintiff would not be disturbed on the ground that the land had consisted of two lots, or that damages had been improperly awarded for injuries to both.

In Mooney v. New York El. R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 145, rev'd 8 N. Y. Supp. 956, it appeared that the plaintiff's lot, which was one hundred feet deep, fronted on two streets, one of which was occupied by the elevated railroad. The lot was covered by two buildings wholly unconnected with each other, one of which received its light, air, and access from the street unoccupied by the railroad. It was held that the trial court erred in failing to distinguish between the two buildings, and in admitting, upon the trial, evidence of the rents received from the building fronting on the open street.

In Greenwood v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 58 N. Y. Super. Ct. 482, the land in question had been for a time two distinct lots, which had passed from the original owner of both to the plaintiff by different mesne conveyances in such a manner that one lot which adjoined the street occupied by the railroad became his property before the other. It was held that the easement of light over the first lot, conveyed in favor of the other, was cut off by the conveyance of the first lot to G, and that the fact that G acquired the second lot did not revive the easement in its favor, and, therefore, G could not recover for injuries to his alleged easement of light appurtenant to the second lot. See this case disapproved in Stevens v. New York El. R. Co., 130 N. Y. 95, aff'd 57 N. Y. Super. Ct. 415.

2. See New York Code of Civ. Proc., § 382, par. 3; Martin v. Manhattan R. Co., 63 Hun (N. Y.) 350; Cornell v. New York R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 511.

3. Effect of Statute of Limitations on Right to Equitable Relief.—Galway v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 132.

In another case the right of the abutting owner to recover damages was contested by the railroad company, on the ground that it had acquired the right to interfere with his easements by an uninterrupted and adverse possession for more than twenty years. The principle that the company might acquire such a right by adverse possession was recognized;¹ but it was held that it had acquired no such right in this case, because the substitution of steam engines as a motive power instead of a cable, and the reconstruction and alteration of the track constituted such material and substantial changes in the original user as to interrupt the adverse possession.²

In this case the court, by Ruger, C. J., in indicating the general theory upon which has proceeded the determination of this and similar questions, quoted from the opinion of Earl, J., in Tallman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 123; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 410: "When the defendant began to construct its railway in front of the plaintiff's lots, he could have commenced an action in equity against it, and restrained it until it had made compensation to him for rights and easements which it took from him, or until it had acquired them by condemnation proceedings. In that way, he would, at least, in the theory of the law, have been indemnified for all the damages he would suffer by reason of the construction of the railway. Instead of taking his remedy by an equitable action at that time, he could have taken it at any time afterwards during his ownership of the lots with the same result. He was not, however, confined to his remedy by such action; he could suffer the railway to be constructed and then bring successive actions to recover damages to his lots, caused by the construction and operation of the railway." In answer to the contention that an injunction proceeding was substantially an action to recover permanent damages, and that therefore the Statute of Limitations should commence to run at the time when any cause of action arose, the court said: "The action here is neither in practice nor in theory an action of such a character, and by its fundamental rules as well as the constitutional requirement that compensation for such property shall be assessed by a jury or commission alone, an equity court is incapacitated from entertaining actions instituted for the purpose of recovering damages alone."

The operation of an elevated railway to the injury of an adjacent proprietor, is a separate and distinct trespass each day and gives rise to separate and distinct causes of action, and successive actions may be commenced and maintained to recover damages sustained by such trespass. With respect to the Statute of Limitations, the wrong done is a continuing trespass, so that the statute begins to run from the last of the trespasses committed. But where the evidence showed that the injuries to plaintiff, which consisted of the loss of health arising from the noise of the train, occurred more than six years before the commencement of the action, it was held that the principle above stated did not apply and that the action was barred by the Statute of Limitations. Taylor v. Manhattan R. Co., 53 Hun (N. Y.) 305. See also Doyle v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 506.

1. Right to Acquire Title to Easements by Adverse Possession.—American Bank Note Co. v. New York El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 252; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 292. The fact that the charter of the company contained a provision for compensation for private property used or acquired, did not make the company's possession necessarily subordinate to the street rights of the abutting owners.

2. American Bank Note Co. v. New York El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 252; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 292. In this case it appeared that the original entry of the elevated railroad company was merely experimental, and was made when both the company and the abutting property owners were ignorant of the fact that the maintenance of the road interfered with the rights of the abutting owners; that during the twenty years' possession by the company the road was changed from a cable road to a steam railroad; that after the expiration of the twenty years, the com-

A delay of five years by the landowner before bringing his action for damages, during which time he was frequently a fare-paying passenger, does not amount to an acquiescence in the construction of the road which will bar his right to recovery, where it appears that when the road was first constructed he objected and threatened litigation;¹ nor is an abutting owner deprived of his right to redress by erecting an awning, extending from his buildings to the elevated structure, especially where the railroad materially interferes with the light and the air of the stories above the awning.²

g. RIGHT TO TRIAL BY JURY IN INJUNCTION PROCEEDINGS.—In an action for an injunction against the maintenance and operation of an elevated railroad, neither party is entitled as a matter of right to a jury trial on any of the issues involved, notwithstanding the prayer for relief includes a demand for past damages which would be recoverable in an action at law. The court in the exercise of its equitable jurisdiction may determine the amount of damages both past and prospective to be paid by the company in avoidance of an injunction.³ But it is pany instituted proceedings to condemn the lot owner's right to the easements of light, air, and access; and that during the period of possession the track was reconstructed by removing the columns from the curb line to sixteen inches within the sidewalk. The court held that these facts showed that the company had acquired no title to the easements by prescription. Moreover the institution of condemnation proceedings by the company was necessarily a solemn and formal admission of record of title in the objection to the easement in question. See also Hughes v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 130 N. Y. 14, aff'd 57 N. Y. Super. Ct. 379.

1. Delay in Bringing Suit.—Abendroth v. Manhattan R. Co., 122 N. Y. 1; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 128; Mattlage v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 11 N. Y. Supp. 482; Galway v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 128 N. Y. 432.

2. Erection of Awning.—The erection of such an awning is no abandonment of his easements, and at most entitles the company to nothing more than the value of the support afforded by its structure to the awning. Mattlage v. New York El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 11 N. Y. Supp. 482.

3. In the trial courts there was for a time considerable confusion on this point. In Johnson v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 16 N. Y. Supp.

434; Renwick v. New York El. R. Co., 15 N. Y. Supp. 149, and Bach v. New York El. R. Co., 60 Hun (N. Y.) 128, it was held that such an action for injunctive relief and for incidental damages was equitable, and that the parties were not entitled to a jury trial. But in Libmann v. Manhattan R. Co., 59 Hun (N. Y.) 428; Barrett v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 71, it was held that where the allegations of the complaint were sufficient to sustain either an action to restrain the railroad company from the further commission of a continuing trespass or one to abate a nuisance, the plaintiff might be compelled to elect under which form of action he would proceed, and that if the action were for the abatement of a nuisance the defendant was entitled to a jury trial as a matter of right.

In Lynch v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 274; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 308, the question came before the court of appeals. It was insisted on the part of the defendant that the issue as to past damages was cognizable in a court of law and should be tried by a jury in obedience to the constitutional provision that "the trial by jury in all cases in which it has heretofore been used shall remain inviolable forever," and to § 970 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which provides that "where a party is entitled by the constitution or by express provision of law to a trial by jury within the discretion of the trial court sitting in equity to submit the question of past damages to the determination of the jury.¹

4. Liability for Personal Injuries and Other Torts.—If the railroad company makes use of contrivances which are skillfully made and of one or more issues of fact . . . he may apply, upon notice to the court, for an order directing all the questions arising upon that issue to be distinctly and plainly stated for trial accordingly." It was held that the trial of this issue by a jury was not a matter of right. The court said: "Undoubtedly the claim for past damages sustained by plaintiff in his property, arising from the defendant's acts, could have been made the subject of an action at law, but that was not the cause of action which the plaintiff elected to assert in his complaint and to bring to trial. What he attempted by instituting his action was to restrain the continuance of acts which were constantly injuring and would, to all appearances, constantly in the future continue to injure him in ways and in a manner which he described in his complaint. This was a form of relief demandable and cognizable only on the equity side of the court. . . . It has always been a well settled and familiar rule that when a court of equity gains jurisdiction of a case before it for one purpose it may retain it generally. To do complete justice between the parties a court of equity will further retain the cause for the purpose of ascertaining and awarding the apparent damages as something which is incidental to the main relief sought. While this is done on the ground that the remedy for the damage done is deemed to be incidental to the relief of injunction, the principle is in perfect harmony with the theory of the jurisdiction of a court of equity. Its power is invoked, and it interferes to restrain the trespass which is continuous in its nature in order to prevent a multiplicity of suits, and taking jurisdiction of the cause for such a purpose it may retain it to the end and close up all matters of legal dispute between the parties by assessing the loss sustained for the acts which it has restrained."

Section 970 of the Code of Civ. Proc., was amended by Laws 1891, ch. 208, so as to embrace all actions "where one or more questions arise on the pleadings as to the value of property or as to the damages which a party may be entitled to recover." Under this section as amended, it was held in the trial courts that the question of fee damages did not arise on the pleadings and was not within the meaning of the act. Underhill v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 43. But it was held that the question as to past damages was within the amendment, and, on motion to that effect, should be tried by a jury. Underhill v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 43; Eggers v. Manhattan R. Co., 18 N. Y. Supp. 181.

In Shepard v. Manhattan R. Co., 131 N. Y. 215, the question again came before the Court of Appeals upon the construction of the amendment of 1891. It appeared that the court below had granted an order reciting that the defendant was entitled as a matter of right to a jury trial on the question of past or rental damages. This was held to be reversible error. Gray, J., said: "I think that this section never did apply to actions of a purely equitable nature as are these, and that the amendment did not make it applicable. . . . I do not think that any of the powers vested in courts under the constitution should be taken away by implication, yet such would be the result if we affirm the orders below. We should have to imply a legislative intention from the interpolation of the words in the section to take away some of the equitable powers heretofore possessed by the court. The amendment does not convey such an intention ex proprio vigore and to attach to it a meaning which would deprive the court of a power so important and which courts of equity jurisdiction have so long possessed, would be contrary to sound principles of statutory construction." After a review of the authorities, he continued: "I think, therefore, we must conclude that it was error for the court below to hold that the defendants were entitled as matter of right upon their application under section 970 to an order stating the questions of past damages for trial by a jury; and that the granting of such an order still rests in the sole discretion of the trial court sitting in equity."

1. Shepard v. Manhattan R. Co., 131 N. Y. 215.

the best known at the time in order to prevent the escape of sparks from its locomotive, it is not liable to a traveler on the street who is injured by a spark falling on him. The company has a right to operate its trains on the elevated structure, and unless the injured party can establish negligence on its part he cannot recover.¹ And the rule, that, in order to recover, the

1. Injuries from Falling Sparks.—Searles v. Manhattan R. Co., 101 N. Y. 661; 25 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 358, rev'd 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 425.

In an action the plaintiff testified that she was struck by a single small coal falling from the engine. There was no evidence that more than this one coal was thrown from the locomotive on this occasion, or that sparks were emitted from it or other locomotives on other occasions. Held, that the evidence was not sufficient to warrant an inference by the jury that the defendant was guilty of negligence. Wiedmer v. New York El. R. Co., 114 N. Y. 462; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 481.

In such cases it is not error for the court to instruct the jury that it was the duty of the company to so construct the ash pans, etc., of its engines as to reduce the danger of accident "to the least possible practical minimum point." McNaier v. Manhattan R. Co., 51 Hun (N. Y.) 644; 46 Hun (N. Y.) 502 (non-suit).

An elevated railway company is required to use the best known devices in order to avoid throwing sparks, ashes or cinders, and to use them carefully and prudently; but they are not bound to use any supposed improved device, or one which theoretically might be supposed to be better than the one used. Burke v. Manhattan R. Co., 13 Daly (N. Y.) 75.

In Lowery v. Manhattan R. Co., 99 N. Y. 158; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 276; 52 Am. Rep. 12, by the unlawful act of the railroad company fire was thrown upon a horse passing under the structure so as to make him unmanageable, and by the same act the driver was so injured that, smarting under the injury, he did not exercise judgment and skill in guiding the horse, and the plaintiff walking in the street was run over by the horse and wagon. It was held that the railroad company was liable to the plaintiff; that the damage was not so remote as to preclude recovery, since the chain of causation was not broken; that the mistake of judgment on the part of the driver being caused by the defendant's unlawful act could not be set up as an intervening cause. See NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 428.

A complaint alleging that the defendant negligently allowed sparks of fire to escape from its locomotive and enter plaintiff's house, setting fire to his curtains, furniture, etc., and that in attempting to extinguish the fire, plaintiff's hand was burned without negligence on his part, is bad; the injury alleged being too remote, no damages to property being claimed and there being no allegation that at the time he made the effort to extinguish the fire, it was spreading to other property than that actually burned, or that there was an appearance of the fire endangering life and property; or that the effort was made for the purpose of preventing such injuries. Hinchy v. Manhattan R. Co., 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 406.

In an action against an elevated railway to recover damages caused by a fire, originating from sparks emitted from defendant's engine, the court erred in refusing to admit the testimony of a member of defendant's board of examiners showing the qualifications of the man in charge of the engine. Flynn v. Manhattan R. Co., 20 N. Y. Supp. 652.

Evidence that the locomotive of an elevated railway emitted sparks so large and brilliant as to attract the attention of a witness who had frequent opportunities for observation was sufficient to establish a prima facie case of negligence on the part of defendant in an action to recover damages caused by a fire resulting from the sparks. Ruppel v. Manhattan R. Co., 13 Daly (N. Y.) 11.

In Sugarman v. Manhattan El. R. Co., 16 N. Y. Supp. 533, it appeared that the plaintiff's awning was destroyed by fire alleged to have originated in a coal dropped from defendant's engine; that the engine was equipped with the best devices to prevent the escape of fire, but that a coal so large could not have escaped had the engine been in proper condition; and that there were openings in the ash pan from which the coal might injured party must show a want of due care in the construction or operation of its road has been applied in other cases of injury.¹

In cases of expulsion of passengers, the same rules apply as in cases of other carriers by railroad.² If a person is arrested or caused to be arrested by the company's servants in charge of a station, under circumstances which make such arrest false imprisonment, the company is liable therefor.³

have fallen. There was no other evidence as to the actual condition of the engine. Judgment for plaintiff was sustained.

1. See Manson v. Manhattan R. Co., 55 N. Y. Super. Ct. 18 (party injured by falling of iron filings which had been allowed to accumulate along the track); Volkmar v. Manhattan R. Co., 58 N. Y. Super. Ct. 125 (person injured by falling of an iron plate from the elevated structure); Morsemann v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 Daly (N. Y.) 249 (person injured by crow-bar falling from the hands of employé on the track).

The company is guilty of a want of ordinary care in shoveling the contents of its drip-pans from an elevation of 15 feet into carts standing near a cross-walk of a street, without warning to pedestrians, especially where the refuse might have been lowered in baskets. Treanor v. Manhattan R. Co., 16 N. Y. Supp. 536. See also Pallett v. Kings Co. El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 10 N. Y. Supp. 691. In Weiler v. Manhattan R. Co., 53 Hun (N. Y.) 372, aff'd 127 N. Y. 669, the plaintiff was a passenger on the elevated road. The train was compelled to stop a few feet from the station, but there was a platform thirty inches wide running to the station which the company had provided for its employés. The train was filled with laboring men and the conductor called out to all who feared being late at their work to get out and walk to the station. After a number had started to walk on the platform or on the track ahead of the train, the train, without warning, started. Those on the track or near it pressed toward the outer edge of the platform, a panic ensued, and eleven men, including the plaintiff, fell to the pavement and were killed or injured. There was no reason why all should not have reached the station safely but for the sudden starting of the train. It was held that the evidence established negligence on the part of the company; that the plaintiff was not negligent in leaving the car because he was invited to do so, and because the injury did not occur until after he had left the car safely. See also Lyle v. Manhattan R. Co., 6 N. Y. Supp. 325.

Where a panic at an elevated railway station was caused by the negligence of the employés of the elevated railway company in starting a train, in consequence of which plaintiff was pushed over the elevated railway structure by persons seeking to avoid the train, and injured by a fall to the street below, the negligence of the company was held the proximate cause of the injury, and a verdict and judgment for plaintiff was rendered. McCabe v. Manhattan R. Co., 6 N. Y. Supp. 418.

An agreement by a contractor for the construction of an elevated railway station platform "to assume all liability for and to indemnify the company against all loss, costs, or damages . . . arising from injuries sustained by mechanics, laborers, or other persons by reason of accidents or otherwise," will not include a case where a laborer, while in the employment of the contractor, was struck by one of the engines of the railway company and killed, in consequence of which damages were recovered from the company. Manhattan R. Co. v. Cornell, 54 Hun (N. Y.) 292.

In Burmeister v. New York El. R. Co., 47 N. Y. Super. Ct. 264, in which the plaintiff was injured by the fall of an iron chain from defendant's structure, in process of erection by a contractor, it was held that the right of defendant to put an end to the contract with the contractor in case the latter did not "prosecute the work with due diligence and expedition," did not confer upon the defendant such a right of selection of the contractor's servants as would make him responsible for their negligence.

2. See MASTER AND SERVANT, vol. 14, p. 740; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 993; TICKETS AND FARES; supra, this title, Expulsion of Passengers.

3. In Lynch v. Metropolitan El. R.

The company is liable for the willful and malicious acts of its agents and servants if such acts are within the scope of their employment.¹ But it has been held that it is not liable in punitive damages for such acts unless it authorizes or ratifies them.²

The company is liable for damages caused to persons on the street by the falling of heavy substances from its trains or elevated structure.³

Co., 90 N. Y. 77; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 119, affirming 24 Hun (N. Y.) 506, the plaintiff bought a ticket and entered one of the cars; before reaching his destination he lost his ticket, and while attempting to pass through the gate from the station platform, he was stopped by the gate keeper, and told that he could not pass, until he produced a ticket or paid his fare. He stated that he had bought a ticket, but had lost it, and insisted on passing out, but was prevented by the gate keeper, who sent for a policeman and had him arrested. He remained in the police station all night, and when taken before a magistrate the next morning was discharged. It appeared that the gate keeper had orders not to let passengers pass out until they either paid fare or showed their tickets. In an action for false imprisonment, it was held that the detention was unlawful; that the company was responsible for the acts of the gate keeper, and the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover. See also Shea v. Manhattan R. Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 528; Oppenheimer v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 411.

In Palmeri v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 14 N. Y. Supp. 468, it appeared that the plaintiff purchased a ticket and paid for it with a coin which the agent contended was counterfeit. She refused to take back the coin, and the agent denounced her as a counterfeiter and a common prostitute and compelled her to remain in the station more than half an hour in order that she might be arrested by an officer. It was held that the railroad company was liable for both the false imprisonment and the abusive language of the agent.

1. In Cagney v. Manhattan R. Co., 2 N. Y. Supp. 410, the plaintiff purchased a ticket at the elevated station and deposited it in the canceling-box. The gateman not seeing the ticket deposited, refused to allow him to get aboard the train, although the ticket agent, the gateman's superior in authority, said he had sold him a ticket, and told the gateman to let him ride. Unable to secure the train without repayment the plaintiff walked home. There were many people present at the occurrence, and the plaintiff was mortified at the imputation of attempting to ride without payment. It was held that the railroad company was liable for both actual and exemplary damages, although caused by the gateman's malicious conduct, and that the verdict of $500 in such a case was not excessive. The rule was recognized that a carrier is liable for the malicious acts of its agents when committed within the line of their duty. Stewart v. Brooklyn, etc., R. Co., 90 N. Y. 588; 12 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 127; 43 Am. Rep. 185; Caldwell v. New Jersey Steamboat Co., 47 N. Y. 282.

In the case of Mellwitz v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 112, plaintiff testified that she was pushed over by the guard for refusal to place a ticket in the ticket-box after she had already deposited one there. Her evidence was entirely uncorroborated and was contradicted by that of disinterested witnesses, who stated that she fell while attempting to get on the train after the gates were shut and the train had started. A verdict for the plaintiff was set aside and a new trial ordered.

2. An elevated railway company is not liable in punitive damages for an assault committed by one of its employes, if the evidence shows that the employe acted in supposed discharge of his duty and not with malicious intent. Nor is it liable in punitive damages for such an assault unless it authorizes or ratifies the acts of the employe or wrongfully retains him. The mere retention of the employe is not sufficient evidence of ratification without proof of actual knowledge of the employe's conduct on the part of the company. Donivan v. Manhattan R. Co., 21 N. Y. Supp. 457.

3. Plaintiff while standing under an elevated railway structure in front of

Trains on an elevated railway should not be started without warning; if they are so started the company will be liable for any injuries thus caused.¹

No dangerous open spaces should be left in the pathway of passengers, and if the curvature of the track renders such a space between the station platform and the car unavoidable, it is the duty of the company to see that it is properly guarded and well his premises was struck on the head by a descending bar of iron. There was no other structure at that point over the street, and the bar of iron which fell on plaintiff was seen to fall from a passing train, and its flight was observed from the time it began to descend until it struck the plaintiff. It was held that plaintiff was entitled to recover for the injuries received without further evidence to show that the piece of iron fell from defendant's train or structure, or was dropped by some one in defendant's employ. Maier v. Manhattan R. Co., 53 Hun (N. Y.) 506.

In Anderson v. Manhattan R. Co., 21 N. Y. Supp. 1, defendants were distributing heavy timbers along the elevated railway track, letting them fall on the edge of the platform, and in so doing a piece of timber, so rotten that it could be broken with the hand and the condition of which was apparent by ordinary inspection, was broken off and fell on plaintiff's head below. It was held that the evidence was sufficient to carry the case to the jury.

In Volkmar v. Manhattan R. Co., 134 N. Y. 418, it appeared that the plaintiff while in the street under the defendant's road was struck by a portion of a broken bolt to which an iron plate was attached which fell from the defendant's structure. It was held that the fact that the bolt was broken and part of it fell, raised a presumption that in that particular the defendant's structure was out of repair and dangerous, which presumption was not rebutted by proof of the proper construction of the road and the careful inspection of the same by the defendant's track walker and inspector.

1. Passenger Injured by Sudden Starting or Stopping of Train.—In Ferry v. Manhattan R. Co., 118 N. Y. 497; 44 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 331, it appeared that the plaintiff while attempting to alight from the train, and as she was about stepping from the front platform of the fourth and last car, the train suddenly started so that she was thrown down and injured. Between the third and fourth cars a brakeman was stationed, whose duty it was to open the gates to permit the ingress and egress of passengers, and then to close them and to give a signal by pulling on the bell rope extending from the bell on the engine to where he was stationed. This signal was communicated to the next forward brakeman, whose duty it was to so hold the rope as not to permit the signal to pass him, and when he closed the gates under his control to transmit the signal by two pulls of the rope, and so on until the signal reached the engineer, whose duty it was then to start the train. In this case, the signal to start was given by the brakeman between the second and third cars, he having received a signal which he supposed was given by the rear brakeman, but which was, in fact, given by a passenger who caught hold of the bell-rope to steady himself. The court charged that if the jury found that the train was started by the passenger, the defendant was not negligent, but if otherwise, then it was negligent. Defendant then requested the court to charge "that there was no proof that there was any vice in the system of communicating signals, and the jury are not to consider the question;" this was refused, except as already charged. It was held no error, and the jury having found a verdict for the plaintiff the case was affirmed.

In the case of McQuade v. Manhattan R. Co., 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 91, it appeared that plaintiff while in the act of putting his foot on the platform to enter an elevated railway car, following close upon others and holding the railing in his hand, was prevented from making his footing good by the conductor, who partly closed the gate upon his foot and dragged him with the train, which then started to move, on which plaintiff was pulled to the platform by the conductor and passengers and fell, sustaining severe injuries. No bell had been rung nor signal given that the train was about to move, or lighted.¹ The station platform should be guarded by rails to prevent passengers falling therefrom,² and should not be permitted to become slippery from accumulations of ice and snow.³

An elevated railroad company must exercise ordinary care to keep the stairways and approaches to its stations in a safe condition. But in this regard it is not bound to the high degree of care which is required concerning the roadbed, machinery, and other appliances in which a defect would be likely to result in that the proper time for boarding it had passed. It was held that the plaintiff was entitled to damages.

1. Injury at Station Platform—Space Between Cars and Platform Caused by Curve in the Road.—In Boyce v. Manhattan R. Co., 118 N. Y. 314; 41 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 111; aff'd 54 N. Y. Super. Ct. 286, the plaintiff, in leaving the train, stepped into an unguarded hole between the cars and the station, thereby sustaining injury. It appeared that she had never landed there before; that the space was unguarded, and no warning or assistance was given her by persons in charge of the train; that the night was dark, and there was but a single light at the station, which was quite remote from the point where the accident occurred. Recovery was allowed, and it was held that the injury having been due to the existence of the hole and the insufficient lighting of the station, it was not error to exclude evidence in the defendant's behalf that the space between the station and the cars into which the plaintiff fell was necessitated by the form of the road—e. g., a sharp curve—the true question being as to the safety of the means of exit provided by the defendant. See also Hanrahan v. Manhattan R. Co., 53 Hun (N. Y.) 420.

In Ryan v. Manhattan R. Co., 121 N. Y. 126; 44 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 426, rev'd 1 N. Y. Supp. 899, the injury was caused by the plaintiff stepping into a similar open space between the platform and the cars, the space being caused as before by the curve of the road. It appeared that although many thousands of passengers got off and on at this station no accident had ever occurred, and that the plaintiff had prior to the accident taken the cars at this station a hundred times or more without injury. The space between the cars and platform was less than eight inches, the cars being as close to the platform as was safe or prudent. It was held that the defendant, as a matter of law, was not negligent in having such space, and that it was error to submit the question to the jury. The court distinguished the case from that of Boyce v. Manhattan R. Co., 118 N. Y. 314; 41 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 111, just referred to, where no negligence was imputed to the company for the existence of the opening, but for leaving it unguarded and unlighted.

In Brady v. Manhattan R. Co., 6 N. Y. Supp. 533, plaintiff was injured by stepping into an open space between the car and the station platform, and evidence was admitted of similar accidents which occurred at other stations on defendant's road from the same cause.

Space Between Cars.—In Clune v. Brooklyn El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 1 N. Y. Supp. 239, it appeared that the accident was caused by the plaintiff's stepping, as the car started, into the space between the platforms of the cars, which space was closed when the train was standing still; that the conductor, who was on the platform, was attending to his duties and did not know that the plaintiff was attempting to pass. It was held that the conductor was not negligent in failing to notify the plaintiff of the opening.

2. In Jarvis v. Brooklyn El. R. Co., 16 N. Y. Supp. 96, the plaintiff recovered damages for personal injuries sustained by him from a fall occasioned by the negligence of defendant in leaving the end of the elevated station platform unguarded by a rail, and insufficiently lighted.

3. In Timpson v. Manhattan El. R. Co., 52 Hun (N. Y.) 489, it appeared that plaintiff had slipped and fallen on snow and ice which had collected on the defendant's platform, and that no sand or ashes had been placed upon the platform to render it safe. Judgment for damages in favor of plaintiff was sustained. See also Weston v. New York El. R. Co., 73 N. Y. 595, great danger or loss of life.¹ So, also, the company is bound to exercise only reasonable care to prevent the injury of one passenger by another.²

XVI. ORDINARY RAILROADS IN STREETS AND HIGHWAYS.³—The occumem.; McMahon v. New York El. R. Co., 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. 507; Belcher v. Manhattan El. R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 1 N. Y. Supp. 349.

1. Injuries While Ascending or Descending Stairs at Stations.—In Kelly v. Manhattan R. Co., 112 N. Y. 443; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 60, a person while ascending the stairway of a station, fell and was injured. The accident happened about half past five o'clock A. M. There had been a storm of sleet and snow during the night, commencing at midnight and continuing until just before the accident. It appeared the stairway was covered, the roof projecting a foot on each side; it was provided with hand rails, and upon each step were pieces of rubber to prevent slipping. The trial court denied the motion for non-suit, and charged the jury that it was the duty of the company to use all human care, caution, and skill, to make the ingress and egress to its station safe; that it must use all the skill, diligence, and care which a very cautious human being would use if he were looking after his own life and health; so that if they should find that the steps were slippery at the time, and that means might have been taken to prevent their being so, the railroad company was chargeable with negligence. This charge was held error, because so far as regards the approaches to its cars, a less degree of care is required than in regard to the structure and operation of its road. The motion for a non-suit should have been granted. For a similar case see Ainley v. Manhattan R. Co., 47 Hun (N. Y.) 206.

In an action against an elevated railway company to recover damages for a fall occasioned by the alleged negligence of the company in the erection of the stairs in one of its stations, testimony as to other injuries resulting from the same cause occurring after that in question, cannot be admitted; and evidence of such accidents occurring prior to that in question may be admitted only for the purpose of showing defendant's knowledge of the insufficiency of the structure. Johnson v. Manhattan R. Co., 52 Hun (N. Y.) 111.

In Flagg v. Manhattan R. Co., 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 251, the plaintiff, while descending a flight of steps leading from the station, which at the time was very dark, when within a few steps of the ground, thinking that she was at the bottom, stepped out and was thrown down. She complained that the railroad company was negligent in failing to keep its stairway lighted. It was held that the question of the plaintiff's contributory negligence was for the jury, and that a verdict for her having been found, should be sustained. See also McMahon v. New York El. R. Co., 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. 507, where a passenger going up the stairs to the elevated station, fell and was killed; no recovery was allowed because the plaintiff failed to establish the negligence of the railroad company.

2. In Buck v. Manhattan R. Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 550, aff'd 134 N. Y. 589, a passenger in leaving the elevated car was thrown down and injured by other passengers entering the car from the station platform. It was held that while the carrier was bound to use reasonable care to prevent injury from other passengers, and to exercise the utmost care and caution as far as its own servants and appliances were concerned, the present case did not show that the injury was due to its negligence, and that no recovery could be had. See also same case reported in 15 Daly (N. Y.) 48; 276.

For other cases in which the ordinary rules of law respecting the liability of carriers of passengers have been applied to elevated railroads, see Dlabola v. Manhattan R. Co., 15 Daly (N. Y.) 470, aff'd 134 N. Y. 585 (injury occurring during an extraordinary storm); Marvin v. Manhattan R. Co., 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 528 (excessive damages); Lee v. Manhattan R. Co., 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 260; Merwin v. Manhattan R. Co., 48 Hun (N. Y.) 608 (passenger not negligent in riding on platform); Dillon v. Manhattan R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 1 N. Y. Supp. 679 (plaintiff injured by sudden starting of the train).

3. While this subject is not usually included in the treatment of the law of street railways, it is deemed advisable pation of a street or highway by a railroad company without authority of law is a nuisance; equity will restrain it as such, and damages may be recovered for injuries resulting from such occupation.¹ Where the street was laid out by dedication, or under condemnation proceedings, and the original owner retained the fee, he may, on the ground that there is an invasion of his property, bring trespass or ejectment against a railway company unlawfully seeking to occupy the street.² Under a general grant to a railroad company to locate its road and take land therefor, it may cross a highway, but may not occupy a street longitudinally or to a greater extent than is necessary for an ordinary crossing.³ To authorize such unusual occupation the authority must be speto discuss it here because of its intimate connection with a branch of street railway law, particularly with the law as recently developed in the elevated railway cases.

1. Columbus, etc., R. Co. v. Withers, 82 Ala. 190; Com. v. Erie, etc., R. Co., 27 Pa. St. 339; 67 Am. Dec. 471; Morris, etc., R. Co. v. Hudson Tunnel R. Co., 25 N. J. Eq. 384; Pennsylvania R. Co.'s Appeal, 115 Pa. St. 514; Com. v. Nashua, etc., R. Co., 2 Gray (Mass.) 54; Com. v. Vermont, etc., R. Corp., 4 Gray (Mass.) 25; Com. v. Old Colony, etc., R. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 93; Stearns County v. St. Cloud, etc., R. Co., 36 Minn. 425; Troy v. Cheshire R. Co., 23 N. H. 83; 55 Am. Dec. 177; Daly v. Georgia Southern, etc., R. Co., 80 Ga. 793; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 20; 12 Am. St. Rep. 286; Platt v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 74 Iowa 127; Adams v. Hastings, etc., R. Co., 18 Minn. 260; Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich. 62; 31 Am. Rep. 306; Ford v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 14 Wis. 609; 80 Am. Dec. 791, 794, note; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Shiels, 33 Ga. 601. Compare Dodge v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 43 N. J. Eq. 351; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 180; Davis v. New York, 14 N. Y. 506; Angell, Highways (3d ed.), § 33.

Such unlawful occupation by a railroad is a nuisance per se which equity will enjoin upon an information by the attorney general without a preliminary trial at law. Atty. Gen'l v. Lombard, etc., R. Co., 10 Phila. (Pa.) 352.

A railroad for private use may not be laid in a street even with the consent of the city; any owner of abutting land whose property is or may be injured thereby may have a perpetual injunction against the construction of the road. Mikesell v. Durkee, 34 Kan. 509; Macon v. Harris, 73 Ga. 428. See also Carli v. Stillwater St. R. Co., 28 Minn. 373; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 226; 41 Am. Rep. 290.

In Massachusetts, a railroad so constructed over a highway as to obstruct public travel, without statutory authority, is liable to indictment as a nuisance. Com. v. Nashua, etc., R. Co., 2 Gray (Mass.) 54; Com. v. Vermont, etc., R. Corp., 4 Gray (Mass.) 22. And the confirmation by statute of such illegal construction is no ground for arresting judgment on an indictment for the nuisance caused thereby. Com. v. Old Colony, etc., R. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 93.

2. Ford v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 14 Wis. 609; 80 Am. Dec. 791; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Hartley, 67 Ill. 439; 16 Am. Rep. 627; Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Rodee, 89 Ind. 128; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 284; 46 Am. Rep. 164; Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Odum, 53 Tex. 343; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 503; Williams v. New York Cent. R. Co., 16 N. Y. 97; 69 Am. Dec. 651; rev'd 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 222; Wager v. Troy Union R. Co., 25 N. Y. 532; Reichert v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 51 Ark. 491; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 453; First Cong. Church v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 77 Wis. 158; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 182; Alabama, Midland R. Co. v. Williams, 92 Ala. 277; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Williams, 86 Va. 696; 19 Am. St. Rep. 908 (erection of telegraph poles in highways); EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 553; HIGHWAY, vol. 9, p. 408 et seq.

3. Starr v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 24 N. J. L. 592; State v. Montclair R. Co., 35 N. J. L. 330; Morris, etc., R. Co. v. Newark, 10 N. J. Eq. 362; Springfield v. Connecticut River R. Co., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 71. See also New Jersey Southern R. Co. v. Long Branch Com'rs, 39 N. J. L. 33; see infra, this title, When Company Has Such Right.

cifically conferred in clear and express terms, or by unavoidable implication.¹

1. Right to Occupy Streets and Highways—a. POWER OF LEGISLATURE TO GRANT.—In the absence of express constitutional provisions to the contrary, the legislature has complete control of all highways in the state, and may authorize the occupation of one or more of them by a railway company without the consent of the local authorities.² This power may be directly exercised, or it may be delegated to a municipality.³

What Is a Highway in This Connection.—A road that has never been regularly laid out or opened by the proper authorities, and which is in fact unused and unfit for travel and is closed against the public, is not a "highway" within the meaning of a statute requiring compensation to landowners whose lots abut on the street or highway occupied by a railroad. Flint, etc., R. Co. v. Willey, 47 Mich. 88; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 305.

1. Ruttles v. Covington (Ky. 1889), 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408; Daly v. Georgia Southern, etc., R. Co., 80 Ga. 793; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 20; 12 Am. St. Rep. 286; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Chicago, 121 Ill. 176. See infra, this title, When Company Has Such Right.

In State v. Montclair R. Co., 35 N. J. L. 330, it was held that the doctrine that "a railroad company with only general powers to locate its road and take land for it may cross a public highway" is not applicable to the taking of a highway longitudinally. The court added: "No case has occurred in the courts where such a necessity has arisen. It may, however, be conceded that it may arise where, in applying the route to the territory through which it is to pass, it could be located in no other practical way than upon a highway, but that it should not be a mere question of expediency or of comparative expense but a practical necessity in order to give effect to franchises granted. The presumption is in favor of the public and against the necessity of taking the highway longitudinally by a private corporation, although for a public purpose, such as a railroad. To authorize it, the legislature should either so indicate it in the language of the act by express words or necessary construction, or it should result as a necessity in order to accomplish the object intended in the grant of the franchises."

Country Highways.—The legislature does not usually allow the occupation of country highways longitudinally, because a right of way is easily obtainable by the railroad elsewhere. In some jurisdictions, as in Pennsylvania, there is a statutory requirement that a railroad company which uses a highway for a road-bed must supply a new highway at its own expense. Such a requirement does not necessarily divest the owner of adjacent land of his right to recover for injuries to property resulting from such occupation. Phillips v. Dunkirk, etc., R. Co., 78 Pa. St. 177; Snow v. Deerfield Tp., 78 Pa. St. 181; Post v. West Shore R. Co., 123 N. Y. 580; 47 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 322; Snyder v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 55 Pa. St. 340. See also Bangor, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 47 Me. 34; Stearns County v. St. Cloud, etc., R. Co., 36 Minn. 425 (construction of railroad in highway enjoined).

2. Clinton v. Cedar Rapids, etc., R. Co., 24 Iowa 455; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Newton, 36 Iowa 299; Hine v. Keokuk, etc., R. Co., 42 Iowa 636; State v. Davenport, etc., R. Co., 47 Iowa 507; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Savannah, 45 Ga. 602; Harrison v. New Orleans Pac. R. Co., 34 La. Ann. 462; 44 Am. Rep. 438; Floyd County v. Rome St. R. Co., 77 Ga. 614; Dubach v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 80 Mo. 483; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 609; Portland, etc., R. Co. v. Portland, 14 Oregon 188; 27 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 353; 58 Am. Rep. 299; Mercer v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 36 Pa. St. 99; Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Adams, 3 Head (Tenn.) 596; Perry v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 55 Ala. 413; 28 Am. Rep. 745; Lawrence R. Co. v. Williams, 35 Ohio St. 172; Werges v. St. Louis, etc. R. Co., 35 La. Ann. 641; New Orleans, etc. Co. v. New Orleans, 26 La. Ann. 517 (power of legislature to authorize use of levee for a road-bed for a railway company); Arbenz v. Wheeling, etc., R. Co., 33 W. Va. 1; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 284.

3. Mercer v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co.,

b. POWER OF MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.—By virtue merely of its usual and ordinary powers over streets within its limits, a municipal corporation cannot authorize the construction and operation of a railroad thereon.¹ For a municipality to possess such power the grant thereof by the legislature must be clear and explicit; it cannot be created by implication or construction.² In a number of jurisdictions the authority is given to all municipalities by general law, subject to certain conditions, to exercise complete and exclusive control over streets, and this embraces the right to authorize the construction of a railroad thereon.³

36 Pa. St. 99; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. People, 91 Ill. 215; Moses v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 21 Ill. 516; Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Adams, 3 Head (Tenn.) 596; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Second Municipality, 1 La. Ann. 128; Harrison v. New Orleans Pac. R. Co., 34 La. Ann. 462; 44 Am. Rep. 438. See also infra, this title, Power of Municipal Corporations; 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (3d ed.), § 705 (558); Pacific R. Co. v. Leavenworth City, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 393; Slatten v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 29 Iowa 148; 4 Am. Rep. 205; Gieger v. Filor, 8 Fla. 325; Hoyle v. New Orleans City R. Co., 23 La. Ann. 535; Wolfe v. Covington, etc., R. Co., 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 404.

Constitutional Provisions Against Special Legislation—In many states the constitution forbids grants by the legislature of railway franchises except by general laws, and this, of course, includes the right to occupy streets. See Const. of New York, art. 3, § 18, par. 11; Const. of Mississippi (1890), § 902; Const. of Colorado (1876), art. 15, § 2; Const. of Illinois (1870), art. 4, § 22; Const. of Missouri (1875), art. 4, § 53; 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 701a; Chicago City R. Co. v. People, 73 Ill. 541; Central R. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 31 N. J. Eq. 489; Stange v. Dubuque, 62 Iowa 303; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 108.

1. Perry v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 55 Ala. 413; 28 Am. Rep. 740; Stange v. Dubuque, 62 Iowa 303; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 107; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Shiels, 33 Ga. 601 (in this case the construction of the road necessitated making embankments and cuts); Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Savannah, 45 Ga. 602; Chamberlain v. Elizabethport Steam Cordage Co., 41 N. J. Eq. 43; Carpenter v. Oswego, etc., R. Co., 24 N. Y. 655; Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Scott, 74 Ind. 29; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 208; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. State, 37 Ind. 489; Denver Circle R.

Co. v. Nestor, 10 Colo. 403 (city of Denver has no power to authorize the occupation of streets longitudinally); Lackland v. North Missouri R. Co., 31 Mo. 180; Springfield v. Connecticut River R. Co., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 63; State v. Trenton, 36 N. J. L. 79. See also Pierce on Railroads, p. 246; 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 705 (558); Cooley's Const. Lim. (5th ed.) *545-6. A different rule prevails where it is sought to construct a horse railway in the street. See supra, this title, Right to Use Streets.

"A municipal corporation cannot by virtue of its ordinary powers confer a franchise on individuals or a private corporation to lay railroad tracks on highways, and to run cars upon them and receive fares from passengers; but it may derive the power by grant from the legislature, or its unauthorized exercise of the power may be ratified by statute." Pierce on Railroads, p. 247; Dubach v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 89 Mo. 483; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 609; Clarke v. Blackmar, 47 N. Y. 150. Compare Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Aplegate, 8 Dana (Ky.) 289; 33 Am. Dec. 497. See also Donnaher v. State, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 649; Cosby v. Owensboro, etc., R. Co., 10 Bush (Ky.) 288; Polack v. San Francisco Orphan Asylum, 48 Cal. 490.

In Reichert v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 51 Ark. 491; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 453, it was held that a city could not grant a right of way to a railroad over its streets, and that no validity could be imparted to a city ordinance making such grant by an act of the legislature conferring it.

2. Galbreath v. Armour, 4 Bell. App. Cas. 374; Reg. v. London Gas. Co., 2 El. & El. 651; 105 E. C. L. 650; Reg. v. Charlesworth, 16 Q. B. 1012; Denver Circle R. Co. v. Nestor, 10 Colo. 403; State v. Hoboken, 35 N. J. L. 205.

3. For cases in which the city's char-

A city by authorizing a railroad company to use the street for the construction of its road does not become liable to the owners of abutting property for injuries resulting from such occupation, even though the grant to the company was made without authority. The company cannot be regarded as the agent of the city in the wrongdoing, and the grant must be presumed to have been made on condition that the company should assume responsibility ter or statutory powers have been held sufficient to authorize such a grant, see Kistner v. Indianapolis, 100 Ind. 210; Slatten v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 29 Iowa 148; 4 Am. Rep. 205; Chicago Dock, etc., Co. v. Garrity, 115 Ill. 155; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. People, 91 Ill. 251; Quincy v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 92 Ill. 21; Murphy v. Chicago, 29 Ill. 279; 81 Am. Dec. 307; Yates v. West Grafton, 34 W. Va. 783; Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Bissell, 108 Ind. 113.

Power given by its charter to a city to "open, alter, abolish, grade, or otherwise improve or keep in repair streets" does not authorize the city authorities to grant a railroad company the right to obstruct the street by permanent structures inconsistent with its uses as a street. Lackland v. North Missouri R. Co., 31 Mo. 180; 34 Mo. 259. See also Porter v. North Mo. R. Co., 33 Mo. 128.

In Kansas the fee of the streets is in the county in trust for the public, but the authority to permit and to regulate the construction of railways thereon is in the municipality. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Garside, 10 Kan. 552.

In Kentucky the rule is that a municipal corporation may authorize the construction of railways upon its streets, but it cannot by contract divest itself of its power to alter the grade and the character of the track where subsequent changes are necessary owing to a change of pavement, or other cause. Louisville City R. Co. v. Louisville, 8 Bush (Ky.) 415; Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Applegate, 8 Dana (Ky.) 289; 33 Am. Dec. 497; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Brown, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 763.

Where the municipality has authority to make the grant, it may be made by resolution or vote duly recorded; an ordinance is not essential. Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co., v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 70 Iowa 105; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 121.

In Missouri it seems that the power of municipal corporations is limited to authorizing the construction of railroads which do not affect the grade of the street. Cross v. St. Louis, etc., R.

Co., 77 Mo. 318; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 123; Tate v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 64 Mo. 158.

Power given to the city authorities to vacate streets and alleys in the city does not empower the city to grant to a railroad company permission to construct its road, along and upon a street; such a grant would not be a vacation of the street but a joint occupation of it by the company and the public. McAboy's Appeal, 107 Pa. St. 548; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 313.

City's Control Over Streets.—In Quincy v. Jones, 76 Ill. 231; 20 Am. Rep. 243, the court, in speaking of the duty of the city in regard to streets, says: "Holding them in trust for the public and having no authority to convey or divert them for other uses, it would seem inevitably to follow that they can have no power to grant to individuals rights or easements in the street which might in any way interfere with the duty of preparing them for public use to meet the public necessities; for it is obvious that if such rights may be granted, then the practical use of the streets may become so burdened with private rights as to place it beyond the pecuniary ability of the city to discharge its duty to the public without reference to them. It is inconsistent to say that the city owes a duty to the public and yet that it may voluntarily place it beyond its power to discharge that duty. . . . The fundamental idea of a street is not only that it is public, but public for all purposes of free and unobstructed passage which is its chief and primary, but by no means sole use;" citing 2 Dillon Mun. Corp., § 541. Quoted and approved in St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Belleville, 20 Ill. App. 585; 122 Ill. 376; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 378. See also STREETS; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15, p. 1039.

A city has no power to authorize such a use of a street dedicated to public use, as will practically destroy it as a thoroughfare for the use of the public. Dubach v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 89 Mo. 483; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 609.

for all damage caused by its occupation and use of the street.¹ The city does not become liable in any case unless it can be shown that the tortious acts were done by its procurement and direction.² And it has been held that where the city owns the fee of the streets, it is entitled to compensation for the use thereof by a railroad company.³

1. Liability of City Granting Right to Occupy Streets.—2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (3d ed.), § 710 [563]; Denver v. Boyer, 7 Colo. 113; 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 465; Green v. Portland, 32 Me. 431; Roll v. Augusta, 34 Ga. 326; Davenport v. Stevenson, 34 Iowa 225; Frith v. Dubuque, etc., R. Co., 45 Iowa 406; Burkam v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 122 Ind. 344; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 153; Port of Mobile v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 84 Ala. 115; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 171; 5 Am. St. Rep. 342; Burritt v. New Haven, 42 Conn. 174. Even if the city had power to grant such authority to a railroad company "that power would not authorize it to make itself responsible for the acts of others, from which neither it nor its citizens derived any benefit, and which were not done for the accommodation of public travel or business." Green v. Portland, 32 Me. 431. See also Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Joliet, 79 Ill. 25.

In Murphy v. Chicago, 29 Ill. 286; 81 Am. Dec. 307, the court, by Caton, J., say: "It is the settled law of this court, as well as in most of the other states of the Union that it is a legitimate use of a street or highway to allow under legislative authority a railroad track to be laid down in it, and for so doing the city is not liable for any damages which may accrue to individuals." Compare, however, Pekin v. Brereton, 67 Ill. 480; 16 Am. Rep. 631. While it is believed that the text states the true doctrine, it must be conceded that there is strong authority for a much modified view. In Pekin v. Brereton, 67 Ill. 477; 16 Am. Rep. 629, it appeared that the city authorized the construction of a railroad on a street upon which the plaintiff's lots abutted; the grade of the street had never been established by the city. In constructing its road the company made a deep cut in the street and sidewalks, making the land of the plaintiff liable to cave in, and very materially lessening the value of the lots because of the difficulty of access. In an action by the plaintiff against the city it was held that he might recover of the city the amount of damage suffered. In this case, Nevins v. Peoria, 41 Ill. 502; 89 Am. Dec. 392, was relied on as authority, and Murphy v. Chicago, 29 Ill. 286; 81 Am. Dec. 307, and Moses v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 21 Ill. 516, were declared to be of little or no value as authority, having been decided prior to the adoption of the present constitution and much weakened by the subsequent cases of Nevins v. Peoria, 41 Ill. 502; 89 Am. Dec. 392, and Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Hartley, 67 Ill. 439; 16 Am. Rep. 624. The ruling of the court seems to be based upon the theory that in changing the grade of the street the railroad company acted as the agent and in behalf of the city, so that the case came within the rule that the city becomes liable for tortious acts done by its procurement and direction. The court, by Breese, J., said: reviewing Nevins v. Peoria, 41 Ill. 502; 89 Am. Dec. 392, "Although a city has power and authority to elevate or depress the grade of its streets, as it may deem proper, yet if in so doing, it inflicts an injury upon a lot owner, peculiar to him alone, it cannot be exempted from liability; and should it become necessary for the interests of the public, in the process of grading the streets, or, we may add, laying down a railroad track thereon, the lot of an individual shall be rendered unfit for occupancy, the public must pay for it to the extent to which it deprives the owner of its legitimate use." In Mayor, etc., of Macon v. Harris, 73 Ga. 428, where the city unlawfully permitted a railroad company to run cars through a public street for a private manufacturing concern, it was held that the owner of property injured could maintain a suit in equity to enjoin the operation of the road, and for damages, making the city, the railroad company, and the manufacturing concern co-defendants.

2. Pekin v. Brereton, 67 Ill. 477; 16 Am. Rep. 629; Thayer v. Boston, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 511; 31 Am. Dec. 157; 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (3d ed.). § 710 [563].

3. Compensation to City.—This point was directly involved in Donnager v. State, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 660, and it was held that the city could no more

The city, when empowered to authorize the construction of a railroad on its streets, may make its consent conditional upon the performance of certain requirements, as, for example, that the company shall conform to the regulations of the city authorities as to the manner of constructing the track, of operating the trains thereon, etc.¹ But if the company has authority from the legislature to occupy the city streets independently of the consent of the city, the municipal authorities may not impose such conditions or place additional obligations upon the company.²

c. WHEN COMPANY HAS SUCH RIGHT.—A railroad in a public street or highway is a source of great inconvenience, annoyance, and danger to the public, and nothing less than a plain and express grant can authorize its construction there.³ Statutes granting be deprived of its property without compensation than could any other corporation or a private individual. The court quoted with approval the following language of Tucker, P., in Tuckahoe Canal Co. v. Tuckahoe, etc., R. Co., 11 Leigh (Va.) 42; 36 Am. Dec. 374: "It is not perceived that the property of a corporation is less liable to the exercise of the jus publicum than is the property of a private individual. In both cases the private right must yield to the necessities of the public, and in both the public must make compensation for the loss." The correctness of this view, however, may be questioned. Mr. Dillon, in referring to Donnaher v. State, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 660, says: "But this conclusion seems to have been adopted without sufficient reflection, and is undoubtedly erroneous." 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (3d ed.), § 701 (555), note. Compare Harrison v. New Orleans Pac. R. Co., 34 La. Ann. 462; 44 Am. Rep. 438.

Streets of Washington.—The fee to the streets in Washington city is in the United States and not in the city or in abutting owners; any right to occupy them with a railroad must therefore come from Congress. Edmunds v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 114 U. S. 460; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 38; Potomac Steamboat Co. v. Upper Potomac Co., 109 U. S. 672.

1. Thus in Northern Cent. R. Co. v. Baltimore, 21 Md. 93, the company was authorized by the legislature to construct its road within the city provided the assent of the city could be obtained. The city authorities passed an ordinance giving their assent, but regulating the manner of laying such road, and the way in which it should be used. It was held that the railroad company must conform to such regulations, as the city government possessed the power to prescribe the terms upon which its assent should be given.

See also as to the general control of railroads by the city, Allen v. Jersey City, 53 N. J. L. 522; 49 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 289; State v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 42 La. Ann. 138; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 258 (mandamus to compel company to perform its obligations in regard to streets).

The power of the city, however, to control the speed of trains and to declare any excess of such speed to be a nuisance is limited to the streets of the city and its public grounds. State v. Jersey City, 29 N. J. L. 170.

2. Council Bluffs v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 45 Iowa 338; 24 Am. Rep. 773; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Dunbar, 100 Ill. 110; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 253.

A city ordinance which prohibits the digging up of the surface of any street, unless the consent of the board of aldermen has been obtained, as applied to a railroad company laying its tracks across a street within its located right of way, is not a reasonable exercise of the city's right to regulate railroads within its corporate limits. Such an ordinance in effect declares that a right conferred by the legislature shall not be exercised except upon the obtaining of the consent of the city, and in that respect is therefore illegal and void. Allen v. Jersey City, 53 N. J. L. 522; 49 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 289. See also State v. Jersey City, 47 N. J. L. 286; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 400; State v. Hoboken, 41 N. J. L. 71; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Dunbar, 100 Ill. 110; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 253.

3. Ruttles v. Covington (Ky. 1889), 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 408; Baltimore, such a right must be strictly construed,¹ and authority to construct a railway longitudinally in a public highway cannot be etc., R. Co. v. Reaney, 42 Md. 117; Daly v. Georgia Southern, etc., R. Co., 80 Ga. 793; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 20; 12 Am. St. Rep. 286; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Chicago, 121 Ill. 176; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Haller, 82 Ill. 208 (charter power to run through a city not a grant of authority to use the streets of such city); Edmonds v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 114 U. S. 453; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 38; Atty. Gen'l v. Morris, etc., R. Co., 19 N. J. Eq. 386; Springfield v. Connecticut River R. Co., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 63; Lackland v. North Missouri R. Co., 31 Mo. 180; 34 Mo. 259; Pennsylvania R. Co.'s Appeal, 93 Pa. St. 150; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 507; Plymouth R. Co. v. Colwell, 39 Pa. St. 337; 80 Am. Dec. 526; California Southern R. Co. v. Kimball, 61 Cal. 90; Kavanagh v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., 78 Ga. 271; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 267. See also St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. St. Louis, 92 Mo. 160 (authority of county court); People's Rapid Transit R. Co. v. Dash, 125 N.Y. 93; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 114.

A city ordinance, after a careful specification of what streets might be used for laying a railway track, contained a general clause giving authority also to lay all such tracks "as may be necessary to the convenient use of any depot grounds such company may hereafter acquire in the vicinity of or adjoining such road," without specific mention of any streets. It was held that this general authority conferred no additional right to occupy any streets other than those specifically mentioned. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Chicago, 121 Ill. 176. See also Farrand v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 21 Wis. 435; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Dunbar, 100 Ill. 110; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 253. Compare New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Second Municipality, 1 La. Ann. 128.

In Texas the right to occupy the public streets of any town or city which may be on the line of the route when necessary was conferred by a general statute upon every railroad chartered by the state. Pasch. Dig. (Tex.), art. 4941; Rio Grande R. Co. v. Brownsville, 45 Tex. 88. See also Long Branch Com'rs v. West End R. Co., 29 N. J. Eq. 566.

While the road cannot be constructed in the street without an express grant from the legislature, it seems that it is not necessary that such grant shall first be obtained in order to maintain a proceeding to condemn the rights of owners of abutting property. California Southern R. Co. v. Kimball, 61 Cal. 90.

"Public highways ought not to be destroyed, even in part, under pretense of legislative authority, unless it be in express words or by necessary implication. If the words are ambiguous, the construction ought to be in favor of the common right of highways, not against it." Warren R. Co. v. State, 29 N. J. L. 353. See also Morris, etc., R. Co. v. Newark, 10 N. J. Eq. 362; Greenwich v. Easton, etc., R. Co., 24 N. J. Eq. 217; Jersey City v. Central R. Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 417; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 138.

In Taylor v. Dunn, 80 Tex. 652, a company had contracted to build a state capitol, and claimed the right to construct a railroad along the street for the purpose of transporting the ponderous building material to be used, on the ground that the railroad was a necessity. It was held, however, that such a right could not arise by implication, and that the consent of the city must be first obtained. Moreover, the company would be liable in damages to owners of abutting property for injuries resulting therefrom.

1. Warren R. Co. v. State, 29 N. J. L. 353; Jersey City v. Central R. Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 417; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 138; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Reich, 101 Ill. 157; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Belleville, 122 Ill. 376; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 278; Edmonds v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 114 U. S. 453; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 38.

Thus a provision in a railway company's charter that if the company find it necessary to change the location of any portion of a public road they are authorized to do so and to occupy such portions as they may deem expedient, does not make them the sole judges of the necessity, etc., but empowers them to change the location only when the necessity actually exists. Easton, etc., R. Co. v. Greenwich, 25 N. J. Eq. 565.

A grant of the right to construct a railroad along a street does not carry with it the right to use such street as a place for making up trains, nor as a depot for cars, or for receiving and discharging freight. Brownborough, etc., implied from a general power to condemn land for a right of way,¹ or from a specific power to construct the road to certain points within city limits.²

In general, after the company has acquired the right to construct its road in the street, it has complete discretion as to the arrangement of matters of detail, as, for example, the exact location of the track, the gauge to be used and similar particulars, and the exercise of this discretion will not be interfered with except in plain cases of abuse.³

2. Right of Owners of Abutting Property to Compensation—a. IN GENERAL.—The grant by the legislature to a railroad corporation of the right to occupy highways is always subject to the constitu-

R. Co. v. Sutton (Ky. 1890), 13 S. W. Rep. 1086.

Right to Lay Additional Tracks in Street.—In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Eisert, 127 Ind. 156, it was held that an ordinance granting a company a right of way along a street and condemnation proceedings whereby owners of abutting property were compensated, gives the company full authority to use so much of the street as its business requires, and the company has the right to construct one or more tracks in addition to those originally constructed if there is sufficient room to do so. The court said: "The ordinance did not limit its (the company's) right to construct but one track and the damages assessed under the appropriation proceedings covered all damages growing out of the necessary and legitimate use of such portion of the street for railroad purposes whether it be occupied with one or more tracks." See also Philadelphia v. River Front R. Co., 133 Pa. St. 134; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 167; Kemble v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 140 Pa. St. 14; Jackson v. Ackroyd, 15 Colo. 583.

In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Porter, 43 Minn. 527; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 170, the right of the company to construct an additional track to connect with a manufacturing establishment was upheld, because authority to do so had been specifically conferred in the original grant.

1. New Jersey Southern R. Co. v. Long Branch Com'rs, 39 N. J. L. 33; Albany Northern R. Co. v. Brownell, 24 N. Y. 351; Ingraham v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 34 Iowa 249; State v. Montclair R. Co., 35 N. J. L. 330; Morris, etc., R. Co. v. Newark, 10 N. J. Eq. 352.

A statute which authorized a railroad company to take lands for the construction of a railroad, with no other provisions as to public highways, except a requirement compelling it to make and keep in repair good and sufficient passages at the crossings of the highway, will not authorize the occupation of a public road longitudinally. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Mish (Pa. 1886), 4 Cent. Rep. 276. For a similar case, see Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Chicago, 121 Ill. 176; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Dunbar, 100 Ill. 110; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 253.

2. The Georgia Code specifically provides (§ 719) that public highways shall not be appropriated for railway purposes in the absence of an express charter power. The charter of a company which authorizes it to construct its road between two given cities and to connect with any other roads built into such cities, does not, by necessary implication, authorize the company to construct and operate its railroad longitudinally on the streets of such cities. Davis v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 87 Ga. 605; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137. See, however, the language of Shaw, C. J., in Springfield v. Connecticut River R. Co., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 71.

3. Exact Location of Track.—The company having by its charter the right to occupy streets, may place the track on any part of the street where in its opinion its best interests demand. Campbell v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 82 Ga. 320.

And the courts will not enjoin a particular construction or location of the track at the instance of an owner of abutting property in the absence of proof that it would result in unnecessary additional impairment of the street. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Calvert, 110 Ind. 555; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 170.

Where a statute commits to cities and villages the control of railroads in streets, a court of chancery will not, upon a petition of the people, interfere as tional provisions protecting private property, and cannot of itself be relied on as affording to the company immunity from liability to abutting property holders for injuries caused by such occupation.¹ But the earlier cases in this country laid down the rule that a railroad in the streets of a municipality was a legitimate and ordinary use of the highway, and that, like a street railway, it was merely an improved means of transportation and travel contemplated when the street was originally laid out; hence, no compensation was allowed to the owners of abutting property for injuries caused by the construction of a railroad in the street.² But this rule is almost obsolete, and the later and better doctrine as adopted in most states seems to be that a steam railroad is an additional to the manner in which the track is laid, or in which the business of the road is operated thereon. Cairo, etc., R. Co. v. People, 92 Ill. 170; Illinois Act 1872, art. 5, § 62.

Right of Owner of Abutting Property to Enjoin a Change of Gauge.—An owner of abutting property cannot maintain an action to enjoin the company from changing its track in a street from a narrow to a broad gauge, where he has for a valuable consideration released such company from all claims for damages by reason of the maintenance of its track in such street. Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Toohey, 15 Colo. 297; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Barsaloux, 15 Colo. 290; Millvale v. Evergreen R. Co., 131 Pa. St. 1; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 219.

Fencing Track in Street.—Under the general statutes relative to the fencing of their tracks, railroad companies are not bound, nor, in the absence of special circumstances, allowed, to fence that part of their track which occupies a public highway. Rippe v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 42 Minn. 34; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 235; Omaha, etc., R. Co. v. Severin, 30 Neb. 318; 45 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 122.

Making Ditches.—So also a general statute requiring all railroad companies to construct and maintain suitable ditches and drains along each side of their road-beds is not applicable to that part of a railroad constructed along a public street or highway, and if a company without the consent of the local authorities construct such ditches in the street it becomes liable to owners of abutting property for all damages caused thereby. Jackson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 656; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 145.

Gates at Crossings.—Constructing gates under authority from the city at a point where the street occupied by the railroad crosses another street is not imposing an additional burden on the fee of the streets. First Cong. Church v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 77 Wis. 158; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 182.

1. Williams v. New York Cent. R. Co., 16 N. Y. 97; 69 Am. Dec. 651; In re East River Bridge, etc., R. Co., 26 Hun (N. Y.) 490; People v. Law, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 494; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Fuller, 63 Tex. 467; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 154; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Eddins, 60 Tex. 656; Ford v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 14 Wis. 609; 80 Am. Dec. 791; Denver Circle R. Co. v. Nestor, 10 Colo. 403; Omaha, etc., R. Co. v. Rogers, 16 Neb. 117; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79.

2. Perry v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 55 Ala. 427; 28 Am. Rep. 745; Moses v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 21 Ill. 516; Murphy v. Chicago, 29 Ill. 279; 81 Am. Dec. 307; State v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 7 Ind. 479; Dwenger v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 98 Ind. 153; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 26; Milburn v. Cedar Rapids, 12 Iowa 246; Slatten v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 29 Iowa 148; 4 Am. Rep. 205; Davenport v. Stevenson, 34 Iowa 225; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Garside, 10 Kan. 552; Kansas, etc., Co. v. Cuykendall, 42 Kan. 234; 16 Am. St. Rep. 476; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Brown, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 763; Peddycord v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 34 Md. 463; Porter v. North Missouri R. Co., 33 Mo. 128 (holding that where a street was occupied by a railroad, damage to abutting property resulting therefrom was damnum absque injuria); Tate v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 64 Mo. 149 (holding the rule applicable only to a railroad constructed on the grade of a street where the only obstruction was the passage of trains); Morris, etc., R. Co. v. Newark, 10 N. J. Eq. 352; Drake burden on the highway and that its occupation of a street amounts pro tanto to a taking of the property of the owner of the fee thereof.¹ And where a company has acquired and paid for the right to lay one track along a street, the laying of another will

v. Hudson River R. Co., 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 508; Chapman v. Albany, etc., R. Co., 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 360; Parrot v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 10 Ohio St. 624; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Speer, 56 Pa. St. 325; 94 Am. Rep. 84; Struthers v. Dunkirk, etc., R. Co., 87 Pa. St. 282; Hanlin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 61 Wis. 515; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 70.

1. Reichert v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 51 Ark. 491; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 453; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Reed, 41 Cal. 256; Imlay v. Union Branch R. Co., 26 Conn. 249; 68 Am. Dec. 392; South Carolina R. Co. v. Steiner, 44 Ga. 546; Cox v. Louisville R. Co., 48 Ind. 178; Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Scott, 74 Ind. 29; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 208; Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Eberle, 110 Ind. 542; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 220; 59 Am. Rep. 225; Kucheman v. C. C., etc., R. Co., 46 Iowa 366; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Hartley, 67 Ill. 439; 16 Am. Rep. 627; Phipps v. Western Maryland R. Co., 66 Md. 319; Springfield v. Connecticut River R. Co., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 71; Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Hensel, 47 Mich. 393; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 260; Harrington v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 17 Minn. 215; Hastings, etc., R. Co. v. Ingalls, 15 Neb. 123; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 60; Williams v. New York Cent. R. Co., 16 N. Y. 97; 69 Am. Dec. 651; Wager v. Troy Union R. Co., 25 N. Y. 533; Fanning v. Osborn, 34 Hun (N. Y.) 121; Chamberlain v. Elizabethport Steam Cordage Co., 41 N. J. Eq. 43; Lawrence R. Co. v. Williams, 35 Ohio St. 168; Fort Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Jennings, 76 Tex. 373; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 574; Ford v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 14 Wis. 609; 50 Am. Dec. 791; Carl v. Sheboygan, etc., R. Co., 46 Wis. 625; Buchner v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 60 Wis. 264; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 447. See also dissenting opinion of McGrath, J., in Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 634; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 608. Compare Adams v. Hastings, etc., R. Co., 18 Minn. 263; Pierce on Railroads, p. 234.

In Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Hartley, 67 Ill. 439; 16 Am. Rep. 627, the court by Scott, J., observes: "A different use of the land from that for which it was intended cannot be justified on the ground that a railway is an improved highway. Railway companies are only public corporations in a limited sense. The right of way, the road-bed, and the carriages propelled thereon are owned by private individuals and not by the public. Fares are charged for travel thereon for the exclusive benefit of the parties owning the road. They are constructed and equipped in the interest of private speculation, though, at the same time, they are intended to subserve the public good. The travel on them bears no analogy to our notions of travel on an ordinary street or highway, where every one travels at pleasure in his own conveyance, without paying tolls or fares. The uses are totally different and even inconsistent. The one is exclusively in favor of private interests; the other is open and free to all."

The difference between street railways and ordinary railroads in this connection is plainly discernible. As said in Denver v. Bayer, 7 Colo. 113; 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 465: "An ordinary railroad is not a local convenience; the city is but one of its termini; its cars do not stop at the beck of any one who may wish to ride, and do not commonly transport passengers from one point to another within the city; its ties and rails, as generally laid, are a permanent interference with the use of the street for ordinary vehicles; the smoke and dust, interruption and noise produced by operating its trains are a perpetual annoyance, and the danger a constant menace in the occupation and enjoyment thereof for the usual purposes." See also Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 634; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 608; Halsey v. Rapid Transit St. R. Co., 47 N. J. Eq. 380; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79; Campbell v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 82 Ga. 320.

In Hinchman v. Paterson Horse R. Co., 17 N. J. Eq. 78, the chancellor said: "The principle as applied to ordinary railroad companies which are authorized to excavate the soil, to raise embankments and construct tunnels and to use locomotive power running at high rates of speed seems clear of difficulty." He then quotes with approval the following language of Shaw, C. J., in Springfield v. Connecticut River R.

constitute an additional burden on the street for which further compensation must be made.¹

A company purchasing a railway along a street acquires no rights beyond those possessed by the original company and becomes liable for damages to abutting property arising from the unlawful occupation of the street.²

b. DISTINCTION DEPENDENT UPON OWNERSHIP OF FEE AND CHARACTER OF HIGHWAY—(1) General Doctrine.—The earlier authorities, almost without exception, make a distinction in this connection between cases where the landowner retains the fee of the street, and where the fee is in the public or in the municipality in trust for the public use, allowing a recovery for the occupation of the street by a railroad company only in the former class of

Co., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 63: "The two uses, viz., that of railroad and ordinary highway, are almost if not wholly inconsistent with each other, so that the taking of a highway for a railroad will nearly supersede the former use to which it has been legally appropriated."

1. It seems to be a concededly correct principle that the building of another railroad on a portion of the unused right of way of a railroad company which it has acquired by condemnation creates an additional servitude upon the easement for which the consent of the owner of the fee must be had or compensation made to him. Fort Worth etc., R. Co. v. Jennings, 76 Tex. 373; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 574. It would seem, then, to be undoubted that a company has no right to construct additional tracks on a street which it has already partially occupied, without express authority and without making additional compensation to owners of abutting property. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Reich, 101 Ill. 157; Taylor v. Bay City St. R. Co., 80 Mich. 77; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 335; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Necco (Tex. 1891), 15 S. W. Rep. 1102; Drady v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 57 Iowa 393; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 131; Mahady v. Bushwick R. Co., 91 N. Y. 148; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 142; 43 Am. Rep. 661; Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Woodruff, 86 Ga. 94.

2. Liability of Company Purchasing Road in Street.—In Harbach v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 80 Iowa 593; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 115, a company laid its track in a street without authority, and the plaintiff thereafter obtained in a proceeding at law a judgment against it for $1,500 for damages caused to his property, which judgment remained unpaid. Before the commencement of the proceeding at law in which the judgment was obtained, a foreclosure suit was commenced in the federal court, which resulted in a decree and sale of the road. In a suit by the plaintiff to enjoin the purchasing company from occupying the street until the payment of damages, it was held, first: that the foreclosure proceedings did not preclude the abutting owner from enjoining the purchasing company, such company being entitled only to such rights as were acquired by the original company; second: that the judgment for damages obtained against the original company merged any defense it might have had, and the purchasing company, having no greater rights, could not plead in defense that the original occupation of the street was by the consent of property owners. Drady v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 57 Iowa 393; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 130; Fort Scott, etc., R. Co. v. Fox, 42 Kan. 490; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 331; Taylor v. Dunn, 80 Tex. 652.

In Little Miami R. Co. v. Hambleton, 40 Ohio St. 496; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 126, one company having constructed its road on the street, raised the grade and built additional tracks thereon, and the second company having leased the road for ninety-nine years with a privilege of renewal, and thus continued the trespass, it was held that the abutting owner might make the two companies joint defendants, since they were both liable for the permanent injury to the property of the plaintiff and also for the temporary injuries arising after the lease was made. See RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 899.

cases.¹ Hence the owner of abutting property, whose title extends only to the middle of the street, has no cause of action against the company when its road is wholly on the opposite side.² This distinction is still recognized and continued in several jurisdictions.³ But principle as well as the decided weight of later authority seem to repudiate such a distinction as unsound, and the interest of an owner of abutting property in the street is protected against appropriation by railroad companies without regard to whether he owns the fee or not.⁴ Even where the fee is in the public, whether represented by the city, state, or county, it is merely held in trust for public use as a street and for no other purpose, and if it is diverted to any other use whereby the land-

1. For numerous cases, see HIGHWAYS, vol. 9, p. 408; Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Rodel, 89 Ind. 128; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 284; 46 Am. Rep. 164; Protzman v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 9 Ind. 467; 68 Am. Dec. 650; Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Scott, 74 Ind. 29; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 208; Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Eberle, 110 Ind. 542; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 220; 59 Am. Rep. 225; Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Odum, 53 Tex. 343; 2 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 503.

2. Thus, in First Cong. Church v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 77 Wis. 158; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 182, it was held that where a railroad was constructed ten feet east of the center line of the street, the owner of land on the west side of the street had no cause of action. See also Heiss v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 69 Wis. 555; O'Connor v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 56 Iowa 735; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 325; Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Eberle, 110 Ind. 542; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 225; 59 Am. Rep. 225 (embankment constructed entirely on one side of middle line); Rinard v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 66 Iowa 440; Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Bissell, 108 Ind. 113.

3. See Fobes v. Rome, etc., R. Co., 121 N. Y. 505; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137; infra, this title, Doctrine in New York; Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Rodel, 89 Ind. 128; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 284; 46 Am. Rep. 164; Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Scott, 74 Ind. 29; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 208.

4. The diversity between the early and later authorities is well seen in the cases in Mississippi. In Donnager v. State, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 661, decided in 1847, the court expressed its views thus: "We are strongly inclined to the belief that the owners of lots adjacent to the track of the railroad will have no claim to compensation. They have no right of soil in the streets and the charter of the railroad company restricts the use to such bounds as will not interfere with the passage of the streets." This language was merely a dictum, but was clearly the prevailing opinion at the time. While in Theobald v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 66 Miss. 288; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 465; 14 Am. St. Rep. 564; 40 Alb. L. J. 335, it was said by Arnold, C. J.: "The right of the owner of abutting property to use the street as a street is as much property as the street itself, and neither the public, nor a corporation, nor an individual, can lawfully deprive him of it, against his will, without compensation. If the street is needed for the purposes of a railroad, or for any other purpose inconsistent with the ordinary uses of a public street, the rights and interests of the owner of abutting property must be obtained, with his consent, or by the exercise of the right of eminent domain, as in other cases of taking private property for public use. . . . The weight of judicial authority undoubtedly is, that where the public have only an easement in the street, and the fee of the soil of the street is retained in the owner of abutting property, under the constitutional guaranty of private property, a steam railroad cannot be lawfully constructed and operated thereon, against his will, and without compensation." As to the distinction dependent on the ownership of the fee, the court added: "We perceive no well-founded difference in principle in such a distinction. If the fee is in the public, it is held in trust, expressly or impliedly, that the land shall be used as a street, and it cannot be applied to any other purpose without a breach of trust. It is only where the fee is in the public, owner is deprived of his right of access over the street, there is a violation of the constitutional provision against the taking of private property without compensation.¹ So it has been held that where the city owns the fee of the streets its consent to their use free from any trust or duty, that it may be disposed of for any purpose that the public may deem proper. Whether the owner of abutting property has simply an easement in the street, while the fee is in the public or in some other owner, or whether he has both the fee and an easement, he is equally entitled to require that nothing shall be done in derogation of his rights. 1 Hare on Const. Law 370, 375; Lewis on Em. Dom., §§ 114, 115." This language is quoted with approval in 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 704.

In Pierce on Railroads, p. 232, it is said: "It seems, on principle, immaterial in determining the proper uses of a highway whether the adjacent owner retains the fee in the street. If he retains it, the easement granted to the public should be deemed broad enough for all modes of travel consistent with the primary and general one; and even if the public has acquired the fee, he has still an interest in the street for access and passage which is entitled to protection."

And the doctrine of the text is sustained by other authority both of text-writers and decided cases. 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 704; Cooley Const. Lim. (4th ed.), p. 556; Mills on Em. Dom. (3d ed.), § 206; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 340 (ownership of fee of no consequence so far as the rights of the public are concerned); Cincinnati, etc., St. R. Co. v. Cummins-ville, 14 Ohio St. 523; Scioto Valley R. Co. v. Lawrence, 38 Ohio St. 41; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 93; 43 Am. Rep. 419; Omaha, etc., R. Co. v. Rogers, 16 Neb. 117; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79; Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Reinhackle, 15 Neb. 279; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 172; 48 Am. Rep. 342; Virginia, etc., R. Co. v. Lynch, 13 Nev. 92; Spencer v. Point Pleasant, etc., R. Co., 23 W. Va. 407; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 125; Mollandin v. Union Pac. R. Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 394; Denver v. Bayer, 7 Colo. 113; 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 467; Fulton v. Short-Route R. Transfer Co., 85 Ky. 640; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 259; 7 Am. St. Rep. 619 (this case repudiates the distinction in refusing recovery in either case); Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 634; 46 Am. & Eng. R.

Cas. 608. See also Story v. New York El. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 122; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 596; 43 Am. Rep. 146.

In Pumpelly v. Green Bay, etc., Canal Co., 13 Wall. (U. S.) 166, Miller, J., said: "Where real estate is actually invaded by superinduced additions of water, earth, sand, or other material, or by having any artificial structure placed under it so as to effectually destroy or impair its usefulness, it is a taking within the meaning of the constitution" [of Wisconsin]; adding that "this proposition is not in conflict with the weight of judicial authority in this country, and certainly not with sound principle."

For a review of the doctrines held by the different states, see infra, this title, Doctrine in New York, and In Other Jurisdictions.

1. Lewis on Em. Dom., § 114; Reichert v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 51 Ark. 497; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 453; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Reed, 41 Cal. 256; Weyl v. Sonoma Valley R. Co., 69 Cal. 202; In re Gilbert El. R. Co., 38 Hun (N. Y.) 448; Gebhardt v. Reeves, 75 Ill. 301; Schurmeier v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 10 Minn. 82; 88 Am. Dec. 59; 7 Wall. (U. S.) 272; Imlay v. Union Branch R. Co., 26 Conn. 249; 68 Am. Dec. 392; Cook v. Burlington, 30 Iowa 94; 36 Iowa 357; 6 Am. Rep. 649; Quincy v. Jones, 76 Ill. 231; 20 Am. Rep. 243.

"Although it may be assumed that the municipality by proceedings to open a street acquires the fee to the land taken, it is yet a qualified fee held in trust under the statute for a certain use, and that use cannot be departed from without violating an essential condition of the contract under which the land was obtained. The right which the municipality acquires is limited by the public necessity and cannot extend beyond its use for street purposes." Ruger, Ch. J., in Lahr v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 291.

The contention generally made is that where the street was originally established by condemnation of private property, the owner of adjacent property was compensated for all time by the award of damages in the condemnation proceedings. But this claim is by a railway company operates merely to free the company from liability for a public nuisance; and the company remains liable to the owners of abutting property for injuries caused by the construction of the railway.¹

Another, and it seems a preferable, basis of the right of the owner of abutting property to demand compensation of the railroad company, is that in all streets, regardless of the ownership of the fee, the owners of property abutting thereon have an ease-unfounded unless the benefits for which the adjacent owner is assessed are invariably secured to him by such proceedings. Lahr v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 290; Cooley Const. Lim. (4th ed.), § 552; Imlay v. Union Branch R. Co., 26 Conn. 257; 68 Am. Dec. 392. See for numerous cases on the question of the ownership of the fee, HIGHWAY, vol. 9, p. 409.

1. 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (3d ed.), § 711 (564); Lamm v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 45 Minn. 71; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 42; Fletcher v. Auburn, etc., R. Co., 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 462; Ford v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 14 Wis. 609; 80 Am. Dec. 791; Danville, etc., R. Co. v. Com., 73 Pa. St. 38; Virginia, etc., R. Co. v. Lynch, 13 Nev. 92.

Fee in Owner.—In Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Hartley, 67 Ill. 439; 16 Am. Rep. 627, the court, by Scott, J., said: "The doctrine most in consonance with our sense of justice is that where the fee of the street remains in the owner of abutting land, the corporation may grant the right to a railway company to lay its track along or across any street, but the company avails itself of its privileges at its peril. If in laying its track it causes a private injury to him who owns the fee in the adjoining premises, it must make good the damages sustained."

In Parrot v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 10 Ohio St. 624, the road and its embankments were built under authority from the city, and the work was approved by the city engineer. It was held that the owners of abutting property might nevertheless recover for the injuries suffered in relation to their property.

In St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Schurmeier, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 289, the court held that where a street was dedicated to the public, and the entire title vested in fee in the state, this was no defense to a suit against a railway company for injuries resulting to abutting property from the company's occupation of the street, since "the municipal corporation took the title in trust impliedly if not expressly designated by the acts of the party in making the dedication. They could not, nor could the state, convey to the respondents any right to disregard the trust or to appropriate the premises to any purpose which would render valueless the adjoining real estate of the complainant," affirming Schurmeier v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 10 Minn. 82; 88 Am. Dec. 59.

In 1 Am. Law Reg. N. S. 192, an article by Judge Redfield, written in 1862, the law as regards railroads and streets is thus summed up: "For a long time the railway was regarded as only an 'improved highway' and no additional compensation was given to the landowner. But this doctrine has been abandoned, and it is now held that a railway is an additional servitude and the owner of the soil is entitled to additional compensation. This was always the English rule. There one cannot tunnel the highway without additional compensation to the owner of the soil." In this article the writer reviews the following cases: Presbyterian Soc. v. Auburn, etc., R. Co., 3 Hill (N. Y.) 567; Fletcher v. Auburn, etc., R. Co., 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 462; Henry v. Pittsburgh, etc., Bridge Co., 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 85; In re Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 6 Whart. (Pa.) 25; 36 Am. Dec. 202; Hatch v. Vermont Cent. R. Co., 25 Vt. 49; Williams v. New York Cent. R. Co., 16 N. Y. 97; 69 Am. Dec. 651; Salisbury v. Great Northern R. Co., 5 C. B. N. S. 174; 94 E. C. L. 173, and other cases; Ramsden v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., 1 Exch. 723; Thompson v. East Somerset R. Co., 29 L. T. 7.

Right of City Councilmen Voting for the Grant of Authority.—A member of the city council in voting in favor of the grant to a railroad company of the right to occupy the street with its road is presumed to refer only to the public easement, and is not estopped by his vote to maintain an action against the ment of light, air, and access over the street as appurtenant to their property, for the infringement of which by the construction and operation of a railroad in the street, damages may be recovered.¹ This doctrine has the sanction of the decided weight of company for damages which his property suffered in consequence of the existence of the railroad. Lamm v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 45 Minn. 71; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 42.

No Distinction Between Streets in Cities and Ordinary Highways.—There are some authorities which suggest that there may be a difference between streets in cities and highways in the country. See Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Applegate, 8 Dana (Ky.) 289; 33 Am. Dec. 497 (where the distinction is strongly insisted upon); Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 340 ("the streets of a town are fairly subject to many purposes to which a highway in the country would not be"); Haight v. Keokuk, 4 Iowa 199; Milhau v. Sharp, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 193; Chapman v. Albany, etc., R. Co., 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 360; Williams v. New York Cent. R. Co., 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 246.

"But as both the highway and the street are appropriated for the same general purpose and a highway in a district sparsely inhabited at one time may by the growth of population become a street in a city, this distinction does not appear to rest on a sound basis." Pierce on Railroads, p. 232; People v. Law, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 501; Morris, etc., R. Co. v. Hudson Tunnel R. Co., 25 N. J. Eq. 388; 1 Am. Law Reg. N. S. 193 (article by Judge Redfield).

No Distinction Dependent Upon Manner of Establishing Highway.—There is no distinction as to the rights of owners of abutting property between cases where the highway was dedicated by the landowner and where it was established by condemnation proceedings; in either case the rights of the landowner are the same, except where a fee is condemned, and even this exception does not generally prevail. See Lahr v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 269; Story v. New York El. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 122; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 506; 43 Am. Rep. 146; Kane v. New York El. R. Co., 125 N. Y. 164; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137.

1. Adams v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 39 Minn. 296; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 7; 12 Am. St. Rep. 644 (in this case the opinion of Gilfillan, J., reviews the whole subject at length); Imlay v.

Union Branch R. Co., 26 Conn. 258; 68 Am. Dec. 392; Denver v. Bayer, 7 Colo. 113; 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 465; Griffin v. Shreveport, etc., R. Co., 41 La. Ann. 808; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 295; Starr v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 24 N. J. L. 592; Omaha, etc., R. Co. v. Rogers, 16 Neb. 117; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79; Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Reinhackle, 15 Neb. 279; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 169; 48 Am. Rep. 342; Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Eberle, 110 Ind. 542; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 223; 59 Am. Rep. 225; Sheehy v. Kansas City Cable R. Co., 94 Mo. 574; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 233; 4 Am. St. Rep. 396; Dixon v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 1 Mackey (D. C.) 78; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 201. See as to the character of such property, Crawford v. Delaware, 7 Ohio St. 469; Cincinnati, etc., St. R. Co. v. Cummins, 14 Ohio St. 541.

In Crawford v. Delaware, 7 Ohio St. 469, it is said: "The latter (owners of abutting property) have a peculiar interest in the street, which neither the local nor the general public can pretend to claim; a private right in the nature of an incorporeal hereditament, legally attached to their contiguous grounds and the erections thereon; an incidental title to certain facilities and franchises assured to them by contracts and by law and without which their property is of comparatively little value. This easement appendant to the lots, unlike the right of one lot owner in the lot of another, is as much property as the lot itself." Quoted in Cooley's Const. Lim. (5th ed.), §556, note.

In Cincinnati, etc., St. R. Co. v. Cummins, 14 Ohio St. 523, the rights of owners of abutting property are thus set out: "There exists in the owners of adjoining lots a private right to free access to their lands and buildings from the street, as the same was and would have continued to be according to the mode of its original use and appropriation by the public, and there can be no change of such mode and adaptation of the street to new vehicles and methods of carriage and transportation, which shall materially impair or destroy such right, unless by the consent of the owners or upon the payment of due compensation to them." The su-authority, particularly of the more recent cases, and seems to be the one more consistent with the general theory of the rights of property holders.¹

The correct rule seems to be that, whether or not an owner of abutting property has the fee of the street, he nevertheless has the right to insist that he be not deprived of his easements of light, air, and access over the street, or materially injured in his use of them; that since a railroad constructed along the street is an additional burden thereon, and a new use thereof, and by its constant operation of fast and heavy trains with their annoying accompaniments of smoke, cinders, and gases, together with the impediment to free access caused by the track, each owner has a right to recover of the railroad company damages for injuries caused by such construction of the railroad.² Such owner may, of course, assign his rights in the streets to the railroad company, or waive them expressly or impliedly, and in such cases he has preme court of Wisconsin in a leading case, after quoting this language, approves it as follows: "It is a doctrine which imposes no unreasonable restriction upon the rights of the public in the use of its streets and highways, and which at the same time affords that protection to private or individual rights which the spirit and principles of our constitution and form of government require." Hobart v. Milwaukee City R. Co., 27 Wis. 200; 9 Am. Rep. 461. This language has met with frequent approval. See Cooley's Const. Lim. (5th ed.), p. 688 (556), note.

1. Cases denying recovery in any event or which limit the right to recover to owners of the fee of the street are nearly always the earlier cases which have in many instances been overruled, or the effect of which has been annulled by statute. See 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 704; infra, this title, Doctrine in New York; Grafton v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 309; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 200; Iowa Code (1883) 424.

2. The whole question is exhaustively examined in the opinion of the court, by Gilfillan, C. J., in Adams v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 39 Minn. 286; 36 Am. & Eng. Cas. 8; 12 Am. St. Rep. 644. It is there said: "The conclusions arrived at are: That the owner of a lot abutting on a public street has, independent of the fee in the street, as appurtenant to his lot, an easement in the street in front of his lot to the full width of the street for admission of light and air to his lot, which easement is subordinate only to the public right. That depriving him of, or interfering with his enjoyment of, the easement for any public use not a proper street use is a taking of his property within the meaning of the constitution. That appropriating a public street to the construction and operation of an ordinary commercial railroad upon it is not a proper street use. That where without his consent, and without compensation to him, such a railroad is laid and operated along the portion of the street in front of his lot so as upon that part of the street to cause smoke, dust, cinders, etc., which darken or pollute the air coming from that part of the street upon his lot, he may recover whatever damages to his lot are caused by so laying and operating such railroad on that part of the street." Followed in Lamm v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 45 Minn. 71; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 47. This view has the sanction of other high authority. See St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Schurmeier, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 272; Chicago v. Taylor, 125 U. S. 161; 22 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 384; New York El. R. Co. v. Fifth Nat. Bank, 135 U. S. 432; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 403; Hot Spring R. Co. v. Williamson, 136 U. S. 121; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59; 45 Ark. 429; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Miller, 132 U. S. 75; Mollandin v. Union Pac. R. Co., 14 Fed. Rep. 394; Frankle v. Jackson, 30 Fed. Rep. 398; Reichert v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 51 Ark. 491; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 453; Ford v. Santa Cruz R. Co., 59 Cal. 290; Weyl v. Sonoma Valley R. Co., 69 Cal. 203; Denver v. Bayer, 7 Colo. 113; 2 Am. & Eng. Corp.

Cas. 465; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Bourne, 11 Colo. 59; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 227; Nicholson v. New York, etc., R. Co., 22 Conn. 85; 56 Am. Dec. 390; Imlay v. Union Branch R. Co., 26 Conn. 258; 68 Am. Dec. 392; South Carolina R. Co. v. Steiner, 44 Ga. 546; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Reich, 101 Ill. 167; Cox v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 48 Ind. 179; Central Branch, etc., R. Co. v. Twine, 23 Kan. 585; 33 Am. Rep. 203; Central Branch, etc., R. Co. v. Andrews, 26 Kan. 702; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 370; Fort Scott, etc., R. Co. v. Fox, 42 Kan. 490; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 331; Griffin v. Shreveport, etc., R. Co., 41 La. Ann. 808; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 296; Springfield v. Connecticut River R. Co., 4 Cush. (Mass.) 71; Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich. 62; 31 Am. Rep. 306; Ward v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 62 Mich. 46; Riedinger v. Marquette, etc., R. Co., 62 Mich. 29; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 611; Schurmeier v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 10 Minn. 82; 88 Am. Dec. 59; 7 Wall. (U. S.) 272; Gray v. First Div. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 13 Minn. 315; Adams v. Hastings, etc., R. Co., 18 Minn. 260; Brisbine v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 23 Minn. 115 (in this case, as in the three cases immediately preceding, the landowner had the fee of the street); Theobald v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 66 Miss. 287; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 465; 14 Am. St. Rep. 564; 40 Alb. L. J. 335; Lackland v. North Missouri R. Co., 31 Mo. 180; Gottschalk v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 14 Neb. 550; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 157; Hastings, etc., R. Co. v. Ingalls, 15 Neb. 123; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 60; Omaha, etc., R. Co. v. Rogers, 16 Neb. 117; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79; Virginia, etc., R. Co. v. Lynch, 13 Nev. 92; Higbee v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 19 N. J. Eq. 276; Chamberlain v. Elizabethport Steam Cordage Co., 41 N. J. Eq. 43; Columbus, etc., R. Co. v. Gardner, 45 Ohio St. 309; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 246; McQuaid v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 18 Oregon 237; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 308; Pittsburgh Junction R. Co. v. McCutchen (Pa. 1886), 7 Atl. Rep. 146; Smith v. East End St. R. Co., 87 Tenn. 626; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 470; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Eddins, 60 Tex. 656; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Fuller, 63 Tex. 467; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 154; Fort Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Jennings, 76 Tex. 373; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 576; Ford v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 14 Wis. 609; 80 Am. Dec. 791; Andrews v. Farmers'

L. & T. Co., 22 Wis. 288; Blesch v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 43 Wis. 183; Carl v. Sheboygan, etc., R. Co., 46 Wis. 625; Hanlin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 61 Wis. 515; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 70; Quillinan v. Canada Southern R. Co., 6 Ont. Rep. 567; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 31; 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 704; Lewis on Em. Dom., §§ 113, 115; Cooley's Const. Lim. (5th ed.) *557. Compare Pierce on Railroads, p. 233; Wood's Ry. Law, p. 722-3. See also Carson v. Central R. Co., 35 Cal. 325; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Reed, 41 Cal. 256; Brainard v. Missisquoi R. Co., 48 Vt. 107; Peddicord v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 34 Md. 463; Whittier v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 38 Me. 26; Palatka, etc., R. Co. v. State, 23 Fla. 546; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 191; 11 Am. St. Rep. 395.

In Lahr v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 291, the court observes that if the right of the owner of abutting property in the street may be taken from him without his consent and without compensation to him, "a system has been inaugurated which resembles more nearly legalized robbery than any other form of acquiring property."

Where Right to Occupy Street Is Reserved When Town Was Laid Out.—In Riedinger v. Marquette, etc., R. Co., 62 Mich. 29; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 611, a mining company, on laying out a town and dedicating streets in it, reserved the right to construct a railroad through a certain street. Subsequently it assigned all its rights to a railroad company which proceeded to build four tracks down this street, after having gained the city's permission to do so. An owner of property abutting on the street obtained an injunction against the company, and on appeal it was held that the company had no right to blockade the streets with its tracks without compensating the owners of abutting property; that the reservation mentioned did not confer the right to destroy the usefulness and value of private property. Such reservation was as against the city and could not affect property holders.

Right to Enjoin Occupation of Street.—Where the construction of a steam railroad through a city street will injure the property abutting on the street, the construction will be enjoined at the instance of the owners of such abutting property, until the right to construct the road has been acquired by proceedings against such owners, conducted as reno cause of action except where the company is guilty of an unlawful or negligent exercise of its authority.¹

While the ownership of the fee is immaterial in determining the proper and legitimate uses of the street or highway and the general right of abutting owners to compensation, yet it seems that the distinction above referred to is very properly made in determining the amount of damages. In the one case the abutter suffers no legal injury except the interference with his easements of light, air, and access; in the other he suffers the added injury of the imposition of an additional burden upon his fee.²

(2) Doctrine in New York.—The New York courts have adhered steadily to the doctrine that where the fee of the street is in the quired by law for the appropriation of private property; and it is immaterial that the fee of the street is in the city. Scioto Valley R. Co. v. Lawrence, 38 Ohio St. 41; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 93; 43 Am. Rep. 419. See also Morris, etc., R. Co. v. Hudson Tunnel R. Co., 25 N. J. Eq. 384.

Compare Roelker v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 50 Ind. 127 (injunction denied).

Railroad Partly on Street and Partly on Private Property.—When proceedings are taken to condemn a portion of a city lot for a right of way for the railroad and the lot is part of a homestead lying on both sides of an alley, the award of damages cannot be confined to the land actually taken, but must cover such actual injury as is done to the entire homestead, including the easement in the alley. Port Huron, etc., R. Co. v. Voorheis, 50 Mich. 506; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 227. See also Alabama Midland R. Co. v. Williams, 92 Ala. 277.

1. Burkam v. Ohio, etc. R. Co., 122 Ind. 344; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 153; Marble v. Whitney, 28 N. Y. 297.

A suit was brought to recover damages to a lot by the construction and operation of a railroad in the street, under the Iowa statute which prohibits the laying of railroad tracks in the street without compensation to owners of abutting lots. It appeared that at the time when the railroad was constructed, a petition was circulated among the lot-owners consenting to the laying down of the track; that while neither of the persons jointly owning plaintiff's lot at that time signed the petition, yet that one of the joint tenants was present when the track was staked out by the railroad engineer, and that he assented to its construction. No complaint or claim was made for eight years and a half. Prior to the construction of the road, the whole street was used for railway purposes, and travel by ordinary vehicles along the street was impracticable except at the outer edges. The main line of the road ran the length of the street and a passenger depot was located nearly opposite the plaintiff's lot. It was held that the evidence sufficiently established a waiver of their claim to damages by the former proprietors, and that the plaintiff had no cause of action—the fact that the consent of one of the two joint tenants was not secured did not affect the waiver. Nor was such consent of the owners affected by the fact that a tax title was outstanding where such title was subsequently assigned to them; the subsequent acquiescence in the use of the street having the same effect as a new parcel license. Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 70 Iowa 105. Compare, as to evidence of assent, Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Hicks, 30 Kan. 288; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 100. See also as to effect of delay in bringing action, infra, this title, Remedies, Character of the Action, etc.; Murdock v. Prospect Park, etc., R. Co., 10 Hun (N. Y.) 598; Pratt v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 72 Iowa 249; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 236.

2. Distinction Material in Determining the Amount of Damage.—Thus where the railroad is constructed entirely on the side of the center line of the street and farthest from the plaintiff's abutting property, his recovery must be limited to the injury suffered from the infringement of his easements, and damages cannot be allowed for noise, vibration, etc., because such damages do not amount to an interference with the easements, and can be recovered only by the owner of the fee. They are a proximate result of the imposition of an additional burden on the fee, but public, the legislature may authorize the construction of an ordinary railroad thereon, and the owner of land abutting on such street has no right of recovery for damages which result from a proper exercise of this lawful authority.¹ Where the fee of the street is in the owner of abutting land the occupation of the street by the railroad is considered a taking of property for which such owner may recover as in cases where other real property is taken.² But after the adoption of the constitutional amendment of 1874 (art. 3, § 18), forbidding the passage of laws authorizing "the construction or operation of a street railroad except upon condition only a remote consequence of the interference with the easements. Lamm v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 45 Minn. 71; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 42.

1. Corey v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 482; Drake v. Hudson River R. Co., 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 508; People v. Kerr, 27 N. Y. 188, affirming 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 357; Sweet v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 13 Hun (N. Y.) 644; Mazetti v. New York, etc., R. Co., 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 98; Mahady v. Bushwick R. Co., 91 N. Y. 148; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 143; 43 Am. Rep. 661; Fobes v. Rome, etc., R. Co., 121 N. Y. 505; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137.

The right to recover was denied in Chapman v. Albany, etc., R. Co., 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 360, though the company in constructing its road raised the grade of the street. See also Gould v. Hudson River R. Co., 6 N. Y. 522, upholding the right of the legislature to authorize the construction of a railroad between the high and low water mark of a river without the consent of, or compensation to, abutting landowners. Radcliffe v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 195; 53 Am. Dec. 357.

Compare Falker v. New York, etc., R. Co., 17 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 279; Robinson v. New York, etc., R. Co., 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 512, the latter case holding that a legislative grant of the right to construct a railroad can give no authority to invade any private rights without just compensation. It confers a franchise merely, and the title and rights of a private corporation, but no exemption for wrongs to private property. Presbyterian Soc. v. Auburn, etc., R. Co., 3 Hill (N. Y.) 567; Williams v. New York Cent. R. Co., 16 N. Y. 97, 108; Wager v. Troy Union R. Co., 25 N. Y. 533, though a number of cases between 1841 and 1857 held the opposite. Drake v. Hudson River R. Co., 7 Barb. (N. Y.) 508; Plant v. Long Island R. Co., 10 Barb. (N. Y.)

26; Chapman v. Albany, etc., R. Co., 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 360; Adams v. Saratoga, etc., R. Co., 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 414; Hentz v. Long Island R. Co., 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 646; Milhau v. Sharp, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 193; Williams v. New York Cent. R. Co., 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 222; 69 Am. Dec. 651; Corey v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 482.

2. Washington Cemetery v. Prospect Park, etc., R. Co., 7 Hun (N. Y.) 655; In re Prospect Park, etc., R. Co., 13 Hun (N. Y.) 345; Hussner v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 30 Hun (N. Y.) 409; People v. Law, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 109; Wager v. Troy Union R. Co., 25 N. Y. 526; Carpenter v. Oswego, etc., R. Co., 24 N. Y. 655; Craig v. Rochester City, etc., R. Co., 39 N. Y. 404; Henderson v. New York Cent. R. Co., 17 Hun (N. Y.) 344; 78 N. Y. 423.

In Williams v. New York Cent. R. Co., 16 N. Y. 97; 69 Am. Dec. 651, rev'd 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 222, it was held that where the landowner owned the fee of the street, neither the state nor the municipal authorities, nor both, could give to a railroad company the right to construct its road upon a street without the consent of the owner of the fee subject to the public easement, or without making him compensation, and that if the railroad company encroached in any degree upon the proprietary rights of the individual in the streets, the constitutional inhibition against the taking of private property for public use without compensation applied. See also Murphy v. Prospect Park, etc., R. Co., 73 N. Y. 579; Washington Cemetery v. Prospect Park, etc., R. Co., 68 N. Y. 59, aff'd 7 Hun (N. Y.) 655; Fobes v. Rome, etc., R. Co., 121 N. Y. 505; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137.

In Mahon v. New York Cent. R. Co., 24 N. Y. 658, land taken under legislative authority for the purpose of a turnpike was transferred to a railroad company to be used for the construction that the consent of the owners of one-half in value of the property bounded on the portion of the street or highway on which the railway is to be constructed or operated" be first obtained, this rule has been greatly modified.¹

No distinction is made between street railroads and ordinary steam railroads. The sole inquiry is whether the construction and operation of the road actually causes damage to the easements of the owners of abutting property in the street.² The doctrine of a railway thereon without compensation to owners of abutting property. It was held that such owners were entitled to damages for the additional burden.

In People v. Law, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 494, it is said that in all cases where parties appeal to the legislature for a grant of the right to construct a railway in a street a new assessment of damages is necessary.

In Wager v. Troy Union R. Co., 25 N. Y. 532, the court said: "It is true that the actual use of the street by the railroad may not be so absolute and constant as to exclude the public also from its use. With a single track, and particularly if the cars used upon it were propelled by horse power the interruption of the public easement in the street might be very trifling and of no practical consequence to the public at large. But this consideration cannot affect the question of right of property or of the increase of burden upon the soil. It would present simply a question of degree in respect to the enlargement of the easement and would not affect the principle that the use of a street for the purposes of the railroad imposed upon it a new burden."

Obligation to Construct New Highway.—In Post v. West Shore R. Co., 123 N. Y. 580; 47 Am. & R. Cas. 322, the company's right to occupy the highway rested upon a statute which required that if the road was laid in the highway a new one must be constructed by the company. A landowner gave the company a deed to the fee of the highway and to adjacent land and the company in return covenanted to reconstruct the highway on other land. It was held that this contract was not void as being against public policy; and the railroad company having committed a breach of it the landowner was allowed to recover damages in the sum of $2,500. The award was held not to be excessive, it appearing that the landowner was compelled to travel one and a quarter miles further in transporting his products on account of the failure of the company to comply with its agreement.

1. The necessity for a modification of former holdings after experience had shown the effects of the elevated road, is adverted to by Peckham, J., speaking for the court in Bohm v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 129 N. Y. 576; 50 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 271: "When under legislative authority and municipal authority the elevated railroad structure was built, it was supposed by many there was no liability to owners of abutting property because no land of theirs was taken, and any damage they sustained was indirect only and damnum absque injuria. When the courts acquired possession of the question and it was seen that abutting land which before the erection of the road was worth, for instance, $10,000 might be reduced to a half or a quarter of that sum in value, or even rendered practically worthless by reason of the building of the road, it became necessary to ascertain if there were not some principle of law which could be resorted to in order to render those who wrought such damage liable for their work." He then proceeds to a detail of the reasoning pursued by the courts in adopting the rule relating to recovery of damages in such cases. See the subject treated supra, this title, Elevated Railroads: Right of Owners of Abutting Property to Recover. See also Falker v. New York, etc. R. Co., 17 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 279.

2. In Craig v. Rochester City, etc., R. Co., 39 N. Y. 404; aff'd 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 494, where the landowner had the fee of the street he was allowed to recover damages for the occupation of the street by a horse railway; while in Fobes v. Rome, etc., R. Co., 121 N. Y. 505; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137, where the fee of the street was in the public, the landowner was not allowed to recover for the occupation of the street by an ordinary steam railroad. See also Kellinger v. Forty-second, etc., St. R. Co., 50 of the elevated railway cases has been often approved and followed in other jurisdictions. The refusal of the New York courts to apply the same doctrine to surface roads has been the subject of adverse comment.¹

(3) In Other Jurisdictions.—While the general doctrine previously set out prevails in most of the states of the Union it is not universally accepted. In several jurisdictions a modified form of it is adopted; some of the cases confining the right of recovery on the part of the owner of abutting property to cases where he has the ownership of the fee; others to cases where the grade of the street is changed, or where the railroad company is guilty of an excessive or unlawful use of its authority.²

N. Y. 206; supra, this title, Distinction Dependent Upon Ownership of Fee and Character of Highway.

1. The doctrine of the elevated railway cases is declared to be not applicable to surface railroads. Fobes v. Rome, etc., R. Co., 121 N. Y. 505; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137.

In Lamm v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 45 Minn. 71; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 47, it is said: "We cited the elevated railway cases because of what we deemed the inherent force and soundness of the reasoning of the opinion of the court, although we were then, and still are, unable to see how it was consistent with the doctrine of that court, announced in other cases, that the legislature had the right to authorize the construction of a railroad on a street without requiring the railway company to pay compensation to the owners of abutting lands, provided they did not own the fee in the street. For if the owner of abutting property independently of the ownership of the fee of the street has an easement in the street in front of his lot to the full width of it for the purposes of access, light, and air, which is property and cannot be taken from him without compensation, it is difficult for us to see what difference it makes whether the easement is taken away or its enjoyment interfered with by a railroad constructed and operated on the surface of the ground or at an elevation above it." See also the opinion of the dissenting judges in the case of Story v. New York El. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 122; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 596; 43 Am. Rep. 146.

In Fobes v. Rome, etc., R. Co., 121 N. Y. 505; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137, the various rulings of the court upon the question are reviewed and distinguished.

2. In California, compensation is allowed though the fee be in the public. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Reed, 41 Cal. 256, overruling Carson v. Central R. Co., 35 Cal. 325; but the plaintiff must show special damage to his property not common to the public at large. Schulte v. North Pac. Transp. Co., 50 Cal. 592; Ford v. Santa Cruz R. Co., 59 Cal. 290.

In Colorado, the constitution provides that "private property shall not be taken and damaged for public or private use without just compensation." In Denver v. Bayer, 7 Colo. 113; 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 465, it was held that for any injury or annoyance occasioned by the construction of an ordinary railway in a street, peculiar to an owner of abutting property and not shared by the general public, such owner should be compensated therefor though the city hold the fee and grant the right of way.

See also Denver Circle R. Co. v. Nestor, 10 Colo. 403; Jackson v. Kiel, 13 Colo. 378; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 299; 16 Am. St. Rep. 207; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Bourne, 11 Colo. 59; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 227.

In Connecticut.—In Imlay v. Union Branch R. Co., 26 Conn. 259; 68 Am. Dec. 392 (the only case to be found in which the question is directly in issue), Storrs, C. J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "We are of the opinion as was distinctly intimated by this court in a former case (Nicholson v. New York, etc., R. Co., 22 Conn. 85; 56 Am. Dec. 390), that to subject the owner of the soil of the highway to a further appropriation of his land to railway uses is the imposition of a new servitude upon his estate and is an act demanding the compensation which the law awards when land is taken for public purposes."

In Arkansas.—In Hot Springs R. Co. v. Williamson, 136 U. S. 121, affirming 45 Ark. 429, it was held that under the constitution of 1874 providing that "private property shall not be taken, appropriated or damaged without just compensation," the owner of property abutting on a street may recover damages resulting from the construction of a railroad in the streets in such a manner as to obstruct access to his premises though the fee be not his and even though the road be properly built.

In Reichert v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 51 Ark. 491; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 453, it was decided that the fee of the street is in the owner of the adjacent land; that any use of the street not contemplated by its original dedication is an infringement of the reserved rights of such owner for which he may invoke the ordinary legal remedies; and that the construction and operation of a steam railway on a street is such use.

In District of Columbia.—In Nottingham v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 3 MacArthur (D. C.) 517, the railroad constructed according to law upon the established grade of the street, rendered the abutting lots inaccessible and useless for purposes of business or residence; the land was further damaged by the neglect of the railroad company to provide means for carrying off water which collected in consequence of an embankment. The court held that these facts afforded no right of action to the owner of such abutting property. But in another case in the same jurisdiction it is held that a railroad company unlawfully using a public avenue for freight delivery is liable for damages to the land of abutting owners growing out of such use. Trook v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 3 MacArthur (D. C.) 392. Compare Dickson v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 3 MacArthur (D. C.) 362 where an act of Congress provided that compensation must be made to owners of abutting property.

In Florida.—In Florida Southern R. Co. v. Brown, 23 Fla. 119, it was held "that where an adjacent owner of real estate on a street of a town or city is not the owner of the fee to the center of the street, though he is not entitled, as against the company laying a railroad along said street by proper authority, to recover damages for the appropriation of the soil of the street, or for any incidental injury to his property from noise or smoke or like annoyances, yet he is entitled to the use of the street and may recover damages for any special injury he may sustain, if by reason of the improper laying of said track or its improper use his right to use it is unreasonably abridged or impeded. But in an action grounded on such injury the diminution of the value of the estate of plaintiff is not a ground of damage."

In Georgia.—Although the fee is in the public, compensation will be allowed the owner of abutting property. South Carolina R. Co. v. Steiner, 44 Ga. 546.

In Illinois.—The rule in this State under the constitution of 1870 (art. 2 § 13) is stated in East St. Louis v. O'Flynn, 19 Ill. App. 67, where the court, by Pillsbury, P. J., say: "The damages therefore that an individual may recover for injury to his property, need not necessarily be caused by acts amounting to a trespass to his real estate, but if his property be depreciated in value by his being deprived of some right of user or enjoyment, growing out of and appurtenant to his estate in the lands, as the direct consequence of the construction and use of any public improvement, his right of action is complete, and he may recover to the extent of the injury thus sustained." In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Ayres, 106 Ill. 512; 14 Am. & Eng. R. 152, similar language is used. See also Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Reich, 101 Ill. 157; and also East St. Louis v. O'Flynn, 119 Ill. 200; 59 Am. Rep. 795; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Joliet, 71 Ill. 25. Compare Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Berg, 10 Ill. App. 607; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. McGinnis, 79 Ill. 269.

Prior to the constitution of 1870, which requires compensation whenever private property is taken, damaged, or injured for a public use, a different rule prevailed. It was declared in a number of cases that if any damages at all were recovered of the railroad company, they were to be confined to the direct physical injury done to the property by the operation of the road, and it was error to allow plaintiff to prove what was the fee or the rental value of the property with the road and what it would be without it. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. McGinnis, 79 Ill. 269; Stone v. Fairbury, etc., R. Co., 68 Ill. 394; 18 Am. Rep. 556; Moses v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 21 Ill. 516; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Joliet, 79 Ill. 25; Murphy v. Chicago, 29 Ill. 279; 81 Am. Dec. 307.

See also as to the Illinois doctrine, Gottschalk v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 14 Neb. 550; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 157, where numerous cases are examined.

In Indiana.—The Indiana courts seem to base the right to recover upon the ground that the fee of the street is in the owner of abutting property. According to the case of Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Scott, 74 Ind. 29; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 208, the fee of all streets and highways in the state with a few exceptions, is in such owners; so that practically the general doctrine prevails here. The rule is laid down in Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Bissell, 108 Ind. 113, where it is said by Hawk, J., "Thus in Cox v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 48 Ind. 178, it is said: 'So far as the highway, street, or easement is concerned, as the municipality has complete control thereof, it may, we presume, make or authorize any use of the street which will not essentially change and divert it from its intended use as a public highway. But this power of the common council cannot, of course, affect the rights of the individual owner of the fee of the soil over which the highway or street passes. This right of the individual, according to the case of Protzman v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 9 Ind. 467; 68 Am. Dec. 650, is as much property as the lot itself. As was said in Indianapolis v. Croas, 7 Ind. 9, it is a right distinct from the claim of the public which even the legislature could not take away unless to appropriate to a public use; in which case, of course, compensation must be made. Logansport v. Shirk, 88 Ind. 563; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. North, 103 Ind. 486; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 36.'" Recovery in this (the Bissell) case was denied because the railroad was laid on that half of the street not adjacent to plaintiff's property.

See also Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Rodel, 89 Ind. 128; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 284; 46 Am. Rep. 164; Dwenger v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 98 Ind. 153; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 56.

"In case the structure imposes no additional burden upon his soil, the right of the lot owner to maintain a common law action for an injury depends upon whether or not the occupation of the streets results in damage peculiar to his property and different in kind from that which is suffered by the community in general." Mitchell, J., in Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Eberle, 110 Ind. 542; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 224; 59 Am. Rep. 225.

In this case it appeared that the company had constructed an embankment wholly on the side of the center line of the street farthest from plaintiff's lot. It was held that he could not recover in the absence of proof of special damage.

In Iowa.—The doctrine in this state is that an owner of abutting land in a city has, ordinarily, no such interest in the adjacent street as will entitle him to recover damages to his lot consequent upon the use of the street by the railroad having authority from the city to occupy its streets. Davenport v. Stevenson, 34 Iowa 225; Slatten v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 29 Iowa 148; 4 Am. Rep. 205 (bridge approaches erected in street); Cadle v. Muscatine Western R. Co., 44 Iowa 11; O'Connor v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 56 Iowa 735; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 324. In Kucheman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 46 Iowa 366, it was held, however, that where the fee of the street is in the adjacent proprietor, he is entitled to recover for injuries suffered to his property in consequence of such occupation on the grounds that: first, the use of the land for a highway and its use for a railway have a different effect upon the property of the owner, the former enhancing and the latter diminishing its value; second, when the land is appropriated for a street, the owner is compensated only for that and for no other use; third, the construction of a track and operation of a railway on a street are an additional servitude on the owner of the fee. His recovery is not limited to the actual value of the land taken, but may extend to all damages which result proximately from the use for which it was taken. Kucheman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 46 Iowa 366. See Rinard v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 66 Iowa 440. But by section 464 of the Iowa code (1873) owners of abutting property are given the right to recover for the occupation of the street. See Pratt v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 72 Iowa 249; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 236; infra, this title, Statutory Provisions Giving Right to Recover.

In Kansas.—To entitle a person owning lots abutting on a city street, along which a railroad company has constructed and is operating its line, by authority of the city council, to recover damages, there must be such a practical obstruction of the street in front of the lots that the owner is denied ingress to, and egress from, them. Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Cuykendall, 42 Kan. 234; 16 Am. St. Rep. 479. In this case it was further said: "But where the location of the track is such that space enough is left in the street in front of the lots of the abutting owner so that he can pass between the sidewalk and track, and the railroad is operated in a legal and proper manner, the lot owner cannot recover because the space within which he has heretofore passed from and to his lots is restricted." This is the settled doctrine of the court. Ottawa, etc., R. Co. v. Larsen, 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 163; Wichita, etc., R. Co. v. Smith, 45 Kan. 264; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 53; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Lyon, 24 Kan. 743; Central Branch, etc., R. Co. v. Andrews, 30 Kan. 593; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 248; Fort Scott, etc., R. Co. v. Fox, 42 Kan. 490; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 331; Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Mahler, 45 Kan. 565.

The fee of all streets which have been dedicated to the use of the public by property holders, is, under the statutes of the state, vested in the county in which such streets are situate and not in owners of abutting property. The county, however, holds it in trust for the public, and each city has entire control over the streets within its limits. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Garside, 10 Kan. 552; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Patch, 28 Kan. 473; Central Branch, etc., R. Co. v. Twine, 23 Kan. 585; 33 Am. Rep. 203. See also Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Hicks, 30 Kan. 288; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 100; EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 597, n. 2.

The landowner always has a cause of action, however, when he can show a wrongful or excessive exercise of the authority granted. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Lyon, 24 Kan. 748; Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. McAfee, 42 Kan. 239.

In Kentucky.—Though lot owners have a peculiar interest in the adjacent street, which neither the local nor general public have, in the nature of an incorporeal hereditament—a franchise which is as inviolable as the property in the lots themselves—yet no compensation is allowed. Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Applegate, 8 Dana (Ky.) 289; 33 Am. Dec. 497; Wolfe v. Covington, etc., R. Co., 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 404; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Brown, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 763, unless an injury is suffered distinct from that suffered by the general public, and unless the injury is one that the public in promotion of the general interest has not the right to inflict without compensation. Cosby v. Owensboro, etc., R. Co., 10 Bush (Ky.) 288; or unless the owner of the abutting property has been deprived of the means of ingress and egress to and from his lot with ordinary vehicles on either side of the street when trains are passing or standing therein. Elizabethtown, etc., R. Co. v. Combs, 10 Bush (Ky.) 382; Jeffersonville, etc., R. Co. v. Esterle, 13 Bush (Ky.) 667.

In Elizabethtown, etc., R. Co. v. Thompson, 79 Ky. 52; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 111, it was held that the occupation and use of streets by a steam railroad did not entitle the owners of the fee to the center of the street to compensation as for property taken for public uses.

The rule as enunciated in Fulton v. Short Route R. Transfer Co., 85 Ky. 640; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 259; 7 Am. St. Rep. 619, is that where the legislature has exercised its constitutional right to authorize the construction of a steam railroad along a city street, owners of abutting property, whether they have the fee of the street or not, have no claim to compensation, unless the road is so constructed as to deprive them of the reasonable use of the street.

In Louisiana.—The doctrine in this state seems to be that the owner of abutting land has no claim to compensation unless he is the owner of the fee, or can show an excessive or unlawful exercise of authority on the part of the railroad company. In Harrison v. New Orleans Pac. R. Co., 34 La. Ann. 462; 44 Am. Rep. 441, it is said by Levy, J., speaking for the court, that "if the fee in the streets is in the public, or in the municipality in trust for public use, the doctrine is settled that the legislature may authorize them to be used by a railroad company, without compensation to adjoining owners, or to the municipality, and without the consent and against the wishes of either." Citing as authority 2 Dillon Mun. Corp., § 556; Clinton v. Cedar Rapids, etc., R. Co., 24 Iowa 455; Williams v. New York Cent. R. Co., 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 222. It will be observed that the first authority cited has in the latest (4th) edition of his work declared his own statement to be an incorrect exposition of the law as it now is. See 2 Dillon Mun. Corp. (4th ed.), § 704. In Iowa a doctrine different from that of the case just cited is established by statute, and in reference to the third authority the court falls into the error of quoting as authority the language of the lower court in New York in a case which was reversed by the court of appeals of that state. See Williams v. New York Cent. R. Co., 16 N. Y. 97; 69 Am. Dec. 651, reversing 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 222.

The doctrine of Harrison v. New Orleans Pac. R. Co., 34 La. Ann. 462, however, seems to be the settled doctrine of the Louisiana court. Merges v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 35 La. Ann. 641. But if, in the construction of the road, serious and unequal damage be thereby inflicted upon private property contiguous to the street, the owners may by suit, demand a reconstruction of the track, and under conditions, its ultimate removal. Hepting v. New Orleans Pac. R. Co., 36 La. Ann. 898; Louisiana acts 1876, ch. 14, § 6.

Where an embankment for the road-bed was constructed in the street the effect of which was seriously to obstruct the lot owner's access to his property and to impair its value, he was allowed to recover in damages the amount of the diminution in the value of his property. Griffin v. Shreveport, etc., R. Co., 41 La. Ann. 808; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 296. It may be questioned whether this last case does not establish a new doctrine for that court. In the opinion by Fenner, J., the previous decisions of the court are not mentioned and the provision of art. 156 of the constitution providing against the "taking or damaging" of private property without just compensation, was stated as the ground of the holding. The cases of Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Ayers, 106 Ill. 518; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 152; Chicago v. Taylor, 125 U. S. 161; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 384; Rigney v. Chicago, 102 Ill. 64, were referred to (on page 810) with the comment that their "doctrine seems to us clearly correct, and we adopt it," adding that "under such constitutional provisions a recovery may be had in all cases where private property has sustained a substantial injury from the making and use of a public improvement, whether the damage be direct, as when caused by trespass or physical invasion of the property, or consequential, as in diminution of its market-value."

In Maryland compensation is denied. O'Brien v. Baltimore Belt R. Co., 74 Md. 363.

In Michigan.—In Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich. 62; 31 Am.

Rep. 306, Cooley, J., said, that when the owner of abutting property has not the fee, "his freehold is not appropriated, and the mere laying of the track in the street in the absence of any statute giving him redress therefor, is no wrong to him whatever. He is not wronged until the use of the street becomes a nuisance to him or specially incommodes him in the enjoyment of the public easement. He is entitled to no assessment of damages, because none of his land is taken, and he has no action at the common law, unless upon such ground as would enable one land proprietor to sue an adjoining proprietor for failing to observe the maxim that every one must so use his own property as not unreasonably to incommode his neighbor. The damage establishes the wrong and must be shown in every case."

In Minnesota.—In Harrington v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 17 Minn. 215, the rule was distinctly laid down by Ripley, C. J., in delivering the opinion of the court, that in all cases the owners of property adjoining a street own the fee to the center thereof subject to the public easement, and that the legislature could not appropriate the street to any other use, or subject it to any additional servitude without compensation to the owner of the fee, and that the occupation of a street by a railroad would be such additional servitude. See also Schurmeier v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 10 Minn. 82, affirmed 7 Wall. (U. S.) 272; 88 Am. Dec. 59; Gray v. First Div. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 13 Minn. 315; Adams v. Hastings, etc., R. Co., 18 Minn. 260; Kaiser v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 22 Minn. 149; Lamm v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 45 Minn. 71; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 42.

In Mississippi.—Compensation allowed. See Theobald v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 66 Miss. 279; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 465; 14 Am. St. Rep. 564, quoted from supra, this title, Distinction Dependent Upon Ownership of Fee and Character of Highway, note 2.

In Missouri.—In this state there seems to be no distinction based on the ownership of the fee, and no damages can be recovered if the railroad was legally constructed and properly operated. Lackland v. North Missouri R. Co., 31 Mo. 180; Porter v. North Missouri R. Co., 33 Mo. 128; Lackland v. North Missouri, etc., R. Co., 34 Mo. 259; Randle v. Pacific R. Co., 65 Mo. 325; Cross v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 77

Mo. 318; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 123; Dubach v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 89 Mo. 485; 26 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 609; Botto v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 11 Mo. App. 589.

Where the grade is changed damages are allowed. Sheehy v. Kansas City Cable R. Co., 94 Mo. 574; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 235; 4 Am. St. Rep. 306; Smith v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 98 Mo. 20.

Where the legislature authorizes a company to occupy a street, "the track to be so constructed as not to hinder or prevent the public from using the street," if it cannot be so constructed it may not be laid at all, and an abutter sustaining special damage may have an injunction. Dubach v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 89 Mo. 483; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 609.

In Nebraska.—In this state compensation must be made to the owner of abutting property, though the fee is in the public. Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Reinhackle, 15 Neb. 279; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 172; 48 Am. Rep. 342; Omaha, etc., R. Co. v. Rogers, 16 Neb. 117; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79.

In Nevada.—In Fogg v. Nevada, etc., R. Co., 20 Nev. 429; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 105, it was held that the construction of a railroad track on wooden ties imbedded in the soil, the rails being raised to a height of six or eight inches above the general level of the street, gave no right of action for damages to owners of abutting property; it appearing that the street was eighty feet wide; that the track was in the center thereof, and that ample room was left on both sides for foot passengers and vehicles to pass each other. This doctrine was laid down, though it appeared that the abutting owners had the fee of the street.

In New Jersey.—In Hinchman v. Paterson Horse R. Co., 17 N. J. Eq. 78, the chancellor said: "The real question is whether the charter of the defendants authorizing them to lay a railroad track through the streets of the city over the land of the complainants is a violation of that provision of the constitution which prohibits the taking of private property for public use without just compensation. I take it to be the settled law of this state that a railroad company authorized to acquire lands for the use of their road by condemnation, and required to make payment or tender of compensation to the owners before occupying the land, cannot construct their road across or upon a highway without making compensation to the owner of the soil occupied by the highway." See also Starr v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 24 N. J. L. 592; Central R. Co. v. Hetfield, 29 N. J. L. 206; Mayor, etc., of Jersey City v. Central R. Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 417; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 138; Morris, etc., R. Co. v. Hudson Tunnel R. Co., 25 N. J. Eq. 384; Chamberlain v. Elizabeth Steam Cordage Co., 41 N. J. Eq. 43; State v. Laverack, 34 N. J. L. 201; Cooley's Const. Lim. (5th ed.), p. 689 (557), note. See also Beseman v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 50 N. J. L. 235; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 107, where recovery was denied on the ground that the damages were consequential merely. In an early case, Morris, etc., R. Co. v. Newark, 10 N. J. Eq. 358. Chancellor Williamson used the following language: "The legislature does not, therefore, by permitting a railroad company to use the highway in common with the rest of the public take away from the landowner anything that belongs to him. It is not a misappropriation of the way." This language is quoted by Van Fleet, V. C., in Halsey v. Rapid Transit St. R. Co., 47 N. J. Eq. 380; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 79, but he is careful to add that "this exposition of the law, so far as it concerns horse railroads, has been approved in all subsequent cases." See also Dodge v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 43 N. J. Eq. 351; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 180.

In Oregon.—In this state, while it is recognized that the owners of abutting property have the fee of the streets, it is held that such ownership gives no right to compensation where the occupation of a street by a railroad company is under authority of law. McQuaid v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 18 Oregon 237; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 308; Paquet v. Mount Tabor St. R. Co. (Oregon, 1889), 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 320. In the former case, Thayer, C. J., said: "The railway corporation is permitted by the statute to appropriate so much of the highway as may be necessary or convenient in the location and construction of its road; but the use thereof by the public is not abridged. It is simply extended to the railway corporation and the latter admitted to its enjoyment in common with the former. The corporation is allowed under the statute to build and operate its railway within the bounds of the highway; but it has no authority to change the grade thereof or to use it to the exclusion of the public; nor has it any right to use the highway which will cut off access to it by the adjoining lot owner. The latter will doubtless be obliged to submit to the ordinary inconveniences and consequences which the construction of a railroad track and the moving of a locomotive and cars thereon occasion—be compelled to endure the smoke, noise, and screeching which naturally result from the use of that character of vehicle, but they cannot be deprived of the rights of ingress and egress to and from their premises without compensation."

In Pennsylvania.—Under the last constitution of this state, which provides against the "taking, injuring, or damaging" of private property without compensation, it seems that the owner of abutting land is entitled to compensation for all damages to his property caused by the construction of a railroad in the street. Pennsylvania, etc., R. Co. v. Walsh, 124 Pa. St. 544; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 466; 10 Am. St. Rep. 611; Pittsburgh Junction R. Co. v. McCutcheon (Pa. 1886), 7 Atl. Rep. 146; Pusey v. Allegheny, 98 Pa. St. 522; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Duncan, 111 Pa. St. 352; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 354; Edmundson v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 111 Pa. St. 320; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 423; Minig v. New York, etc., R. Co., 11 W. N. C. (Pa.) 297. See also Danville, etc., R. Co. v. Com., 73 Pa. St. 29; Struthers v. Dunkirk, etc., R. Co., 87 Pa. St. 282; 7 Cent. L. J. 213; Appeal of Beidler (Pa. 1889), 17 Atl. Rep. 244. Before 1874, however, it had been held that where the legislature granted to a railway company the right to occupy a street or highway, no compensation need be made owners of abutting property, though they owned the fee. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Speer, 56 Pa. St. 325; 94 Am. Dec. 84; In re Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 6 Whart. (Pa.) 25; 36 Am. Dec. 202; Mifflin v. Railroad Co., 16 Pa. St. 182; Snyder v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 55 Pa. St. 340; Mercer v. Pittsburgh R. Co., 36 Pa. St. 99; Com. v. Erie, etc., R. Co., 27 Pa. St. 339; 67 Am. Dec. 471. See also EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 553.

In Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Marchant, 119 Pa. St. 541; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 116; 4 Am. St. Rep. 659; and Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Lippincott, 116 Pa. St. 472; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 399; 2 Am. St. Rep. 618, the railroad was not constructed on the street but on abutting property owned by the railroad company, and the rulings were that owners of abutting property on the opposite side of the street had no right to claim consequential damages arising from the operation of the road.

A statute in this state requires railroads changing the site of turnpikes or public roads to cause the same to be reconstructed on the most favorable location and in as perfect a manner as the original road. In one case it appeared that the railroad was duly located on a county road but construction was not begun until eight years later; in the meantime the road had become a city street and the construction of a new highway became impracticable. It was held that the railroad corporation was liable to indictment, under this act, for not reconstructing the street after constructing its track upon it; that, however, the sentence could not compel the removal of the obstruction or the construction of a new street, but could only punish for the offense committed. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Com., 101 Pa. St. 192; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 321.

In South Carolina.—In McLauchlin v. Charlotte, etc., R. Co., 5 Rich. (S. Car.) 593, it was said by Wardlaw, J.: "If the streets are ordinary highways, and their obstruction has been authorized by law, no right remains for an individual to complain, by action at law, of peculiar damage done to him by an act detrimental to the public, which public authority has sanctioned. If an unauthorized obstruction of a highway has been made, then whether the company is without charter, or has exceeded its chartered powers; whether the right to enter the town is not conferred by the charter, or a condition required before it shall occupy a street has not been complied with, still there exists only the case which is alleged in the declaration—a nuisance done of which an individual complains; and an action cannot be sustained without proof of direct damage already sustained, contradistinguished from contingent and probable loss apprehended, and such is the case wheresoever the fee of the highway may be."

In Tennessee.—In Iron Mountain R. Co. v. Bingham, 87 Tenn. 522; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 444, it was held that the owners of property adjoining a city street, who do not own the fee of the street, cannot recover for injuries resulting from the lawful and reasonable use thereof by a railway company with the city's permission, the right of ingress and egress being left reasonably suffi-

c. STATUTORY PROVISIONS GIVING RIGHT TO RECOVER.—In some jurisdictions statutes have been passed which provide specifically that wherever a railroad is constructed along and upon a street or highway the company shall be responsible to owners of abutting property for all injuries sustained by them in relation to their property by reason of the construction and operation of the railroad. In some instances these statutes are merely an affirmance of the rule previously established in the state by judicial construction, while in others they set up a new rule.¹ Such statutes operate to give abutting landowners a right to recient. It was also decided that for damages resulting from an unlawful and improper use of the street by a railway company, such owners could recover.

In Texas.—The Texas constitution of 1876 provides that "no person's property shall be taken, damaged, or destroyed for or applied to public use without adequate compensation." Accordingly in Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Edkins, 60 Tex. 664, it was held that where the use of a street by an owner of adjoining land is greatly impaired by the occupation thereof by a railroad company "and the injury in this respect is one special in its character and not one common to the entire community at large, an action to recover such special damage will lie."

In Vermont.—In this state it seems that no compensation will be allowed where the owner of the abutting property has not the fee of the street. See Hatch v. Vermont Cent. R. Co., 28 Vt. 142; Wead v. St. Johnsbury, etc., R. Co. (Vt. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 361.

In West Virginia.—In this state the owners of abutting property may not enjoin the construction and operation of a railroad in the street unless such road results in an entire destruction of the value of their property. But such owners, whether they own the fee of the street or not, may recover at law such damages as result from the impairment of their easements, notwithstanding the construction of the road has been authorized by the city council. Spencer v. Point Pleasant, etc., R. Co., 23 W. Va. 406; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 125; Arbenz v. Wheeling, etc., R. Co., 33 W. Va. 1; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 284; Yates v. West Grafton, 34 W. Va. 783.

1. Thus Rev. Stat. Ohio, § 3283, provides that "every company which lays a track upon any such street, alley, road, or ground (i. e., within the municipality and by its consent) shall be responsible for injuries done thereby to private or public property lying upon or near such ground, which may be recovered in a civil action." Grafton v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 309; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 200. Under this it is competent to take into consideration evidence of substantial injury and loss to the property (not common to the community at large) caused by smoke, noises, and sparks of fire occasioned by running of locomotives and cars along the track in front of the property. Columbus, etc., R. Co. v. Gardner, 45 Ohio St. 309; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 243. This statute it seems is merely an affirmance of the rule already established. See Cincinnati, etc., St. R. Co. v. Cummins, 14 Ohio St. 523. Under this statute the abutting owner, if he has the fee of the street, may institute proceedings to compel the railroad company to condemn a right of way over the street. Lawrence R. Co. v. Williams, 35 Ohio St. 168. See also Taylor v. Bay City St. R. Co., 80 Mich. 77; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 335.

Under section 464 of the Iowa code, abutting owners have the right to recover of the railroad company damages sustained by them. The right does not exist independently of the statute and its character and extent therefore depends entirely on the statute and must be exercised as its terms prescribe. The landowner has no right to recover for the use and occupation of the street by the company, but has simply a claim for damages, which may be waived or assigned by parol. Pratt v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 72 Iowa 249; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 236. And where the railroad fails to have the damages to abutting lot owners ascertained and paid it is guilty of a continuing trespass and a nuisance and is liable in damages for such. Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 70 Iowa cover, though at the time of their passage the railroad company had completed the construction of the road-bed except the laying of the tracks.¹ It seems, however, that the recovery must be limited strictly to the cases provided for by the statute.² And in Iowa the statute forbidding the laying down of railway tracks in streets or alleys until after compensation has been made to abutting landowners is considered to apply only where the tracks occupy the road or street longitudinally, and does not authorize recovery of damages where the railroad merely crosses the street.³ But this statute has been construed to give to the landowner a right to damages for the use of the street where the railroad is constructed partly on his land and partly on the street.⁴ Where the right to recover damages is derived solely from the statute, a cause of action exists only for substantial and not for nominal damages.⁵

d. WHERE THE GRADE OF THE STREET IS CHANGED.—Whenever the railroad company, in constructing its road, changes the grade of the street, or erects embankments thereon, or makes cuts therein, it interferes with the abutting owner's easement of access and becomes liable as for a taking of private property.⁶ It has been 105; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 121. See also Mulholland v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 60 Iowa 740; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 99.

Under this section landowners are not barred from their right to recover by the fact that they did not institute their action until after the railroad had been constructed. Stough v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 71 Iowa 641; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 396.

1. Track Partially Constructed Before Passage of Statute.—It is the laying of the track and the running of trains thereon which is the basis of recovery, and the company by partially constructing the road-bed does not acquire vested rights which preclude the operation of the statute passed after such partial construction. Mulholland v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 60 Iowa 740; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 99; Hanson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 61 Iowa 588 (railroad enjoined until compensation should be made); Stough v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 71 Iowa 641; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 396; Taylor v. Bay City St. R. Co., 80 Mich. 77; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 335; Drady v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 57 Iowa 393; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 131. Compare First Congregational Church v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 77 Wis. 158; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 185.

2. Thus where the charter of the company provides that "whenever any estate abutting upon a street or highway upon which the rails of the corporation shall be laid, shall be injured thereby, the said corporation shall be liable to pay to the owner thereof the damages thereby occasioned to said estate," the owner is entitled to recover only damages for injuries resulting from the laying of the rails as distinguished from those resulting from the use of them as laid. Vose v. Newport St. R. Co. (R. I. 1890), 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 91.

3. Where Railroad Merely Crosses Street.—Morgan v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 64 Iowa 589; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 67; 52 Am. Rep. 462; Code of Iowa (1873), § 464.

4. Railroad Constructed Partly on Street and Partly on Plaintiff's Land.—McClellan v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 67 Iowa 568.

But where in such a case damages for the occupation must be deemed to have been included in the award for the condemnation of the premises taken, the landowner cannot maintain a suit for an injunction. Phipps v. Western Maryland R. Co., 66 Md. 319.

5. Nominal Damages.—The rule is held to apply even where there is a change of grade. Burkam v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 122 Ind. 344; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 453; Anderson v. Bain, 120 Ind. 254; 28 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 223; Beronio v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 86 Cal. 415; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 66; 21 Am. St. Rep. 57.

6. Buchner v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 60 Wis. 264; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas.

urged that since a municipality has the right to change the grade of a street without making compensation for injuries sustained by abutting owners in consequence of the change,¹ it may delegate the right to a railroad company so that the company would enjoy the same immunity from liability.² But this contention cannot be sustained; in the one case the damage is suffered for the public benefit entirely, while in the other it is made use of for the advancement of the interests of a private corporation.³ The right to occupy the streets conveys no authority to alter the grade, unless such authority is clearly and specifically granted.⁴

447 (company liable though track does not encroach on highway); Henderson v. New York Cent. R. Co., 78 N. Y. 423; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Jefferson, 14 Ill. App. 615 (company has no right to construct ditch along highway); Cross v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 77 Mo. 318; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 123; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Ayres, 106 Ill. 511; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 152; Mayor, etc., of Jersey City v. Central R. Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 417; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 138; Parrot v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 10 Ohio St. 624; Kaiser v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 22 Minn. 149; Stone v. Fairbury, etc., R. Co., 68 Ill. 394; 18 Am. Rep. 556; Little Miami R. Co. v. Hambleton, 40 Ohio St. 496; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 126; Corey v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 482; Fobes v. Rome, etc., R. Co., 121 N. Y. 505; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 137; Alabama Midland R. Co. v. Williams, 92 Ala. 277; Alabama Midland R. Co. v. Coskry, 92 Ala. 254; Mason v. Kennebec, etc., R. Co., 31 Me. 215; Tate v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 7 Ind. 479; 10 Ind. 174; 71 Am. Dec. 309; Griffin v. Shreveport, etc., R. Co., 41 La. Ann. 808; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 296; Central Branch, etc., R. Co. v. Twine, 23 Kan. 585; 33 Am. Rep. 203; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. McGinnis, 79 Ill. 269 (high trestle work erected).

See also Lexington, etc., R. Co. v. Applegate, 8 Dana (Ky.) 289; 33 Am. Dec. 497; Slatten v. Des Moines, Valley R. Co., 29 Iowa 149; 4 Am. Rep. 205.

It is not essential that the petition in the suit to recover damages should allege that erection of the embankment was unnecessary or unlawful. Cross v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 77 Mo. 318; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 123.

Evidence that the city afterwards repaired the damage caused by the excavations of the railroad company is admissible in mitigation of damages in an action against the company. Ala- bama Midland R. Co. v. Coskry, 92 Ala. 254.

1. See EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 548; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15, p. 949.

2. See Ottenot v. New York, etc., R. Co., 119 N. Y. 603; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 129; Barr v. Oskaloosa, 45 Iowa 275; Uline v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 101 N. Y. 98; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 3; 54 Am. Rep. 661. In this last case it was held that where a railroad had been located in a street for forty years it must be presumed to have acquired a legal right to be there; and having this right together with the express consent of the city it might change the grade of the street without becoming liable for damages to owners of abutting property. See also Jackson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 656; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 145.

3. Denver v. Bayer, 7 Colo. 113; 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 465; Buchner v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 60 Wis. 264; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 447; Mayor, etc., of Jersey City v. Central R. Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 417; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 138; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Ayres, 106 Ill. 511; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 152; Smith v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 98 Mo. 20; Lafayette v. Wortman, 107 Ind. 404; 15 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 88.

Where a railroad crosses a highway considerably below the level thereof, the company is bound to provide proper cuts and grades on the highway, and if making them is a damage to an adjoining proprietor, the company is liable. Sioux City, etc., R. Co. v. Weimer, 16 Neb. 272; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 184.

4. Cross v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 77 Mo. 318; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 123; Kaiser v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 22 Minn. 149; Tate v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 64 Mo. 158; Porter v. North Missouri R. Co., 33 Mo. 128.

e. MEASURE OF DAMAGES.—The measure of damages or of compensation to be made to the landowner is the actual diminution in the market value of the premises for any use to which they may reasonably be put, occasioned by the construction and operation of the railway through the street adjacent.¹ Inconveniences and dangers necessarily incident to the operation of a railroad along a street, and which annoy and damage the plaintiff only in common with the rest of the public, are not to be considered, unless the occupation of the street is wrongful and without authority of law. The injury sustained by the abutting owner must

And where the authority is specifically granted it may be exercised only after payment of damages. Mayor, etc., of Jersey City v. Central R. Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 417; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 138; Sheehy v. Kansas City Cable R. Co., 94 Mo. 574; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 233; 4 Am. St. Rep. 396.

What Constitutes Change of Grade.—The placing of six inches of gravel upon a street occupied by a railroad where an alley intersects, in order to enable teams and wagons more conveniently to pass over the track, does not amount to the construction of an embankment within the meaning of the rule entitling abutting owners to compensation where the street is obstructed with an embankment. First Congregational Church v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 77 Wis. 158; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 182.

1. Denver v. Bayer, 7 Colo. 113; 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 465; Jackson v. Kiel, 13 Colo. 378; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 297; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Bourne, 11 Colo. 59; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 228; Grafton v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 309; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 200; Henderson v. New York Cent. R. Co., 17 Hun (N. Y.) 344; 78 N. Y. 423; Central Branch, etc., R. Co. v. Andrews, 26 Kan. 702; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 370 (injury at time of obstruction and not at time of trial to be considered); Fox v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 34 W. Va. 466 (evidence of rental value and of offer to purchase admitted); Guess v. Stone Mountain Granite, etc., R. Co., 72 Ga. 320; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 236; Sheehy v. Kansas City Cable R. Co., 94 Mo. 574; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 233; 4 Am. St. Rep. 396; In re Prospect Park, etc., R. Co., 13 Hun (N. Y.) 345; McQuaid v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 18 Oregon 237; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 309.

In another case it is said that the measure of damages is the actual damage sustained by the building and operation of the road less the increase in the value of the property by the company's improvements. The danger of possible collision or fright to animals and persons, is not an element of damage. Guess v. Stone Mountain Granite, etc., Co., 72 Ga. 320; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 236.

"No personal inconvenience or annoyance, no interference with his trade or business, no decrease in the rental value of his premises occasioned by the construction or operating of the railroad, and no temporary interruption or damage thereby, constitute the test. None of these things can enter into the question, except as they may appropriately aid in determining the actual depreciation in the market value of the realty and improvements." Helm, J., in Denver v. Bayer, 7 Colo. 128; 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 465.

Where the occupant is a tenant from year to year, and he is obliged to move, the difference between the value of his machinery as it stands and its value after removal, is an element of damage, and evidence of the expense of removing it to its new location is admissible. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Getz, 113 Pa. St. 214; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 244.

The measure of damages is the difference between the fair rental value of the property when the road is obstructed by the railway tracks and that when it is free from obstruction. Brakken v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 31 Minn. 45; Blesch v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 43 Wis. 183. In Kucheman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 46 Iowa 366, it is said that the lot owner is entitled to have the damages assessed as in case of ordinary proceedings for the condemnation of a right of way. See Grafton v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 309; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 200.

In Columbus, etc., R. Co. v. Gardner, 45 Ohio St. 309; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 249, the court, by Owen, C. J., differ in character, and not in degree only, from that suffered by the public generally.¹ In arriving at the value of the property injured its capabilities and the uses for which it is adapted are to be considered, and the same considerations otherwise are to be regarded as in a sale of such property between private parties.²

Where the action is instituted by lessees under a lease executed prior to the construction of the road, the only damages recoverable is the difference between the value of the use of the premises before and after the construction of the road.³

In those jurisdictions where the abutting owner has no right of recovery except in cases where there has been an abuse or unlawful exercise of authority, the measure of damages is the compensation for the injury suffered, and does not embrace the diminution in the value of the property.⁴ In such a laid down the rule of damages as follows: "It is too well settled in this state to admit of controversy that the rule of damages in such cases is the difference in the value of the property affected before and the value after the location of the railroad, and this is to be determined by the jury in the light of the facts established by the evidence, and not upon the mere opinions of witnesses, except in so far as opinions may be received upon questions of value. Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Campbell, 4 Ohio St. 583; 64 Am. Dec. 607; Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Ball, 5 Ohio St. 573. In each of these cases the witnesses were allowed to testify to their opinions concerning the amount of damages sustained, and in each case this was held to be error, and the judgment reversed. But the jury is entitled to be informed by witnesses concerning the value of the land before, and the value of it after, the location of the road. These are the primary facts which enable the jury to determine the extent of the injury."

In Chapman v. Oshkosh, etc., R. Co., 33 Wis. 629, the plaintiffs owned certain city lots, upon which was situated a saw mill, and also owned certain other lots fronting on P street which were accessible from the mill by means of public streets, and were used by them in connection with their mill for storing lumber thereby manufactured. The railroad company took for its road a strip of said P street lots which was included in said street. It was held that the plaintiff's damages for the taking of the said strip included not only any diminution in the market value of the P street lots, but also the depreciation in the value of the mill property in consequence of such property being rendered unsafe for the storage of lumber by the building of the railroad thereon. Following Welch v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 27 Wis. 108.

In Muller v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 83 Cal. 240, two elements of damage were considered. The fee of one-half the street being in the plaintiff the measure of damages for the taking of the street by the company was said to be the value of plaintiff's interest in the land taken when the company entered it, subject to the public easement of a street; the measure of damages to the abutting lot was held to be the difference between its value at the time the company began the construction of its road and its value with the road completed. If there is no depreciation in value, then there can be no recovery.

1. See infra, this title, Special and Consequential Damages; Guess v. Stone Mountain Granite, etc., Co., 72 Ga. 320; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 236; Crowley v. Davis, 63 Cal. 460; Flechner v. Cleveland C. C. & St. L. R. Co., 27 W. L. B. (Ohio) 302; Forbes v. Rome W. & C. R. Co. (N. Y.), 24 N. E. 919.

2. Muller v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 83 Cal. 240. Loss of trade, or a decrease in the number of pupils, if the building be a store or a schoolhouse respectively, is a proper element of damage. South Carolina R. Co. v. Steiner, 44 Ga. 546.

3. Action by Lessee. — Renwick v. Davenport, etc., R. Co., 49 Iowa 664.

If the lease is executed subsequently to the construction of the road, the lessee has no right of action. See supra, this title, Elevated Railroads; Landlord and Tenant.

4. Where Road Is Improperly Constructed. — Cadle v. Muscatine Western case it is not presumed that the wrong will continue, and, therefore, in an action at law only damages which have accrued up to the time of the commencement of the action are recoverable.¹ In any case where there is evidence of damage the finding of the trial court will not be reversed on appeal as being an award of excessive damages, unless it clearly appears that it was the result of passion, prejudice, or corruption.² For speculative or contingent damages there can be no recovery, and evidence as to the amount and extent of such damages is inadmissible.³

(1) Deduction of Benefits.—The consideration of benefits to the part of a tract not taken, in determining the compensation to be made in ordinary condemnation proceedings, is prohibited by

R. Co., 44 Iowa 11; O'Connor v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 46 Iowa 735; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 325; Brakken v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 29 Minn. 41; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 593; Central Branch, etc., R. Co. v. Twine, 23 Kan. 585; 33 Am. Rep. 203.

The difference between the rental value of the property with the road properly constructed and that with the road constructed as it affords a proper measure of damages in such cases. Brakken v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 29 Minn. 41; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 595; Cadle v. Muscatine Western R. Co., 44 Iowa 11. Compare Florida Southern R. Co. v. Brown, 23 Fla. 104.

When a view of the premises in such a case is allowed to the jury, it is not for the purpose of furnishing evidence upon which a verdict is found, but to enable the jury better to understand and apply the evidence in court.

It is error therefore to instruct the jury that they might use their own examination and judgment as well as that of witnesses in estimating the damages.

Brakken v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 29 Minn. 41; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 593; Chute v. State, 19 Minn. 281.

1. Baugh v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 80 Tex. 56; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 105. In this case the court said: "When a nuisance is created by the construction of works in their nature permanent and are not subject to be abated, the rule is that all damages resulting therefrom to property may be recovered in an action, and the proper measure of damages is the depreciation in the value of the property. Gainesville, etc., R. Co. v. Hall, 78 Tex. 169; 44 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 51; 22 Am. St. Rep. 42. That rule also applies where the injury is of a permanent character. But when the nuisances are of a temporary character . . . only such damages as have accrued up to the institution of the suit can be recovered. For such damages depreciation in the value of the property affected by the injury is not a measure, and the amount of such depreciation cannot be recovered." See also DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 2; Adams v. Hastings, etc., R. Co., 18 Minn. 263.

2. Excessive Damages.—Sheehy v. Kansas City Cable R. Co., 94 Mo. 574; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 233; 4 Am. St. Rep. 396; Denver, etc., R. Co. v. Bourne, 11 Colo. 59; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 228; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Goldberg, 68 Tex. 685; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 242; Fuller v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 61 Iowa 125; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 149. See also Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Necco (Tex. 1891), 15 S. W. Rep. 1102.

3. Speculative or Contingent Damages.—Muller v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 83 Cal. 240; Jacksonville, etc., R. Co. v. Walsh, 106 Ill. 253; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 246; Eaton v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 51 N. H. 504; 12 Am. Rep. 147; Whitman v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 3 Allen (Mass.) 133; 7 Allen (Mass.) 313; Driver v. Western Union R. Co., 32 Wis. 569; 14 Am. Rep. 726. See also supra, this title, Elevated Railroads; In New York; Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Murdock, 68 Ind. 137. Thus evidence as to what the value of the lot would have been had the railroad been built upon another street, is not admissible to show the damage to the lot. The damage to be recovered does not extend to a failure to realize a profit which, under another state of affairs, might have been realized, but is limited to the loss or injury actually suffered, and it is error to admit evidence of such speculative injury.

statute or constitutional provisions in several of the states.¹ But in the cases arising in connection with the occupation of streets by railroad companies these provisions have no application. There is merely an appropriation of easements appurtenant to the land, and the value of these easements can only be determined by estimating the value of the land with and without them. If the appropriation of such easements has resulted in an increased value of the land to which they were appurtenant, or has not affected the value at all, the abutting owner has no right to anything more than nominal damages. The rule may therefore be stated to be that in the cases under consideration benefits to the abutting land arising from the existence of the railroad are to be considered in estimating the damages recoverable by the owner.²

f. SPECIAL AND CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES.—The rule is well settled that the plaintiff must show that he has suffered special injury from the occupation of the street. Where there is no appropriation of property involved, but his only injury is the danger, annoyance, and inconvenience which the rest of the public using the street suffer in an equal degree, he has no cause of action.³ This rule, however, is not to be misapplied; it relates to the right of the plaintiff as one of the general public having a right of pas-

Muller v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 83 Cal. 240.

1. See EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 583; Pacific Coast R. Co. v. Porter, 74 Cal. 261; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 167; Newman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 118 N. Y. 618; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 418, note; Reisner v. Atchison Union Depot, etc., Co., 27 Kan. 382; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 155; Doud v. Mason City, etc., R. Co., 76 Iowa 438; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 633.

2. See the general subject discussed at length in note to Newman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 118 N. Y. 618; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 418 et seq.; EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 581 et seq.; where the doctrine of the text is upheld and numerous authorities cited.

The rule of the text is practically that adopted in the New York Elevated Railway cases as set out in a previous section, and has received general recognition. Supra, this title, Elevated Railroads; Newman v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 118 N. Y. 618; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 416; 41 Alb. L. J. 237; Livermore v. Jamacia, 23 Vt. 362; Cleveland v. Wick, 18 Ohio St. 303; Sullivan v. North Hudson County R. Co., 51 N. J. L. 518; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 324 (distinction made between general and special benefits; only latter allowed to be considered); Guess v. Stone Mountain Granite, etc., Co., 72 Ga. 320; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 236; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Reich, 101 Ill. 157; Chapman v. Oshkosh, 33 Wis. 629; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Fuller, 63 Tex. 467; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 155.

The measure of damages is the diminution in the market value of the property caused by the existence of the road, and if there is no diminution there can, of course, be no recovery beyond nominal damages. Supra, this title, Measure of Damages; Chapman v. Oshkosh, etc., R. Co., 33 Wis. 629; Carl v. Sheboygan, etc., R. Co., 46 Wis. 625.

3. See EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 545; Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Eberle, 110 Ind. 542; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 225; 59 Am. Rep. 225; Rochette v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 32 Minn. 201; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 192; Shaubert v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 21 Minn. 502; Proprietors, etc., v. Nashua, etc., R. Co., 10 Cush. (Mass.) 385; Rigney v. Chicago, 102 Ill. 64; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Ayres, 106 Ill. 512; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 152; Crowley v. Davis, 63 Cal. 460; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Berg, 10 Ill. App. 607; Central Branch, etc., R. Co. v. Andrews, 30 Kan. 593; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 248; Fogg v. Nevada, etc., R. Co., 20 Nev. 429; 43 Am. &

sage over the street, and not to his right as owner of the fee of the street or of easements therein.¹ To constitute special damage within the meaning of this rule of law, the damage suffered by the abutting owner must differ from that sustained by the general public, not only in degree but in kind; the plaintiff must estab-

Eng. R. Cas. 105; Jackson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 656; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 145; Boston v. Old Colony R. Co., 12 Cush. (Mass.) 605; Beckett v. Midland R. Co., L. R., 3 C. P. 82; Slatery v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 29 Iowa 148; 40 Am. Rep. 205; Davenport v. Stevenson, 34 Iowa 225; Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich. 62; 31 Am. Rep. 306; Central Branch, etc., R. Co. v. Andrews, 30 Kan. 590; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 248; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Garside, 10 Kan. 552; Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Cuykendall, 42 Kan. 234; 16 Am. St. Rep. 479; Pierce on Railroads, p. 240; Hatch v. Vermont Cent. R. Co., 25 Vt. 49; Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635.

1. Application of the Rule.—The application of this rule is properly to be confined to one of the three relations which an abutting owner sustains to the street. Such owner sustains a three-fold relation to the street; first, as one of the general public; second, as the owner of property abutting thereon and possessing an easement of light, air and access; and, third, as [ordinarily] the owner of the fee or reversionary interest in the land covered by the street. See Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 634; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 608.

It is in connection with the first of these relations that the rule of the text has an application. Thus in Gilbert v. Greeley, etc., R. Co., 13 Colo. 501; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 305, the railroad crossed the street on which the plaintiff's property abutted at a distance of two hundred feet from such property. The plaintiff claimed damages on the ground that because of such crossing his property had diminished in value. It was held that he had no special property in the street, but a mere right of passage in common with the rest of the public, and that he could not recover in the absence of proof of special injury. The court said: "Every railroad company running its trains across a street or highway causes damage or inconvenience in a greater or less degree to every traveler having occasion to use the street or highway at the point of such crossing, as well as to every person owning or occupying real estate anywhere in the vicinity of such crossing; and yet there is no remedy for such damage under ordinary circumstances, for the reason that, as a general rule, no one has any special private property or interest in the highway other than or different from the general public, and the damage thus suffered is common to all having occasion to use the street or highway. In such case private property cannot be said to be taken or damaged for public use within the meaning of the constitution." See Denver v. Bayer, 7 Colo. 113; 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 465. See also the explanations in the opinion of Mitchell, J., in Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Eberle, 110 Ind. 542; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 224; 59 Am. Rep. 225.

Thus, one whose special easement of right of way in an alley is destroyed by the appropriation of the alley for railroad purposes is entitled to compensation, but not to compensation for the destruction of such general right of way as he enjoyed in common with the rest of the public generally. Central Branch, etc., R. Co. v. Andrews, 30 Kan. 590; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 248.

Railroad Not Adjoining Plaintiff's Property.—So where the railroad does not occupy that part of the street running in front of the plaintiff's property there is no taking of property, and the plaintiff, in order to recover, must show that he has suffered some special damage, differing in kind and degree from that suffered by the rest of the public. Rochette v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 32 Minn. 201; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 192; In re New York, etc., R. Co., 39 Hun (N. Y.) 338; Demueles v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 44 Minn. 436; Lakkie v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 44 Minn. 438. But if access is obstructed, the landowner has a cause of action, though the railroad does not run in front of his property. Brakken v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 29 Minn. 41; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 593.

In an action brought by an abutting property owner to recover special damages for the construction of a railway along the street in front of his property impairing the use of the street, the plaintiff is not barred from recovering by the fact that other property owners in the same locality have also been injured in the same manner. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Goldberg, 68 Tex. 685; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 240. See also Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Fuller, 63 Tex. 467; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 154.

lish the existence of an injury different in its legal characteristics from that sustained by the public generally.¹

1. Damage Must Differ in Character Not in Degree Merely.—Guess v. Stone Mountain Granite, etc., Co., 72 Ga. 320; 28 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 236; Crowley v. Davis, 63 Cal. 460; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Eisert, 127 Ind. 156; Matlock v. Hawkins, 92 Ind. 225. See also McDonald v. English, 85 Ill. 232; Chicago v. Union Bldg. Assoc., 102 Ill. 379; 40 Am. Rep. 598; Crook v. Pitcher, 61 Md. 510; Fairchild v. St. Louis, 97 Mo. 85.

The subject was considered in Gilbert v. Greeley, etc., R. Co., 13 Colo. 501; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 300, when the court, after reconciling the case of Rigney v. Chicago, 102 Ill. 80, went on to say: "To hold that damage may be recovered when the difference is in degree merely, would lead to difficulties practically insurmountable. It would necessitate determining the damage sustained by the public generally as a basis upon which to calculate the excess sustained by the plaintiff. This in turn would involve a variety of troublesome questions. For example, who are to be considered the 'general public' in such cases? Are they the people who own real property in the vicinity, or those who do not? Are they those who live near or those who live remote from the crossing? Or are they those who have neither residence nor property in the vicinity? None of these difficulties can arise under the rule as expressed in this opinion."

What Constitutes Special Damage.—See the following cases for instances of special damage. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Fuller, 63 Tex. 467; 22 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 154; Gottschalk v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 14 Neb. 550; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 157; Ford v. Santa Cruz R. Co., 59 Cal. 290; Grafton v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 309; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 200; Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Reinhackle, 15 Neb. 279; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 169; 48 Am. Rep. 342. The legislative grant is always made subject to the rights of adjacent property owners. See Lamm v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 45 Minn. 71; 46 Am.

& Eng. R. Cas. 42. Thus, where the operation of a railroad along the street causes injury to abutting property by shaking down the plastering in the houses, and by constant noise, and by filling the air with smoke and cinders, it is said that legislative authority to construct and operate the road will be no defense to an action by the owner of the property. South Carolina R. Co. v. Steiner, 44 Ga. 546.

Where the company, with the permission of the city, erected a trestle-work along one of the streets opposite plaintiff's land, only about thirteen feet from his fence, narrowing the street more than one-half, and so that sparks from the passing engines were thrown on plaintiff's land, it was held that there was special damage for which plaintiff might recover. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Eddins, 60 Tex. 656. See Dubach v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 89 Mo. 483; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 611.

Deprivation of Access.—It has frequently been held that the owner of land abutting on a street has the right of ingress and egress to and from his land distinct from his rights in the street as a member of the public, and that when he is deprived of this right he is entitled to recover such damages as he has thereby sustained. Elizabethtown, etc., R. Co. v. Combs, 10 Bush (Ky.) 392; Cosby v. Owensboro, etc., R. Co., 10 Bush (Ky.) 288; Prutzman v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 9 Ind. 467; 68 Am. Dec. 650; Lackland v. North Missouri R. Co., 31 Mo. 180; Hanlin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 61 Wis. 515; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 70; Richardson v. Vermont Cent. R. Co., 25 Vt. 465; 60 Am. Dec. 683. See also Denver v. Bayer, 7 Colo. 113; 20 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 467; Brakken v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 29 Minn. 41; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 593; Rigney v. Chicago, 102 Ill. 64; McQuaid v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 18 Oregon 237; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 308; Central Branch, etc., R. Co. v. Twine, 23 Kan. 585; Griffin v. Shreveport, etc., R. Co., 41 La. Ann. 808; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 295; Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Mahler, 45 Kan. 565; Pennsylvania S. V. R. Co. v. Walsh, 124 Pa. St. 544; 10 Am. St. Rep. 611; Pennsylvania S. V. R. Co. v. Ziemer, 124 Pa. St. 560; Wead v. St. Johnsbury, etc., R. Co. (Vt. 1892), 24 Atl. Rep. 361; Herndon v. Kansas, etc.,

The familiar principle that no liability arises from a proper exercise of a lawful authority¹ affords immunity to the railroad company from liability for consequential damages or injuries which necessarily attend the operation of the road, but which do not involve an appropriation of private property. Such injuries are damnum absque injuria and afford no cause of action to the party injured. Injuries of this class are such as result from the smoke, noise and vibration of passing trains, the danger of frightening horses, and similar causes.² This rule of exemption

R. Co., 46 Kan. 560; Fort Scott, etc., R. Co. v. Fox, 42 Kan. 490; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 331. See Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Orr, 91 Ky. 109; Rummel v. New York, etc., R. Co., 9 N. Y. Supp. 404.

The case of Jackson v. Kiel, 13 Colo. 378; 40 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 297, is to be distinguished in this connection. In that case the landowner was allowed to recover though the railroad was one hundred and thirty-two feet distant and merely crossed the highway. The highway however was a cul de sac and afforded the only means of access to plaintiff's premises; the railroad completely obstructed it, thus shutting off all access. The landowner's claim for damages was sustained, but the court was careful to say that he "could not recover for any general inconvenience thus occasioned which he might have suffered in common with the general public; but for the special and peculiar injury shown in this case he was doubtless entitled to compensation."

In Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Eisert, 127 Ind. 156, the complaint alleged that the company was proceeding to lay a track within eight feet of the curb stone in the street adjoining complainant's premises, while the ordinance authorizing the use of the street directed the road to be located fifteen feet from the curb, and that it was also raising the established grade, which it had no right to do, thereby obstructing the street, cutting off access to and from the lot, and interfering with the proper flow of water. It was held that this stated a case of special damage for which recovery should be had.

Compare Fogg v. Nevada, etc., R. Co., 20 Nev. 429; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 105, holding that the construction of a track raised eight inches above the surface of the street did not constitute a special injury to an abutting lotowner. Jackson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 656; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 145, holding that the ordinary obstruction of a street by a railroad thereon, and the consequent loss of trade arising from the diversion of travel and traffic to another street, is damage which is common to the public and not peculiar to the abutting owner, so that he could not recover therefor. This last case was decided in Missouri, and in determining the weight of these two cases as authority, the particular doctrines prevailing in these jurisdictions are to be considered.

1. See NUISANCES, vol. 16, p. 1000; RAILROADS, vol. 19, pp. 862, 923; Cooley's Const. Lim. (5th ed.), p. 475 (384).

2. Consequential Damages.—See generally EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 597; supra, this title, Elevated Railroads—In New York; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Lippincott, 116 Pa. St. 472; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Marchant, 119 Pa. St. 541; Dooner v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 142 Pa. St. 36; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 116; 4 Am. St. Rep. 659; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 399, 406, n; 2 Am. St. Rep. 618; Hatch v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 18 Ohio St. 92.

The term consequential damages is used ordinarily to indicate such damages as arise not from the immediate act of the party, but in consequence of such act. See Bouv. L. Dict.; Eaton v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 51 N. H. 504; 12 Am. Rep. 147.

Noise, Vibration, etc.—In Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Garside, 10 Kan. 552, the plaintiff asked for consequential damages arising from noise, smoke, offensive vapors, sparks, fires, shaking of the ground and other inconveniences and annoyances arising from the construction and operation of the railroad. The court having found that the occupation of the street by the railroad company was lawful held that there could be no recovery for the damages claimed. Valentine, J., said: "They are the consequential results of the exercise of a lawful business, and however annoying or injurious they may be to the plaintiff, they form no foundation for a cause of action. They are in fact damnum absque injuria." See Ottawa, etc., R. Co. v. Larson, 40 Kan. 301.

So in Parrot v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 10 Ohio St. 630, it was held that "in respect to the noise, smoke, and other discomforts arising from the ordinary use of the railroad by the company, the plaintiff has no more right to recover than any citizen who resides or may have occasion to pass so near the street as to be subjected to like discomforts." See also as sustaining the same principle, Stone v. Fairbury, etc., R. Co., 68 Ill. 394; 18 Am. Rep. 556 (detention of trains, frightening of horses, danger to persons crossing the track, etc., classed as consequential damages); Mix v. Lafayette, etc., R. Co., 67 Ill. 319 (same); Porter v. North Missouri, R. Co., 33 Mo. 138; Slatten v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 29 Iowa 140; 4 Am. Rep. 205; Hahn v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 51 Cal. 605. These cases, however, were decided in jurisdictions which state a doctrine not entirely in consonance with that stated as being the general doctrine.

One in front of whose property over a public street an elevated railroad is built under authority, is entitled to damages for loss of light and air, but not for noise, smoke, vibration, ashes, or dust, or the unsightly character of the structure. In re New York El. R. Co., 36 Hun (N. Y.) 427.

"Undoubtedly a railway over the public highways of the district including the streets of Washington, may be authorized by Congress, and if, when used with reasonable care, it produces only that incidental inconvenience which unavoidably follows the additional occupation of the streets by its cars with the noises and disturbances necessarily attending their use, no one can complain that they are incommoded. Whatever consequential annoyance may necessarily follow from the running of cars on the road with reasonable care is damnum absque injuria. The private inconvenience in such case must be suffered for the public accommodation." Field, J., in Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Fifth Baptist Church, 108 U. S. 332; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 15. Compare Hot Springs R. Co. v. Williamson, 136 U. S. 121; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 59; aff'g 45 Ark. 429.

In Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Lippincott, 116 Pa. St. 472; 30 Am. & Eng. R.

Cas. 399; 2 Am. St. Rep. 618, and Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Marchant, 119 Pa. St. 541; 33 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 116; 4 Am. St. Rep. 659, often cited upon the subject of consequential damages, the railroad was not constructed in the street but on land belonging to the railroad company and abutting on the same street with plaintiff's property. Recovery was denied on the ground that the company was not in delicto.

"Exposure to noise and smoke, to danger and detention in crossing, the frightening of horses and similar inconveniences and discomforts, not amounting to a practical obstruction, are, however, not a taking of property, nor are such injuries, when not caused by negligence, actionable." Pierce on Railroads, p. 241. See also Cooley's Const. Lim. (5th ed.), p. 686 [553].

Contrary Views—Statutory Provisions.

—In construing the statute providing that the railroad company shall be responsible for injuries caused to private property, the Ohio court holds that damages may be recovered for injuries caused from noise, smoke, etc. The question is discussed at length in Columbus, etc., R. Co. v. Gardner, 45 Ohio St. 309; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 248. In Grafton v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 21 Fed. Rep. 309; 17 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 200, Matthews, J., said: "In an action by the owners of abutting lots, they are entitled to recover full compensation for the depreciation in value of their property caused thereby. . . . The statute must be taken to mean what it plainly says; and there being no sufficient reason to the contrary, must be so construed that the railroad company, in the case contemplated, shall be held responsible for all injuries of every description done by its work to the plaintiff."

In Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Eddins, 60 Tex. 656, it is said that "injuries resulting from sparks of fire, from engines, smoke, cinders, unusual noises, from bells and steam whistles and other annoyances of like character, are proper elements of damage." So in Ham v. R. Co., 61 Iowa 716, the court, after stating the rule of damages to be the difference in the value of the property before and after the construction of the road said: "In estimating such damages the obstruction of the owner's view, interfering with his privacy, and the noises of operating trains, were proper to be considered." See also Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich.

from liability for consequential damages is not to be extended, however, to protect the company, where, by the exercise of proper care, the injury might have been prevented or greatly lessened, or where the company has been guilty of an unlawful or excessive exercise of the authority granted it.¹

g. REMEDIES, CHARACTER OF ACTION, ETC.—(See also EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 591, et seq.).—The abutting owner must exercise his right to object to the occupation of the street without 62; 31 Am. Rep. 306; Adden v. White Mountain, etc., R. Co., 55 N. H. 413; 20 Am. Rep. 220; EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 546-7; Chapman v. Oshkosh, etc., R. Co., 33 Wis. 629; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Fifth Baptist Church, 108 U. S. 335; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 115; Omaha, etc., R. Co. v. Janacek, 30 Neb. 276; Gainesville, etc., R. Co. v. Hall, 78 Tex. 169; 44 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 51; 22 Am. St. Rep. 42.

In Fort Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Pearce, 75 Tex. 281, it is held that any depreciation in the value of residence property occasioned by the probability that the railroad company, in operating and using its road in the street, will make unusual and loud noises, and emit from its engines smoke and cinders, and cause other like annoyances naturally incident to the operation of cars, is a proper element to be considered in estimating damages to such property by the location and operation of the road.

In Pennsylvania damages purely consequential are allowed by statute. Hoffer v. Pennsylvania Canal Co., 87 Pa. St. 221.

In Adams v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 39 Minn. 296; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 7; 12 Am. St. Rep. 644, it was held that where, without the consent of the owner of abutting property and without compensation to him, a railroad is laid and operated along a portion of the street in front of his lot so as to cause smoke, dust, cinders, etc., to darken or pollute the air coming over that part of the street upon his lot, he may recover whatever damage is caused to his lot by so laying and operating the railroad on that part of the street.

Consult in this connection the rule applied in the elevated railway cases, supra, this title, Elevated Railroads. It seems that the doctrine there presented affords a means of reconciling the conflict of the authorities.

1. Unlawful or Negligent Exercise of Authority.—Dubach v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 89 Mo. 483; 29 Am. & Eng. R.

Cas. 609 (injunction allowed to restrain unlawful use of street); Hussner v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 114 N. Y. 433; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 219; 11 Am. St. Rep. 679; Mahady v. Bushwick R. Co., 91 N. Y. 148; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 145; 43 Am. Rep. 661; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Orr, 91 Ky. 109; Cadle v. Muscatine Western R. Co., 44 Iowa 11; Chicago, etc. R. Co. v. McGinnis, 79 Ill. 269; Pierce on Railroads, p. 241; Delaware, etc., Canal Co. v. Wright, 21 N. J. L. 469; Hatfield v. Central R. Co., 33 N. J. L. 251.

Thus in Cain v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 54 Iowa 255, the railroad company, authorized to construct its track in the street, but as near the center of the street as possible, and not nearer than eighteen feet to the line of the street, placed its road within six feet of such line. It was held that the track in such a place constituted a nuisance, for which the owner of adjacent land might recover damages. As to the exact meaning of the words "line of the street," see Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Eisert, 127 Ind. 156. So where the company is authorized to construct a single track in the street, an additional track is a nuisance. Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 70 Iowa 105; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 121. Such unauthorized use of the street is a continuous wrong to abutting owners who may recover the amount of damages accruing from year to year. Grand Rapids, etc., R. Co. v. Heisel, 47 Mich. 393; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 260.

In Hussner v. Brooklyn City R. Co., 114 N. Y. 433; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 219; 11 Am. St. Rep. 679, the railroad company was authorized to run cars by steam motors between the city line and a certain street. It did not stop its cars so propelled at the specified street, but passed into and along it for some distance, and thence into an avenue in front of the plaintiff's premises. It was held that, omitting the question of the ownership of the fee of the street, unreasonable delay; if he stands by without objection until the rights of third parties or of the public have intervened, he cannot maintain ejectment or insist upon an injunction,¹ though it seems he may still maintain an action for damages,² his recovery being limited to such damages as have accrued prior to the institution of the plaintiff was entitled to recover for all injuries resulting from the operation of the road, including smoke, noise, etc., as the use of steam on the avenue was unauthorized and unlawful and in the nature of a nuisance. See also Lahr v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 268.

1. Delay in Instituting Suit.—Porter v. Midland R. Co., 125 Ind. 476; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 70; Strickler v. Midland R. Co., 125 Ind. 412; Midland R. Co. v. Smith, 113 Ind. 233; 125 Ind. 509; 44 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 222; Reichert v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 51 Ark. 491; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 453; Hanlin v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 61 Wis. 515; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 70 (landowner must pursue the statutory remedy in such case); Pembroke v. Canada Cent. R. Co., 3 Ont. Rep. 503; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 117; Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 70 Iowa 105; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 121; Paul v. Connersville, etc., R. Co., 51 Ind. 527; Goodin v. Cincinnati R. Co., 18 Ohio St. 169; 98 Am. Dec. 95; EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 633.

The landowner may establish his title in an action against the railroad by adverse possession. Lawrence R. Co. v. Cobb, 35 Ohio St. 94.

Where the road is operated by a company, which has purchased it, the trespass by such purchasing company begins only from the date when it entered upon possession of the road, and the Statute of Limitations begins to run from that date against a suit to enjoin it from continuing such trespass. Harbach v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 80 Iowa 593; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 115.

Where for a period of twenty years a railroad company has been permitted to occupy the street of a city in front of the complainants' premises for the purposes of a railroad track, under a claim of right, without remonstrance or complaint by the complainants, or those under whom they claim, and the railroad company, by such acquiescence, is induced to enter into a lease with the city, binding itself to build a depot and platform, of a width that could add but little to the inconvenience to which the complainants were subjected by the occupation of the street by the track, and from which the company cannot be released, equity will not interfere to prevent the erection. Higbee v. Camden, etc., R., etc., Co., 20 N. J. Eq. 435.

But the grant to a company of the right to a joint and mutual use of a highway with the public cannot be set up under the Statute of Limitations as a bar, since in such case the use is not adverse. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Reich, 101 Ill. 157.

Ejectment Against Railroad Company.

—In Reichert v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 51 Ark. 491; 38 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 457, it was held that ejectment was the proper remedy, but that the landowner had lost his right to exercise such a remedy by his delay in bringing the action. See also as to right to maintain ejectment, Cox v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 48 Ind. 178; Weyl v. Sonoma Valley R. Co., 69 Cal. 202. But in Edwardsville R. Co. v. Sawyer, 92 Ill. 377, it is said that ejectment cannot be maintained where the occupation is authorized by the municipality having control of the street. In Carpenter v. Oswego, etc., R. Co., 24 N. Y. 655, it is held, however, that where the proceedings for the establishment of a street had proved to be defective, ejectment would lie at the suit of the owner of the land against a railroad company constructing its road there by authority of the city. See also Redfield v. Utica, etc., R. Co., 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 54.

2. See Osborne v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 830; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Soltwedde, 116 Ind. 257; 36 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 577; 9 Am. St. Rep. 852; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Necco (Tex. 1891), 15 S. W. Rep. 1102.

"It does not follow that because appellant cannot sue for an injunction or maintain an action of ejectment, he is remediless; on the contrary, as is clearly indicated in several cases, and directly decided in one case at least, he may maintain an action for damages." Elliot, J., in Porter v. Midland R. Co., 125 Ind. 476; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 72, referring to Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Allen, 113 Ind. 308; 3 Am. St. Rep. 650. See also Rusch v. Milwaukee, the action, and within the statutory period of limitation, if the injury is of a temporary character; but if the trespass is a permanent one all damages may be recovered in a single action.¹ The remedy of the abutting owner lies in an action for damages, and equity will not interpose to enjoin the occupation of the street, except in extraordinary cases, as where such occupation is without authority.² And it seems that the right of action for such damages is in the party owning the abutting lot at the time of the occupation of the street, and does not pass to subsequent pur-etc., R. Co., 54 Wis. 136; 6 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 609; Evans v. Missouri, etc., R. Co., 64 Mo. 453; State v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 86 Mo. 288; 29 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 607. Compare, however, Whittier v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 38 Me. 26.

Priority of Landowner's Claim for Damages.—A landowner's claim for damages for a trestle work in front of his lot, is paramount to that of the company's mortgage creditors, and is not waived by having allowed the construction without compensation or security first given. Mercantile Trust Co. v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 29 Fed. Rep. 732.

1. Extent of Recovery in Single Action.—In New York the doctrine is well established that in actions against railroad companies for the occupation of streets, only such damages are recoverable as have accrued up to the time of the institution of the action. See Uline v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 101 N. Y. 109; 23 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 3; 54 Am. Rep. 661; supra, this title, Elevated Railroads; In New York.

It seems, however, that a distinction is to be made between cases in which the trespass is a permanent one and those in which the injury is of a temporary character. Thus, where the action is for the unlawful or negligent construction or operation of the road, it is not presumed that such illegality or negligence will continue, and only damages are recoverable which have accrued up to the commencement of the action. Brakken v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 29 Minn. 44; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 596; Central Branch, etc., R. Co. v. Twine, 23 Kan. 585; 33 Am. Rep. 203; Baugh v. Texas, etc., R. Co., 80 Tex. 56; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 105; Blesch v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 43 Wis. 183; Holmes v. Wilson, 10 A. & E. 503; 37 E. C. L. 161. But where the trespass or injury is permanent, as is the case where an embankment is constructed in the street, or in many jurisdictions where the company merely occupies the street with its road without tendering compensation, damages for the permanent injury to property may be recovered in an action. The Indiana courts refuse to allow successive actions in such a case. Central Branch, etc., R. Co. v. Twine, 23 Kan. 585; 33 Am. Rep. 203; Strickler v. Midland R. Co., 125 Ind. 412; Porter v. Midland R. Co., 125 Ind. 476; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 70; White v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 122 Ind. 317; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 156; Lafayette v. Nagle, 113 Ind. 425; 22 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 411; Fox v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 34 W. Va. 466; Elliott on Roads and Streets, p. 199 and cases cited. See also in this connection Adams v. Hastings, etc., R. Co., 18 Minn. 260; Hopkins v. Western Pac. R. Co., 50 Cal. 190; Sherman v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 40 Wis. 645; DAMAGES, vol. 5, p. 17 et seq.

When the right of the company to acquire title as a result of the suit is recognized, damages for permanent depreciation of property may be recovered; but where the action is in trespass and denies defendant's right to continue the obstruction or to acquire title, only such damages as had accrued at the time the action was commenced are recoverable. Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Eberle, 110 Ind. 542; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 220.

2. Remedy Is Not by Injunction.—Truesdale v. Peoria Grape Sugar Co., 101 Ill. 561; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 248; Mills v. Parlin, 106 Ill. 60; Stetson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 75 Ill. 74; Osborne v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 37 Fed. Rep. 830; Heath v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 61 Iowa 11; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 313; Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Smoot, 81 Va. 504; Tuckahoe Canal Co. v. Tuckahoe, etc., R. Co., 11 Leigh (Va.) 42. Compare supra, this title, Elevated Railroads; In New York.

Where the injunction is allowed the court will usually dissolve it upon the chasers; those purchasing after the construction of the road take with notice of the rights acquired by the company and of the injury to the property.¹ As to other parties to the action, general rules of law prevail.²

If the plaintiff is the owner of two contiguous lots abutting on the street occupied, it is proper to assess the damages to both lots company's executing a proper bond conditioned to pay all damages awarded against it. Fouche v. Rome St. R. Co., 84 Ga. 233; McMahon v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 41 La. Ann. 827. See also Kavanagh v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., 78 Ga. 271; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 267; Patterson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 75 Ill. 588; Cairo, etc., R. Co. v. People, 92 Ill. 170; Georgia Southern, etc., R. Co. v. Ray, 84 Ga. 376; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 95 (injunction granted until performance of condition requiring compensation); Ross v. Georgia, etc., R. Co., 33 S. Car. 477; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 34. In Iowa the abutting owner may always enjoin the company, unless it has paid the compensation provided by statute, and this right to enjoin is not merged in an unpaid judgment for damages against the company. Harbach v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 80 Iowa 593; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 115.

1. Right of Subsequent Purchaser to Damages.—Dixon v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 1 Mackey (D. C.) 78; 3 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 201; Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 70 Iowa 105; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 121; Pratt v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 72 Iowa 249; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 236 (subsequent purchasers are charged with notice of rights of the railroad company); Lewis v. Wilmington, etc., R. Co., 11 Rich. (S. Car.) 91; Rand v. Townshend, 26 Vt. 670; Mills on Em. Dom., § 66; Redfield on Railroads 350. Compare the doctrine in New York, supra, this title, Elevated Railroads; In New York.

There is no reason, however, to prevent the landowner from making a valid assignment of his claim for damages. Pratt v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 72 Iowa 249; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 236.

The abutting owner's right to maintain the action is not affected by the fact that he parted with the title to the land after the institution of the action. Carl v. Sheboygan, etc., R. Co., 46 Wis. 629.

Future Damage.—In Merchants' Union Barb Wire Co. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 70 Iowa 109, the occupation of a street by a railway company without making compensation to owners of abutting property, as provided by statute, was declared to be a continuing trespass and nuisance, for which any owner of a lot might recover; and if no recovery was had by the lot owner for the trespass and nuisance which would compensate for the future and continuous occupancy of the street by the railroad, his grantee could maintain an action for any injury he sustained thereby. But see Pratt v. Des Moines, etc., Ry. Co., 72 Iowa 249; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 236.

2. See generally, PARTIES TO ACTIONS, vol. 17, p. 470; EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 608.

Heirs or devisees as Parties.—The cause of action lies in favor of the party owning the property at the time the injury is committed. See generally supra, this title, Elevated Railroads; In New York. Therefore where a company sets stakes for the construction of its road in a street and the abutting owner dies before any further steps are taken, an action for consequential damages is properly brought in the name of the widow and heirs of the deceased proprietor and not in the name of the personal representatives, the mere setting of the construction stakes not being an injury to the abutting property. Pennsylvania, etc., R. Co. v. Ziemer, 124 Pa. St. 560. See also Griswold v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 122 N. Y. 102.

Misjoinder of Parties—Application for Injunction.—Where the fee of the street to the center is in the owners of abutting property, the interest of each owner in the same is separate and individual, and a complaint in which several proprietors are joined as parties' plaintiff and which seeks to enjoin the construction of the railroad on the street on the ground that it has not legally acquired the right to do so nor made compensation therefor, is demurrable for misjoinder of parties' plaintiff. Fogg v. Nevada, etc., R. Co., 20 Nev. 429; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 105. The better doctrine seems to be, however, that proprietors of lands abutting on the street together, although they may not have been so used by the owner in connection with each other that they would be considered one tract in ordinary condemnation proceedings.¹ In one jurisdiction this rule has been carried so far as to make a recovery for damages to one lot abutting on the street a bar to an action for similar damages to another lot on the same street, when the lots were the property of the same party but not contiguous.²

Where a railroad obstructs a private way the owner has a cause of action against the company. It seems, however, where the statute prescribes a specific penalty for the obstruction of a road or private way by a railroad, the owner cannot maintain an ordinary action of trespass, but must pursue the statutory remedy.³

The fact that the abutting owner was a member of the city council and voted for the grant to the company of the right to use the streets, does not estop him from maintaining his action for damages to his property.⁴ So, where the plaintiff contracted with the company to procure for it a right of way through the city streets, his contract must be construed as relating to the securing of the consent of the local authorities and not of immunity from liability for damages to property holders.⁵

may be joined as parties' plaintiff in a suit to restrain a railroad company from laying its tracks in the street without first making compensation. Taylor v. Bay City, St. R. Co., 80 Mich. 77; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 335.

Action by Holder of Equitable Title.—In an action for damages the holder of the legal title should always be joined as a party plaintiff; if, however, no objection is made for non-joinder the holder of the equitable title may recover damages to his estate. Hastings, etc., R. Co. v. Ingalls, 15 Neb. 123; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 60.

1. Where Plaintiff Owns Two Lots—Damages for Both Recoverable in a Single Action.—Lamm v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 45 Minn. 71; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 42; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Boerner (Neb.), 51 N. W. 842; EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 577.

2. Beronio v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 86 Cal. 415; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 66; 21 Am. St. Rep. 57. In this case it was said: "The fact that it (the railroad) damaged two lots belonging to the same man at the same time, and by the same means, no more created two causes of action than if two horses belonging to the same man had been killed by a single collision with a locomotive." See also Brammenburgh v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 13 Ind. 103; 74 Am. Dec. 250. And in such case the lot owner cannot recover for the continued operation of the railroad after the judgment in the former action, if the evidence shows no damage accruing after that date. Beronio v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 86 Cal. 415; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 66; 21 Am. St. Rep. 57.

3. Obstruction of Private Ways.—Ross v. Georgia, etc., R. Co., 33 S. Car. 477; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 34; Railroad Com'rs v. Columbia, etc., R. Co., 26 S. Car. 353; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 177; Kansas City, etc., R. Co. v. Farrell, 76 Mo. 183. See also Presbrey v. Old Colony R. Co., 103 Mass. 1 (one cannot have private way over his own land); Clark v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 24 N. H. 114; Kimball v. Cochecho R. Co., 27 N. H. 448; 59 Am. Dec. 387; Greenwood v. Wilton R. Co., 23 N. H. 261.

Where the plaintiff's allegation is that the way is so entirely obstructed that he cannot pass, and the proof shows only a partial obstruction, so that he had still ample room for passage, there is a fatal variance and a non-suit should be ordered on motion by defendant. Ross v. Georgia, etc., R. Co., 33 S. Car. 477; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 34.

See generally, PRIVATE WAYS, vol. 19, p. 95.

4. Estoppel.—Lamm v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 45 Minn. 71; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 42.

5. Rosenthal v. Taylor, etc., R. Co.,

The abutting owner cannot be required to initiate the proceedings to assess the value of the easements or other property to be appropriated; it is the duty of the railroad company to ascertain the values and to pay over compensation for all property rights appropriated by it, and the landowner may compel it to have such assessment made before it commences the construction of its road upon the street.¹ Nor can he be required or allowed to enter upon the street and make repairs or changes in order to lessen the injury to his property and so decrease the amount of damage.²

Where the statute provides a rule of compensation, its provisions are to be followed as to the method of assessing the damages.³ The abutting owner may, however, maintain an ordinary action at law for damages sustained from trespass or other illegal acts committed prior to the assessment.⁴

Where the railroad company occupies a street or highway without due authority, or exercises its rights in respect thereto in a negligent or improper manner, so as to amount to a public nuisance, the remedy is by indictment as in the case of nuisances by private individuals.⁵

79 Tex. 325; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 52, note.

1. Company's Duty to Have Damages Assessed.—Cox v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 48 Ind. 178; Dickson v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 3 MacArthur (D. C.) 862; Parker v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., 13 Lea (Tenn.) 669; Mulholland v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 60 Iowa 640. Compare, however, Spencer v. Point Pleasant R. Co., 23 W. Va. 406; 20 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 125.

2. Central Branch, etc., R. Co. v. Andrews, 26 Kan. 702; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 370.

3. Statutory Method Must be Pursued.—Ford v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 14 Wis. 617; 80 Am. Dec. 791. In this case it is said: "It seems that the past damages, or those occasioned by the trespass, might have been assessed by the court (Williams v. New York Cent. R. Co., 16 N. Y. 97); or the judge might perhaps have ordered a jury for that purpose; but the permanent damages, or those which would accrue to the plaintiff by the continued use of the land by the company, can only be ascertained in the manner prescribed by the statute." See also EMINENT DOMAIN, vol. 6, p. 604.

In Ohio the landowner having the fee of the street may proceed under section 12 of act of 1872 (69 Ohio Laws 95) to compel the railroad company to condemn a right of way over the street.

Lawrence R. Co. v. Williams, 35 Ohio St. 168.

The statutory method of assessing damages in condemning a right of way does not apply, however, where property is not taken, but is merely damaged. Burlington, etc., R. Co. v. Reinhackle, 15 Neb. 279; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 169; 48 Am. Rep. 342.

In Iowa, where the statute provides for compensation, the abutting owner cannot institute proceedings for the assessment of damages; the only method of having the damages assessed at his own instance is by a proceeding for judgment. Harbach v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 80 Iowa 593; 43 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 117; Mulholland v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 60 Iowa 740; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 99; Daniels v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 35 Iowa 135; 14 Am. Rep. 490. Compare Donald v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 52 Iowa 411.

The statutory method must be pursued; therefore the plaintiff cannot have a sheriff's jury to assess the damages in the mode prescribed for a condemnation of a right of way. Stough v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 71 Iowa 641; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 397; Mulholland v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 60 Iowa 740; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 99.

4. Drady v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 57 Iowa 393; 14 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 131.

5. Remedy by Indictment.—See generally CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 267;

RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 926. See as to the rule of the text, Northern Cent. R. Co. v. Com., 90 Pa. St. 300; 5 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 318; Cincinnati Southern R. Co. v. Com., 80 Ky. 137; 7 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 91; Central R. Co. v. State, 32 N. J. L. 220; Com. v. Nashua, etc., R. Co., 2 Gray (Mass.) 54; Com. v. Old Colony, etc., R. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.) 93; Salem v. Eastern R. Co., 98 Mass. 431; 96 Am. Dec. 650; Palatka, etc., R. Co. v. State, 23 Fla. 546; 32 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 191; 11 Am. St. Rep. 395; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Com., 101 Pa. St. 192; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 321.

Unlawful Occupation of Streets—Continuing Trespass.—If the use and occupation of the street is unlawful, it is a continuing trespass for which repeated actions to recover damages will lie as long as the trespass is continued until the occupancy ripens into title by prescription. Lamm v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 45 Minn. 72; 46 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 47.

INDEX.

- Spelling, 1
 - Deed avoided by bad spelling, 1
 - Idem sonans, 2
 - Incorrect spelling, 1
- Spendthrift trusts, 5
 - Alienation, restraints on, 7, 14
 - Application by trustees, 11
 - Definition, 5
 - Federal court rule, 5
 - Illinois* rule, 6
 - Jurisdictional rules, 5
 - Maine* rule, 9
 - Maryland* rule, 6
 - Massachusetts* rule, 9
 - Missouri* rule, 6
 - Pennsylvania* rule, 7
 - Restraints on alienation, 7, 14
 - Rhode Island* rule, 10
 - South Carolina* rule, 10
 - Statutory regulations, 12
 - Tennessee* rule, 9
 - Trustees, application by, 11
- Stare decisis, 19
 - Adopted statutes, 25
 - Change of evidence, 34
 - Claim to office, 30
 - Constitutions and statutes, 31
 - Decisions construing constitutions and statutes, 31
 - Decisions in series, 24
 - Decisions of inferior court, 30
 - Definition, 19
 - Departments of the government, 27
 - Dicta, 19
 - Divided court, 23
 - English decisions, 25
 - Erroneous precedent, 28
 - Evidence, change of, 34
 - Executive departments, 27
 - Fact, matters of, 34
 - Federal and state courts, rule as between, 37
 - Inferior court, decisions of, 30
 - Interpretation of language of court, 23
 - Jurisdiction, questions of, 36
 - Language of court, interpretation of, 23
 - Law of precedent, 21
 - Law of the case, 33
 - Limitations of rule, 36
 - Matters of fact, 34
- Stare decisis—Continued.
 - Obiter dicta, 19
 - Office, claim to, 30
 - Precedent, 21
 - Questions of jurisdiction, 36
 - Recent English decisions, 25
 - Rule, limitations of, 36
 - Rules of property, 28
 - Single decision, 24
 - State and federal courts, rule as between, 37
 - Statutes, adopted, 25
 - Statutes and constitutions, 31
 - Statutes in evidence, 26
- State lands, 42
 - Acquisition of title, 42
 - Action to annul patent, 67
 - Aliens, acquisition by, 51
 - Annulling patent, 67
 - Application to purchase, 52
 - Certificate of purchase, 69
 - Conclusiveness of patent, 62
 - Conflicting patents, 66
 - Construction of patent, 65
 - Definition, 42
 - Effect of patent, 63
 - Elements of transfer, 53
 - Entry, 55
 - Escheat, 46
 - Evidence, patent as, 68
 - Forfeiture, 47
 - Form of patent, 60
 - Grant, 48, 58
 - Introduction, 42
 - Issue of patent, 61
 - Land office warrant, 54
 - Lands, when granted, 49
 - Lease of school lands, 71
 - Original ownership, 43
 - Origin of title, 42
 - Patent, 60
 - Patent as evidence, 68
 - Purchase, application to, 52
 - Sale of school lands, 69
 - School lands, 69
 - State sovereignty, 46
 - Survey, 57
 - Title, acquisition and origin of, 42
 - Transfer, 48
 - Elements of, 53
 - To whom made, 50
 - Validity of patent, 62

State lands—Continued.

- Warrant, 54
- States, 72
 - Actions against state, 83
 - Actions by state, 80
 - Admission into Union, 74
 - Amendment to constitution, 88
 - Bonds, 98
 - Boundaries, 100
 - Compacts between states, 103
 - Constitutional amendment, 88
 - Contracts, 77
 - Definition, 72
 - Eleventh amendment, 88
 - Indian tribes, 74
 - Judgments, 77
 - Priority as creditor, 97
 - Relation between, 76
 - Set-off, 95
 - State bonds, 98
 - State boundaries, 100
 - State officers, 105
 - Appointment, 106
 - Attorney-general, 112
 - Auditor, 111
 - Bonds, 107
 - Election, 106
 - Impeachment, 112
 - Official bonds, 107
 - Removal, 112
 - Salaries, 108
 - Secretary of state, 109
 - Treasurer, 110
 - Statutory meaning, 74
 - Union, admission into, 74
- Stations (Railroad), 114
 - Abandonment of station, 119
 - Admission to premises, 125
 - Assaults, 137
 - Care of premises, 130
 - Condemnation of land, 138
 - Contracts concerning location, 120
 - Contributory negligence, 136
 - Definition, 114
 - Depot, 115
 - Establishment and maintenance, 115
 - Failure to locate, 122
 - Failure to maintain, 121
 - Fencing, 132
 - Hackmen, 126
 - Injuries, personal, 128
 - Lighting premises, 130
 - Location, 120
 - Maintenance, 115
 - Mandamus, 119
 - Meaning in particular cases, 114
 - Negligence, rule of, 128, 133
 - Personal injuries, 128
 - Premises, care of, 130
 - Premises, lighting, 130
 - Privileges to hackmen, 126
 - Regulations, 124
 - Rule of negligence, 128, 133

Stations(Railroad)—Continued.

- Rules and regulations, 124
- Specific performance, 122
- Statutory regulations, 118
- Statutes, 140
 - Absurdity, presumptions against, 358
 - Actual passage of bill, 168
 - Adopted statutes, construction of, 431
 - Affirmative, 143
 - Affirmative and negative terms, 455, 483
 - Aids to construction, 327
 - Ambiguity, 228, 305
 - Amendatory acts, title and subject-matter, 268
 - Amendment, 276, 488
 - By reference to title, 278
 - Construction of, 285
 - Effect of, 284
 - Ancient, 154
 - Approval by executive, 184
 - Associated words, 439
 - Authentication, 190
 - Bill, conclusiveness of, 202
 - Bill, introduction of, 163
 - Bill, reading of, 166
 - Chapter and section headings, 332
 - Classification, 143
 - Conclusiveness of bill, 202
 - Conclusiveness of journals, 193
 - Constitutionality, presumptions in favor of, 349
 - Constitutional requirements, 229
 - Construction, 296
 - Construction as affected by usage, 339
 - Construction of amendments, 285
 - Construction in derogation of common law, 386
 - Construction in derogation of common right, 383
 - Construction of penal statutes, 375
 - Contemporaneous circumstances as affecting construction, 336
 - Contemporaneous construction, 339
 - Context, 306
 - Correction of errors in construing statutes, 421
 - Correcting mistakes, 308
 - Courts, presumptions as to jurisdiction of, 353
 - Criminal laws, repeal of, 512
 - Criminal laws, title and subject-matter, 262
 - Curative acts, 452
 - Declaratory, 143
 - Defectiveness, 228
 - Definition, 143
 - Directory, 153, 453
 - Drainage acts, title and subject-matter, 242
 - Effect, 224
 - Effect of amendment, 284

Statutes—Continued.

Effect of repeal, 499
 Elimination in construction, 418
 Emergency clause, 222
 Enacting clause, repeal of, 436
 Enactment, 155
 Enactment without approval, 189
 Enrolled bills, 190, 196
 Evasions, 472
 Evidence, statutes as, 229
 Evidence to impeach, 199
 Exceptional construction, 417
 Exceptions, 435
 Executive action, 182
 Executive approval, 184
 Executive deliberation, 182
 Executive functions, 180
 Expressio unius est exclusio alterius, 446
 Express repeal, 476
 Extended sessions, 160
 Extra sessions, 159
 Filing enrolled bill, 190
 Final passage, 171
 Form of legislation, 161
 Gambling statutes, title and subject-matter, 243
 Game laws, title and subject-matter, 243
 General, 148
 Grammatical construction, presumptions as to, 368
 Headings of chapters and sections, 332
 Highway acts, title and subject-matter, 255
 Impeachment, 199
 Implied repeal, 479
 Inconsistency, 228
 Inconvenience, presumptions against, 358
 Ineffectiveness, presumptions against, 358
 Injustice, presumptions against, 358
 In pari materia, 311
 Insurance acts, title and subject-matter, 244
 Intent, 306
 Interpolation in construction, 418
 Interpretation, 296
 Intoxicating liquor laws, title and subject-matter, 260
 Introduction of bill, 163
 Journal as a record, 192
 Journals as evidence, 196
 Journals, conclusiveness of, 193
 Journals of legislature, 191, 335
 Journals, proof of, 195
 Judicial procedure acts, 468
 Legislative construction, 343
 Legislative extra sessions, 159
 Legislative journals, 191, 335
 Legislative opinions, 337

Statutes—Continued.

Legislative power, limitations of, 161
 Legislative power to recall bill, 179
 Legislative rules, 162
 Legislature, 155
 Liberal construction, 409
 Limitations of legislative power, 161
 Liquor laws, title and subject-matter, 260
 Literal construction, 298
 Local, 152
 Mandatory, 153, 453
 Marginal notes, 332
 "May"—"must"—"shall," 469
 Mechanics' lien acts, title and subject-matter, 242
 Misrecitals, 291
 Mode of legislation, 161
 Modern, 154
 Motives of legislators, 337
 "Must"—"may"—"shall," 469
 Negative, 144
 Negative and affirmative terms, 483
 Noscitur a sociis, 439
 Notes, marginal, 332
 Object, 297
 Object and purpose, 319
 One or more subjects, 268
 Opinions of legislators, 337
 Organization of legislature, 158
 Pari materia, 311
 Partial unconstitutionality, 225
 Particular words, 469
 Passage of bill, 168
 Passage over veto, 190
 Penal, 144
 Penal acts, 495
 Penalties and forfeitures, 507
 Permissive, 154
 Perpetual, 155
 Pleading, 286
 Pleading foreign laws, 289
 Pleading private statutes, 288
 Pleading public statutes, 286
 Popular meaning of words, 326
 Postponement of operation, 223
 Preamble, 329
 Presentation of bill to executive, 176
 Presumptions, 346
 Against absurdity, 358
 Against change of law, 357
 Against inconvenience, 358
 Against ineffectiveness, 358
 Against injustice, 358
 Against unreason, 358
 As to exercise of doubtful power, 351
 As to grammatical construction, 368
 As to including government, 365
 As to jurisdiction, 353
 Concerning language, 370
 In favor of constitutionality, 349

Statutes—Continued.

Private, 146
 Private acts, construction of, 407
 Procedure acts, 468
 Procedure acts, title and subject-matter, 265
 Prohibitive, 154
 Proof, 293
 Proof of journals, 195
 Prospective, 154
 Protest, 169
 Provisos, 435
 Public, 144
 Publication, 219
 Public officers, acts relating to, 458
 Punctuation, 334
 Purpose and object, 319
 Railroad acts, title and subject-matter, 253
 Reading of bill, 166
 Recall of bill, 179
 Reconvening legislature, 156
 Reddenda singula singulis, 444
 Re-enactment, 515
 Remedial, 144
 Remedial acts, 452
 Remedial statutes, construction of, 414
 Repeal, 473
 Repeal and re-enactment, 515
 Repeal by amendment, 488
 Repeal of enacting clause, 436
 Repeal of repealing act, 517
 Repealing acts, title and subject-matter, 268
 Repugnant acts, 479
 Retrospective laws, 447
 Return to executive, 186
 Revisions, 487
 Revivor, 517
 Rule as to title and subject-matter, 234
 Rules of legislature, 162
 Rules, suspension of, 168
 Saving clauses, 435
 Schedule, 334
 School laws, title and subject-matter, 257
 Section and chapter headings, 332
 Sessions, extended, 160
 Sessions, legislative, 159
 "Shall"—"may"—"must," 469
 Signing bill, 173
 Special clauses, 310
 Statute broader than title, 232
 Statutes affecting jurisdiction, 406
 Statutes as evidence, 229
 Statutes creating liabilities, 400
 Statutes imposing taxes, 403
 Statutory proceedings, 402
 Statutory remedies, 402
 Strict construction, 374
 Subject-matter, 322

Statutes—Continued.

Subject-matter and title, 229
 Subjects, one or more, 268
 Supplying omissions, 308
 Suspension of rules, 168
 Tax laws, 403
 Tax laws, title and subject-matter, 258
 Technical words, 298, 324
 Three readings of bill, 166
 Time of passage, 154
 Time of taking effect, 213
 Title, 327
 Title broader than statute, 232
 Titles and subjects under constitutions, 229
 Unconstitutionality, 225
 Unreason, presumptions against, 358
 Usage as affecting construction, 339
 Validity, 224
 Veto, 190
 Words, popular meaning of, 326
 Words, technical, 324
 Yeas and nays, 171
 Yeas and nays on final passage, 171
 Stay of proceedings, 520
 Absolute stay, 520
 Abuse of discretion, 529
 Agreement of parties, 539
 Appeal, 543
 Application, 529
 Bankruptcy, 526
 Breach of faith, 521
 Commission to take testimony, 529
 Conditional stay, 527
 Constitutionality of stay laws, 545
 Construction of statutes, 540
 Costs, non-payment of, 527
 Court, order of, 530
 Definition, 520
 Discharge in bankruptcy, 526
 Discovery, 529
 Discretion, abuse of, 529
 Effect, 548
 Evidence withheld, 528
 Execution, effect on, 550
 Execution fully performed, 554
 Execution partly performed, 552
 Hearing of motion, 529
 Intermediate proceedings, 520
 Irregularity, 526
 Judgment lien, effect on, 549
 Judgment, suspensive effect upon, 548
 Material evidence withheld, 528
 Motion, hearing of, 529
 Non-payment of costs, 527
 Order of court, 530
 Parties, agreement of, 539
 Payment of debt and costs, 520
 Pending other actions, 523
 Perpetual stay, 532
 Right of appeal, 543
 Second action for same cause, 522

Stay of proceedings—Continued.

- Statutory stay, 540
- Stay laws, constitutionality of, 545
- Suspensive effect, 548
- Temporary stay, 536
- Testimony, commission to take, 529
- Vexatious process, 522
- Waiver, 544
- Stenographers, 556
 - Appointment, 556
 - Compensation, 557
 - Costs, fees taxable as, 560
 - Definition, 556
 - Disbursements, fees as, 560
 - Duties, 556
 - Evidence, notes as, 563
 - Fees as costs, 560
 - Fees, payment in advance, 559
 - Fees, repayment, 562
 - Fees, who liable for, 559
 - Notes as evidence, 563
 - Notes on former trial, 562
 - Notes, translation of, 558
 - Removal, 556
 - Translation of notes, 558
- Stipulation (in admiralty), 567
 - Appeal, 581
 - Costs, 571
 - Costs and damages, 573
 - In general, 567
 - To abide or pay decree, 574
 - To appear and abide, 573
 - Value, 574
- Stock, 582
 - Administrators, sales and purchases by, 682
 - Application for registry, 662
 - Arrears, payment of, 614
 - Assignment of certificate, 648
 - Attachment, 631
 - Capital, 587, 613
 - Capital stock, 585
 - Certificates, 597
 - Assignment of, 648
 - Negotiability of, 598
 - Surrender of, 651
 - Common and preferred, 611
 - Convertible, 629
 - Creditors and transferees, 635
 - Debenture, 618
 - Deferred, 618
 - Definition, 584
 - Distribution of surplus after reduction, 631
 - Earnings and profits, 611
 - Enforcement of lien, 697
 - Execution, 631
 - Executors, sales and purchases by, 682
 - Failure to surrender, 652
 - Forged transfers, 667
 - Formalities of transfer, 646
 - Frauds, statute of, 593

Stock—Continued.

- Garnishment, 634
- Gifts, 688
- Guardians, sales and purchases by, 682
- Identification, 596
- Increase, 625
 - Who may direct, 626
- Interest-bearing, 615
- Irregular issue, 619
- Issue, 601, 618
 - To corporate officers, 623
- Legislative power to direct increase, 625
- Levying creditors, 635
- Liability of corporation for wrongful registry, 667
- Lien, 689, 697
 - By by-laws, 690
 - By construction, 692
 - By contract, 691
 - By inference, 692
 - By statute, 690
 - By usage, 692
 - Enforcement of, 697
 - Nature and extent, 693
- Locus, 632
- Mandamus to compel registration of transfer, 666
- Method of reduction, 631
- Mode of increase, 627
- Mode of issue, 619
- Mode of reduction, 631
- Negotiability of certificates, 598
- Notice and priorities, 695
- Notice of trust, 680
- Overissue, 619
- Overissued, 618
- Parties to sale, 676
- Payment of arrears, 614
- Performance and tender, 685
- Power to issue, 603
- Preferred dividends, 611
- Preferred shareholders, 607
- Priorities and notice, 695
- Procedure in attachment, 633
 - In execution, 633
 - In increasing, 627
- Profits and earnings, 611
- Purchasers from trustees, 680
- Quasi-negotiability, 600
- Reduction, 629
- Reduction by refunding, 631
- Refusal of registration, 663
- Registration, 655
 - What constitutes, 660
 - Wrongful refusal of, 636
- Registry, application for, 662
- Remedial rights, 609
- Remedies for refusal of registration, 664
- Restrictions on transfer, 645
- Right of transfer, 637

Stock—Continued.

- Sale, parties to, 676
- Sales by executors, etc., 682
- Seals, 646
- Shares, judicial definitions, 588
- Shares, nature of, 588
- Shares personal property, 590
- Special, 617
- Specific performance, 686
- Spurious, 618
- Statute of frauds, 593
- Steps in transfer, 648
- Surplus after reduction, 631
- Surrender, effect of failure to, 652
- Surrender of certificate, 651
- Tender and performance, 685
- Transfer, 637
 - By directors, 641
 - Formalities of, 646
 - In breach of trust, 669
 - Motive of, 643
 - Particular forms of, 673
 - Restrictions on, 645
 - Steps in, 648
 - Without surrender of certificate, 671
- Transferee and prior claimants, equities of, 656
- Transferees and creditors, 635
- Transferees, status of, 684
- Treasury, 617
- Trover for shares, 592
- Trustees, sales and purchases by, 679
- Trust, notice of, 680
- Ultra vires issue, 619
- Unrecorded purchasers, 635
- Unregistered purchasers, 635
- Unregistered transfer, 655
- Various kinds of, 617
- Venue, 632
- Waiver, by whom effected, 697
- Waiver of lien, 697
- Watered stock, 622
- Stock-brokers, 699
 - Avoiding contract, 736
 - Bear, 700
 - Buyer's option, 719
 - Buying in stock, 722
 - Call, 701
 - Carry, 701
 - Closing transaction, 720
 - Commissions, 729
 - Corner, 701
 - Corners, 746
 - Custody of Stock, 706
 - Customs and usages, 732
 - Damages, 746
 - Definitions, 700
 - Disposition of stock, 706
 - Dual capacity, 726
 - Execution of order, 703
 - Failure of consideration, 736
 - Functions, 700

Stock-brokers—Continued.

- Illegality of transaction, 737
- Joint undertakings, 730
- Liabilities of brokers, 725
- Liability to undisclosed client, 728
- Making a price, 702
- Margins, 710
- Measure of damages, 746
- Option account day, 702
- Options, 724
- Order to buy in stock, 722
- Order to purchase, 703
- Ownership of stock, 709
- Purchase, 703
- Put, 701
- Relation to client, 702
- Rights of brokers, 725
- Right to close transaction, 714
- Right to commissions, 729
- Sale by order of client, 712
- Sale for immediate delivery, 716
- Sale for want of margins, 710
- Seller's option, 719
- Shave, 701
- Short sales, 718
 - Legality of, 723
- Special contracts, 730
- Spread eagle, 701
- Stop orders, 713
- Stop orders in short sales, 723
- Straddle, 702
- Substitution, 726
- Title to stock, 706
- Undisclosed client, 728
- Usages and customs, 732
- Wagering contracts, 741
- Wash sales, 701
- Stock exchange, 748
 - Adoption of rules and regulations, 767
 - Arbitration clause, 772
 - Clearing house, 775
 - Definition, 748
 - Expulsion of members, 759
 - Furnishing quotations, 765
 - History, 750
 - Improper expulsion, 764
 - Jurisdiction, 773
 - Legal status, 749
 - Liability of members, 753
 - Members as preferred creditors, 768
 - Origin and history, 750
 - Parties to actions, 758
 - Power to expel, 759
 - Preferred creditors, 768
 - Property rights of members, 751
 - Quotations, 765
 - Regulations and rules, 767
 - Remedy for improper expulsion, 764
 - Rights of members, 751
 - Rules and regulations, 767
 - Seats, 754
 - Status, 749

Stockholders, 776

Abandonment of enterprise, 827
 Abortive corporations, 875
 Actions and remedies, 818
 Action, when right accrues, 888
 Additional liability, 867
 Ante-corporate debts, 875
 Application of remedies, 826
 Assessments, 817
 Assessments and calls, 803
 Bailees, 785
 Calls after transfer, 815
 Calls and assessments, 803
 Calls, evidence of, 815
 Interest, 813
 Notice, 810
 Requisites, 808
 Validity, 808
 When leviable by court, 807
 When necessary, 804
 Where subscription is conditional, 810
 Who may levy, 805
 Cancellation and surrender, 863
 Charter changes, 828
 Collusive agreements, 835
 Conditional subscriptions, 833
 Conditions enforceable, 837
 Conditions not performed, 833
 Consideration and payment, 795
 Corporate migration, 878
 Counterclaim, 846
 Curative acts, 877
 Death of parties, 896
 Defective incorporation, 875
 Defenses, 827
 Defenses, miscellaneous, 847
 Deficiency in case of forfeiture, 822
 Definition and status, 779
 Directors power to levy calls, 805
 Discounting shares, 861
 Dissolution of corporation, 880
 Distribution of new stock, 853
 Double liability, 867
 Electoral rights, 852
 Enforcement of liability, 885
 Escrow, 790
 Estoppel, 876
 Evidence of calls, 815
 Extinct corporation, 887
 Foreign corporations, rights of, 878
 Foreign jurisdictions, 890
 Forfeiture, 818
 Cumulative remedy, 819
 Deficiency, 822
 Effect, 822
 How right exercised, 820
 Notice, 821
 Form of subscriptions, 786
 Fraud, 879
 Frauds, statute of, 789
 Gratuitous shares, 864
 Implied conditions, 837

Stockholders—Continued.

Implied waiver, 848
 Increase, 864
 Insolvent corporation, 887
 Interest on calls, 813
 Inter-relations, 783
 Invalid conditions, 836
 Joinder of parties, 896
 Labor and services, payment of subscription in, 796
 Limitations, statute of, 888
 Local remedies, 894
 Membership, 782
 Miscellaneous defenses, 847
 Mismanagement of corporation, 844
 Negotiable paper, payment of subscription in, 796
 New stock, 853
 Overvaluation, 860
 Parol conditions, 834
 Parties, death of, 896
 Parties, joinder of, 896
 Parties to subscription contract, 798
 Payment, 795, 850
 Penal liability, 873
 Percentage required down, 843
 Pleading and practice, 826
 Powers, rights, and prerogatives, 851
 Prerogatives, rights, and powers, 851
 Priority among creditors, 898
 Property, payment of subscription in, 795
 Proportional liability, 867
 Protective remedies, 824
 Release, 845, 866
 Releasing subscribers, 861
 Remedies, 818, 894
 Rights, powers, and prerogatives, 851
 Satisfaction of debt, payment of subscription in, 797
 Services and labor, payment of subscription in, 796
 Set-off and counterclaim, 846
 Shareholder, 781
 Spurious stock, 865
 Status, 779
 Statute of frauds, 789
 Statute of limitations, 888
 Statutes imposing liability, 868
 Statutory liability, 867
 Subscriber's liability to pay, 801
 Subscriptions, 786
 Subscriptions delivered in escrow, 790
 Subscriptions, who may receive, 800
 Surrender and cancellation, 863
 Transfer, effect of, on subscription liability, 880
 Transfer to corporation, 883
 Transfer to irresponsible parties, 883
 "Trust-fund" doctrine, 857
 Unauthorized incorporation, 878
 Unlimited liability, 868

Stockholders—Continued.

- Validity of conditions, 834
- Waiver of defense, 848
- Stock yards, 900
 - Breach of contract, 901
 - Damages, measure of, 901
 - Definition, 900
 - Discrimination, 901
 - Duties, rights, and liabilities, 900
 - Injunction, 901
 - Liabilities, rights, and duties, 900
 - Measure of damages, 901
 - Railroad company's liability, 902
 - Rights, duties, and liabilities, 900
 - Stock-yard company, 902
- Stoppage in transitu, 903
 - Assignment of bill of lading, 927
 - Bill of lading, 927
 - Buyer's agent, delivery to, 921
 - Buyer's insolvency, 923
 - Carrier, rights of, 933
 - Carrier's refusal to redeliver, 926
 - Charges, payment of, 916, 917
 - Consignee's agent, delivery to, 913
 - Consignee's consent to receive, 912
 - Constructive delivery, 920
 - Constructive intermediate delivery, 920
 - Custom-house entry, 918
 - Definition, 903
 - Delivery at destination, 909
 - At specified place, 914
 - "Free on board" 915
 - Of logs, 914
 - Of part, 916
 - On board buyer's vessel, 922
 - Short of destination, 919
 - To buyer, 919
 - To buyer's agent, 921
 - To consignee's agent, 913
 - To local carrier, 919
 - To sub-purchaser, 918
 - To warehouseman or wharfinger, 916
 - Destination, delivery at, 909
 - Mere arrival at, 911
 - When reached, 909
 - Effect, 932
 - Entry at custom-house, 918
 - Exercise of right, 905
 - Forcible interception of goods, 920
 - Freight charges, payment of, 916, 917
 - Goods in transit, 907
 - Goods unpaid for, 906
 - Indorsement of bill of lading, 929
 - Insolvency of buyer, 923
 - Local carrier, delivery to, 919
 - Note or bill, payment by, 906
 - Notice, 925
 - Part delivery, 916
 - Part payment, effect of, 906
 - Payment by note or bill, 906

Stoppage in transitu—Continued.

- Payment of freight charges, 916, 917
- Purchaser without notice, 927
- Refusal of carrier to deliver, 915
- Right, by whom exercised, 904
- Right, how exercised, 924
- Right, when not lost, 930
- Rights, how lost, 926
- Rights of carrier, 933
- Rights of parties, 932
- Sub-purchaser, delivery to, 918
- Transfer of unindorsed bill of lading, 927
- Transit, beginning and ending, 908
- Transit, goods in, 907
- Vessel, delivery on board, 922
- Warehouseman or wharfinger, delivery to, 916
- Wharfinger or warehouseman, delivery to, 916
- Who may exercise right, 904
- Store Order Acts, 935
- Street Railways, 940
 - Abutters, consent of, 968
 - Abutters right to compensation, 954
 - Alteration of tracks, 1003
 - Authority of legislature, 953
 - Charter as a contract, 945
 - Collision with vehicles, 1028
 - Company's duty towards passengers, 1006
 - Conditions annexed to grants, 964
 - Conductor and driver on each car, 1001
 - Consent of local authorities, 965
 - Construction, 978
 - Construction of franchises and licenses, 960
 - Construction of road within specified time, 972
 - Contributory negligence of passenger, 1011
 - Corporation, its creation, organization, etc., 944
 - Definition, 941
 - Duty of the company, 1019
 - Electric railways, 1034
 - Elevated railways, 1035
 - Abutting owners right to recover damages, 1042
 - Adverse possession, 1083
 - Benefits, deduction on account of, 1078
 - Commissioners of the supreme court, 1040
 - Common law action, 1048
 - Consent of property owners and local authorities, 1039
 - Consequential damages, 1075
 - Damages, consequential, 1075
 - Damages, exemplary, 1078
 - Damages from smoke, cinders, etc., 1074

Street Railways—Continued.

Deduction on account of benefits derived from road, 1078
 Eminent domain proceedings, 1046
 Evidence, 1062
 Exemplary damages, 1078
 Form of action, 1046
 In general, 1035
 Injunction proceedings, 1052
 Injunction proceedings, right to trial by jury in, 1085
 Jury trial in injunction proceedings, 1085
 Landlord and tenant, recovery as between, 1058
 Liability for personal injuries and other torts, 1086
 Limitations, statute of, 1083
 Location and construction, 1042
 Measure of damages, 1069
 New York Rapid-transit act, constitutionality of, 1037
 Opinion of witnesses, 1062
 Rapid transit commission, 1037
 Recovery as between landlord and tenant, 1058
 Recovery by personal representatives, 1056
 Recovery by subsequent purchasers, 1056
 Rental value, depreciation of, 1077
 Right of abutting owners to recover damages, 1042
 Right to acquire real estate, 1041
 Smoke, cinders, etc., damages from, 1074
 Statute of limitations, 1083
 Trial by jury in injunction proceedings, 1085
 Who may recover damages, 1056
 Exclusive use of tracks, 990
 Expulsion of passengers, 1016
 Frightening horses, 1031
 Horses, frightening, 1031
 Ice on track, 1032
 Injuries to passengers, 1004
 Injuries to persons on or near the track, 1019
 Intoxicated passengers, 1017
 Legal status, 943
 Lessor and lessee, liability of, 1032
 Liability for negligent injury, 1004
 License fees, 1001
 Loss of rights and franchises, 975
 Motive power, 995
 Municipal regulation and control, 998
 Negligence, 1011
 Ordinary railroads in streets and highways, 1092
 Abutting owners' right to compensation, 1100
 Benefits, deduction of, 1125

Street Railways—Continued.

Damages, special and consequential, 1126
 Deduction of benefits, 1125
 Grant of right to occupy streets, 1094
 Measure of damages, 1123
 Remedies, 1131
 Special and consequential damages, 1126
 When company may occupy streets, 1098
 Passengers, expulsion of, 1016
 Platform, riding on, 1013
 Power of municipality to grant right to use streets, 948
 Power to grant exclusive privileges, 951
 Railroads in streets and highways, 1092
 Repair of streets, 983
 Riding on platform, 1013
 Right to use streets, 946
 Road-bed, 978
 Snow on track, 1032
 Speed of cars, 1022
 Tracks, alteration of, 1003
 Unauthorized use of streets, 958
 Use of streets, 983
 Use of tracks of another company, 992

Words and Phrases

Spile, 15
 Spring, 15
 Spurious, 16
 Spurious bill, 16
 Square synonymous with block, 16
 Square yard, 16
 Stab distinguished from cut, 17
 Stable, 17
 When a building, 17
 When an outhouse, 17
 When a nuisance, 17
 Stack, 17
 Stage coach, 17
 Stakeholder, 18
 Stale demand, 18
 Stamps, 18
 Stand, standing, 18
 Standing by, 19
 Start, 41
 Statement, 72
 Stationary, 113
 Stationery, 113
 Steal, 555
 Steamship, 555
 Steer, 555
 Stock in trade, 899
 Stock (live), 698
 Stone, 902
 Stoppage, 903
 Store, 934

Words and Phrases—Continued.

Store-house, 935
 Store fixtures, 935
 Store not necessarily a building,
 934
 Storm, 937
 Story, 938

Words and Phrases—Continued.

Stranding, 938
 Stranger, 939
 Strategy, 939
 Straw bail, 939
 Stray, 939
 Stream, 939

Stanford Law Library

3 6105 063 904 671

